START

Microfilmed By:

NORTHEAST DOCUMENT
CONSERVATION CENTER
Andover, MA 01810

August 1994

Camera Operator:
John Sullivan

MASTER NEGATIVE
NUMBER:
BSO-56-063

MICROFILMED
August 1993 - April 1994

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOK MICROFILMING PROJECT

Funded in part by

THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES

Grant No. PS-20709-93

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA MICROFILMING PROJECT

A Cooperative Project Between the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives and the Boston Public Library (August 1993 - April 1994)

The Microfilming Project incorporates two collections of scrapbooks housed in two separate repositories. The first set of scrapbooks (80 volumes) resides within the Allen A. Brown Collection of the Boston Public Library (BPL) Music Department. Their call number is M.125.5. The second set of scrapbooks (132 volumes) resides within the Press Clippings collection of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (BSO) Archives. They have the designation Pres 56.

The BPL scrapbooks begin with the founding of the BSO in 1881 and continue, through 79 seasons, to 1960. Articles consist mainly of reviews and feature stories from Boston and New York newspapers. Occasionally, magazine articles and press releases are also included. The scrapbooks cover most aspects of the BSO.

The BSO scrapbooks run from 1889, the Orchestra's 9th season, to 1973. In addition to local reviews and features, the volumes contain articles culled from national and international publications. The scrapbooks document, in detail, all aspects of the BSO: The Symphony Orchestra (including subscription concerts, tours, and trips), the Boston Pops, the Tanglewood Festival, the Tanglewood Music Center, and Symphony Hall.

The two sets of scrapbooks have been filmed as two separate entities. Researchers wanting to look at specific seasons or subjects must examine both sets of films to ensure full coverage.

The scrapbooks do not represent the complete holdings of either location on the subject of the BSO.

Requests for positive microfilm copies of individual rolls, or of film sets, should be directed to the respective repository:

Music Department
Boston Public Library
Post Office Box 286
Boston, MA 02117

Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives
Symphony Hall
Boston, MA 02115

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA SCRAPBOOKS

1889 - 1973

132 VOLUMES

Source: Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives

FINDING AID

Boston Symphony Orchestra Scrapbooks
(Series 56, Sub-Series 1)

Source: Press Office (Office of the Public Relations Director)

The BSO scrapbooks comprise part of one series in the BSO Archives. Series 56, Press Clippings, is divided by format into 3 sub-series: 1) Scrapbooks, 1889-1973 (132 volumes); 2) Loose Clippings, 1931-1991 (9 record cartons); and 3) Oversize Newspapers and Journals, 1919-1979 (1 oversize box). Each sub-series is arranged chronologically.

The scrapbooks contain concert notices and reviews, record reviews, and feature articles. Early scrapbooks may also contain programs, tickets, and subscription orders. Materials are organized by concert season into the following categories: BSO (including tours); Kneisel Quartet (and later Boston Symphony Chamber Players); Boston Pops (referred to in early years as Promenade concerts); and Tanglewood (including the Tanglewood Music Center, the Tanglewood Festival, Tanglewood-on-Parade, and the Fromm Festival of Contemporary Music).

Reviews and articles cover a wide range of subjects: Founder H.L. Higginson; BSO conductors, players, trustees, and other personnel; guest artists and composers; BSO and Pops performances and recordings; U.S. and overseas tours; BSO/Cecilia Society joint performances; open rehearsals; and special events connected to anniversary celebrations and fundraising.

Feature stories document changes in the size, composition, and location of the orchestra. Topics include the hiring of women and minorities; the unionization of players; controversies (such as the internment of conductor Karl Muck during World War II); the sale of the old Music Hall; and the construction of Symphony Hall and other structures (such as the Koussevitsky Music Shed at Tanglewood).

Reproductions of the materials in the collection may not be made without permission from the Boston Symphony Orchestra Archives.

GUIDE TO CONTENTS

Institution: BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Series Name: PRESS CLIPPINGS
Series Number: 56
Series Dates: 1889-1991

Sub-series Name: SCRAPBOOKS
Sub-series Number: 1
Sub-series Dates: 1889-1973

VOLUME LISTING

VOL	TITLE	DATES
1	BSO	1889-1890
2	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1890-1891
3	BSO	1891-1892
4	Promenade (Pops)	1892
5	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1892-1893
6	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1893-1894
7	BSO Kneisel Quartet	1894-1895
8	BSO	1895-1896
9	Promenade (Pops)	1895-1896
10	BSO	1896-1897
11	BSO	1897-1898
12	Promenade (Pops)	1897-1898
13	BSO	1898-1899
14	BSO	1899-1900
15	Pops	1899-1900
16	BSO	1900-1901
17	BSO	1901-1902
18	Pops	1901-1903
19	BSO	1902-1903
20	BSO	1903-1904
21	BSO	1904-1905
22	Pops	1904-1905
23	BSO	1905-1906
24	BSO	1906-1907
25	BSO	1907-1908
26	BSO	1908-1909
27	BSO Pops	1909-1910
28	BSO Pops	1910-1911
29	BSO Advertisements	1910-1911
30	BSO Pops	1911-1912
31	BSO Pops	1912-1913
32	BSO Pops	1913-1914
33	BSO Pops	1914-1915
34	BSO Pops	1915-1916
35	BSO Pops	1916-1917
36	BSO Pops	1917-1918
37	Karl Muck	1918
38	BSO Pops	1918-1919
39	BSO Pops	1919-1920
40	BSO Advertisements	1919-1920
41	BSO Pops	1920-1921
42	BSO Pops	1921-1922
43	BSO BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1922-1923
44	BSO Pops	1922-1924
45	BSO Pops	1924
46	BSO BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1924-1926
47	BSO Pops	1925-1926
48	BSO Advertisements Pops Advertisements	1926-1927
49	BSO Pops	1926-1928
50	BSO	1928
51	BSO Pops	1928-1929
52	BSO Pops U.S. Tour	1929-1930
53	BSO	1930-1931
54	BSO Pops	1931-1932
55	BSO Pops	1932-1933
56	BSO	1933-1934
57	BSO	1934-1935
58	BSO	1935-1936
59	BSO	1936-1937

VOL	TITLE	DATES
60	Pops
	Tanglewood	1936-1937
61	BSO	1937
62	BSO	1937-1938
63	Pops
	Tanglewood	1938
64	BSO	1938-1939
65	Pops
	Tanglewood	1939
66	BSO	1939-1940
67	Tanglewood	1939-1941
68	BSO
	Pops	1940
69	BSO	1940-1941
70	Tanglewood	1940-1944
71	BSO	1941-1942
72	BSO	1942-1943
73	BSO	1943-1944
74	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1944-1945
75	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1945-1946
76	BSO
	Pops
	Tanglewood	1946-1947
77	Tanglewood	1947-1948
78	BSO	1947-1949
79	Tanglewood	1949-1950
80	BSO	1949-1951
81	Tanglewood	1950-1951
82	BSO
	Pops	1951-1952
83	BSO
	Pops	1952-1953
84	Tanglewood	1952-1953
85	BSO	1953-1955
86	Tanglewood	1953-1954
87	Tanglewood	1954-1955
88	BSO
	Pops	1955-1956
89	Tanglewood	1955-1956
90	Tanglewood	1955-1956
91	European Tour	1956
92	European Tour	1956-1957
93	BSO
	Pops	1956-1957
94	Tanglewood	1957
95	BSO	1957-1958
96	BSO
	Pops	1958-1959
97	BSO	1958-1959
98	Tanglewood	1958-1959
99	Tanglewood	1959
100	BSO
	Pops	1959-1960
101	Tanglewood	1959-1960
102	Far Eastern Tour	1959-1960
103	BSO
	Pops	1960-1961
104	Tanglewood	1961
105	BSO
	Pops	1961-1962
106	Tanglewood	1962
107	BSO
	Pops	1962-1963
108	Tanglewood	1963
109	BSO
	Pops	1963-1964
110	Tanglewood	1963-1964
111	BSO
	Pops	1964-1966
112	Tanglewood	1965
113	BSO 85th Anniversary	1965
114	BSO
	Pops	1965-1966
115	Tanglewood	1966
116	BSO
	Pops	1966-1967
117	Tanglewood	1967
118	BSO
	Pops	1967-1968
119	Tanglewood	1968-1969
120	BSO
	Pops	1968-1969
121	Tanglewood	1969
122	BSO
	Pops	1969-1970
123	Tanglewood	1970
124	BSO
	Pops	1970-1971
125	Tanglewood	1971
126	BSO
	Pops	1971-1972
127	European Tour	1970-1971
128	European Tour	1971
129	Tanglewood	1972
130	BSO
	Pops	1972-1973
131	Tanglewood	1973
132	BSO
	Pops	1973-1974

MATERIALS NOT FILMED

SUB-SERIES NUMBER	SUB-SERIES NAME	SUB-SERIES DATES
2	Loose Clippings	1931-1991
3	Oversize Newspapers and Journals	1919-1979

COPYRIGHT STATEMENT

The copyright law of the Unites States - Title 17, United States Code - concerns the making of photocopies or other reproductions of copyrighted material.

Under certain conditions specified in the law, libraries and archives are authorized to furnish a photocopy or other reproduction. One of these specified conditions is that the photocopy or other reproduction is not to be "used for any purpose other than private study, scholarship, or research." If a user makes a request for, or later uses, a photocopy or reproduction for purposes in excess of "fair use," that user may be liable for copyright infringement.

This institution reserves the right to refuse to accept a copy order if, in its judgment, fulfillment of the order would involve violation of the copy-right law.

TECHNICAL DATA

IMAGE PLACEMENT: [✓ IA] IB IIA IIB

REDUCTION RATIO: 14X

FILM STOCK:

Kodak
IMAGELINK™ HQ
MICROFILM
35 mm x 30.5 m · 100 ft
Sp 425
DEVELOP BEFORE 05/1996
1461-0341-015-03
CAT 840 3594
34-16

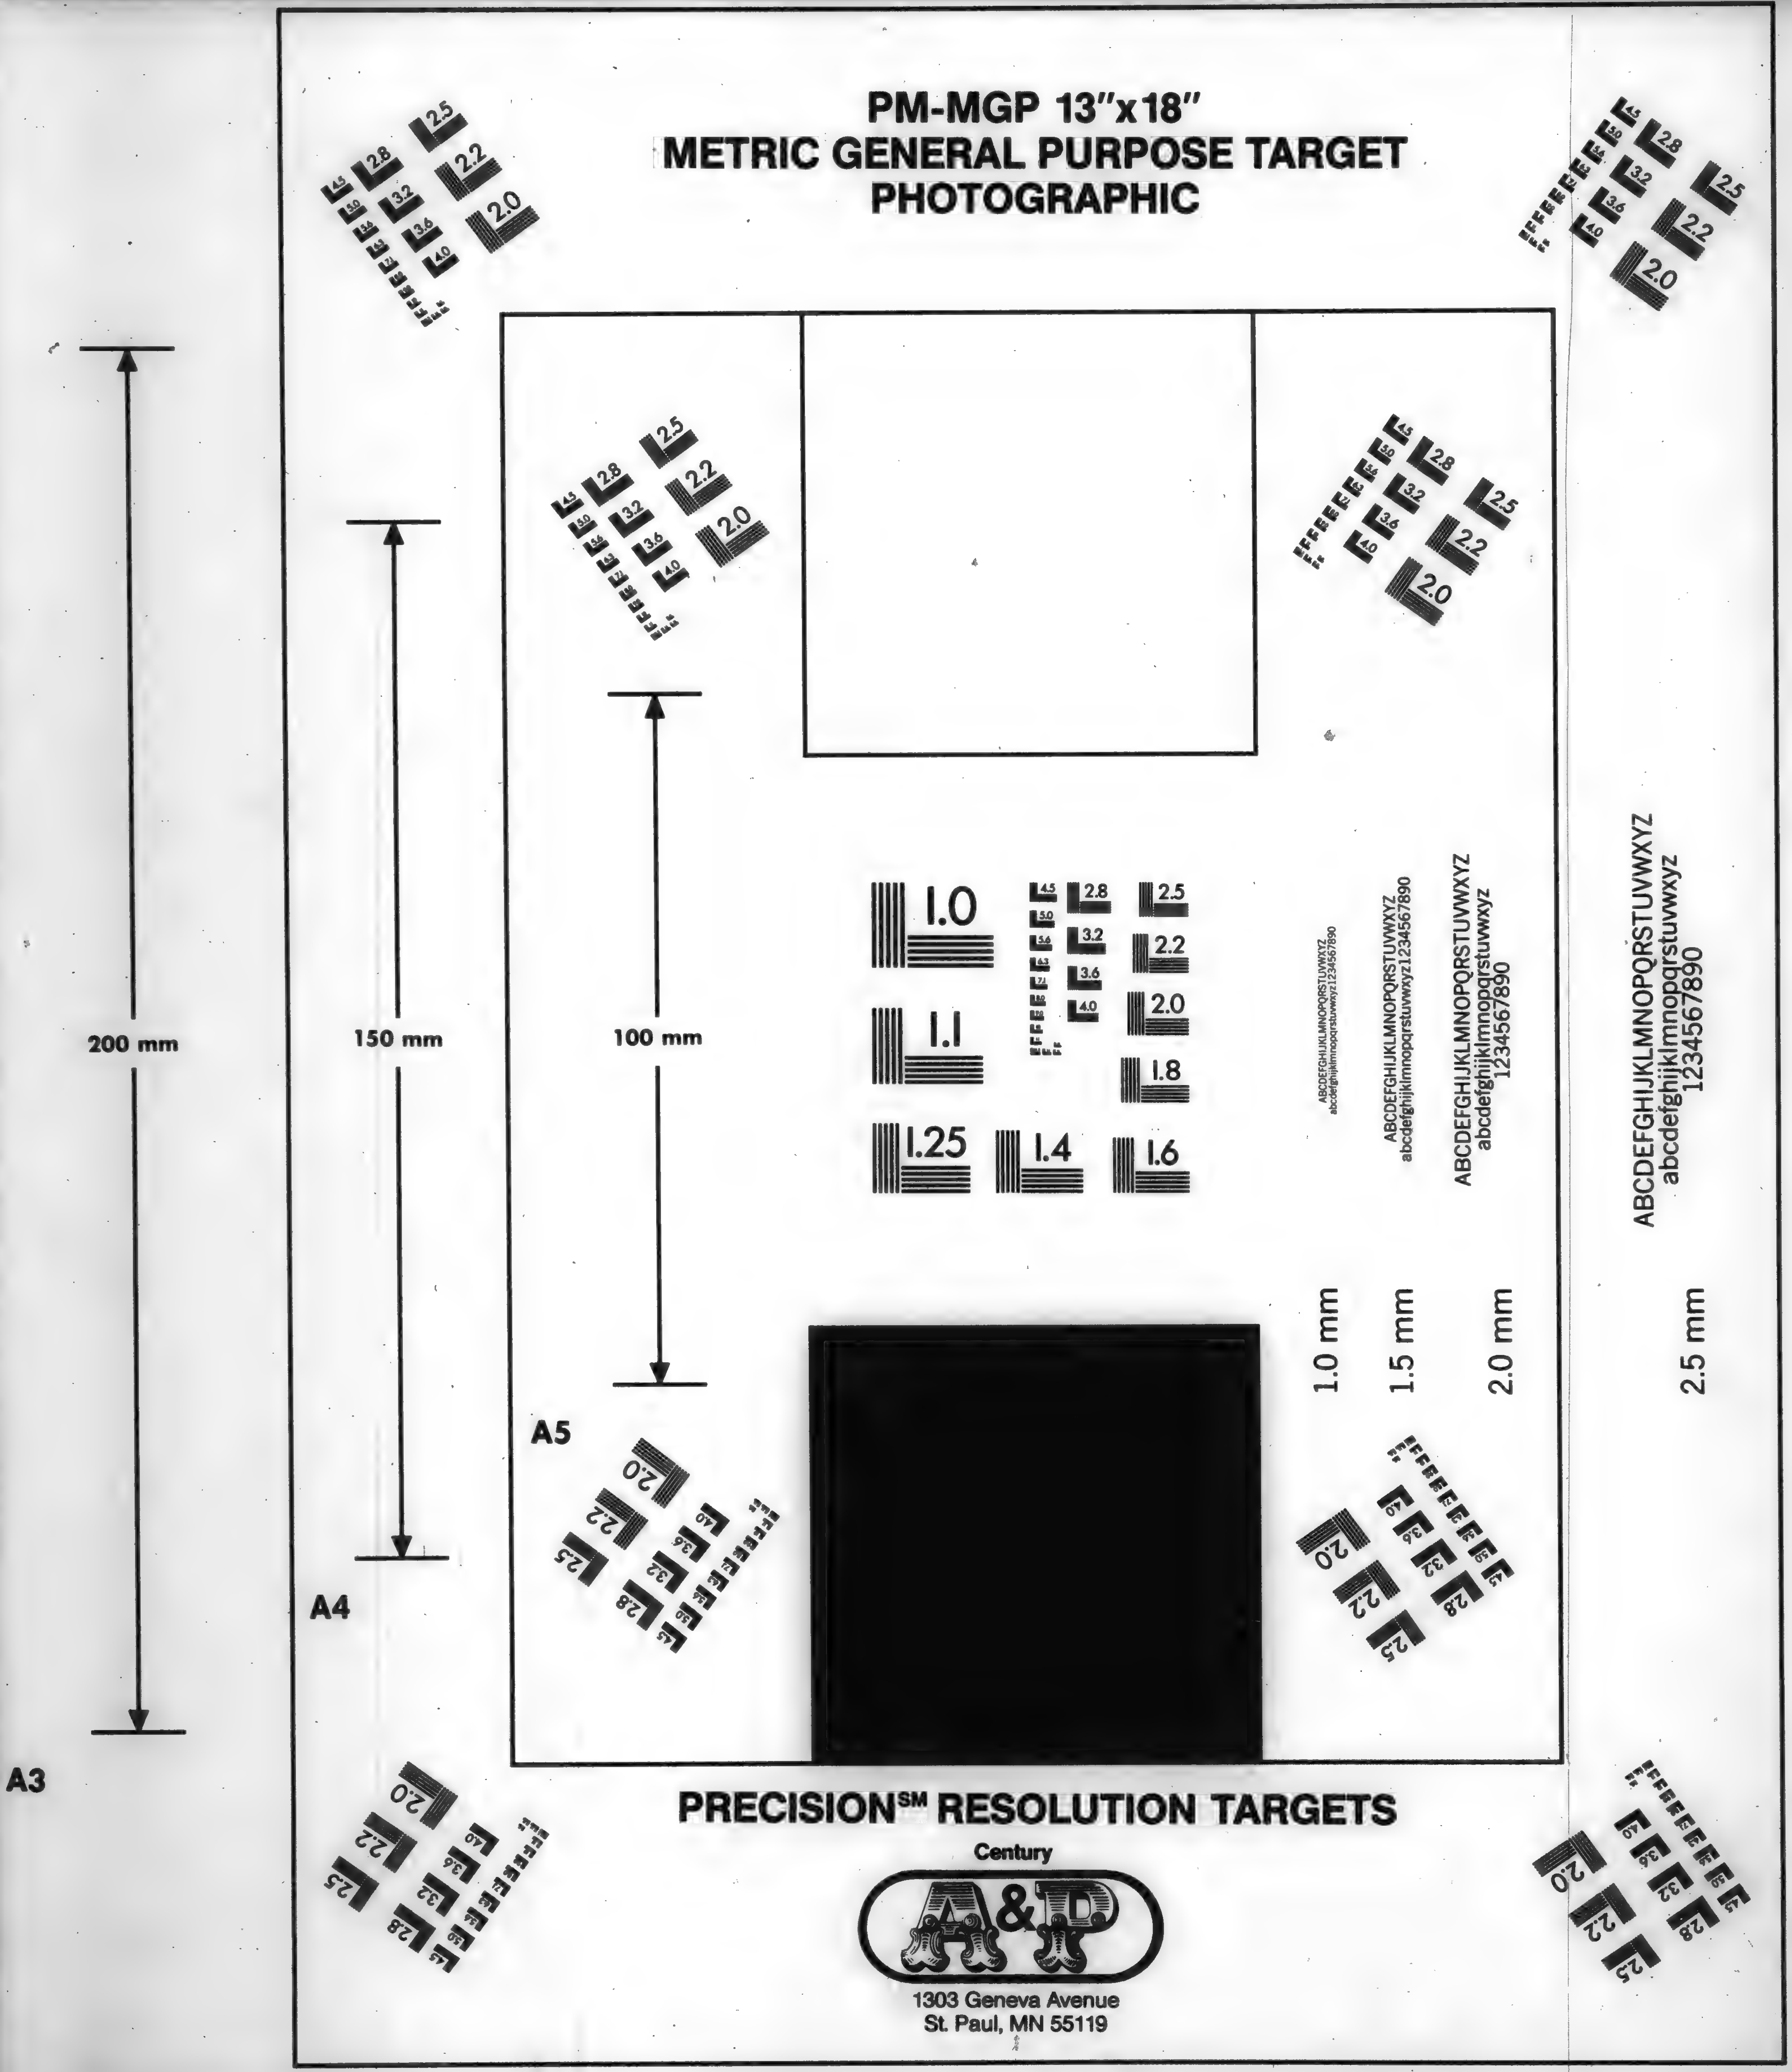
REEL 63

Volumes 101-102

Tanglewood
Far Eastern Tour

1959-1960

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
A5
A4
A3

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
2.5 mm

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

MULTIPLE EXPOSURES
DUE TO COLOR VARIATIONS
AND OVERLAPPING MATERIAL

VOLUME 101

Tanglewood

1959 - 1960

NATIONAL FLAT BACK SCRAP BOOKS

NATIONAL
Made in U.S.A.

FULL DUCK COVER, MANILA PAPER
Without Index, Ruling, Paging or Title

NUMBER	THICKNESS	SIZE
56-032	72 Leaves	12⅝ × 10¼
56-033	72 Leaves	15 × 10
56-034	100 Leaves	15 × 10
56-036	90 Leaves	16 × 11⅜
56-038	150 Leaves	16 × 11⅜
56-039	90 Leaves	18 × 13
→ 56-041	150 Leaves	18 × 13
56-042	150 Leaves	25 × 20

To duplicate this book Order Number indicated by arrow

Scrapbook

Tanglewood

1960

BLANK PAGE

Table of Contents
TANGLEWOOD 1960

Pre-Season Reports 1

Berkshire Nights 36

First Week 47

Second Week 69

Third Week 89

Fourth Week 117

Fifth Week 139

Sixth Week 159

Gala Evening, Boston Pops 177

Berkshire Music Center 197

Miscellaneous 223

BLANK PAGE

MUSIC LIFE | September 1959

VIDEO AUDIO RADIO

by ROY HEMMING

Music on Summer TV and Radio

According to advertisements in newspapers and magazines, there were more summer music festivals this year — both in Europe and the U.S. — than ever before. The stay-at-home American was able to sample some of the best, although not a very generous sample, through radio and television.

The CBS Radio network's Saturday night series "World Music Festivals" presented an excellent sampling from some of the top European festivals. Included were several programs each from the Bergen Festival in Norway, the Helsinki Sibelius Festival, the Holland Festival and the Festival of Two Worlds at Spoleto, Italy. The programs were taped at each festival under the direction of Jim Fassett, and the quality of the tapes was exceptionally good. Still to come in the series: two programs from the Salzburg Festival (Sept. 26 and Oct. 3) and one Wagnerian program from Bayreuth (Oct. 10).

More than 30 independent AM and FM radio stations from Maine to California broadcast the programs of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., this year. Here again the quality of the concerts, featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, was exceptionally good. Technically speaking, the broadcasts — at least as heard over the QXR network in the East—were a distinct improvement on other years. This may have been due to the new million dollars orchestral shell built at Tanglewood this spring, or to reported improvements in a new QXR broadcasting "line" — or perhaps to both.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,085

OCT 26 1959

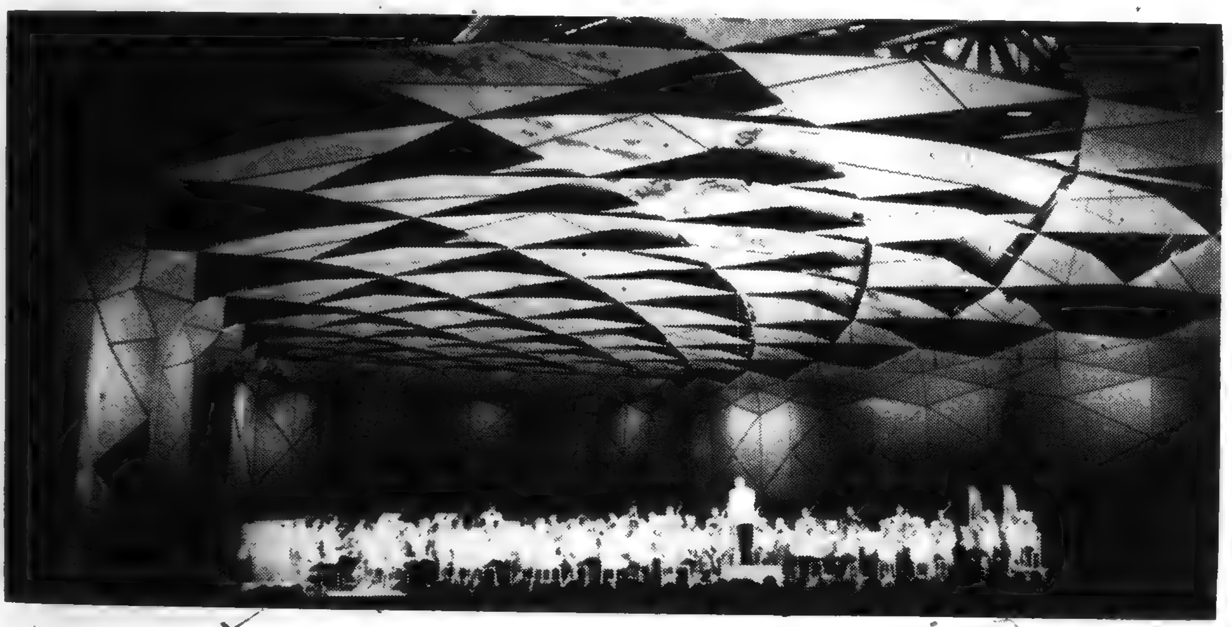
Enlarge Tanglewood Music Shed

STOCKBRIDGE—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which conducts the annual music festival at Tanglewood, has been granted a building permit by the Stockbridge Selectmen for the erection of additional space on the Shed. The auxiliary rooms will be enlarged. The addition will about double the size of the conductor's dressing rooms and the piano room, plus adding about 20 feet to the width of the tuning room. The added space in the tuning room will be used for storage.

The cost for the project was estimated at $8,500. The work for the main part will be done by the maintenance crew at Tanglewood, with the exception of the plumbing and electrical work.

INSTRUMENTALIST
EVANSTON, ILL.
MONTHLY 14,741
FEB 1960

New Orchestra Shell at Tanglewood



The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch in the new Tanglewood Music Shed. The enclosure will easily accommodate a 110-piece orchestra and a large chorus. The acoustical consultants were Bolt Beranek and Newman Inc., of Cambridge, Massachusetts, and the architects were Eero Saarinen and Associates, of Birmingham, Michigan.

Originally constructed for outdoor concerts, the 25-year old orchestra shell in the Tanglewood Music Shed was replaced this past summer by a new enclosure for the orchestra. The original shell never provided proper tonal balance for a large orchestra.

The new enclosure is officially called the Edmund Hawes Talbot Orchestra Canopy. The side walls of the stage are solid plywood, 3/8 inch to 5/8 inch thick, with modulations in shape and tilted inward at the top. In order to permit an audience seated within an arc of 110 degrees to view the orchestra, the side walls splay outward, making an opening about 85 feet wide at the front edge of the stage and 35 feet wide at the rear. The maximum depth of the stage is about 47 feet. The ceiling of the enclosure is suspended on steel cables from the roof trusses and consists of a series of triangular panels of various sizes connected tip-to-tip.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
TRIBUNE
D. 214,827 S. 635,122
MAR 27 1960

City Violinist to Play With Casals Group

MUSIC CHAT

Minneapolis violinist Theodore Ptashne will be a member of the Casals festival orchestra in Puerto Rico in June . . . Alexander Tcherepnin, pianist-composer who has been a Twin Cities visitor, wrote the harmonica concerto John Sebastian played in New York's Town hall, winning audience and critical plaudits . . .

The April-May tour by the Boston Symphony orchestra to Japan, the Philippines and Australia will end with the orchestra back at the Berkshire music festival for its annual stint there, July 3 to Aug. 14.

JEANNETTE, PA.
NEWS-DISPATCH
D. 9,574
JAN 14 1960

NEW STAGE CANOPY

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — A new $40,000 stage canopy will replace the present shell when the Boston Symphony Orcestra opens its six-week summer concert series at the Tanglewood Music Shed here. Mrs. Edmund T. Talbot donated the sum in memory of her late husband, a Boston attorney, for whom the structure will be named.

The new acoustical canopy will consist of 67 triangular plywood panels of various sizes, connected tip-to-tip and suspended from the roof trusses with side walls of plywood.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 114,240

DEC 13 1959

Opening Date At Tanglewood May Be Delayed

Harry Beall, director of public relations of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, said Satday "it is possible the opening of the Berkshire Festival might be postponed, but no more than a week at the latest."

May Be Extended

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is scheduled to tour Japan during May under the auspices of the State Department. At the present time, with final plans still to be worked out, the tour will last six weeks. Should it be extended to eight weeks, it could "conceivably affect the normal opening of the Berkshire Festival," Beall said.

No definite opening date has been announced for Tanglewood because of the tour which opens in Osaka, Japan, with the Osaka Festival about May 1.

Beall confirmed the report that the BSO might possibly tour Korea, Hong Kong as well as the Philippines.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 28,770

JAN 11 1960

Early Festivals

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

I am a bit annoyed at your music historians for not correcting the statement made in The Eagle's notice on Jan. 4 of Mrs. Margaret Emerson's death on Jan. 2: "In 1936, the first year the Boston Symphony Orchestra was engaged to perform for the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, Mrs. Emerson offered Holmwood to the group for the 1936 season and huge crowds turned out for the first BSO concert in the Berkshires."

I attended the first Berkshire Symphonic Festival and several others conducted by the late Henry Hadley, at the Dan Hanna estate in Stockbridge in the early 1930s. I do not recall a concert at Holmwood in Lenox, although there may have been one. I thought the Berkshire Symphonic Festival shifted immediately from the Hanna estate to Tanglewood.

The concerts at the Hanna place were heavenly, sitting right out under the stars, remember? And the night it poured and we had to be under a big tent, high heels sunk in shamefully and evening gowns were covered with mud. Those were the days.

Then the festival shifted to Tanglewood with, of course, the honorable Dr. Serge Koussevitzky conducting. He did a tremendous job for so many years.

(Mrs.) BELLE W [illegible] AMS
Hotel Allen,
Pittsfield.

* * *

The concerts on the Hanna estate in Stockbridge, sponsored by the Berkshire Symphonic Festival in 1934 and 1935, were not presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra but by musicians assembled from various orchestras and under the direction of Dr. Hadley. Mrs. Emerson's estate, Holmwood, was the site for the first Berkshire concert presented by the Boston Symphony in 1936. In 1937, the Berkshire Symphonic Festival concerts were moved from Holmwood to Tanglewood and presented in a tent.—Ed.

MUSIC LIFE September 1959

VIDEO AUDIO RADIO

by ROY HEMMING

Music on Summer TV and Radio

According to advertisements in newspapers and magazines, there were more summer music festivals this year — both in Europe and the U.S. — than ever before. The stay-at-home American was able to sample some of the best, although not [illegible] generous sample, through [illegible] television.

[illegible] Radio network's Saturday [illegible] series "World Music Festivals" presented an excellent [illegible] from some of the top European festivals. Included were several [illegible] each from the Bergen [illegible] Norway, the Helsinki Festival, the Holland Festival, [illegible] the Festival of Two Worlds at Spoleto, Italy. The programs were taped at each festival under the direction of Jim Fassett, and the quality of the tapes was exceptionally good. Still to come in the series: two programs from the Salzburg Festival (Sept. 26 and Oct. 3) and one Wagnerian program from Bayreuth (Oct. 10).

More than 30 independent AM and FM radio stations from Maine to California broadcast the programs of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., this year. Here again the quality of the concerts, featuring the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, was exceptionally good. Technically speaking, the broadcasts — at least as heard over the QXR network in the East—were a distinct improvement on other years. This may have been due to the new million dollars orchestral shell built at Tanglewood this spring, or to reported improvements in a new QXR broadcasting "line" — or perhaps to both.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 13,085

OCT 26 1959

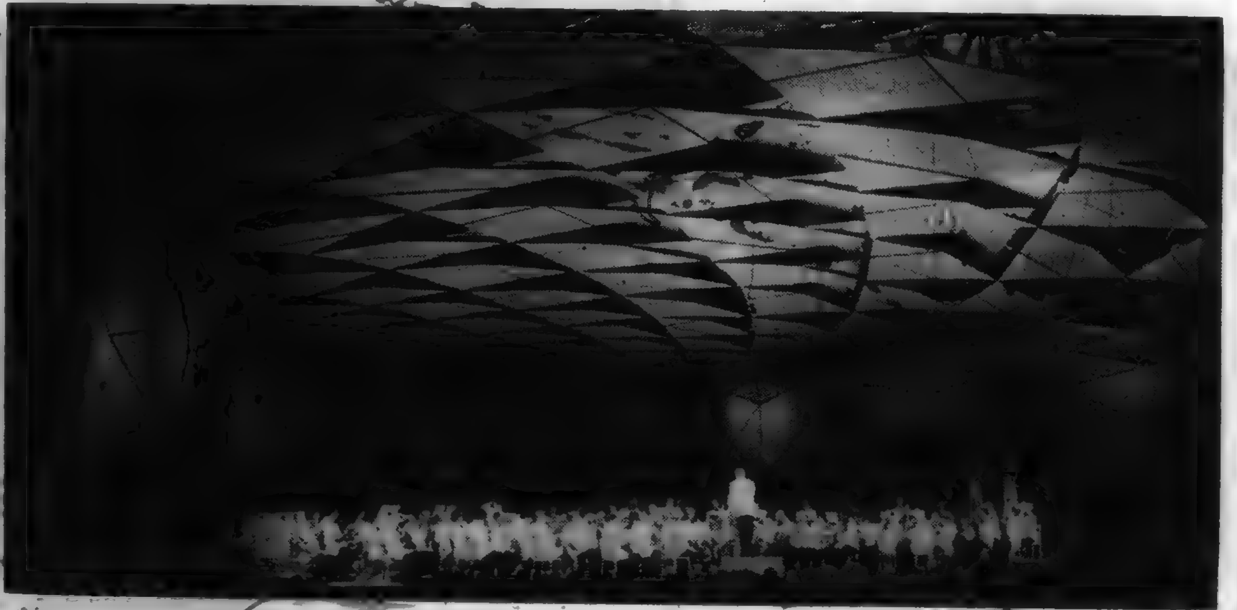
Enlarge Tanglewood Music Shed

STOCKBRIDGE—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which conducts the annual music festival at Tanglewood, has been granted a building permit by the Stockbridge Selectmen for the erection of additional space on the Shed. The auxiliary rooms will be enlarged. The addition will about double the size of the conductor's dressing rooms and the piano room, plus adding about 20 feet to the width of the tuning room. The added space in the tuning room will be used for storage.

The cost for the project was estimated at $8,500. The work for the main part will be done by the maintenance crew at Tanglewood, with the exception of the plumbing and electrical work.

INSTRUMENTALIST
EVANSTON, ILL.
MONTHLY 14,741
FEB 1960

New Orchestra Shell at Tanglewood



The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch in the new Tanglewood Music Shed. The enclosure will easily accommodate a 110-piece orchestra and a large chorus. The acoustical consultants were Bolt Beranek and Newman Inc., of Cambridge, Massachusetts, and the architects were Eero Saarinen and Associates, of Birmingham, Michigan.

Originally constructed for outdoor concerts, the 25-year old orchestra shell in the Tanglewood Music Shed was replaced this past summer by a new enclosure for the orchestra. The original shell never provided proper tonal balance for a large orchestra.

The new enclosure is officially called the Edmund Hawes Talbot Orchestra Canopy. The side walls of the stage are solid plywood, 3/8 inch to 5/8 inch thick, with modulations in shape and tilted inward at the top. In order to permit an audience seated within an arc of 110 degrees to view the orchestra, the side walls splay outward, making an opening about 85 feet wide at the front edge of the stage and 35 feet wide at the rear. The maximum depth of the stage is about 47 feet. The ceiling of the enclosure is suspended on steel cables from the roof trusses and consists of a series of triangular panels of various sizes connected tip-to-tip.

JEANNETTE, PA.
NEWS-DISPATCH
D. 9,574
JAN 14 1960

NEW STAGE CANOPY

LENOX, Mass. (UPI) — A new $40,000 stage canopy will replace the present shell when the Boston Symphony Orcestra opens its six-week summer concert series at the Tanglewood Music Shed here. Mrs. Edmund T. Talbot donated the sum in memory of her late husband, a Boston attorney, for whom the structure will be named.

The new acoustical canopy will consist of 67 triangular plywood panels of various sizes, connected tip-to-tip and suspended from the roof trusses with side walls of plywood.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
TRIBUNE
D. 214,827 S. 635,122
MAR 27 1960

[illegible]

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 28,770

JAN 11 1960

Early Festivals

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

I am a bit annoyed at your music historians for not correcting the statement made in the Eagle's notice on Jan. 4 of Mrs. Margaret Emerson's death on Jan. 2: "In 1930, the first year the Boston Symphony Orchestra was engaged [illegible]

I attended the first Berkshire Symphonic Festival and several [illegible] conducted by the late Henry [illegible] at the Dan Hanna estate in Stockbridge in the early 1930s. I do not recall a concert at Tanglewood in Lenox, although there may have been one. I thought the Berkshire Symphonic Festival [illegible] from the Hanna [illegible] to Tanglewood.

[illegible]

[illegible] many years.

BELLE W. [illegible]
Hotel [illegible]
Pittsfield.

[illegible]

[illegible]
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 114,240

DEC 13 1959

Opening Date At Tanglewood May Be Delayed

Harry Beall, director of public relations of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, said Saturday "it is possible the opening of the Berkshire Festival might be postponed, but no more than a week at the most."

[illegible]

2

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635

MAY 22 1960

MUSICAL EVENTS: SUMMER 1960

Boston Symphony

New York

New York City
June 15-Aug. 14—Guggenheim Memorial Concerts by Goldman Band in Central and Prospect Parks.
June 21-Aug. 6—Lewisohn Stadium Concerts.
July [illegible]-Aug. 9—"Evenings-by-the-River" presented by Lower East Side Neighborhoods Association.
Aug. 1-22—Chamber Music in Washington Square Park.
Aug. 6-27—Municipal Concerts Orchestra in Central Park Mall.
Aug. 4-25—Concerts in Carl Schurz Park.
June 25-Aug. 6—Salmaggi Opera in Triboro Stadium, Randalls Island.
Aug. 19-21—Randalls Island Jazz Festival.

Stony Brook, L. I.
July 9-Aug. 13—Jazz and Pops concerts at Dogwood Hollow Amphitheatre.

Bear Mountain
July 7-Aug. 7—Empire State Music Festival in Anthony Wayne Recreation Area of Harriman State Park.

Chautauqua
July 3-Aug. 28—Operas and symphonic concerts.

Diamond Point
July 1-Aug. 15—Opera and light opera at Diamond Point Music Theatre.

Greenwood Lake
June 17-19—International Guitar Festival.

Katonah
June 18-July 3—Caramoor Festival of British music. Choral, orchestral and chamber works.

Lake Placid
July 17-Aug. 21—Concerts at Camp Minnowbrook.

Phoenicia
Aug. 12-13—Camp Woodland Folk Festival of the Catskills.

Rochester
June 3-4—Bach Festival.
June 29-July 30—Opera Under the Stars.

Woodbourne
June 1-30—Chester's Music and Arts Festival. Chamber music and solo recitals.

New Jersey

Morristown
June 17-18—Masterwork Festival Chorus and Orchestra in Handel's "Solomon."

Ventnor
Aug. 2-30—Ventnor Music Festival. Recitals at Ventnor Pier.

Lambertville
May 28-June 5—Music of George Gershwin conducted by Paul Whiteman at the Music Circus.
June 7-12—Jazz Festival with Louis Armstrong.

Connecticut

Deep River
July 14-Aug. 25—Connecticut Valley Music Festival. Chamber music and solo recitals.

Fairfield
June 18-Aug. 12—Music Under the Stars at Fairfield University campus.

Falls Village
July 3-Sept. 4—Sunday Chamber Music concerts at Music Mountain by the Berkshire String Quartet.

New Canaan
June 26-Sept. 11—Silvermine Guild Chamber Music Center concerts.

New Haven
June 28-Aug. 9—Starlight Festival of Chamber Music, Saybrook College Court, Yale University.

Norfolk
June 28-Aug. 13—Chamber music at Norfolk Music School of Yale University.

Massachusetts

Andover
Aug. 5-19—Concerts and organ recitals at Organ Institute.

Boston
June 3-19—Arts Festival at the Public Garden.
July 3-Aug. 20—Esplanade Concerts.

Lenox
July 6-Aug. 14—Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Boston Symphony Orchestra.
July 3-Sept. 4—Jazz and folk song concerts at the Berkshire Music Barn.

New Marlboro
July 23-Aug. 20—Chamber music and solo recitals at Red Fox Music Barn.

Pittsfield
July 20-Oct. 16—Chamber music at South Mountain.

Rhode Island

Newport
June 24-26—Newport Folk Festival.
June 30-July 4—Newport Jazz Festival.

Vermont

Bennington
Aug. 14-28—Composers' Conference and Chamber Music Center at Bennington College.

Burlington
July 7-26—Lane Summer Series at the University of Vermont.

Manchester
July 2-Sept. 5—Chamber music, recitals, ballet and opera at Southern Vermont Art Center.

Marlboro
July 2-Aug. 7—Chamber music at Marlboro School of Music.

New Hampshire

Wolfeboro, Gilford and Meredith
July 14-Aug. 23—New Hampshire Music Festival alternating in the three towns listed above.

Maine

Blue Hill
July 4—Aug. 29—Chamber music at Kneisel Hall.

Camden
July 3-Aug. 28—Recitals at the Summer Harp Colony.

Kennebunkport
July 4-Sept. 7—Arundel Opera Theatre. Musical comedy, opera and operetta.

Hancock
July 3-31—Domaine chamber music concerts conducted by Emery Davis.
Aug. 7-28—Orchestral concerts of the master class of Pierre Monteux.

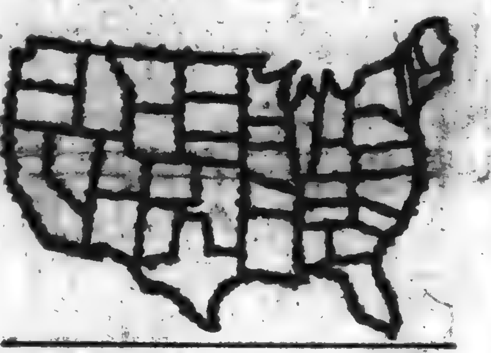
Springvale
July 4-Aug. 13—Chamber music concerts at Berkley Summer Music School.

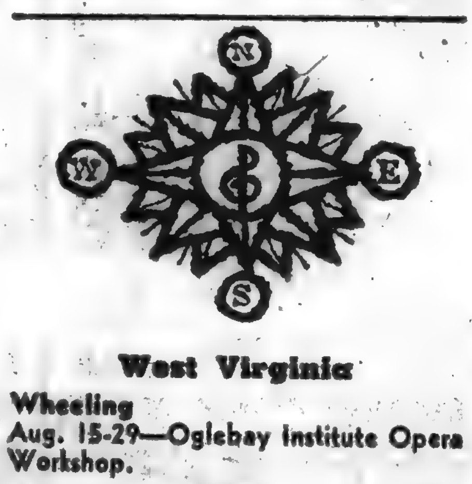
Pennsylvania

Philadelphia
June 20-July 28—Robin Hood Dell Concerts.

Pittsburgh
June 12-July 17—American Wind Symphony at Point State Park. After July 17, the Music Barge will go on tour.

Tamiment-in-the-Poconos
June 16-19—Chamber Music and Ballet Festival.





West Virginia

Wheeling
Aug. 15-29—Oglebay Institute Opera Workshop.

Ohio

Cincinnati
June 23-July 23—Cincinnati Summer Opera at the Zoo.

Cleveland
June 23-Aug. 13—Pops Concerts by Cleveland Summer Orchestra.

Yellow Springs
July 29-Sept. 4—Antioch College Festival.

Indiana

French Lick
July 29-31—Jazz Festival.

Illinois

Chicago
June 28-Aug. 14—Ravinia Festival. Symphonic and jazz concerts.
June 24-Aug. 16—Symphonic concerts at Grant Park.

Michigan

Detroit
June 19-Aug. 14—Detroit Little Symphony Concerts.
Aug. 19-21—Jazz Festival at the Fair Grounds.

Interlochen
June 29-Aug. 21—National Music Camp. Concerts, opera and dance programs.

Wisconsin

Fish Creek
Aug. 6-21—Peninsula Music Festival.

Milwaukee
June 20-July 31—Chamber Music at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee.

Kentucky

Ashland
June 12—American Folk Song Festival presented by Jean Thomas, The Traipsin' Woman.

North Carolina

Asheville
Aug. 4-6—Annual Mountain Dance and Folk Festival.

Brevard
June 26-Aug. 21—Transylvania Music Camp Concerts and Brevard Music Festival.

Tennessee

Sewanee
July 15-17—Sewanee Festival. Concerts and recitals.

Florida

Miami Beach
June 19-Aug. 21—Pops Concerts by University of Miami Symphony Orchestra.

Texas

Houston
May 29-Aug. 4—Houston Summer Symphony Park Concerts.

Arkansas

Eureka Springs
June 20-July 30—Inspiration Point Opera Workshop.

Colorado

Aspen
June 29-Sept. 4—Aspen Music Festival.

Boulder
June 19-Aug. 21—Creative Arts Festival, University of Colorado.

Central City
June 25-July 23—Central City Opera. "Aida" and "Lucia di Lammermoor."

Colorado Springs
June 29-Aug. 10—Summer Music Festival at Colorado College.

Denver
July 5-29—Red Rocks Music Festival with Denver Symphony Orchestra.

Estes Park
June 19-Sept. 4—Blue Jeans Music Festival. Orchestral concerts.
June 26-Aug. 5—Music In The Mountains. Chamber music concerts.

New Mexico

Santa Fe
June 22-Aug. 20—Santa Fe Opera. Opera in English including Stravinsky's "Oedipus Rex" conducted by the composer.

Utah

Provo
June 14-Aug. 17—Summer Music Festival at Brigham Young University.

California

Carmel-by-the-Sea
July 18-24—Bach Festival.

La Jolla
June 5-July 31—Musical Arts Society concerts.

Los Angeles
July 5-Sept. 3—Pops Concerts and Symphonies Under The Stars at Hollywood Bowl.
June 8-15 Los Angeles Music Festival.

Monterey
Sept. 23-25—Jazz Festival.

Ojai
May 21-30—Ojai Music Festival.

Redlands
June 28-Aug. 26—Redlands Bowl Music Festival.

San Diego
July 19-Aug. 30—San Diego Symphony Orchestra at Balboa Park.

San Francisco
June 20-25—Composers Workshop in Contemporary Music at the San Francisco Conservatory of Music.

Santa Barbara
Aug. 20-24—Strauss' "Arabella" in English at the Music Academy of the West.

Saratoga
June 26-Aug. 28—Recitals and chamber music at the Paul Masson Vineyards.

Alaska

Anchorage
June 19-28—Festival of Music.

Puerto Rico

San Juan
June 3-22—Festival Casals with Pablo Casals as Musical Director.

Canada

Montreal
Aug. 2-Sept. 1—Montreal Music Festival.

Stratford
July 15-Aug. 14—Symphonic concerts, International Conference of Composers and a production of H. M. S. Pinafore as the musical portion of the Stratford Festival.

Vancouver
July 22-Aug. 16—International Festival. Symphonic and chamber music concerts, ballet and opera, including the Peking Opera and the New York Philharmonic.

WORLD OF MUSIC

The Status Quo Prevails On Summer Circuit

By JOHN BRIGGS

THE listing on this page gives an idea of the quantity and variety of summer music that will be available in many parts of North America this summer.

There are not many festivals that are completely new to the list of summer music events. Those that did not appear on last summer's listing include the opera and light opera festival at Diamond Point, N. Y.; the International Guitar Festival at Greenwood Lake, N. Y.; the Oglebay Institute Opera Workshop at Wheeling, W. Va.; the Blue Jeans Music Festival at Estes Park, Colo.; the Composers Workshop in Contemporary Music at the San Francisco Conservatory of Music; the Monterey, Calif., jazz festival, and the Montreal Music Festival.

Leading orchestras of the nation again will be heard in their traditional summer locales. Concerts at Lewisohn Stadium will feature the Stadium Symphony Orchestra, made up of members of the New York Philharmonic. The Philharmonic also will play on the West Coast and at Vancouver. The Chicago Symphony will play at Ravinia, and the Philadelphia Orchestra will be heard at Robin Hood Dell. The Boston "Pops" Orchestra will play its Esplanade Concerts in [illegible] and the Boston Symphony will perform at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635

MAY 22 1960

PROGRAMS LISTED FOR TANGLEWOOD

Boston Symphony to Present 14 Compositions Never Played There Before

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's programs for the 1960 Berkshire Festival include fourteen compositions never performed there before. Only four of the works are by contemporary composers, and nearly all are standard repertory pieces. The fete will be held at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., from July 6 to Aug. 14.

Charles Munch, musical director of the orchestra, will conduct ten of the works—Bach's Triple Concerto and Cantata No 4 ("Christ lag in Todesbanden"), Mozart's Piano Concerto No. [illegible], Sibelius' Violin Concerto, Fauré's Requiem, Khrennikov's Symphony No. 1, Dutilleux' Symphony No. 2, and Dello Joio's Variations, Chaconne and Finale.

Pierre Monteux will be responsible for Respighi's "Fountains of Rome" and Cherubini's "Anacreon" Overture, Hugh Ross will lead the orchestra and Berkshire Festival Chorus in Mozart's Litany (K. 243), and Aaron Copland will conduct his own Symphony No. 1.

Soloists scheduled to make their Tanglewood debuts with the Boston Symphony are [illegible] Frank and Gary Graff[illegible], pianists; Jaime Laredo and [illegible]iero Ricci, violinists; Freda [illegible]-Masse, contralto, and David Laurent, bass.

Included among the special nonorchestral events at Tanglewood will be a Chopin Centenary Piano Recital by Claudio Arrau, on July 20, and an all-Copland piano recital played by William Masselos on July 18.

On Aug. 4, the Berkshire Music Center Opera Department will give the world première of Jan Meyerowitz' one-act opera, "Port Town." Puccini's "Suor Angelica" and Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnole" are also scheduled for presentation by the opera department during the summer.

3

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 600,319 S. 1,221,337

FEB 28 1960

ON-BEAT VACATION

It Is Not Always Easy for Travelers To Select a Music Festival

By ERIC SALZMAN

HOW does one pick a music festival?

Some people like to organize their vacation trips around a program of festival hopping. Others like to catch an event or two in the course of their travels. But, unless one knows exactly what one wants, it is not easy to make a choice.

Practically every time a couple of musicians get together these days for a little fiddling, tootling or warbling, it constitutes a festival. Festivals, fêtes, Festwochen and festivali are organized at the drop of an F-sharp and they have proliferated over several continents, including this one.

A confirmed festival buff might spend most of his time zig-zagging from Wagner to modern music to Mozart to Sibelius with hardly a quarter-note rest in between. He would be on the move from early spring to late fall, and even then he would miss a lot.

Alas, there are no central bureaus or offices where information and tickets on everything can be found. But twenty-two important European events have formed the European Association of Music Festivals, 122 rue de Lausanne, Geneva, which will be most happy to dispense information and brochures. However, many of the more important events — Edinburgh, Salzburg, Spoleto, Glyndebourne and Bergen, to name a few — are not represented.

Up to Travel Agent

The easiest and simplest thing for the tourist to do is to leave himself at the mercy of his travel agent. He will be able to ship the traveler off to selected and glamorous events, and he can work out the details of the trip (stopovers, transportation, reservations, etc.). Or, the tourist can sign up with one of the "Festival" tours that leave these shores every summer. He will be in the hands of a guide or tour leader (if one is fortunate, a knowledgeable and experienced one), who will help the vacationist find his way about the musical geography of Europe.

Of course, if the traveler hates Wagner, he is going to feel silly about winding up at a five-hour music-drama marathon at Bayreuth. Or, as a lover of choral music, he will be saddened to discover that two weeks of same in Perugia, Italy, were by-passed for something that interested him less.

The only real answer is to stay alert. Watch the newspapers and other publications for announcements. Write early to the festival in the city where it will take place; a specific address often is not necessary. Information and addresses also can be obtained from the tourist or information services of the various countries; nearly all of them have offices in New York.

Many European festivals are specialized in interest. Some honor favorite sons, such as Wagner (Bayreuth), Mozart (Salzburg), Sibelius (Helsinki), Bach (Ansbach), Grieg (Bergen) and, this summer, Mahler (Vienna). The spotlight is on opera in a great many places (Aix-en-Provence, Glyndebourne, the Holland Festival, the Maggio Musicale in Florence, Munich, Spoleto and Wiesbaden); one festival Bregenz on the Lake of Constance) even stresses operettas.

Pablo Casals is, of course, still the feature attraction of the Prades Festival; at other places, a heavy diet of symphonic music can be expected (Lucerne, Prague, Edinburgh, Besançon and Strasbourg). Choral music can be found at the Sagra Musicale Umbra in Perugia, the Three Choirs Festival in England and at the famous Eisteddfod at Llangollen in Wales.

Modern music? The International Society for Contemporary Music has its annual jamboree in Cologne in June and there are other events in Darmstadt, Warsaw, Cheltenham, Donaueschingen, Venice and Aldeburgh that cater to it. Old music? The Dolmetsch family still holds forth in Haslemere; Perugia, Prades and other places mentioned above also feature it.

Folk music and dancing will be found in Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, and Santander, Spain. Ancient Greek theatre can be seen in its natural habitat of Athens. Many of the others feature ballet, modern and classical theatre and even art exhibitions.

Very few festivals confine themselves to one category, and often several different types of events are offered. Some of the festivals are incurably miscellaneous; Berlin, Bordeaux, Granada, Stockholm and Zurich are among those that mix ballet, opera, symphony and chamber music.

Then, too, it is wise not to forget that there is plenty of first-class summer music-making on this side of the ocean. Besides such big-city events as Lewisohn Stadium (New York) and Robin Hood Dell (Philadelphia) concerts, there are small and large festivals and summer programs all over this country and in Canada.

The Blended Brew

Festivals in the New World tend toward the blended brew. Tanglewood is famous for its symphonic concerts, but interested [illegible] chamber music, opera and other types of musical endeavors both under the auspices of the Berkshire Music Festival or in the near geographical and temporal vicinity.

Similarly, events like the Empire State Festival, Vancouver, Chautauqua and Aspen tend toward variety. But this summer and next, Aspen will pay musical tribute to Beethoven in a number of special events.

Bach is honored at more than one place, including the famous Bach Festival in Bethlehem, Pa. Modern music can be heard at the Eastman School in Rochester, at the National Gallery in Washington, at Ojai, Calif., and at Bennington, Vt. Cincinnati, Central City, Colo., and Santa Fe, N. M., will be among those places specializing in opera; chamber music will be featured at many smaller locations in New England.

Even with American events, it is a good idea to plan well in advance. It may be the heart of winter, but it is not too early to begin dreaming about midsummer music.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,085

APR 2 1960

Miss Dunn Helps Plan New Music Center Set-Up

A former Williamstown resident has helped develop plans for what will be practically a new and novel department at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, this summer.

She is Miss Florence A. Dunn, a member of the Music Center faculty for the past eight years, daughter of Mrs. Harland Dunn of Thomas St., Williamstown, and the late Mr. Dunn.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra which operates the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood each summer concurrently with the Berkshire Music Festival, announced today that the new feature will be called the Department of Listening and Analysis, designed to give students at the Music Center an opportunity to learn directly from the rehearsals and concerts prepared and performed at the Festival.

G. Wallace Woodworth, the James Edward Ditson professor of music at Harvard University, will head the department and today's announcement said that he had prepared the curriculum with the aid of Miss Dunn. The new department will replace the former Tanglewood Study Group.

Miss Dunn is a teacher of voice at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, of which she is a graduate, is accompanist for the St. Cecilia Society, and the Apollo Club of Boston and is a member of the choir of Trinity Church there.

Mr. Woodworth has been at Harvard since 1926 and is conductor emeritus of the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society.

CHICAGO, ILL.
TRIBUNE
D. 686,455 S. 1,188,042

MAR 20 1960

Chamber Orchestra Plays Concert Today

The Chicago Chamber orchestra under the direction of Dieter Kober will present this concert today at 4 p. m. in Fullerton hall at the Art institute: Vaughan Williams' Concerto Accademico for Violin and String orchestra, with Stanley Czerwinski, violinist; Renaissance Dances for Descant Recorder, Strings and Percussion, arranged by Suzanne Bloch; Elizabethan Suite for Lute and Chamber orchestra, from Jane Pickering's Lute Book, arranged by Miss Bloch, who is also the soloist; and Mozart's Piano Concerto in E-flat major, K. 449, with William Browning as soloist. On May 23 the chamber orchestra will play garden serenades in McKinlock Memorial Court of the Art institute at 7, 8:15, and 9:30 p. m.

Suzanne Bloch

• • •

The Berkshire Music Center's 1960 school session will be held July 3 to Aug. 14 at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., where the Boston Symphony orchestra begins its six-week festival July 3. Meanwhile, the orchestra is planning its eight week tour of Japan and other far eastern countries, with concerts in Korea, Japan, the Philippines, Australia, and New Zealand. With Charles Munch, Richard Burgin, and Aaron Copland as conductors, the orchestra leaves Boston April 25 and returns there June 19. Among the American composers tentatively listed for performance are Samuel Barber, Easley Blackwood, Copland, Norman Dello Joio, Leon Kirchner, and William Schuman.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
D. 454,224 SAT. 178,899

FEB 8 1960

SNOWY SYMPHONY

Bousquet's in Front For East Ski Cover

By ZANDER HOLLANDER,
World-Telegram Staff Writer.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Feb. 8. — The Boston Symphony orchestra plays in the summer at nearby Tanglewood. A half dozen of its members come here in the winter, too — without cellos or violins.

They are learning how to ski, says Don Soviero, the vigorous ski operator who has taken Bousquet's out of the woods and transformed it into one of the East's busiest centers.

It is not in deference to the Boston Symphony skiers, however, that Soviero plays longhair music that makes schussing, sitzing and slaloming so pleasant. We took a header to Prokofieff's "Love of Three Oranges" during yesterday's snowstorm and didn't bother getting up until after the last note.

Revolution in the Snow.

It was just four years ago that Soviero introduced snowmaking on a large scale and so revolutionized the industry. Many, many areas have since followed Bousquet's lead — many without success, incidentally, as they've discovered the technological and backbreaking labor problems that go with creating snow for sizable areas.

But Soviero, ever refining the techniques, has now reached the point where he can (with the required below-freezing temperature) lay down a six-inch average machine cover in 14 hours on the 16-acre Russell Slope.

This has been the lever, of course, that from the first has drawn skiers to this area when there was little or no snow elsewhere. But from all evidence Bousquet's today gets the mass skiers regardless of ample snow at other areas.

This has been its best year — some 50 days of skiing to date. On weekends this seven-day-a-week area has been averaging [illegible] skiers, according to Soviero.

Nightly Ski Course.

Among the during-the-week group are more than 100 adults who are taking a five lesson one-night-a-week course for a total of $10. It's sponsored by the Pittsfield public park department, with Bousquet's supplying the instructors. This, indeed, is a fresh twist in adult education, and it means, naturally, that Bousquet's (as it does with its Saturday morning program for local youngsters) is building a substantial local following.

The greatest number of Bousquet's skiers, though, come from the cities: New York, Boston, Springfield, Hartford. For New Yorkers it's 145 miles.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 600,319 S. 1,221.337

MAR 22 1960

MUSIC NOTES

Events today: "Tosca," Metropolitan Opera, 8 P. M.; Eugene List, pianist, Carnegie Hall, 8:30; New Music Concert, Carnegie Recital Hall, 8:30.

Also, Herbert Burtis, organist, and Robert Spencer, tenor, St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, noon; Edwin Flath, organist, Calvary Protestant Episcopal Church, Park Avenue South at Twenty-first Street, 8:30; "Rigoletto," Amato Opera, Ninety-second Street Young Women's Hebrew Association, 8:30.

Instrumentalists who wish to apply to study orchestral and chamber music performance at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox Mass., in the summer may attend auditions. For percussion players, they will be held tomorrow at 7 P. M., in Carnegie Hall and for pianists, string and wind players, Friday, from 1 to 4 P. M., in room 503 at the Juilliard School. Harp players should write to Symphony Hall, Boston for appointments.

Times [illegible]

RESTORED

There'll be opera again at Tanglewood this summer. The opera department of the Berkshire Music Center, which was suspended last summer and the fate of which hung in the balance this year, has been saved by a number of its friends rallying to its rescue.

Boris Goldovsky will be back as the head of the reactivated department. It will be in operation during the center's regular summer session, which this year will be from July 3 to Aug. 14.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 600.319 S. 1,221,337

APR 2 1960

MUSIC COURSE LISTED

Berkshire Center Adds Unit on Listening and Analysis

The Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will feature a Department of Listening and Analysis. It will be headed by G. Wallace Woodworth, James Edward Ditson Professor of Music at Harvard University.

The program will be integrated with regular Tanglewood festival rehearsals and concerts. The school and the course run concurrently with the Boston Symphony's regular festival schedule from July 3 to Aug. 14.

The course for students at the Music Center will be made up of [illegible] sessions on Monday [illegible] Thursday of each week. [illegible] program is a revision and [illegible] of the former Tanglewood Study Group.

COLORED PAPER

4

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,590

APR 24 1960

Music

Tanglewood Program Is Announced

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

There is nothing either provocative or trite about the programs to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, July 6 through Aug. 14.

As in the last few summers, conductor Charles Munch is staying close to the center of the road, interjecting a light course of contemporary music with proven works that carry a box-office guarantee.

Eighteen concerts will be given by the orchestra in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on Friday evenings, Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons the six weekends beginning July 8. Munch will conduct 14 of these concerts. Pierre Monteux, the orchestra's 85-year-old "conductor emeritus" will conduct four, one on each of the last four weekends.

None of the festival's 18 major concerts will be given in the smaller Theater-Concert Hall, as in the past.

The first weekend of concerts (July 8, 9, 10) will be devoted to the music of Bach, and the second weekend, to Mozart (July 15, 16, 17).

Among the special works to be performed are the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust" (Aug. 14), Beethoven's Ninth Symphony (July 31), and Faure's Requiem (July 22).

Guest artists include the Chilean pianist, Claudio Arrau, in Beethoven's Fifth Piano Concerto (July 23), and in a Chopin Centenary recital (July 20).

Soprano Eleanor Steber will be guest in the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust" (Aug. 14) and in the Beethoven Ninth.

Violinist Ruggiero Ricci is scheduled to play the Sibelius Violin Concerto Aug. 5. The 18-year-old Bolivian violinist, Jaime Laredo, who won the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Music Competition (June 1959) will appear for the first time with the orchestra, July 24, in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto.

Other piano soloists will be Jorge Bolet, Leon Fleisher, Gary Graffman, Eugene Istomin, and Byron Janis.

Among the vocalists are Saramae Endich, Donald Gramm, Freday Gray-Masse, David Laurent, John McCollum, and Martial Singher.

Chamber Music

In addition to Arrau's recital (July 20) five other Wednesday-evening concerts of chamber music will be given by the Budapest String Quartet, the Knoll Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio of New York, and pianist Claude Frank with members of the Boston Symphony.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops at "Tanglewood on Parade," Aug. 11. Aug. 4, a "Gala Evening" has been planned to benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

KALAMAZOO, MICH.
GAZETTE
D. 49,775 S. 50,640

MAY 29 1960

* * *

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY has programmed 18 concerts for its six-week Berkshire Festival at the 210-acre Tanglewood Estate near Lenox, Mass. The concerts will be on weekends. Besides the orchestra's performances in its 6,000-seat Music Shed will be midweek chamber music events, with the Budapest Quartet and others. Among guest artists will be pianist Claudio Arrau, soprano Eleanor Steber, and the 18-year-old Bolivian violinist, Jaime Laredo, who also will appear in Kalamazoo next season. (Larry Pratt)

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

MAY 23 1960

In Brief . . .

Berkshire Street Railway's petition fo a license to run buses from Pittsfield New York is a cheerful item at a tim when curtailment is the watchword o every local transportation front . . . I the wake of the state Junior Chamb of Commerce organization's unprecedented action in electing Mr. and Mr Dennis J. Duffin to the presidencies o the Jaycees and Jaycee-ettes respectively, the consensus in Lenox today is tha the honors couldn't have come to a nice couple . . . And speaking of well-earne honors, it was particularly satisfying t see the South Church civic award go thi year to Lincoln S. Cain, whose lon record of devout community service ha been somewhat concealed by his distast for the limelight . . .

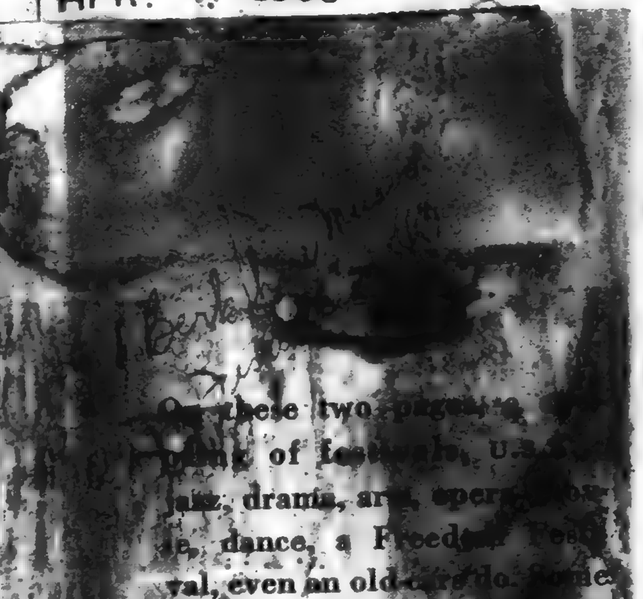
In the light of the complaints about Tanglewood's tendency to rely on the tried and true, it is interesting to note that several of the compositions that will be heard there for the first time this year have been very much in the concert repertory elsewhere for half a centur

---

MADEMOISELLE
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 505,568

APR. 1960

FESTIVALS, U.S.A.



On these two pages, a sampling of festivals, U.S.A.: jazz, drama, art, opera, [illegible] ic, dance, a Freedom Festival, even an old-cars do. Some 1,200 festivals/celebrations a year in this U.S.A., and their greatest concentration's from mid-April well into October.

1 The big news this summer, at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Mass., is a small shell in the huge Shed. Right on the stage of the Shed a specially designed shell to house small orchestras is being installed. Importance: over 6,000 will be able to hear the festival's opening Bach (July 8, 9, 10), all-Mozart (July 15, 16, 17) concerts. Seasons past only 1,200 heard them in the Theatre-Concert Hall. [illegible] August 14 the Shed [illegible] shelled for programs [illegible] Boston Symphony Orchestra returned from Far [illegible]

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121

APR 17 1960

Programs Are Announced for Tanglewood

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give its usual quota of eighteen concerts in its 1960 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., playing on six Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons from July 6 through Aug. 14. Pierre Monteux, who celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday on April 4, will conduct four programs, and the others will be directed by Charles Munch.

As usual, the first two week ends will be devoted to music of Bach and Mozart, played by a chamber ensemble of Boston Symphony musicians. The full orchestra will be heard in the other four week ends. For the first time, all the festival concerts will be held in Tanglewood's Music Shed. Formerly most of the Bach and Mozart concerts took place in the Theater-Concert Hall, but the size of the audiences has taxed the smaller auditorium's capacity.

While emphasis on particular composers will not again be a feature of the full orchestra's concerts, the program policy continues the conservatism which has marked the last few summers. Out of fifty-four works scheduled, only five were composed during the last forty years, and American representation is limited to one work apiece by Aaron Copland, Walter Piston and Norman Dello Joio.

The list of programs follows:

July 8 (Munch). Bach: Suite No. 1; Violin Concerto in E (William Kroll); Piano Concerto in F minor (Seymour Lipkin); Triple Concerto in A minor for flute, violin and piano (James Pappoutsakis, Messrs. Kroll, Lipkin). July 9 (Munch). Bach: Excerpts from "Musical Offering" and "Art of the Fugue"; Piano Concerto in D minor (Lipkin); Suite No. 4. July 10 (Munch). Bach: Suite No. 3; Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 6, 2; Cantata, "Christ lag in Todesbanden."

July 15 (Munch). Mozart: Bassoon Concerto (Sherman Walt); Clarinet Concerto (Gino Cioffi), Sinfonia Concertante oboe, clarinet, bassoon and horn (Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, Sherman Walt, James Stagliano). July 16 (Munch). Mozart: Eine Kleine Nachtmusik; Piano Concerto, K.491 (Claude Frank); Litany, K.243. July 17 (Munch). Mozart, Symphony No. 36; Violin Concerto, K.218 (Joseph Silverstein); Symphony No. 39.

July 22 (Munch). Beethoven, "Eroica" Symphony; Faure, Requiem (Saramae Endich, soprano; Donald Gramm, bass). July 23 (Monteux). Cherubini "Anacreon" Overture; Beethoven, Piano Concerto No. 5 (Claude Arrau); Respighi, "Fountains of Rome; Strauss, Till Eulenspiegel. July 24 (Munch). Dello Joio, Variations, Chaconne and Finale; Mendelssohn, Violin Concerto (Jaime Laredo); Beethoven, Symphony No. 5.

July 29 (Munch). Stravinsky, Jeu de Cartes; Khrennikov, Symphony No. 1; Rachmaninoff, Piano Concerto No. 3 (Byron Janis). July 30 (Munch). Berlioz, Symphonie Fantastique; Piston, Symphony No. 6; Ravel, "Daphnis et Chloe." July 31 (Monteux). Monteux, "Haffner" Symphony; Beethoven, Symphony No. 9 (Eleanor Steber, Freda Gray-Masse, John McCollum, David Laurent).

Aug. 5 (Munch). Wagner, Excerpts from "Die Meistersinger;" Sibelius, Violin Concerto (Ruggiero Ricci); Mendelssohn, Scotch Symphony. Aug. 6 (Munch). Beethoven, "Prometheus" Overture; Dutilleux, Symphony No. 2; Brahms, Piano Concerto No. 2 (Eugene Istomin). Aug. 7 (Monteux). Vaughan Williams, Tallis Fantasia; Beethoven, Piano Concerto No. 3 (Leon Fleisher); Brahms, Symphony No. 4.

Aug. 12 (Monteux). Beethoven, Symphony No. 2; Liszt, Piano Concerto in E flat (Jorge Bolet); Stravinsky, "Fire Bird" Suite. Aug. 13 (Munch). Handel, Water Music Suite; Chopin, Piano Concerto No. 1 (Gary Graffman); Copland, Symphony No. 1 (composer conducting). Aug. 14 (Munch). Berlioz, "La Damnation de Faust" (Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, Martial Singher).

The usual festival chamber music series will be held on six Wednesday nights, beginning July 6. Claudio Arrau will play a Chopin program in honor of the composer's 150 anniversary on July 20. The Budapest and Kroll Quartets, the Beaux-Arts Trio and Claude Frank, pianist, with members of the Boston Symphony, will be heard in the other programs.

The customary single "Tanglewood on Parade" program for the benefit of the Berkshire Center will be replaced by two on consecutive Thursdays. The Center's various activities will be demonstrated on Aug. 4, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston "Pops" orchestra, which is composed mainly of Boston Symphony musicians, on Aug. 11.

• • •

Pierre Monteux

Met Champion

Probably for the first time in the Metropolitan Opera's history, a Mozart work has won a season's championship for frequency of performances. "Don Giovanni" heads the 1959-'60 list with fourteen hearings. But since seven of them were in special performances for students without a general ticket sale, "Madama Butterfly" leads in the number of representations open to the public at large; it was staged twelve times.

"Aida" follows with eleven hearings; "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Pagliacci" and "Carmen" are tied with ten each. "Tosca," "La Traviata" and "The Gypsy Baron" follow with nine performances apiece.

According to the figures furnished by the Metropolitan's invaluable press department, the season which closed last night included 189 performances of twenty-four operas on 173 evenings and afternoons. Counting the six performances which have been given in Philadelphia and the fifty-one scheduled for the seven-week tour which opens in Boston tomorrow, the 1959-'60 grand total will be 236 performances; two more than in [illegible]

By languages, this season's home score is: Italian; thirteen operas, 116 performances; German, six and thirty-five; French, four and twenty-nine, and English, one and nine.

• • •

Incidentals

Mary Curtis-Verna, Metropolitan Opera soprano, will sing with the New York University Glee Club under Peter Sozio's direction at 2:30 p. m. today in Rockefeller Center's Lower Plaza. . . . The St. Cecilia Club will give its spring invitation concert Wednesday night in the Carnegie Recital Hall under David Buttolph's direction.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
TRIBUNE
D. 223,559 S. 650,165

MAY 8 1960

Jaime Laredo, young Bolivian violinist who played here Monday, will be one of the guest artists at the Berkshire Music festival, playing the Mendelssohn concerto there July 24. The Berkshire Tanglewood season will be July 6 to Aug. 14 and Charles Munch will conduct 18 of the concerts.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
POST
D. 328,402 S. 282,240

MAY 1 1960

SHREVEPORT, LA.
TIMES
D. 87,184 S. 108,625

MAY 1 1960

TANGLEWOOD OPENS JULY 6

BOSTON, Mass., April 30 (Special)—Of interest to music lovers and musicians in our own country is the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass. Sponsored by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, this festival begins July 6, and runs through Aug. 14.

Guest artists scheduled to appear include Claudio Arrau, pianist, Ruggiero Ricci, violinist and soprano, Eleanor Steber. Miss Steber will appear in "The Damnation of Faust," Aug. 14.

COLORED PAPER

4

[illegible]
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,590
APR 24 1960

Music

Tanglewood Program Is Announced

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

There is nothing either provocative or trite about the programs to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, July 8 through Aug. 14.

[illegible] conductor Charles Munch is staying close to the center-of-the-road, interjecting a light course of contemporary music with proven works that carry a box-office guarantee.

Eighteen concerts will be given by the orchestra in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on Friday evenings, Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons the six weekends beginning July 8. Munch will conduct 14 of these concerts. Pierre Monteux, the orchestra's 85-year-old "conductor emeritus" will conduct four, one on each of the last four weekends.

None of the festival's 18 major concerts will be given in the smaller Theater-Concert Hall, as in the past.

The first weekend of concerts (July 8, 9, 10) will be devoted to the music of Bach, and the second weekend, to Mozart (July 15, 16, 17).

Among the special works to be performed are the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust" (Aug. 14), Beethoven's Ninth Symphony (July 31), and Faure's Requiem (July 22).

Guest artists include the Chilean pianist, Claudio Arrau, in Beethoven's Fifth Piano Concerto (July 23), and in a Chopin Centenary recital (July 20).

Soprano Eleanor Steber will be guest in the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust" (Aug. 14) and in the Beethoven Ninth.

Violinist Ruggiero Ricci is scheduled to play the Sibelius Violin Concerto Aug. 5. The [illegible]-year-old Bolivian violinist, Jaime Laredo who won the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Music Competition (June 1959) will appear for the first time with the orchestra, July 24, in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto.

Other piano [illegible] will be Jorge Bolet, [illegible] Gary Graffman, Eugene Istomin and Byron Janis.

Among the vocalists are Saramae Endich, Donald Gramm, Freday Gray-Masse, David Laurent, John McCollum, and Martial Singher.

Chamber Music

In addition to Arrau's recital (July 20) five other Wednesday-evening concerts of chamber music will be given by the Budapest String Quartet, the Knoll Quartet, the Beaux Arts Trio of New York, and pianist Claude Frank with members of the Boston Symphony.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops at "Tanglewood on Parade," Aug. 11. Aug. 4, a "Gala Evening" has been planned to benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

[illegible]
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
MAY 23 1960

In Brief . . .

Berkshire Street Railway's petition for a license to run buses from Pittsfield [illegible] New York is a cheerful item at a time when curtailment is the watchword [illegible] every local transportation front . . . [illegible] the wake of the state Junior Chamber of Commerce organization's unprecedented action in electing Mr. and Mrs. Dennis J. Duffin to the presidencies of the Jaycees and Jaycee-ettes respectively, the consensus in Lenox today is that the honors couldn't have come to a nicer couple . . . And speaking of well-earned honors, it was particularly satisfying to see the South Church civic award go this year to Lincoln S. Cain, whose long record of devout community service has been somewhat concealed by his distaste for the limelight . . .

In the light of the complaints about Tanglewood's tendency to rely on the tried and true, it is interesting to note that several of the compositions that will be heard there for the first time this year have been very much in the concert repertory elsewhere for half a cent

---

KALAMAZOO, MICH.
GAZETTE
D. 49,775 S. 50,640
MAY 29 1960

* * *

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY [illegible] concerts for its six-week Berkshire Festival at the 210-acre Tanglewood Estate near [illegible], Mass. The concerts will be on weekends. Besides the orchestra's performances in its 6,000-seat Music Shed will be midweek chamber music events, with the Budapest Quartet and others. Among guest artists will be pianist Claudio Arrau, soprano Eleanor Steber, and the 18-year-old Bolivian violinist, Jaime Laredo, who also will appear in Kalamazoo next season. (Larry Pratt)

MADEMOISELLE
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 505,568
APR. 1960

FESTIVALS, U.S.A.

[illegible] these two [illegible] a [illegible] of [illegible] jazz, drama, art, opera [illegible] dance, a Freedom Festival, even an old cars [illegible] 1200 festivals/celebrations a year in this U.S.A., and their greatest concentration's from mid-April well into October.

1 The big news this summer, at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, Mass., is a small shell in the huge Shed. Right on the stage of the Shed a specially-designed shell to house small orchestras is being installed. Importance: over 6,000 will be able to hear the festival's opening Bach (July [illegible]) all-Mozart (July 15 [illegible]) concerts. [illegible] 1,200 heard them [illegible] Concert Hall. [illegible] August 14 the Shed [illegible] shelled for programs [illegible] Boston Symphony Orchestra returned from [illegible]

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
TRIBUNE
D. 223,559 S. 650,165
MAY 8 1960

[illegible] young Bolivian violinist who played here Monday will be one of the guest [illegible] at the Berkshire [illegible] festival, playing the Mendelssohn concerto there July 24. The Berkshire Tanglewood season will be July 8 to Aug. 14 and Charles Munch will conduct 18 of the concerts.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
POST
D. 328,402 S. 262,240
MAY 1 1960

SHREVEPORT, LA.
TIMES
D. 87,184 S. 108,625
MAY 1 1960

TANGLEWOOD OPENS JULY 6.

BOSTON, Mass., April 30 (Special)—Of interest to music lovers and musicians in our own country is the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass. Sponsored by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, this festival begins July 6, and runs through [illegible]

Guest artists [illegible] to appear include [illegible] Arrau, pianist; Ruggiero Ricci, violinist and soprano Eleanor Steber. Miss Steber will appear in "The Damnation of Faust," Aug. 14.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 32[illegible],065 S. 505,121
APR 17 1960

Programs Are Announced for Tanglewood

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will give its usual quota of eighteen concerts in the 1960 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, [illegible] Mass., playing on six Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons from July 8 through Aug. 14. Pierre Monteux, who celebrated his eighty-fifth birthday on April 4, will conduct four programs, and the others will be directed by [illegible] Munch.

As usual, the first two weekends will be devoted to music of Bach and Mozart, played by a chamber ensemble of Boston Symphony musicians. The full orchestra will be heard in the other four week-ends. For the first time, all the festival concerts will be held in Tanglewood's Music Shed. Formerly most of the Bach and Mozart concerts took place in the Theater-Concert Hall but the size of the audiences has taxed the smaller auditorium's capacity.

While emphasis on particular composers will not again be a feature of the full orchestra's concerts, the program policy continues the conservatism which has marked the last few summers. Out of fifty-four works scheduled, only five were composed during the last forty years, and American representation is limited to one work apiece by Aaron Copland, Walter Piston and Norman Dello Joio.

The list of programs follows:

July 8 (Munch). Bach: Suite No. 1; Violin Concerto in [illegible] (William Kroll); Piano Concerto in [illegible] minor (Seymour Lipkin); Triple Concerto in A minor for flute, violin and piano (James Pappoutsakis, Messrs. Kroll, Lipkin). July 9 (Munch). Bach: Excerpts from "Musical Offering" and "Art of the Fugue"; Piano Concerto in D minor (Lipkin); Suite No. 4. July 10 (Munch). Bach: Suite No. 3; Brandenburg Concertos Nos. [illegible]; Cantata, "Christ lag in Todesbanden."

July [illegible] (Munch). Mozart: Bassoon Concerto (Sherman Walt); Clarinet Concerto (Gino Cioffi); Sinfonia Concertante oboe, clarinet, bassoon and horn (Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, Sherman Walt, James Stagliano). July 16 (Munch). Mozart: Eine Kleine Nachtmusik; Piano Concerto, K. 491 (Claude Frank); Litany, K. 243. July 17 (Munch). Mozart, Symphony No. 36; Violin Concerto, K. 218 (Joseph Silverstein); Symphony No. 39.

July 22 (Munch). Beethoven, "Eroica" Symphony; Faure, Requiem (Saramae Endich, soprano; Donald Gramm, bass). July 23 (Monteux). Cherubini, "Anacreon" Overture; Beethoven, Piano Concerto No. 5 (Claude Arrau); Respighi, "Fountains of Rome"; Strauss, Till Eulenspiegel. July 24 (Munch). Dello Joio, Variations, Chaconne and Finale; Mendelssohn, Violin Concerto (Jaime Laredo); Beethoven, Symphony No. 5.

July 29 (Munch). Stravinsky, Jeu de Cartes; Khrennikov, Symphony No. 1; Rachmaninoff, Piano Concerto No. 3 (Byron Janis). July 30 (Munch). Berlioz, Symphonie Fantastique; Piston, Symphony No. 6; Ravel, "Daphnis et Chloe." July 31 (Monteux). Monteux, "Haffner" Symphony; Beethoven, Symphony No. 9 (Eleanor Steber, Freda Gray-Masse, John McCollum, David Laurent).

Aug. 5 (Munch). Wagner, Excerpts from "Die Meistersinger;" Sibelius, Violin Concerto (Ruggiero Ricci); Mendelssohn, Scotch Symphony. Aug. 6 (Munch). Beethoven, "Prometheus" Overture; Dutilleux, Symphony No. 2; Brahms, Piano Concerto No. 2 (Eugene Istomin). Aug. 7 (Monteux). Vaughan Williams, Tallis Fantasia; Beethoven, Piano Concerto No. 3 (Leon Fleisher); Brahms, Symphony No. 4.

Aug. 12 (Monteux). [illegible], Symphony No. 2; Liszt, Piano Concerto in E flat (Jorge Bolet); Stravinsky, "Fire Bird" Suite. Aug. 13 ([illegible]). Handel, Water Music Suite; Chopin, Piano Concerto No. 1 (Gary Graffman); Copland, Symphony No. 1 (composer conducting). Aug. 14 (Munch). Berlioz, "La Damnation de Faust" (Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, Martial Singher).

The usual festival chamber music series will be held on six Wednesday nights, beginning July 6. Claudio Arrau will play a Chopin program in honor of the composer's 150 anniversary on July 20. The Budapest and Kroll Quartets, the Beaux-Arts Trio and Claude Frank, pianist, with members of the Boston Symphony, will be heard in the other programs.

The customary single "Tanglewood on Parade" program for the benefit of the Berkshire Center will be replaced by two on consecutive Thursdays. The Center's various activities will be demonstrated on Aug. 4, and Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston "Pops" orchestra, which is composed mainly of Boston Symphony musicians, on Aug. 11.

* * *

Pierre Monteux

Met Champion

Probably for the first time in the Metropolitan Opera's history, a Mozart work has won a season's championship for frequency of performances. "Don Giovanni" heads the 1959-'60 list with fourteen hearings. But since seven of them were in special performances for students without a general ticket sale, "Madama Butterfly" leads in the number of representations open to the public at large; it was staged twelve times.

"Aida" follows with eleven hearings; "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Pagliacci" and "Carmen" are tied with ten each. "Tosca," "La Traviata" and "The Gypsy Baron" follow with nine performances apiece.

According to the figures furnished by the Metropolitan's invaluable press department, the season which closed last night included 189 performances of twenty-four operas on [illegible] evenings and afternoons. Counting the six performances which have been given in Philadelphia and the fifty-one scheduled for the seven-week tour which opens in Boston tomorrow, the 1959-'60 grand total will be 236 performances, two more than in 1958-'59.

By languages, this season's home score is: Italian, thirteen operas, 116 performances; German, six and thirty-five; French, four and twenty-nine, and English, one and nine.

* * *

Incidentals

Mary Curtis-Verna, Metropolitan Opera soprano, will sing with the New York University Glee Club under Peter [illegible]o's direction at 2:30 p. m. [illegible] in Rockefeller Center's [illegible] Plaza. . . . The St. Cecilia Club will give its spring invitation concert Wednesday night in the Carnegie Recital Hall under David Buttolph's direction.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,590

MAR 27 1960

Music

Berkshire Center Plans Announced

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

With few changes, the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood will operate this year from July 3 to Aug. 14, concurrently with the Boston Symphony's Berkshire Music Festival.

The Center's opera department will be reactivated this year under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, founder and head of the New England Opera Theater. He returns to Tanglewood after a year's leave of absence.

Sponsored by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, the guest composer in the composition department for the 1960 session will be Luciano Berio. Aaron Copland, department head, will also be assisted by the young American composer, Lukas Foss, and members of the Lenox Quartet.

Founded in 1940 by the Boston Symphony in the realization of a long-held wish of Koussevitzky, then the orchestra's music director, the Berkshire Center annually attracts more than 300 students from the United States and many foreign countries.

In this school for the training of performers through performance, the young artist is guided by a faculty of leading musicians and learns to practice with professional intensity.

New Department

The newly organized department of listening and analysis, on the other hand, provides an opportunity for the teacher, student, amateur, or the listener to participate in making music to gain a greater understanding of the music performed at Tanglewood by the Center and by the Orchestra.

Information on rates, tuition grants, awards, and scholarships of the Berkshire Music Center may be obtained from Miss R. Bossler, registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Far Eastern Tour

April 25 the Boston Symphony will leave Boston by chartered planes to make an eight-week tour of Japan and other Far-Eastern countries.

The orchestra wil go first to Korea, and then to Japan, where it will give 22 concerts in 16 cities. Next it will go to the Philippines and Australia, and will wind up the tour with two concerts in New Zealand.

Return to Boston is scheduled for June 19, to prepare for the six-week Berkshire Music Festival which will begin Friday, July 8.

Tour conductors will be Charles Munch, Richard Burgin (concertmaster of the orchestra), and Aaron Copland.

Programs embrace 22 compositions by 19 composers. Included in the tentative list are eight works by seven American composers — Samuel Barber, "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance"; Easley Blackwood, "Symphony No. 1"; Copland, from "The Tender Lands"; Norman Dello Joio, "Variations, Chaconne and Finale"; Leon Kirchner, "Toccata"; Walter Piston, "Symphony No. 6"; and William Schuman, "New England Tryptich.'

Staats-Zeitung. G.A.
3/27/60

Über 300 Studenten für Tanglewood-Kurse

Charles Munch, Dirigent des Boston-Symphonie-Orchesters und Direktor des Berkshire Music Centers, gab bekannt, daß für das diesjährige Semester der Sommerschule der Boston Symphony, die während der Tanglewood-Festspiele vom 3. Juli bis zum 14. August angesetzt sind, bereits mehr als 300 Studenten aus den Vereinigten Staaten und allen Teilen der Welt angemeldet sind. Das Berkshire Music Center, das von Serge Koussevitsky gegründet wurde, ermöglicht es Musikstudenten, unter Führung von Berufskünstlern praktische Erfahrung in allen Phasen der Musik zu sammeln.

Für die Tanglewood-Festspiele sind unter Leitung von Charles Munch, Pierre Monteux und einer Reihe bedeutender Gastdirigenten 24 Konzerte geplant, deren Programme in den nächsten Tagen bekanntgegeben werden.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 183,699

MAR 20 1960

LANSING, MICH.
STATE JOURNAL
D. 63,999 S. 63,202
MAR 20 1960

Sun (e)
WESTERLY, R. I.
Circ. 7,657

MAR 15 1960

PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER
D. 618,557 S. 1,033,048
MAR 27 1960

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 12,775

MAR 12 1960

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.
ENQUIRER AND NEWS
D 37,691 S 37,467
APR 10 1960

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 50,885

MAR 27 1960

Berkshire Center To Open July 3

Special to The Standard-Times

BOSTON, March 26—The 1960 session of the Berkshire Music Center will be held July 3 to Aug. 14 at Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home near Lenox, Charles Munch, director, announced yesterday.

The center will be in session concurrently with the orchestra's Berkshire Festival consisting of more than 24 concerts by the Boston Symphony under the direction of Mr. Munch and Pierre Monteux with guest artists.

Composer Aaron Copland is chairman of the center's faculty and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. The center annually attracts more than 300 students from the United States and abroad.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121
MAR 20 1960

Bostonians' Travels

According to a recently announced tentative itinerary, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will give thirty-six concerts in five countries during its Far Eastern spring tour, with Charles Munch, Richard Burgin and Aaron Copland conducting. Leaving Boston by air April 25, the orchestra will arrive in Korea two days later for a concert in Seoul and another probably in Pusan. Flying to Tokyo May 1, it will give six concerts there, two in Osaka and fourteen in other Japanese cities.

Three concerts will be given in Manila early in June before the Bostonians reach Australia for seven concerts in Sydney, Brisbane, Melbourne and Adelaide. They will also play at Auckland and Wellington in New Zealand before the orchestra returns to Boston June 19 and opens its six week Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. on Friday, July 8, with Mr. Munch and Pierre Monteux conducting.

• • •

Berkshire Center

Mr. Munch will again be director of the Berkshire Music Center for its 1960 session at Tanglewood, July 3 to Aug. 14, with Mr. Copland as chairman of the faculty and Ralph Berkowitz as dean. The opera department, which was suspended last summer, will resume its activities under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who returns after a year's leave of absence. Full information about the Center may be obtained from its registrar, Miss R. Bossler, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Members of the Boston Symphony will hold auditions here for instrumentalists who wish to study orchestra and chamber music playing at the Center. Timpanists and percussionists will be heard at 7 p. m. Wednesday at Carnegie Hall, and string and wind players will have their hearings from 1 to 4 Friday in Room 503 of the Julliard School. Harpists should arrange for audition appointments through Miss Bossler at Symphony Hall.

• • •

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
MONTHLY

APR 1960

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.
APR 1960

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK, N.Y..
MONTHLY 38,700

APR 1960

COLLEGE NEWS

■ The 1960 sessions of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., will be held July 3 to Aug. 14. Charles Munch will again be the director, Aaron Copland chairman of the faculty and Ralph Berkowitz, dean. The opera department, which did not function last summer, will resume activities under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. Information concerning the courses to be given may be obtained by writing to Miss R. Rossler, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 4,953

APR 8 1960

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 159,968
APR 5 1960

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 146,727

APR 17 1960

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 50,885

APR 3 1960

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 12,775

APR 1 1960

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.
MAY 1960

Back Bay Ledger &
Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 14,500
APR 28 1960

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,572
APR 14 1960

G. W. WOODWORTH ON TANGLEWOOD STAFF

Harvard Music Professor To Direct Expanded Study Group

G. Wallace Woodworth, James Edward Ditson Professor of Music at Harvard University, has accepted the invitation of Charles Munch to head the newly revised and expanded Department of Listening and Analysis at the Berkshire Music Center. The school's 1960 session will be held from July 3 to August 14 at Tanglewood in Lenox, concurrently with the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival.

Dr. Munch, the center's director, and Aaron Copland, faculty chairman, have long felt students at the Music Center should be given more opportunity to learn directly from the many rehearsals and concerts prepared and performed at the Berkshire Festival each summer. Prof. Woodworth, with the assistance of Miss Florence Dunn, has revised the curriculum of the department, formerly known as the Tanglewood Study Group, to make this possible.

A teacher at Harvard since 1926 and conductor emeritus of the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, Prof. Woodworth has also been active on radio and television. In 1954 the Institute for Education by Radio and Television gave him their national award for the best radio program in the area of the humanities, calling his work "exceptional in spontaneity, authenticity and comprehensiveness." Doctor Woodworth's program "Two Centuries of Symphony," a National Educational Television production, is now being shown throughout the United States.

[illegible] Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,590

MAR 27 1960

Music

Berkshire Center Plans Announced

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

With few changes the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood will operate this year from July 3 to Aug. 14, concurrently with the Boston Symphony's Berkshire Music Festival.

The Center's opera department will be reactivated this year under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, founder and head of the New England Opera Theater. He returns to Tanglewood after a year's leave of absence.

Sponsored by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, the guest composer in the composition department for the 1960 session will be Luciano Berio. Aaron Copland, department head, will also be assisted by the young American composer, Lukas Foss, and members of the Lenox Quartet.

Founded in 1940 by the Boston Symphony in the realization of a long-held wish of Koussevitzky, then the orchestra's music director, the Berkshire Center annually attracts more than 300 students from the United States and many foreign countries.

In this school for the training of performers through performance, the young artist is guided by a faculty of leading musicians and learns to practice with professional intensity.

New Department

The newly organized department of listening and analysis, on the other hand, provides an opportunity for the teacher, student, amateur, or the listener to participate in making music to gain a greater understanding of the music performed at Tanglewood by the Center and by the orchestra.

Information on rates, tuition grants, awards, and scholarships of the Berkshire Music Center may be obtained from Miss R. Rossler, registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Far Eastern Tour

April 25 the Boston Symphony will leave Boston by chartered planes to make an eight-week tour of Japan and other Far-Eastern countries.

The orchestra will go first to Korea, and then to Japan, where it will give 22 concerts in 16 cities. Next it will go to the Philippines and Australia, and will wind up the tour with two concerts in New Zealand.

Return to Boston is scheduled for June 19, to prepare for the six-week Berkshire Music Festival which will begin Friday, July 8.

Tour conductors will be Charles Munch, Richard Burgin (concertmaster of the orchestra), and Aaron Copland.

Programs embrace 51 compositions by 19 composers. Included in the tentative list are eight works by seven American composers — Samuel Barber, "Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance"; Easley Blackwood, "Symphony No. 1"; Copland, from "The Tender Lands"; Norman Dello Joio, "Variations, Chaconne and Finale"; Leon Kirchner, "Toccata"; Walter Piston, "Symphony No. 6"; and William Schuman, "New England Triptych."

[illegible]

Über 300 Studenten für Tanglewood [illegible]

Charles [illegible] Dirigent des Boston [illegible] Orchesters [illegible] Direktor [illegible] Berkshire Music Center [illegible] bekannt, daß für das diesjährige Semester der Sommerschule der Boston Symphony, die während der Tanglewood-Festspiele vom 3. Juli bis 14. August [illegible] sind, mehr als 300 Studenten aus den Vereinigten Staaten [illegible] Teilen der Welt an[illegible]. Das Berkshire [illegible] Center, das von Serge [illegible] [illegible]

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 183,699

MAR 20 1960

LANSING, MICH.
STATE JOURNAL
D. 83,900 S. 83,202
MAR 20 1960

Sun (e)
WESTERLY, R. I.
Circ. 7,657

MAR 15 1960

PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER
D. 618,557 S. 1,033,048
MAR 27 1960

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 12,775

MAR 12 1960

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.
ENQUIRER AND NEWS
D 37,891 S 37,487
APR 1 0 1960

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 50,885

MAR 27 1960

Berkshire Center To Open July 3

Special to The Standard-Times

BOSTON, March [illegible] — The 1960 session of the Berkshire Music Center will be held July 3 to Aug. 14 at Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home near Lenox, Charles Munch, director, announced yesterday.

The center will be in session concurrently with the orchestra's Berkshire Festival consisting of more than 24 concerts by the Boston Symphony under the direction of Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux with guest artists.

Composer Aaron Copland is chairman of the center's faculty and Ralph Berkowitz is dean. The center annually attracts more than 300 students from the United States and abroad.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121
MAR 20 1960

Bostonians' Travels

According to a recently announced [illegible] itinerary, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will [illegible] six concerts in five countries during its Far Eastern spring tour, with Charles Munch, Richard Burgin, and Aaron Copland conducting. Leaving Boston by air April 25, the orchestra will arrive in Korea two days later for a concert in Seoul and another probably in Pusan. Flying to Tokyo May 1, it will give six concerts there, two in Osaka and fourteen in other Japanese cities.

Three concerts will be given in Manila early in June before the Bostonians reach Australia for seven concerts in Sydney, Brisbane, Melbourne and Adelaide. They will also play at Auckland and Wellington in New Zealand before the orchestra returns to Boston June 19 and opens its six week Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on Friday, July 8, with Mr. Munch and Pierre Monteux conducting.

Berkshire Center

Mr. Munch will again be director of the Berkshire Music Center for its 1960 session at Tanglewood, July 3 to Aug. 14, with Mr. Copland as chairman of the faculty and Ralph Berkowitz as dean. The opera department, which was suspended last summer, will resume its activities under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, who returns after a year's leave of absence. Full information about the Center may be obtained from its [illegible], Miss R. Rossler, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

Members of the Boston Symphony will hold auditions here for instrumentalists who wish to study orchestra and chamber music playing at the Center. Timpanists and percussionists will be heard at 7 p. m. Wednesday at Carnegie Hall, and string and wind players will have their hearings from 1 to 4 Friday in Room 508 of the Juilliard School. Harpists should arrange for audition appointments through Miss Rossler at Symphony Hall.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
MONTHLY
APR 1960

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.
APR 1960

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 38,700
APR 1960

COLLEGE NEWS

■ The 1960 sessions of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., will be held July 3 to Aug. 14. Charles Munch will again be the director, Aaron Copland chairman of the faculty and Ralph Berkowitz, dean. The opera department, which did not function last summer, will resume activities under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. Information concerning the courses to be given may be obtained by writing to Miss R. Rossler, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

[illegible]TON, Vt.
Independent
Circ. 4,953
APR 8 1960

[illegible]
APR 5 1960

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. [illegible]27

[illegible] 17 1960

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 50,885

APR 3 1960

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 12[illegible]

APR 1 19[illegible]

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.
MAY 1960

[illegible] &
[illegible] Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 14,500
APR 28 1960

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,572
APR 14 1960

G. W. WOODWORTH ON TANGLEWOOD STAFF

Harvard Music Professor To Direct Expanded Study Group

G. Wallace Woodworth, James Edward Ditson Professor of Music at Harvard University, has accepted the invitation of Charles Munch to head the newly revised and expanded Department of Listening and Analysis at the Berkshire Music Center. The school's 1960 session will be held from July 3 to August 14 at Tanglewood in Lenox, concurrently with the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival.

Dr. Munch, the center's director, and Aaron Copland, faculty chairman, have long felt students at the Music Center should be given more opportunity to learn directly from the many rehearsals and concerts prepared and performed at the Berkshire Festival each summer. Prof. Woodworth, with the assistance of Miss Florence Dunn, has revised the curriculum of the department, formerly known as the Tanglewood Study Group, to make this possible.

A teacher at Harvard since 1926 and conductor emeritus of the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society, [illegible] Woodworth has also been active on radio and television. In 1954 the Institute for Education by Radio and Television gave him their national award for the best radio program in the area of the humanities, calling his work "exceptional in spontaneity, authenticity and comprehensiveness." Doctor Woodworth's program "Two Centuries of Symphony," a National [illegible] Television production, is [illegible] shown throughout the [illegible]

6

INSTRUMENTALIST
EVANSTON, ILL.
MONTHLY 14,741
APR 1960

Fourth Annual Directory

Summer Music Schools, Camps, and Clinics

Name and address W—winter address S—summer address	Name of Director	No. of weeks	Opening and closing dates	Age Limits Min.-Max.	Tuition	This includes Private Lessons	This includes Room and Board	Band	Orchestra	Chorus	Small Ensembles	Private Lessons	Baton Twirling	Music Theory	Other
Alabama, University of, Music Camp, Box 2886, University, Ala.	Yale H. Ellis	2	May 30-June 11	11-18	$40.00	no	yes	X	X	X	X	X	—	—	voice, piano, organ, dance band
All-State Music Camp, Director's Clinic, Kansas St. University, Manhattan, Kan.	Morris D. Hayes	8 days	June 12-19	9th-12th grades (Also high school directors)	$30	no	yes	X	X	X	X	—	X	X	stage band, string orch., voice class
Amherst Summer Music Center, Box 442, Univ. of Mass., Amherst, Mass.	J. C. Schuler	6	June 26-Aug. 7	14-20	$295	yes	yes	X	X	X	X	X	—	X	piano, organ, music lit., history, harmony, harp
Arizona, Univ. of, High School of Fine Arts, Tucson, Ariz.	George W. Lotzenhiser	2	June 12-25	12-18	$65.50	no	yes	X	X	X	X	X	X	X	art, drama, speech, radio-TV, dance, photography, journalism, grad. seminar
Arizona State College, Flagstaff, Summer Music Camp, Flagstaff, Ariz.	Charles Warren	2	July 31-Aug. 13	12-20	$17.80	no	no	X	X	X	X	X	—	X	piano, organ, dance band, exploring music
Arizona State Univ., All-State High School Music Camp, Tempe, Ariz.	Miles A. Dresskell	3	June 13-July 2	8th grade-high school	$75	yes	yes	X	X	X	X	X	X	X	opera workshop, conducting, appreciation, art, dance, dance band
Arrowbear Music Camp, W-4220 Heather Rd., Long Beach 8, Cal. S-Arrowbear Lake, Cal.	Fred Ohlendorf	8	June 26-Aug. 21	Jun. H. S. age-College	$35/week	yes	yes	X	X	X	X	X	—	X	dance band, conducting
Aspen Music School W-161 W. 86th St. N.Y. 2, N.Y. S-Aspen, Colo.	Norman Singer	9, 7, 5, or 4	June 27 Aug. 27	For spec. string prog. 14-17; otherwise, 16 min.	varies	yes	yes	—	X	X	X	X	—	X	conducting, composition, opera voice, piano, Aspen Festival Concerts
Baldwin-Wallace College, High School Clinic, Berea, Ohio	Cecil W. Munk	2	June 20-July 3	9th-12th grades	$65	no	yes	X	X	X	X	X	—	X
Ball State Mid-America Camp, Muncie, Ind.	Earl Dunn	1	July 17-24	12-19	$36	no	yes	X	X	X	X	X	—	—	dance band, mus. apprec., band and orch. directors' clinic
Baylor University Summer Music Camp for High School Students, Waco, Texas	Nadine Borden Derby	8 days	June 4-12	8th-12th grades	By Scholarship	yes	no	—	X	X	X	X	—	X	mus. ed., mus. apprec.
Bemidji State College, Bemidji, Minn.	Edgar B. Gangware	2	July 31-Aug. 12	5th grade	$23.50 (5 days) $52 (12 days)	no	yes	X	X	X	X	X	X	X	dance band, oboe reed making, conducting
Berklee School of Music, 284 Newbury St., Boston 15, Mass.	Lawrence Berk	7	July 11-Aug. 26	15—	$250	yes	no	X	X	—	X	X	—	X	ear training, arranging, composition, dance band, jazz workshop
Berkshire Music Center, W-Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. S-Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.	Charles Munch	6	June 27-Aug. 7	18 min.		no	no	—	X	X	X	—	—	X	conducting, opera, composition

---

Eagle (e)
CLAREMONT, N. H.
Independent
Circ. 8,314
APR 9 1960

DAYTON, OHIO
NEWS
D. 147,297 S. 179,061
APR 10 1960

TWIN STATE TELESCOPE

Are You Listening

According to a release from the winter quarters of the Berkshire Music Festival, G. Wallace Woodworth, a Harvard music professor, has accepted the invitation of Charles Munch to head a newly revised and expanded Department of Listening and Analysis at the Berkshire Music Center.

This may sound silly to some people, but we'll wager if they think it over a minute they'll see merit in the course.

How many people do you know who turn on the record player or the radio before they even get their gloves off and keep the music going till they fall asleep?

Do these people listen to music? Should you listen to music or should you use it for wallpaper, merely to cover silence.

What about music while studying? More students seem to want it than want silence.

Maybe it doesn't bother them, but what does it do to the composers?

The following portion of Professor Woodworth's "Statement of Listening" may prove to be of interest:

"I suppose more people can be said to listen to music today than ever before in the history of the world. But I am not at all sure that this indiscriminate background listening may not be gradually and insidiously debasing the coin. The New York Times the other day was talking about the 'curtain of sound' which is draped over every aspect of our life. We have music while we [illegible], music while we do our shopping, music while we drive our car, music while we read the paper, music while we work, music while we sit by the fire, music while we talk with other people.

"There are two things wrong: first, a great deal of music is utterly inferior and worthless, and second, the continued effect of mere passive background listening may well be permanently damaging.

"The understanding of music consists of responding to music in its own terms. This calls for active participation on the part of the listener. Alfred North Whitehead has said, 'Culture is activity of thought, receptiveness to beauty, and humane feeling.' Receptiveness to beauty calls for infinitely more than passive background listening. It challenges the utmost concentration and the utmost energy of penetration on the part of the listener. To 'respond to music in its own terms' involves repeated practice by performers and repeated hearing by the listener. . . ."

HOWARD T. SWAIN

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,085
APR 26 1960

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,572
APR 28 1960

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 4,953
APR 29 1960

Sunday Standard Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 50,885
APR 24 1960

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267
APR 30 1960

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958
APR 26 1960

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 416,[illegible]
MAY 1 1960

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 179,169
MAY 9 1960

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,590
MAY 22 1960

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 38,700
MAY 1960

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,835
MAY 1 1960

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 28,770
APR 23 1960

Burgin, Kroll Seminar Leaders For String Players

TANGLEWOOD — Charles Munch, director of the Berkshire Music Center, announces an addition to the center's program of study for string instrumentalists. A series of seminars has been established to explore problems of solo and ensemble playing encountered particularly by players of stringed instruments. The seminars will be led by Richard Burgin, associate conductor and concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and William Kroll, first violin of the Kroll Quartet. Mr. Burgin and Mr. Kroll are associate heads of the chamber music division of the center.

The topics of the seminars will include: The Techniques of the Bach Solo Sonatas and Linear Counterpoint, The Solo Player in the Orchestra, The Sonatas of Beethoven, Performance Problems in Contemporary Music. Other topics will be announced.

String players are encouraged to apply for admission to the center, which will be in session at Tanglewood July 3 [illegible] 14. Scholarships are available through the Tanglewood Revolving Scholarship Fund. Information may be secured by addressing: The Registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

6

INSTRUMENTALIST
EVANSTON, ILL.
MONTHLY 14,741

APR 1960

Fourth Annual Directory

Summer Music Scho[illegible] Camps, and Clinic[illegible]

Name and address W—winter address S—summer address	Name of Director	No. of weeks	Opening and closing dates	Age Limits Min.-Max.	Tuition	This includes Private Lessons	This includes Room and Board	Band	Orchestra	Chorus	Small Ensembles	Private Lessons	Baton Twirling	Music Theory	Other
Alabama, University of, Music Camp, Box 2886, University, Ala.	Yale H. Ellis	2	May 30-June 11	11-18	$40.00	no	yes	X	X	X	X	X	—	—	voice, piano, organ, dance band
All-State Music Camp, Director's Clinic, Kansas St. University, Manhattan, Kan.	Morris D. Hayes	8 days	June 12-19	9th-12th grades (Also high school directors)	$30	no	yes	X	X	X	X	—	X	X	stage band, string orchestra, [illegible]
Amherst Summer Music Center, Box 442, Univ. of Mass., Amherst, Mass.	J. C. Schuler	6	June 26-Aug. 7	14-20	$295	yes	yes	X	X	X	X	X	—	X	piano, [illegible] lit., history, harmony, harp
Arizona, Univ. of, High School of Fine Arts, Tucson, Ariz.	George W. Lotzenhiser	2	June 12-25	[illegible]	$65.50	no	yes	X	X	X	X	X	X	X	art, drama, speech, radio-TV, dance, photography, journalism, grad. seminar
Arizona State College, Flagstaff, Summer Music Camp, Flagstaff, Ariz.	Charles Warren	2	July 31-Aug. 13	12-20	$17.80	no	no	X	X	X	X	X	—	X	piano, organ, dance band, exploring music
Arizona State Univ., All-State High School Music Camp, Tempe, Ariz.	Miles A. Dresskell	3	June 13-July 2	8th grade-high school	$75	yes	yes	X	X	X	X	X	X	X	opera workshop, conducting, appreciation, art, dance, dance band
Arrowbear Music Camp, W-4220 Heather Rd., Long Beach 8, Cal. S-Arrowbear Lake, Cal.	Fred Ohlendorf	8	June 26-Aug. 21	Jun. H. S. age-College	$35/week	yes	yes	X	X	X	X	X	—	X	dance band, conducting
Aspen Music School, W-161 W. 86th St. N.Y. 2, N.Y. S-Aspen, Colo.	Norman Singer	9, 7, 5, or 4	June 27 Aug. 27	For spec. string prog. 14-17; otherwise, 16 min.	varies	yes	yes	—	X	X	X	X	—	X	conducting, composition, opera, voice, piano, Aspen Festival Concerts
Baldwin-Wallace College, High School Clinic, Berea, Ohio	Cecil W. Munk	2	June 20-July 3	9th-12th grades	$65	no	yes	X	X	X	X	X	—	X
Ball State Mid-America Camp, Muncie, Ind.	Earl Dunn	1	July 17-24	12-19	$36	no	yes	X	X	X	X	X	—	—	dance band, mus. apprec., band and orch. directors' clinic
Baylor University Summer Music Camp for High School Students, Waco, Texas	Nadine Borden Derby	8 days	June 4-12	8th-12th grades	By Scholarship	yes	no	—	X	X	X	X	—	X	mus. ed., mus. apprec.
Bemidji State College, Bemidji, Minn.	Edgar B. Gangware	2	July 31-Aug. 12	5th grade	$23.50 (5 days) $52 (12 days)	no	yes	X	X	X	X	X	X	X	dance band, oboe reed making, conducting
Berklee School of Music, 284 Newbury St., Boston 15, Mass.	Lawrence Berk	7	July 11-Aug. 26	15—	$250	yes	no	X	X	—	X	X	—	X	ear training, arranging, composition, dance band, jazz workshop
Berkshire Music Center, W-Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass. S-Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.	Charles Munch	6	June 27-Aug. [illegible]	18 min.		no	no	—	X	X	X	—	—	X	conducting, opera, composition

---

[illegible]

APR 28 1960

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,572

APR 28 1960

[illegible]
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 4,9[illegible]

APR 2[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] 24 1960

[illegible]
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. [illegible]

[illegible] 1960

[illegible] (e)
[illegible]
Circ. [illegible],958

APR 26 1960

[illegible]
[illegible]STON, Mass.
Circ. 41[illegible]

[illegible] 1 1960

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 1[illegible],169

MAY 9 1960

Sunday Telegram
WORC[illegible]
Circ. [illegible]

[illegible]MAY 2[illegible]

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 38,700

MAY 1960

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 814,109 S. 1,25[illegible]

MAY 1 1960

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 28,779

APR 23 [illegible]

Burgin, Kroll Seminar Leaders For String Players

TANGLEWOOD — Charles Munch, director of the Berkshire Music Center, announces an addition to the center's program of study for string instruments. A series of seminars has been [illegible] to explore [illegible] of [illegible] ensemble playing [illegible] particularly by players of stringed instruments. The seminars will be led by Richard Burgin, associate conductor and concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and William Kroll, first violin of the Kroll Quartet. Mr. Burgin and Mr. Kroll are associate [illegible] the chamber music [illegible] center. [illegible]

Eagle (e)
CLAREMONT, N. H.
Independent
Circ. 8,514

APR 9 1960

DAYTON, OHIO
NEWS
D. 147,297 S. 179,081

APR 10 1960

TWIN STATE TELE[illegible]

Ar[illegible] You Li[illegible]

According to a release from the winter quarters of the Berkshire Music Festival, G. Wallace [illegible] music pro[illegible] the invitation [illegible] to head a [illegible] expanded De[illegible] [illegible] ing and Analy[illegible] [illegible]shire Music Cen[illegible]

[illegible] silly to some [illegible] wager if they [illegible] minute they'll see [illegible]

[illegible] people do you know [illegible] record player or [illegible] even get [illegible] keep the music [illegible] fall asleep?

Do [illegible] people listen to music? Should you listen to [illegible] or should you use it for wallpaper, merely to [illegible]

What [illegible]

Maybe it doesn't bother them, but what does it do to the composers?

The following portion of Professor Woodworth's "Statement of Listening" may prove to be of interest:

"I suppose more people can be said to listen to music today than ever before in the history of the world. But I am not at all sure that this indiscriminate background listening may not be gradually and insidiously debasing the coin. The New York Times the other day was talking about the 'curtain of sound' which is draped [illegible] aspect of our life. We have [illegible] music [illegible] music while [illegible] music while we [illegible]

"There are two things wrong: first, a great deal of music is utterly inferior and [illegible]less, and second, the c[illegible] effect of mere passive [illegible] sound listening may well [illegible] permanently damaging.

"The understanding of music consists of resp[illegible] to music in its own terms. T[illegible] for active participation [illegible] the part of the listener. Alfred North Whitehead has said, 'Culture is activity of thought, [illegible] beauty, and human[illegible] receptiveness to beauty calls for [illegible] more [illegible] background listening [illegible]

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 80,581

MAR 14 1960

Back Bay Ledger &
Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 14,500

MAR 31 1960

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,920

APR 15 1960

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 28,770

MAR 14 1960

Herald
20 March 1960

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,085

MAR 14 1960

KINGSTON, N.Y.
FREEMAN
D. 15,025

MAR 16 1960

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,572

MAR 17 1960

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 194,909

MAR 14 1960

Music Center Opens July 3; Opera Dept. Reactivated

TANGLEWOOD — Charles Munch, director of the Berkshire Music Center, announces the school's 1960 session will be July 3 to Aug. 14 at Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer home in Lenox. The Music Center will be in session concurrently with the orchestra's Berkshire Festival which consists of more than 24 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux with distinguished guest artists.

Listening Department Added

Founded in 1940 by the orchestra in the realization of a long held wish of Serge Koussevitzky, then the orchestra's music director, the Berkshire Music Center annually attracts more than 300 students from the United States and many foreign countries. In this school for the training of performers through performance, the young artist guided by a faculty of leading musicians learns to practice his profession with professional intensity. The newly reorganized department of listening and analysis, on the other hand, provides an opportunity for the teacher, student, amateur or the listener to participate in making music and to gain a greater understanding of the music performed at Tanglewood by the Center and by the orchestra.

Under the direction of Charles Munch, Aaron Copland is chairman of the faculty and Ralph Berkowitz is dean.

Goldovsky Returning

Pierre Monteux, Gregor Piatigorsky and Leonard Bernstein are advisers to the department of instrumental music. The orchestral conducting division of this department is headed by the Brazilian conductor Eleazar de Carvalho. The orchestra playing and chamber music sections of this department are headed by Richard Burgin, the orchestra's associate conductor and concertmaster, and William Kroll, leader of the Kroll String Quartet. Twenty-three members of the orchestra and violinist Ruth Posselt instruct in this department.

The Center's opera department will be reactivated this year under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, founder and head of the New England Opera Theater, who returns to Tanglewood after a year's leave of absence. The department of choral music will be headed by Hugh Ross, conductor of the Schola Cantorum of New York, and his faculty will include Mrs. Lorna Cooke de Varon, head of the choral department of the New England Conservatory of Music and Alfred Nash Patterson, conductor of the Chorus Pro Musica of Boston.

Sponsored by the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, the guest composer in the composition department for the 1960 session will be Luciano Berio. Aaron Copland, department head, will also be assisted by young American composer Lukas Foss, and members of the Lenox Quartet.

Prof. G. Wallace Woodworth of Harvard University, assisted by Miss Florence Dunn, will head the center's revised and expanded department of listening and analysis.

Information on rates, tuition grants, awards and scholarships of the Berkshire Music Center may be obtained from Miss R. E. Bossler, registrar, Berkshire Music Center, Symphony Hall, Boston.

G. Wallace Woodworth
Heads New Department

↑Also in Christian Science Monitor↑
17 March 1960

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 149,070

APR 13 1960

Course Just for Listeners Tanglewood Aim of 'Woody'

By CYRUS DURGIN

The formal way of putting it is that G. Wallace Woodworth will return to Tanglewood next Summer, after [illegible] years, to head the Department of Listening and Analysis at the Berkshire Music Center.

But I'll bet a cookie that when Harvard's "Woody" gets busy with his lectures, they'll be anything but formal or aloof. As everybody knows, who has seen and heard "Woody" in action on radio, TV or in the classroom, he has the especial gift of imparting knowledge with infectious enthusiasm.

WOODWORTH

"To me, the person who just listens to music is not a second-class citizen," declared "Woody" yesterday. "After all he's the third party of the musical transaction—the composer, the performer and the listener. We're going along on that basis with this Summer's program for the amateurs who attend the Berkshire Music Center."

Invited by Munch

The James Edward Ditson Professor of Music at Harvard University, who conducted the Harvard Glee Club and Radcliffe Choral Society for a quarter-century, has been invited to the post by the Boston Symphony's music director, Dr. Charles Munch.

What formerly was known as the Tanglewood Study Group used to combine some lectures with amateur musical performance. That will be all changed. Between them "Woody" and Florence Dunn have revised the material and the aim of the department.

"Just think of the wonderful opportunities the average listener who enrolls will have to hear music being rehearsed several times and then publicly performed. What I shall do is tell about that music and its composers, and give illustrations with recordings. Then the listeners will hie themselves off to rehearsals of orchestral music chamber pieces, and what-not."

Small Chorus, Too

"Miss Dunn probably will work up a small chorus from among this department's students. She's a very good conductor. But there won't be any amateur orchestra. That apparently was not too successful. You never knew whether you'd have a balanced orchestra, and generally there was not one. It might be eight clarinets, one viola and three trombones, or something along that line.

"Age limits? Only on the young end—18 is the minimum age, for a student at Tanglewood. No limit on the other end, thought. There will be a regular amount of time spent on lectures—two hours every Monday through Thursday. In between they will just listen to rehearsals and performances."

The new department of the Berkshire Music Center will carry out the purpose of its director, Dr. Munch, and faculty chairman Aaron Copland. They, too, have felt for a long while that there should be more scope for Center students to learn directly by listening.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 28,770

APR 21 1960

Cioffi To Be Soloist

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

I read with keen interest [Eagle, April 16] that Gino Cioffi is to be soloist in a Tanglewood performance of Mozart's clarinet concerto on July 15.

Four years ago Benny Goodman was the soloist in this same clarinet concerto. The performance was an inferior one. The Boston Symphony engaged Goodman as a box office attraction, but this was an injustice to their principal clarinetist, who is one of the outstanding clarinet virtuosi of our time.

Everyone is aware of the myth Benny Goodman has created in the jazz field. Justifiably, he is called "the king of swing." I maintain strongly that you cannot reconcile the two conceptions of music—jazz and classical. If it weren't for his name, Benny Goodman would never have been given the opportunity to be soloist with the Boston Symphony. He doesn't measure up to their standards.

Justice will finally prevail when Gino Cioffi, one of the most exciting clarinetists in the world, performs the Mozart clarinet concerto on July 15.

JOSEPH PIZZONIA

8 Lyric St.,
Pittsfield.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037

APR [illegible] 1960

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Circ. 41,142

APR 9 1960

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 179,169

APR 11 1960

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. [illegible]886

APR 10 1960

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 293,904

APR 10 1960

Berkshire Auditions Scheduled Wednesday

Auditions will be held at Symphony Hall on Wednesday for instrumentalists applying for summer study at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. The Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school will be in session from July 3 to August 14 concurrently with the Orchestra's Berkshire Festival. Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony is also director of the Center.

Auditions for strings, woodwinds, brass, timpani and percussion, piano and harp will be held from 1:30 to 4 p.m.

Applicants accepted in the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra are eligible for tuition from grants the Tanglewood Revolving Schol-Scholarship Fund. There are also prize awards in the names of such artists as Jascha Heifetz, Gregor Piatigorsky and the late Albert Spalding.

Applicants forms will be available at the auditions.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 114,240

APR 24 1960

LAS VEGAS, NEV.
REVIEW-JOURNAL
D. 24,538 S. 27,267

APR 26 1960

The Music World

By DELOS SMITH
United Press International

Prof. G. Wallace Woodworth would rob music listeners of their do-nothing passivity if he could, and he's going to have an intense try at it with a bunch of volunteers this summer.

He is professor of music at Harvard and is going to head up a new department of "listening and analysis" at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's famous Berkshire Music Center and Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Woodworth's idea is that music is being debased by listeners who just sit and listen while musicians pour out their hearts on their art. As often as not, they chatter or read, using music as "background."

He wants listening to be "active;" he believes listeners should be "rehearsed" for concerts as carefully as musicians are. From July 3 to August 14 he'll show anyone who wants to enroll what real listening is.

"The understanding of music consists of responding to music in its own terms," he said. "This calls for active participation on the part of the listener. Receptiveness to beauty calls for infinitely more than passive background listening. It challenges the utmost concentration and the utmost energy of penetration on the part of the listener."

His classes will last for two hours and any enrollee who expects "commentary with a few anecdotes" is in for a shock.

These classes, he said, "will involve the repeated rehearsing of music for listeners (from records) who prepare for the concerts just as performers do, by going back over and over the hard places, the interesting places, and the beautiful places in the music, seeking to penetrate as deeply and with as vivid imagination as possible into the music intself.'

The concerts these listeners will be preparing for will be those of the Boston Symphony in its six-week summer festival in the beautiful Berkshire countryside. There will be 18 concerts in the 6,000 seat "Music Shed" on successive weekends (Friday evenings, Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons) beginning July 8.

The first week-end will be devoted entirely to Bach and the second, to Mozart. Among the "big" works which are being prepared are Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust," Bethoven's "Choral" Symphony, and Faure's "Requiem." Charles Munch, the orchestra's music director, will conduct 14 of the concerts and Pierre Monteux, who is 85 and the orchestra's "conductor emeritus," will conduct four.

Tanglewood probably is the busiest summer music beehive in the world. It is a 210-acre estate in the hills of western Massachusetts. In addition to week-end concerts, there are Wednesday evening recitals. At one of these, Claudio Arrau, the renowned pianist, will play Chopin. Others will feature the Budapest and Kroll string quartets and the Beaux Arts Trio.

And there is also a music school which attracts several hundred students from all over the country and from abroad. Members of the Boston Symphony teach the professional aspects of all the instruments of the orchestra.

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,290
APR 14 1960

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 12,775
APR 9 1960

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 369,809
APR 19 1960

Sunday Standard Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 50,885
APR 24 1960

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Circ. 42,164
MAY 28 1960

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 416,486
APR 24 1960

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,920
APR 29 1960

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 28,770
APR 16 1960

CHICAGO, ILL.
TRIBUNE
D. 883,213 S. 1,198,862
APR 17 1960

KINGSTON, N.Y.
FREEMAN
D. 15,925
APR 9 1960

ASBURY PARK, N.J.
PRESS
D. [illegible] S. 32,800
APR 20 1960

ALBANY, N.Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
D. 66,739
APR 15 1960

ALBANY, N.Y.
TIMES-UNION
D. 67,629 S. 118,093
MAY 15 1960

TULSA, OKLA.
WORLD
D. 95,474 S. 150,615
MAY 29 1960

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,572
APR 21 1960

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Circ. 18,203
APR 16 1960

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 183,699
MAY 8 - 1960

Gazette
EAST HARTFORD
Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 3,951
MAY 19 1960

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,463
APR 21 1960

News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 4,200
MAY [illegible] 1960

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,065
APR 16 1960

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Circ. 41,242
APR [illegible] 1960

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 98,416
APR 15 1960

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 39,778
APR 18 1960

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267
MAY 18 1960

Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Circ. 67,391
APR 17 1960

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 289,111
JUN 19 1960

ALBANY, N.Y.
TIMES-UNION
D. 67,628 S. 118,093
JUN 19 1960

Festival Guest Artists Named For 1960 Tanglewood Season

BOSTON — Programs and guest artists for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1960 Berkshire Festival were announced today by Charles Munch. The six-week Festival will open Wednesday, July 6, and close Sunday, Aug. 14. All Festival events will be held at Tanglewood, the orchestra's 210-acre estate near Lenox in the hills of Western Massachusetts.

Eighteen concerts will be given by the orchestra in the 6,000-seat Music Shed on Friday evenings, Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons on the six weekends beginning July 8. Doctor Munch will conduct 14 of these concerts and Pierre Monteux, the orchestra's [illegible]-year-old "conductor emeritus," four, one on each of the last four weekends.

Bach and Mozart

The first weekend of concerts July 8, 9, 10 will be devoted to the music of Bach and the second weekend to Mozart July 15, 16, 17.

Among the special works to be performed are the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust" Aug. 14, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony July 31 and Faure's "Requiem" July 22.

Guest artists invited to perform at the Festival include the Chilean pianist Claudio Arrau, who will be heard in a performance of Beethoven's Fifth Piano Concerto July 23 as well as in a Chopin centenary recital July 20. Soprano Eleanor Steber will be guest in a performance of Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" Aug. 14 and in the Beethoven Ninth Symphony July 31.

Violinist Ruggiero Ricci will be guest in a performance of the Sibelius violin concerto Aug. 5. The 18-year-old Bolivian violinist, Jaime Laredo, who won the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music Competition in June of 1959, will appear for the first time with the orchestra on July 24 in a performance of the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto. Pianists Jorge Bolet, Leon Fleisher, Gary Graffman, Eugene Istomin and Byron Janis will be heard. Among the vocalists invited are Saramae Endich, Donald Gramm, Freda Gray-Masse, David Laurent, John McCollum and Martial Singher.

In addition to Mr. Arrau's recital, five other Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music will be given by the Budapest and Kroll Quartets, the Beaux Arts Trio of New York, and pianist Claude Frank with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops at Tanglewood [illegible] Aug. 11. On Aug. 4 a Gala Evening to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, has been planned.

Detailed Programs

The orchestral programs (subject to change), date by date, with conductors:

July 8 Munch BACH Suite No. 1; Violin Concerto in E (Kroll); Piano Concerto in F minor (Lipkin); Triple Concerto in A minor (Pappoutsakis, Kroll, Lipkin).
July 9 Munch BACH Excerpts: Musical Offering and Art of the Fugue; Piano Concerto in D minor (Lipkin); Suite No. 4.
July 10 Munch BACH Suite No. [illegible]; Brandenburg Concerti Nos. [illegible]; Cantata "Christ lag in Todesbanden."
July 15 Munch MOZART Bassoon Concerto (Walt); Clarinet Concerto (Cioffi); Sinfonia Concertante (Gomberg, [illegible], Walt, Stagliano).
July 16 Munch MOZART Eine kleine Nachtmusik; Piano Concerto K. 491 ([illegible]); Litany K. 243.
July 17 Munch MOZART Symphony No. [illegible]; Violin Concerto K. 218 (Silverstein); Symphony No. 39.
July 22 Munch BEETHOVEN Eroica Symphony; FAURE Requiem (Endich, Gramm).
July 23 Monteux CHERUBINI Anacreon Overture; BEETHOVEN Piano Concerto No. 5 (Arrau); RESPIGHI Fountains of Rome; STRAUSS Till Eulenspiegel.
July 24 Munch DELLO JOIO Variations, Chaconne and Finale; MENDELSSOHN Violin Concerto (Laredo); BEETHOVEN Symphony No. 5.
July 29 Munch STRAVINSKY Jeu de Cartes; KHRENNIKOV Symphony No. [illegible]; RACHMANINOFF Piano Concerto No. 3 (Janis).
July 30 Munch BERLIOZ Symphonie fantastique; PISTON Symphony No. 6; RAVEL Daphnis and Chloe Suite.
July 31 Monteux MOZART Haffner Symphony; BEETHOVEN Ninth Symphony (Steber, Gray-Masse, McCollum, Laurent).
Aug. 5 Munch WAGNER Die Meistersinger Excerpts; SIBELIUS Violin Concerto (Ricci); MENDELSSOHN Scotch Symphony.
Aug. 6 Munch BEETHOVEN Prometheus Overture; DUTILLEUX Symphony No. 2; BRAHMS Piano Concerto No. 2 (Istomin).
Aug. 7 Monteux WILLIAMS Fantasia on a Theme by Tallis; BEETHOVEN Piano Concerto No. 3 (Fleisher); BRAHMS Symphony No. 4.
Aug. 12 Monteux BEETHOVEN Symphony No. 2; LISZT Piano Concerto in E flat (Bolet); STRAVINSKY Firebird Suite.
Aug. 13 Munch HANDEL Water Music Suite; CHOPIN Piano Concerto [illegible] (Graffman); COPLAND Symphony [illegible] (Composer conducting).
Aug. 14 Munch BERLIOZ Damnation of Faust (Steber, McCollum, Singher).

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
KINGS COURIER
W. 15,719
JUN 25 1960

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 148,332
MAY 29 1960

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,0[illegible]
MAY 21 1960

Back Bay Ledger &
Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 14,500
MAY 19 1960

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,572
MAY 19 1960

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,290
MAY 26 1960

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
BROOKLYN DAILY
D. 40,280
JUN 28 1960

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958
MAY 23 1960

Times (e)
GLOUCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 9,273
MAY 24 1960

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267
MAY 28 1960

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026
MAY 23 1960

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664
MAY 22 1960

List Artists Slated To Appear At Tanglewood

Fourteen compositions — from the classic Bach, Mozart and Cherubini to the contemporary Dutilleux, Copland and Khrennikov, — will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood this summer by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at its Berkshire Festival between July 6 and August 14.

The Orchestra will perform, for the first time in its 80 years, Mozart's "Litany," K. 243, at the Festival on July 16 in a performance conducted by Hugh [illegible]. A second choral work to be heard for the first time at Tanglewood will be Bach's Cantata No. 4, "Christ lag in Todesbanden," which Charles Munch will include in his program of July 10. Also new to Tanglewood will be the "Requiem" by Gabriel Faure which has been scheduled for the annual Koussevitzky Memorial concert on July 22. Pierre Monteux, who will conduct one concert in each of the four final Festival weekends, will include in his programs two works not previously performed at Tanglewood, — the "Anacreon" Overture by Cherubini and Respighi's "Fountains of Rome."

Charles Munch's guests at the Festival range from Mr. Monteux, the revered octogenarian, to 18-year-old violinist Jaime Laredo who won the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music Competition in 1959. Seven of the 25 soloists will be heard for the first time at Tanglewood. In addition to Mr. Laredo, new to Tanglewood [illegible] the pianists Gary [illegible] and Claude Frank; [illegible] Gray-Masse and bass David [illegible] violinist Ruggiero Ricci [illegible] Joseph Silverstein, violinist in the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the only American to be honored at the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music Competition.

TOWN TIMES (WATERTOWN, C

In addition to the eighteen concerts to be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 6000-seat Music Shed on Friday evenings, Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons for the six weekends beginning July 8, the Festival will include six Wednesday evening recitals and two programs sponsored by the Fromm Foundation of Chicago.

The internationally famed pianist, Claudio Arrau, will be heard in a Chopin Centenary Recital on Wednesday evening, July 20, in addition to his appearance with Mr. Monteux and the Orchestra on July 23. On other Wednesday evenings, programs will be given by the Budapest Quartet (July 6), Claude Frank, pianist, with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra (July 13), the Beaux Arts Trio of New York (July 27), and the Kroll Quartet (August 10). The program for Wednesday evening, August 3, is to be announced.

Pianist William Masselos will give an all-Copland recital under the sponsorship of the Fromm Foundation on Monday, July 18. In honor of his 60th birthday the program will consist of Mr. Copland's Piano Fantasy, Piano Variations and Piano Sonata. Luciano Berio and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will give a concert of Contemporary Chamber Music under the Foundation's auspices on August 1st.

Series tickets for each weekend of three concerts and tickets to the Chamber Music series [illegible] available or a single [illegible]. Further information is available from the Festival Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Massachusetts.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657
JUL 2 1960

9

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 28,770
APR 23 1960

New Tanglewood Greenhouse Makes Debut With Geraniums for Boston Pops' Opener

Prentiss

Supt. Kiley loading Tanglewood geraniums to go to Boston

LENOX — Tanglewood-grown geraniums will make their debut on the marquee at Symphony Hall in Boston when the Boston Pops Orchestra opens its season there Tuesday night.

Supt. of Grounds James F. Kiley, who propagated some 500 [illegible] cuttings himself in Tanglewood's new greenhouse, packed more than 100 in 22 boxes yesterday to be shipped to Boston Tuesday morning. Each box also contains seven petunias and three English ivy plants.

Traditionally, on opening nights the marquee at Symphony Hall has always been decorated with geraniums bought from Boston florists.

Cheaper Here

"Geraniums grown in the country, however, are cheaper than in the big city," Mr. Kiley points out—and one day last spring, he set out to prove geraniums could be raised at Tanglewood without too much expense.

A new greenhouse was needed though, so Mr. Kiley sold the BSO manager, Thomas D. Perry Jr., on the idea of buying one. It cost [illegible] not including plumbing and the foundation.

Mr. Kiley, who had experimented with petunias, marigolds and geraniums in the old greenhouse, had already proven that it was more economical for Tanglewood to grow its own flowers than to buy them. Mr. Perry couldn't help but agree.

Do-It-Yourself

Besides Mr. Kiley, four maintenance men worked on putting the greenhouse up when the parts arrived in a sort of do-it-yourself kit. There were glass pieces, 30 inches by 50 inches, and five-foot aluminum ribs and nuts and bolts.

"It was a mess," Mr. Kiley says. "We had a little difficulty trying to follow the blueprints. It was all trial and error."

One night during a windstorm three sheets of glass were blown out onto the front lawn. Total loss was [illegible]. Mr. Kiley and his crew finally got the greenhouse to stand in one piece, however, just before Thanksgiving day.

Potting Shed Added

A potting shed, 8 feet by 14 feet, was also built onto the greenhouse, which measures 14 feet by 26 feet. As an economy measure, the heating plant in the garage 90 feet away pipes heat into the greenhouse.

Now that the weather isn't so bad, Mr. Kiley plans to put asbestos shingles on the potting shed to match those on his home adjacent to the greenhouse. The surrounding area will be landscaped with a three-foot flower bed around the greenhouse.

Mr. Kiley and his men are also working on enlarging the auxiliary rooms of the Tanglewood Shed. Cost of the project will be in the neighborhood of $8,000. The maintenance crew is doing all but the plumbing and electrical work.

Dressing Rooms

The Shed addition, 114 feet long, varies in width from 18 to 28 feet. It includes a dressing room for Dr. Charles Munch, director of the BSO, two dressing rooms for soloists, a dressing room for the girls in the orchestra, an orchestra library and storage rooms.

When Mr. Kiley joined the maintenance staff at Tanglewood in September, 1949, he says he couldn't even tell the difference between a geranium and a gardenia—but he soon picked up horticulture as a hobby, and by the time he was appointed superintendent of grounds in November, 1958, he knew what he was doing.

The geraniums being sent to Boston were grown from cuttings taken from old plants last year. Geraniums left over here will be planted around Memorial Day in Tanglewood's flower beds, boxes and tubs. Marigolds and petunias, which were originally seeds transplanted into flats by Mr. Kiley's wife, Barbara, will also be planted outside to beautify the grounds for the coming festival season.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635
MAY 8 1950

A TOURIST'S CALENDAR OF COMING EVENTS

NORTHEAST

CONNECTICUT

[illegible]

Dog Show, Farmington, July 9.
American Dance Festival, New London, Aug. 18-21.

MAINE

Broiler Day, Belfast, July 10-11.

MASSACHUSETTS

Regatta, Cambridge, May 21. Harvard, Princeton and Yale 150-pound crews compete for the Goldthwait Cup.
Boston Arts Festival, Boston, June 4-19.
Boating, [illegible] Olympic elimination trials for the 5.5 class, June 19; Finn Class Olympic elimination trials, July 11 [illegible]

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121

MAY 22 1960

Tanglewood Projects

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

The first performance of Jan Meyerowitz' one-act "Port Town" will be the principal operatic event of the 1960 season at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. This will be part of the benefit program for the Berkshire Music Center, usually known as "Tanglewood on Parade," on Thursday, Aug. 4. The Center's Opera Department, directed by Boris Goldovsky, will also stage Puccini's "Suor Angelica" and Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnole." The dates for these are not specifically announced, but will presumably be those listed in the Tanglewood calendar for opera scenes, Wednesday afternoon, July 20, and Monday night, July 25. The department was suspended last summer, owing to Mr. Goldovsky's leave of absence.

Thirteen works will have their first Tanglewood hearings in the Boston Symphony's festival concerts, including contemporary music by Norman Dello Joio, Tikhon Khrennikov, Henri Dutilleux and Mr. Copland. One of the others is Sibelius' Violin Concerto, which Ruggiero Ricci will play on Friday, Aug. 5.

Copland and Masselos

The Fromm Foundation will sponsor two Monday night Tanglewood events, a recital of Aaron Copland's piano music by William Masselos on July 18 in honor of the composer's sixtieth birthday (Nov. 14) and a contemporary chamber music program played by Boston Symphony musicians on Aug. 1.

As already announced, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival concerts will occupy all the Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons of the Tanglewood season (July 5-Aug. 14) and the usual public rehearsals will take place Saturday mornings.

Chamber Works

Tuesday nights will be shared by Listeners' Forums (July 5, 26 and Aug. 2) and the Tanglewood Choir (July [illegible] and Aug. 9). Wednesday nights will be devoted to the festival chamber music series, and the Center's student orchestra will play on the first four Thursday nights. The Boston "Pops" Orchestra under Arthur Fiedler will be heard on the closing Thursday, Aug. 11. Seminars in contemporary music are scheduled for all six Friday afternoons, and chamber music for all the Sunday mornings. Composer's Forums will take place on five Sunday nights, July 10 to Aug. 7.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,590

APR 17 1960

Music

Listening School Is Planned at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

A few weeks ago Howard Taub[illegible] of the New York Times [illegible] about the "Curtain of sound" that is draped over every [illegible] of daily life. [illegible]

We have music while we eat, do our shopping, drive our car, read the paper, sit by the fire, and talk with other people . . . not to mention those who lie in bed listening to music on the radio while waiting for the 11 o'clock news.

Virgil Thomson, former music critic for the New York Herald Tribune, said much the same thing in his recent Art Museum lecture.

G. Wallace Woodworth also has something to say on the subject. James Edward Ditson professor of music at Harvard University and former director of the Harvard Glee Club, he states:

"There are two things wrong. First, a great deal of music is utterly inferior and worthless, and second, the continual effect of mere passive background listenin gmay well be permanently damaging."

Dr. Woodworth will have an opportunity to put his theory into practice this summer. He has been appointed to head the newly revised and expanded department of listening and analysis at the Berkshire Music Center.

To implement his program of "active listening," the sessions of the department will involve the "rehearsing" of recorded music for listeners who prepare for the concerts just as the performers do.

The range of literature to be studied will include music scheduled for concert performance at Tanglewood, with special emphasi on contemporary music.

In Passing

One of the profound statements about music came from the great scientist, Albert Einstein:

"[illegible] they are interrelated through their common aim, the desire to express the [illegible]. The strongest motive for both science and music is [illegible] ness and monotony of everyday life." [illegible]

Disagreeing with a statement that was made at the recent convention of the Massachusetts Music Educators Assn., that "instrumental music in the schools was begun in 1916," is the following fact:

The first school band in America was organized at Thompson Academy, Boston, in 1857. It started with the idea of having a good time. School leaders soon saw the educational value of the band and incorporated music into the overall educational program.

Plato is famous for many statements about music. One of the best known is, "The education of heroes shall be gymnastics for the body and music for the soul. Begin the education with music."

Met Tickets

We have received many inquiries about the purchase of tickets for the one - week engagement of the Metropolitan Opera Co. at the Metropolitan Theater, Boston, April 18 through 24.

It would seem that the only possibility of attending any of the eight performances is to acquire tickets that are tuurned in. The week is a sell-out.

T. Charles [illegible]

Director of the Worcester Music Festival Chorus, T. [illegible] was recently responsible for the first New York performances as director of the Oratorio Society of New York. [illegible] church in New York [illegible] One [illegible] was Randall Thompson's "Ode to the Virginian Voyage," which he conducted at the 99th Worcester Festival October 23, 1958. The other was Ralph Vaughan Williams' "A Sea Symphony." Soloists were Gail Manners, soprano, and Walter [illegible], baritone. The Carnegie Hall performance also had the Symphony of the Air.

Mount Holyoke Series

The Arts in Performance subscription series at Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley, already announces its attractions for [illegible].

Marcel Marceau, [illegible] pantomimist, will open the series Nov. 2. Next will be the New York Pro Musica Nov. [illegible] George Bernard Shaw's "St. [illegible]" presented by the Canadian Players in December; and the Cleveland Orchestra's 18th successive appearance on the series in February. The wind-up will be the Jose Limon Dance Company in March.

Casals Festival

The indestructible and indefatigable 84-year-old Pablo Casals will make three solo appearances as cellist and direct several concerts during the fourth annual Casals Festival to be held in the auditorium of the University of Puerto Rico in San Juan from June 8 to 22.

[illegible] will be violinist Alexander Schneider, who played at the Art Museum [illegible] member of the Budapest String Quartet.

Hartford Times
28 May 1960
Boston Globe
22 May 1960

News (e)
SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass.
Circ. 5,169

MAY 21 1960

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

MAY 23 1960

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

MAY 23 1960

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

MAY 21 1960

Back Bay Ledger &
Beacon Hill Times
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 14,500

JUN 16 1960

News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,700

JUN 9 - 1960

Music Center Schedules Three Operas

Goldovsky Returning To Reactivate Department

LENOX — Boris Goldovsky, who was on sabbatical last summer from the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will reactivate the school's opera department for the 1960 session July 3 through Aug. 14.

World Premiere

The world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-act opera "Port Town" will be given Aug. 4 as part of a "Gala Evening" to benefit the Berkshire Music Center. A former faculty member at Tanglewood, Mr. Meyerowitz has seen two of his earlier operas premiered at Tanglewood. In 1948 the school gave the first performance of his "Simoon," and in 1953 it presented his "Bad Boys in School."

Two other one-act operas have been scheduled by Mr. Goldovsky for summer presentation: Puccini's "Suor Angelica" and "L'Heure Espagnol" by Ravel. In addition to the complete operas, the department will present, throughout the school term, several concerts of scenes and acts from the standard operatic repertoire with novelties from the contemporary field.

The opera department will continue its work, begun in 1957, with the cooperation of the [illegible] Foundation, on the multi-[illegible] shell concept of scenic m[illegible] which was designed and developed by the noted scenic designer Dr. Elemer Nagy.

Support for the Berkshire Music Center's opera department activities will be assumed jointly by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the leadership training program of the New England Opera Theater.

Plouffe

Boris Goldovsky

Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Circ. 67,391

JUN 19 1960

TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
D 36,819

MAY 24 1960

List Of Summer Music Must Include Tanglewood

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

Last week we pointed out various proposals in the way of summer music reasonably nearby. Tanglewood is not nearby, reasonably or otherwise. But in any section of the country no enumeration of summer musical activities is complete without accounting for Tanglewood.

Beginning July 6 and continuing every Wednesday evening through Aug. 10 there will be chamber music concerts at Tanglewood. The Budapest Quartet will begin this series July 6.

On the evening of July 8, Friday, the Boston Orchestra will take over. On that date, on the following Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, and all Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoons until Aug. 14 the Boston Orchestra will be playing in the Shed on the Tanglewood grounds.

The concerts of July 8, 9, and 10 will be conducted by Charles Munch and the programs will be all Bach. Mr. Munch will [illegible] conduct the concerts on July 15, 16 and 17. In the second week the programs will be all Mozart.

Norm[illegible] Slated

The [illegible] concerts [illegible] ends [illegible] mal symphony fare; actually this period [illegible] concerts is [illegible] an extension of [illegible] programs in a different locality. Mr. Munch will [illegible] July 22, 24, 29, 30, [illegible], 13, and 14. Pierre Monteux will conduct July 23 and 31, Aug. 7 and 12. There will be soloists in abundance.

Inquiries about Tanglewood and ticket orders will be received at Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass., until June 20. Thereafter one must address himself to Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121

JUN 12 1960

Berkshire Series

The Budapest Quartet will open the Berkshire Festival's Wednesday night chamber music series at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on July 6 with works by Schubert and Ravel and the Heitor Villa-Lobos Quartet No. 17, composed last year. Two Mozart piano quartets and Beethoven's last sonata are in the tentative program to be played by Claude Frank and Boston Symphony instrumentalists on July 13, and Claudio Arrau will play a Chopin program July 20.

The Beaux Arts Trio will present works of Beethoven, Ravel and Brahms on July 27, and Leon Fleisher will play sonatas by Liszt, Schubert and Leon Kirchner on Aug. 3. The Kroll Quartet will wind up the series on Aug. 10 with music by Haydn, Walter Piston and Beethoven.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 289,111

MAY 22 1960

Tanglewood Plans Standout Season

By ROBERT T[illegible]

The forthcoming Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, July 6 through August 14, [illegible] to be one of the most stimulating in the history of this outstanding summer cultual event. Four [illegible] compositions will receive an initial Berkshire performance; a striking roster of soloists—including Jaime L[illegible] the remarkable 19-year-old Bolivian violinist who has yet to appear in these parts—looms in [illegible]. The auguries for the summer are auspicious.

The new music scheduled at Tanglewood this season by Dr. Munch falls into three categories. One consists of genuine novelties. For example, on July 18, Mozart's "Litany," K. 243, will be conducted by Hugh Ross, a "first," so far as I know, in the 80-year-history of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

And then there is "new" music in the sense that it was encountered once during the regular 79th season of the BSO. The Dello Joio "Variations" (July 24); Khrennikov's First Symphony (July 29); Dutilleux's Symphony No. 2 (August 6); Copland's Symphony No. 1, con[illegible] the composer (August 13) come under this heading.

[illegible], there are items from the so-called "standard repertory," more or less, which, by [illegible] of being heard at Tanglewood for the first time, qualify [illegible] premieres. Faure's "Requiem," [illegible] for the annual Koussevitzky Memorial Concert, [illegible] is typical here. Other [illegible] include the Sibelius Violin Concerto (August 5) with Ruggiero Ricci as soloist; Mendelssohn's "Scotch" Symphony, [illegible] Cherubini's "Anacreon" Overture, and Respighi's "[illegible] of Rome," selected by Pierre Monteux in [illegible] appearance, July 22.

The Soloists

The Festival's program does [illegible] on soloists, [illegible] according to standard concert procedures these days. Seven, however, are new to the Tanglewood audience. In addition [illegible] Messrs. Laredo and Ricci, these include the pianist, Claude Frank (July 13 and 16); Joseph Silverstein from the ranks of the Boston Symphony's violin section (July 17); Freda Gray-Massé, alto (July 31); David Laurent, bass (July 31); Gary Graffman, the young American pianist (August 13).

Claudio Arrau, the Chilean virtuoso, will appear in a Chopin Centenary recital Wednesday night, July 20, besides playing with Mr. Monteux on the weekend of the 23rd. Another musical fete to note at Tanglewood this summer is the 60th birthday of Aaron Copland. Pianist William Masselos gives an all-Copland recital under the auspices of the Fromm Foundation Monday, July 18, made up from the Piano Fantasy, Piano Variations and Piano Sonata.

Opera Premiere

Nor will Boris Goldovsky be idle. Mr. Goldovsky was on sabbatical leave last year in the Berkshires. This year he has returned, as usual, brimming with ideas in the field of Opera, and renewing the Opera Department of the Music Center.

Perhaps the most novel of Mr. Goldovsky's efforts this season will be the world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-act opera, "Port Town." Mr. Meyerowitz, a fomer colleague of the Tanglewood faculty, has had two works unveiled here previously. In 1949 the school offered the first performance of his "Simoon," and in 1953, the premiere of his "Bad Boys in School." "Port Town" is to be given on the evening of August 4 as part of a gala benefit.

Two other one-act operas will be seen. Puccini's "Suor Angelica," from "Il Trittico," and "L'Heure Espagnol," by Ravel, as well as excerpts and fragments from the repertory and the contemporary operatic field. Moreover, with the cooperation of the Ford Foundation, Mr. Goldovsky anticipates carrying on his experiments with the multi-projection shell concept of scenic materials—and [illegible] has seen how incisive [illegible] this work in such winter performances as the recent "Count Ory," by Rossini.

Althgether the Boston Symphony plans to present 18 concerts in the 6000-seat Music Shed on Friday evenings, Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon, starting July 8. The phenomenally active octogenarian, Piere Monteux, conducts one concert in each of the final four weekends. Six Wednesday evening recitals and two Fromm Foundation events round out what should be, in preview, a vintage summer.

[illegible]
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 50,885

JUN 5 - 1960

Tanglewood Opera Department to Have Busy Season

Boris Goldovsky, who was on sabbatical leave last summer from the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will reactivate the school's opera department for the ~~1960 season~~, July 3 through Aug. 14.

The world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's "Fort Town" will be performed on Aug. 4 as part of a "Gala Evening" to benefit the Berkshire Music Center. A former faculty member at Tanglewood, Mr. Meyerowitz has seen two of his earlier operas premiered at the festival—"Simoon" in 1949 and "Bad Boys in School" in 1953.

Two other one-act operas have been scheduled by Mr. Goldovsky for Summer presentation—Puccini's "Soeur Angelica" (which the Sacred Hearts Academy Glee Club performed here last month) and Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnole." In addition to the complete operas, the department will present, through the school term, several concerts of scenes and acts from the standard operatic repertoire, plus novelties from the contemporary field.

The department will also continue its work, begun in 1957, with the co-operation of the Ford Foundation, on the multi-projection shell concept of scenic materials which was designed and developed by Dr. Elmer Nagy, the noted scenic designer.

ALBANY, N.Y.
TIMES-UNION
D. 87,829 S. 118,093

JUN 19 1960

CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, will open the 1960 Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., Friday, July 8. The festival will continue through Sunday, Aug. 14.

Guest conductors will be Pierre Monteux and composer Aaron Copland.

Friday and Saturday performances begin at 8:30 P. M. Sunday performances at 2:30 P. M.

THE PROGRAMS

FRIDAY, JULY 8: Bach
Suite No. [illegible]
Violin Concerto in E (Kroll)
Piano Concerto in F Minor (Lipkin)
Triple Concerto in A Minor (Zazofsakis, Kroll, Lipkin)
Conductor: Charles Munch

SATURDAY, JULY 9: Bach
Excerpts: Musical Offering and The Art of the Fugue.
Piano Concerto in D Minor [illegible]
Suite No. [illegible]
Conductor: Charles Munch

SUNDAY, JULY 10: Bach
Suite No. 3
Brandenburg Concerto [illegible]
Cantata: "Christ lag in Todesbanden" (Hugh Ross conducting; Festival Chorus)
Conductor: Charles Munch

FRIDAY, JULY 15: Mozart
Bassoon Concerto [illegible]
Clarinet Concerto [illegible]
Sinfonia Concertante [illegible] Wall, Stagliano)
Conductor: Charles Munch

SATURDAY, JULY 16: Mozart
Eine kleine Nachtmusik
Piano Concerto K. 491 (Frank)
Litany K. 243 (Hugh Ross conducting; Festival Chorus)
Conductor: Charles Munch

SUNDAY, JULY 17: [illegible]
[illegible]

Violin Concerto K. 218 (Silverstein)
Symphony No. 39
Conductor: Charles Munch

FRIDAY, JULY 22: Beethoven: "Eroica" Symphony
Faure: Requiem (Endich, [illegible], Festival Chorus)
Conductor: Charles Munch

SATURDAY, JULY 23: Cherubini: Anacreon Overture
Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 5 (Arrau)
Respighi: The Fountains of Rome
Strauss: Till Eulenspiegel
Conductor: Pierre Monteux

SUNDAY, JULY 24: Dello Joio: Variations, Chaconne & Finale
Mendelssohn: Violin Concerto (Laredo)
Beethoven: Symphony No. 5
Conductor: Charles Munch

ST. LOUIS, MO.
POST-DISPATCH
D. 414,437 S. 580,541

JUN 19 1960

Berkshire Festival

CONTEMPORARY MUSIC to be played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival this summer includes works by Henri Dutilleux, Tikhon Khrennikov, Norman Dello Joio, Walter Piston and Aaron Copland. New chamber music and operas also will be offered. The Festival, which is [illegible] a 210-acre estate near Lenox, Mass., [illegible] through August 14.

Concerts by the Boston orchestra will be confined to Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings. Chamber music concerts are scheduled on weekdays. Among the ensembles will be one composed of orchestra members and the Budapest and Kroll Quartets.

The contemporary selections will be Dutilleux's Symphony No. 2, Khrennikov's Symphony No. 1, Dello Joio's Variations, [illegible] Piston's Symphony No. [illegible] and Copland's Symphony No. 1, which he will conduct, August 13. A contemporary chamber music concert will be played August 1 by the Boston orchestra ensemble. On August 4 the Berkshire Center Opera Company will give the first performance of Jan Meyerowitz's [illegible] "Port Town."

[illegible] to be presented are Puccini's "Suor Angelica" [illegible] "L'heure espagnole." Two special [illegible] July 18 William Masselos [illegible] in commemoration of the composer's [illegible] anniversary. A recital in observance of the sesquicentennial of Chopin's birth will be played by Claudio Arrau on July 20. All three concerts of the first weekend will be devoted to Bach; those of the second weekend will be devoted to Mozart. Charles Munch will conduct 14 concerts during the season and Pierre Monteux, former music director of the orchestra, will return for four concerts. Among the offerings conducted by Monteux will be Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Other works for orchestra, chorus and soloists this season will be Faure's "Requiem" and the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust."

[illegible] roster of soloists includes Eleanor [illegible] soprano; [illegible] Ricci and Jaime Laredo, violinists, and Jorge Bolet, Gary Graffman, Eugene Istomin and [illegible]

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,835

JUN 30 1960

Boston Symphony on WQXR

Radio station WQXR will broadcast the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concerts from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass.

The concerts will be heard live on Saturdays from 8:30 to 10:30 P. M., July 9 through Aug. 13. Charles Munch will conduct all of the presentations except that of July 23, when Pierre Monteux will wield the baton.

Town Crier
WESTPORT, Conn.
Bi-Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,448

JUN 12 1960

Tanglewood Guests . . .

Charles Munch has announced his guests at the 1960 Berkshire Festival's Chamber Music Series.

The chamber music recitals, to be given on six Wednesday evenings beginning July 6, will be held in the Theatre at Tanglewood, Lenox (Mass.). Participants in these programs, held in conjunction with the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 18 Festival concerts, include the Budapest and Kroll Quartets, the Beaux Arts Trio of New York, pianist Claude Frank with members of the Orchestra, plus Claudio Arrau in a Chopin Centenary Recital and Leon Fleisher in a program of sonatas for the piano.

Information and complete programs for the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 1960 Berkshire Festival are available at the Festival ticket office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15, Mass.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
POST
D. 328,402 S. 262,240

JUN 5 1960

Munch to Open Berkshire Season

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony will lead off the Berkshire Festival's summer season at Tanglewood July 8 with a week-end of Bach.

The second week-end of concerts will be devoted to works by Mozart. Other special works to be performed are Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" Aug. 14; Beethoven's Ninth Symphony July 23 and Faure's Requiem July 22.

Among the [illegible]-week season's guest artists will be pianists Jorge Bolet, Gary Graffman and [illegible]; violinists Ruggiero Ricci and Jaime Laredo and [illegible] Eleanor Steber, [illegible] and Martial Singher. Munch will conduct 14 of the concerts; Pierre Monteux will be on the podium for the remaining four.

1
0 12

Connecticut

[redacted]

CONN. LIFE
JULY

June

3 Opening of American Shakespeare Festival Theater, Stratford. Alternating "Twelfth Night," "The Tempest," "Antony and Cleopatra," through Sept. 11. Tuesday's through Saturday evenings, Wednesday and Sunday matinees.

Laurel festival at Winsted

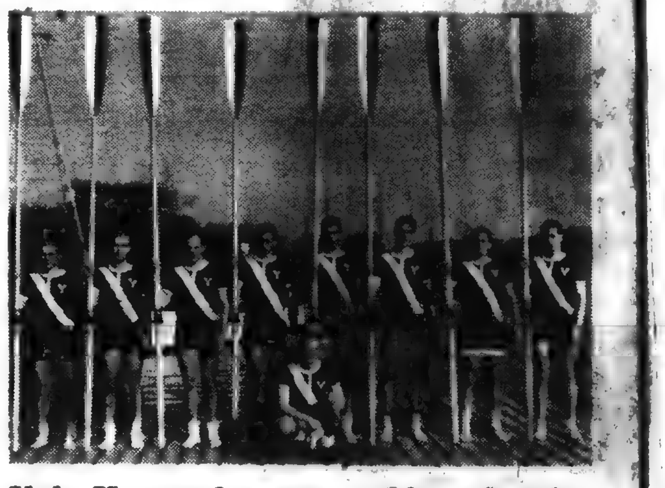
4 Long Island Sports Car race, Lime Rock.
Evening of dance, Silvermine Guild, New Canaan.
5 Glastonbury Junior Horse Show.
5-July 4 New England Exhibition of Painting and Sculpture, Silvermine.
8 Tour of homes, Essex.
10 Jazz trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie at University of Connecticut, Storrs.
12 Commencements at University of Connecticut, Wesleyan, Trinity, Connecticut College.
Dog Show, Longshore — Southport Kennel Club, Cedar Ridge Hunting Preserve, Fairfield.
13-14 Miss Connecticut Pageant, Middletown.
16 Watertown Fire Department parade and carnival.

Barnum festival at Bridgeport

17-19 Ox Ridge Club Hunt Club Horse Show, Darien.
18 Yale-Harvard Crew Race, New London.
Louis Armstrong, with Connecticut Pops Concert, Fairfield University, Fairfield.
18-July 10 Lyme Art Assn. spring exhibition, Old Lyme.
19 Bridgeport Civic Symphony, Klein Auditorium, Bridgeport.
23-25 Country Antiques Festival, Riverton fairgrounds. Benefits Children's Services of Connecticut.
23-26 Horse show, Fairfield County Hunt Club, Westport.
23-28 Festival of Arts, New Haven Green.
24-26 Annual Winsted Laurel Festival, Winsted.
25 Hunt Brothers Circus, Ridgefield.
25-26 Horse show, combined Connecticut Horsemen's Horse Show and L. B. Riding Club, Middletown.
27 Sharon Playhouse opens season.
28 Starlight Festival of Chamber Music, Saybrook College, Yale, New Haven.

July

1-9 Barnum Festival at Bridgeport.



Yale-Harvard race at New London

2 National Sports Car Club races, Lime Rock.
Old Greenwich Art Festival, Old Greenwich.
3 Berkshire String Quartet, Music Mountain, Falls Village.
4 Ivoryton Playhouse opens.
Scottish games, Round Hill, Greenwich.
5 Hartford Festival of Music, grounds of Connecticut General Insurance Co., Bloomfield.
6 Tanglewood season opens, Lenox, Mass.
9 Tour of historic homes, Litchfield, in support of Connecticut Junior Republic.
Dog Show, Farmington Valley Kennel Club, polo grounds at Farmington.
10 Stamford Horsemen's Association, Frank Altschul estate, Riverbank Road, Stamford.
Tour of historic homes, Ridgefield.

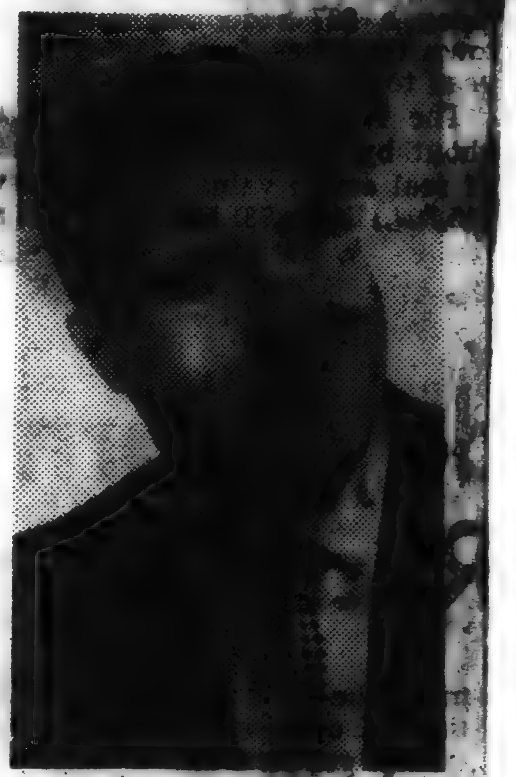
LOWELL, Mass.
Circ. 42,164

MAY 21 1960

Music

Contreras to Sing Top Role in "Rigoletto"

LOWELL — [illegible] Contreras, leading bass of the Philadelphia [illegible] company will make his initial appearance in this city tomorrow evening at the Little Theater, Lowell State Teachers college, when he sings the role of Sparafucile in Verdi's "Rigoletto" which is being sponsored by the Hunnewell Fund and performed by members and guest artists of the Boston-New England Opera company.



Joseph Contreras

The talented bass who will join such noted singers as Ariadne Moshos, coloratura soprano; Chester Ludgin, baritone; and Enrico Di Giuseppe, tenor, has enjoyed an outstanding operatic season during the musical year of 1959-60. During the past year he has been singing star with the Chicago and Brooklyn Opera companies and the Connecticut Opera associations.

He has a repertoire of 24 leading roles and has gained acclaim for performances in such leads as Boris Godunov, Mephistopheles, Don Giovanni and Colline among others.

The plans for tomorrow afternoon's concert at the Memorial high school by the Reading Symphony orchestra has been completed. Guest artist will be the internationally known organist, Virgil Fox. Walter Brannen will conduct. This program will be the only New England appearance of this season for Mr. Fox.

Arthur Howes, director of the Organ Institute at Andover, has announced that the 1960 session will be conducted from Aug. 1 to the 20th. Concerts will be given on Aug. 5 (Arthur Howes); Aug. 12 (Donald Willing) and Aug. 19, (Heinrich Fleisher). Faculty [illegible] will include the three named recitalists, [illegible] (voice), Johannes Brenneke, Volcker Gwinner, Fritz [illegible], Leif Thybo, Joep Toebusch and Heinz Wunderlich.

"Festival of Favorites" will be the motif of this season's activity at the North Shore Music theater in Beverly. As in past years, there will be preseason opening, and centered in the spotlight will be America's number one jazz personality, Louis Armstrong. His program will be a concert of jazz-in-the-round. It is expected that the session will be one of [illegible] musical parade.

Between July 6 and August 14 there will be [illegible] in this season's Berkshire Festival which will be held at Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony orchestra's 210-acre estate of formal gardens, [illegible] hemlock and pines which has changed little since Nathaniel Hawthorne said of it: "I cannot write in the presence of that view."

Dr. Charles Munch has invited Pierre Monteux, the Orchestra's beloved "conductor emeritus," and a group of brilliant soloists to be his guests in the list of programs. To accommodate the large audiences for the Festival's concerts, all Friday and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon programs will be presented in the 6000-seat music shed under the new Talbot Memorial Canopy which was installed last summer. Those who prefer may listen to these concerts from the Great Lawn which adjoins the Shed.

The Orchestra's famed summer school of Music, the Berkshire Music Center, will be in session during the Festival. The Friends of the Berkshire Music Center is an organization of those who believe in the ideals and the work of the Music Center [illegible]. Friends are invited to the School's many concerts of orchestral, choral, chamber music, opera evenings, lectures, forums and other events.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121

JUN 26 1960

Festivals of Music All Over America

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Besides more than 100 events within the city limits, this summer offers a varied array of musical activities within a few hours' travel from New York. Among these are three major festivals, each featuring a different kind of music. The seventh annual Newport Jazz Festival begins its five days in Freebody Park, Newport, R. I., this Thursday night, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will give eighteen concerts in the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., which runs from July 6 through Aug. 14.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
POST
D. 328,402 S. [illegible]

JUN 14 1960

Set Special Tours For Music and Art

Special tours have been arranged for music and art enthusiasts by Ski Bird Tours of 2039 Broadway, N. Y. They include attendance of the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, [illegible] at Jacob's Pillow.

The personally escorted tours include transportation by air-conditioned motor coaches, accommodations at both luxury hotels and country inns, and a full range of sports facilities and sightseeing.

Ski Bird also features a direct service to the Empire State Music Festival at Anthony Wayne Park with departures at 6:00 p.m. to each performance. Complete information on all tours is available from Ski Bird.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.

JUN 1960

Boston Symphony—Tanglewood Forecasts

Fourteen compositions will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood this summer by the Boston Symphony at its Berkshire Festival, July 6-Aug. 14. The Orchestra will perform for the first time in its 80 year history Mozart's "Litany," K. 243, Hugh Ross conducting orchestra and chorus, July ances at Tanglewood of other works by Dello Joio, Khrennikov, Sibelius, Mendelssohn, Dutilleux, Chopin, Copland, Faure, Cherubini and Respighi. Charles Munch's guests at the Festival range from octogenarian conductor Pierre Monteux to 19-year-old violinist Jaime Laredo. Seven of the 25 soloists will be making their Tanglewood debuts: Mr. Laredo; Claude Frank, pianist; Joseph Silverstein, violinist; Freda Gray-Masse, alto; David Laurent, bass; Ruggiero Ricci, violinist; and Gary Graffman, pianist.

12

Connecticut

CONN. LIFE
JUNE

June

3 Opening of American Shakespeare Festival Theater, Stratford. Alternating "Twelfth Night," "The Tempest," "Antony and Cleopatra," through Sept. 11. Tuesday's through Saturday evenings, Wednesday and Sunday matinees.

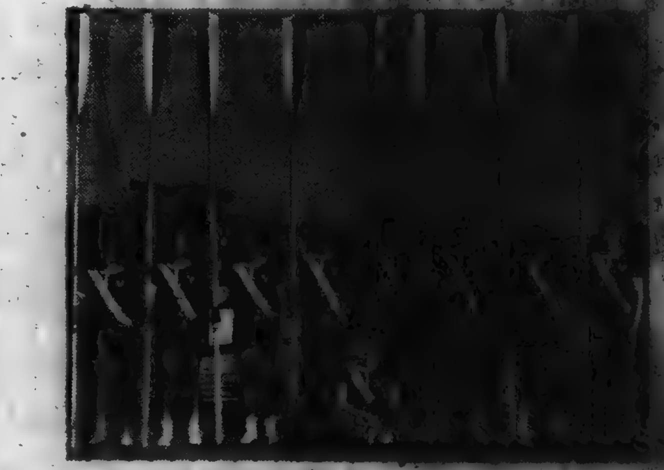
Laurel festival at Winsted

4 Long Island Sports Car race, Lime Rock.
Evening of dance, Silvermine Guild, New Canaan.
5 Glastonbury Junior Horse Show.
5-July 4 New England Exhibition of Painting and Sculpture, Silvermine.
8 Tour of homes, Essex.
10 Jazz trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie at University of Connecticut, Storrs.
12 Commencements at University of Connecticut, Wesleyan, Trinity, Connecticut College.
Dog Show, Longshore—Southport Kennel Club, Cedar Ridge Hunting Preserve, Fairfield.
[illegible] Miss Connecticut Pageant, Middletown.
16 Watertown Fire Department parade and carnival.

[illegible] festival at Bridgeport

17-19 [illegible] Ridge Club Hunt Club Horse Show, Darien.
18 Yale-Harvard Crew Race, New London.
Louis Armstrong, with Connecticut Pops Concert, Fairfield University, Fairfield.
[illegible] 10 Lyme Art Assn. spring exhibition, Old Lyme.
19 Bridgeport Civic Symphony, Klein Auditorium, Bridgeport.
23-25 Country Antiques Festival, Riverton fairgrounds. Benefits Children's Services of Connecticut.
23-26 Horse show, Fairfield County Hunt Club, Westport.
23-28 Festival of Arts, New Haven Green.
24-26 Annual Winsted Laurel Festival, Winsted.
25 Hunt Brothers Circus, Ridgefield.
25-26 Horse show, combined Connecticut Horsemen's Horse Show and L. B. Riding Club, Middletown.
27 Sharon Playhouse opens season.
28 Starlight Festival of Chamber Music, Saybrook College, Yale, New Haven.

July
1-9 Barnum Festival at Bridgeport.



Yale-Harvard race at New London

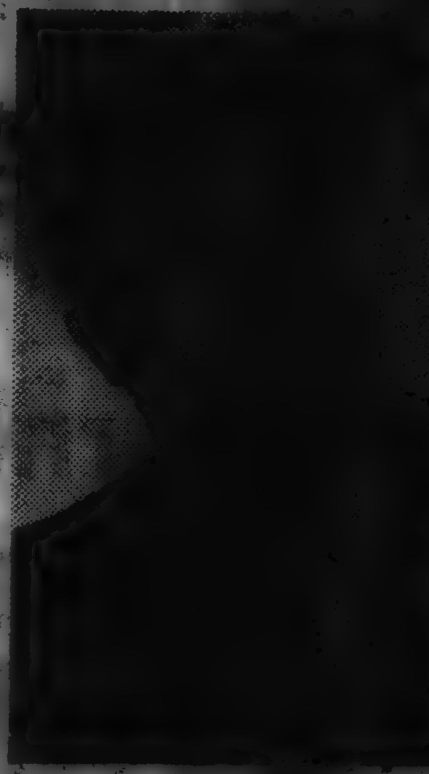
2 National Sports Car Club races, Lime Rock.
Old Greenwich Art Festival, Old Greenwich.
3 Berkshire String Quartet, Music Mountain, Falls Village.
4 Ivoryton Playhouse opens.
Scottish games, Round Hill, Greenwich.
5 Hartford Festival of Music, grounds of Connecticut General Insurance Co., Bloomfield.
6 Tanglewood season opens, Lenox, Mass.
9 Tour of historic homes, Litchfield, in support of Connecticut Junior Republic.
Dog Show, Farmington Valley Kennel Club, polo grounds at Farmington.
10 Stamford Horsemen's Association, Frank Altschul estate, Riverbank Road, Stamford.
Tour of historic homes, Ridgefield.

MAY 21 1960

Music

Contreras to [illegible] Top Role in "Rigoletto"

LOWELL [illegible] Contreras, leading bass of the Philadelphia [illegible] Company will make his initial appearance in this [illegible] tomorrow evening at the Little Theater, Lowell State Teachers college, when he sings the role of Sparafucile in Verdi's "Rigoletto" which is being sponsored by the Hunnewell Fund and performed by members and guest artists of the Boston-New England Opera company.



Joseph Contreras

The talented bass who will join such noted singers as Ariadne Moshos, coloratura soprano, Chester Ludgin, baritone, and Enrico di Giuseppe, tenor, has enjoyed an outstanding operatic season during the musical year of 1959-60. During the past year he has been singing with the Chicago and Brooklyn Opera companies and the Connecticut Opera association.

He has a repertoire of 24 leading roles and has gained acclaim for performances in such leads as Boris Godunov, Mephistopheles, Don Giovanni and Colline among others.

The plans for tomorrow afternoon's concert at the Memorial high school by the Reading Symphony orchestra has been completed. Guest artist will be the internationally known organist, Virgil Fox. Walter Brannen will conduct. This program will be the only New England appearance of this season for Mr. Fox.

Arthur Howes, director of the Organ Institute at Andover, has announced that the 1960 session will be conducted from Aug. 1 to the 20th. Concerts will be given on Aug. 5 (Arthur Howes); Aug. 12 (Donald Willing) and Aug. 19, (Heinrich Fleisher). Faculty [illegible] will include the three named recitalists, [illegible], Johannes Brenneke, Volcker Gwinner, Fritz [illegible], Leif Thybo, Joep Toebusch and Heinz Wunderlich.

"Festival of Favorites" will be the motif of this season's activity at the North Shore Music Theatre in Beverly. As in past years, there will be pre-[illegible] and centered in the spotlight will be [illegible] personality, Louis Armstrong. [illegible] will be a concert of jazz-[illegible] that the season will be one of [illegible].

[illegible] July 6 and August [illegible] there will [illegible] season's Berkshire Festival which [illegible] held at Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony [illegible] estate of formal gardens [illegible] which has changed little since [illegible] Hawthorne [illegible] of it: "I cannot write in the present [illegible] view."

Dr. Charles Munch has invited Pierre Monteux, the Orchestra's beloved "conductor emeritus," and a group of [illegible] to be his guests in the list of [illegible]. To accommodate the large audiences for [illegible] concerts on Friday and Saturday evenings [illegible] afternoon programs will be presented [illegible] music shed under the new Talbot [illegible] was installed last summer. Those [illegible] to these concerts from the Great Lawn which adjoins the Shed.

The Orchestra's famed summer school of Music, the Berkshire Music Center, will be in session during the Festival. The Friends of the [illegible] organization of [illegible] work of the [illegible] Friends are invited [illegible] orchestral, choral, chamber [illegible] opera evenings, lectures, forums and other events [illegible]

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121
JUN 26 1960

Festivals of Music All Over America

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Besides more than 100 events within the city limits, this summer offers a varied array of musical activities within a few hours' travel from New York. Among these are three major festivals, each featuring a different kind of music. The seventh annual Newport Jazz Festival begins its five days in Freebody Park, Newport, R. I., this Thursday night, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra [illegible]

NEW YORK, N.Y.
POST
D. 3[illegible],402
JUN 24 1960

Set Special Tours For Music and Art

Special tours have been arranged for music and art enthusiasts by Ski Bird Tours of 2039 Broadway, N. Y. They [illegible]

The personally escorted tours include transportation by air-conditioned motor coaches [illegible] accommodations at better country hotels and country inns [illegible]

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.
JUN - 1960

Boston Symphony—Tanglewood Forecasts

by Shirley Clark

Fourteen compositions will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood this summer by the Boston Symphony at its Berkshire Festival, July 6-Aug. 14. The Orchestra will perform for the first time in its 80 year history Mozart's "Litany," K. 243, Hugh Ross conducting orchestra and chorus, July [illegible] at Tanglewood [illegible] other works [illegible] kovsky, Sibelius, Mendelssohn, Dutilleux, Chopin, Copland, Faure, Cherubini and Respighi. Charles Munch's guests at the Festival range from octogenarian conductor Pierre Monteux to 19-year-old violinist Jaime Laredo. Seven of the 21 soloists will be making their Tanglewood debuts: Mr. Laredo; Claude Frank, pianist; Joseph Silverstein, violinist; Freda Gray-Masse, alto; David Laurent, bass; Ruggiero Ricci, violinist; and Gary Graffman, pianist.

12

Connecticut

CONN. LIFE

JUNE

June

3 Opening of American Shakespeare Festival Theater, Stratford. Alternating "Twelfth Night," "The Tempest," "Antony and Cleopatra," through Sept. 11. Tuesday's through Saturday evenings, Wednesday and Sunday matinees.

Laurel festival at Winsted

4 Long Island Sports Car race, Lime Rock.
Evening of dance, Silvermine Guild, New Canaan.

5 Glastonbury Junior Horse Show.

5-July 4 New England Exhibition of Painting and Sculpture, Silvermine.

8 Tour of homes, Essex.

10 Jazz trumpeter Dizzy Gillespie at University of Connecticut, Storrs.

12 Commencements at University of Connecticut, Wesleyan, Trinity, Connecticut College.
Dog Show, Longshore—Southport Kennel Club, Cedar Ridge Hunting Preserve, Fairfield.

13-14 Miss Connecticut Pageant, Middletown.

16 Watertown Fire Department parade and carnival.

[illegible] festival at Bridgeport

17-19 [illegible] Ridge Club Hunt Club Horse Show, Darien.

18 Yale-Harvard Crew Race, New London.
Louis Armstrong, with Connecticut Pops Concert, Fairfield University, Fairfield.
[illegible] 10 Lyme Art Assn. spring [illegible], Old Lyme.

19 Bridgeport Civic Symphony, Klein Auditorium, Bridgeport.

23-25 Country Antiques Festival, Riverton fairgrounds. Benefits Children's Services of Connecticut.

23-26 Horse show, Fairfield County Hunt Club, Westport.

23-28 Festival of Arts, New Haven Green.

24-26 Annual Winsted Laurel Festival, Winsted.

25 Hunt Brothers Circus, Ridgefield.

25-26 Horse show, combined Connecticut Horsemen's Horse Show and L. B. Riding Club, Middletown.

27 Sharon Playhouse opens season.

28 Starlight Festival of Chamber Music, Saybrook College, Yale, New Haven.

July

1-9 Barnum Festival at Bridgeport.

Yale-Harvard race at New London

2 National Sports Car Club races, Lime Rock.
Old Greenwich Art Festival, Old Greenwich.

3 Berkshire String Quartet, Music Mountain, Falls Village.

4 Ivoryton Playhouse opens.
Scottish games, Round Hill, Greenwich.

5 Hartford Festival of Music, grounds of Connecticut General Insurance Co., Bloomfield.

6 Tanglewood season opens, Lenox, Mass.

9 Tour of historic homes, Litchfield, in support of Connecticut Junior Republic.
Dog Show, Farmington Valley Kennel Club, polo grounds at Farmington.

10 Stamford Horsemen's Association, Frank Altschul estate, Riverbank Road, Stamford.
Tour of historic homes, Ridgefield.

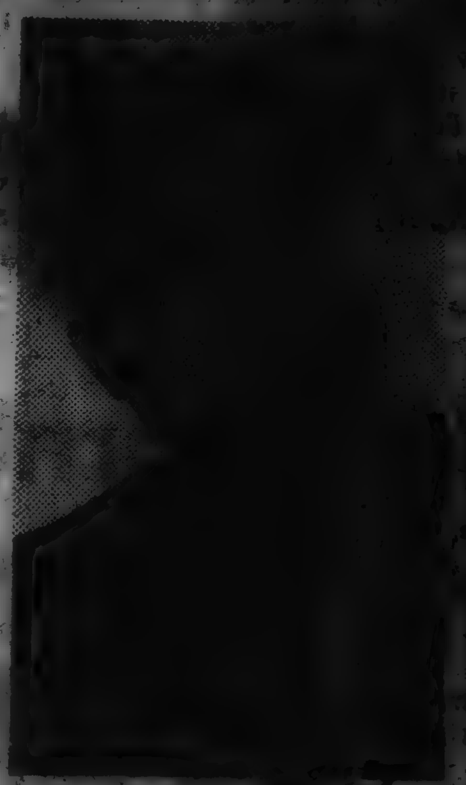
MAY 21 1960

Music

Contreras to [illegible] Top Role in "Ri[illegible]"

LOWELL [illegible] Contreras, [illegible] bass of the Philadelphia [illegible] Company [illegible] make his [illegible] appearance in this [illegible] tomorrow evening at the Little Theater, Lowell State Teachers college, when he sings the role of Sparafucile in Verdi's "Rigoletto" which is being sponsored by the Hunnewell Fund and performed by members and guest artists of the Boston-New England Opera company.

The talented bass who will join such noted singers as Ariadne Moshos, coloratura soprano, Chester Ludgin, baritone, and Enrico di Giuseppe, tenor, has enjoyed an outstanding operatic season during the musical year of 1959-60. During the past year he has been singing star with the Chicago and Brooklyn Opera companies and the Connecticut Opera association.



Joseph Con[illegible]

He has a repertoire of 24 leading roles and has gained acclaim for performances in such leading roles as Boris Godunov, Mephistopheles, Don Giovanni and Colline, among others.

The plans for tomorrow afternoon's concert at the Memorial high school by the Reading Symphony orchestra have been completed. Guest artist will be the internationally known organist, Virgil Fox. Walter Brannen will conduct. This program will be the only New England appearance of this season for Mr. Fox.

Arthur Howes, director of the Organ Institute at Andover, has announced that the 1960 session will be conducted from Aug. 1 to the 20th. Concerts will be given on Aug. 5 (Arthur Howes); Aug. 12 (Donald Will[illegible]) and Aug. 19, (Heinrich Fleisher). Faculty [illegible] will include the three named recitalists, Ho[illegible] [illegible]ice), Johannes Brenneke, Volcker Gwinner, Fritz [illegible], Leif Thybo, Joep Toebusch and Heinz Wunderlich.

"Festival of Favorites" will be the motif of this season's activities at the North Shore Music Theatre in Beverly. As in past years, there will be pre[illegible], and centered in the spotlight will be Ame[illegible] [illegible] personality, Louis Armstrong.

[illegible] program will be a concert of jazz [illegible] expected that the session will be one of [illegible]

[illegible] July and August there will [illegible] Berkshire Festival which [illegible] Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony [illegible] estate of formal gardens [illegible] which has changed little since Nathaniel Hawthorne [illegible] of it. "I cannot write in the presence of [illegible]

[illegible] Munch has invited Pierre Monteux, the Orchestra's beloved "conductor emeritus," and a group of [illegible] to be his guests in the list of [illegible]. To accommodate the large audiences for [illegible] concerts, all Friday and Saturday evening [illegible] afternoon programs will be presented [illegible] Music Shed under the new Talbot [illegible] was installed last summer. Those who [illegible] to these concerts from the Great Lawn which adjoins the Shed.

The Orchestra's famed summer school of Music, the Berkshire Music Center, will be in session during the Festival. The Friends of the [illegible] organization of [illegible] work of the [illegible] Friends are invited [illegible] orchestral, choral, chamber music, opera [illegible], lectures, forums and other events [illegible]

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,085 S. 505,121
JUN 26 1960

Festivals of Music All Over America

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

Besides more than 100 events within the city limits, this summer offers a varied array of musical activities within a few hours' travel from New York. Among these are three major festivals, each featuring a different kind of music. The seventh annual Newport Jazz Festival begins its four days in Freebody Park, Newport, R. I., this Thursday night, and the Bo[illegible] Symphony Orchestra [illegible]

NEW YORK, N.Y.
POST
[illegible]
JUN 24 1960

Set Special Tours For Music and Art

Special tours have been arranged for music and art enthusiasts by Ski Bird Tours of 2039 Broadway, N. Y. They [illegible]

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.

The Musicians Club of Women has a record of continuous service to the musical life of Chicago. One of its first presidents was Mrs. Theodore Thomas, wife of the famous conductor of the Chicago Symphony.
The club sponsors two morning operas [illegible]

16. A Tanglewood first will be Bach's Cantata No. 4, "Christ lag in Todesbanden," July 10. There will be first performances at Tanglewood of other works by Dello Joio, Khrennikov, Sibelius, Mendelssohn, Dutilleux, Chopin, Copland, Faure, Cherubini and Respighi. Charles Munch's guests at the Festival range from octogenarian conductor Pierre Monteux to 19-year-old violinist Jaime Laredo. Seven of the 25 soloists will be making their Tanglewood debuts: Mr. Laredo; Claude Frank, pianist; Joseph Silverstein, violinist; Freda Gray-Masse, alto; David Laurent, bass; Ruggiero Ricci, violinist; and Gary Graffman, pianist.

FADED TEXT

SHOWTHROUGH

13

INTERNATIONAL MUSICIAN
NEWARK, N.J.
MONTHLY 229,348
JUN 1960

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival, conducts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

SUMMER MUSIC . . .
Pop to Prokofiev

32

For instance, the faculty of leading musicians at the Berkshire Music Center, the school in connection with the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, leans heavily on members of the Boston Symphony. The Music Director of the Boston Symphony, [illegible] Symphony, is administrator [illegible] Richard Burgin, the Boston Symphony's [illegible] Conductor and Concertmaster, is head [illegible] the Kroll [illegible] also [illegible] school.

INTERNATIONAL MUSICIAN

NEW YORK, N.Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
D. 453,331 SAT. 174,917
JUN 7 1960

Tours to Visit Three Festivals

Some of New England's major artistic attractions—the annual Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood (near Lenox, Mass.) and the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival (at Lee, Mass.)—are on the direct motor tour schedule this summer of Ski Bird Tours, 2039 Broadway.

In addition, the tours will include performances of the Empire State Music Festival at Anthony Wayne Park, N. Y.

Berkshire Festival Tours leave every Friday evening and Saturday morning starting July 8 and continuing through Aug. 14, with rates starting at $23.75, including transportation by air-conditioned motor coaches, "immediate vicinity" accommodations. All tours are personally escorted. For information call EN. 2-1405 or write Ski Bird Tours.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
MONTHLY
JUN 1960

At The Berkshire Music Center: This Summer's session will be from July 3 through Aug. 14. Boris Goldovsky, who was on sabbatical leave last summer, will reactivate the school's opera department. The world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz' one-act opera "Port Town" will be given Aug. 4. Other complete performances will include Puccini's "Suor Angelica" and Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnol" . . . G. Wallace Woodworth, will head the newly revised and expanded Department of Listening and Analysis. The scope of the department will enable students to learn more from the many rehearsals and concerts . . . Richard Burgin and William Kroll will head the Chamber Music Divisions. A series of seminars have been established to explore solo and ensemble playing . . . The programs and guest artists of the Boston Symphony's Berkshire Festival at the Center will include a varied fare. All 18 concerts will be given in the shed, with the first two weeks devoted to music by Bach and Mozart respectively. Special works will include Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," Beethoven's Ninth Symphony and Faure's "Requiem." Among the artists will be Claudio Arrau, Eleanor Steber, Ruggiero Ricci and Jaime Laredo.

News (e)
SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass.
Circ. 5,169
047
JUN 2[illegible] 1960

Festivals Offer Chance For Live Music

By IRENE JARRY
News Music Columnist

With music festivals mushrooming everywhere, music lovers, students, etc., are planning to hear again this summer live music concerts, which their busy winter schedules have limited.

Plan to sparkle many of your short summer trips with them. Although as a nation we have been accused of having a very [illegible] culture rating—you know that long-hair stuff—our cultural spectaculars are fast juxtaposing those in Europe. Americans are learning to discriminate, and thousands of people travel to top-flight art festivals, many of them free such as the Boston Festival, June 3-19.

Musical calendars and events for this summer are now being listed in all the leading papers, schools, etc. The Esplanade Concerts with Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with a little lighter menu than the Arts Festival, are starting July 5—also free.

The Tanglewood Berkshire Festival at Lenox, considered the best festival in America, will be held July 6-Aug. 14. It features the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Tanglewood has one of the most glamorous settings, and some of the best and most varied music. You can bring a picnic lunch, walk around the beautifully landscaped grounds before a concert, visit the school and music stores with their many unusual scores and records. Brush up against artists, students, ballet dancers, and composers from all over the world, who are either visiting or teaching.

INSIDER'S NEWSLETTER
NEW YORK, N.Y.
W. CIRC. NOT AVAIL.
JUN 6 1960

SUMMER TUNE-UPS

Music, outdoors or on the half shell, will be the sustaining note for summer. The shortage of new Broadway musicals for strawhat playgoers has led to plans for a flock of new music festivals--for longhairs, ducktails and "folkniks" (folk music addicts). Wherever you intend to spend the summer, you are likely to be within the sound of music and the sight of famous musicians. Reminder: Some virtuosos will be in residence all season, others will be on tour, so check with the local Chamber of Commerce, state tourist bureau or any travel agent. Program notes:

Most of the new music circuses are Jazz. If you can't make the big jazz festivals at Newport, R.I., French Lick, Ind., Detroit or Philadelphia you will still be able to hear them over CBS radio or on a Columbia Records LP, "World Jazz Series."

Opera fans will have a good season too: Mozart's "Thamos, King of Egypt" makes its U.S. debut high in the Rockies at Aspen, Colo.; Jose Ferrer, actor-director, can be seen and heard in Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi" in Santa Fe, N.M. Highlight of the 9-week Santa Fe season will be Stravinsky conducting his own "Oedipus Rex"; and the Berkshire Music Center reopens its Opera Department at Tanglewood, Mass. (The Department of Listening and Analysis also holds "listening rehearsals" for Tanglewood tourists.)

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y.
NEW YORKER
D. 28,986 S. 30,153
JUN 19 1960

Recital Series Set at Tanglewood

Charles Munch has made known the programs to be performed by his guests at the 1960 Berkshire Festival's Chamber Music series. The recitals, to be performed on six Wednesday nights beginning July 6, will take place in the theater at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Participants in these programs, held in conjunction with the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 18 Festival concerts, include the Budapest and Kroll Quartets, the Beaux Arts Trio of New York, pianist Claude Frank with members of the orchestra, plus Claudio Arrau in a Chopin Centenary recital and Leon Fleisher in a program of sonatas for the piano.

FADED TEXT

SHOWTHROUGH

13

INTERNATIONAL MUSICIAN
NEWARK, N.J.
MONTHLY 228,348
JUN 1960

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Festival, conducts in the Music Shed at [illegible]

INTERNATIONAL MUSICIAN
JUNE, 1960

32

[illegible] instance, the faculty of leading [illegible] the Berkshire Music Center [illegible] Boston Symphony. [illegible]

NEW YORK, N.Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
D. 45[illegible] SAT. 174,917
JUN [illegible] 1960

Tours to Visit Three Festivals

Some of New England's major artistic attractions—the annual Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood (near Lenox, Mass.) and the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival (at Lee, Mass.)—are on the direct motor tour schedule this summer of Ski Bird Tours, 2039 Broadway.

In addition, the tours will include performances of the Empire State [illegible] Festival at Anthony Wayne Park, N. Y.

Berkshire Festival Tours leave every [illegible]day evening and Saturday morning starting July 8 and continuing through Aug. 14, with rates starting at $[illegible], including transportation by air-conditioned motor coaches, "[illegible]-vicinity" accommodations. All tours are personally escorted. For information call EN. 2-1405 or write Ski Bird Tours.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
MONTHLY
JUN 1960

At The Berkshire Music Center: This Summer's session will be from July 3 through Aug. 14. Boris Goldovsky, who was on sabbatical leave last summer, will reactivate the school's opera department. The world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz' one-act opera "Port Town" will be given Aug. [illegible] Other complete performances will include Puccini's "Suor Angelica" and Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnol" . . . G. Wallace Woodworth, will head the newly revised and expanded Department of Listening and Analysis. The scope of the department will enable students to learn more from the many rehearsals and concerts . . . Richard Burgin and William Kroll will head the Chamber Music Divisions. A series of seminars have been established to explore solo and ensemble playing . . . The programs and guest artists of the Boston Symphony's Berkshire Festival at the Center will include a varied fare. All 18 concerts will be given in the shed, with the first two weeks devoted to music by Bach and Mozart respectively. Special works will include Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," Beethoven's Ninth Symphony and Faure's "Requiem." Among the artists will be Claudio Arrau, Eleanor Steber, Ruggiero Ricci and Jaime Laredo.

INSIDER'S NEWSLETTER
NEW YORK, N.Y.
W. - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.
JUN 6 1960

SUMMER TUNE-UPS

Music, outdoors or on the half shell, will be the sustaining note for summer. The shortage of new Broadway musicals for strawhat playgoers has led to plans for a flock of new music festivals—for longhairs, ducktails and "folkniks" (folk music addicts). Wherever you intend to spend the summer, you are likely to be within the sound of music and the sight of famous musicians. Reminder: Some virtuosos will be in residence all season, others will be on tour, so check with the local Chamber of Commerce, state tourist bureau or any travel agent. Program notes:

Most of the new music circuses are jazz. If you can't make the big jazz festivals at Newport, R.I., French Lick, Ind., Detroit or Philadelphia, you will still be able to hear them over CBS radio or on a Columbia Records LP, "World Jazz Series."

Opera fans will have a good season too: Mozart's "Thamos, King of Egypt" makes its U.S. debut high in the Rockies at Aspen, Colo.; Jose Ferrer, actor-director, can be seen and heard in Puccini's "Gianni Schicchi" in Santa Fe, N.M. Highlight of the 9-week Santa Fe season will be Stravinsky conducting his own "Oedipus Rex", and the Berkshire Music Center reopens its Opera Department at Tanglewood, Mass. (The Department of Listening and Analysis also holds "listening rehearsals" for Tanglewood tourists.)

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y.
NEW YORKER
D. 2[illegible] S. 30,1[illegible]
JUN 19 1960

Recital Series Set at Tanglewood

Charles Munch has made known the programs to be performed by his guests at the 1960 [illegible] recitals, to be performed [illegible] Wednesday nights beginning July [illegible], will take place in the theater at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Participants in these programs, held in conjunction with the Boston Symphony Orchestra's [illegible] Quartet, the [illegible] of New York [illegible] Frank with members of the orchestra, plus Claudio Arrau in a Chopin Centenary recital and Leon Fleisher in a program of sonatas for the piano.

[illegible], Mass.
Circ. 5,1[illegible]

6/7

[illegible] Offer [illegible] For [illegible] Music

[illegible]

PIANIST JORGE BOLET

Bass Baritone DONALD GRAMM

PIANIST GARY GRAFFMAN

VIOLINIST JAIME LAREDO

PIANIST LEON FLEISHER

TENOR JOHN McCOLLUM

SOPRANO SARAMAE ENDICH

SOPRANO ELEANOR STEBER

PIANIST CLAUDIO ARRAU

PIANIST EUGENE ISTOMIN

TANGLEWOOD GUEST ARTISTS

Guest artists at Tanglewood this summer include Chilean pianist Claudio Arrau; lovely Metropolitan soprano Eleanor Steber; Violinist Ruggiero Ricci; 18-year-old Bolivian violinist Jaime Laredo, (1959 winner of Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Competition), in his first appearance with the BSO. Also top keyboard artists Jorge Bolet, Leon Fleisher, Gary Graffman, Eugene Istomin and Byron Janis, and acclaimed vocalists Saramae Endich, Donald Gramm, Freda Gray-Masse, David Laurent, John McCollum and Martial Singher.

FIRST TWO WEEKENDS, BACH AND MOZART

The first weekend of Tanglewood concerts (July 8, 9, 10) will be devoted to Bach, and the 2nd weekend (July 15, 16, 17) to Mozart. Special works, Damnation of Faust (Berlioz) will be performed August 14; Beethoven's 9th, July 31; Faure's Requiem, July 22.

FAIRS

The Great Barrington Fair opens Sunday, Sept. 11 and closes the 17th with horse racing every day except the opening day.

Hancock Fair — Racing Sept. 19 to Oct. 15 except Sundays.

LOUISVILLE, KY.
COURIER JOURNAL
D. 215,551 S. 313,605

JUN 12 1960

MUSIC NOTES By William Mootz

New Works, New Scenery Mark Cincinnati Opera

THE CINCINNATI Summer Opera will open its season on June 23 with a performance of Verdi's "Macbeth," starring Frank Guarrera and Mary Curtis-Verna.

The revolutionary and sweeping changes in scenic design which enlivened the Zoo Opera last year will share the spotlight with three operas being presented for the first time in the 39-year history of the Summer Opera. Wolfgang Roth again will be in charge of scenery and costumes. Dino Yannopoulos will return to stage the season, and Nelle Fisher once more will be the company's choreographer.

In addition to "Macbeth," the new operas are Bellini's "La Sonnambula" and Britten's "Peter Grimes."

"Sonnambula" will star Roberta Peters, a Cincinnati favorite, in her first performance anywhere of the title role.

"Peter Grimes," which won a place in the Metropolitan Opera repertory during the 1948 season, will feature Ilona Kombrink, soprano of the Toronto Opera, in her Cincinnati debut; Richard Cassilly, and James Pease.

Other works in the repertory will be "Madame Butterfly," "Carmen," "La Traviata," "Aida," "La Boheme," and "Salome."

For ticket information, write the Cincinnati Summer Opera Association, 4509 Carew Tower, Cincinnati 2, Ohio.

The schedule:

June 23 and July 1—Macbeth

June 24 and July 2—Madame Butterfly, with Phyllis Curtin and Charles Anthony

June 25 and 29—Sonnambula

June 30 and July 3—Carmen, with Gloria Lane and Richard Cassily

July 8 and 10—La Traviata, with Mary Costa and Barry Morell

July 9 and 15—Aida, with [illegible] Novich, Gloria Lane and Richard Cassily

July 14 and 16—La Boheme, with Laurel Hurley and Barry Morell

July 20 and 22—Peter Grimes

July 21 and 23—Salome, with Phyllis Curtin

Roberta Peters
Star of 'Sonnombula'

Music Festivals

FOR MUSIC LOVERS traveling east to New England or west to the Rockies, two of the country's best summer music festivals have enticing programs waiting.

The Berkshire Festival, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer showplace at Tanglewood, will be conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux.

Many well-known soloists will perform throughout the season, which runs from July 6 to August 14.

For ticket information and a brochure listing all concerts, write Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 10[illegible]

JUN 26 1960

Tanglewood Concerts Open July 6

ONE OF THE THINGS that Worcester certainly has is an attractive proximity to many cultural activities in addition to those offered here in the city. Summer theaters are within easy driving distance, Boston's great variety of musical and artistic programs are not far away, and beautiful old houses and historic sites are so readily available that most of us never manage to visit them.

To the west in summer is a world-famous musical event, the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, nearer than ever via the Massachusetts Turnpike. The festival is a six-week program of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch with an [illegible] guest artists.

This year's festival will be held July 6 to Aug. 14. Twenty-four [illegible] concerts will be given in [illegible] weekend series of Friday and Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon programs. In this series, the programs of July 8-10 will be devoted to the music of Bach, and July 15-17 to Mozart. Six chamber music concerts will be given in the theater-concert hall on Wednesday evenings. The Berkshire Festival is held at Tanglewood, the orchestra's 200-acre estate of formal gardens and woodlands, where the huge Music Shed seats 6,000 with an adjoining lawn for outdoor listening.

PIANIST JORGE BOLET

Bass Baritone DONALD GRAMM

PIANIST GARY GRAFFMAN

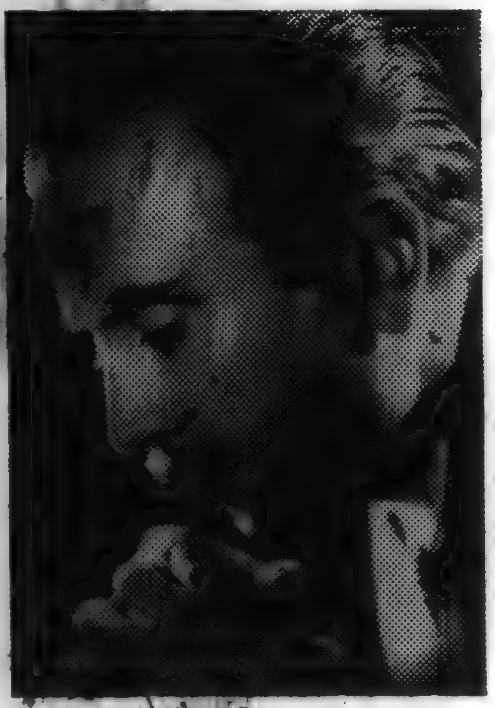
VIOLINIST JAIME LAREDO

PIANIST LEON FLEISHER

TENOR JOHN [illegible]

SOPRANO SA[illegible]

SOPRANO ELEANOR STEBER



PIANIST CLAUDIO ARRAU

PIANIST EUGENE ISTOMIN

TANGLEWOOD GUEST ARTISTS

Guest artists at Tanglewood this summer include Chilean pianist Claudio Arrau; lovely Metropolitan soprano Eleanor Steber; Violinist Ruggiero Ricci; 18-year-old Bolivian violinist Jaime Laredo, (1959 winner of Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Competition), in his first appearance with the BSO. Also top keyboard artists Jorge Bolet, Leon Fleisher, Gary Graffman, Eugene Istomin and Byron Janis, and acclaimed vocalists S[illegible] Endich, Donald Gramm, Freda [illegible] Masse, David Laurent, John McCollum and Martial Singher.

FIRST TWO WEEKENDS, BACH AND MOZART

The first weekend of Tanglewood concerts (July 8, 9, 10) will be devoted to Bach, and the 2nd weekend (July 15, 16, 17) to Mozart. Special works, Damnation of Faust (Berlioz) will be performed August 14; Beethoven's 9th, July 31; Faure's Requiem, July 22.

FAIRS

The Great Barrington Fair opens Sunday, Sept. 11 and closes the 17th with horse racing every day except the opening day.

Hancock Fair — Racing Sept. 19 to Oct. 15 except Sundays.

LOUISVILLE, KY.
COURIER JOURNAL
D. 215,551 S. 312,805

JUN 12 1960

MUSIC NOTES By William Mootz

New Works, New Scenery Mark Cincinnati Opera

THE CINCINNATI Summer Opera will open its season on June 23 with a performance of Verdi's "Macbeth," starring Frank Guarrera and Mary Curtis-Verna.

The revolutionary and sweeping changes in scenic design which enlivened the Zoo Opera last year will share the spotlight with three operas being presented for the first time in the 39-year history of the Summer Opera. Wolfgang Roth again will be in charge of scenery and costumes. Dino Yannopoulos will return to stage the season, and Nelle Fisher once more will be the company's choreographer.

In addition to "Macbeth," the new operas are Bellini's "La Sonnambula" and Britten's "Peter Grimes."

"Sonnambula" will star Roberta Peters, a Cincinnati favorite, in her first performance anywhere of the title role.

"Peter Grimes," which won a place in the Metropolitan Opera repertory during the 1948 season, will feature Ilona Kombrink, soprano of the Toronto Opera, in her Cincinnati debut; Richard Cassilly, and James Pease.

Other works in the repertory will be "Madame Butterfly," "Carmen," "La Traviata," "Aida," "La Boheme," and "Salome."

For ticket information, write the Cincinnati Summer Opera Association, 4509 Carew Tower, Cincinnati 2, Ohio.

The schedule:

June 23 and July 1—Macbeth

June 24 and July 2—Madame Butterfly, with Phyllis Curtin and Charles Anthony

June 25 and 29—Sonnambula

June 30 and July 3—Carmen, with Gloria Lane and Richard Cassily

July 8 and 10—La Traviata, with Mary Costa and Barry Morell

July 9 and 15—Aida, with [illegible] Novich, Gloria Lane and Richard Cassily

July 11 and 16—La Boheme, with Laurel Hurley and Barry Morell

Roberta Peters
Star of 'Sonnambula'

July 20 and 22—Peter Grimes

July 21 and 23—Salome, with Phyllis Curtin

Music Festivals

FOR MUSIC LOVERS traveling east to New England or west to the Rockies, two of the country's best summer music festivals have enticing programs waiting.

The Berkshire Festival, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer showplace at Tanglewood, will be conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux.

Many well-known soloists will perform throughout the season, which runs from July 6 to August 14.

For detailed information and a brochure listing all concerts, write Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

WO[illegible]

Tanglewood Conc[illegible] Open July 6

ONE OF THE THINGS that Worcester certainly has is an attractive proximity to many cultural activities in addition to those offered here in the city. Summer theaters are within [illegible]

[illegible] July 15-17 to [illegible] ber music concerts will be given in the [illegible] on Wednesday evenings. The Berkshire Festival [illegible] Tanglewood. [illegible]

FESTIVAL TIMES Page 5

The Tanglewood Program - 1960

The 18 Major concerts in the Shed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, all conducted by Charles Munch except four by Pierre Monteux on Saturday, July 23, Sunday, July 31, Sunday, August 7 and Friday, August 12.

THE ORCHESTRAL PROGRAMS

(Subject to Change)

Friday, July 8th — Munch

BACH Suite No. 1; Violin Concerto in E (Kroll); Piano Concerto in F minor (Lipkin); Triple Concerto in A minor (Pappoutsakis, Kroll, Lipkin).

Saturday, July 9th — Munch

BACH Excerpts: Musical Offering and Art of the Fugue; Piano Concerto in D minor (Lipkin); Suite No. 4.

Sunday, July 10th — Munch

BACH Suite No. 3; Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 and 2; Cantata "Christ Lag in Todesbanden".

Friday, July 15th — Munch

MOZART Bassoon Concerto (Walt); Clarinet Concerto (Cioffi); Sinfonia Concertante (Gomberg, Cioffi, Walt, Stagliano).

Saturday, July 16th — Munch

MOZART Eine kleine Nachtmusik; Piano Concerto K. 491 (Frank); Litany K. 243.

Sunday, July 17th — Munch

MOZART Symphony No. 36; Violin Concerto K. 218 (Silverstein); Symphony No. 39.

Friday, July 22nd — Munch

BEETHOVEN Eroica Symphony; FAURE Requiem (Endich, Gramm)

Saturday, July 23rd — Monteux

CHERUBINI Anacreon Overture; BEETHOVEN Piano Concerto No. 5 (Arrau); RESPIGHI Fountains of Rome; STRAUSS Till Eulenspiegel.

Sunday, July 24th — Munch

DELLO JOIO Variations, Chaconne and Finale; MENDELSSOHN Violin Concerto (Laredo); BEETHOVEN Symphony No. 5.

Friday, July 29th — Munch

STRAVINSKY Jeu de Cartes; KHRENNIKOV Symphony No. 1; RACHMANINOFF Piano Concerto No. 3 (Janis).

Saturday, July 30th — Munch

BERLIOZ Symphonie fantastique; PISTON Symphony No. 6; RAVEL Daphnis and Chloe Suite.

Sunday, July 31st — Monteux

MOZART Haffner Symphony; BEETHOVEN Ninth Symphony (Steber, Gray-Masse, McCollum, Laurent).

Friday, August 5th — Munch

WAGNER Die Meistersinger Excerpts; SIBELIUS Violin Concerto (Ricci); MENDELSSOHN Scotch Symphony.

Saturday, August 6th — Munch

BEETHOVEN Prometheus Overture; DUTILLEUX Symphony No. 2; BRAHMS Piano Concerto No. 2 (Istomin).

Sunday, August 7th — Monteux

WILLIAMS Fantasia on a Theme by Tallis; BEETHOVEN Piano Concerto No. 3 (Fleisher); BRAHMS Symphony No. 4.

Friday, August 12th — Monteux

BEETHOVEN Symphony No. 2; LISZT Piano Concerto in E flat Bolet); STRAVINSKY Firebird Suite.

Saturday, August 13th — Munch

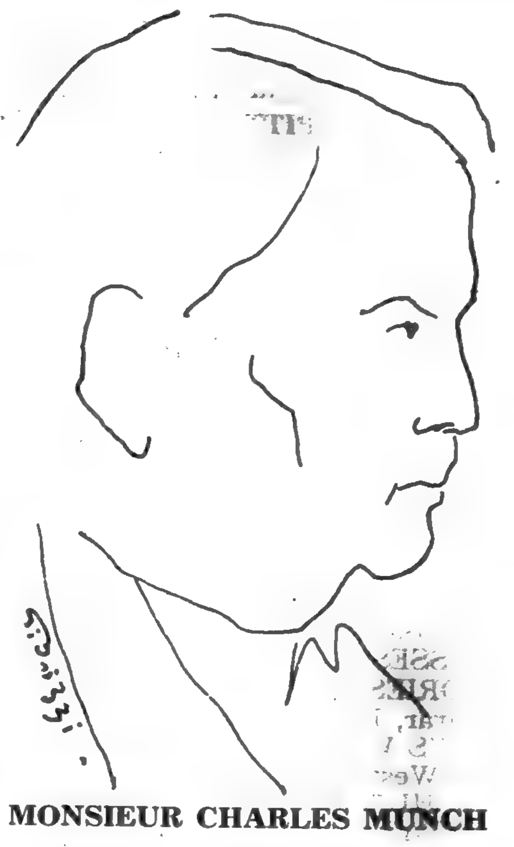
HANDEL Water Music Suite; CHOPIN Piano Concerto No. 1 (Graffman); COPLAND Symphony No. 1 (Composer conducting).

Sunday, August 14th — Munch

BERLIOZ Damnation of Faust (Steber, McCollum, Singher).

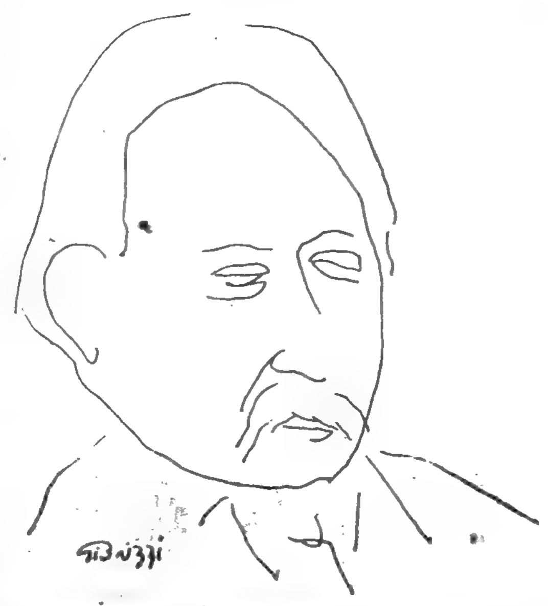
Friday and Saturday concerts 8:30 p.m.

Sunday concerts — 2:30 p.m.



MONSIEUR CHARLES MUNCH

Drawing by Richard Librizzi



MONSIEUR PIERRE MONTEUX

Drawing by Richard Librizzi

TANGLEWOOD WED. CONCERTS

There will be 6 Wednesday chamber concerts: July 6, Budapest Quartet; July 13, Pianist Claude Frank and orchestra; July 20, Pianist Claudio Arrau; July 27, Beaux Arts Trio; Aug. 3, to be announced; Aug. 10, Kroll Quartet.

SPECIAL AUG. 4 AND 11

The usual Tanglewood gala evening for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center is scheduled for Aug. 4, and Aug. 11, Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops.

TANGLEWOOD OPERA

The Tanglewood Opera Dept. under Boris Goldovsky will present Puccini's "Suor Angelica", Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnol", and world premiere of Jan Meyerowitzs "Port Town", (Aug. 4). Dates on other 2 not available at press time.

N. Y. Staats-Zeitung und Herold, Donnerstag, 9. Juni 1960

Boston Symphony Orchestra:

18 Wochenend-Konzerte während Musikfestspiele in Tanglewood

Die nun schon zu einer Tradition gewordenen Musik-Festwochen des Boston Symphony Orchesters, das Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, beginnen in diesem Jahr am Mittwoch, den 6. Juli, und werden bis einschließlich Sonntag, den 14. August, andauern.

Im Rahmen der geplanten Programme hat Charles Munch, der Dirigent und Musikdirektor der "Boston Symphony", auch wieder die beliebten Wochenend-Konzerte mit seinem Orchester angesetzt, die jeweils am Freitag und Sonnabend abends und Sonntag nachmittag in dem 6000 Personen fassenden "Music Shed" auf den Wiesen Tanglewoods stattfinden werden. 14 der insgesamt 18 Konzerte wird Mr. Munch selbst dirigieren, für die vier anderen ist der alte Freund und Maestro der Bostoner verpflichtet worden: Pierre Monteux.

Das erste dieser Wochenend-Konzerte des Boston Symphony Orchesters in Tanglewood am 8., 9. und 10. Juli ist der Musik Bachs gewidmet. Am 15., 16. und 17. Juli ist ein Mozart-Programm vorgesehen.

Höhepunkt dieser Saison versprechen die Aufführungen von Berlioz' "Fausts Verdammnis" (am 14. August), der 9. Symphonie Beethovens (am 31. Juli) und des Requiems von Fauré (am 22. Juli) zu werden.

Unter den Solisten, die im Rahmen dieser Konzerte [illegible] im Rahmen der übrigen Programme des Berkshire Music Festival gehört werden, befinden sich Claudio Arrau, der am 23. Juli Beethovens V. Klavierkonzert (das sogenannte Emperor-Concerto) spielen wird, und am 20. Juli ein Chopin-Programm plant.

Eleanor Steber, die als Solistin für die schon erwähnte Aufführung von "Damnation of Faust" sowie für die IX. Beethoven-Symphonie verpflichtet ist, des Geigers Ruggiero Ricci, der im vergangenen Jahr den Königin-Elisabeth-Preis in dem internationalen Musikwettbewerb in Brüssel gewonnen hat, und andere namhafte Künstler.

Das Budapest-Quartett und das Kroll-Quartett, das Beaux Arts Trio und der Pianist Claude Frank planen vier Kammermusikabende in fünf Mittwochveranstaltungen. Der 6. Mittwoch der Saison ist dem bereits erwähnten Chopin-Konzert Claudio Arraus vorbehalten.

Arthur Fiedler dirigiert das Boston Pops Orchester am 11. August und der jährliche Galaabend zugunsten des Berkshire Music Center ist für den [illegible] August geplant. s.

Post
NORTH HAVEN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 1,500

JUN 30 1960

the spotlight...

Tanglewood

Charles Munch returns from a Parisian holiday to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first orchestral concert of the six-week Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Friday (July 8, 8:30). Dr. Munch and the Orchestra, just returned from an eight-week tour of the Far East, will devote the first three Festival concerts to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach. Violinist William Krol, pianist Seymour Lipkin and flutist James Pappoutsakis will be soloists in the Friday evening concert.

CHATHAM, N.Y.
COURIER
W 3,796

JUN 30 1960

THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open its 1960 season Wednesday, July 6 with a chamber music concert performed by the Budapest String Quartet. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present concerts in the Music Shed on Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoons at 2:30 beginning July 8. Charles Munch, above, music director of the Boston Symphony, has invited Pierre Monteux, the Orchestra's beloved 'conductor emeritus' and a brilliant group of soloists to be his guests throughout the season which concludes August 14.

The Tanglewood Program - 1960

The 18 Major [illegible] in [illegible] by the Boston [illegible] all conducted [illegible] Charles Munch except four b[illegible]re Monteux on Saturday, July [illegible] Sunday, July 31, Sunday, August [illegible] and Friday, August 12.

THE ORCHESTRAL PROGRAMS

(Subject to Change)

Friday, July 8th — Munch

BACH Suite No. 1; Violin Concerto in E (Kroll); Piano Concerto in F minor (Lipkin); Triple Concerto in A minor (Pappoutsakis, Kroll, Lipkin).

Saturday, July 9th — Munch

BACH Excerpts: Musical Offering and Art of the Fugue; Piano Concerto in D minor (Lipkin); Suite No. 4.

Sunday, July 10th — Munch

BACH Suite No. 3; Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 and 2; Cantata "Christ Lag in Todesbanden".

Friday, July 15th — Munch

MOZART Bassoon Concerto (Walt); Clarinet Concerto (Cioffi); Sinfonia Concertante (Gomberg, Cioffi, Walt, Stagliano).

Saturday, July 16th — Munch

MOZART Eine kleine Nachtmusik; Piano Concerto K. 491 (Frank); Litany K. 243.

Sunday, July 17th — Munch

MOZART Symphony No. 36; Violin Concerto K. 218 (Silverstein); Symphony No. 39.

Friday, July 22nd — Munch

BEETHOVEN Eroica Symphony; FAURE Requiem (Endich, Gramm)

Saturday, July 23rd — Monteux

CHERUBINI Anacreon Overture; BEETHOVEN Piano Concerto No. 5 (Arrau); RESPIGHI Fountains of Rome; STRAUSS Till Eulenspiegel.

Sunday, July 24th — Munch

DELLO JOIO Variations, Chaconne and Finale; MENDELSSOHN Violin Concerto (Laredo); BEETHOVEN Symphony No. 5.

Friday, July 29th — Munch

STRAVINSKY Jeu de Cartes; KHRENNIKOV Symphony No. 1; RACHMANINOFF Piano Concerto No. 3 (Janis).

Saturday, July 30th — Munch

BERLIOZ Symphonie fantastique; PISTON Symphony No. 6; RAVEL Daphnis and Chloe Suite.

Sunday, July 31st — Monteux

MOZART Haffner Symphony; BEETHOVEN Ninth Symphony (Steber, Gray-Masse, McCollum, Laurent).

Friday, August 5th — Munch

WAGNER Die Meistersinger Excerpts; SIBELIUS Violin Concerto (Ricci); MENDELSSOHN Scotch Symphony.

Saturday, August 6th — Munch

BEETHOVEN Prometheus Overture; DUTILLEUX Symphony No. 2; BRAHMS Piano Concerto No. 2 (Istomin).

Sunday, August 7th — Monteux

WILLIAMS Fantasia on a Theme by Tallis; BEETHOVEN Piano Concerto No. 3 (Fleisher); BRAHMS Symphony No. 4.

Friday, August 12th — Monteux

BEETHOVEN Symphony No. 2; LISZT Piano Concerto in E flat Bolet); STRAVINSKY Firebird Suite.

Saturday, August 13th — Munch

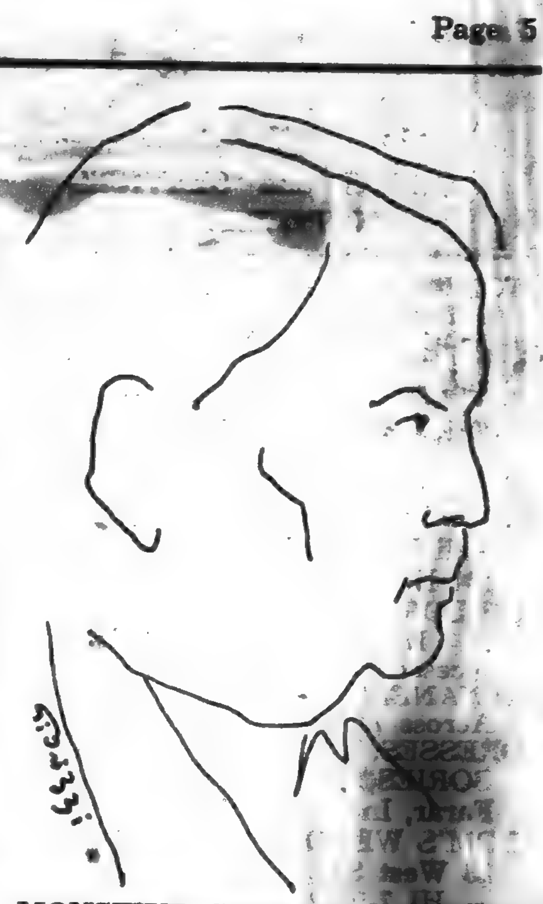
HANDEL Water Music Suite; CHOPIN Piano Concerto No. 1 (Graffman); COPLAND Symphony No. 1 (Composer conducting).

Sunday, August 14th — Munch

BERLIOZ Damnation of Faust (Steber, McCollum, Singher).

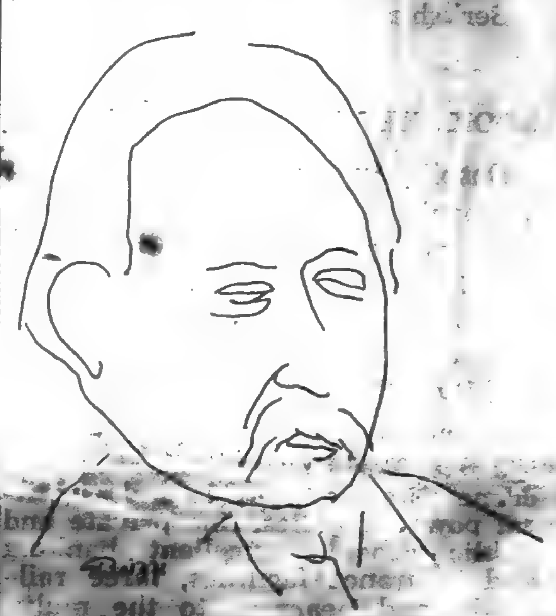
Friday and Saturday concerts 8:30 p.m.

Sunday concerts — 2:30 p.m.



MONSIEUR CHARLES MUNCH

Drawing by Richard Librizzi



MONSIEUR PIERRE MONTEUX

Drawing by Richard Librizzi

TANGLEWOOD WED. CONCERTS

There will be 6 Wednesday chamber concerts: July 6, Budapest Quartet; July 13, Pianist Claude Frank and orchestra; July 20, Pianist Claudio Arrau; July 27, Beaux Arts Trio; Aug. 3, to be announced; Aug. 10, Kroll Quartet.

SPECIAL AUG. 4 AND 11

The usual Tanglewood gala evening for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center is scheduled for Aug. 4, and Aug. 11, Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops.

TANGLEWOOD OPERA

The Tanglewood Opera Dept. under Boris Goldovsky will present Puccini's "Suor Angelica", Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnol", and world premiere of Jan Meyerowitzs "Port Town", (Aug. 4). Dates on other 2 not available at press time.

N. Y. Staats-Zeitung und Herold, Donnersta[illegible] 9. Juni 1960

Boston Symphony Orchestra

18 Weekend-Konzerte während Musikfestspiele in Tanglewood

Die nun schon zu einer Tradition gewordenen Musik-Festwochen des Boston Symphony Orchesters, das Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, beginnen in diesem Jahr am Mittwoch, den 6. Juli, und werden bis einschließlich Sonntag, den 14. August, andauern.

Im Rahmen der geplanten Programme hat Charles Munch, der Dirigent und Musikdirektor der "Boston Symphony", [illegible] die [illegible] Weekend-Konzerte mit seinem Orchester angesetzt, [illegible] am Freitag und Sonnabend abends und Sonntag nachmittags in dem 6000 [illegible] "Music Shed" auf den Wiesen Tanglewoods stattfinden werden. 14 der insgesamt 18 Konzerte wird Mr. Munch selbst dirigieren, für die vier anderen ist der alte Freund und Maestro der Bostoner verpflichtet worden: Pierre Monteux.

Das erste dieser Wochenend-Konzerte des Boston Symphony Orchesters in Tanglewood am 8., 9. und 10. Juli ist der Musik Bachs gewidmet. Am 15., 16. und 17. Juli ist ein Mozart-Programm vorgesehen.

[illegible] dieser [illegible] Aufführungen [illegible] Berlioz' "Fausts Verdammnis" (am 14. August), der 9. Sinfonie Beethovens (am [illegible]) und des Requiems [illegible] (am 22. Juli) zu [illegible] den Solisten [illegible] dieser [illegible] Rahmen der [illegible] Festival gehört [illegible] 23. Juli [illegible] [illegible] Königin-Elisabeth-[illegible] [illegible] Das Budapest[illegible] Kroll-Quartett [illegible] Trio und [illegible] [illegible]

Post
NORTH HAVEN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 1,500

JUN 30 1960

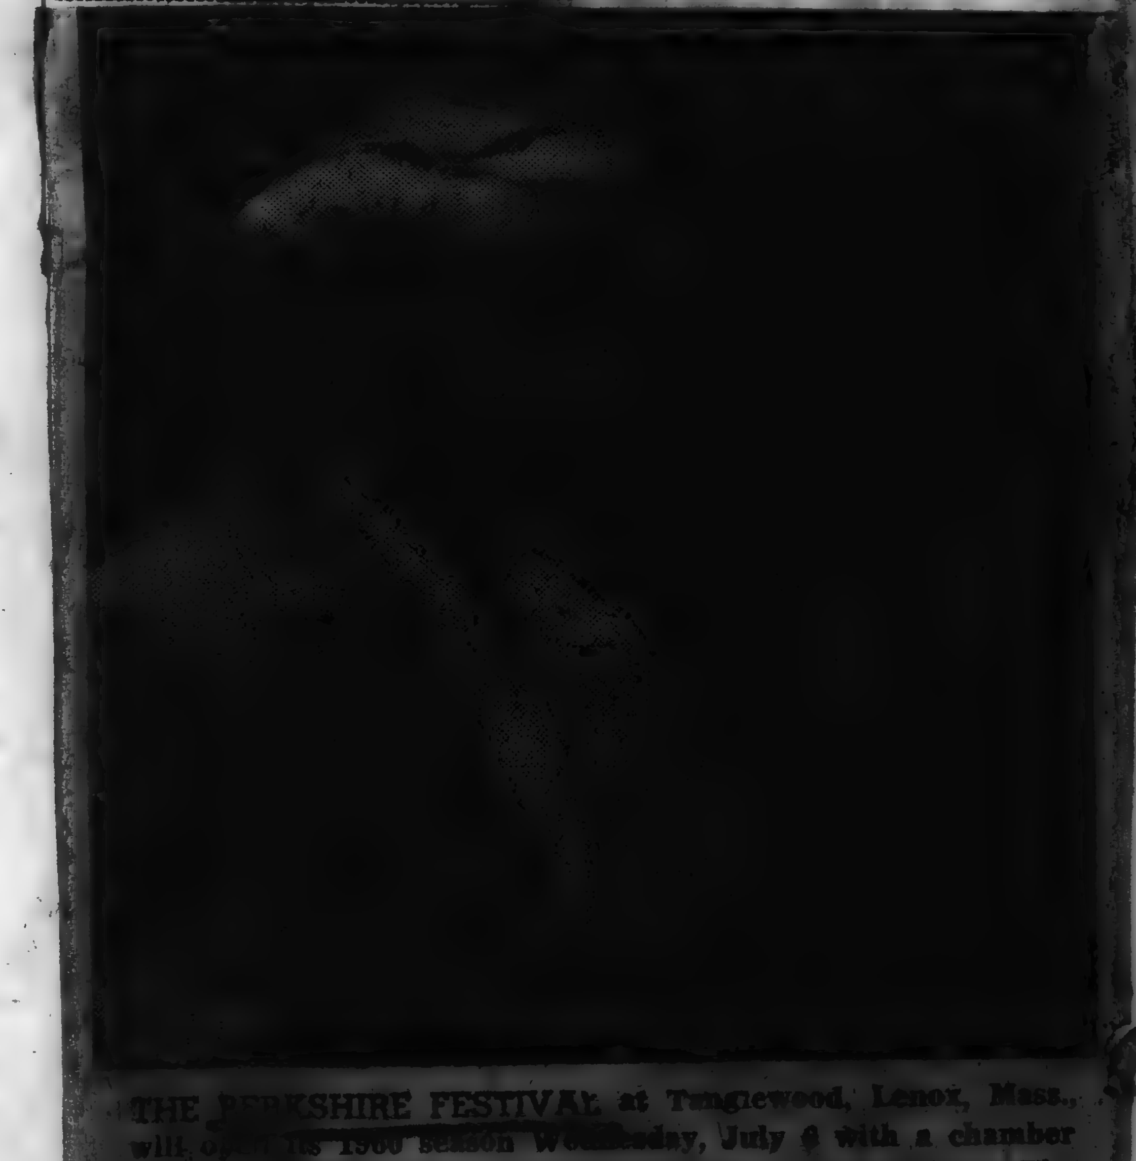
the spotlight...

Tanglewood

Charles Munch returns from a Parisian holiday to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first orchestral concert of the six-week Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Friday (July 8, 8:30). Dr. Munch and the Orchestra, just returned from an eight-week tour of the Far East, will devote the first three Festival concerts to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach. Violinist William Krol, pianist Seymour Lipkin and flutist James Pappoutsakis will be soloists in the Friday evening concert.

CHATHAM, N.Y.
COURIER
W. 3,788

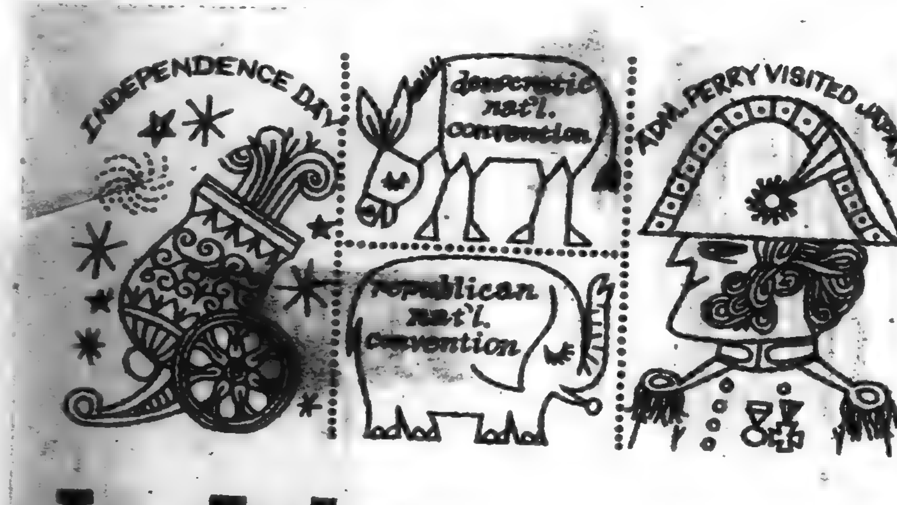
JUN 30 1960



THE BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will open its 1960 season Wednesday, July 6 with a chamber music concert performed by the Budapest String Quartet. The Boston Symphony Orchestra will present concerts in the Music Shed on Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoons at 2:30 beginning July 8. Charles Munch, above, music director of the Boston Symphony, has invited Pierre Monteux, the Orchestra's [illegible] 'conductor emeritus' and a brilliant group of soloists to be his guests throughout the season which concludes August 14.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635

JUL 3 1960



In July

A list of events, anniversaries and other notable dates coming up this month.

All-conquering heat, oh, intermit thy wrath!
—JAMES THOMSON.

3 *"Yesterday the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America; and a greater perhaps never was, nor will be, decided among men. A resolution was passed * * * that those United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States."*—From a letter of John Adams to Mrs. Adams, July 3, 1776. (The resolution was that of Richard Henry Lee of Virginia and was adopted by the Continental Congress.)

4 Independence Day ("Let independence be our boast,/ Ever mindful what it cost;/ Ever grateful for the prize,/ Let its altar reach the skies!"—Joseph Hopkinson). . . . The new fifty-star United States flag to be officially adopted, marking admission of Hawaii as the fiftieth state. . . . Three former Presidents died on this day: John Adams and Thomas Jefferson in 1826 and James Monroe in 1831.

6 The Berkshire Festival to begin at "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass.

11 Democratic National Convention to open in Los Angeles, with delegates from the fifty states, the District of Columbia, the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico and the Canal Zone; a simple majority of the 1,521 delegate votes is required to nominate a candidate.

14 Bastille Day in France . . . 1853: Commodore Matthew C. Perry met Japanese officials on Kurihama Beach, Japan, and delivered to them a letter for the Emperor from President Millard Fillmore, requesting establishment of Japanese-American trade relations. Less than a year later, Japan opened her ports to American commercial interests for the first time in history.

16 1945: The first atomic explosion at Alamogordo, N. M., at 5:30 A. M., Mountain War Time ("And just at that instant there rose from the bowels of the earth a light not of this world, the light of many suns in one."—From a description of the test by William L. Laurence).

18 Twenty years ago: President Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated unanimously for a third term by delegates to the Democratic Convention in Chicago.

25 Delegates to the Republican National Convention from fifty states, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and the District of Columbia to meet at the International Amphitheatre, Chicago, Ill. A majority of the 1,331 delegate votes will be required to nominate a candidate for President.

27 1953: "Hey, G. I., no more shoot - shoot. We both go home!"—The shout of Communist soldiers across the battlefield as an armistice ended the Korean war.

28 1932: Federal troops drove more than 15,000 unemployed war veterans seeking "war bonuses" out of Washington. ("A bad-looking mob animated by the spirit of revolution."—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of the Federal troops; "Just think what 15,000 clubwomen would have done in Washington even if they wasn't hungry."—Will Rogers; *"Soup is cheaper than tear bombs * * * "*—Congressman Fiorello La Guardia). . . . 1945: The U. S. Senate ratified the United Nations Charter.

NEWSWEEK
NEW YORK, N.Y.
W. 1,299,183

JUN 20 1960

MUSIC

Singing Summer Breezes

Backstage at the Carter Barron Amphitheater in Washington's wooded Rock Creek Park, the atmosphere was abuzz with hectic activity—perspiring electricians were checking the light board, technicians were adjusting the sound system, and cleaners were swabbing the concrete floors of the dressing rooms.

With local variations, this was the scene being duplicated last week from the concrete tiers of Lewisohn Stadium in New York to the sweeping lawns of Ravinia Park in Chicago and out to the terraced splendor of the Hollywood Bowl in Los Angeles.

Summer was again at hand, and the voice of the loudspeaker would soon be heard blaring out across the land.

As outdoor entertainment centers go, Carter Barron is a relative newcomer, just entering its tenth year. However, its remarkable attendance figures (350,000-400,000 in a city of 825,000) have made it a success story envied by many of the older institutions which cater to the American appetite for moving its culture, as well as its cooking, out of doors once summer comes.

Built for nearly [illegible] million by the Department of the Interior and the National Capital Park Department to help celebrate the capital's sesquicentennial, Carter Barron opened in 1950 with Paul Green's "Faith of Our Fathers." Green's "symphonic drama" [illegible] the following season, but folded after a month's run. It was not until 1954 that the amphitheater found a stable management in two Washington brothers named Israel and Irvin Feld.

Full House: While the Feld brothers concede that "it takes plenty of guts" to run an outdoor entertainment operation like Carter Barron, their formula for material success is much more specific. It hinges on a sales device which they call "Value Books." The coupons contained in these little booklets cost only $3.50, but if fully utilized they are worth $46.50. For example, some are worth 50 cents toward the price of a regular ticket (the top is only $3.85), and others bring one free ticket for each one purchased. Still others bring price reductions on phonograph records and accessories bought at any one of the four Feld-owned Super Music City Stores in Washington. Most of the ticket bargains are good only for the weakest nights at the box office, Sunday through Thursday nights. "It is better to have a full house with 2,500 paid admissions," explains 39-year-old Irvin, "than to have artists play to 300 or 400 people."

On the esthetic side, Feld strong points include what 43-year-old Iz calls "a site of genuine natural beauty . . . and the best entertainers there are." This season's attractions at Carter Barron include Carol Channing's touring "Show Business," which opens the amphitheater this week, popular singers like Johnny Mathis and Ella Fitzgerald, two weeks of ballet, and a week of opera. "We tried having seasons of guest artists with the National Symphony," says Irvin, "and we couldn't even get our grosses. Washington people see so much of this during the winter, they apparently don't want it during the summer."

But what makes one bowl's hit can produce another's turkey. While Carter Barron doesn't go for big-name classical soloists, audiences at the Hollywood Bowl demand them. And if the vacationists in the Berkshires won't buy programs of seldom-heard music at Tanglewood, the musically hep socialites who support Caramoor won't stand for anything else. The nation's hot-weather tastes are as broad as the land itself.

Other major U.S. and Canadian summer music attractions:

▶Caramoor (June 18-July 3). The nation's most elegant festival, held on the magnificently landscaped Rosen estate outside Katonah, N.Y., features English music this year.

▶Newport (Folk Festival, June 24-26; Jazz Festival, June 30-July 4). Rhode Island jumps as the aficionados gather at Freebody Park.

▶Ravinia (June 28-Aug. [illegible]). Chicago's North Shore citadel of the [illegible] still emphasizes symphonic music, although a little jazz has crept in.

▶Lewisohn Stadium (June 21-Aug. 6). New York's own Mrs. Charles S. (Minnie) Guggenheimer holds forth again, along with the New York Philharmonic, assorted guest artists, and equally assorted guest conductors.

▶Empire State (July 7-Aug. 7). Until the festival's new home near Tuxedo Park is completed, performances are being held in Harriman State Park near Bear Mountain, N.Y.

▶Tanglewood (July 6-Aug. 14). Once again, Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony stick by the tried and true repertory in the beautiful surroundings of the Berkshires near Lenox, Mass.

▶Vancouver (July [illegible]-Aug. 16). The third season of this most enterprising new festival will highlight Britten's "Noye's Fludde" and the North American debut of the famous Peking Opera.

▶Hollywood Bowl (July 5-Sept. 3). New manager George A. Kuyper seems not to have changed the Bowl's policies: A nearly two-to-one choice of the classics over the "pops."

▶Monterey (July 23-[illegible]). California's answer to Newport, held on the 22-acre oak-lined Monterey County Fairgrounds, and thus far free from Newport's taint of commercialism.

▶Santa Fe ([illegible]-Aug. 20). Opera under New Mexican skies offers "The Gondoliers," with Martyn Green, "Oedipus Rex," with Stravinsky conducting.

Newsweek—Jim Mahan

Irvin and Israel Feld: Natural beauty, coupon books, 'plenty of guts'

NEW YORK, N.Y.
POST
D. 328,402 S. 262,240

JUN 29 1960

Berkshire Festival to Open With Bach at Lenox July 8

The Berkshire Festival featuring the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, will open at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 8 and continue for six weeks through Aug. 14. The initial week-end is all-Bach, including the Piano Concerto in F Minor, with Seymour Lipkin as soloist.

Highlights of succeeding events are: Faure's "Requiem," July 22; Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite No. 2 with Festival Chorus, July 30; Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, July 31; Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust," Aug. 14.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,920

JUL 1 1960

Musical Events

The Annual Concert of the Carvette School of Music will be held at the Danbury High School on July 6.

The six-week Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., on July 8.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037

JUL 5 - 1960

Munch To Direct Tanglewood Series

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is back from a vacation in Europe.

He will conduct the summer series of concerts at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
MIRROR
D. 847,979 S. 1,275,193

JUL 5 1960

Conductor Returns

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, arrived at Idlewild Airport yesterday after a Paris holiday. Munch is en route to Tanglewood, Mass., to begin his Summer concerts.

Berkshire Series

The Budapest Quartet will open the Berkshire Festival's Wednesday night chamber music series at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on July 6 with works by Schubert and Ravel and the Heitor Villa-Lobos' Quartet No. 17, composed last year. Two Mozart piano quartets and Beethoven's last sonata are in the tentative program to be played by Claude Frank and Boston Symphony instrumentalists on July 13, and Claudio Arrau will play a Chopin program July 20.

The Beaux Arts Trio will present works of Beethoven, Ravel and Brahms on July 27, and Leon Fleisher will play sonatas by Liszt, Schubert and Leon Kirchner on Aug. 3. The Kroll Quartet will wind up the series on Aug. 10 with music by Haydn, Walter Piston and Beethoven.

Tribune 6/13/60

16

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 814,189 S. 1,254,835

JUL 3 1960

INDEPENDENCE DAY democratic nat'l. convention republican nat'l. convention
ADM. PERRY VISITED JAPAN

In July

A list of events, anniversaries and other notable dates coming up this month.

All-conquering heat, oh, intermit thy wrath!
—James Thomson.

3 *"Yesterday the greatest question was decided which ever was debated in America; and a greater perhaps never was, nor will be, decided among men. A resolution was passed * * * that those United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent States."*—[illegible] letter of John Adams to Mrs. Adams, July 3, 1776. (The resolution was that of Richard Henry Lee of Virginia and was adopted by the Continental Congress.)

4 "Independence Day" [illegible] ("Let independence be our boast,/ Ever mindful what it cost;/ Ever grateful for the prize,/ Let its altar reach the skies."—Joseph Hopkinson) ... The new fifty-star United States flag to be officially adopted, marking admission of Hawaii as the fiftieth state. ... Three former Presidents died on this day: John Adams and Thomas Jefferson in 1826 and James Monroe in 1831.

5 The Berkshire Festival to begin at "Tanglewood," Lenox, Mass.

11 Democratic National Convention to open in Los Angeles, with delegates from the fifty states, the District of Columbia, the Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico and the Canal Zone; a simple majority of the 1,521 delegate votes is required to nominate a candidate.

14 Bastille Day in France ... 1853: Commodore Matthew C. Perry met Japanese officials on Kurihama Beach, Japan, and delivered to them a letter for the Emperor from President Millard Fillmore, requesting establishment of Japanese-American trade relations. Less than a year later, Japan opened her ports to American commercial interests for the first time in history.

16 1945: The first atomic explosion at Alamogordo, N. M., at 5:30 A. M., Mountain War Time ("And just at that instant there rose from the bowels of the earth a light not of this world, the light of many suns in one."—From a description of the test by William L. Laurence).

18 Twenty years ago: President Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated unanimously for a third term by delegates to the Democratic Convention in Chicago.

25 Delegates to the Republican National Convention from fifty states, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and the District of Columbia to meet at the International Amphitheatre, Chicago, Ill. A majority of the 1,331 delegate votes will be required to nominate a candidate for President.

27 1953: "Hey, G. I., no more shoot - shoot. We both go home!"—The shout of Communist soldiers across the battlefield as an armistice ended the Korean war.

28 1932: Federal troops drove more than 15,000 unemployed war veterans seeking "war bonuses" out of Washington. ("A bad-looking mob animated by the spirit of revolution."—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of the Federal troops; "Just think what 15,000 clubwomen would have done in Washington even if they wasn't hungry."—Will Rogers; *"Soup is cheaper than tear bombs * * ."—Congressman Fiorello La Guardia). ... 1945: The U. S. Senate ratified the United Nations Charter.

NEWSWEEK
NEW YORK, N.Y.
W. 1,299,183

JUN 20 1960

MUSIC

Singing Summer Breezes

Backstage at the Carter Barron Amphitheater in Washington's wooded Rock Creek Park, the atmosphere was abuzz with hectic activity—perspiring electricians were checking the light board, technicians were adjusting the sound system, and cleaners were swabbing the concrete floors of the dressing rooms.

With local variations, this was the scene being duplicated last week from the concrete tiers of Lewisohn Stadium in New York to the sweeping lawns of Ravinia Park in Chicago and out to the terraced splendor of the Hollywood Bowl in Los Angeles.

Summer was again at hand, and the voice of the loudspeaker would soon be heard blaring out across the land.

As outdoor entertainment centers go, Carter Barron is a relative newcomer, just entering its tenth year. However, its remarkable attendance figures [illegible],000-[illegible] in a city [illegible],000) have made it a [illegible] story envied by [illegible] older institutions [illegible] to the [illegible] for moving [illegible] as its [illegible] once [illegible] million by the [illegible] of the Interior and [illegible] Capital Park [illegible] to help celebrate [illegible]'s sesquicentennial [illegible] Barron opened [illegible] with Paul Green's [illegible] "Our Fathers" [illegible] symphonic drama" [illegible] the following [illegible] folded after a month's run. It was not until 1954 that the amphitheater found a stable management in two Washington brothers named Israel and Irvin Feld.

[illegible] While the Feld brothers concede that "it takes plenty of guts" to run an outdoor entertainment operation like Carter Barron, their formula for material success is much more specific. It hinges on a sales device which they call "Value Books." The coupons contained in these little booklets cost only $3.50, but if fully utilized they are worth $46.50. For example, some are worth 50 cents toward the price of a regular ticket (the top is only $3.85), and others bring one free ticket for each one purchased. Still others bring price reductions on phonograph records and [illegible] bought at any one of the four Feld-owned Super Music City Stores in Washington. Most of the ticket bargains are good only for the weakest [illegible] at the box office, Sunday through [illegible] nights. "It is better to have a full house with 2,500 paid admissions," explains 39-year-old Irvin, "than to have artists play to 300 or 400 people."

On the esthetic side, Feld [illegible] points include [illegible] is only [illegible] site of [illegible] beauty [illegible] and the best entertainers there are." This season's attractions at Carter Barron include Carol Channing's touring "Show Business," which opens the amphitheater this week, popular singers like Johnny Mathis and Ella Fitzgerald, two weeks of ballet, and a week of opera. "We tried having seasons of guest artists with the National Symphony," says Irvin, "and we couldn't even get our grosses. Washington people see so much of this during the winter, they apparently don't want it during the summer."

But what makes one bowl's hit can produce another's turkey. While Carter Barron doesn't go for big-name classical soloists, audiences at the Hollywood Bowl demand them. And if the vacationists in the Berkshires won't buy programs of seldom-heard music at Tanglewood, the musically hep socialites who support Caramoor won't stand for anything else. The nation's hot-weather tastes are as broad as the land itself.

Other major U.S. and Canadian summer music attractions:

▶Caramoor (June 18-July [illegible]): [illegible] tion's most elegant fes[illegible] magnificently landsca[illegible] outside Katonah, N.Y. [illegible] music this year.

▶Newport (Folk Festival, [illegible]; Jazz Festival, June 30-July [illegible]): [illegible] band jumps as the aficionados [illegible] Freebody [illegible]

▶Ravinia [illegible] North Sh[illegible] emphasiz[illegible] a little [illegible]

▶Lewisohn [illegible] (Ju[illegible] New Y[illegible] Mrs. [illegible]

(Minnie) Guggenheimer holds forth again, along with the New York Philharmonic, a [illegible] guest artists and [illegible] guest conductors [illegible] (July [illegible] 7) [illegible] the festival [illegible] Park is completed, pe[illegible] ing held in Harriman [illegible] near Bear Mountain, N.Y.

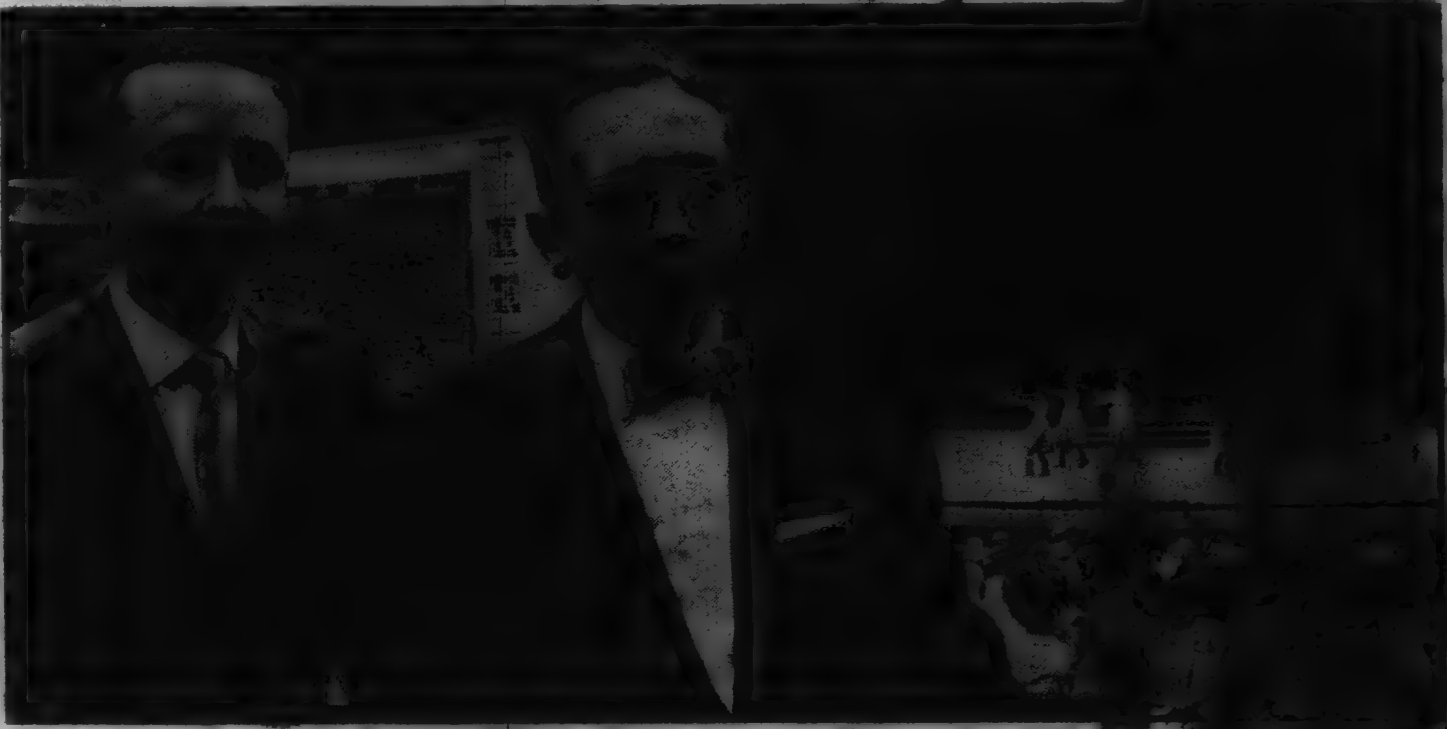
▶Tanglewood (July 6[illegible]): Once again, Charles Munch [illegible] Pierre Monteux and the Boston [illegible] stick by the tried and true [illegible] in their beautiful surroundings [illegible] the Berkshires near Lenox, Mass.

▶Vancouver (July [illegible] Aug. 16). The third season of this [illegible] new festival will highlight [illegible] "Noye's Fludde" and the North American debut of the famous Peking Opera.

▶Hollywood Bowl (July 5-Sept. 3). New manager George [illegible] seems not to have changed the [illegible] policies. A nearly two-to-one [illegible] of the classics over the "pops."

▶Monterey (July 23[illegible]): California's answer to Newport, ha[illegible] the 22-acre oak-lined Monterey [illegible] Fairgrounds, and thus far free from Newport's taint of commercialism.

▶Santa [illegible] Aug. 20): Opera [illegible] skies offers "The [illegible] Green, "Oedi[illegible] conducting.



Irvin and Israel Feld: Natural beauty, coupon books, 'plenty of guts'

NEW YORK, N.Y.
POST
D. 328,402 S. 282,240

JUN 29 1960

Berkshire Festival [illegible] With Bach at Lenox July 8

The Berkshire Festival featuring the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, will open at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 8 and continue for six weeks through Aug. 14. The initial week-end is all-Bach, in[illegible] [illegible] with [illegible] as soloist.

Highlights of succeeding events are: Faure's "Requiem," July 22; Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloe" Suite No. 2 with Festival Chorus, July 30; Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, July 31; Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust," Aug. 14.

Berkshire Series

The Budapest Quartet will open the Berkshire Festival's Wednesday night chamber music series at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., on July 6 with works by Schubert and Ravel and the [illegible] Villa-Lobos' Quartet No. 17, composed last year. Two Mozart piano quartets and Beethoven's last sonata are in the tentative program to be played by Claude Frank and Boston Symphony instrumentalists on July 13, and Claudio Arrau will play a Chopin program July 20.

The Beaux Arts Trio will present works of Beethoven, Ravel and Brahms on July 27, and Leon Fleisher will play sonatas by Liszt, Schubert and Leon Kirchner on Aug. 3. The Kroll Quartet will wind up the series on Aug. 10 with music by Haydn, Walter Piston and Beethoven.

Tribune 6/13/60

NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,920

JUL 1 1960

Musical Events

The Annual Concert of the Carvette School of Music will be held at the Danbury High School on July 6.

The six-week Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra opens at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., July 8.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037

JUL 5 1960

Munch To Direct Tanglewood Series

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is back from a vacation in Europe.

He will conduct the [illegible]

NEW YORK, N.Y.
MIRROR
D. 847,878 S. 1,275,193

JUL 5 1960

Conductor Returns

[illegible]

17

CHICAGO, ILL.
NEWS
D. 535,978 SAT. 528,942
JUN 4 1960

U.S. Festivals Hit a Mature Note

BY DON HENAHAN
Daily News Music Critic

IF YOU have wondered recently whether you might not be getting a bit older, perhaps this will settle the question for you:

Several American music festivals this summer will be putting on special Aaron Copland programs—in honor of the composer's 60th birthday.

At Aspen, Colo., 7-900 feet up in the cool Rockies, Copland and composer Peter Mennin will be on hand for a Conference on American Music, a topic that easily generates heated opinions.

* * *

IN ADDITION, the 10-week Aspen season (June 29-Sept. 4) will feature part one of a two-year Beethoven cycle; performances of Wolf-Ferrari's rarely heard opera "The Inquisitive Woman"; Hugo Wolf centenary programs, and the U.S. premiere of Mozart's music to "Thamos, King of Egypt."

Izler Soloman returns for his fifth season as Aspen's conductor.

Composer-in-residence Darius Milhaud will conduct a program of his own works. Chicagoans Ray Still, oboe, and Philip Farkas, horn, will be among the performers and will teach at the Aspen Music School.

Honor Copland At Berkshire

Copland will be honored at the Berkshire Festival this summer in a special concert of his piano works, played by William Masselos.

This salute to the American composer will be part of the annual activities at Tanglewood sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago.

The six-week festival (July-Aug. 14) at the 210-acre estate near Lenox in the hills of western Massachusetts will feature 18 concerts by the Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux.

Special weeks will be devoted to Bach and Mozart, and there will be performances of Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust," Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, and the Faure Requiem. Soloists include Arrau, Ricci, Bolet, Graffman, Isotomin, Fleisher and Janis.

* * *

Promenade

JULY 1960

Just out of Town

American Shakespeare Festival—The Bard performed in lovely setting on Housatonic River, Stratford, Connecticut, just 57 miles from New York City (Connecticut Turnpike, Exit 32; Merritt Parkway, Exits 51 and 53; or New Haven Railroad). Repertory performances of Twelfth Night, directed by Jack Landau . . . The Tempest, directed by William Ball . . . Antony and Cleopatra, starring Katharine Hepburn and Robert Ryan. Tues.-Sun. 8:30; Wed., Sat., Sun. mat. at 3. For tickets call CA 6-6047.

Westport Country Playhouse—Westport, Connecticut (Connecticut Turnpike, Exit 18; Merritt Parkway, Exit 42). Thru 2nd, Two for the Seesaw . . . 4th-9th, Sam Levene in Make a Million . . . 11th-16th, No Concern of Mine . . . 18th-23rd, Not in the Book, mystery with Hans Conried . . . 25th-30th, Betsy Palmer in the London comedy, Roar like a Dove. Mon.-Fri. 8:40; Wed. mat. 2:40; Sat. 6 and 9; closed Sun. For tickets, call CI 6-1614.

Paper Mill Playhouse—Millburn, New Jersey. Just 21 miles from New York City, this 900-seat theatre is producing a summer festival in cooperation with Westport Country Playhouse. Thru 2nd, Arlene Francis, Kent Smith and George Grizzard in Amphitryon 38, Jean Giraudoux-S.N. Behrman comedy . . . 4th-16th, Shelley Winters in Two for the Seesaw . . . 18th-30th, Royal Enclosure, starring Celeste Holm and Cathleen Nesbitt. Eves. at 8:30; Wed., Sat. at 2:30; closed Sun. Box office, DRexel 6-4343.

Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival—Lee, Massachusetts. Thru 2nd, The Nimura Company . . . 5th-9th, Ballet Espanol Ximenez-Vargas . . . 12th-16th, Robert Joffrey Ballet, with Maria Tallchief: Indrani and Her Indian Dancers . . . 19th-23rd, Les Grands Ballets Canadiens . . . 26th-30th, The Washington Ballet. Thru 9th, Thurs.-Sat. eves.; Fri., Sat. mats. Thereafter, Tues.-Sat. eves., Fri., Sat. mats.

1960 Berkshire Festival — Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. From 6th, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch gives six Friday and Saturday night and Sunday afternoon concerts in the Music Shed. The first two weekends are devoted to Bach and Mozart. Eves. at 8:30; afternoons, 2:30.

Jewish Civic Leader
WORCESTER, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 14,200

JUL 21 1960

1960 Berkshire Festival Continues Through August 14

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will take up its summer residence in the beautiful hills of Lenox, Mass., where it will present the 1960 Berkshire Festival from July 6 through August 14. The Festival is held at Tanglewood, the Orchestra's 210-acre estate of formal gardens, ancient hemlock, and tall pines.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Orchestra, will conduct 14 of the Festival concerts.

The revered octogenarian Pierre Monteux, a former Music Director of the Orchestra, will guest conduct one concert in each of the four final Festival weekends. A group of brilliant soloists will also be featured.

To accommodate the large audiences for the concerts, all Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon programs will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed under the new Talbot Memorial Canopy which was installed last summer. Those who prefer may listen to these concerts from the Great Lawn which adjoins the Shed.

The Orchestra's famed summer school of Music, the Berkshire Music Center, will be in session during the Festival.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635
JUN 26 1960

THE WORLD OF MUSIC

'Katia's' Journey to Bear Mountain Is Result of 31-Year-Old Enthusiasm

By ROSS PARMENTER

WHEN an event takes place, often its occurrence can be traced to the initial enthusiasm of a single man. This will be the case next month when Janacek's "Katia Kabanova" is given at the Empire State Festival at Harriman State Park near Bear Mountain.

Laszlo Halasz is the man, and his enthusiasm for the opera began thirty-one years ago. The year was 1929, which was when Mr. Halasz went to Czechoslovakia to serve as George Szell's assistant at the Prague Opera. Janacek had died the year before and his country was honoring his memory by many performances of his operas.

Mr. Halasz, who was then 24 and who was hearing those operas for the first time, was particularly taken by three of them, "Jenufa," "The Cunning Little Vixen" and, most of all, "Katia Kabanova." He conceived the ambition to conduct or produce all three of them, and he had this in the back of his mind when he first came to the United States in 1936.

Lost Chance

He almost had the chance to present "Jenufa" with the New York City Opera in the spring of 1952, and Dimitri Mitropoulos had agreed to conduct the performances. But three months before that season took place members of the board of the City Center ousted Mr. Halasz from his position as artistic and music director of the company.

Since then Mr. Halasz has become associated with the Empire State Festival and this spring, when Frank Forest, the general manager of the festival, approached the conductor for ideas for operas to be given this year, Mr. Halasz saw his opportunity for giving the one he likes best of his three favorite Janacek operas. He suggested "Katia." Mr. Forest agreed, and the performances July 22 and 30 will result.

These performances will be the first of the opera in this country with orchestra. However, the first one will not be the United States première. That honor belongs to Karamu House in Cleveland, which presented the opera for a month's run that began on Nov. 26, 1957. It was one of the operas that Benno D. Frank and Helmuth Wolfes have been staging at the Cleveland settlement house in the last decade. It was given with the accompaniment of a piano in the house's 140-seat Arena Theatre.

The score of "Katia" calls for a large orchestra whose accompaniment has an almost independent existence from the vocal lines of the singers. One of the chief roles of the orchestra is conveying the character of the Volga River, which runs like a leitmotif through the opera. The opera is based on "The Storm," Alexander Ostrovsky's most famous play. It has been described as "a Slavonic Madame Bovary."

SURPRISE: A few weeks ago, when Donald Gelfand assembled with two dozen other students from the High School of Music and Art to write a criticism of Van Cliburn's recording of Schumann's Piano Concerto, the 17-year-old student felt that at the most all he could win was a set of records from the company sponsoring the teen-age critical contest. But he was wrong. The criticism he turned in, besides winning him first place in the contest, has led to a summer job as a professional critic on The World-Telegram and Sun. He is filling in while Louis Biancolli, the paper's regular critic, is on sick leave.

FROM JAPAN: Aaron Copland was in Japan with the Boston Symphony as both a composer and conductor. In Tanglewood, Mr. Copland is also the chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center, and thereby hangs a tale. In Tokyo he met a talented viola player, Shuntatsu Kohno, the first violist of the Japan Philharmonic. The composer offered him a scholarship to the center and the young instrumentalist is coming here to study at the center this summer.

KANSAS CITY, MO.
STAR
D. 338,237 S. 360,36
JUL 3 1960

DATES FOR FESTIVAL.

Boston Symphony's Event Opens July 6.

Boston, July 2.—The 6-week Berkshire music festival, on the Boston Symphony's 210-acre estate near Lenox, Mass., will open July 6.

Eighteen concerts will be given by the orchestra in the 6,000-seat music shed on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons. Munch will conduct 14, and Pierre Monteux will conduct four. Among guest artists will be Claudio Arrau, Eleanor Steber, Ruggiero Ricci, Jaime Laredo, Jorge Bolet, Leon Fleisher, Gary Graffman, Eugene Istomin and Byron Janis.

MILLBROOK, N.Y.
ROUND TABLE
W. 1,025
JUL 7 1960

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the Orchestra in its first concert of the 1960 Berkshire Festival on Friday, July 8 at 8:30 in the Music Shed. Thereafter Mr. Munch will conduct 13 concerts and for the remaining four, he has invited Pierre Monteux to conduct the Boston Symphony.

Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 58,872
JUL 5 - 1960

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 373,012
JUL 5 - 1960

Americans (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 176,513
JUL 5 - 1960

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 175,076
JUL 5 - 1960

Munch Back in U. S. Set for Tanglewood

NEW YORK (AP)—Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returned from a brief holiday in Europe.

Munch returned to begin his summer series of concerts at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 57,341
JUL 5 - 1960

Charles Munch Flies to Lenox After Paris Trip

NEW YORK (UPI)—Conductor Charles Munch of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was due to fly into Newark from Paris Monday and continue on to Lenox, Mass.

Rehearsals of the Boston Symphony for the Berkshire Music Festival at Lenox will begin Wednesday.

Munch flew to Paris for a vacation following the wind-up of the orchestra's Far Eastern tour two weeks ago.

Two weekends of chamber concerts of music by Bach will start at Lenox Friday night. The full orchestra takes over July 22. Weekend concerts are planned until Aug. 14.

CHICAGO, ILL.
NEWS
D. 535,978 SAT. [illegible],942
JUN [illegible] 1960

U.S. Festivals Hit a Mature Note

BY DON HENAHAN
Daily News Music Critic

IF YOU have wondered recently whether you might not be getting a bit older, perhaps this will settle the question for you.

Several American music festivals this summer will be putting on special Aaron Copland programs—in honor of the composer's 60th birthday.

At Aspen, Colo., 7-900 feet up in the cool Rockies, Copland and composer Peter Mennin will be on hand for a Conference on American Music, a topic that easily generates heated opinions.

* * *

IN ADDITION, the 10-week Aspen season (June 29-Sept. 4) will feature part one of a two-year Beethoven cycle; performances of Wolf-Ferrari's rarely heard opera "The Inquisitive Woman"; Hugo Wolf centenary programs, and the U.S. premiere of Mozart's music to "Thamos, King of Egypt."

Izler Solomon returns for his fifth season as Aspen's conductor.

Composer-in-residence Darius Milhaud will conduct a program of his own works. Chicagoans Ray Still, oboe, and Philip Farkas, horn, will be among the performers and will teach at the Aspen Music School.

Honor Copland At Berkshire

Copland will be honored at the Berkshire Festival this summer in a special concert of his piano works, played by William Masselos.

This salute to the American composer will be part of the annual activities at Tanglewood sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago.

The six-week festival (July-Aug. 14) at the 210-acre estate near Lenox in the hills of western Massachusetts will feature 18 concerts by the Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux.

Special weeks will be devoted to Bach and Mozart, and there will be performances of Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust," Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, and the Faure Requiem. Soloists include Arrau, Ricci, Bolet, Graffman, Istomin, Fleisher and Janis.

Promenade

JULY 1960

Just out of Town

American Shakespeare Festival—The [illegible] performs in lovely setting on Housatonic River, Stratford, Connecticut, just 57 miles from New York City (Connecticut Turnpike, Exit 32; Merritt Parkway, Exits 51 and 53; or New Haven Railroad). Repertory performances of Twelfth Night, directed by Jack Landau . . . The Tempest, directed by William Ball . . . Antony and Cleopatra, starring Katharine Hepburn and Robert Ryan. Tues.-Sun. 8:30. Wed., Sat., Sun. mat. at 2. For tickets, call CA 6-6047.

Westport Country Playhouse—Westport, Connecticut (Connecticut Turnpike, Exit 18; Merritt Parkway, Exit 42). Thru 2nd, Two for the Seesaw . . . 4th-9th, Sam Levene in Make a Million . . . 11th-16th, No Concern of Mine . . . 18th-23rd, Not in the Book, mystery with Hans Conried . . . 25th-30th, Betsy Palmer in the London comedy, Roar like a Dove. Mon.-Fri. 8:40; Wed. mat. 2:40; Sat. 6 and 9; closed Sun. For tickets, call CI 6-1614.

Paper Mill Playhouse—Millburn, New Jersey. Just 21 miles from New York City, this 900-seat theatre is producing a summer festival in cooperation with Westport Country Playhouse. Thru 2nd, Arlene Francis, Kent Smith and George Grizzard in Amphitryon 38, Jean Giraudoux-S.N. Behrman comedy . . . 4th-16th, Shelley Winters in Two for the Seesaw . . . 18th-30th, Royal Enclosure, starring Celeste Holm and Cathleen Nesbitt. Eves. at 8:30; Wed., Sat. at 2:30; closed Sun. Box office, DRexel 6-4343.

Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival—Lee, Massachusetts. Thru 2nd, The Nimura Company . . . 5th-9th, Ballet Espanol Ximenez-Vargas . . . 12th-16th, Robert Joffrey Ballet, with Maria Tallchief: Indrani and Her Indian Dancers . . . 19th-23rd, Les Grands Ballets Canadiens . . . 26th-30th, The Washington Ballet. Thru 9th, Thurs.-Sat. eves.; Fri., Sat. mats. Thereafter, Tues.-Sat. eves.; Fri., Sat. mats.

1960 Berkshire Festival — Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts. From 6th, Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch gives six Friday and Saturday night and Sunday afternoon concerts in the Music Shed. The first two weekends are devoted to Bach and Mozart. Eves. at 8:30; afternoons, 2:30.

Jewish Civic Leader
WORCESTER, Mass.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 14,200

JUL 21 1960

1960 Berkshire Festival Continues Through August 14

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will take up its summer residence in the beautiful hills of Lenox, Mass., where it will present the 1960 Berkshire Festival from July 6 through August 14. The Festival is held at Tanglewood, the Orchestra's 210-acre estate of formal gardens, ancient hemlock, and tall pines.

Charles Munch, Music Director of the Orchestra, will conduct 14 of the Festival concerts.

The revered octogenarian Pierre Monteux, former Music Director of the Orchestra, will guest conduct one concert in each of the four final Festival weekends. A group of brilliant soloists will also be featured.

To accommodate the large audiences for the concerts, all Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon programs will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed under the new Talbot Memorial Canopy which was installed last summer. Those who prefer may listen to these concerts from the Great Lawn which adjoins the Shed.

The Orchestra's famed summer school of Music, the Berkshire Music Center, will be in session during the Festival.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,189 S. 1,254,635
JUN 26 1960

THE WORLD OF MUSIC

'Katia's' Journey to Bear Mountain Is Result of 31-Year-Old Enthusiasm

By ROSS PARMENTER

WHEN an event takes place, often its occurrence can be traced to the initial enthusiasm of a single man. This will be the case next month when Janacek's "Katia Kabanova" is given at the Empire State Festival at Harriman State Park near Bear Mountain.

Laszlo Halasz is the man, and his enthusiasm for the opera began thirty-one years ago. The year was 1929, which was when Mr. Halasz went to Czechoslovakia to serve as George Szell's assistant at the Prague Opera. Janacek had died the year before and his country was honoring his memory by many performances of his operas.

Mr. Halasz, who was then 24 and who was hearing those operas for the first time, was particularly taken by three of them, "Jenufa," "The Cunning Little Vixen" and, most of all, "Katia Kabanova." He conceived the ambition to conduct or produce all three of them, and he had this in the back of his mind when he first came to the United States in 1936.

Lost Chance

He almost had the chance to present "Jenufa" with the New York City Opera in the spring of 1952, and Dimitri Mitropoulos had agreed to conduct the performances. But three months before that season took place members of the board of the City Center ousted Mr. Halasz from his position as artistic and music director of the company.

Since then Mr. Halasz has become associated with the Empire State Festival and this spring, when Frank Forest, the general manager of the festival, approached the conductor for ideas for operas to be given this year, Mr. Halasz saw his opportunity for giving the one he likes best of his three favorite Janacek operas. He suggested "Katia." Mr. Forest agreed, and the performances July 22 and 30 will result.

These performances will be [illegible] of the opera in this country with orchestra. However, the first one will not be the United States première. That honor belongs to Karamu House in Cleveland, which presented the opera for a month's run that began on Nov. 26, 1957. It was one of the operas that Benno D. Frank and Helmuth Wolfes have been staging at the Cleveland settlement house in the last decade. It was given with the accompaniment of a piano in the house's 140-seat Arena Theatre.

The score of "Katia" calls for a large orchestra whose accompaniment has an almost independent existence from the vocal lines of the singers. One of the chief roles of the orchestra is conveying the character of the Volga River, which runs like a leitmotif through the opera. The opera is based on "The Storm," Alexander Ostrovsky's most famous play. It has been described as "a Slavonic Madame Bovary."

SURPRISE: A few weeks ago, when Donald Gelfand assembled with two dozen other students from the High School of Music and Art to write a criticism of Van Cliburn's recording of Schumann's Piano Concerto, the 17-year-old student felt that at the most all he could win was a set of records from the company sponsoring the teen-age critical contest. But he was wrong. The criticism he turned in, besides winning him first place in the contest, has led to a summer job as a professional critic on The World-Telegram and Sun. He is filling in while Louis Biancolli, the paper's regular critic, is on sick leave.

FROM JAPAN: Aaron Copland was in Japan with the Boston Symphony as both a composer and conductor. In Tanglewood, Mr. Copland is also the chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center and thereby hangs a tale. In Tokyo he met a talented viola player, Shuntatsu Kohno, the first violist of the Japan Philharmonic. The composer offered him a scholarship to the center and the young instrumentalist is coming here to study at the center this summer.

KANSAS CITY, MO.
STAR
D. 338,237 S. 360,361
JUL 3 1960

DATES FOR FESTIVAL.

Boston Symphony's Event Opens July 6.

Boston, July 2.—The 6-week Berkshire music festival, on the Boston Symphony's 210-acre estate near Lenox, Mass., will open July 6.

Eighteen concerts will be given by the orchestra in the 6,000-seat music shed on Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons. Munch will conduct 14 and Pierre Monteux will conduct four. Among guest artists will be Claudio Arrau, Eleanor Steber, Ruggiero Ricci, Jaime Laredo, Jorge Bolet, Leon Fleisher, Gary Graffman, Eugene Istomin and Byron Janis.

MILLBROOK, N.Y.
ROUND TABLE
W. 1,025
JUL 7 1960

CHARLES MUNCH, Music Director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will conduct the Orchestra in its first concert of the 1960 Berkshire Festival on Friday, July 8 at 8:30 in the Music Shed. Thereafter Mr. Munch will conduct 13 concerts and for the remaining four, he has invited Pierre Monteux to conduct the Boston Symphony.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 57,341

JUL 5 1960

Charles Munch Flies to Lenox After Paris Trip

NEW YORK (UPI)—Conductor Charles Munch of the Boston Symphony Orchestra was due to fly into New York from Paris Monday and continue on to Lenox, Mass.

Rehearsals of the Boston Symphony for the Berkshire Music Festival at Lenox will begin Wednesday.

Munch flew to Paris for a vacation following the wind-up of the orchestra's Far Eastern tour two weeks ago.

Two weekends of chamber concerts of music by Bach will start at Lenox Friday night. The full orchestra takes over July [illegible]. Weekend concerts are planned until Aug. 14.

Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 58,872

JUL 5 1960

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 373,012

JUL 5 1960

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 176,513

JUL 5 1960

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 175,076

JUL 5 1960

Munch Back in U. Set for Tanglewood

NEW YORK (AP)—Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, returned from a brief holiday in Europe.

Munch returned to begin his summer series of concerts at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

18

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 101,427

JUN 12 1960

Music

Chamber Music at Tanglewood Set

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

Including activities of the Berkshire Music Center, there will be 62 events at Tanglewood from July 5 through Aug. 14.

Among these will be six chamber - music concerts, all on Wednesday evenings in the Theater Concert Hall, beginning July 6.

The Budapest String Quartet will open the series with Schubert's Quartet in A minor, Opus 29; Ravel's Quartet in F major, and Quartet No. 17 by the late Heitor Villa-Lobos.

Pianist Claude Frank will be joined by members of the Boston Symphony for his recital on July 13. The tentative program is Mozart's Piano Quartets Nos. 1 and 2, and the Beethoven Sonata, Opus III.

Arrau's Chopin

Claudio Arrau's Chopin Centenary Recital on July 20 will consist of the same compositions which he performed at a special Chopin recital during the May Festival in Prague, Czechoslovakia, on May 25. The program will open with the Fantasy in F minor, Opus 49, followed by Ballade No. 4 in F minor, Opus 52; Scherzo No. 4 in E major, Opus 54, and the B minor Sonata, Opus 58. The recital will close with Chopin's 24 Preludes.

The "Kakadu" Variations by Beethoven will be played in the July 27 concert by the Beaux Arts Trio of New York. Ravel's Trio in A minor and Brahms' Trio, Opus 8, also will be heard.

On Aug. 3, an American pianist, Leon Fleisher, will give a recital of sonatas. They will be Liszt's Sonata in B minor, Schubert's posthumous Sonata in B flat, and the Sonata (1948) by Leon Kirchner.

The Kroll Quartet will give the final program of the series on Aug. 10. They will perform Haydn's Quartet No. 2 in C major, Opus 54; Quartet No. 1 by Walter Piston, and Beethoven's Quartet No. 7 in F major, Opus 59.

Information and complete programs for the 1960 Berkshire Festival are available at Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15. Telephone Commonwealth 6-1492.

CUE
NEW YORK, N.Y.
SAT. 150,779

JUL 9 1960

TANGLEWOOD is summer home of the Boston Symphony shown here in new acoustic enclosure (left). Savoyard Martyn Green (right) returns from Santa Fe Opera to appear at Lewisohn Stadium and at Robin Hood Dell

Summer Music Spotlight

MASSACHUSETTS

IPSWICH: Concerts in the Florentine Gardens of the former Crane Estate include recitals by Ania Dorfman, July 15-16; Phyllis Curtin, July 29-30; two programs by the Beaux-Arts Quartet, Aug. 5-6, and others by the Boston Symphony Wind Ensemble, Aug. 19-20.

LENOX: The granddaddy of Eastern music festivals—the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood—opens this weekend with three all-Bach programs conducted by Charles Munch. And as tradition has it, they will be followed by a Mozart threesome, July 15-17. Highlights of succeeding programs in the regular series include a performance of the Faure Requiem, July 22, and solo appearances by Claudio Arrau and Jaime Laredo, July 23-24. Beethoven's Ninth, conducted by Pierre Monteux, climaxes the July 29-31 weekend. Three soloists share the Aug. 5-7 programs—Ricci, Istomin and Fleisher—and the festival closes on the Aug. 12-14 weekend with a performance of Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," Charles Munch conducting. Also scheduled are a benefit gala on Aug. 4, a Boston Pops evening on the 11th, and a Wednesday evening chamber series of weekly programs through the 10th.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
POST
D. 328,402 S. 262,240

JUN 30 1960

On The Air

By BOB WILLIAMS

Bud Collyer enters Greenwich, Conn. hospital Aug. 11 for surgery of a leg tumor. He asked Sonny Fox to replace him for two weeks on Ch. 7's "Beat the Clock." He'll also need a replacement on Ch. 2's "To Tell the Truth" . . . When the old "Talent Scouts" show is revived on CBS Aug. [illegible], "Celebrity Talent Scouts," comedian Phil Silvers and film star Ann Sheridan will serve as the premiere "scouts" . . . WQXR will broadcast six Saturday night concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. The first is scheduled for 8:30 p. m. July 9 . . .

Herald (e)
NEW BRITAIN, Conn.
Circ. 30,482

JUL 2 1960

Times (e)
BEVERLY, Mass.
Circ. 7,669

JUL 2 1960

Times (e)
GLOUCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 9,273

JUL 6 1960

Chronicle (e)
NORTH ATTLEBORO
Mass.
Circ. 3,894

JUL 2 1960

Item (e)
CLINTON, Mass.
Circ. 3,446

JUL 5 1960

From Jazz to Symphony

Variety of Summer Music Offered in New England

By JOHN A. HAHN

BOSTON (UPI)—New England's tuneful buffet will offer tempting tidbits of tempo to touring musical gourmets this summer.

The melodic treats will include appetizers of jazz, classic entrees from Europe, piquant salads from the Broadway stage and, for dessert, zestful summer evenings on the Charles River Esplanade.

Travel - weary Boston Symphony musicians returned from the Orient to the comparative relaxation of the final two weeks of the 75th Pops Concerts season in Boston.

Music moves out of doors with the closing of the Pops this week.

Jazz at Newport

July brings the internationally-famed Newport Jazz Festival. Castle Hill in Ipswich, Mass. opens its 1960 season with the rhythms of pianist Erroll Garner, percussionist Kelly Martin and bass virtuoso Edward Calhoun. For the less adventuresome in music, the rest of Castle Hill's menu includes the Newell Jenkins chamber ensemble, pianist Ania Dorfmann, soprano Phyllis Curtin, the Beaux Arts Quartet and the Flamenco Ballet.

For the Broadway musical enthusiast there will be appearances by Patrice Munsel, Vic Damone, Ginger Rogers, the Gordon MacRaes and Howard Keel in theater-in-the round productions of "Kiss Me, Kate," "Paint Your Wagon," "Damn Yankees," "Redhead" and the perennial "South Pacific." Leonard Bernstein's teen-age Romeo and Juliet theme, "West Side Story," will turn up at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset, Mass.

On Serious Side

In a more serious vein, the Berkshire Festival will offer the Boston Symphony in weekend concerts at Lenox, Mass. Director Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux will share conducting honors on programs featuring such soloists as violinist Jaime Laredo, pianists Jorge Bolet and Claudio Arrau and soprano Eleanor Steber of the Metropolitan Opera.

For the keyboard enthusiasts, Virgil Fox of Riverside Church in New York City will give a series of six organ recitals at the Hammond Museum in Gloucester, Mass.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct three weeks of concerts on the Esplanade in Boston, including three Wednesday morning programs for young music lovers. The outdoor concerts, free to the public, will be given six nights a week July 3-15 and Aug. 15-20.

Post (e)
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Circ. 79,797

JUL 4 1960

Radio To Carry Tanglewood Concerts

By FRED H. RUSSELL

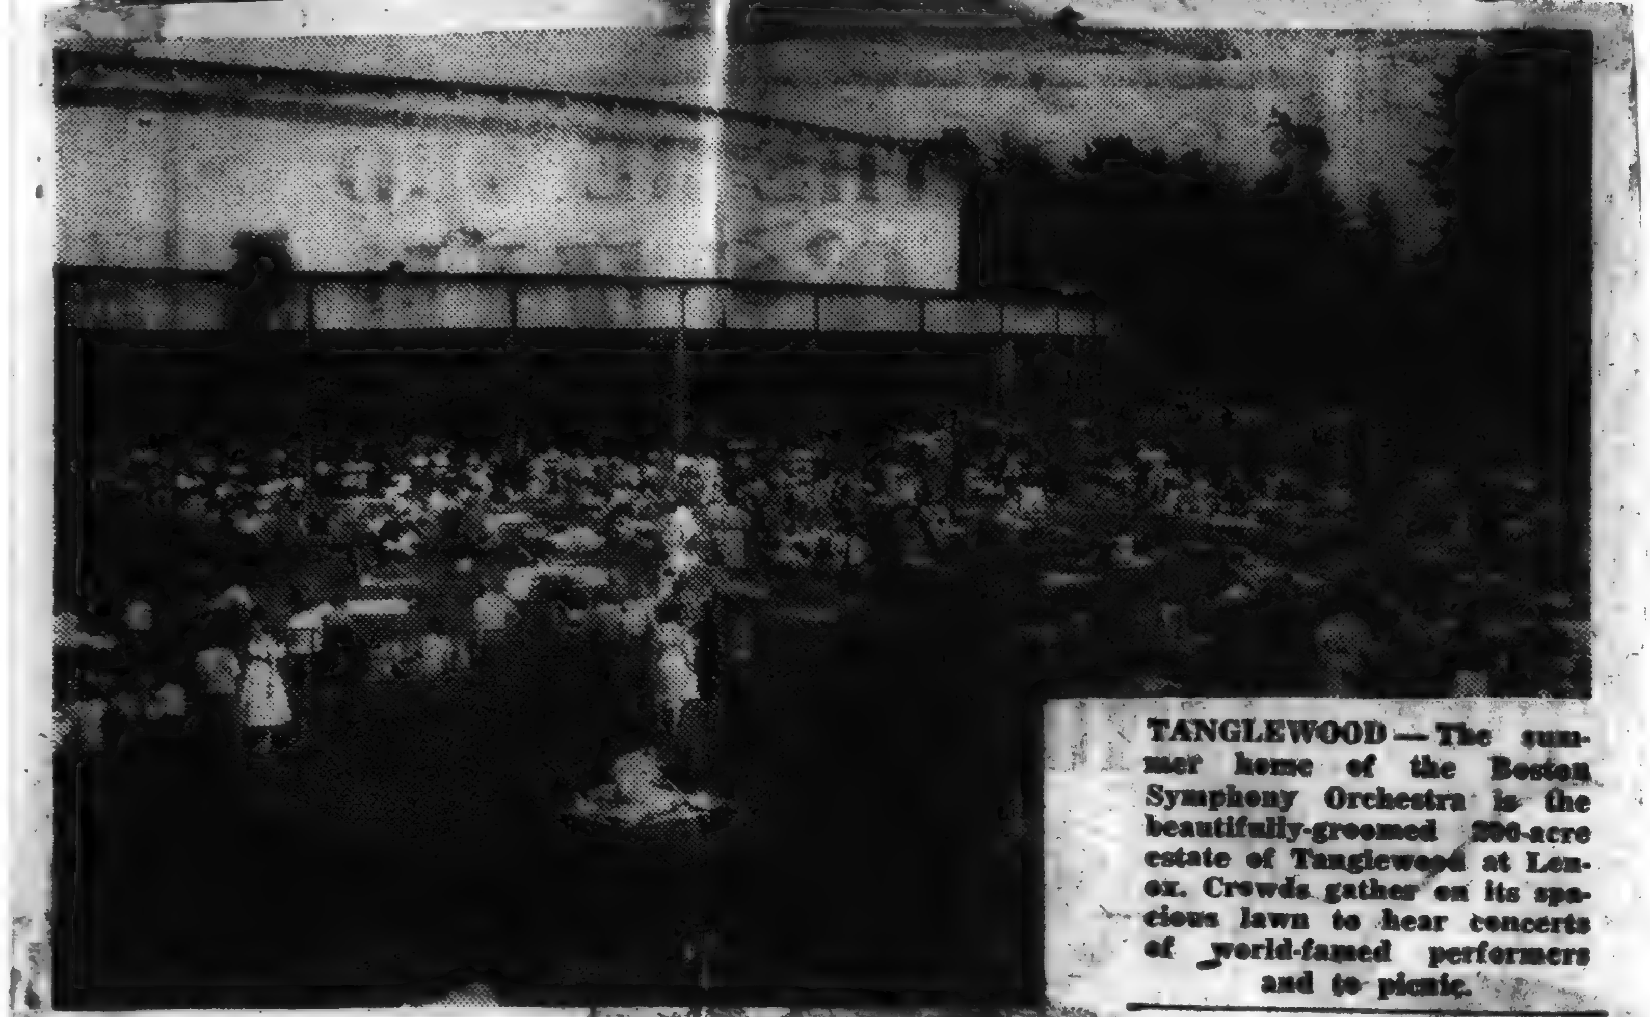
Six Boston Symphony orchestra concerts from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., will be broadcast over WQXR on Saturday evenings from 8:30 to 10:30 o'clock, beginning this week and continuing through Aug. 13.

Charles Munch will be the conductor for all the broadcast concerts except July 23, when Pierre Monteux, the orchestra's 85-year-old "conductor emeritus," will be on the podium.

Compositions ranging from the classics of Mozart and Cherubini to the contemporary Dutilleux and Copland will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood this summer. Listeners will hear these first performances and other works live during WQXR's exclusive broadcasts of this summer series from the Shed. Martin Bookspan, WQXR's director of recorded music, will provide the commentary and will introduce conductors and soloists through interviews.

Among the features of the concerts will be an all-Bach program, with Seymour Lipkin as piano soloist on next Saturday night. In an all-Mozart concert on July 16, Claude Frank, pianist, will make his debut at Tanglewood and the orchestra will play, for the first time in its history, Mozart's "Litany."

TROY, N.Y.
RECORD
D. 6,664
JUN 11 1960



TANGLEWOOD — The summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is the beautifully-groomed 200-acre estate of Tanglewood at Lenox. Crowds gather on its spacious lawn to hear concerts of world-famed performers and to picnic.

Tanglewood Festival Opens July 6

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will have concluded its third foreign trip—an eight week tour to Japan, the Philippines, New Zealand, Australia and other countries—a few days before it takes summer residence in the hills of western Massachusetts for the [illegible] Berkshire Festival.

The Festival is held at Tanglewood, the orchestra's 210-acre estate of formal gardens, ancient hemlock and tall pines which has changed little since Nathaniel Hawthorne said of it: "I cannot write in the presence of that view."

Charles Munch has invited Pierre Monteux, the orchestra's beloved 'conductor-emeritus,' and a group of brilliant soloists to be his guests in the 24 festival concerts which will be given between July 6 and August 14.

To accommodate the large audiences for the festival's concerts, all Friday evening and Sunday afternoon programs will be presented in the 6,000-seat music shed under the new Talbot Memorial Canopy which was installed last summer. Those who prefer may listen to these concerts from the great lawn which adjoins the shed.

Friends are invited to the school's many concerts of orchestral, choral and chamber music, opera evenings, lectures, forums, and other events.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 289,111
JUL 3 1960

Boston Symphony Back at Festival

Charles Munch returns from a Parisian holiday to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first orchestral concert of the six-week Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood on Friday. Doctor Munch and the Orchestra, just returned from an eight-week tour of the Far East, will devote the first three Festival concerts to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach. Violinist William Kroll, pianist Seymour Lipkin and flutist James Pappoutsakis will be soloists in the Friday evening concert. The program consists the Suite No. 1, the Violin concerto in E, the Piano Concerto in F minor, and the Triple Concerto in A minor.

Mr. Lipkin will also be guest in the second all-Bach program on Saturday evening. In addition to the Piano Concerto in D minor, the program will include the Suite No. 4 plus excerpts from the "Musical Offering" and "The Art of the Fugue." The final all-Bach program will be given Sunday afternoon, July 10 at 2:30, when the Berkshire Music Center's Festival Chorus will join Doctor Munch and the Orchestra in a performance of the Cantata No. 4, "Christ lag in Todesbanden." The program also includes Suite No. 3 and the Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 and 2.

To accomodate the audiences for the all-Bach concerts these programs will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed, rather than in the smaller Theater, under the new Talbot Memorial Canopy which was installed last summer. Those who prefer may liten to these concerts from the Great Lawn which adjoins the Shed.

The Budapest String Quartet will give the first recital in the Berkshire Festival's Chamber Music Series in the Theatre at Tanglewood on Wednesday with a program of Schubert's quartet in A minor, Op. 29, the Quartet No. 17 (1950) by the late Hector Villa-Lobos, and Ravel's Quartet in F major.

Tickets for the three all-Bach orchestral concerts, for the Orchestra's Open Rehearsal on Saturday morning, and for the Budapest String Quartet are on sale at Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Massachusetts (Lenox 600)

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,684
JUN 18 1960

It's Entertainment

Berkshire Festival

Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has announced the programs to be performed this year at the Lenox, Mass. Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

Opening the season on July 6 will be the Budapest String Quartet playing Ravel's Quarter in F Major. Pianist Claude Frank will present a recital on July 13 in a program slated to include Mozart's Piano Quartets. Claudio Arrau's Chopin Centenary Recital will take place July 20 and will include the Chopin compositions Arrau played during the May Festival in Prague. Chopin's 23 preludes will close the recital.

On July 27 the Beaux Arts Trio will present the "Kakadu Variations" by Beethoven and on Aug. 3 pianist Leon Fleisher will be heard in a recital of Liszt and Schubert sonatas.

The Kroll Quarter will give the final program of the series on Aug. 10 when they perform Haydn's Quartet No. 2 in C major.

Information and complete programs for the Berkshire Festival are available at Festival Ticket Office, Symphony Hall, Boston 15.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
GAZETTE
D. 47,453
JUN 29 1960

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 99,001
JUN 14 1960

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 4,953
JUN 16 1960

Post
NORTH HAVEN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 1,500
JUN 16 1960

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,572
JUN 23 1960

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664
JUN 5 - 1960

CHARLES MUNCH LISTS CHAMBER MUSIC PROGRAM

Sonata Recital by Leon Fleisher Added to Schedule

LENOX—Charles Munch has announced the programs to be performed by his guests at the 1960 Berkshire Festival's chamber music series. The chamber music recitals, to be given on six Wednesday evenings beginning July 6, will be held in the Theater at Tanglewood. Participants in these programs, held in conjunction with the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 18th festival concerts, include the Budapest and Kroll Quartets, the Beaux Arts Trio of New York, pianist Claude Frank with members of the orchestra, plus Claudio Arrau in a Chopin Centenary Recital and Leon Fleisher in a program of sonatas for the piano.

Schubert's Quartet in A minor, Op. 29, will open the recital of the Budapest Quartet July 6. Their program will also include Ravel's Quartet in F major and Quartet No. 17 (1959) by the late Hector Villa-Lobos.

Pianist Claude Frank will be joined by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra for his recital July 13. The tentative program will include Mozart's Piano Quartets Nos. 1 and 2 and the Beethoven Sonata, Op. 111.

Claudio Arrau's Chopin Centenary Recital July 20 will consist of the same compositions which he performed at a special Chopin recital during the May Festival in Prague May 25. The program will open with the Fantasy in F minor, Op. 49. Also included will be the Ballade No. 4 in F minor, Op. 52, Scherzo No. 4 in E major, Op. 54 and the B minor Sonata, Op. 58. The recital will close with Chopin's 24 Preludes.

The "Kakadu Variations" by Beethoven are included in the July 27 recital by the Beaux Arts Trio of New York. Ravel's Trio in A minor and Brahms' Trio, Op. 8, will also be heard.

On Aug. 3 the American pianist, Leon Fleisher, will be heard in a recital of sonatas. His program will consist of Liszt's Sonata in B minor, Schubert's posthumous Sonata in B-flat and the Sonata (1945) by Leon Kirchner.

The Kroll Quartet, which will give the final program of the series Aug. 10, will perform Haydn's Quartet No. 3 in C major, Op. 54, the Quartet No. 1 by Walter Piston and Beethoven's Quartet No. 1 in F major, Op. 59.

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 27,809
JUL 7 1960

Tanglewood Weekends For Young Adults Noted

A new tour plan has been set up by Ken Kolman Tours of 3 Hingham street, Cambridge, to take people of about college age on complete weekend tours to Tanglewood. Designed for those interested in meeting other people with similar interests and at a low cost, these tours include everything but concert tickets. To eliminate unforseen expenses, wherever possible, tipping is included.

The hotel to be used, Festival House, is right in Lenox. Meals recommended by Gourmet, are included at no extra cost and are served on a screened in porch when weather permits. Hotel facilities include the largest swimming pool in the Berkshires, tennis courts and 12 acres of grass and trees. Transportation to each concert, as well as from the Boston-Cambridge area and back, will be by air conditioned bus.

Refreshments and entertainment are planned for after the concerts at no charge — ballroom dancing, square dancing, and folk singing around the fireplace. In addition to the many places of interest in and around Lenox to be visited during the day, there will be a chamber music concert each Saturday afternoon at the hotel.

Reservations in Lenox are difficult to obtain during the Boston Symphony Series, so it is suggested that reservations be made as soon as possible. Information may be obtained by writing or calling Ken Kolman at 3 Hingham street, Cambridge.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026
JUN 6 1960

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267
JUN 9 1960

20

The Berkshire Eagle, Saturday, July 2, 1960

Music Center Marks 20th Anniversary

Copland

Jackson

Cox

Berkowitz

TANGLEWOOD — The Berkshire Music Center will note its 20th anniversary at the opening exercises of the 1960 session here tomorrow when more than 400 students from all parts of the world will be on hand for the ceremonies in the Tanglewood theater-concert hall.

William J. Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Center, has invited the public to attend the ceremonies in the small theater, starting at 3:30 p.m.

Munch Arrives Monday

Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who recently completed a tour of the Far East with the orchestra, is still vacationing in Paris, where he has been resting since the completion of the eight-week tour. However, he is scheduled to arrive in the Berkshires from France on Monday and once more will reside in Richmond where he has maintained a summer residence for two years.

C. D. Jackson, publisher of Life magazine and a trustee of the BSO, will address the students and guests. Aaron Copland, guest conductor on the orchestra's recent tour and chairman of the BMC faculty, also will speak. Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the former conductor of the orchestra, who founded the center in 1940, will be among the honored guests.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center, will introduce the faculty, which includes Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and G. Wallace Woodworth.

Tea in Gardens

Following the ceremony in the theater, tea will be served in the Tanglewood formal gardens.

Concert on Wednesday

The six-week Berkshire Festival will open Wednesday evening when the Curtis String Quartet will be heard. This quartet has replaced the Budapest Quartet which has canceled its summer tour because of the illness of one of its members.

Mozart's Quartet in D minor, K. 421, will open the Curtis Quartet's program. Also scheduled is the Quartet No. 2, Op. 24, by the contemporary American composer, Vincent Persichetti, and Ravel's Quartet in F major.

Members of the Quartet are Jascha Brodsky, violin, Mehli Mehta, violin, Max Aronoff, viola, and cellist Orlando Cole. Mr. Aronoff is Director of Philadelphia's New School of Music and, along with Messrs. Brodsky and Cole, a faculty member at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

Second violinist Mehli Mehta was born in Bombay and came to the United States to join the Curtis Quartet after several years as a member of Sir John Barbirolli's Halle Orchestra in Manchester, England. His son, Zubin Mehta, an alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will make his New York debut next week as conductor at the Lewisohn Stadium concerts in Manhattan.

Chamber Series

Five additional chamber music programs will be given at Tanglewood on the next five Wednesday evenings. Pianist Claude Frank and the Bel Arte Trio will be heard on July 13. On July 20 Claudio Arrau will give a Chopin Centenary Recital and the Beaux Arts Trio of New York is scheduled for July 27. Leon Fleisher will be heard in a program of sonatas for the piano on Aug. 3 and the series will close on Aug. 10 with a program by the Kroll Quartet.

The first orchestral concert of the six-week season in the Music Shed will be Friday, July 8, at 8:30 p.m. when Dr. Munch will devote the first three Festival concerts to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach.

Soloists in the Friday evening concert will be William Kroll, violinist, Seymour Lipkin, pianist and James Pappoutsakis, flutist.

The program consists of Bach's Suite No. 1, with Mr. Kroll as guest in a performance of the violin concerto in E; Seymour Lipkin in the piano concerto in F minor and Mr. Pappoutsakis, with Mr. Kroll and Mr. Lipkin in a performance of Bach's Triple Concerto in A minor.

Soloist for Bach

Mr. Lipkin will also be guest in the second all-Bach program on Saturday evening, July 9, at 8:30. In addition to the piano concerto in D minor, the program will include Bach's Suite No. 4 plus excerpts from the "Musical Offering" and "The Art of the Fugue." The final all-Bach program will be given Sunday afternoon, July 10, at 2:30 when the Berkshire Music Center's Festival Chorus will join Dr. Munch and the BSO in a performance of the Cantata No. 4, "Christ lag in Todesbanden." The program also includes Suite No. 3 and the Brandenburg Concerto Nos. 6 and 2.

To accommodate the audiences for the all-Bach concerts these programs will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed, rather than in the smaller theater, under the new Talbot memorial canopy, which was installed last summer.

Tickets for the three all-Bach orchestral concerts, for the orchestra's open rehearsal on Saturday morning, July 9, at 10 and for the Curtis Quartet recital are on sale at the Festival ticket office.

This Week at

TANGLEWOOD
LENOX, MASS.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 6
Theatre: 8:30
Chamber Music Concert
Curtis Quartet
MOZART: Quartet in D. minor: K421
PERSICHETTI: Quartet No. 2, Op. 24
RAVEL: Quartet in F. major
Tickets: $3.50, $3.00

FRIDAY, JULY 8
Shed, 8:30
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Conductor: Charles Munch
BACH:
Suite No. 1
Violin Concerto in E (Kroll)
Piano Concerto in F minor (Lipkin)
Triple Concerto in A minor
(Pappoutsakis, Kroll, Lipkin)
Tickets: $4.00, [illegible]

SATURDAY, JULY 9
Shed, 10:00
BSO Open Rehearsal
Tickets: Adults $1.50; Children 50c
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Conductor: Charles Munch
BACH:
Excerpts: Musical Offering and The Art of the Fugue
Piano Concerto in D minor
(Lipkin)
Suite No. 4
Tickets: $4.00, [illegible]

SUNDAY, JULY 10
Shed, 2:30
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Conductor: Charles Munch
BACH:
Suite No. 3
Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 & 2
Cantata: "Christ lag in Todesbanden" Festival Chorus
Tickets: $4.00, $3.00

General Admission to Grounds $2.50, on sale three hours before each concert.

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
TICKET OFICE: Lenox 600

THEATRE ARTS
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY
JUN 1960

festivals: U.S.A. and Canada

[continued from page 6]

directed by Jack Landau, opens; thereafter the three works in repertory.

Florida

Daytona Beach (June 12-18)—First Annual Theatre Festival, Daytona Beach Little Theatre. Sponsored by the Florida Theatre Conference. Seven plays, a different one each night, to be selected from entries presented by members of the conference.

Illinois

Evanston (June 30-July 27)—Northwestern Drama Festival, Northwestern University. E. E. Cummings' "him," directed by Robert Schneideman, beginning June 30; Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman," directed by John Van Meter, beginning July 1; Thornton Wilder's "The Matchmaker," directed by Jack Clay, beginning July 2; thereafter in repertory. A children's play, directed by Rita Criste, July 16, 17, 23, 24, matinées.

Kentucky

Ashland (June 12)—American Folk Song Festival, thirtieth year. Native and foreign ballads.

Massachusetts

Boston (June 3-19)—Boston Arts Festival, Boston Public Garden.

Drama: "The Prodigal" by Jack Richardson, June 3, 4, 6, 7 (Charles Playhouse).

Opera: "The Taming of the Shrew," New York City Opera, June 16-18.

Ballet: André Eglevsky, Melissa Hayden and Edward Villella in a new work, June 9-12.

Concerts and folk dancing.

Lee (June 28-Sept. 3)—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. Indrani and company of dancers and musicians from India, July 12-16; Les Grands Ballets Canadiens of Montreal, July 18-23; Washington Ballet with Frederic Franklin, Istvan Rabovsky and Patricia Wilde, July 25-30. New work created by the Dutch choreographer Nel Roos; Myra Kinch and company, and Carola Goya and Matteo in new works.

Lenox (July 6-Aug. 14) — Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

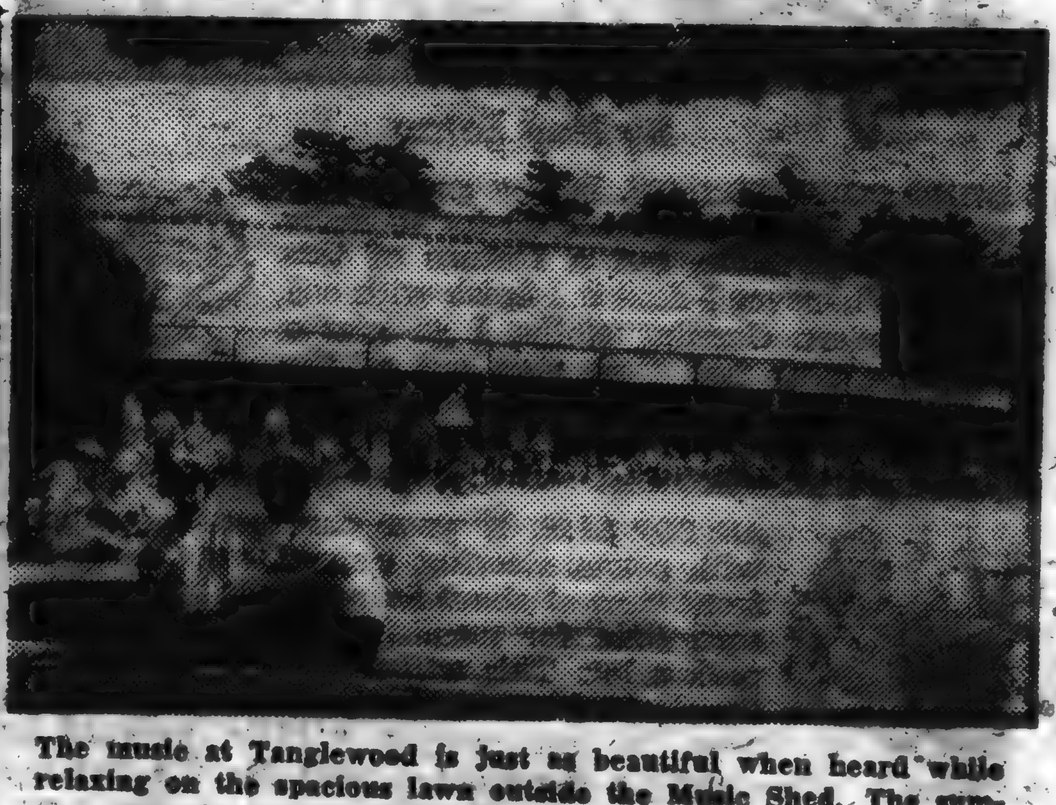
Opera: Scenes from operas, July 20, 25; world première of "Port Town" by Jan Meyerowitz, Aug. 4; Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnole," Aug. 11.

Concerts, chamber music.

NEW YORK MOTORIST
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 333,573
JUL 1960

At Nearby Spots:

It's Festival Time Again



The music at Tanglewood is just as beautiful when heard while relaxing on the spacious lawn outside the Music Shed. The summer concerts are popular favorites year after year.

The sound of music and voice will float across the New England countryside again this summer as much-loved cultural festivals happily return home.

With lovers of fine music, the dance and the drama making their annual pilgrimmage to the appropriate places of worship, the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass.; the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, near Lee, Mass.; and the American Shakespeare Festival at Stratford, Conn., will unveil their assorted delights again this July and August.

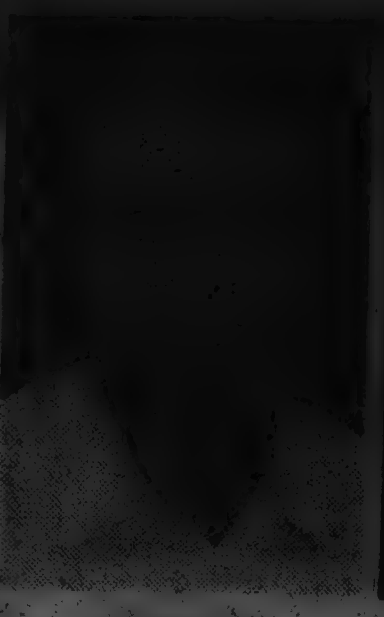
For years, the summer concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the lovely Music Shed at Tanglewood have been a highlight of the summer cultural program in the East. Aside from the formal concerts, there is an almost neverending series of chamber music recitals, jazz jam sessions and informal musicales by students and music-lovers.

For every occupant of a seat in the Music Shed, there are probably a dozen fans stretched out on the spacious lawn before the auditorium, [illegible] in the sun as they enjoy the music.

[illegible] for individual concerts are obtainable through the Festival Ticket Office in Tanglewood.

20

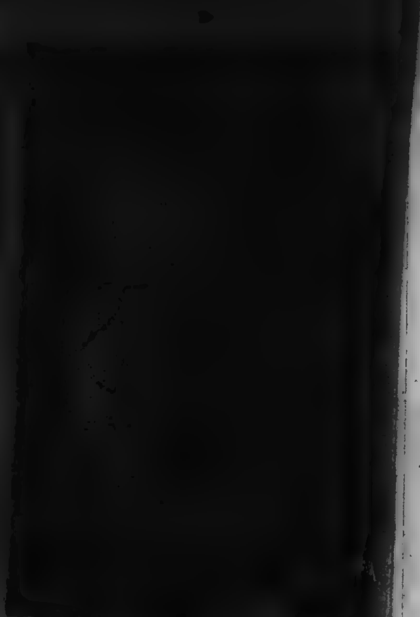
Music Center Marks 20th Anniver



Copland

Jackson

Cox



Berkowitz

TANGLEWOOD — The Berkshire Music Center will note its 20th anniversary at the opening exercises of the 1960 session here tomorrow when more than 400 students from all parts of the world will be on hand for the ceremonies in the Tanglewood theater-concert hall.

William J. Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Center, has invited the public to attend the ceremonies in the small theater, starting at 3:30 p.m.

Munch Arrives Monday

Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who recently completed a tour of the Far East with the orchestra, is still vacationing in Paris, where he has been resting since the completion of the eight-week tour. However, he is scheduled to arrive in the Berkshires from France on Monday and once more will reside in Richmond where he has maintained a summer residence for two years.

C. D. Jackson, publisher of Life magazine and a trustee of the BSO, will address the students and guests. Aaron Copland, guest conductor on the orchestra's recent tour and chairman of the BMC faculty, also will speak. Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the former conductor of the orchestra, who founded the center in 1940, will be among the honored guests.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center, will introduce the faculty, which includes Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and G. Wallace Woodworth.

Tea in Gardens

Following the ceremony in the theater, tea will be served in the Tanglewood formal gardens.

Concert on Wednesday

The six-week Berkshire Festival will open Wednesday evening when the Curtis String Quartet will be heard. This quartet has replaced the Budapest Quartet which has canceled its summer tour because of the illness of one of its members.

Mozart's Quartet in D minor, K. 421, will open the Curtis Quartet's program. Also scheduled is the Quartet No. 2, Op. 24, by the contemporary American composer, Vincent Persichetti, and Ravel's Quartet in F major.

Members of the Quartet are Jascha Brodsky, violin, Mehli Mehta, violin, Max Aronoff, viola, and cellist Orlando Cole. Mr. [illegible] is Director of Philadelphia's New School of Music and, along with Messrs. Brodsky and Cole, a faculty member at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

Second violinist Mehli Mehta was born in Bombay and came to the United States to join the Curtis Quartet after several years as a member of Sir John Barbirolli's Halle Orchestra in Manchester, England. His son, Zubin Mehta, an alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will make his New York debut next week as conductor at the Lewisohn Stadium concerts in Manhattan.

Chamber Series

Five additional chamber music programs will be given at Tanglewood on the next five Wednesday evenings. Pianist Claude Frank and the Bel Arte Trio will be heard on July 13. On July 20 Claudio Arrau will give a Chopin Centenary Recital and the Beaux Arts Trio of New York is scheduled for July 27. Leon Fleisher will be heard in a program of sonatas for the piano on Aug. 3 and the series will close on Aug. 10 with a program by the Kroll Quartet.

The first orchestral concert of the six-week season in the Music Shed will be Friday, July 8, at 8:30 p.m. when Dr. Munch will devote the [illegible] Festival concerts to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach.

Soloists in the Friday evening concert will be William Kroll, violinist, Seymour Lipkin, pianist, and James Pappoutsakis, flutist.

The program consists of Bach's Suite No. 1, with Mr. Kroll as guest in a performance of the violin concerto in E; Seymour Lipkin in the piano concerto in F minor and Mr. Pappoutsakis, with Mr. Kroll and Mr. Lipkin in a performance of Bach's Triple Concerto in A minor.

Soloist for Bach

Mr. Lipkin will also be guest in the second all-Bach program on Saturday evening, July 9, at 8:30. In addition to the piano concerto in D minor, the program will include Bach's Suite No. 4 plus excerpts from the "Musical Offering" and "The Art of the Fugue." The final all-Bach program will be given Sunday afternoon, July 10, at 2:30 when the Berkshire Music Center's Festival Chorus will join Dr. Munch and the BSO in a performance of the Cantata No. 4, "Christ lag in Todesbanden." The program also includes Suite No. [illegible] and the Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 6 and 2.

To accommodate the audiences for the all-Bach concerts these programs will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed, rather than in the smaller theater, under the new Talbot memorial canopy which was installed last summer.

Tickets for the three all-Bach orchestral concerts, for the orchestra's open rehearsal on Saturday morning, July 9, at 10 and for the Quartet recital are on sale at the Festival ticket office.

This Week at

TANGLEWOOD
LENOX, MASS.

WEDNESDAY, JULY 6
Theatre, 8:30
Chamber Music Concert
Curtis Quartet
MOZART: Quartet in D minor, K421
PERSICHETTI: Quartet No. 2, Op. 24
RAVEL: Quartet in F major
Tickets: $3.50, $3.00

FRIDAY, JULY 8
Shed, 8:30
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Conductor: Charles Munch
BACH:
Suite No. 1
Violin Concerto in E (Kroll)
Piano Concerto in F minor (Lipkin)
Triple Concerto in A minor
(Pappoutsakis, Kroll, Lipkin)
Tickets: [illegible]

SATURDAY, JULY 9
[illegible]
BSO Open [illegible]
[illegible]
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Conductor: [illegible]
[illegible]
Excerpts: Musical Offering and The Art of the Fugue
Piano Concerto in D minor (Lipkin)
Suite No. 4
Tickets: [illegible]

SUNDAY, JULY 10
Shed, 2:30
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
Conductor: Charles Munch
BACH:
Suite No. 2
Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 6 & 2
Cantata: "Christ lag in Todesbanden" Festival Chorus
Tickets: [illegible]

[illegible] Admission to Grounds [illegible] on sale three hours before each concert

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
TICKET OFFICE: Lenox [illegible]

THEATRE ARTS
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY
JUN 1960

festivals: U.S.A. and Canada

[continued from page 6]

directed by Jack Landau, opens; thereafter the three works [illegible]

Florida

Daytona Beach (June [illegible])—First Annual Theatre Festival, Daytona Beach [illegible] Theatre Sponsored by the Florida Theatre Conference. Seven plays, a different one each night, to be selected from entries presented by members of the conference.

Illinois

Evanston (June 30-July 27)—Northwestern Drama Festival, Northwestern University. E. E. Cummings' "him," directed by Robert Schneideman, beginning June 30; Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman," directed by John Van Meter, beginning July 1; Thornton Wilder's "The Matchmaker," directed by Jack Clay, beginning July 2; thereafter in repertory. A children's play, directed by Rita Criste, July 16, 17, 23, 24, matinees.

Kentucky

Ashland (June 12)—American Folk Song Festival, thirtieth year. Native and foreign ballads.

Massachusetts

Boston (June 3-19)—Boston Arts Festival, Boston Public Garden.

Drama: "The Prodigal" by Jack Richardson, June 3, 4, 6, 7 (Charles Playhouse).

Opera: "The Taming of the Shrew," New York City Opera, June 16-18.

Ballet: André Eglevsky, Melissa Hayden and Edward Villella in a new work, June 9-12.

Concerts and folk dancing.

Lee (June 28-Sept. 3)—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival. Indrani and company of dancers and musicians from India, July 12-16; Les Grands Ballets Canadiens of Montreal, July 18-23; Washington Ballet with Frederic Franklin, Istvan Rabovsky and Patricia Wilde, July 25-30. New work created by the Danish choreographer Nel Roos; Myra Kinch and company, and Carola Goya and Matteo in new works.

Lenox (July 6-Aug. 14) — Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Opera: Scenes from operas, July 20, 25; world première of "Port Town" by Jan Meyerowitz, Aug. 4; Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnole," Aug. 11.

Concerts, chamber music.

NEW YORK MOTORIST
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 333,573
JUL 1960

At Nearby Spots:

It's Festival Time Again

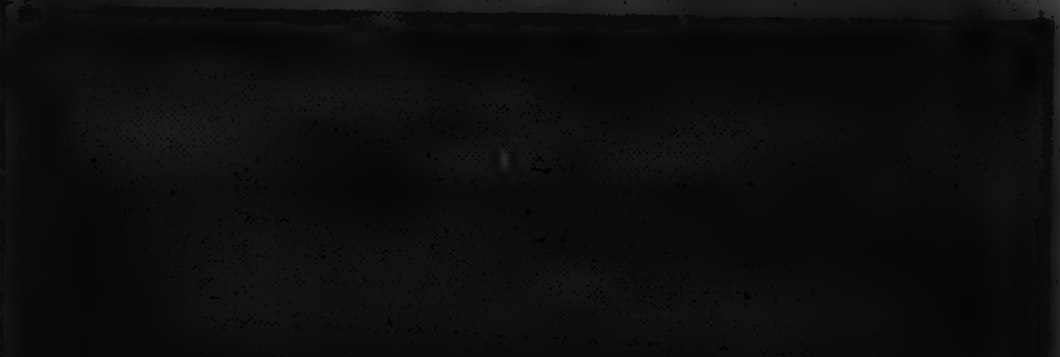
The sound of music and voice will float across the New England countryside again this summer as [illegible] cultural festivals happen [illegible] home.

[illegible] lovers of fine music, the [illegible] and the drama making their [illegible] pilgrimage to the [illegible] places of worship, the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, [illegible] the Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, near Lee, Mass., and the American Shakespeare [illegible] Stratford, Conn., will [illegible] assorted delights again [illegible] July and August.

For years, the summer concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the lovely Music Shed at Tanglewood have been a highlight of the summer cultural program in the East. Aside from the formal concerts, there is an almost never-ending series of chamber music recitals, jazz jam sessions and informal musicales by students and music-lovers.

For every occupant of a seat in the Music Shed, there are probably a dozen [illegible] stretched out on the spacious [illegible] before the auditorium [illegible] in the sun as they [illegible]

[illegible] individual concerts [illegible] through the Festival [illegible] in Tanglewood.



The music at Tanglewood is just as beautiful when heard while relaxing on the spacious lawn outside the Music Shed. The summer concerts are popular favorites year after year.

21

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Circ. 106,090

JUL 3 1960

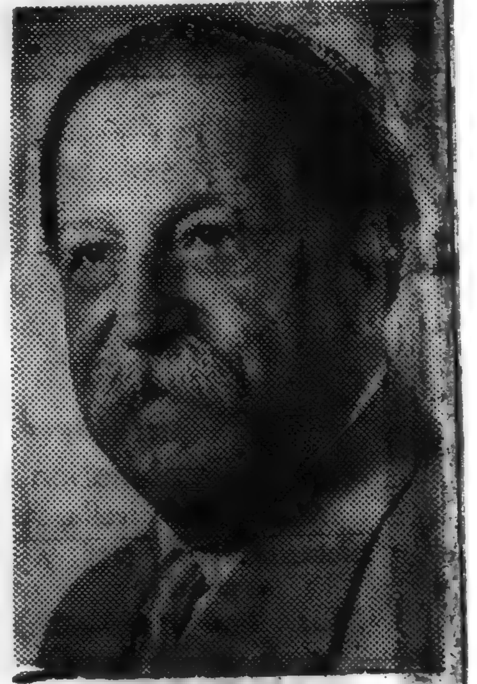
MUSIC

Berkshire Festival Opens Friday At Tanglewood

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

The Berkshire Music Festival gets under way this week with the opening concert scheduled for Friday evening in the Music Shed at Tanglewood. This year's festival adheres closely to the pattern of former years. There are to be the usual six weekends of concerts by the Boston Symphony, extending from Fridays through Sundays. Charles Munch will conduct 14 of the 18 concerts, getting relief from his podium labors in the remaining programs by the orchestra from the venerable Pierre Monteux. Evening concerts will commence at 8:30 o'clock while concert time for the Sunday events is 2:30 p.m.

As for the programs themselves, they will stick pretty closely to the usual "three B's" though a few modern composers such as Stravinsky, Piston, Copland, and a few others will receive a hearing. The first two weekend series are, of course, to be devoted exclusively to music by Bach and Mozart. The annual presentation of Beethoven's Ninth comes earlier this season, moving up from its customary listing in the concluding concert to the Sunday afternoon event on July 31. The final concert on Aug. 14 lists the Damnation of Faust, by Berlioz. The Festival Chorus will assist the orchestra in both of these presentations, among others.



CHARLES MUNCH

In fact, perhaps the most exciting news for many with regard to the festival this year concerns the scheduled vocal presentations. The orchestra, assisted by the chorus, will perform Mozart's "Litany" for the first time in its long history on Saturday evening, July 16. Then, in a "Gala Evening," Aug. 4, the world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-act opera, "Port Town," will be given for the benefit of the festival's school, the Berkshire Music Center. Another choral masterpiece, Faure's "Requiem" is to be given in a Koussevitzky Memorial Concert on Friday evening, July 22.

The Berkshire Music Center commences its activities with opening exercises this afternoon. The many programs scheduled by the various departments of the school will be open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, a group which anyone may join by making a contribution for the work of the school. Boris Goldovsky, after a year's absence, returns this year to head the school's opera department. This department will resume its work, with the help of the Ford Foundation, on the multi-projection shell concept of scenic materials. The completion of this project, inaugurated by the noted scenic designer Elemer Nagy in 1957, will greatly cut down the costs of productions and eliminate the use of cumbersome old-fashioned scenery in the theater and opera house.

PIERRE MONTEUX

This week's opening all-Bach series lists the following: Friday evening—Violin Concerto in E (soloist, William Kroll)—Piano Concerto in F minor (soloist, Seymour Lipkin)—Triple Concerto in A minor (soloists—Kroll, Lipkin and flutist James Pappoutsakis). Saturday evening—Excerpts from "Musical Offering" and "The Art of the Fugue;" Suite No. 4; Piano Concerto in D minor (Lipkin). Sunday afternoon — Suite No. 1; Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 2 and 6; Cantata "Christ lag in Todesbanden" (Festival Chorus). Dr. Munch will conduct all three of these concerts.

The chamber music series at the festival will open on Wednesday evening at 8:30 in the Theater with a program by the Budapest String Quartet. The players will perform Schubert's Quartet in A minor, the Quartet No. 17 (1959) by Villa-Lobos, and Ravel's Quartet.

Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 12,842

JUN 8 - 1960

Around The Clock

Tanglewood's Lineup Stronger Than Ever

By WAYNE A. SMITH

The distance between Franklin County and Lenox has not been shortened since 1959, but Berkshire music festival at Tanglewood looks forward to luring more music lovers over the hills.

This is because it will offer a little more of everything in 1960: and because there are each year a growing number interested in what's being done.

The six-week festival will be opened on July 6, two days after the holiday, and close on Sunday, Aug. 14. And once again all festival events will be on the Boston Symphony Orchestra's 21-acre estate, Tanglewood, near Lenox.

The first week-end of concerts (July 8, 9 and 10) will be devoted to music of Bach: the second week-end (July 15, 16, 17), to Mozart. Among special works are the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust", Aug. 14, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, July 31, and Faure's Requiem, July 22.

-o- -o- -o-

GUEST ARTISTS invited to perform at the festival include the Chilean pianist Claudio Arrau, who will be heard in a performance of Beethoven's Fifth Piano Concerto, July 23, as well as in a Chopin centenary recital, July 20. Soprano Eleanor Steber will be guest in a performance of Berlioz "Damnation of Faust", Aug. 14, and in the Beethoven Ninth Symphony, July 31.

Violinist Ruggiero Ricci will be guest in a performance of the Sibelius violin concerto, Aug. 5. The Jaime Laredo, who won the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music competition last June, will appear for the first time with the orchestra on July 14 in a performance of the Mendelssohn violin concerto.

Pianists Jorge Bolet, Leon Fleisher, Gary Graffman, Eugene Istomin, and Byran Janis will be heard. Among the singers invited are Saramae Endich, Donald Gramm, FredaG ray-Masse, David Laurent, John McCollum, and Martial Singher.

-o- -o- -o-

IN ADDITION to Arrau's recital, five other Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music will be given by the Budapest and Kroll quartets, the Beaux Arts Trio of New York, and pianist Claude Frank, with members of the Boston Symphony.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Aug. 11, while on Aug. 4, a gala evening to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, has been planned.

Fourteen compositions from the classic Bach, Mozart and Cherubini to the contemporary Dutilleux, Copland, and Khrennikov, will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood this season.

The orchestra will play for the first time in its 80 years, Mozart's "Litany", k.243, at the festival on July 16 in a performance conducted by Hugh Ross. A second choral work to be heard for the first time at Tanglewood will be Bach's Cantata No 4, "Christ lag in Todesbanden", which Charles Munch will include in his program of July 10.

Also new to Tanglewood will be the "Requiem" of Gabriel Faure scheduled for the annual Kousevitzky Memorial concert on July 22. Pierre Monteux, who will conduct one concert in each of the four final festival week-ends, will include in his programs two works not previously performed at Tanglewood.

-o- -o- -o-

MUNCH'S GUESTS at the festival range from Monteux, the octogenarian, to 19-year-old violinist Jaime Laredo. Seven of the 25 soloists will be heard for the first time at Tanglewood.

In addition to the 18 concerts to be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 600-seat Music Shed on Friday evenings, Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoons for the six week-ends beginning July 8, the festival will include six Wednesday evening recitals and two programs sponsored by the Fromm Foundation of Chicago.

Pianist William Masselos who played with Pioneer Valley Symphony at its opening concert this past season, will give an all-Copland recital under sponsorship of the Fromm Foundation, Monday, July 18. In honor of his 60th birthday the program will consist of Copland's Piano Fantasy, Piano Variations, and Piano Sonata.

Luciano Berio and members of the Boston Symphony will give a concert of contemporary chamber music under the Foundation's auspices on Aug. 1.

Series tickets for each week-end of three concerts and tickets to the chamber music series are available until June 1, after which the remaining tickets will be available on a single [illegible]

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037

JUL 1 1960

Keep It Cool

WHEN Louis (Satchmo) Armstrong blows his horn at the Newport Jazz Festival tonight, a four-day jam session that is fast becoming a Fourth of July weekend tradition, will be under way.

ARMSTRONG

Jazz that's sweet or hot—but, somehow, always "cool, man, cool"—will bring thousands of devoted "cats" from near and far to purr to the rhythm of the concerts.

And even the music lover who can stand no one more modern than J. S. Bach will admit that's just as it should be.

The Newport show is a loud affirmation of New England's prestige as a resort area offering infinite variety in its attractions.

Close in time, but at the very opposite end of the music scale, is the Tanglewood Festival in the Berkshires that opens its six-week season next Wednesday.

It's our regional good fortune and an American blessing that many vacationists will have a whale of a time at both.

22

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,074

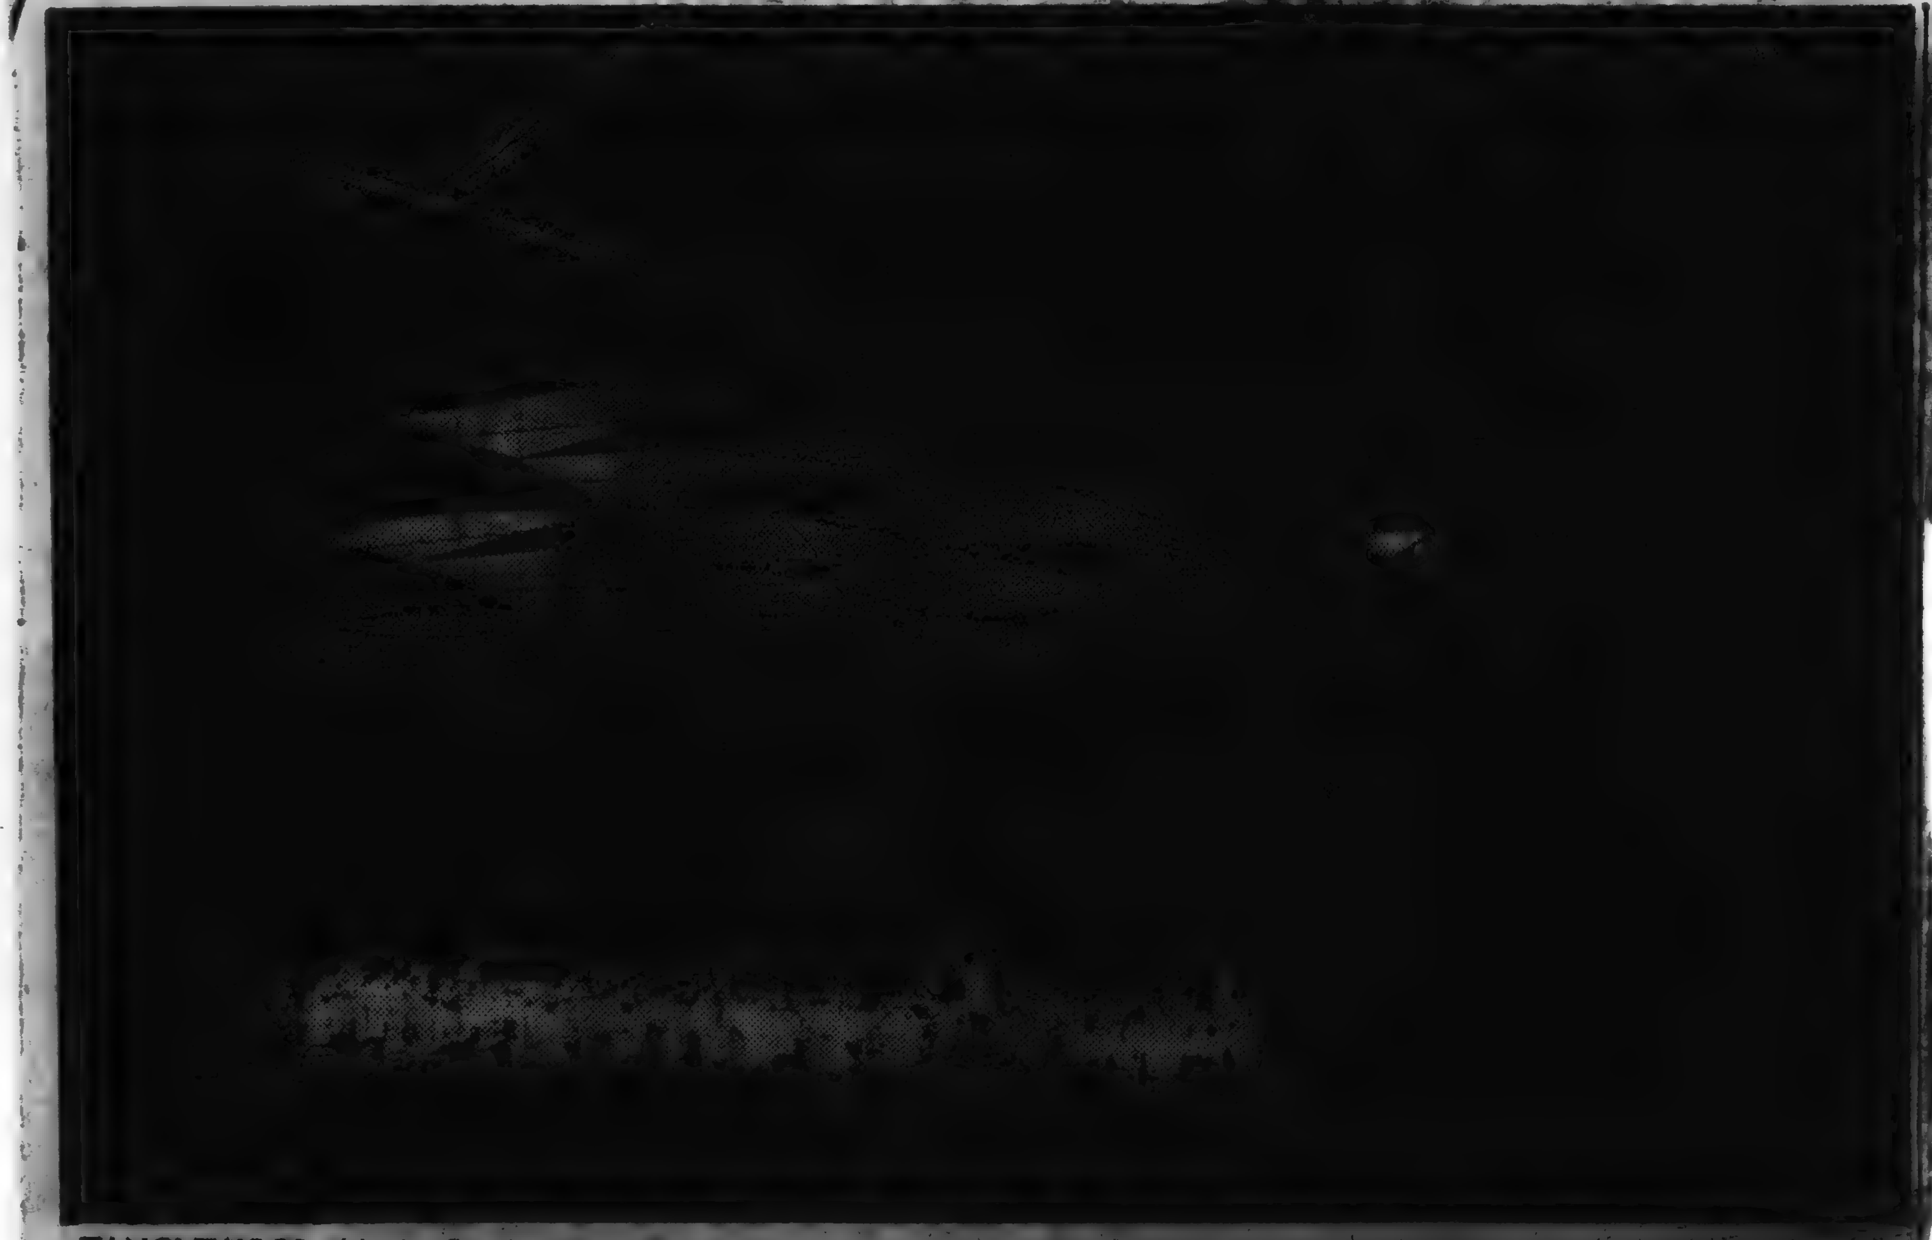
JUL 2 1960

Mahoe

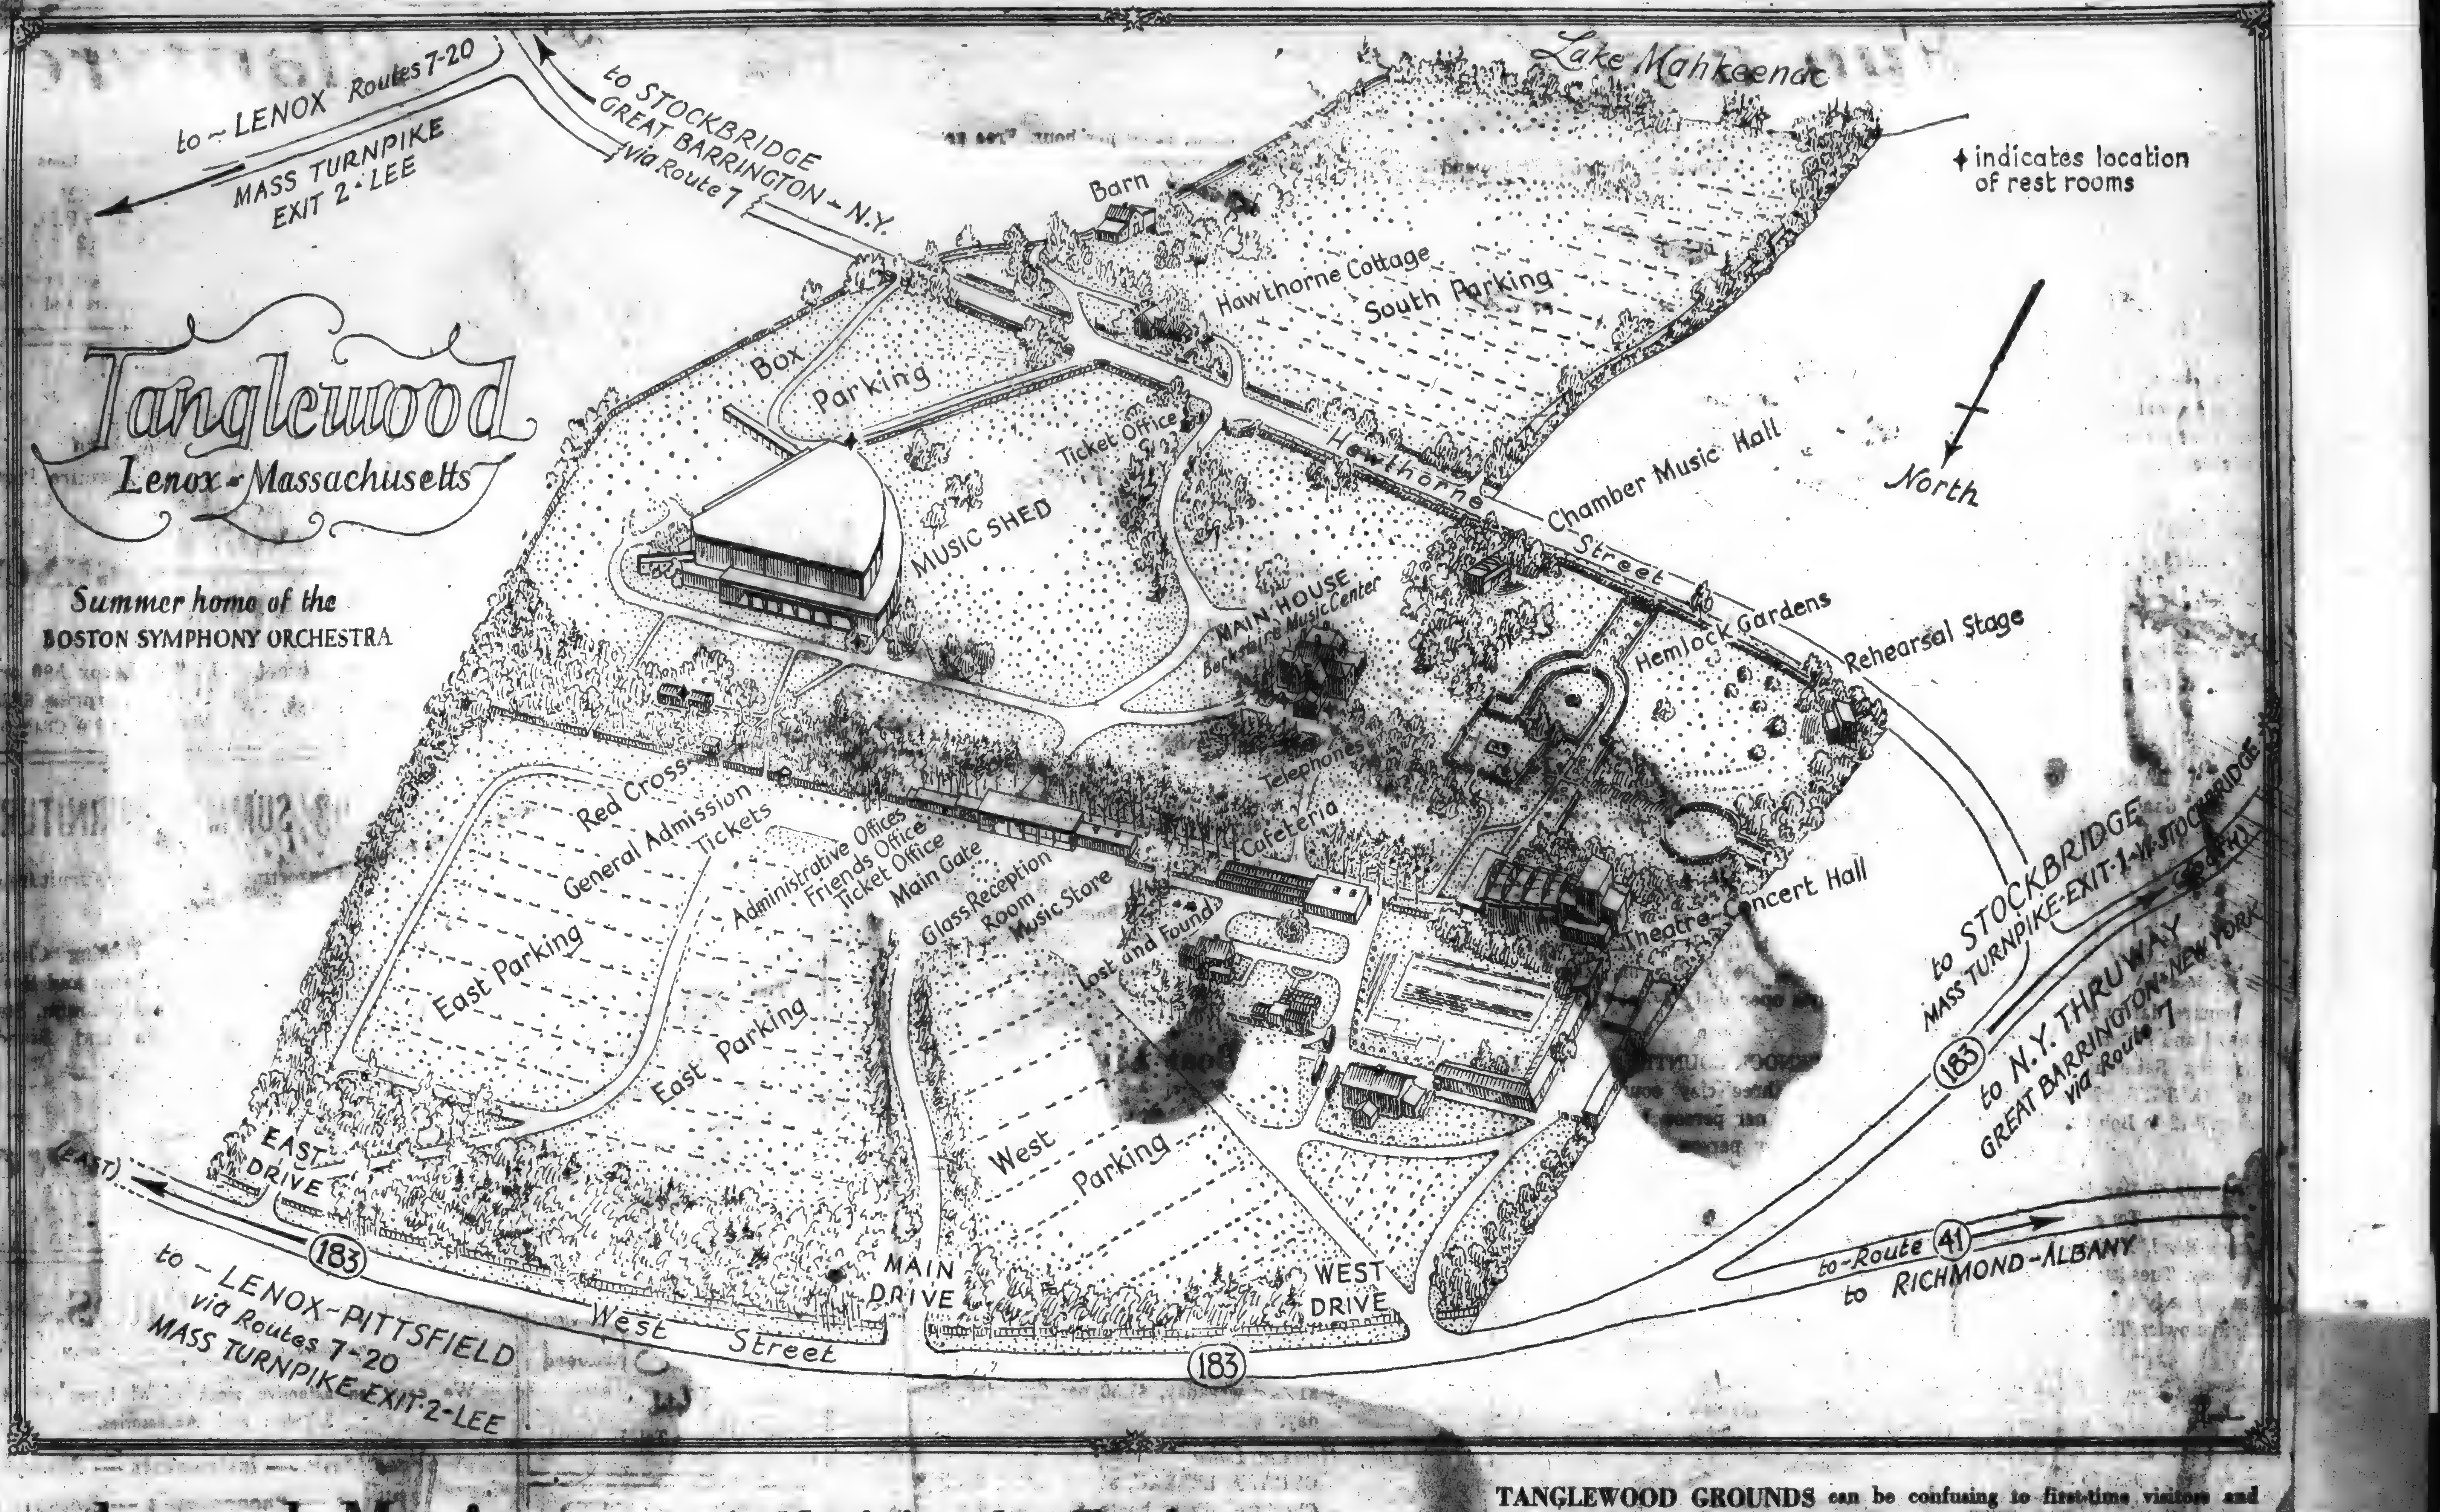
HEADING FOR TANGLEWOOD are two of some 400 students enrolled there at the Berkshire Music Center, which opens tomorrow for its 20th anniversary season. Tomorrow's exercises are a prelude to the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, whose concerts begin Wednesday night with a performance by the [illegible] String Quartet in the Music Shed.

---

18 THE HARTFORD TIMES
Sunday, [illegible]



TANGLEWOOD Music Shed with soaring panels of new acoustic canopy, installed last Summer, makes dramatic picture with Boston Symphony Orchestra on lighted stage and remainder of shed in darkness. Orchestra under Charles Munch's direction opens Berkshire Music Festival next week with classes for students daily and great variety of concerts.



Tanglewood
Lenox - Massachusetts
Summer home of the
BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
to - LENOX Routes 7-20
MASS TURNPIKE EXIT 2 - LEE
to STOCKBRIDGE
GREAT BARRINGTON - N.Y.
via Route 7
Lake Mahkeenac
✦ indicates location of rest rooms
North
Barn
Hawthorne Cottage
South Parking
Box Parking
Ticket Office
Hawthorne Street
Chamber Music Hall
MUSIC SHED
MAIN HOUSE
Berkshire Music Center
Hemlock Gardens
Rehearsal Stage
Telephones
Cafeteria
Theatre - Concert Hall
Red Cross
General Admission Tickets
Administrative Offices
Friends Office
Ticket Office
Main Gate
Glass Reception Room
Music Store
Lost and Found
East Parking
East Parking
West Parking
EAST DRIVE
MAIN DRIVE
WEST DRIVE
West Street
(EAST)
183 to - LENOX - PITTSFIELD via Routes 7-20
MASS TURNPIKE EXIT 2 - LEE
to STOCKBRIDGE
MASS TURNPIKE - EXIT 1 - W. STOCKBRIDGE to N.Y. THRUWAY GREAT BARRINGTON - NEW YORK
via Route 7
to Route 41
to RICHMOND - ALBANY

TANGLEWOOD GROUNDS can be confusing to first-time visitors and because confused music lovers are the worst kind the Boston Symphony Orchestra issues this map. We join Tanglewood in hoping it isn't confusing.

Tanglewood Music: A Musician by Trade

For the better part of three centuries, the province of Thuringia in Southern Germany was heavily populated with Bachs. Records trace the family back to Veit Bach, born in the mid-16th century, a miller who played the zither in his spare time. Devout Lutherans all, the members of this extraordinary line transmitted from one generation to the next a gift for music and good enough training to make music a successful family occupation.

Every town in Thuringia had its church, and many of these churches in turn had their Bachs, who served as organists and choirmasters. Sons, nephews and cousins often succeeded elder Bachs in these positions, since reliability, like talent, was a family trademark which disposed church fathers to employ Bachs as often as they could.

Concerts this weekend at Tanglewood feature the works of Johann Sebastian Bach, who was born in 1685 and who closely resembled his ancestors in appearance and character. Honest, straightforward, probably without humor — his stolid Teutonic face seems little suited to the baroque splendors of his time. His music, on the other hand, is enduring testimony to his genius.

In 1704 the New Church in Arnstadt gave Bach, their organist, a four-week sabbatical to hear his great contemporary, Buxtehude, perform in Lubeck. Bach stayed away 16 weeks. In 1717, he decided to give up the post of chamber organist at the Court of Saxe-Weimar for a similar position at a rival court. The reigning Duke of Weimar promptly clapped his rebellious organist into jail for a month to change his mind, but Bach stood firm.

Johann Sebastian Bach

The last two decades of Bach's life, which he spent at St. Thomas' School in Leipzig, were hardly any easier. Tiresome administrative problems plagued the composer and hatched a series of sharp quarrels with his superiors which were only settled by Bach's death in 1750.

The other side of the coin reveals that Bach, unlike many other composers, always found employment. He was reasonably well off, and he had the satisfaction of hearing most of his own works performed — badly, perhaps, but still performed — and knowing they gave satisfaction.

This busy man found time not only to become the father of 20 children by two marriages, but also to give a solid musical education to those children who lived beyond infancy. Three sons, Wilhelm Friedemann, Karl Philipp Emanuel and Johann Christian, took up the Bach standard after their father died.

In addition to the liturgical, orchestral and instrumental works which are regularly performed today, Bach composed more than 200 sacred and secular cantatas, many of them unfamiliar to the modern public.

This probably wouldn't surprise their composer, who wrote for his own purposes rather than as a genius for posterity. In this regard, Bach often said with unassumed humility that thorough training and hard work were the keys to success as a musician. Like his practical forebears, he took up music as a trade, not because the muse summoned him.

—Walter Howard

i 24

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 4,953

JUL 1 - 1960

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 4,136

JUN 30 1960

Town Crier
WESTPORT, Conn.
Bi-Weekly Independent
Circ. 6,448

JUL 3 1960

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 27,809

JUN 30 1960

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 51,447

JUL 3 1960

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
GAZETTE
D. 47,453

JUL 6 1960

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUN 30 1960

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 1,498

JUL 7 1960

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON,
Mass.
Circ. 12,847

JUN 29 1960

CAIRO, N.Y.
HERALD
W. 420

JUL 7 1960

Berkshire Festival Opens July 8th

Charles Munch returns from a Parisian holiday to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first orchestral concert of the six-week Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Friday, July 8, at 8:30. Doctor Munch and the Orchestra, just returned from an eight-week tour of the Far East, will devote the first three Festival concerts to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach. Violinist William Kroll, pianist Seymour Lipkin and flutist Jas. Pappoutsakis will be soloists in the Friday evening concert.

CHARLES MUNCH

Mr. Lipkin will also be guest in the second all-Bach program on Saturday evening, playing the Piano Concerto in D minor. The final all-Bach program will be given Sunday afternoon when the Berkshire Music Center's Festival Chorus will join Doctor Much and the Orchestra.

To accommodate the audiences for the all-Bach concerts these programs will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed, rather than in the smaller Theatre, under the new Talbot Memorial Canopy which was installed last summer. Those who prefer may listen to these concerts from the great lawn which adjoins the shed.

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Orchestra at Tanglewood in conjunction with the Festival, opened Sunday, July 3.

New Lebanon Echo
5 July 1960

Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 46,674

JUL 3 1960

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,572

JUL 7 1960

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 416,486

JUL 3 1960

SHUNPIKE TO TANGLEWOOD

A Perfect Setting For the Beautiful Music

By JEAN O'BRIEN ERICKSON
Travel Manager, Mass. Division, A.A.A.

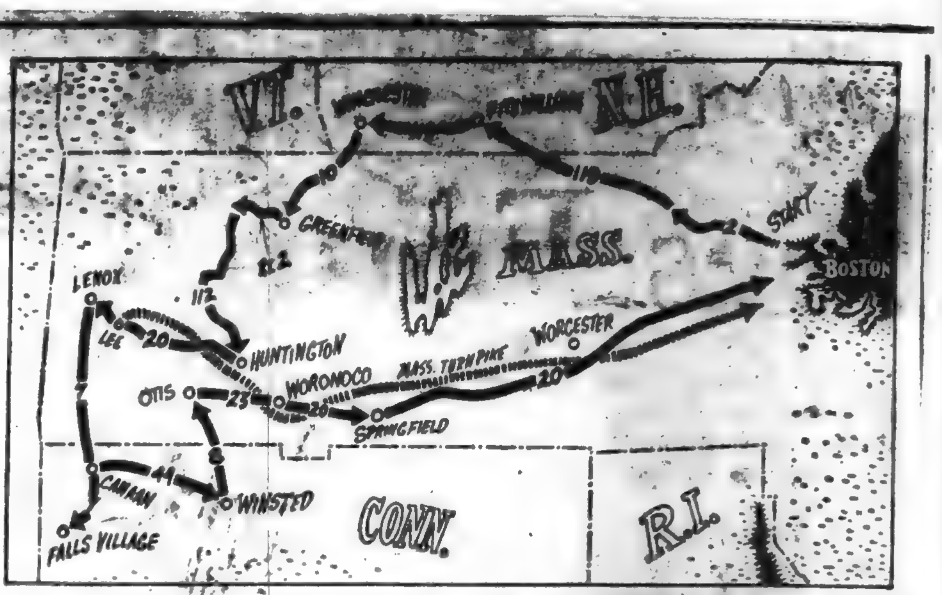
Music lovers will be most interested in this week's shunpike to the Massachusetts Berkshire Hills. The feature attraction is the famous Berkshire Music Festival at the Tanglewood Estate in Lenox.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will have just returned from its eight-week tour to Japan, the Philippines and Australia in time for the Summer concert season in the most beautiful of Berkshire towns. Charles Munch will conduct 14 of the festival concerts which start July 8 with the Bach series. The revered Pierre Monteaux has been invited to conduct one concert in each of the four final week-ends (the festival closes Aug. 14).

★ ★ ★

Tanglewood with its informal Summer atmosphere is a perfect setting for beautiful music. Those who do not purchase reserved seats may sit on the [illegible] Sunday afternoon [illegible] out on a blanket and get a suntan while listening to the world's greatest music. Early arrivers tour the elegant Tanglewood grounds, stroll through the Hemlock garden and view rolling green hills and towering Berkshire peaks in the distance. Guided tours are conducted daily for visitors to the 200-acre estate—the famous school of music and Summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Week-end concerts are held in the Music Shed which seats 6000 but crowds of more than double that have been handled easily by using the spacious Great Lawn where music can be heard clearly due to the acoustic properties of the Music Shed.



THE ROAD TO MUSIC FESTIVAL

Visitors converge on Tanglewood from New England, New York, Canada and even from further west and south—overnight accommodations are sold out well in advance of concert week-ends so do make arrangements in advance. If you are too late for a room in the immediate Lenox, Lee, Pittsfield area, try A.A.A. hotels, inns or motels in Williamstown, Westfield, Massachusetts or in Connecticut in Canaan, Salisbury or Lakeville.

This Berkshire community offers first class entertainment in other art fields—some may enjoy Saturday night at Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in Lee where dancers and dance companies from all over the world perform at the Ted Shawn Theater.

Jazz lovers can combine a Symphony concert with a Sunday night at the Berkshire Music Barn at Music Inn, Lenox, where Louis Armstrong opens today. The Barn also presents Folk Singing Saturday afternoons at 3:30.

★ ★ ★

The leisurely drive west is via 2 and 119 Boston to Fitzwilliam, New Hampshire, where 2½ miles out of the town is a 16 acre bed of wild rhododendron which shouldn't be missed. Full bloom is anytime between [illegible] and July 20. Foot trails in Rhododendron State Park offer views of Grand Monadnock and other mountains in the Currier and Ives Corner of New Hampshire.

Continue along tree shaded 119 to Winchester, N.H.; then swing south on Route 10 to Greenfield; west on the Mohawk Trail; Route 2 by the Bridge of Flowers in Shelburne Falls to the junction of Route 112.

Route 112 winds through hilly farm country of the Pioneer Valley section of Massachusetts to Huntington where US 20 is joined. Follow 20 to Lee and Lenox.

Shunpike music lovers who must return to work Monday will want to spend as much time as possible in Lenox, so a direct return over the Massachusetts Turnpike may be advisable.

Those who can tarry awhile will enjoy visits to the Pleasant Valley Wildlife Sanctuary in Lenox, Berkshire Garden Center in Stockbridge at the junction of Routes 102 and 183 and the Chesterwood Studio in Stockbridge, studio museum of sculptor Daniel Chester French with working models of his famous Lincoln statue in the Washington, D.C. Memorial and the Minute Man in Concord. Beautiful woods and gardens surround the studio. Then continue South on US 7 into Connecticut's Litchfield Hills and beyond Canaan visit Music Mountain in Falls Village where Sunday afternoon concerts are performed by the Berkshire String Quartet during the Summer.

Return to Canaan and follow US 44 to Winsted, Route 8 to Otis, Massachusetts; Mass. 23 to Woronoco and US 20 to Boston.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 104,590

MAY 29 1960

MUSIC

World Premiere at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

The world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-act opera, "Port Town," will be given Aug. 4 as part of a gala evening to benefit the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

Boris Goldovsky, who was on sabbatical last summer from the Center, will reactivate the school's opera department for the 1960 session, July 3 through Aug. 14.

Meyerowitz is a 47-year-old native of Breslau, Germany, pupil of Ottorino Respighi and a former faculty member at Tangelewood. In 1949 the Berkshire school gave the first performance of his "Simoon," and in 1953 it presented his "Bad Boys in School."

Two other one-act operas have been scheduled by Goldovsky for summer presentation: Puccini's "Suor Angelica" and Ravel's "Spanish Hours."

In addition to the complete operas, the department will present, throughout the school year, several concerts of scenes and acts from the standard operatic repertory plus novelties from the contemporary field.

This gala evening, by the way, is in addition to the regular "Tanglewood on Parade," which also benefits the Center and features the Boston Pops Orchestra, conducted by Arthur Fiedler. The "Parade" will be Thursday evening, Aug. 11.

Tanglewood Firsts

Fourteen works will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood this summer by the Boston Symphony:

Dello Joio, "[illegible] Chaconne and Finale" (July [illegible]); Khrennikov, "Symphony [illegible] 1" (July 29); Sibelius, "Violin Concerto" (Aug. [illegible]); Mendelssohn, "Scotch Symphony" (Aug. [illegible]); Dutilleux, "Symphony No. 2" (Aug. 6); Chopin, "Piano Concerto No. 1" (Aug. 13); Copland, "Symphony No. 1" — Composer conducting — (Aug. 13); Bach, "Triple Concerto" (July 8); Bach, Cantata No. 4, "Christ lag in Todesbaden" (July 10); Mozart, "Piano Concerto, K. 491" (July [illegible]); Mozart, "Litany, K. 243" (July [illegible]); Faure, "Requiem" (July 22); Cherubini, "Anacreon Overture" (July 23); Respighi, "Fountains of Rome" (July 23).

Of these, Mozart's "Litany" has never been performed by the Boston Symphony.

Seven soloists will also be heard for the first time with the Boston Symphony, at Tanglewood:

Claude Frank, pianist (July 13 and 16); Joseph Silverstein, violinist (July 17); Jaime Laredo, violinist — debut with the Boston Symphony — (July 24); Freda Gray-Masse, contralto (July 31); David Laurent, bass (July 31); Ruggiero Ricci, violinist (Aug. 5); and Gary Graffman, pianist (Aug. 13).

Boston Symphony Orchestra

Dr. Munch bows as he meets head of Japan Broadcasting Co., at Tokyo press conference during spring tour of Far East.

Tague

Munch's favorite recreation is golf. Like Ike, he shoots in high 80s and practices at home. He is pictured at Pittsfield Country Club.

Back for 10th Season

Charles Munch at Large

By Margo Miller

IN APRIL, when the Boston Symphony Orchestra emplaned for ~~an eight-week~~ string of concerts stretching from Japan to New Zealand, Japanese stewardesses handed out happi coats, informal attire for home wear. One of the coats went to nattily garbed Conductor Charles Munch, and this became another symbol of his far-ranging tours.

Munch is back in the Berkshires for his 10th season at Tanglewood. He'll direct the BSO in 14 concerts during this 1960 pause in travels that have made him a familiar figure in music capitals from A to Z—Amsterdam to Zurich.

With an accolade to the majestic sweep of his dress-suit tails, Munch has been called the world's best-dressed conductor. Off the podium, he's found in dark, double-breasted suits. At his Massachusetts home in Milton, he puts on corduroy slacks and wool sports shirts—and, like all Frenchmen, pads about in felt-bottomed slippers.

• • • •

His new happi coat, however, is more a reminder of travel than of relaxation. A typical Munch vacation is spent conducting other orchestras in Europe and the Middle East. In what time remains after rehearsals, concerts and receptions, he visits museums, galleries and art dealers. Munch is an enthusiastic collector, and each new country is an unsifted treasure chest.

The Munch collections comprise old English silver; paintings by Renoir, Sisley, Manet and Degas; many superb Durers; several oils by Dutch masters, and a newly acquired Ruisdael engraving.

In Amsterdam, the art-collecting conductor finds a happy example of city planning: Only a public garden separates the Rijksmuseum, containing one of Europe's finest art collections, from the Concertgebouw, home of one of its famous orchestras.

He does much of his art buying abroad, but he thinks that one of the world's most extraordinary bazaars is New York's 57th Street. ("They have everything you want.") When the BSO plays its monthly concerts in Carnegie Hall during the winter, Munch browses from dealer to dealer.

He also finds 57th Street one of the more expensive art marts. Recently, on a hunt for silver wine tasters, for which he will pay $10 or $15, he was shown several splendid pieces at $1,500 each. Not only was this trop, it was de trop.

Munch also likes to browse in houses that boast their own treasures. He'll become animated in the examination of old china, objets d'art and pictures. He also has been known to inspect such mechanical marvels as refrigerators, garbage disposers and washing machines.

• • • •

With Munch, as for some other collectors, the U.S. Internal Revenue Service sometimes acts as a prod to produce the gift of a painting that creates an income-tax deduction. Boston's Museum of Fine Arts has gained thus at Munch's expense, and recently he gave Harvard's Fogg Museum a Renoir.

His Paris apartment near the Bois de Boulogne was an informal museum. The French oils hung in his drawing room. The Durers, still in their temporary mattings, were piled in his music room along with his penciled catalogues from old and new sales. This cozy confusion was broken up recently when the government cracked down on the waste of housing space by absentee apartment owners.

The evicted Munch moved to Louveciennes, where Madame du Barry was exiled after Versailles. A proper museum was found there at La Futaie, a country estate which itself is an objet d'art. Within its spacious park are an 18th century house, farm buildings and cottage. Munch lives alone in the manor house.

• • • •

The cottage will be occupied by Munch's nephew, Jean-Jacques Schweitzer, a naval commander stationed in Paris; his wife, pianist Nicole Henriot-Schweitzer, and their baby, Jean-Philippe. The Schweitzers stayed here with Munch last summer at the large home he leases in Richmond. Cmdr. Schweitzer, who golfs with the maestro, also is a nephew of musician-humanitarian Dr. Albert Schweitzer. He is the son of Dr. Munch's elder sister.

Munch himself is a widower. He was married in 1933 to Genevieve Maury, Swiss-born granddaughter of one of the founders of the Nestle chocolate company. Mme. Munch, long ill, died just before the first concert of the BSO's 1956 European tour.

• • • •

An Alsatian, Munch was born in Strasbourg in 1891, and retains a fondness for Alsatian specialties, and for beer. He notes with satisfaction that the Dutch beer, Heineken, is brewed by the chairman of the Concertgebouw trustees. In Yorkville, Manhattan's German section, he can find boudins (black puddings), those tough-skinned sausages filled with a piquant minced meat, native to Alsace.

From his youth, Munch recalls tales of the days when relatives in Alsace-Lorraine (ceded by France to Germany in 1871) sympathized with the French and hid escapees in their cellar. He was conscripted into the German army in World War I; a snapshot of the time shows a tall, gaunt young man not very happy with his uniform. Lest he be caught again in the encroaching German nationalism, Munch left for Paris in 1932.

• • • •

During World War II, the Charles Munches helped to finance the French Resistance Movement. They also made their country house a station on the underground railroad that aided prisoners escaping from Germany and helped Allied plane crews return to England.

One of the members of the Munch Paris household was the conductor's remarkable cat, Fripon (Rascal). He was in evidence at lunchtime, sometimes as much a part of the table setting as the wine carafe. Fripon, despite advanced age, was agile enough to catch a morsel of fillet as it fell from the fork. He's on loan now to the Schweitzers.

Like Fripon, Munch enjoys a good table. But he may begin a meal with boudins and end with such a purely Gallic confection as a vanilla cake cut in layers and pasted together with mocha-and-nut icing. To counter calories and keep fit for the almost daily round of concerts and rehearsals, Munch pedals an exercycle. He discovered the machine in Montreal, and ordered one each for Boston and Paris.

His favorite form of exercise is golf. He plays at the Stockbridge Golf Club, often appearing late Sunday afternoons following Tanglewood's strenuous weekend concerts. His side lawn in Milton provides a convenient practice area for chip shots. When the snows come, he watches professional matches on television. Another post-concert diversion is playing a French card game much like our crazy-eights.

• • • •

While Munch prefers to speak French, and protests that his English is not fluent, he long ago passed the test of ease in a foreign language with his jokes at BSO rehearsals. Once, it seemed that the double basses were playing in unison while their parts were marked divisi, or divided, in the conductor's score. A player inquired where the division should start. "You mean," quipped Munch, " 'what's my line?' "

Sometimes the conductor and his valet-chauffeur, Roger Toureau, discuss various oddities of English. Roger, who claims to have learned much of his English from careful reading of "Mutt & Jeff," will appear, comics in hand, to point out a new word or idiom.

Munch reads more than concert reviews—to him, most critics are "imbeciles"—and quotes from such political columnists as Walter Lippmann. He admires Adlai Stevenson as the most-informed, if unofficial, statesman this country has. When asked his choice in the forthcoming election, he mimicked a "No comment." But he allows that he worries about the hooks and slices of another prominent golfer.

Gus Manos

The conductor, impeccable in white dinner jacket at start of Tanglewood concert, will be rumpled and tired at finish.

Boston Symphony Orchestra

Boston Symphony Orchestra arrives at Tokyo Airport after flight from Formosa. Dr. Munch is at foot of steps waving to greeters.

Tague

Art collector Munch enjoyed party for BSO at Clark Art Institute, Williamstown. He found a Pissarro painting of road to Louveciennes, where he has an estate.

Munch Will Conduct Season's Opening Shed Concert Friday Night

Lipkin, Kroll and Pappoutsakis Soloists in Bach Program; the Curtis String Quartet at Tanglewood Theater Wednesday

This is the week when the 1960 Berkshire Music Festival gets under way at Tanglewood in Lenox. Back from a holiday in France has come Charles Munch, internationally famed music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who is to conduct 14 of the festival's concerts. The Boston musicians have recently returned from an eight-week tour to Japan, the Philippines, New Zealand and Australia. On Friday night, in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in a program of Johann Sebastian Bach. Soloists will be pianist Seymour Lipkin, violinist William Kroll and flutist James Pappoutsakis.

Three Bach Concerts

The Friday night concert begins at 8.30. Mr. Lipkin will be the soloist in the Piano Concerto in F minor. Mr. Kroll will be heard in a performance of the Violin Concerto in E, and Mr. Pappoutsakis with Messrs. Lipkin and Kroll in a performance of Bach's Triple Concerto in A minor.

Mr. Lipkin will also be guest in the second all-Bach program on Saturday night, July 9, at 8.30. In addition to the Piano Concerto in D minor, the program will include Bach's Suite No. 4 plus excerpts from the "Musical Offering" and "The Art of the Fugue." The final all-Bach program will be given Sunday afternoon, July 10, at 2.30, when the Berkshire Music Center's Festival Chorus will join Doctor Munch and the Orchestra in a performance of the Cantata No. 4, "Christ lag in Todesbanden." The program also includes Suite No. 3 and the Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 and 2.

To accommodate the audiences for the all-Bach concerts these programs will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed, rather than in the smaller theater, under the new Talbot Memorial Canopy which was installed last summer. Those who prefer may listen to these concerts from the great lawn which adjoins the Shed.

The Curtis Quartet

Dr. Munch has invited the Curtis String Quartet to give the opening concert of the Berkshire Festival's Chamber Music Series on Wednesday night at 8.30. The Curtis Quartet will replace the Budapest Quartet which was announced for this season but which has cancelled its summer tour due to the illness of one of its members.

Mozart's Quartet in D minor, K. 421, will open the Curtis Quartet's program. Also scheduled is the Quartet No. 2, Op. 24, by the contemporary American composer, Vincent Persichetti, and Ravel's Quartet in F major.

Members of the Quartet are Jascha Brodsky, violin; Mehli Mehta, violin; Max Aronoff, viola, and cellist Orlando Cole. Mr. Aronoff is director of Philadelphia's New School of Music and, along with Messrs. Brodsky and Cole, a faculty member at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. Second violinist Mehli Mehta was born in Bombay and came to the United States to join the Curtis Quartet after several years as a member of Sir John Barbirolli's Halle Orchestra in Manchester, England. His son, Zubin Mehta, an alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center, will make his New York debut next week as conductor at the Lewissohn Stadium concerts in Manhattan.

Five additional chamber music programs will be given at Tanglewood on the next five Wednesday evenings. Pianist Claude Frank and the Bel Arte Trio will be heard on July 13. On July 20 Claudio Arrau will give a Chopin Centenary Recital and the Beaux Arts Trio of New York are scheduled for July 27. Leon Fleisher will be heard in a program of sonatas for the piano on August 3 and the series will close on August 10 with a program by the Kroll Quartet.

Friends of the Center

Tickets for the three all-Bach orchestral concerts, for the Orchestra's Open Rehearsal on Saturday morning (July 9, at 10) and for the Curtis String Quartet recital are on sale at Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., (Lenox 600). Tickets and complete information for the remaining five weeks of the 1960 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are also available at the Festival Office, Tanglewood.

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Orchestra at Tanglewood in conjunction with the Festival, opens July 3. Friends of the Center are invited to four events. The first Listeners Forum, "The Composer as Listener," will be held Tuesday night, July 5, at 8.30. The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will give a concert in the Music Shed on Thursday night, July 7, at 8.30. A Seminar in Contemporary Music will be held Friday afternoon, July 8, at 3.15. Members of the Center's Chamber Music Department will present a recital in the Chamber Music Hall on Sunday, July 10, at 10 a. m.

Tanglewood Events

Wednesday, July 6, 8.30, Theater: The Curtis Quartet—Mozart, Quartet in D minor, K. 421; Vincent Persichetti, Quartet No. 2, Op. 24, Ravel, Quartet in F major.

Complete programs:

Friday, July 8, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting—All-Bach: Suite No. 1; Violin Concerto in E (Kroll); Piano Concerto in F minor (Lipkin); Triple Concerto in A minor (Pappoutsakis, Kroll, Lipkin)

Saturday July 9, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting—All-Bach: Excerpts from "Musical Offering"; Excerpts from "The Art of the Fugue"; Piano Concerto in D minor (Lipkin); Suite No. 4.

Sunday, July 10, 2.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting—All-Bach: Suite No. 3; Brandenburg Concerto Nos. 6 and 2; Cantata: "Christ lag in Todesbanden" (Festival Chorus).

Activities of the Berkshire Music Center to which friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited:

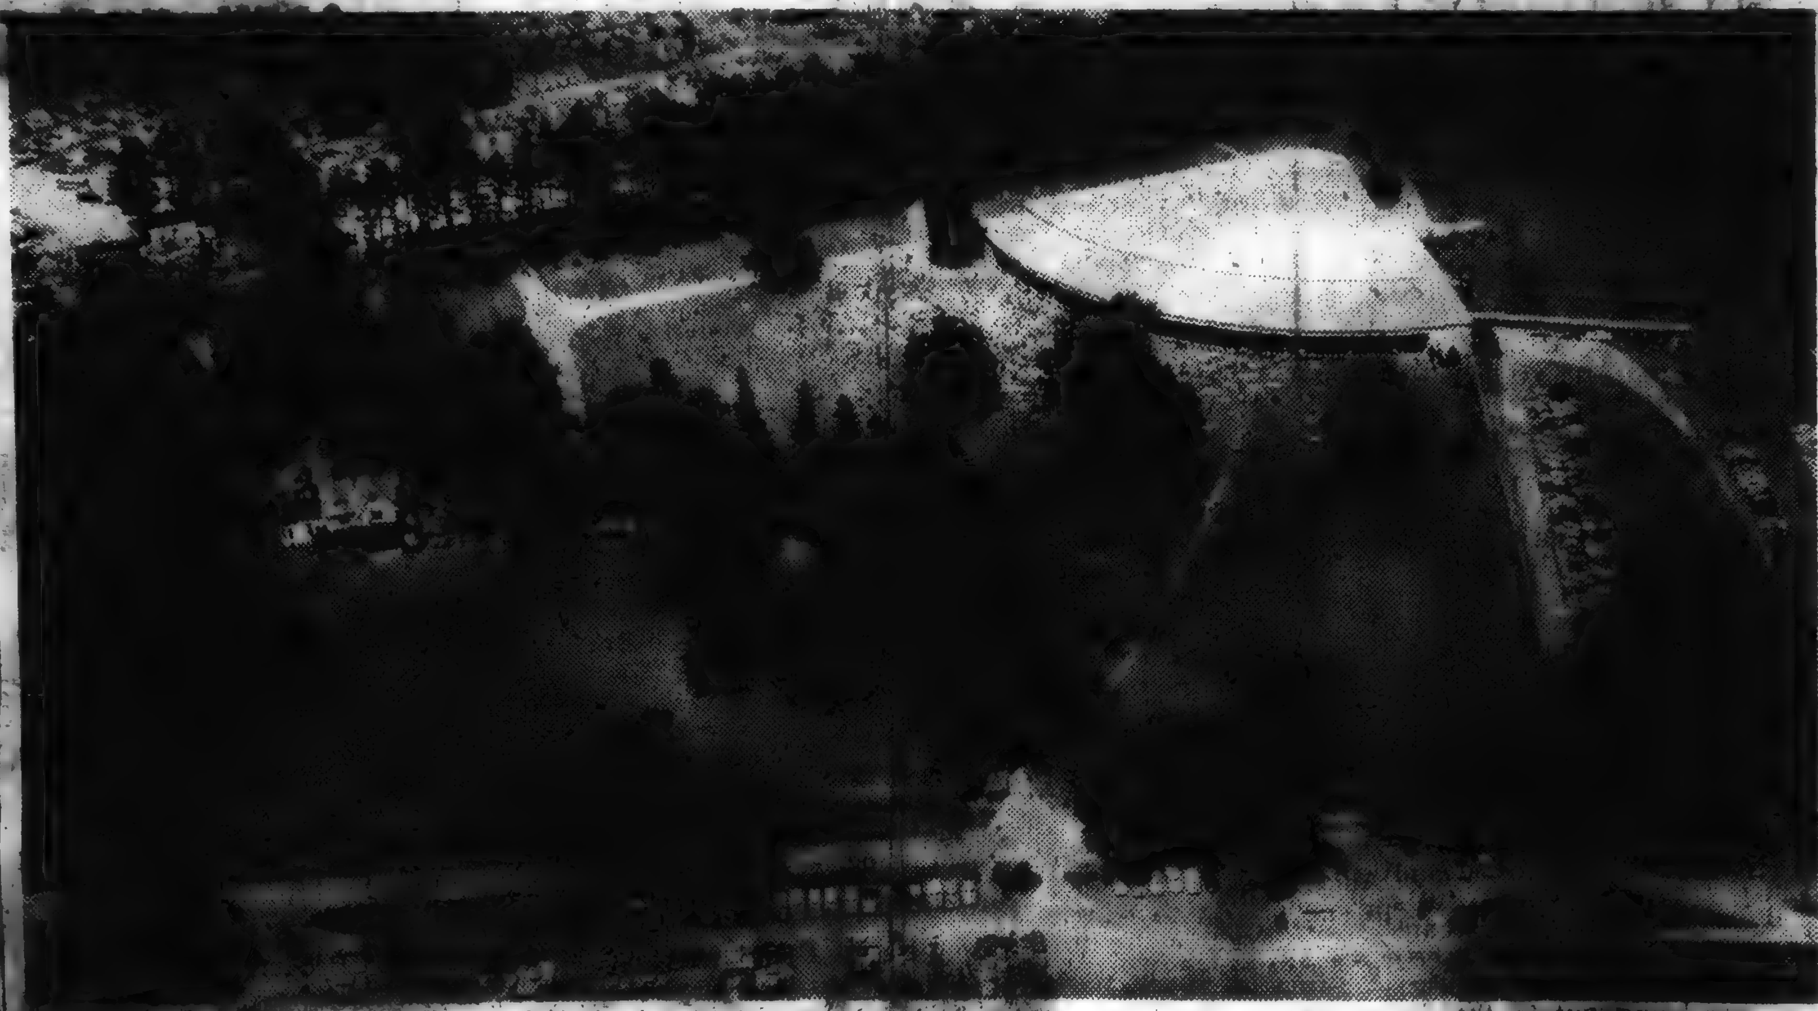
Tuesday, July 5, 8.30 p. m., Chamber Music Hall: Listeners Forum.

Thursday July 7, 8.30, Music Shed: Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

Friday July 8, 3.15, Chamber Music Hall: Seminar in Contemporary Music.

Sunday, July 10, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall: BMC Chamber Music.

Music Festival Opens at Tanglewood This Week



DR. CHA[illegible]

Here you see the Music Shed and grounds at Tanglewood, Lenox, where the Berkshire Music Festival opens its 1960 season Wednesday night with a chamber music concert in the Theater by the Curtis String Quartet. On Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed in programs devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach. Soloists will be pianist Seymour Lipkin, violinist William Kroll and flutist James Pappoutsakis.

SEYMOUR LIPKIN

Violin Playing at Lenox

By [illegible] Berkshire Music Center

LENOX—For serious and [illegible] violin students as well as other string players, the summer [illegible] at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood [illegible] for intensive work in musical fields of the highest importance to any potentially first-rate professional musician.

Full Program

Orchestral rehearsals under the conductor, and weekly performances [illegible] symphonic program are combined with daily chamber music classes under such artists as William Kroll, Richard Burgin, and other eminent string players. Although no individual instruction is given there is constant [illegible] rehearsals [illegible] chamber music classes [illegible] discussion of the [illegible] technical and artistic problems which all string players are faced with.

Tanglewood's summer sessions have long been known for the surprising development which young musicians find they are capable of making when they work and study in the unique musical atmosphere it [illegible].

[illegible] outstanding string players at each session always are offered the opportunity of solo appearances with the orchestra in addition to regular chamber music concert appearances each week for large audiences.

The summer's end is also marked at the Berkshire Music Center by the awarding of prizes to those students who have shown their sustained worthiness and promise of future development.

Outstanding among these awards is the [illegible] Heifetz Award, inaugurated at Tanglewood by the eminent violinist. [illegible] is given to the violin student [illegible] in the faculty's judgment is considered worthy of such an important honor. In 1960 the Heifetz Award will be in the amount of nearly $1000.

Other important string playing awards are the Piatigorsky Prize, for outstanding cello student, and various other prizes and scholarships for the most talented and serious string students.

Second Thoughts On Music

Tanglewood Provides Fine Surroundings for Artistic Efforts of Hub Symphony

Berkshire Festival to Feature Many Outstanding Performers, Standard Repertoire, Pleasant Atmosphere

By WILLARD M. CLARK

For the next six weeks this column will be written from Lenox where we will be attending the 1960 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch. The veteran Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor, making his initial appearance on July 23.

Great Music

It will be fun getting back to the festival, meeting old friends and making new ones, we hope, as well as hearing great music performed about as well as it can be, amid the beauties of Tanglewood.

It will be beautiful. The grass will be green, the foliage lush and the views, as always, unexcelled.

We have had the same seats in the Music Shed ever since it has opened; seats right in front of Madame Koussevitzky's box. With new contributions to the acoustics of the Shed unveiled last summer, the thousands of persons who [illegible] concerts outside [illegible] will hear them more clearly [illegible] One of the joys of [illegible] to be the ability [illegible] to attend—children [illegible] the whole works—[illegible] outside [illegible]. Many persons have told us that they no longer go to Tanglewood because of the crowds and the [illegible] attendant to getting out after the concerts. Getting out is much easier than it used to be. Parking facilities are better handled and the roads are well kept. Of course if one can't remember where one left the car that is not the fault of the Tangelwood management. All one needs do is to wait until all cars are gone and the remaining one will probably be the one you couldn't find. Its all quite simple if it is true that "patience is a virtue."

What of the music we shall hear? The standard repertoire for the most part. A few works will not have been performed at the festival before, as for example, Mozart's "Litany;" the Dutilleux "Symphony No. 2" or the Bach cantata "Christ lag in Todesbanden." There will be the violin concertos of Mendelssohn, Mozart and Sibelius, the Mozart bassoon concerto, clarinet concertos and "Sinfonia Concertante" and piano concertos by Bach, Beethoven, Rachmaninoff, Brahms and Liszt and, of course a performance of Beethoven's ninth symphony. We inquired at one point why the ninth symphony was given so often. The reason was very simple, it still draws the largest audiences. It should be particularly exciting this summer because Pierre Monteux will be the conductor.

Chamber Series

The chamber music series has been considerably revitalized with such fine ensembles as the Budapest and Kroll Quartets on hand, along with the exciting Beaux Arts Trio and a Chopin recital by Claudio Arrau and the appearance of pianist Claude Frank with a group of BSO instrumentalists. There is a very special audience which attends these concerts, a really musical group.

Just what will happen operawise, we do not know. Goldovsky will be on hand, but whether some exciting opera will be put on, or just opera scenes has not yet been announced. However it will be good to have the genial talkative Boris back again.

All this adds up to a good festival and we hope to see more people from Springfield in attendance than we have noted during the past couple of years. Perhaps we are getting more sophisticated hereabouts to want to hear the standard repertoire, or perhaps too lazy to make the effort. It hardly seems possible that the modest price of admission to the groups where [illegible] heard [illegible]

Beside [illegible] can visit the Music [illegible]

[illegible] high [illegible] a few [illegible] highlighting the [illegible] weeks of the festival. One of our favorite trios, the Beaux Arts Trio of New York will play Wednesday, July 27. On Friday, July 29, the spectacular American pianist, Byron Janis, will play the Rachmaninoff third piano concerto. On this same program Charles Munch will offer the first symphony of Khrennikov. Sunday afternoon, July 31, Pierre Monteux will offer the ninth symphony of Beethoven. Soloists will be same ones who [illegible] with him in a recent [illegible] performance, Eleanor Steber, [illegible] Gray-Massey, John McCollum and David Laurent.

[illegible] Aug. 5 Mr. Munch offers [illegible] program choosing [illegible] works of Wagner, Sibelius [illegible] Mendelssohn. [illegible] Sibelius violin concerto will be [illegible] by [illegible] min, [illegible] favorite pianist [illegible] festival audiences, will be heard Aug. 6 in the second piano concerto of Brahms. On this same program Mr. Munch offers the second symphony of Dutilleux. Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7, Beethoven's third piano concerto will have Leon Fleisher as soloist.

Arthur Fiedler puts the Boston Pops Orchestra through its paces Aug. 11, a sure draw concert if there ever was one. Jorge Bolet, one of the very best pianists will be heard in Liszt's "Piano concerto in E flat" Aug. 12 and on the same program Monteux offers the Stravinsky "Firebird Suite." Gary Graffman, another excellent American pianist plays Chopin's first piano concerto Aug. 13 and Copland will conduct his own first symphony. Sunday, Aug. 14, the festival will close with a performance of the "Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz. This work is a favorite with Mr. Munch. Soloists will be Eleanor Steber, John McCollum and Martial Singher.

26

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUN 25 1960

Building Rebuilding Real Estate

New Acoustical Panels Added at Tanglewood

Libriest.

ACOUSTICAL REFLECTIVE WALL, containing 16 rectangular plywood panels and constructed by Ernest J. Cramer Inc., will replace the pressed-cardboard wall originally construted after the Tanglewood Music Shed was built in 1938. Eero Saarinen Associates designed the new hall, which curves across the rear of the shed. Consulting acoustical engineers were Bolt, Beranek and Newman of Boston. Panels have been pained charcoal gray and complement the Talbot Memorial Stage Canopy.

Music Shed Also Gains New Addition

LENOX — A new acoustical reflective wall, a small demountable stage enclosure for Bach-Mozart concerts, reception rooms, an enlarged library, dressing rooms for guest artists, and enlarged storage spaces have been completed in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

The reflective wall, which curves across the entire rear section of the huge shed, replaces the pressed cardboard wall that was installed soon after the structure was completed in 1938.

Ernest J. Cramer Inc. of Pittsfield had the contract to build the reflective wall as well as the small enclosure on the stage for the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Artists' Rooms Added

Tanglewood Superintendent James Kiley's crew constructed the new reception room, soloists' dressing rooms, and library, which measures 114 feet along the southeast side of the shed.

The reflective wall contains 16 rectangular plywood panels, complementing the Talbot Memorial Stage Canopy that was added to the shed last season, replacing the shell which was constructed in 1934 by the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., for the first concerts at the Hanna Farm in Interlaken. The original shell was later moved to Tanglewood when the Music Shed was built.

The original reflective wall was designed by Professor Richard Fay of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. The wall had been deteriorating in recent years and the BSO trustees decided to have it replaced this spring.

Pyramid-Shaped Panels

The new panels erected in place of the pressed cardboard were designed by Eero Saarinen Associates in collaboration with Bolt, Beranek and Newman, as consulting acoustical engineers. These are the same firms that designed the Edmund Hawes Talbot Memorial State Canopy. The panels are in the shape of rectangular pyramids and have been painted the same deep charcoal gray used in the stage canopy.

The stage enclosure contains 28 single panels, constructed of twisted three-eights-inch plywood on a rigid framing, which can be easily handled and stored. The sections are held together with wooden pegs, and the enclosure can be adjusted to fit any type of a small orchestra or ensemble.

The enclosure also was designed by Eero Saarinen Associates in collaboration with Bolt, Beranek and Newman. Louvers to take care of brass sections have been constructed for the center of the enclosure, which will be used for the first Bach concert in the Music Shed on July 8.

New Suite for Munch

Osceola Crandall of Stockbridge, the Tanglewood carpenter, built the addition to the shed, which includes a new suite for the BSO conductor and musical director, Dr. Charles Munch. The total addition comprises over 3,000 square feet of new floor space.

The acoustical reflective wall and stage enclosure were painted by Harry Clark of the Tanglewood crew, assisted by Allan Brown of Stockbridge.

The 1960 Berkshire Festival season will open Sunday, July 3, with exercises in the theater concert hall, marking the opening of the Berkshire Music Center.

The concert season will start Wednesday, July 6, at 8:30 p.m. in the theater concert hall when the Budapest Quartet will be heard. On the following Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Dr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony in three Bach concerts in the Music Shed.

The major concerts by the BSO will open in the shed July 22 and run through Aug. 14.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's staff has started to arrive at Tanglewood. The box ofifce is now open and the press quarters and other departments will be open Tuesday.

SMALL STAGE ENCLOSURE built for the Bach-Mozart concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed at Tanglewood by Ernest C. Cramer Inc. of Pittsfield, is demountable. Designed to give visual and acoustical intimacy to smaller concerts in the shed.

NEW ADDITION to the Music Shed at Tanglewood includes a suite for the conductor, Dr. Charles Munch; reception and dressing rooms for guest artists; an enlarged library-storage room. Tanglewood Superintendent James Kiley shows the improvements to Sanford Sistaire.

NEW ENGLAND

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 25,217

1960

College Campus and Conservatory

Tanglewood to Premiere New Meyerowitz Opera

The world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-act opera "Port Town" will be given on Aug. 4 as part of a "Gala Evening" to benefit the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. Boris Goldovsky, who last season was on a sabbatical leave, will re-activate the school's Opera Department for the 1960 season of the Berkshire Music Center, extending from July 3 through Aug. 14. The summer opera presentations at Tanglewood will also include Puccini's "Suor Angelica" and Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnole," as well as several concerts of scenes from other works from the standard repertory and contemporary field.

This will be the third Meyerowitz work to be given at the Berkshire Music Centre, where the composer was formerly a member of the faculty. His "Simoon" had its first performance there in 1949, and his "Bad Boys in School" was sung there in 1953.

The Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony will include a revival of Mozart's "Litany" (K. 243) on July 16, conducted by Hugh Ross. Charles Munch will include in the July 10 concert Bach's Cantata No. 4, "Christ lag in Todesbanden," in its local premiere. Fauré's "Requiem" will have its first Tanglewood hearing on July 22.

Guest conductors will include Pierre Monteux, leading one concert in each of the four final weekends. Debuts at the festival will be made by pianists Gary Graffman and Claude Frank; alto Freda Gray-Masse; bass David Laurent; violinists Ruggiero Ricci and Joseph Silverstein. There will also be six Wednesday evening recitals. Two programs will be sponsored by the Fromm Foundation of Chicago: on July 18 an all-Copland recital will be played by William Masselos, pianist, and on Aug. 1, Luciano Berio and members of the Boston Symphony will give a concert of contemporary chamber music.

Claudio Arrau will be heard in a Chopin Centenary recital on July 20, and will appear as soloist with Monteux and the orchestra on July 23. The Budapest Quartet will be heard on Wednesday evening, July 6; Claude Frank with members of the Boston Symphony on July 13; the Beaux Arts Trio of New York on July 27, and the Kroll Quartet on Aug. 10. Another event, not yet announced, will take place on Aug. 17 in the Wednesday night series. The usual Boston Symphony Friday night, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts will open in the Music Shed on July 8.

Music

Tanglewood Festival To Run July 6 to 14

By Alfred Burke

LOWELL—Boris Goldovsky will return to the Berkshire Festival which will be held in Tanglewood, Lenox, from July 6 to Aug. 14, as director of the opera classes and the opera night productions. The program for this year calls for productions of opera scenes.

Mr. Goldovsky who has specialized in both the opera recital form and the production of seldom performed works has planned an interesting series. In his work he will direct several promising young singers as well as those known in other parts of the country.

Singers from this city have participated both as performers and students during the past years of the opera group at the festival. Among those from Lowell who have appeared at Tanglewood were Kiki Sarris, Rosalind Elias and George Tsandikos.

Among concert highlights to be enjoyed during the evening programs will be concerts by the Budapest Quartet on July 6; the Chopin centenary recital by the world renown pianist, Claudio Arrau on July 20; the BMC Opera scenes on July 25, a chamber concert by the Beau Arts Trio of New York on July 27; a gala evening—a program to benefit the Berkshire Music center, Aug. 4, and Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops at the annual Pops night at Tanglewood, this scheduled for Aug. 11.

Boris Goldovsky

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 25,217

JUN 1960

College Campus and Conservatory

Tanglewood to Premiere New Meyerowitz Opera

The world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-act opera "Port Town" will be given on Aug. 4 as part of a "Gala Evening" to benefit the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. Boris Goldovsky, who last season was on a sabbatical leave, will re-activate the School's Opera Department for the 1960 season of the Berkshire Music Center, extending from July 3 through Aug. 14. The summer opera presentations at Tanglewood will also include Puccini's "Suor Angelica" and Ravel's "L'Heure Espagnole," as well as several concerts of scenes from other works from the standard repertory and contemporary field.

This will be the third Meyerowitz work to be given at the Berkshire Music Centre, where the composer was formerly a member of the faculty. His "Simoon" had its first performance there in 1949, and his "Bad Boys in School" was sung there in 1953.

The Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony will include a revival of Mozart's "Litany" (K. 243) on July 16, conducted by Hugh Ross. Charles Munch will include in the July 10 concert Bach's Cantata No. 4, "Christ lag in Todesbanden," in its local premiere. Fauré's "Requiem" will have its first Tanglewood hearing on July 22.

Guest conductors will include Pierre Monteux, leading one concert in each of the four final weekends. Debuts at the festival will be made by pianists Gary Graffman and Claude Frank; alto Freda Gray-Masse; bass David Laurent; violinists Ruggiero Ricci and Joseph Silverstein. There will also be six Wednesday evening recitals. Two programs will be sponsored by the Fromm Foundation of Chicago: on July 18 an all-Copland recital will be played by William Masselos, pianist, and on Aug. 1, Luciano Berio and members of the Boston Symphony will give a concert of contemporary chamber music.

Claudio Arrau will be heard in a Chopin Centenary recital on July 20, and will appear as soloist with Monteux and the orchestra on July 23. The Budapest Quartet will be heard on Wednesday evening, July 6; Claude Frank with members of the Boston Symphony on July 13; the Beaux Arts Trio of New York on July 27, and the Kroll Quartet on Aug. 10. Another event, not yet announced, will take place on Aug. 17 in the Wednesday night series. The usual Boston Symphony Friday night, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon concerts will open in the Music Shed on July 8.

Music

Tanglewood Festival To Run July 6 to 14

By Alfred Burke

LOWELL—Boris Goldovsky will return to the Berkshire Festival which will be held in Tanglewood, Lenox, from July 6 to Aug. 14, as director of the opera classes and the opera night productions. The program for this year calls for productions of opera scenes.

Mr. Goldovsky who has specialized in both the opera recital form and the production of seldom performed works has planned an interesting series. In his work he will direct several promising young singers as well as those known in other parts of the country.

Singers from this city have participated both as performers and students during the past years of the opera group at the festival. Among those from Lowell who have appeared at Tanglewood were Kiki Sarris, Rosalind Elias and George Tsandikos.

Among concert highlights to be enjoyed during the evening programs will be concerts by the Budapest Quartet on July 6; the Chopin centenary recital by the world renown pianist, Claudio Arrau on July 20; the BMC Opera scenes on July 25, a chamber concert by the Beau Arts Trio of New York on July 27; a gala evening—a program to benefit the Berkshire Music center, Aug. 4, and Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops at the annual Pops night at Tanglewood this scheduled for Aug. 11.

Boris Goldovsky

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

36

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,572

MAY 5 - 1960

Berkshire Nights Tickets Now on Sale

Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna Is Again Named Chairman

Program Offered For Four Friday Evenings Has Been Announced By Tanglewood Advisory Committee.—Series Will Begin Friday, July 22. Munch, Monteux, Directors.

Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna of 20 Warwick street, Pittsfield, has again been named chairman of the fourth annual Berkshire Nights series of concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra to be presented at the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox this season, the Tanglewood Advisory Committee announced this week.

Subscribers to the Berkshire Nights are offered four Friday evening concerts for the same price as the usual subscription to three concerts on one week-end. The subscription deadline is June 1. Mrs. Mahanna was re-named chairman of the drive by Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony orchestra which has been on a tour of Japan and the Far East. The Friday night programs are being offered on July 22, July 29, August 5, and August 12. Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the BSO will direct three programs of the series, and Pierre Monteux, will be the conductor for the other.

The July 22 program will feature the Koussevitzky memorial concert with a performance of Beethoven "Eroica" symphony, Faure's "Requiem" with soloists, and the Festival chorus, (Endich; Gramm.) The July 29 program will be an all-Russian program, featuring, Stravinsky, "Jeu de Cartes"; Khrennikov "Symphony No. 1;" and Rachmanioff's "Third Piano Concerto," in which the young American pianist, Byron Janis will be the featured soloist.

The third series, on August 5, will be featured by violinist Ruggiero Ricci in Jean Sibelius' Violin "Concerto." Also to be presented that evening will be Wagner Excerpts, "Die Meistersinger" and Mendelssohn's "Scotch symphony."

The August 12 program will be directed by Pierre Monteux. The 85-year old guest conductor will direct the orchestra in the presentation of Beethoven's "Symphony No. 2," the Liszt piano "Concerto in E-Flat," featuring Jorge Bolet, and Stravinsky Suite from "The Firebird."

The subscriptions for the Berkshire Nights Concerts may be sent to Mrs. Mahanna at her home address. The other members of the Tanglewood Advisory Committee are Alan J. J. Blau, Lenges Bull, Robert Capeless, Henry W. Dwight, George W. Edman, Lawrence K. Miller, George E. Molz, Whitney S. Stoddard, Jesse L. Thomason, Robert K. Wheeler, H. George Wilde, and the chairmen of the boards of selectmen (ex officio) of Lenox, Stockbridge, and Lee, David H. Mackey, Robert G. Williams and William O'Brien, respectively.

The Berkshire Nights series was started four years ago in an effort to interest more of the area residents in the program at Tanglewood, and thus the committee instituted the plan of making the rates cheaper in price with the package plan.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

MAY 6 1960

Boston Symphony Tanglewood Series Fridays

Local concert followers will be interested in announcement by the Tanglewood Advisory Committee that the fourth annual Berkshire Nights series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on four consecutive Friday evenings in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Subscribers to the Berkshire Nights are offered the four Friday concerts for the same price as the usual subscription to three concerts in one week-end, a saving of about 25 per cent. The subscription closes June 1.

The Friday programs are being offered on July 22, 29 and Aug. 5 and 12. Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony, will conduct three of the four Friday night programs and Pierre Monteux the other.

This season's series will include the Koussevitzky Memorial concert on July 22 with a performance of Faure's Requiem with soloists and the Festival chorus; an all-Russian program on July 29, with the young American pianist, Byron Janis, as guest soloist in Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto; violinist Ruggiero Ricci in a performance on Aug. 5 of Jean Sibelius' Violin Concerto and Pierre Monteux, the 85-year-old guest conductor of the BSO, conducting Franz Liszt's Piano Concerto in E-flat with Jorge Bolet on Aug 12.

Subscriptions for the series are being received by Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna of Pittsfield, chairman for the past three years, and must be made before June 1.

News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,700

MAY 12 1960

List Dates For Berkshire Night Concerts

The Tanglewood Advisory Committee recently announced plans for the fourth annual Berkshire Nights series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on four consecutive Friday evenings in the Music Shed at Tang[illegible]d.

Subscribers to the Ber[illegible]e Nights are offered four [illegible]ay evening concerts for the [illegible]me price as the usual subscription to three concerts in one weekend. The subscription deadline is June 1.

Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna of Pittsfield has been renamed chairman of the subscription drive by Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. She has served in this capacity for three years.

Dates Listed

The Friday programs are being offered July 22, 29, Aug. 5 and 12.

Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the BSO, will conduct three of the four Friday night programs and Pierre Monteux, the other.

This season's Berkshire Nights series will include the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert on July 22 with a performance of Faure's Requiem with soloists and the Festival chorus; an all-Russian program on July 29, with the young American pianist, Byron Janis, as guest soloist in Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto; violinist Ruggiero Ricci in a performance on Aug. 5 of Jean Sibelius' Violin Concerto and Pierre Monteux, the 85-year-old guest conductor of the BSO, conducting Franz Liszt's Piano Concerto in E-flat with Jorge Bolet on Aug. 12.

Subscriptions for the Berkshire Nights concerts may be sent to Mrs. Mahanna, 20 Warwick St., Pittsfield, before June 1.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 28,770

MAY 3, 1960

At Tanglewood

Berkshire Nights Concerts Announced for 4th Season

LENOX — The Tanglewood Advisory Committee today announced plans for the fourth annual Berkshire Nights series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on four consecutive Friday evenings in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Subscribers to the Berkshire Nights are offered four Friday evening concerts for the same price as the usual subscription to three concerts in one weekend. The subscription deadline is June 1.

Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna of Pittsfield has been renamed chairman of the subscription drive by Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, having served in that capacity for three years.

Dates Listed

The Friday programs are being offered July 22, 29, Aug. 5 and 12.

Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the BSO, will conduct three of the four Friday night programs and Pierre Monteux, the other.

This season's Berkshire Nights series will include the Koussevitzky Memorial Concert on July 22 with a performance of Faure's Requiem with soloists and the Festival chorus; an all-Russian program on July 29, with the young American pianist, Byron Janis, as guest soloist in Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto; violinist Ruggiero Ricci in a performance on Aug. 5 of Jean Sibelius' Violin Concerto and Pierre Monteux, the 85-year-old guest conductor of the BSO, conducting Franz Liszt's Piano Concerto in E-flat with Jorge Bolet on Aug. 12.

Subscriptions for the Berkshire Nights concerts may be sent to Mrs. Mahanna, 20 Warwick St., Pittsfield, before June 1.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUN 4 1960

Berkshire Nights Series Plan At Festival Hits a New High

The Berkshire Nights subscription drive—offering four Friday evening concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood for the price of three—hit an all time high today, according to a report from Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna, chairman of the Berkshire Nights Committee.

Close to $5,000 has been subscribed for the four Friday night concerts this season, compared to last season's record high of $4,102.

Top Soloists To Appear

Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony, has planned the Friday evening Berkshire Nights concerts to include the top soloists slated to appear at Tanglewood this season. They include the young American pianist, Byron Janis; violinist Ruggiero Ricci and pianist Jorge Bolet. The veteran conductor, Pierre Monteux, will lead the BSO Aug. 12.

The Berkshire Nights concerts will be held in the Music Shed July 22, 29 and Aug. 5 and 12.

Mrs. Mahanna noted that returns made to her indicate people outside of Berkshire County are taking advantage of the BSO offer of "four for three" because Tanglewood is easier to reach by car than in previous years. The Massachusetts Turnpike and the Berkshire Spur, leading to the New York Thruway has been responsible, she feels, for increased interest in the Friday programs from Holyoke, Northampton, Albany, Troy and Schenectady.

Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna

The Berkshire Nights plan was suggested originally in 1957 by the Tanglewood Advisory Committee, made up of representative residents of the county and the chairmen of the boards of selectmen in the towns of Lee, Lenox and Stockbridge.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, currently touring the Far East, will return later this month to Boston and then come to Lenox for the formal opening of the 1960 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood on July 3.

Dr. Munch has announced that the chamber music series will open July 6 for six consecutive Wednesday evenings.

Participants will include the Budapest and Kroll Quartets, the Beaux Arts Trio of New York, pianist Claude Frank with members of the BSO, plus Claudio Arrau in a Chopin recital and Leon Fleisher in a program of sonatas for the piano.

37

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 114,240
MAY 8 - 1960

Berkshire News

Berkshire Nights Concerts Subscriptions Being Taken

Friday Programs by Boston Symphony Orchestra To Open at Tanglewood On July 22

(Special to The Republican)

BERKSHIRE HILLS — Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna of 20 Warwick St., Pittsfield, has again been named chairman of the fourth annual Berkshire Nights series of concerts by Boston Symphony orchestra to be presented at the Music Shed, Tanglewood, Lenox, this season, the Tanglewood advisory committee announced this week.

Subscribers to Berkshire Nights are offered four Friday night concerts for the same price as the usual subscription to three concerts on one week end. The subscription deadline is June 1. Mrs. Mahanna was re-named chairman of the drive by Thomas D. Perry, Jr., manager of the Boston Symphony orchestra which has been on a tour of Japan and the Far West.

The Friday night programs will be offered July 22, July 29, Aug. 5, and Aug. 12. Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the orchestra will direct three programs of the series, and Pierre Monteux will be conductor for the other.

The July 22 program features the Koussevitzky memorial concert with a performance of Beethoven "Eroica" symphony, Faure's Requiem with soloists, and the Festival chorus, (Endick; Gramm.) The July 29 program will be an all-Russian program, featuring, Stravinsky, "Jeu de Cartes"; Khrennikov Symphony No. 1 and Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto in which the young American pianist, Byron Janis, will be featured soloist. The third series, Aug. 5, will be featured by violinist Ruggiero Ricci in Jean Sibelius' Violin Concerto. Also to be presented that night will be Wagner Excerpts "Die Meistersinger" and Mendelssohn "Scotch" symphony.

The Aug. 12 program will be directed by Pierre Monteux. The 85-year-old guest conductor will direct the orchestra in the presentation of Beethoven Symphony No. 2, Liszt Piano Concerto in E-Flat, featuring Jorge Bolet, and Stravinsky Suite from "The Firebird."

Subscriptions for the Berkshire Nights concerts may be sent to Mrs. Mahanna at her home address. Other members of the Tanglewood advisory committee are Alan J. Blau, Lenges Bull, Robert T. Capeless, Henry W. Dwight, George W. Edman, Lawrence K. Miller, George E. Mole, Whitney S. Stoddard, Jesse L. Thompson, Robert K. Wheeler, H. George Wilde, and chairmen of the boards of selectmen (ex officio) of Lenox, Stockbridge and Lee, David H. Mackey, Robert G. Williams and William O'Brien, respectively.

The Berkshire Nights series was started four years ago in an effort to interest more of area residents in the program at Tanglewood.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
JUL 30 1960

Berkshire Night at Tanglewood

Among Berkshire residents in their box at Tanglewood last night at the second of four Berkshire Nights programs were left to right, front row, Mrs. Bruce Crane of Dalton and Mrs. William R. O'Connell and Mrs. Benjamin N. Powers of Pittsfield. Behind them, Mrs. Alexander Stoller of Williamsville, Mr. O'Connell and Mr. Powers.

Guests of Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Glendale, right, in her box last night were Mrs. John G. W. Mahanna, Berkshire Nights chairman, left and Madame Raymond Laporte, wife of the French Consul General in New York, standing at right, with Malcolm Vaughn of New York, art editor.

Mitchell

Three local couples occupied another box at last night's concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In the front row are Mrs. and Mr. Leon C. Leoni and Mrs. Thomas C. Clifford of Pittsfield, and in the back row, Dr. and Mrs. Henry J. Wheelwright of Lenox and Dr. Clifford. Two more Berkshire Night programs will be held this season.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 23 1960

Mitchell

A TRIPLE OCCASION—the opening of the "big concerts" in the Shed, the first Berkshire Nights program and the annual Koussevitzky memorial—drew 7,500 to Tanglewood last night, a goodly portion of them to the spreading lawns outside. Mme. Koussevitzky was in the audience.

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BOSTON, MASS.
GLOBE (MORNING)
D. 190,246 S. 416,486

JUL 3 1960

Berkshire Festival Begins

Charles Munch, who has been enjoying a Perisian holiday since the conclusion of the Boston Symphony tour in the Far East, will return to conduct the opening of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

MUNCH

The first three concerts, next Friday and Saturday at 8:30, and Sunday, July 10, at 2:30, will be devoted to Bach. The second weekend will be given to music by Mozart. These concerts will be transferred, this Summer, from the Theater to the larger Music Shed.

The first concert of the Festival Chamber Music Series will be in the Theater, Wednesday at 8:30, by the Curtis String Quartet. The Berkshire Music Center will begin its sessions today.

Programs of the week:

Wednesday at 8:30, Theater. The Curtis String Quartet. Mozart: Quartet in D minor (K. 421); Vincent Persichetti: Quartet No. 2, Op. 24; Ravel: Quartet in F major.

Friday at 8:30, Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Bach: Suite No. 1; Piano Concerto in F minor, Seymour Lipkin soloist; Triple Concerto, James Pappoutsakis, flute; William Kroll, violin, Seymour Lipkin, piano, soloists.

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Bach: Excerpts from "The Musical Offering"; Excerpts from "The Art of the Fugue"; Piano Concerto in D minor, Seymour Lipkin soloist; Suite No. 4.

Sunday, July 10, at 2:30, Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Bach: Suite No. 3; Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 6 and 2; Cantata: "Christ Lay in Bonds of Death," Berkshire Festival Chorus.

CUE
NEW YORK, N.Y.
SAT. 150,779

JUL 2 1960

CUE
NEW YORK, N.Y.
SAT. 150,779

JUL 9 1960

BALLET

EMPIRE STATE MUSIC FESTIVAL—Anthony Wayne Recreation Area of Harriman State Park, N.Y. July 14-20—New York City Ballet (See "Music" for details).

JACOB'S PILLOW DANCE FESTIVAL — Thru Aug. 27. Lee, Mass. LEe 745. International companies & soloists at this Berkshire Dance Congress. $3 & $3.50. Thurs.-Sat. eves. 9 p.m. Fri. Sat. Mat. 4 p.m. Thru July 9—Ballet Espanol Ximenez-Vargas. Tues.-Sat. eves., Fri. & Sat. mats. July 12-16—The Robert Joffrey Ballet with Maria Tallchief. Premiere of "Clarissa" chor. Thomas Andrew, "Pastorale" chor. Francisco Moncion, also another ballet. Mats. Fri. Sat.; Eves. Tues.-Sat.

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Thru Aug. 14. Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. LEnox 600. Chamber Music Concerts 6 Mon. eves. 8:30, $2.50 & $3. . . . Bach-Mozart Concerts in the Music Shed Fri. Sat. 8:30 p.m., Sun. 2:30, July 8-17, $4 & $5. . . . Boston Symphony Orch. in Music Shed, Fri. Sat. 8:30, Sun. 2:30, July 22-Aug. 14, $3-$6.50. Gen. adm. to grounds $2.50. By mail, enclose check and self-addressed envelope. Info. on accommodations: Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Mass. Hillcrest 3-4431 or 3-4432. Thurs. July 7—In Shed. Berkshire Music Center Orchestra. . . . Fri. July 8—Chamber Music Hall. Boston Symphony Orch. Charles Munch, cond. Bach program. Sat. July 9—In Shed. Boston Symphony Orch. Charles Munch, cond. Bach program. . . . Sun. July 10—Boston Symphony Orch. Charles Munch, cond. Bach program. . . . Wed. July 13—Theatre Concert Hall. Chamber Music Concert. Claude Frank, pianist. Mozart, Beethoven program. . . . Thurs. July 14—In Shed. Berkshire Music Center Orch. . . . Fri. July 15—Chamber Music Hall. Boston Symphony Orch. Charles Munch, cond. Mozart program. . . . Sat. July 16—In Shed. Boston Symphony Orch. Charles Munch, cond. Mozart program. . . . Sun. July 17—Chamber Music Hall. Boston Symphony Orch. Charles Munch, cond. Mozart program.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657

JUL 5 - 1960

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 12,847

JUL 2 1960

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 373,012

JUL 4 1960

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUL 6 - 1960

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
GAZETTE
D. 47,453

JUL 4 1960

Curtis String Quartet Set For Berkshire Festival

Charles Munch has invited the Curtis String Quartet to give the opening concert of the Berkshire Festival's chamber music series at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., Wednesday at 8:30 p.m.

* * *

THE CURTIS Quartet will replace the Budapest Quartet which was announced previously but which has canceled its summer tour due to the illness of one of its members.

The program will include the Mozart "Quartet in D minor, K. 421"; the "Quartet number 2, opus 24" by the contemporary American composer, Vincent Persichetti; and Ravel's "Quartet in F major."

* * *

QUARTET MEMBERS are Jascha Broadsky and Mehli Mehta, violins; Max Aronoff, viola, and Orlando Cole, cellist.

Aronoff is director of Philadelphia's New School of Music and with Brodsky and Cole is a faculty member at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

Mehli Mehta, second violinist, was born in Bombay and came to this country to join the Curtis Quartet after several years as a member of Sir John Barbirolli's Halle Orchestra in Manchester, England.

His son, Zubin Mehta, an alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will make his New York debut next week as conductor at the Lewisohn Stadium concerts in Manhattan.

Five additional chamber music programs will be given at Tanglewood on the five following Wednesday evenings.

* * *

CLAUDE FRANK, pianist, and the Bel Arte Trio will be heard on July 13. Claudio Arrau will give a Chopin Centenary recital on July 20 and the Beaux Arts Trio of New York is scheduled for July 27. Leon Fleischer will be heard in a program of sonatas for the piano on Aug. 3 and the series will close on Aug. 10 with a program by the Kroll Quartet.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

JUL 4 1960

Regional Roundup

Curtis Quartet to Open Festival at Tanglewood

Replaces Budapest Group Wednesday; Boston Symphony Gives First Concert Friday

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood opens Wednesday night at 8.30 with a chamber music concert by the Curtis String Quartet. The Curtis Quartet will replace the Budapest Quartet which was announced for this season but which has canceled its summer tour due to the illness of one of its members. On Friday the Boston Symphony Orchestra gives the first of its 18 orchestral concerts in the Music Shed which make up the backbone of the festival, lasting through Aug. 14.

Features Scheduled

Each Wednesday night at 8.30 through Aug. 10 in the Theater-Concert Hall there will be chamber music, and a number of feature events are scheduled, including a Berkshire Music Center benefit gala evening on Aug. 4, and the Boston Pops at Tanglewood, Arthur Fiedler, conductor, on Aug. 11. Particulars are available from the festival office here.

True to Tanglewood tradition, the first three Shed concerts, July 8, 9 and 10, will be of Bach's music, and the second three, July 15, 16 and 17, of Mozart, all played by the Boston Symphony under Charles Munch. Of the remaining Shed concerts, Mr. Munch will conduct all but four, which will be led by Pierre Monteux.

Programs Listed

The programs for the concerts Wednesday, July 6, through Sunday, July 10, are as follows:

July 6, 8.30 p. m., Theater-Concert Hall, Curtis String Quartet.

MOZART: Quartet in D minor, K. 421
VINCENT PERSICHETTI: Quartet No. 2, Op. 24
RAVEL: Quartet in F major

July 8, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony, Munch.

ALL-BACH: Suite No. 1
Violin Concerto in E (William Kroll, soloist)
Piano Concerto in F minor (Seymour Lipkin, soloist)
Triple Concerto in A minor (Kroll, Lipkin and James Pappautsakis, flutist, soloists)

July 9, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony, Munch.

ALL-BACH:
Excerpts from "Musical Offering"
Piano Concerto in D minor (Lipkin)
Suite No. 4

July 10, 2.30 p. m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony, Munch.

ALL BACH: Suite No. 3
Brandenburg Concerto Nos. 6 and 2
Cantata: "Christ lag in Todesbanden" (Festival Chorus)

Rehearsals Open

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited to the following activities: July 5, 8.30 p. m., Chamber Music Hall: Listeners Forum; July 7, 8.30, Music Shed: Music Center Orchestra; July 8, 3.15, Chamber Music Hall: Seminar in contemporary music; July 19, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall: BMC chamber music.

Saturday morning at 10 the Boston Symphony Orchestra rehearsals in the Music Shed are open to the public for a small fee which benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

• • •

PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER
D. 618,557 S. 1,033,048

JUL 3 1960

Curtis at Tanglewood

The Curtis String Quartet, recently returned from it successful Tamiment Music Festival in the Poconos, has been invited to give the opening concert of the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., on Wednesday evening. The program will include Quartets by Mozart, Persichetti and Ravel.

BOSTON, MASS.
GLOBE (MORNING)
D. 190,246 S. 416,486
JUL 3 1960

Berkshire Festival Begins

Charles Munch, who has been enjoying a Perisian holiday since the conclusion of the Boston Symphony tour in the Far East, will return to conduct the opening of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

MUNCH

The first three concerts, next Friday and Saturday at 8:30, and Sunday, July 10, at 2:30, will be devoted to Bach. The second weekend will be given to music by Mozart. These concerts will be transferred, this Summer, from the Theater to the larger Music Shed.

The first concert of the Festival Chamber Music Series will be in the Theater, Wednesday at 8:30, by the Curtis String Quartet. The Berkshire Music Center will begin its sessions today.

Programs of the week:

Wednesday at 8:30, Theater. The Curtis String Quartet. Mozart: Quartet in D minor (K. 421); Vincent Persichetti: Quartet No. 2, Op. 24; Ravel: Quartet in F major.

Friday at 8:30, Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Bach: Suite No. 1; Piano Concerto in F minor, Seymour Lipkin soloist; Triple Concerto, James Pappoutsakis, flute; William Kroll, violin, Seymour Lipkin, piano, soloists.

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Bach: Excerpts from "The Musical Offering"; Excerpts from "The Art of the Fugue"; Piano Concerto in D minor, Seymour Lipkin soloist; Suite No. 4.

Sunday, July 10, at 2:30, Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Bach: Suite No. 3; Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 6 and 2; Cantata: "Christ Lay in Bonds of Death," Berkshire Festival Chorus.

CUE
NEW YORK, N.Y.
SAT. 150,779
JUL 2 1960

CUE
NEW YORK, N.Y.
SAT. 150,779
JUL 9 1960

BALLET

EMPIRE STATE MUSIC FESTIVAL—Anthony Wayne Recreation Area of Harriman State Park, N.Y. July 14-20—New York City Ballet (See "Music" for details).

JACOB'S PILLOW DANCE FESTIVAL — Thru Aug. 27. Lee, Mass. LEe 745. International companies & soloists at this Berkshire Dance Congress. $3 & $3.50. Thurs.-Sat. eves. 9 p.m. Fri. Sat. Mat. 4 p.m. Thru July 9—Ballet Espanol Ximenez-Vargas. Tues.-Sat. eves., Fri. & Sat. mats. July 12-16—The Robert Joffrey Ballet with Maria Tallchief. Premiere of "Clarissa" chor. Thomas Andrew, "Pastorale" chor. Francisco Moncion, also another ballet. Mats. Fri. Sat.; Eves. Tues.-Sat.

MUSIC

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL—Thru Aug. 14. Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. LEnox 600. Chamber Music Concerts 6 Mon. eves. 8:30, $2.50 & $3. . . . Bach-Mozart Concerts in the Music Shed Fri. Sat. 8:30 p.m., Sun. 2:30, July 8-17, $4 & $5. . . . Boston Symphony Orch. in Music Shed, Fri. Sat. 8:30, Sun. 2:30, July 22-Aug. 14, $3-$6.50. Gen. adm. to grounds $2.50. By mail, enclose check and self-addressed envelope. Info. on accommodations: Berkshire Hills Conference, Pittsfield, Mass. Hillcrest 3-4431 or 3-4432. Thurs. July 7—In Shed. Berkshire Music Center Orchestra. . . . Fri. July 8—Chamber Music Hall. Boston Symphony Orch. Charles Munch, cond. Bach program. Sat. July 9—In Shed. Boston Symphony Orch. Charles Munch, cond. Bach program. . . . Sun. July 10—Boston Symphony Orch. Charles Munch, cond. Bach program. . . . Wed. July 13—Theatre Concert Hall. Chamber Music Concert. Claude Frank, pianist. Mozart, Beethoven program. . . . Thurs. July 14—In Shed. Berkshire Music Center Orch. . . . Fri. July 15—Chamber Music Hall. Boston Symphony Orch. Charles Munch, cond. Mozart program. . . . Sat. July 16—In Shed. Boston Symphony Orch. Charles Munch, cond. Mozart program. . . . Sun. July 17—Chamber Music Hall. Boston Symphony Orch. Charles Munch, cond. Mozart program.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657
JUL 5 - 1960

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 12,847
JUL 2 1960

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 373,012
JUL 4 1960

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958
JUL 6 - 1960

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
GAZETTE
D. 47,453
JUL 4 1960

Curtis String Quartet Set For Berkshire Festival

Charles Munch has invited the Curtis String Quartet to give the opening concert of the Berkshire Festival's chamber music series at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., Wednesday at 8:30 p.m.

* * *

THE CURTIS Quartet will replace the Budapest Quartet which was announced previously, but which has canceled its summer tour due to the illness of one of its members.

The program will include the Mozart "Quartet in D minor, K. 421," the "Quartet number 2, opus 24" by the contemporary American composer Vincent Persichetti and Ravel's "Quartet in F major."

* * *

QUARTET MEMBERS are Jascha Brodsky and Mehli Mehta, violins; Max Aronoff, viola; and Orlando Cole, cellist.

Aronoff is director of Philadelphia's New School of Music and, with Brodsky and Cole, is a faculty member at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia.

Mehli Mehta, second violinist, was born in Bombay and came to this country to join the Curtis Quartet after several years as a member of Sir John Barbirolli's Halle Orchestra in Manchester, England.

His son, Zubin Mehta, an alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will make his New York debut next week as conductor at the Lewisohn Stadium concerts in Manhattan.

Five additional chamber music programs will be given at Tanglewood on the five following Wednesday evenings.

* * *

CLAUDE FRANK, pianist, and the Bel Arte Trio will be heard on July 13. Claudio Arrau will give a Chopin Centenary recital on July 20 and the Beaux Arts Trio of New York is scheduled for July 27. Leon Fleischer will be heard in a program of sonatas for the piano on Aug. 3 and the series will close on Aug. 10 with a program by the Kroll Quartet.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815
JUL 4 1960

Regional Roundup

Curtis Quartet to Open Festival at Tanglewood

Replaces Budapest Group Wednesday; Boston Symphony Gives First Concert Friday

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood opens Wednesday night at 8.30 with a chamber music concert by the Curtis String Quartet. The Curtis Quartet will replace the Budapest Quartet, which was announced for this season but which has canceled its summer tour due to the illness of one of its members. On Friday the Boston Symphony Orchestra gives the first of its 18 orchestral concerts in the Music Shed which make up the backbone of the festival, lasting through Aug. 14.

Features Scheduled

Each Wednesday night at 8.30 through Aug. 10 in the Theater-Concert Hall there will be chamber music, and a number of feature events are scheduled, including a Berkshire Music Center benefit gala evening on Aug. 4, and the Boston Pops at Tanglewood, Arthur Fiedler, conductor, on Aug. 11. Particulars are available from the festival office, here.

True to Tanglewood tradition, the first three Shed concerts, July 8, 9 and 10, will be of Bach's music and the second three, July 15, 16 and 17, of Mozart, all played by the Boston Symphony under Charles Munch. Of the remaining Shed concerts, Mr. Munch will conduct all but four, which will be led by Pierre Monteux.

Programs Listed

The programs for the concerts Wednesday, July 6, through Sunday, July 10, are as follows:

July 6, 8.30 p.m., Theater-Concert Hall, Curtis String Quartet.

MOZART: Quartet in D minor
VINCENT PERSICHETTI: Quartet No. 2, Op. 24
RAVEL: Quartet in F major

July 8, 8.30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony, Munch.

ALL-BACH: Suite No. 1
Violin Concerto in E (William Kroll, soloist)
Piano Concerto in F minor (Seymour Lipkin, soloist)
Triple Concerto in A minor (Kroll, Lipkin and James Pappoutsakis, flutist, soloists)

July 9, 8.30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony, Munch.

ALL-BACH:
Excerpts from "Musical Offering"
Piano Concerto in D minor (Lipkin)
Suite No. 4

July 10, 2.30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony, Munch.

ALL-BACH: Suite No. 3
Brandenburg Concerto Nos. 6 and 2
Cantata: "Christ lag in Todesbanden" (Festival Chorus)

Rehearsals Open

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited to the following activities: July 5, 8.30 p.m., Chamber Music Hall, Listeners Forum; July 7, [illegible] Music Shed: Music Center Orchestra; July 8, 3.15, Chamber Music Hall: Seminar in contemporary music; July 19, 10 a.m., Chamber Music Hall: BMC chamber music.

Saturday morning at 10 the Boston Symphony Orchestra rehearsals in the Music Shed are open to the public for a small fee which benefits the orchestra's pension fund.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER
D. 618,557 S. 1,033,048
JUL 3 1960

Curtis at Tanglewood

The Curtis String Quartet, recently returned from it successful Tamiment Music Festival in the Poconos, has been invited to give the opening concert of the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., on Wednesday evening. The program will include Quartets by Mozart, Persichetti and Ravel.

48

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 3 1960

Munch Will Conduct Season's Opening Shed Concert Friday Night

Lipkin, Kroll and Pappoutsakis Soloists in Bach Program; the Curtis String Quartet at Tanglewood Theater Wednesday

This is the week when the 1960 Berkshire Music Festival gets under way at Tanglewood in Lenox. Back from a holiday in France has come Charles Munch, internationally famed music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who is to conduct [illegible] of the festival's concerts. The Boston musicians have recently returned from an eight-week tour to Japan, the Philippines, New Zealand and Australia. On Friday night, in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in a program of Johann Sebastian Bach. Soloists will be pianist Seymour Lipkin, violinist William Kroll and flutist James Pappoutsakis.

Three Bach Concerts

The Friday night concert begins at 8.30. Mr. Lipkin will be the soloist in the Piano Concerto in F minor. Mr. Kroll will be heard in a performance of the Violin Concerto in E, and Mr. Pappoutsakis with Messrs. Lipkin and Kroll in a performance of Bach's Triple Concerto in A minor.

Mr. Lipkin will also be guest in the second all-Bach program on Saturday night, July 9, at 8.30. In addition to the Piano Concerto in D minor, the program will include Bach's Suite No. 4 plus excerpts from the "Musical Offering" and "The Art of the Fugue." The final all-Bach program will be given Sunday afternoon, July 10, at 2.30, when the Berkshire Music Center's Festival Chorus will join Doctor Munch and the Orchestra in a performance of the Cantata No. 4, "Christ lag in Todesbanden." The program also includes Suite No. 3 and the Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 and 2.

To accommodate the audiences for the all-Bach concerts these programs will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed, rather than in the smaller theater, under the new Talbot Memorial Canopy which was installed last summer. Those who prefer may listen to these concerts from the great lawn which adjoins the Shed.

The Curtis Quartet

Dr. Munch has invited the Curtis String Quartet to give the opening concert of the Berkshire Festival's Chamber Music Series on Wednesday night at 8.30. The Curtis Quartet will replace the Budapest Quartet which was announced for this season but which has cancelled its summer tour due to the illness of one of its members.

Mozart's Quartet in D minor, K. 421, will open the Curtis Quartet's program. Also scheduled is the Quartet No. 2, Op. 24, by the contemporary American composer, Vincent Persichetti, and Ravel's Quartet in F major.

Members of the Quartet are Jascha Brodsky, violin; Mehli Mehta, violin; Max Aronoff, viola, and cellist Orlando Cole. Mr. Aronoff is director of Philadelphia's New School of Music and, along with Messrs. Brodsky and Cole, a faculty member at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. Second violinist Mehli Mehta was born in Bombay and came to the United States to join the Curtis Quartet after several years as a member of Sir John Barbirolli's Halle Orchestra in Manchester, England. His son, Zubin Mehta, an alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center, will [illegible] his New York debut next [illegible] as conductor [illegible] the Lewissohn Stadium con[illegible] in Manhattan.

Five additional chamber music programs will be given at Tanglewood on the next five Wednesday evenings. Pianist Claude Frank and the Bel Arte Trio will be heard on July 13. On July 20 Claudio [illegible] will give a Chopin Centennial Recital and the Beaux Arts Trio of New York [illegible] July [illegible] Leon [illegible] a pro[illegible] piano[illegible] and the series will c[illegible] with a progra[illegible] Quartet.

F[illegible] Center

Tickets [illegible] three all [illegible] orchestra [illegible] Orchestra's Open Rehearsal on Saturday morning (July 9, at 10) and for the Curtis String Quartet recital are on sale at Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., (Lenox 600). Tickets and complete information for the remaining five weeks of the 1960 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are also available at the Festival Office, Tanglewood.

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Orchestra at Tanglewood in conjunction with the Festival, opens July 3. Friends of the Center are invited to four events. The first Listeners Forum, "The Composer as Listener," will be held Tuesday night, July 5, at 8.30. The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will give a concert in the Music Shed on Thursday night, July 7, at 8.30. A Seminar in Contemporary Music will be held Friday afternoon, July 8, at 3.15. Members of the Center's Chamber Music Department will present a recital in the Chamber Music Hall on Sunday, July 10, at 10 a. m.

SCHOOL OF SACRED

Tanglewood Events

Wednesday, July 6, 8.30, Theater: The Curtis Quartet—Mozart, Quartet in D minor, K. 421; Vincent Persichetti, Quartet No. 2, Op. 24; Ravel, Quartet in F major.

Complete programs:

Friday, July 8, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting—All-Bach: Suite No. 1; Violin Concerto in E (Kroll); Piano Concerto in F minor (Lipkin); Triple Concerto in A minor (Pappoutsakis, Kroll, Lipkin)

Saturday July 9, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting—All-Bach: Excerpts from "Musical Offering"; Excerpts from "The Art of the Fugue"; Piano Concerto in D minor (Lipkin); Suite No. 4.

Sunday, July 10, 2.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting—All-Bach: Suite No. 3; Brandenburg Concerto Nos. 6 and 2; Cantata: "Christ lag in Todesbanden" (Festival Chorus)

Activities of the Berkshire Music Center to which friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited:

Tuesday, July 5, 8.30 p. m., Chamber Music Hall: Listeners Forum.

Thursday, July 7, 8.30, Music Shed: Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

Friday, July 8, 3.15, Chamber Music Hall: Seminar in Contemporary Music.

Sunday, July 10, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall: BMC Chamber Music.

Hellenic Chronicle
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 18,347

JUL 7 1960

HERE n' THERE: John A[illegible]retelis hospitalized at Sancta Maria Hospital, Cambridge for observation . . . James Papoutsakis of Boston Symphony Orchestra flutist, will be one of three soloists with the orchestra tomorrow night at Tanglewood in the Berkshires . . . Vacationing at [illegible]nebunk, Maine, are Aristide, Grace and George Zographos of Boston . . . Rep. John Brademas wants President Eisenhower to proclaim a senior citizens day, the fourth Sunday in September.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 175,076

JUL 4 1960

Curtis Quartet Replaces Budapest

The Curtis String Quartet will give the opening concert of the Berkshire Festival's Chamber Music Series at Tanglewood on Wednesday replacing the Budapest Quartet which cancelled its summer tour due to the illness of one of its members.

Mozart's Quartet in D minor, K. 421, will open the program. Also scheduled is the Quartet No. 2, Op. 24, by the contemporary American composer, Vincent Persichetti, and Ravel's Quartet in F major.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

JUL 7 1960

Chamber Recitals Open At Tanglewood Theater

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—From the four points of the compass students and music lovers are converging on Tanglewood, site of the Berkshire Music Festival and the Berkshire Music Center.

Happy to Be Back

Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have traveled far since they left Tanglewood last August and the ones with whom we have spoken seem happy to be back. They have pitched their tents, rented their summer homes and seem already stimulated by what lies ahead.

The Berkshires offered us one of its finest days, clear, crisp and sparkling. The view of the Stockbridge Bowl was truly superb. Everything is in readiness. Last-minute work is being done on the lawns, the ancient boxwood hedges and all else which makes Tanglewood so attractive.

This year marks the 20th anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center, dream of Serge Koussevitzky its founder and long-time conductor of the Bos-

See CHAMBER RECITALS Page Ten

Seventh Symphony and numerous works of such visiting composers as Hindemith, Martinu, Milhaud, Chavez, Dallapicola and Toch. All have taught at the center.

The Curtis String Quartet opened proceeding Wednesday night playing the first of six chamber music recitals. These recitals bring to the theater a very special audience, musical, discerning and cultured. They come to listen, not to be seen or to relax.

The gentlemen from Philadelphia, where three are on the faculty of the Curtis Institute, have been together for several years and have become a sensitive and well balanced ensemble. They substituted for the Budapest String Quartet which has cancelled its summer recitals due to the illness of a member.

Violinist From India

It is interesting to note that the son of second violinist Mehli Mehta, who hails from Bombay, India, via the Halle Orchestra of Manchester, England, will soon make his New York debut conducting the Lewissohn Symphony Orchestra in the stadium in Manhattan. He is a Berkshire Center alumnus.

Other members of the quartet are Jascha Brodsky, first violin; Max Aronoff, viola, and cellist Orlando Cole.

There will be five more Wednesday night chamber music recitals. Claude Frank, pianist, a center alumnus, and the Bel Arte Trio will be heard July 13. On July 20, Claudio Arrau will play a Chopin recital, observing the Chopin centenary, and the Beaux Arts Trio of New York will play July 27. Leon Fleisher, a favorite pianist here, plays a sonata program Aug. 3 and the series closes Aug. 10 with a recital by the Kroll String Quartet.

The Curtis String Quartet chose to play the "String Quartet in D minor, K. 421" by Mozart, Vincent Persichetti's Second String Quartet and Ravel's "String Quartet in F major." The quartet might be said to have been on the spot for many people fully expected to hear the Budapest String Quartet originally scheduled. I for one, was very glad to hear in person a quartet which I knew through records.

Tone Purity Noted

During the recital the quartet played within a fairly small framework. Purity of tone and intonation, a fine sense of rhythms and a full realization of the various styles involved characterized the performances. The Mozart got off to rather a breathless start, but it was more a matter of nerves, we believe, than anything else. Within the small framework, one heard a performance of utmost elegance and restraint. The particular beauty of the first violin sound was echoed by the other instruments, so that the ensemble was one of true beauty.

Vincent Persichetti was born in Philadelphia and most of his studies have been made in this country with such artists as pianists Ogla Samaroff and Alberto Jonas, composers Paul Nordoff and Roy Harris and conducting with Fritz Reiner. He knows the medium in which he writes and appears to have, at first hearing, the gift of melody, which he is not ashamed to use even though it is more frequently diatonic than chromatic or atonal.

Much of the excitement in the quartet is engendered through its strong and emphatic rhythms. The players from Philadelphia gave the work a strong performance, at times quite as emphatic as the composer desired.

1370 Hear Performance

The program concluded with Ravel's exquisite quartet, a work of wonderous beauty and myriad colors. Here again the framework was small and the tone not as lush and colored as the Budapest Quartet, for example, but finely blended. The performance was rhythmically secure and it drew rounds of applause from an audience which numbered 1370 persons. Considering the coolness of the night, it was surprising to note at least a couple of hundred persons sitting outside [illegible].

The Bach-Mozart concerts commence Friday night. They will be held in the music shed and several people have told us they expect the shed to be filled, so if 6000 persons come out to hear a program of the works of Bach, it is the result of some 20 years of labor by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Koussevitzky and Charles Munch.

ALBANY, N.Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
D. 66,739

JUL 5 1960

BACH CONCERTS—Pianist Seymour Lipkin will make three appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra when it begins its 1960 Tanglewood series with Bach concerts Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 3 1960

Munch Will Conduct Season's Opening Shed Concert Friday Night

Lipkin, Kroll and Pappoutsakis Soloists in Bach Program; the Curtis String Quartet at Tanglewood Theater Wednesday

This is the week when the 1960 Berkshire Music Festival gets under way at Tanglewood in Lenox. Back from a holiday in France has come Charles Munch, internationally famed music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who is to conduct 24 of the festival's concerts. The Boston musicians have recently returned from an eight-week tour to Japan, the Philippines, New Zealand and Australia. On Friday night, in the Music Shed, Dr. Munch will conduct the orchestra in a program of Johann Sebastian Bach. Soloists will be pianist Seymour Lipkin, violinist William Kroll and flutist James Pappoutsakis.

Tanglewood Events

Wednesday, July 6, 8.30, Theater: The Curtis Quartet—Mozart, Quartet in D minor, K. 421 Vincent Persichetti, Quartet No. 2, Op. 24, Ravel, Quartet in F major.

Complete programs:

Friday, July 8, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting—All-Bach: Suite No. 1; Violin Concerto in E (Kroll); Piano Concerto in F minor (Lipkin); Triple Concerto in A minor (Pappoutsakis, Kroll, Lipkin)

Saturday July 9, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting—All-Bach: Excerpts from "Musical Offering"; Excerpts from "The Art of the Fugue"; Piano Concerto in D minor (Lipkin); Suite No. 4.

Sunday, July 10, 2.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting—All-Bach: Suite No. 3; Brandenburg Concerto Nos. 6 and 2; Cantata: "Christ lag in Todesbanden" (Festival Chorus)

Activities of the Berkshire Music Center to which friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited:

Tuesday, July 5, 8.30 p. m., Chamber Music Hall: Listeners Forum.

Thursday, July 7, 8.30, Music Shed: Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

Friday, July 8, 3.15, Chamber Music Hall: Seminar in Contemporary Music.

Sunday, July 10, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall: BMC Chamber Music.

Three Bach Concerts

The Friday night concert begins at 8.30. Mr. Lipkin will be the soloist in the Piano Concerto in F minor. Mr. Kroll will be heard in a performance of the Violin Concerto in E, and Mr. Pappoutsakis with Messrs. Lipkin and Kroll in a performance of Bach's Triple Concerto in A minor.

Mr. Lipkin will also be guest in the second all-Bach program on Saturday night, July 9, at 8.30. In addition to the Piano Concerto in D minor, the program will include Bach's Suite No. 4 plus excerpts from the "Musical Offering" and "The Art of the Fugue." The final all-Bach program will be given Sunday afternoon, July 10, at 2.30, when the Berkshire Music Center's Festival Chorus will join Doctor Munch and the Orchestra in a performance of the Cantata No. 4, "Christ lag in Todesbanden." The program also includes Suite No. 3 and the Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 and 2.

To accommodate the audiences for the all-Bach concerts these programs will be presented in the 6000-seat Music Shed, rather than in the smaller theater, under the new Talbot Memorial Canopy which was installed last summer. Those who prefer may listen to these concerts from the great lawn which adjoins the Shed.

The Curtis Quartet

Dr. Munch has invited the Curtis String Quartet to give the opening concert of the Berkshire Festival's Chamber Music Series on Wednesday night at 8.30. The Curtis Quartet will replace the Budapest Quartet which was announced for this season but which has cancelled its summer tour due to the illness of one of its members.

Mozart's Quartet in D minor, K. 421, will open the Curtis Quartet's program. Also scheduled is the Quartet No. 2, Op. 24, by the contemporary American composer, Vincent Persichetti, and Ravel's Quartet in F major.

Members of the Quartet are Jascha Brodsky, violin; Mehli Mehta, violin; Max Aronoff, viola, and cellist Orlando Cole. Mr. Aronoff is director of Philadelphia's New School of Music and, along with Messrs. Brodsky and Cole, a faculty member at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. Second violinist Mehli Mehta was born in Bombay and came to the United States to join the Curtis Quartet after several years as a member of Sir John Barbirolli's Halle Orchestra in Manchester, England. His son, Zubin Mehta, an alumnus of the Berkshire Music Center, will make his New York debut next week as conductor of the Lewissohn Stadium concerts in Manhattan.

Five additional chamber music programs will be given at Tanglewood on the next five Wednesday evenings. Pianist Claude Frank and the Bel Arte Trio will be heard on July 13. On July 20 Claudio Arrau will give a Chopin Centennial Recital and the Beaux Arts Trio of New York [illegible] July [illegible] Leon [illegible] a program [illegible] piano [illegible] and the series will close [illegible] with a program [illegible] Quartet.

[illegible] Center

Tickets for the three all-Bach orchestral concerts, for the Orchestra's Open Rehearsal on Saturday morning (July 9, at 10) and for the Curtis String Quartet recital are on sale at Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., (Lenox 600). Tickets and complete information for the remaining five weeks of the 1960 Berkshire Festival by the Boston Symphony Orchestra are also available at the Festival Office, Tanglewood.

The Berkshire Music Center, the summer school of music maintained by the Orchestra at Tanglewood in conjunction with the Festival, opens July 3. Friends of the Center are invited to four events. The first Listeners Forum, "The Composer as Listener," will be held Tuesday night, July 5, at 8.30. The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will give a concert in the Music Shed on Thursday night, July 7, at 8.30. A Seminar in Contemporary Music will be held Friday afternoon, July 8, at 3.15. Members of the Center's Chamber Music Department will present a recital in the Chamber Music Hall on Sunday, July 10, at 10 a. m.

Hellenic Chronicle
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 18,347

JUL 7 1960

HERE n' THERE: John Agretelis hospitalized at Sancta Maria Hospital, Cambridge for observation . . . James Papoutsakis of Boston Symphony Orchestra flutist, will be one of three soloists with the orchestra tomorrow night at Tanglewood in the Berkshires . . . Vacationing at Kennebunk, Maine, are Aristide, Grace and George Zographos of Boston . . . Rep. John Brademas wants President Eisenhower to proclaim a senior citizens day, the fourth Sunday in September.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 175,076

JUL 4 1960

Curtis Quartet Replaces Budapest

The Curtis String Quartet will give the opening concert of the Berkshire Festival's Chamber Music Series at Tanglewood on Wednesday replacing the Budapest Quartet which cancelled its summer tour due to the illness of one of its members.

Mozart's Quartet in D minor, K. 421, will open the program. Also scheduled is the Quartet No. 2, Op. 24, by the contemporary American composer, Vincent Persichetti, and Ravel's Quartet in F major.

---

day

TIERNEY— Tierney as M. Tierney neral at the James F. funeral home Saturday at solemn requiem high mass in St. rick's Chapel at 9. Burial will be in St. Jerome Cemetery.

WEST—In Dalton, the 5th, Hugh D. West, of Middlefield. Funeral from the Middlefield Congregational Church, Thursday at 2. Burial at Pine Grove Cemetery. Friends may call at the S. C. Haley funeral home, Huntington, Wednesday 7 to 9 p. m. through Thursday.

ZARANEK—In Indian Orchard, the 5th, Kazimierz Zaranek of 40 Falmouth St., Indian Orchard. Funeral Friday at 8.15 at the Orchard funeral home, followed by high mass of requiem in Immaculate Conception Church at 9. Burial in St. Aloysius Cemetery. Visiting hours tonight from 7 to 10, Thursday from 2 to 5 and 7 to 10.

ZYCH—In Hampden, the 5th, Mr. Wawrzyniec J. Zych of 91 Church St., Thompsonville, Conn., husband of Anna (Pluta) Zych. Funeral from the Leete funeral home, 126 Pearl St., Thompsonville, Thursday at 8.15 a. m. Solemn requiem high mass at St. Adalbert's Church at 9 a. m. Burial in St. Adalbert's Cemetery. Visiting hours Wednesday 2 to 5 and 7 to 10 p. m. commit

The funeral of Dickinson of 35 East held Wednesday at the ran-Jones funeral home. Rev. Thomas F. Airey officiated. Burial was in Oak Grove Cemetery. Mr. Airey conducted the committal service at the grave.

* * *

The funeral of Edmond A. Vallee of 162 Lang St., victim of an automobile crash in West Springfield Saturday, was held Wednesday at the Liberty St. parlors of the T. P. Sampson Co., with a solemn requiem high mass in St. Mary's Church, East Springfield. Rev. Raymond J. Levay was the celebrant; Rev.

---

age 13

Symphony Orchestra. More than 5000 students have taken advantage of its course in that time. Today 25 of its alumni, including Leonard Bernstein, Walter Hendl and Thor Johnson, now conduct orchestras in the United States and Canada and 83 others are associate or assistant conductors, concertmasters or first desk players in leading American orchestras.

Many First Performances

The festival, through the years has offered much notable first performances as that of "Peter Grimes" by Benjamin Britten; the first concert performance of Shostakovitch's Seventh Symphony and numerous works of such visiting composers as Hindemith, Martinu, Milhaud, Chavez, Dallapicola and Toch. All have taught at the center.

The Curtis String Quartet opened proceeding Wednesday night playing the first of six chamber music recitals. These recitals bring to the theater a very special audience, musical, discerning and cultured. They come to listen, not to be seen or to relax.

The gentlemen from Philadelphia, where three are on the faculty of the Curtis Institute, have been together for several years and have become a sensitive and well balanced ensemble. They substituted for the Budapest String Quartet which has cancelled its summer recitals due to the illness of a member.

Violinist From India

It is interesting to note that the son of second violinist Mehli Mehta, who hails from Bombay, India, via the Halle Orchestra of Manchester, England, will soon make his New York debut conducting the Lewissohn Symphony Orchestra in the stadium in Manhattan. He is a Berkshire Center alumnus.

Other members of the quartet are Jascha Brodsky, first violin; Max Aronoff, viola, and cellist Orlando Cole.

There will be five more Wednesday night chamber music recitals. Claude Frank, pianist, a center alumnus, and the Bel Arte Trio will be heard July 13. On July 20, Claudio Arrau will play a Chopin recital observing the Chopin centenary, and the Beaux Arts Trio of New York will play July 27. Leon Fleisher, a favorite pianist here, plays a sonata program Aug. 3 and the series closes Aug. 10 with a recital by the Kroll String Quartet.

The Curtis String Quartet chose to play the "String Quartet in D minor, K. 421" by Mozart, Vincent Persichetti's Second String Quartet and Ravel's "String Quartet in F major." The quartet might be said to have been on the spot for many people fully expected to hear the Budapest String Quartet originally scheduled. I for one, was very glad to hear in person a quartet which I knew through records.

Tone Purity Noted

During the recital the quartet played within a fairly small framework. Purity of tone and intonation, a fine sense of rhythms and a full realization of the various styles involved characterized the performances. The Mozart got off to rather a breathless start, but it was more a matter of nerves, we believe, than anything else. Within the small framework, one heard a performance of utmost elegance and restraint. The particular beauty of the first violin sound was echoed by the other instruments, so that the ensemble was one of true beauty.

Vincent Persichetti was born in Philadelphia and most of his studies have been made in this country with such artists as pianists Ogla Samaroff and Alberto Jonas, composers Paul Nordoff and Roy Harris and conducting with Fritz Reiner. He knows the medium in which he writes and appears to have, at first hearing, the gift of melody, which he is not ashamed to use even though it is more frequently diatonic than chromatic or atonal.

Much of the excitement in the quartet is engendered through its strong and emphatic rhythms. The players from Philadelphia gave the work a strong performance, at times quite as emphatic as the composer desired.

1370 Hear Performance

The program concluded with Ravel's exquisite quartet, a work of wonderous beauty and myriad colors. Here again the framework was small and the tone not as lush and colored as the Budapest Quartet, for example, but finely blended. The performance was rhythmically secure and it drew rounds of applause from an audience which numbered 1370 persons. Considering the coolness of the night, it was surprising to note at least a couple of hundred persons sitting outside the hall.

The Bach-Mozart concerts commence Friday night. They will be held in the music shed and several people have told us they expect the shed to be filled, so if 6000 persons come out to hear a program of the works of Bach, it is the result of some 20 years of labor by members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Koussevitzky and Charles Munch.

ALBANY, N.Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
D. 66,739

JUL 5 1960

BACH CONCERTS—Pianist Seymour Lipkin will make three appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra when it begins its 1960 Tanglewood series with Bach concerts Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 7 1960

Music Review

Curtis String Quartet

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

TANGLEWOOD 1960 was officially launched last night when the Curtis String Quartet gave the first concert of the season's schedule. Making their first appearance in this vicinity, they pleased a large audience with a program that included the work of a young American who had not previously been heard on Tanglewood programs—Vincent Persichetti.

The members of the quartet are Jascha Brodsky and Mehli Mehta, violins, Max Aronoff, viola, and Orlando Cole, cello. Their opening quartet—the D minor Mozart (K 421) was played on an intimate and limited plane, and while we are accustomed to a more morose or even tragic mood in the first movement, we found the resigned and pathetic spirit they read into it very comforting.

* * *

PERSICHETTI'S second quartet, written in 1944 when he was not yet 30, permitted us to learn that the Curtis can play with vigor when necessary. The second movement was given an energetic utterance and revealed a degree of robust vitality that had not been apparent up to that time. The first movement starts with a canonic statement that observes all the elementary harmonic rules. In fact, there is scarcely any occasion when there is a pioneering sense employed, but it is written for the good registers of the instruments, and the artists of the quartet took advantage of the opportunities offered them. All of their instruments except that of the second violinist are contemporary American and the tone quality was a tribute both to the skill of the luthier, Moenig of Philadelphia, as well as to the proficiency of the performers.

Persichetti writes a sort of improvisational prelude to the final movement in which the violins enjoy a lark of exhibitionism from which they proceed to a gay, brisk dance-like rhythm. The closing cadences of all his movements are the only evidences of nonconformity so far as the structure of the music is concerned.

AFTER INTERMISSION came Ravel's quartet, and, as were the preceding two, again the work of a man [illegible] in his late 20s. After 58 years this still seems [illegible] than Persichetti which postdated it by some 42 years. Again the Curtis approach was distant and impartial as had been the Mozart, but it pleased and satisfied us in its own [illegible] way. They played it with the detachment of a Melisande who was a Debussy product of the same year. This method of cool impressionistic indifference, in contrast to a fervent generation, has its merits and makes for agreeable listening.

The intricacies of the writing were lucidly exposed. Whenever there was a choice of tempo or any deviation from tradition, it was on the more leisurely side and in this we heartily concur. Speed for its own sake or for the performer's sake without regard for the nature of the music is too often utilized. We cannot agree when the character of the music is allowed to become complacent, as the Mozart may have given us a wisp of suspicion, but when it is the considered verdict of able and experienced artists it is a highly valid procedure. The Curtis deserve our thanks for letting us see and hear how well music can be executed with mature deliberation.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

JUL 8 1960

Reaction Favorable To Concerts' Shift

The festival ticket office at Tanglewood reports favorable public reaction to Charles Munch's decision to move the site of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Bach-Mozart concerts from the 1200-seat theater to the Music Shed, where 6000 can be accommodated under cover.

Only 3000 seats in the Music Shed are available on a reserved basis for these concerts. The remaining 3000 are available to those who purchase tickets for general admission to the Tanglewood grounds. To give visual and acoustical intimacy to the programs, a new small stage enclosure has been constructed and will be used for the first time at the orchestra's first Bach program tonight at 8:30.

Munch will conduct two additional all-Bach concerts on Saturday night at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. The concerts July 15, 16 and 17 will be devoted to the music of Mozart.

* * *

ALBANY, N.Y.
TIMES-UNION
D. 67,629 S. 118,093

JUL 8 1960

DEBUT TOMORROW:

Bach-Mozart Opens Tanglewood Season

Seymour Lipkin

Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Berkshire Musical Festival at Tanglewood, will formally open the series of Bach-Mozart concerts in the Big Shed tonight at 8:30.

This week-end series, which will include tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, will feature an all-Bach program.

Tonight, the program will include: Suite, No. 1; Violin Concerto, William Kroll, soloist; Piano Concerto, Semour Lipkin, soloist, and the Triple Concerto, with James Pappoutsakis, flutist.

Saturday night, the orchestra will feature "Musical Offerings and the Art of the Fugue," the D minor piano concerto with Seymour Lipkin soloist and Suite No. 4.

Sunday afternoon, at 2:30 P. M. the program will include Suite No. 3; Brandenburg Concerts Nos. 2 and 6 and the sacred cantata, "Christ—lag in Todesbanden" with Festival Chorus.

To accommodate the large audiences for the Festival concerts, all Friday evening, Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon programs this year will be presented in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, under the new Talbot Memorial canopy which was installed last Summer. Those who prefer to listen to the concerts outside, may do so by the purchase of an admission ticket which entitles the holder to occupy the great lawn which adjoins the shed.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUL 8 1960

Switch Concert Site To Shed At Tanglewood

The site of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Bach-Mozart concerts is being moved from the 1200-seat theater to the Music Shed which seats 6,000 at Tanglewood.

Three thousand of the Music Shed seats will be reserved and the other 3,000 are available to those who purchase tickets for general admission.

Favorable ticket office reaction to Charles Munch's decision has been reported. The first Bach program will be held tonight at 8:30 and two additional all-Bach concerts will be performed Saturday night at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
D. 453,331 SAT. 174,917

JUL 7 1960

DALLAS, TEXAS
TIMES-HERALD
D. 185,107 S. 195,963

JUL 7 1960

Evening Union Leader
MANCHESTER, N. H.
Circ. A.M. & P.M.
46,510

JUL 7 1960

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUL 7 1960

Gazette (e)
HAVERHILL, Mass.
Circ. 12,961

JUL 7 1960

Journal (e)
HAVERHILL, Mass.
Circ. 10,547

JUL 7 1960

Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 62,208

JUL 7 1960

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 40,278

JUL 7 1960

Tanglewood Season Opens With Quartet

LENOX, MASS. (UPI)— The Boston Symphony Orchestra opened its 1960 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood Theater last night with a concert by the Curtis String Quartet.

The program was well received by an audience of 1,370 which included such notables as Madame Golda Meir, Israeli foreign minister and Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the orchestra's former conductor.

The recital consisted of Mozart's String Quartet in D Minor, 421, the F Major Quartet by Maurice Ravel and the String Quartet No. 2 by Philadelphia Composer Vincent Persichetti.

The Curtis Quartet's concert was given in place of a recital scheduled for the Budapest String Quartet cancelled when one of its members became ill.

Members of the quartet who played last night include Jascha Brodsky, first violin, Mehli Mehta, second violin, Max Aronoff, viola, and cellist Orlando Cole.

Five more chamber music programs will be given at Tanglewood on the next five Wednesday evenings.

Pianist Claude Frank and the Bel Arte Trio will be heard July 13, Claudio Arrau will give a Chopin centenary recital July 20, the Beaux Arts Trio of New York is scheduled for July 27; Leon Fleisher will be heard in a program of sonatas for the piano on Aug. 3 and the series closes Aug. 10 with a program by the Kroll Quartet.

The festival which closes Aug. 14 will also include 18 concerts by the Boston Sympathy Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch, Pierre Monteux and Aaron Copland and 24 guest soloists.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 10 1960

Final All-Bach Program Listed for This Afternoon In Shed at Tanglewood

Charles Munch and Boston Symphony Will Be Joined by Festival Chorus; All-Mozart Concerts to Begin Friday Night

In the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox this afternoon, Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the final all-Bach program which will begin at 2.30. The Berkshire Music Center's Festival Chorus will join Dr. Munch and the orchestra in a performance of the Cantata No. 4, "Christ lag in Todesbanden." This afternoon's program will also include Suite No. 3 and the Brandenberg Concerti Nos. 6 and 2

Tanglewood Events

Today at 2.30. Music Shed: [illegible] Symphony, Munch conducting — All-Bach; Suite No. 3; Brandenburg Concerto Nos. 6 and 2; Cantata: "Christ lag in Todesbanden" (Festival Chorus).

Wednesday, July 13, 8.30, Theater: Claude Frank and Bel Arte Trio; Beethoven String Trio in D major, Op. 9, No. 2; Beethoven Piano Sonata in C minor, No. 32, Op. 111; Mozart Piano Quartet in G minor, K. 478.

Friday, July 15, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting; All-Mozart: Serenade No. 6 (Serenata Notturna), in D major, K. 239; Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K. 297b (Gomberg, Cioffi, Stagliano, Walt); Divertimento in D major, for Strings, K. 136; Symphony No. 41, in C major, "Jupiter," K. 551.

Saturday, July 16, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting; All-Mozart: Eine kleine Nachtmusik, K. 525; Piano Concerto No. 24, in C minor, K. 491 (Frank); Litaniae de venerabili altaris sacramento, K. 243; (Kalil, Parker, McCollum, Sliker, Festival Chorus; Hugh Ross conducting).

Sunday, July 17, 2.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting; All-Mozart: Symphony No. 38, in D major, "Prague," K. 504; Violin Concerto No. 4, in D major, K. 218 (Silverstein); Symphony No. 39, in E flat major, K. 543.

Events of the week to which friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited:

Thursday, July 14, 8.30, Music Shed: Berkshire Music Center Orchestra;

Friday, July 15, 3.15, Chamber Music Hall: Seminar in Contemporary Music;

Sunday, July [illegible] Chamber Music Hall: BMC [illegible]

Sunday, July 17, 8.30 [illegible] Chamber Music Hall, [illegible]

In the Tanglewood Music Hall at 10 this morning the members of the Berkshire Festival's Center Music Department presents a recital. All-Mozart programs will be heard in the Shed on Friday and Saturday nights and next Sunday afternoon.

Mozart Program Soloists

Dr. Munch has invited four of his first-desk players, clarinetist Gino Cioffi, Ralph Gomberg, oboe, James Stagliano, horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon, to be soloists at Friday's concert in the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K. 279b. The program will also include Mozart's Serenade No. 6 (Serenata Notturna) in D major, K. 239, the Divertimento in D major, for Strings, K. 136, and the Symphony No. 41, "Jupiter."

CLAUDE FRANK

Pianist Saturday

Pianist Claude Frank will be guest at next Saturday night's concert in a performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 24 in C minor, K. 491. The program will open with "Eine kleine Nachtmusik" and will close with the orchestra's first performance of Mozart's "Litaniae de venerabili altaris sacramento." Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's Choral Department, will conduct the Litany. His guests will be soprano Margaret Kalil, contralto Louise Parker, tenor John McCollum, bass Peter Sliker and the Festival Chorus.

Sunday's (July 17, 2.30) all-Mozart program will include his symphonies Nos. 38 and 39 plus Joseph Silverstein, Boston Symphony Orchestra violinist, as soloist in Mozart's Concerto No. 4, in D major, K. 218. Mr. Silverstein was the only American, of the seven American entrants among the first 10 winners in the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music Competition at Brussels in May, 1959. The competition, which drew 37 contestants from 18 nations, awarded him third prize.

The orchestra's first violist Joseph de Pasquale, first cellist Samuel Mayes and violinist Ruth Posselt, Berkshire Music Center faculty member will join pianist Claude Frank in the second concert of the Chamber Music Series in the Tanglewood Theater Wednesday (July 13, 8.30). Performing as the Bel Arte Trio, Miss Posselt and Messrs. de Pasquale and Mayes will open the program with Beethoven's String Trio in D major, Op. 9, No. 2. Mr. Frank will be heard in Beethoven's Piano Sonata in C minor, Op. 111, and he will be joined by the Trio in a performance of Mozart's Piano Quartet in G minor, K. 478.

The orchestra's rehearsal in the Music Shed on Saturday (July 16) at 10 a. m. will be opened to the public. The proceeds from this rehearsal will benefit the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those whose interest in the school is reflected by their contribution toward its support, are invited to four events at Tanglewood this week. The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will perform in the Shed on Thursday (July 14, 8.30). Members of the school's Composition Department will conduct a seminar in contemporary music in the Chamber Music Hall at 3.15 Friday (July 15), and they will participate in a composer's forum in the Chamber Music Hall Sunday (July 17) at 8.30. On next Sunday morning at 10 (July 17) a concert of chamber music will be performed by members of that department.

* * *

While addressing the students at the Berkshire Music Center's opening exercises last Sunday, Aaron Copland reminisced about his 20 years at Tanglewood. Stories were told of Benjamin Britten nervously pacing the wings while the world-premiere of his "Peter Grimes" was being given by the students of the days on campus with Hindemith, Martinu, Milhaud, et al, and when Leonard Bernstein nervously approached the orchestra of fellow-students to conduct the Rimsky-Korsakov "Sheherazade," the main professonal reaction to which was that the young conductor knew his way with the baton but needed to concentrate on keeping his legs together while on the podium.

* * *

Twenty years ago, a scant few weeks before the Berkshire Music Center was to open for its first session Serge Koussevitzky commissioned Randall Thompson to compose his now-famous choral work "Alleluia" for the new school. G. Wallace Woodworth conducted the first students in the world-premiere of the work at Tanglewood. Twenty years later—on July 3, 1960—Prof. G. Wallace Woodworth of Harvard University returned to the Tanglewood faculty and at the opening exercises, at the invitation of choral director Hugh Ross, once more conducted the new students in Thompson's "Alleluia."

Capital of Honduras is Tegucigalpa, with a population of 30,000.

Under Tanglewood Pines

Visitors to the Berkshire Music Festival in Lenox enjoy lunch under Hawthorne pines which line one of the many walks at Tanglewood. The final All-Bach program takes place in the Music Shed this afternoon, beginning at 2.30. All-Mozart programs will be heard there Friday, Saturday nights and next Sunday afternoon.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 9 - 1960

ach Concerts End Tomorrow n Tanglewood Music Shed

ANGLEWOOD — The first half the Bach-Mozart series of con- ts by the Boston Symphony chestra will conclude tomorrow ernoon at 2:30 in the Music ed when the Festival chorus will heard for the first time this ason.

Tonight's Bach concert in the ned at 8:30 will feature pianist eymour Lipkin, who will be heard ith the BSO in a performance of ach's Piano Concerto in D minor vith Dr. Charles Munch conducting. Last night 3,290 persons attended the concert in the Shed.

Seymour Lipkin
Soloist Tonight

Next weekend three all-Mozart concerts will be given by the Boston Symphony with Dr. Munch conducting. He has invited four of his first-desk players, Gino Cioffi, clarinetist; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, horn and Sherman Walt, bassoon, to be soloists at Friday's concert in the Sinfonia Concertante. The program also will include Mozart's Serenade No. 6 (Sernata Butturna) in D major, the Divertimento in D major for strings and the Symphony No. 41, "Jupiter."

Frank Soloist Next Week

Pianist Claude Frank will be guest at the Saturday evening (July 6) concert in a performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 24 in minor, K. 491. The program will pen with "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" and will close with the orhestra's first performance of Moart's "Litaniae de venerabili alaris sacramento." Hugh Ross, head f the Berkshire Music Center's horal department, will conduct the itany. His guests will be soprano largaret Kalil, contralto Louise arker, tenor John McCollum, bass eter Sliker and the Festival horus.

Sunday's (July 17) all-Mozart rogram will include his Symphones Nos. 38 and 39 plus Joseph Silerstein, Boston Symphony Orchesra violinist, as soloist in Mozart's Concerto No. 4, in D major. Mr. Silverstein was the only American of the seven American entrants, among the first 10 winners in the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music Competition at Brussels in May 1959. The competition, which drew 37 contestants from 18 nations, awarded him third prize.

Wednesday's Program

The orchestra's first violist Joseph de Pasquale, first cellist Samuel Mayes and violinist Ruth Posselt, Berkshire Music Center faculty member, will join pianist Claude Frank in the second concert of the chamber music series in the Tanglewood Theater Wednesday evening (July 13). Performing as the Bel Arte Trio, Miss Posselt and Messrs. de Pasquale and Mayes will open the program with Beethoven's String Trio in D major, Op. 9, No. 2. Mr. Frank will be heard in Beethoven's Piano Sonata in C minor, Op. 111, and he will be joined by the trio in a performance of Mozart's Piano Quartet in G minor.

The orchestra rehearsal in the Music Shed on Saturday (July 16) at 10 a.m. will be opened to the public. The proceeds from this rehearsal will benefit the orchestra's pension fund.

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited to four events at Tanglewood next week. The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will perform in the Shed on Thursday at 8:30. Members of the school's composition department will conduct a seminar in contemporary music in the chamber music hall at 3:15 Friday (July 15) and they will participate in a composer's forum in the Chamber Music Hall Sunday (July 17) at 8:30. On Sunday morning at 10 (July 17) a concert of chamber music will be performed by members of that department.

Chamber Music Concert Sunday At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — Three works will be performed at the opening chamber music concert at 10 a.m. tomorrow. These concerts, given under the auspices of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, will be held in the Chamber Music Hall as they have been for many years. The students performing in these weekly concerts are members of the department of instrumental music of the Berkshire Music Center.

Mr. William Kroll, co-head of the chamber music group, has trained the group of string players who will perform the initial chamber piece of the season, Haydn's Quartet Op. 33 No. 2

Louis Speyer of the Boston Symphony Orchestra has directed a group of five wind players, who will perform the Hindemith Quintet.

The final work of the morning will be the Schumann Quintet which has been prepared under the direction of Alfred Zighera, also of the BSO.

---

on TV earlier this year [illegible]

SEYMOUR LIPKIN, who will make three appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Back week of the Berkshire Festival on Friday and Saturday.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037

JUL 7 1960

Where To Go—What To Do

Friday, July 8

Music and flowers are on the agenda for Bostonians motoring to Lenox Friday.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first orchestral concert of the six-week BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL at Tanglewood at 8:30 p. m.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON,
Mass.
Circ. 12,847

JUL 5 - 1960

Musical Notes At Tanglewood

Three distinguished participants in Berkshire Music Center activities missed the school's opening exercises Sunday at Tanglewood; Charles Munch was in the air somewhere between Paris and New York, William Kroll was enroute by air from Potsdam and Eleazar de Carvalho's plane from Rio de Janeiro was delayed along the way by mechanical trouble.

Aaron Copland, chairman of the Faculty at the Berkshire Music Center and guest conductor on the Boston Symphony Orchestra's just completed tour of the Far East, has been on the go this Spring. From New York to Moscow to London to Tokyo where he joined the Orchestra in May; then with the Orchestra to the Philippines, Australia and home again by way of London where he says he had to stop to finish a book and pick up an overcoat.

Each summer the Baldwin Piano Company generously provides Tanglewood with seventy pianos and two electronic organs. One would think this an abundance of riches. Not so however. One day last summer a call came from nearby Lenox that a piano, "to be delivered down the road on the left," was enroute. In a few minutes a battererd pick-up truck with a miserable upright on board appeared. Examination proved it to be incorrect delivery: the piano was intended for the town dump. And this week a call came from a bewildered attendant at the main gate to report a huge truck wanted to deliver two Steinway concert grands. Confusion reigned, but since three Steinways are expected to be used at various times during the 1960 Festival the truck was unloaded. The next day a frantic call was received from nearby Music Barn with the query: have you our Steinway. It seems Louis Armstrong was to perform the next night at Music Barn and no piano had arrived. Tanglewood pleaded half quilty, gave up one piano, retained one and is still on careful look for the next two Steinways.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 11 1960

Tourist Trade Report

Hotels, Motels Do Well; Private Room Rentals Off

If Tanglewood attendance is a good barometer of Berkshire County's tourist business, most commercial establishments did slightly better at the cash register this past weekend than they did during the same period a year ago. However, private room rentals are reported off considerably in the Lenox area.

The first weekend of the six-week 1960 Berkshire Festival season at Tanglewood drew 11,949 persons to the Music Shed for the all-Bach programs presented by Conductor Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. This is 900 more than the attendance for the first weekend in 1959.

Friday night's Tanglewood attendance was 3,290; Saturday, 4,641, and yesterday afternoon, 4,018. The first open rehearsal of the BSO Saturday morning attracted 2,334.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 7 1960

Berkshire Festival Orchestra Series To Open Tomorrow

The Boston Symphony Orchestra with Charles Munch conducting, will open the orchestral programs of the 1960 Berkshire Music Festival in the music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, tomorrow evening when it will present the first of three all-Bach programs arranged for the first weekend series of the season.

Three Soloists

William Kroll, violinist; Seymour Lipkin, pianist, and James Pappoutsakis, flutist, will be the soloists at tomorrow evening's concert which opens at 8:30.

It will include the Suite No. 1, Violin Concerto in E with Mr. Kroll as soloist, Piano Concerto in F Minor with Mr. Lipkin as soloist and Triple Concerto in A Minor with Mr. Pappoutsakis, Mr. Kroll and Mr. Lipkin as soloists.

The Saturday evening program of Bach works will include excerpts from "Musical Offering," excerpts from "The Art of the Fugue," the Piano Concerto in D Minor with Mr. Lipkin as soloist, and Suite No. 4. This program also will be given at 8:30.

Sunday Afternoon

Sunday afternoon at 2:30, the orchestra, under Dr. Munch's direction, will present the Bach Suite No. 3, Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 6 and 2, and, with the Berkshire Festival Chorus assisting, the Cantata "Christ lag in Todesbanden."

The 1960 festival opened last evening when the Curtis String Quartet gave the first of a series of six Wednesday night chamber music programs in the theater-concert hall.

The attendance was announced as 1,370, and despite the chill night air, some 200 persons heard the program from the lawn outside the hall.

Students Play Tonight

This evening at 8:30 in the Tanglewood shed, the Berkshire Music Center student orchestra will give its first concert of the term. It will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the school's Department of Instrumental Music. The concert, to which the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center have been invited, will include: Beethoven's "Egmont" Overture; Mendelssohn's "Italian Symphony, Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun;" and Rimsky-Korsakov's "Russian Easter Overture."

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center also have been invited to attend a discussion of the program, which will be held in the Chamber Music Hall from 7:30 p. m. to 8 this evening. At this time members of the Tanglewood staff and a student from the Department of Instrumental Music will discuss the additional activities available to Friends at Tanglewood as well as make informal remarks concerning the music to be played at the 8:30 orchestra program.

Contributors to the maintenance and operation of the Music Center are enrolled automatically in the organization of Friends.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
UNION-STAR
D. 35,771

JUL 9 1960

Bach Program To End First Festival Week

LENOX, Mass., July 9—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which will end the first week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood tomorrow with an all-Bach program at 2:30 p.m., will present three all-Mozart concerts next week.

The second concert of the festival's chamber music series will be given Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. by Claude Frank, pianist, and the Bel Arte Trio. Frank will play Beethoven's "Piano Sonato in C Minor, No. 32, Op. 111." The trio will be heard in Beethoven's "String Trio in D Major, Op. 9, No. 2" and Frank and the trio will play Mozart's "Piano Quartet in G Minor, K 478."

The first of the all-Mozart programs on Friday will include "Serenade No. 6 (Serenata Notturna) in D Major, K 239," 'Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet and Bassoon, K 297-B," "Divertimento in D Major for Strings, K 136" and "Symphony No. 41 in C Major (Jupiter), K 551."

The second concert Saturday, July 16 at 8:30 p.m., will include "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik, K 525," "Piano Concerto No. 24 in C Minor, K 491" with Frank as soloist and "Litaniae de venerabili altaris sacramento, K 243."

The program for the third of the Mozart programs Sunday, July 17, at 2:30 p.m. will consist of "Symphony No. 38 in D Major (Prague), K 504," "Violin Concerto No. 4 in D Major, K 218" with Joseph Silverstein as soloist and "Symphony No. 39 in E Flat Major, K 543."

The Boston Symphony Orchestra's rehearsal Saturday, July 16, at 10 a.m. will be open to the public with proceeds benefitting the orchestra's pension fund.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 7 1960

Whitestone

CELEBRITIES attending the opening concert at Tanglewood last night included Sam Levenson, TV comedian, and Mrs. Golda Meir, foreign minister of Israel. A crowd of 1,370 turned out for the Curtis String Quartet's performance, marking the opening of the 1960 Berkshire Festival season.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
DAILY NEWS
D. 2,026,850 S. 3,332,879

JUL 10 1960

At Tanglewood

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, led by Charles Munch, will open at the Berkshire Festival Friday night in the 6,000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood. All three concerts of the inaugural weekend will be given over to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach. Soloists Friday evening will be violinist William Kroll, pianist Seymour Lipkin and flutist James Pappoutsakis.

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 373,012

JUL 4 1960

SMART SET By ROSE WALSH

Sale to Benefit Missions

There are some mighty fine cooks among the Friends of Bisho Fulton Sheen who annually sponsor a July sale at the North Scituat home of Mrs. Vincent P. Roberts for the benefit of his World Missions. Choice family recipes go into the home-cooked breads, pastries and other goodies that the South Shore summer colony enjoy buying and eating.

Saturday is the day and the hours are from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. In addition to the food there will be a distinctive array of Christmas cards (imported and domestic); unusual birthday, shower, anniversary and baby gifts and various miscellaneous items.

Helping Mrs. Roberts are Mrs. Dean Boylan, Mrs. Charles Dickerman, Mrs. John J. McCarthy, Miss Martha Logan, Mrs. William Greene, Mrs. John J. Burke, Mrs. Raymond O'Shea, and Mrs. Fred Eberman.

★ ★ ★

LAST WEEK WE wrote a a little story about the Mad Hatter's Tea Party in Wellesley and we mentioned that the White Rabbit was to meet the guests at an appointed place and take them to the scene of the festivities. I think he must be a relative of Harvey's famous rabbit because on Friday I received this telegram.

"I shall commend you to the Queen of Hearts and recommend that you be properly honored with an order and decorations for your wondrous works. As soon as I have the March Hare safely locked up, I'll hop in and thank you in person. White Rabbit."

★ ★ ★

HONORS ARE even with Miss Gail Frances Packard and her fiance, Reginald Burton Reed, both of Auburndale, whose engagement was announced by her parents, Lasell Junior College president and Mrs. Richard N. Packard at a party at their home.

Both young people were graduated with honors from Newton Junior College and both are students at Otterbein College in Westerville, O. The future bridegroom is on the dean's list and president of the Student Education Ass'n. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Curtis Reed of Auburndale. The wedding is planned for June 1961.

WATCHING for the finish of the Bay State Cruise to Bermuda in Hamilton Harbor are the Goodwins of Marion aboard the yacht Derby. Left to right, Marion and Phyllis Goodwin, Mrs. E. Leslie Goodwin, Goodwin and Pamela.

WISH WE COULD get up to Williamstown on Wednesday to take advantage of three invitations we have received from there in connection with the special opening performance of "The Skin of Our Teeth" at the Williamstown Summer Theater, starring Mildred Dunnock and E. G. Marshall.

The trustees of the Theater Foundation sent an invitation. The trustees of the Sterling and Francine Clark Art Institute invited us to a viewing of the current Toulouse-Lautrec exhibit and the new showing of Dutch and Flemish Masters at the Art Institute from 3 to 5 o'clock. And John Treadway, Innkeeper at the Williams Inn, requested the "pleasure of our company" at the Sixth Anniversary Champagne Reception in honor of the cast of "The Skin of Our Teeth."

★ ★ ★

CHARLES MUNCH, noted conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is always prepared for any emergency in his concert planning. Th latest one was the cancellatio of the Budapest Quartet' sum mer tour because of the illne of one of its members. The were to give the opening co cert of the Berkshire Festiva Chamber Music Series Tanglewood on Wednesday.

Dr. Munch invited the Cur String Quartet for the openi event. Jascha Brodsky, viol and Orlando Cole, cellist a faculty members at the Curt Institute of Music in Philade phia. Max Aronoff, viola, is di rector of Philadelphia's New School of Music and is also faculty member at the Curtis Institute. Second violini Mehli Mehta, born in Bombay came to the United States several years as a member o Sir Barbirolli's Halle Orchestra in Manchester, England.

For their opening number the Quartet will play Mozart' Quartet in D minor. Also o the program are Quartet No. Op. 24 by contemporary com poser, Vincent Persichetti an Ravel's Quartet in F major.

~~Times~~ 7/3/60

Gus Manos

AT TANGLEWOOD—Charles Munch, music director of the Berkshire Festival, which opens this week. Mr. Munch will conduct Boston Symphony in three all-Bach concerts.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 100,462

JUL 6 - 1960

Road to the Arts

Season Opens At Tanglewood

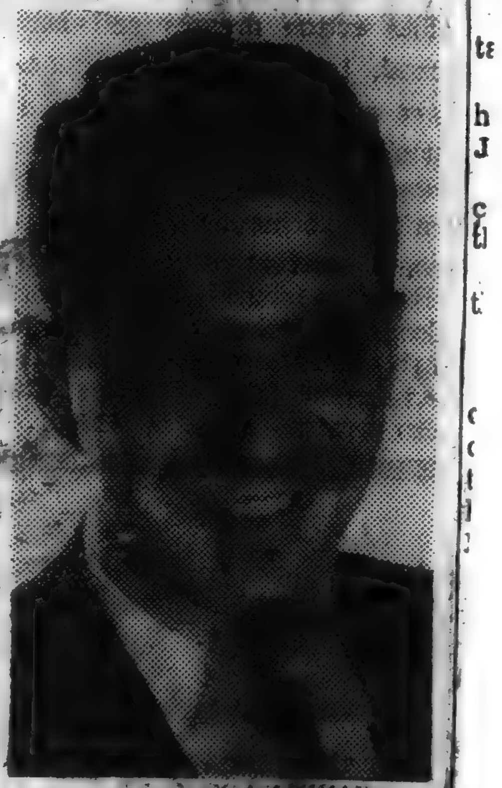
With the opening of the Berkshire Music Festival this week, the Massachusetts Turnpike becomes a royal road to music, the dance, and shows-in-the-round, throughout almost its entire length.

Musical tent-shows, some running for one week and others for two, are available close to the Turnpike at the Carousel Theatre in Framingham, and six miles south of the Turnpike exit, in West Springfield, at Storrowton Music Tent on the Eastern States Exposition grounds.

Dancers from all over the world are to be seen for eight more weeks at Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival in Becket, near Lee. The Ted Shawn Theatre is on Route 20, and can most conveniently be approached by backtracking nine miles from the Turnpike's Lee exit. A shorter, more winding route is, to leave the Turnpike near Westfield and follow Route 20 westward.

This week's big news is the opening of the six-weeks' season at Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Wednesday evening chamber music events, beginning July 6, continue weekly until Aug. 10 in the Theatre Concert Hall, presenting the Curtis String Quartet, Beaux Arts Trio and Kroll Quartet, also pianists Claudio Arrau, Claude Frank and Leon Fleisher.



CLAUDE FRANK
Headed for Tanglewood

Music Shed Concerts

Orchestral concerts in the Music Shed begin July 8. The pattern for six weeks is: Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30, Sundays at 2:30.

July 8-9-10, Charles Munch conducts the orchestra of about 45 players in the music of Bach. July 15-16-17 brings Mozart programs. All these concerts present soloists and some include the Festival's chorus of 125 voices.

A new stage enclosure has been built this year, especially for the Bach-Mozart concerts, to improve the appearance and the acoustics when using the smaller orchestra.

The full Boston forces of more than 100 players move in for four week-ends, July 22-23-24, July 29-30-31, Aug. 5-6-7, and Aug. 12-13-14.

The new acoustical shell installed last year has been still further improved and extended this spring.

Munch will conduct two concerts, and Pierre Monteux one, during each of the four major weekends.

No Novelties

Contrary to the policy of recent years, these four weeks feature no particular composer. Novelties are in the minority, well-known works have the emphasis, and there are many soloists.

About 6,000 reserved seats are available for each concert. Thousands choose instead to purchase general admission to the grounds, listening from the huge lawn, where they select a favorite spot for their own blankets or folding chairs.

Others pay a still more nominal fee to attend shed rehearsals of the orchestra at 10 o'clock Saturday mornings.

Tanglewood can be approached from the Turnpike in two directions. Leaving the Turnpike near Lee makes available a number of eating-places, but subjects the driver to heavy traffic through Lee and Lenox. Longer in miles, but far more free from strain is the route which leaves the Turnpike at West Stockbridge, and back tracks to Tanglewood via Routes 102 and 183, approaching the grounds from the west. The West and South parking areas lend themselves best to this policy, permitting a rapid getaway after concerts.

August Events

Special events in August will present Berkshire Music Center projects on Thursday evening, Aug. 4, highlighted by the premiere of a new opera directed by Boris Goldovsky.

Thursday evening, Aug. 11, will bring a full concert by the Boston "Pops" Orchestra under Arthur Fiedler.

Each week offers numerous student ensembles, lectures, forums and chamber music programs.

Lovers of choral music should circle these dates: July 10, Bach cantata; July 16, Mozart "Litany;" July [illegible], Faure Requiem; July 31, Beethoven Ninth Symphony; Aug. 14, Berlioz's "The Damnation of Faust."

TIMES-UNION * Albany, Wed., July 13, 1960

AROUND THE TOWN: EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

Tanglewood's Off to Stellar Start

No matter what happens in Los Angeles of a political nature this week, in the Eastern part of the United States, as it relates to the Berkshire Area, generally, and Tanglewood, specifically, everything promises to be five more weeks of harmony in the Great Shed now being occupied by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The winning ticket in Massachussetts, may or may not contain the name of Senator Kennedy, but musically, the winning team in Tanglewood will be Munch and Monteux.

The 1960 Festival got off to a magnificent start last Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon with a total paid attendance for the weekend of 11,949 as against the same period last period last year which racked up some 11,001, a gain of nearly 1,000. This may have been the result of the opening of the Large Shed for all the Bach-Mozart concerts, preceeding the four weeks of the full orchestra, beginning July 24, through Aug. 14.

Same Plan to Prevail

This weekend, the same plan will prevail with the use of the Large Shed for the series of three Mozart concerts, some 3,000 seats back of the boxes (the chairs that are painted gray) will be available for those who purchase general admission tickets for $2.50 each. This arrangement provides for shelter in the event of inclement weather.

Curiously enough, for the three Bach concerts last week, several hundred music lovers—mostly teenagers—preferred to bring along blankets, folding chairs and lunch baskets to listen to "Music Under the Moon," since that much-published satellite was out in all its glory, flooding the green lawn and surrounding areas with silvery light, bright enough for those on the outside looking in to read their programs without the use of a flashlight.

Speaking of "Music Under the Moon," that is the title of a paper back book, written by John G. W. Mahanna, a very vital figure in the Berkshire Festival and a member of the staff of the Berkshire Eagle. This fascinating tome is a must for anyone interested in the history of the festival from the humble beginning of three concerts held in the horse show ring of the Hanna Farm, near Stockbridge, Aug. 23, 24 and 25, 1934, when Henry Hadley conducted a group of some 45 members of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. In spite of the fact that one of the performances was enjoyed "under umbrellas," the cultural germ has born fruit and it is the consensus that right here, in our own backyard, is the finest music festival, the finest orchestra and the finest conductor, (Dr. Munch,) in the world.

Festival's Heart, Soul

Throughout the 26 years that the Festival has been attracting music lovers from every state in the Union and from Canada and Mexico, one name stands out as the heart and soul of the whole undertaking. And that is Gertrude Robinson Smith, a Summer resident of Stockbridge, whose initiative and indefatigible energies have been devoted to her brain child and still are.

It was Miss Smith, who launched the successful project to build the present 6,000 seat Big Shed, following a disasterous Wagner concert in the large tent during a violent thunder and lightning storm which drowned out the music and disrupted a coast-to-coast radio hookup, "Wagner With Sound Effects." When Dr. Koussevitzky refused to play any more concerts under canvas, it was Miss Smith's impassioned plea which raised the necessary $100,000 to make the acoustically perfect Big Shed a reality.

Although Albany music lovers are generously sprinkled among the audience, there are thousands who have never been to Tanglewood. With the use of the Thruway and the Massachussets Turnpike, it is only a matter of an hour and 15 minutes motor trip from Albany.

The most heartening aspect of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival is the great number of children who are being exposed to the world's great music. Here is one part of the nation in which there is no juvenile delinquency. "Music," you know, "hath charms to soothe the savage beast."

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 148,332

JUL 10 1960

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 4,136

JUL 7 1960

Gazette
EAST HARTFORD
Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 3,951

JUL 7 1960

Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 46,674

JUL 10 1960

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 99,001

JUL 8 1960

BACH, MOZART SCHEDULED AT TANGLEWOOD

Programs Outlined for Concert This Sunday, Next Week End

Charles Munch, who will conclude the first week of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival Sunday at Tanglewood with an all-Bach program at 2.30 in the Music Shed, will conduct three all-Mozart concerts on Friday (July 15), Saturday (July 16), and Sunday (July 17).

Dr. Munch has invited four of his first-desk players, clarinetist Gino Cioffi, Ralph Gomberg, oboe, James Stagliano, horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon, to be soloists at Friday's concert in the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K. 297b. The program will also include Mozart's Serenade No. 6 (Serenata Notturna) in D major, K. 239, the Divertimento in D major, for Strings, K. 136, and the Symphony No. 41, "Jupiter."

Piano Concerto

Pianist Claude Frank will be guest at the Saturday (July 16) concert in a performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 24 in C minor, K. 491. The program will open with "Eine kleine Nachtmusik" and will close with the Orchestra's first performance of Mozart's "Litaniae de venerabili altaris sacramento." Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's Choral Department, will conduct the Litany. His guests will be soprano Margaret Kalil, contralto Louise Parker, tenor Jones McCollum, bass Peter Sager, and the Festival Chorus.

Sunday's (July 17) all-Mozart program will include his Symphonies Nos. 38 and 39 plus Joseph Silverstein, Boston Symphony Orchestra violinist, as soloist in Mozart's Concerto No. 4, in D major, K. 218. Mr. Silverstein was the only American, of the seven American entrants, among the first ten winners in the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music Competition at Brussels in May 1959. The Competition, which drew 37 contestants from 18 nations, awarded him third prize.

[illegible]

Chamber Music

The Orchestra's first violist Joseph de Pasquale, first cellist Samuel Mayes and violinist Ruth Posselt, Berkshire Music Center faculty member, will join pianist Claude Frank in the second concert of the Chamber Music Series in the Tanglewood Theater Wednesday. Performing as the Bel Arte Trio, Miss Posselt and Messrs. de Pasquale and Mayes will open the program with Beethoven's String Trio in D major, Op. 9, No. 2. Mr. Frank will be heard in Beethoven's Piano Sonata in C minor, Op. 111, and he will be joined by the Trio in a performance of Mozart's Piano Quartet in G minor, K. 478.

The Orchestra's rehearsal in the Music Shed on Saturday (July 16) at 10 a. m. will be opened to the public. The proceeds from this rehearsal will benefit the Orchestra's Pension Fund.

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those whose interest in the School is reflected by their contribution toward its support, are invited to four events at Tanglewood this week. The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will perform in the Shed on Thursday. Members of the school's Composition Department will conduct a Seminar in Contemporary Music in the Chamber Music Hall at 3.15 Friday (July 15) and they will participate in a Composer's Forum in the Chamber Music Hall, Sunday (July 17) at 8.30. On Sunday morning at 10 (July 17) a concert of chamber music will be performed by members of that department.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 11 1960

Tanglewood Counts 11,949 At Three Bach Concerts

The Boston Symphony Orchestra yesterday afternoon closed its first weekend of Bach - Mozart Concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, with a total attendance of 11,949 recorded for the three performances.

4,018 in Shed

Yesterday afternoon 4,018 persons were in the music shed for the third of the three all-Bach programs. Saturday evening's concert was attended by 4,641, while on Friday evening 3,290 persons heard the initial program.

Under the baton of Charles Munch, its musical director, the orchestra yesterday performed the Suite No. 3, Brandenburg Concertos No. 6 and 2, and, with the festival chorus, the cantata, "Christ lag in Todesbanden." On Saturday evening the program was comprised of the six-part Ricarcare from "The Musical Ofering," the final movements of "The Art of the Fugue," the Suite No. 4 and, with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, the Piano Concert in D Minor, No. 7. Friday evening's program offered the Suite No. 1 Violin Concerto in E with William Kroll as soloist, the Piano Concerto in F Minor with Mr. Lipkin as soloist, and the Triple Concerto in A Minor with Mr. Kroll, Mr. Lipkin and James Pappoutsakis, second flutist of the orchestra, handling the solo passages.

This Week

Scheduled for this week at Tanglewood are a chamber music concert Wednesday evening at 8:30 and three concerts devoted to the works of Mozart, on Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30, to wind up the preliminary Bach-Mozart series.

Claude Frank will be soloist with members of the Boston orchestra in a performance of Mozart's Piano Quartet Nos. 1 and 2 and will play Beethoven's Piano Sonata Op. 111 in the Wednesday evening concert in the theater-concert hall.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 40,278

JUL 11 1960

Record Set At Lenox Opening

(Special To The American)

LENOX, MASS.—The largest opening week-end audience in Berkshire Festival history, just short of 12,000, heard the three Bach concerts at Tanglewood conducted by Charles Munch just back from a tour of the Orient and Japan with the Boston Symphony Orchestra. There were more than 4,000 at the Sunday afternoon concert with the first two weeks of concerts preceding the major festival so popular that all Bach and Mozart concerts will be given in the shed instead of in the much smaller music hall used in former years.

Seymour Lipkin gave a brilliant piano performance in the "Concerto for Clavier, No. 1, in D Minor," Saturday night and the Festival Chorus of some 60 voices a stirring performance of Bach's "Cantata No. 4, 'Christ Lag in Todesbanden'" for the concluding Sunday selection.

Good Weather Sunday

Saturday and Sunday were beautiful days in the Berkshires and whole families were at the concerts beginning with infants so young one wondered if their parents were not a bit venturesome to bring them. They, however, caused no disturbance. It was rather the birds in the rafters high in the shed who seemed to want to join in the performance of the "Brandenburg Concerto No. 6, in B Flat Major, For Strings." The performance of "Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, in F Major," for trumpet, flute, oboe, and violin was a high mark of the afternoon. The new shell of 28 sections that folds within the larger shell dedicated last season is designed to be used for the Mozart and Bach concerts and to create a more intimate acoustical setting for the smaller orchestra which plays during the first two weeks of the festival. It accomplished that admirably for the intimate group of 14 strings in the "Brandenburg Concerto." Before Munch could begin the second half of the concert and lead the Festival Chorus in "Cantata No. 4" he had to wait for a noisy airplane to clear the area. Planes usually steer clear of Tanglewood during the concerts but this one must have heard the clear trumpet notes of Roger Voisin a few minutes earlier in the "Brandenburg Concerto No. 2."

Saturday evening's audience of 4,641 heard Seymour Lipkin in a brilliant performance of the "Concerto For Clavier, No. 1, in D Minor," in which the soloist is playing almost without a break. It was a dynamic, spirited and colorful performance and the audience called him back again and again. In the "Final Movements From the Art of Fugue" (arranged for orchestra by Ernest Munch) the Saturday audience heard the organist Berj Zamkochian in solo playing that held his listeners so rapt it seemed the coughers forgot to cough. He received an overwhelming ovation.

The first of the Saturday morning open rehearsals for the benefit of the Boston Symphony Orchestra pension fund drew an audience of 2,334, some 800 more than for the same concert a year ago. It would appear that already the concert series this season is on the way to setting new attendance records for a festival which each year draws more and more music lovers to the beautiful grounds. This week it will be all Mozart with the Friday night concert presenting "Serenade No. 6 in D Major," "Sinfonia Concertante, for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon," and the "Divertimento in D Major for Strings" and "Symphony No. 41, in C major, 'Jupiter.'" Saturday night's program will include "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," "Piano Concerto No. 24, in C minor" with Claude Frank as soloist. The Festival Chorus will be heard in "Litanial de Venerabili Altrais Sacramento" with four soloists. The Sunday afternoon concert will present Joseph Silverstein as soloist in "Violin Concerto No. 4, in D Major." The program will include "The Prague Symphony No. 38, in D major" and end with "Symphony No. 39, in E Flat Major."

Judging by the number of Waterburians this reviewer has been seeing in the audiences at Tanglewood it is becoming increasingly an attraction for the doctor, banker, businessman, and just plain music lover from this area.

SM

Bo.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657

JUL 9 1960

An All-Bach Program At Tanglewood

By DANIEL W. GOTTLIEB

Lenox — The Boston Symphony Orchestra opened the shed concert series for the season at Tanglewood here Friday night with an all-Bach program. The orchestra, under the baton of Charles Munch, and three soloists — William Kroll, violinist, Seymour Lipkin, pianist, and James Pappoutsakis, flutist—played the following works:

Suite No. 1 in C major.
Concerto for Violin, No. 2 in E major.
Concerto for Klavier, No. 5 in F minor.
Conerto for Klavier, Flute and Violin, A minor.

So popular have the Bach and Mozart concerts at Tanglewood become that the Berkshire Festival authorities have switched them from the smaller Theater Concert Hall to the main concert shed and its vast surrounding lawn.

* * *

AS MIGHT BE imagined, Bach's music for chamber orchestra, even when nourished, as was the case last night, with more than the normal compliment of players, does not sound at its best in the cavernous surroundings of the shed.

The intricacies of the counterpoint, the vital core of most of his music, are all but lost in the open air.

But even acknowledging the acoustic difficulties under which Mr. Munch and company are laboring, this does not wholly explain the general dullness of the performances last night.

* * *

THE ORCHESTRA played with its usual fine tone and hairlike precision on entrances and dynamics.

What Mr. Much's interpretations lacked was starch. He chose to understate the music and within phrases the subtle changes of melodic contours were not emphasized to give variety.

He gave strong and resolute final cadence to the pieces that failed to carry the conviction which comes after a careful buildup to such a climax.

* * *

THE WORK OF the soloists, though technically proficient, was, with the exception of Mr. Pappoutsakis, generally uninspiring. Mr. Kroll experienced a stiffness of execution in the first movement of the violin concerto, but even when he overcame this, his playing lacked well-rounded phrasing and a sense of the whole. Mr. Lipkin's playing was somewhat moe expressive, but his tonal color was dry. The flutist who was under some strain to make his instrument heard due to the heaviness of the orchestra and pino nevertheless displayed a sensitivity to careful phrasing and subtle dynamic changes.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 9 - 1960

Music Review

Bach at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

TANGLEWOOD began its orchestral season last night with the first of three weekend concerts devoted solely to Bach, a custom established 15 years ago when wartime restrictions still limited audiences and the participation of large groups of performers.

* * *

THERE WHERE several innovations on this initial evening in which some 30 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra played under the direction of Charles Munch. First, the concert was played in the main Shed instead of in the theater-concert hall, which has been the custom heretofore. A record opening night audience of 3,290 attended, a number which would have forced nearly two thirds of those present to take advantage of the lawns outside the theater. Last year the tickets were numbered so that in case of rain the Shed could be used in an emergency. This year the Shed was used without alternative.

Second, a new sound reflector was in place and it served its purpose well. A maroon-colored, accordion-folded backscreen was set close behind the smaller ensemble that was utilized last night, most appropriate for music of the period of Bach. It propelled the sound faithfully and with brisk alacrity, but with possibly a slight continuing resonance.

* * *

THE PROGRAM was an excellent choice, and the musicians played with all their most able brilliance. The C major suite opened the program and its great variety of rhythms and contrasts of moods were sensed by Munch with a sure hand.

The remainder of the program was illuminated by the work of three superlative artists, the E major violin concerto played by William Kroll, the F minor piano concerto played by Seymour Lipkin and the A minor concerto played by the two previously mentioned joined by flautist James Pappoutsakis.

* * *

KROLL PLAYED his concerto with nobility. Supported by an extremely sympathetic orchestra, he gave the first and third movements an honesty of style which only his superfluity of means makes possible, and in the central slow movement there was an exaltation and elegance that went far beyond mere manual accomplishments. This was playing of a loftiness rarely equalled and it cast a breathless spell on the absorbed audience.

Lipkin maintained the standards set in the first half of the concert and immediately proclaimed in his first utterance that he, too, was playing with far more than ordinary penetration and confidence. There was a spirit of breadth and a sound of controlled strength, and, above it all, an evident joy in the playing that gave the keyboard a vibrancy the instrument does not normally exude.

* * *

WITH THE collaboration of Pappoutsakis they brought the evening to a happy close. The flute soloist blows a remarkable, evenly-sustained, round tone, and while there is not exactly complete democracy in the concert as far as the instrumental parts are concerned, the performance was gratifying by reason of the musicianship of all the soloists and the grasp of style each one convincingly proved.

The two remaining concerts of this weekend, tonight and tomorrow afternoon, will also be devoted completely to Bach.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUL 11 1960

Bach Concerts At Tanglewood Draw 11,949

The weekend of Bach concerts at the Berkshire Music Festival drew a total of 11,949 persons, 900 more than for the opening Bach weekend a year ago.

Tanglewood listeners numbered 3,2[illegible] Friday night, 4,641 Saturday night, and 4,018 Sunday afternoon.

Charles Munch's decision to throw open the rear section of the Big Shed to unreserved ticket holders for the opening Bach-Mozart concerts must have affected the increase in the audience.

Bach selections performed under Mr. Munch Sunday included "Suite No. 3 in D Major," "Brandenburg Concerto No. 6 in B Flat Major for Strings," and "Brandenburg Concerto No. 2 in F Major for Trumpet, Flute, Oboe, and Violin." The Festival Chorus directed by Hugh Ross performed the final work, Cantata No. 4, "Christ Lage In Todesbanden."

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 12,847

JUL 13 1960

Symphony Opens Festival With 3 Bach Concerts

Seemingly not the least weary after a highly successful eight-week tour of the Far East, members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened the 1960 Berkshire Festival with a weekend of three concerts devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach. Their director, Charles Munch, was in excellent form, fresh and vigorous after a Parisian holiday.

Held in the 6,000-seat Music Shed, instead of the smaller theatre-concert hall as in previous years, to accommodate the increased demand and interest in the Bach-Mozart series, Saturday's performance alone brought a record attendance of 4,641, an all-time high for the two-week series. Friday's saw a total of 3,290 with Sunday's concert at 4,018, making a total of 11,947, including Saturday morning's rehearsal.

Beacause of the intimate nature of these performances, much of the sound has been lost in the vastness of the Shed, when given in former years during inclement weather. Added to last summer's newly installed Talbot Memorial Canopy, a stunning red sound deflector on stage has solved this acoustical problem and added greatly to the aural as well as visual enjoyment.

Another problem not solved by the engineers is that of the feathered friends of the BSO, which make their homes behind the pillars inside the Music Shed. They were pretty vocal about not being informed of the change of location for these first weeks' concerts, notably Sunday afternoon, when their chirpings almost overshadowed the musical tones; it was a little distracting, but really not out of place with the music of Bach. We're sure he would approve.

Featured on Saturday night's program was the pianist Seymour Lipkin playing the Concerto for clavier, No. 1 in D minor. Mr. Lipkin is a sound musician, his playing clean-cut and certain, rhythmically exact and dynamically sensitive. Throughout this moving composition, the rapport between soloist and the string orchestra was significant; Dr. Munch conducted with sparse movements to co-ordinate a memorable performance.

Inclided on the program was the six part Ricercare from "The Musical Offering" (based on a theme provided by Frederick the Great) this particular orchestration by Hans Theodore David was winningly executed. Three Fugues and Chorale from "The Art of Fugue," increasingly complex in invention, and therefore immeasurably absorbing, completed the first section.

The Fourth Suite in D major with its five varied movements, followed the clavier concerto, to leave the wildly cheering audience as jubilant as the final "Rejouissance."

Sunday's concert opened with the familiar Third Suite in D major, the popular "Air for the G string," taken at a 'molto adagio' tempo by Dr. Munch, literally suspending the melody from the pizzicato bass accompaniment.

The Sixth Brandenburg Concerto for violas, cellos and basses, so seldom heard because of the lack of proficient viola players, was a thing of deeply wrought beauty from beginning to end. The Second Brandenburg in F major for trumpet, flute, oboe and violin, always breathtaking in the tones of the high trumpet, so expertly conceived by Roger Voisin, ended the first half of the program. The andante, exquisitely simple, for violin, flute and oboe, with cello and bass continuo, was not as evently balanced as is desirous, but the final Allegro assai, with its fugue tossed from one instrument to another, was a delight and a satisfaction.

The newly formed Berkshire Festival Chorus, directed by Hugh Ross, was conducted by Dr. Munch with sensitivity and careful attention to style and content of the seven sections in the Cantata No. 4 "Christ Lag En Todesbanden." They performed with amazing good voice and feeling, the balance on the whole quite evently distributed. The audience was most warmly aprpeciative at all the concerts, of the performers as well as the enduring quadities of the master, Johann Selbastian Bach. — M. deB. B.

55

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 100,462

JUL 9 - 1960

Bach Concert Ingratiating At Tanglewood

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX—Charles Munch made his initial bow of the summer last night at Tanglewood, leading 30 Boston Symphony players in the music of Johann Sebastian Bach. Two more Bach concerts follow tonight and tomorrow afternoon, and the next weekend brings 40 players in music of Mozart.

This year, all these preliminary concerts are held in the big Music Shed, a change made feasible and attractive by new handling of the stage. Inside the modernistic gray shell built last year for use with the full orchestra, has been added for these two weeks a smaller enclosure acoustically designed and handsome in its smart shades of dull red. The "Bach orchestra" looks and sounds well in its new setup.

Attendance on opening night was 3,290, almost exactly last year's figure.

Loves Music

Munch obviously loves this type of music and enjoys working with the small group and soloists. His direction last night was alert but relaxed. The results were ingratiating without loss of traditional scholarship.

The Suite No. 1 in C major told the whole story in its Overture, where the tone was at once smooth and stable, rich and clear. This movement, in its serious introduction, elaborate fugue and hymnlike conclusion, was symphonic work in cameo form.

The various dance movements which followed, brought minuets, gavottes, bourrees and passpieds, as well as the courante and forlane. Of especial skill were the episodes for winds, playing in four parts, and the solo assignments for oboe, cello and viola.

The remainder of the evening brought string ensembles working with soloists. William Kroll, whose quartet is to be heard here on a Wednesday, was excellent in the Concerto for Violin, No. 2, in E major. The intricacies of the two Allegro movements found him able and crisp, even when the task approached that of perpetual motion, but the slow second movement was "out of this world." For a time, Munch ceased to conduct, and let the music float in happy harmony between the soloist and ensemble.

Seymour Lipkin revealed in the Concerto for Clavier, No. 5, in F minor, the qualities which make him more than a clever pianist. He is a master of cooperaton. The Largo movement displayed his accurate but poetic work against plucked strings and the final Presto had admirable give-and-take between the artist, conductor and strings.

Fragile Music

Lipkin was even more the coordinator in the delightful Concerto for Clavier, Flute and Violin, in A minor, with sterling work by James Pappoutsakis and Kroll. The piano could have dominated this fragile and lovely music, but Lipkin and his colleagues preserved beautiful balances in the second movement where the three instruments were heard at length alone, and even against some 27 strings, the solo voices were clear and poised. Lipkin had plenty of fire for the few declamatory passages Bach allowed. Pappoutsakis kept the flute tone admirably mellow and Kroll got around the dizzy corners of some tricky passages with distinction.

Tonight's concert again features Lipkin as soloist. Sunday brings The Festival Chorus under Hugh Ross in a Bach cantata, with Munch conducting a suite and two Brandenburg Concertos. Trumpet, flute, oboe and violin are featured in the persons of Roger Voisin, Pappoutsakis, Ralph Gomberg and Richard Burgin, concert master.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUL 9 - 1960

Berkshire Festival Opens 23rd Season

The question on concertgoers' minds at the opening of the 23rd season of the Berkshire Festival Friday night at Tanglewood was "how will Bach sound in the Big Shed which seats 6,000 persons?"

By the end of the concert, the 3,290 persons who filled approximately half of the Shed new that Charles Munch, conductor, had made a wise decision in moving the first two weekends of Bach-Mozart concerts from the Chamber Music Hall to the Big Shed.

An acoustical sounding board enclosed the small ensemble and sent Bach's music to all corners of the shed clearly. The enclosure also made the stage appear smaller.

This first Bach concert attracted 10 more persons than the first one last season and the growing popularity of the Bach-Mozart concerts is sure to attract greater numbers this season.

Friday's opening concert of the Berkshire Festival also boasted three fine soloists, Seymour Lipkin, pianist; James Pappoutsakis, flautist; and William Kroll, violinist.

The highlight of the evening came when the three joined together in the final work of the concert, "Concerto for Clavier, Flute, and Violin in A Minor." They recieved rousing "bravos" and applause for their teamwork in the melodic work. Lipkin played crisply and formed the backdrop for the two other artists. The pianist's role is a major one in this work. He was answered sweetly by Kroll's violin and Pappoutsakis' flute.

Lipkin also showed his ability to play very well and very fast as soloist in the "Concerto for Clavier, N. 5, in F Minor." He took Bach's running scales on with style.

Kroll's skill as a violinist and his attention to detail gave luster to "Concerto for Violin, No. 2, in E Major." The passage of the beautiful slow adagio movement glowed as Kroll's violin intoned some of the most rewarding moments of the evening.

The opening work, "Suite No. 1 in C Major," became organ-like as the chamber orchestra gave some freedom to the highly patterned work with finely colored playing.

The Bach program for tonight will be as follows: "Six Part Ricercare from the Musical Offering," "Final Movements from the Art of Fugue," with Berj Zamkochian at the organ; "Concerto for Clavier, No. 1, in D Minor," with Lipkin as soloist; and "Suite No. 4, in D Major."

I. R. M.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 175,076

JUL 11 1960

MUSIC

Berkshire Festival

By JULES WOLFFERS

LENOX — Sunny skies were smiling at Tanglewood this weekend and so was the management of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, for with 11,940 cash customers attending the three all-Bach programs, all attendance figures were shattered for a Berkshire Music Festival opening.

These figures will, of course, be greatly enlarged in succeeding weeks when the full orchestra gives its programs, but the fact that close to 12,000 persons attended what used to be considered programs of esoteric music is a happy sign of America's growing music development.

In High Gear

After a not too exciting start in Friday's opener, the orchestra really pushed into high gear for some brilliant and forceful playing in Saturday's program.

Charles Munch has a fine way with Bach's orchestral music to which he brings color, imagination, verve and a touch of audacity. Thus the conductor was right at home with the two orchestral arrangements which formed the program's first half.

Hans T. David's orchestral realization of the six-part Ricercare from "The Musical Offering" is very well done. "Right 'right royal'" theme, Frederick the Great wrote for Bach's fugal treatment, sounded and resounded with color and brilliancy for the curtain raiser. In contrast, the more sober passages of the composer's learned and altogether magnificent "Art of Fugue" were depicted with what might be termed moving reverence.

Only the final sections were given, ending with the uncompleted quadruple fugue which the composer's blindness left him unable to finish. As a conclusion, by way of memorial tribute and musical thanks, Mr. Munch had Berj Zamkochian play a Bach organ prelude.

Making his third festival appearance in three days, Seymour Lipkin found the D minor Clavier Concerto fit meat for his percussive and projective style. With orchestra and conductor backing him all the way, the pianist made the work exciting in the first and last movements. The lovely Adagio also was well played, with subtle rubato alterations of pace and with full control of the long, ornamented melodic lines.

Mozart's Next

The orchestral Suite No. 4 ended this excellent program which gave the large audience much opportunity for hearty and sustained applause.

For yesterday's week-end finale, the orchestra and Mr. Munch scored again with the Suite No. 3; the Brandenburg Concertos, No. 2 and No. 6; and the Cantata No. 4, "Christ lag in Todesbanden," in which Lorna Cooke de Varon accomplished the superhuman job of whipping the Festival Chorus in shape after only six days of rehearsal.

Next Friday, Saturday and Sunday the Festival devotes itself to Mozart's music.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 11 1960

Music Review

Bach Weekend at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

A RECORD for attendance was set for the first week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon's concert attracted a few above four thousand and all three all-Bach concerts, for the first time all in the great Shed, drew larger individual audiences than had ever before heard this increasingly-popular feature of the summer schedule.

In spite of the new policy of allowing any general admission holders so minded to take seats in the rear of the auditorium, many still took advantage of the lawns and adjacent areas to listen spread out at their comfort and nonchalant leisure.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, chose a short compact program for yesterday afternoon: The third suite, in D major, two Brandenburg concerti and the Cantata No. 4, "Christ lag in Todesbanden."

The B flat Brandenburg, No. 6, is one of the richest and happiest of Bach's treasures. He omits violins and gives the top voice to divided violas with support in the lower registers from celli and basses. For our ears Munch employed too many celli, and thereby made the balance less than felicitous, although nothing can deprive us of the deep pleasure this concerto always affords us.

Joseph de Pasquale, principal of the viola section, bellwethered his colleagues in a performance of vivid character hampered to a degree by the conductor's insistence. The second movement is written as an adagio and the final one an allegro but Bach did not write instructions for the first movement. It was a pity that the potential radiance of that orchestral voice and of the Bostonians in particular were not fully released. Furthermore, the final movement responds so marvelously to a decisive rhythmic discipline rather than to arbitrary restraint. Munch continually found himself during many instances of the three concerts with tempi in which the musicians followed his baton faithfully at the outset, but which he found reason to adjust and correct once under way.

* * *

THE SECOND Brandenburg enlisted as soloists Roger Voisin, trumpet, James Pappoutsakis, flute, Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Richard Burgin, violin. This concerto is distinguished by the glitter of the highly-voiced treble for the trumpet. There is no instrument in popular current use which can negotiate the register in which Bach wrote here, but which, evidently, made no special demands in its day so far as the instrument was concerned.

In the evolution of music different instruments have served and others have been invented so that the classic orchestra was quite different from contemporary instrumentation. Voisin yesterday played a B-flat picolo clarino, a trumpet very high and shrill-pitched, which is a stunt to play at all and a feat when played as well as it was yesterday.

The soloists gave the whole concerto a consistent luster. The center movement in which only the flute, oboe and violin have assignments is played with a bare minimum of support by two celli. This was played with breadth and conspicuously beautiful tone. The final movement is the most fertile for the trumpet, and the audience gave Voisin and his fellows tumultuous applause.

* * *

AFTER intermission came the cantata. The Festival chorus, chosen from students of the Berkshire Music Center, supplied the voices, and they were trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon, whom Munch called to the platform at the conclusion to share the generous appreciation it pleased the audience to show.

Munch used only strings in the orchestral accompaniment and supplied an organ for what might have been executed by brass. He gave it a spacious and poiseful reading, accentuating some details rather expansively and magnifying some dramatic possibilities. For instance, in the awesome moment in the third verse as the form of Death appears, the abrupt and intense silence was maintained with theatrical suspense and then relieved as the chorus sang "its sting is gone" with fearful breathlessness.

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT Seymour Lipkin had the good fortune to play the other clavier concerto, in D minor, having played the F minor on Friday evening. There was a tug-of-war between the soloist and the conductor. The latter conceived it as an orchestral symphony with piano, and it was only by sheer willpower and assured competence that Lipkin was able to dominate the encounter and choose tempi that pleased him. He played again with fingers of steel, and, in the slow movement, with an eloquent tenderness.

Munch closed the evening with the D major suite, No. 4, which he conducted with taste and verve. If he planned to make the finale Rejouissance a crash ending, he was successful, for he caught his ordinarily nimble musicians quite unprepared for the violently swift pace he chose, and it was only after a terrific scramble that they overtook him. It had the desired effect, however, for the applause exploded before the final cadence had been completed.

* * *

THE FIRST half of the program had been divided between a Ricercare from the Musical Offering and, the final movements from the Art of the Fugue. The "Offering" was an excellent vehicle to display the Boston string sections. The initial statement is given to the violas whom Munch wisely limited to perform with a portion of the bow. As the second violins and the others sequentially entered, they used longer and more full voiced strokes so that the effect of "the inevitability of gradualism" was apparent as it developed before our eyes, (or ears). The arrangement used was by Hans T. David, which except for an intricate involvement about three quarters of the way along, was an excellent piece of work.

* * *

THE MOVEMENTS from the Art of the Fugue had been arranged by the conductor's uncle, Ernest Muench. Bach wrote it for an unspecified medium. It was written in open score but probably intended to be played on a keyboard instrument. After the uncompleted quadruple fugue, Munch stood immobile while a tacet orchestra sat attentively to listen to the choral, "Dein Will gescheh, Herr Jesus Christ," played impressively on the organ by Berj Zamkochian.

Zamkochian played it without dynamic variation and in a manner near that which a baroque organ might have sounded. After the extremely intense fervor which Munch had demanded of the musicians, this contrast was dramatic and by understatement majestic and moving.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 17 1960

Second Thoughts on Music

Record Numbers Attend Berkshire Festival Events

Three Bach Concerts Were Memorable Performances as Directed by Dr. Munch; Fine Soloists Add to Many High Lights

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—The Berkshire Music Festival completed its first week-end of concerts with record breaking attendance. More than 11,000 persons attended the three concerts devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach and they heard the fine ensemble of first desk men of the Boston Symphony Orchestra produce some memorable performances under the direction of Charles Munch. Saturday night drew the largest audience of some 4600 persons.

Fine Soloists

In addition to the ensemble there were fine soloists, notably violinist William Kroll who gave a notable, dedicated performance of the "Concerto for Violin, No. 2 in E major" and Seymour Lipkin, who again revealed his fine pianism and sensitivity in the F minor and D minor concertos for piano and orchestra. In addition Messrs. Lipkin and Kroll and James Pappoutsakis, flutist, participated in a stunning performance of the "Concerto for Clavier, Flue in Violin in A minor." Seldom heard, this performance was one of the high lights of the week end.

From the purely orchestral offerings, the Six Part Ricercare from "The Musical Offering" and the final movements from "The Art of the Fugue" revealed Mr. Munch at the height of his interpretive powers, while the Suite No. 4 in D major as well as the Suites No. 1 in C major and No. 3 in D major revealed anew the exquisite colorations of which the ensemble was capable. There has been, throughout the week-end concerts a strong feeling of rapport between players and audience as well as a feeling that the instrumentalists along with Mr. Munch were thoroughly enjoying the experience of performing Bach for such large audiences.

The Festival Chorus made its initial appearance in the lovely cantata "Christ lag in Todesbanden." The chorus had been finely prepared by Lorna Cooke DeVaron, assistant to Hugh Ross. There appears to be good material in the chorus this summer. Basses and tenors are stable and sopranos and altos blend nicely. Mr. Munch provided a particularly sensitive performance of this cantata, stressing its feeling of joy and belief in the future. There were some splendid sonorities, just as there were moments of exquisite lyricism.

Wednesday night pianist Claude Frank and the Bel Arts Trio provided the second chamber music recital. Members of the trio are Ruth Posselt, violin; Joseph de Pasquale, viola and Samuel Mayes, cello. The trio has been more or less a regular participant in the chamber music recitals. Claude Frank was born in Nurnberg, Germany, in 1925. He has lived in this country since 1947 and is a one-time student at the Berkshire Center. He appeared with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Boston last season. A review of this recital will be given later.

Much Singing

Boris Goldovsky is around and there is much singing emanating from the theater. Just what Mr. Goldovsky plans is still unknown to us, but opera scenes are scheduled for Wednesday afternoon.

As customary, the week-end concerts were devoted to the music of Mozart and Mr. Munch provided many facets of the master's art. He has a very special way with the Mozart symphonies and he has at his command all the resources to make the most of Mozart's music. Among the soloists were Claude Frank, pianist; Joseph Silverstein, violinist; and vocalists Margaret Kalil, soprano; Louise Parker, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Peter Sliker, bass. The quartet appeared in Mozart's "Litaniae De Veneravili Altue Sacramento." The work was given for the first time at the Berkshire Festival.

Mass.

JUL 10 1960

Second Thoughts On Music

Berkshire Festival Opens Amid Tanglewood Beauty

Koussevitzky Dream Realized as 20th Season Gets Under Way; Curtis String Quartet in Fine Performance Rich With Sensitivity

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—The Berkshire Music Festival and the Berkshire Music Center got under way and those who came to Tanglewood found it more beautiful than ever. Nature has been bountiful with rain and everything was wonderfully lush. Human labor had manicured the lawns clipped the age-old boxwood and applied fresh paint where needed. Wednesday night, for example, revealed Tanglewood at its most beautiful. The hills around the Stockbridge Bowl were crystal sharp and when the full moon rose over the Music Shed, the effect was something for which we have no words.

Successful Tour

The Boston Symphony players have traveled [illegible] last August. They seem happy to be back. We were told that the tour was a great success, particularly in Japan where there is tremendous interest in western music. Whether they understand it or not, the Japanese people approached it in almost reverent mood. The Boston Symphony was the first major orchestra to visit Australia and it was warmly greeted.

This marks the 20th season of the Berkshire Music Center. The Koussevitzky dream has been realized in good measure. Already some 5000 students have studied at the center and from that number have come such distinguished conductors of American and Canadian orchestras as Leonard Bernstein, Thor Johnson and Walter Hendl. Other students occupy positions as associate and assistant conductors of orchestras in this country and there are many, many orchestras whose first desk men are center students.

The center looks after its own. Many return each year as members of ensembles, soloists and teachers. We learned that the son of the second violinist of the Curtis String Quartet had been a student at the center and that next week he will make his New York debut as conductor of a Lewisohn Stadium concert. His father was born in India and came to this country to join the Curtis Quartet via the Halle orchestra of Manchester, England.

The Budapest String Quartet had been scheduled to open chamber music series last Wednesday, but due to the illness of a member all summer concerts have been cancelled. The Curtis String Quartet took over as a substitute and played to an audience of 1370 persons who welcomed them with a deal of enthusiasm.

They opened the program with Mozart's "String Quartet in D major, K. 421" and concluded with Ravel's only string quartet. In between they played Vincent Persichetti's second string quartet, a contemporary work by a young man who was born in Philadelphia and made most of his studies in this country. The quartet was composed in 1944. Persichetti is not afraid to make use of his melody and the quartet has several lovely themes, frequently more diatonic than atonal.

It gets its excitement from the incisive, emphatic rhythms. The gentlemen work with relish. Mozart was approached with fine sensitivity and performed within a relatively small framework. The result was a performance finely detailed and balanced. While some of the sensitivity lavished on Mozart was missing during the performance of the Ravel quartet, there was some exquisite coloring, particularly on the part of first violinist whose tone was exceptionally clear and beautiful.

Special Audience

There is a very special audience for these chamber music recitals. It is an audience which is perceptive, thoughtful and appreciative. Music is its reason for attending the recitals, which is more than can be said for the audiences at other concerts. Wednesday night was really cold, yet more than 100 persons sat outside the theater without complaining.

The week end Bach programs directed by Charles Munch began Friday. The student orchestra made its initial appearance Thursday night in the Music Shed and it won't be long before it molds into a good student ensemble. The student orchestra is a boon to the young men who come to the center to study conducting. They have opportunity to conduct those which they are or have studied. One may sometimes wonder how this student orchestra can be shaped into so fine an ensemble in so short a time, but it must be remembered that these young people are all fine performers and musicians who are carefully screened before they are accepted at the center. The same is also true of the Festival Chorus directed so ably by Mr. Ross and Miss Dunn.

We hope to have news of what Boris Goldovsky expects to accomplish this season in the Opera Department. At the moment, little is known by the press office, but Boris will undoubtedly turn up with something interesting. Just to hear him talk is the height of the desires of many of his admirers.

At any rate, here we are and here we will be until the final notes of the final concert have vanished into air. It's going to be a fine festival, of that we are sure.

Recorder-Gazette (e)
GREENFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 12,842

JUL 13 1960

Around The Clock

Tanglewood's Season Off To Delightful Start

By WAYNE A. SMITH

Keep your shirts on, fellas — Tanglewood is open.

And keeping the shirts on is only one chore for the festival constabulary.

Another is making the girls keep their shorts on. Oh, yes, they want to take them off, and sometimes do. Then the staff of young guards must fly into action.

As a matter of fact, one of them said, the girls give much more trouble than the boys.

And how do they manage to slip out of their shorts, or even dare to? It's easy.

They wear their bathing suits underneath onto the grounds, said the attendant, and then, when nicely settled on the lawn, slip off their shorts to gather a little additional sun along with music by the Boston Symphony.

-o- -o- -o-

THE FIRST SUMMER WEEK-END on the great Lenox estate brought no unusual problems, no undue cracking of the whip, and certainly nothing like the pandemonium which broke out in Newport. It was a lovely week-end filled with some of the finest music ever to rise up from the stately pines. Bach would have been proud.

Tanglewood opened its season on Friday with a series of programs devoted exclusively to Bach. This custom was established 15 years ago when World War II reduced attendance and the number of performers.

With war just a memory and more enthusiasts than ever finding their way into the Berkshires, the first and second week-ends this year are being offered in the big shed where everyone can be accomodated. Previously they have been given in the small concert hall. Obviously it was a good idea.

On Sunday afternoon when we were present the numbers of strollers, loungers, and sitters at times seemed almost as great as when the entire orchestra and exciting panoply of the great Berkshire Festival is in full swing.

-o- -o- -o-

THERE WAS A LITTLE EXTRA bonus, too. The entire rear section of the shed from the boxes outward was open to guests without extra charge. We chose a spot on the rear benches for part of the program and then moved forward to the fourth row for the rest. The reason was to test the new acoustical device installed last year and this. In some respects we preferred the back row to the fourth.

The improvements consist of great flying wedges along the upper portions of the shed outward from the stage. To them this year have been added some baffles at the rear from the roof to the opening plus a deep red accordion-like backscreen set immediately behind the orchestra and chorus. This latter from the rear row gave the rather startling effect of veering down into the jaws of an inferno. It could enhance certain selections. Certainly it helped throw it forward.

-o- -o- -o-

THE SUNDAY AFTERNOON program was presented in exquisite detail. Opening with the Suite No. 3 in D Major it embraced such great Bach numbers as his Brandenburg Concertos No. 6 and No. 2 plus the canata, No. 4, "Christ Lag in Todesbanden", employing the festival chorus directed by Hugh Ross.

All the beauty of the concert was manifest through the skill and artistry of such featured performers as Roger Voisin with trumpet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Pappoutsakis, flute; and Richard Burgin, violin. The magic of these numbers rarely has been more obvious, yet the opening Suite consisting of overture, air, gavottes, bourree and gigue was in all respects as delightful an adventure in sound.

The concluding number, the cantata, was short in duration, but long on values especially as a liaison between orchestra and chorus. In this the group of singers, mostly young people in study during the festival, contributed a large measure of success to the featured work. The distinguished hand of Hugh Ross was at all times evident and in close harmony with the rhythmic vision and design of Charles Munch, who was on hand to direct the orchestra.

-o- -o- -o-

FAVORED BY GOOD WEATHER the 23rd season of th festival promises to set some new records. It is off to a fast start. Programs for this week, Friday and Saturday evenings, and Sunday afternoon, will be devoted entirely to mozart. Claude Frank will be the featured soloist Saturday evening along with the chorus while Joseph Silverstein will perform, Sunday.

Lest any of you, however, seek to capture on tape some of this great music, just perish the thought. Contraptions for this purpose are forbidden. It was most startling, therefore, to discover that something which looked exactly like a home movie camera was, in truth, a midget tape recorder and player. It blared forth from the bench beside us before the concert. And its owner for most of the time was surrounded by the curious.

He also was informed that it would have to be kept closed up in its case when the music began and that probably it [illegible] be admitted again. But it was so little and so interesting that even the constabulary seemed to wish they had one just like it.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

JUL 9-1960

BACH CONCERT BEGINS SERIES IN MUSIC SHED

Tanglewood Audience Hears Ensemble and Soloists Under Munch

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Another cool, clear night ushered in the first of three concerts devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach. It has been a tradition of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood that the first two week ends shall be devoted to the music of Bach and Mozart.

Heard in Shed

So large has been the response over the years that this season these concerts will be given in the Music Shed.

It had seemed to us that this more or less intimate music would be lost in the vast confines of the Music Shed, but Friday night everything came through clearly, for the musicians played before a shell within a shell. Charles Munch uses a small ensemble for these programs and it was quite easy to arrange an inner shell before which they sat.

There were moments when the resonance sounded as if it came from a barrel, but the clarity of tone was seldom affected. In fact, it emerged with greater clarity than on many other occasions.

Soloists Appear

Mr. Munch chose to play three particularly interesting works, the Violin Concerto in E, with William Kroll as soloist; the Piano Concerto in F Minor, with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and the too-seldom heard Triple Concerto in A Minor with Messrs. Kroll, Lipkin and fllutist James Pappoutsakis as soloists.

Both program material and performance provided many moments of interesting listening and the large audience was wonderfully responsive.

William Kroll and his quartet have appeared often at the chamber music concerts and Mr. Lipkin is one of the favorite Festival pianists. Mr. Pappoutsakis is second flutist of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. With most of the first desk men in the ensemblle, Mr. Munch had enviable resources with which to perform these works.

Audience Reacts

Once again, as with the chamber concerts, the audience for these week-end Bach-Mozart concerts is discriminating and, when pleased, enthusiastic in its applause. There were many reasons for the applause Friday night for Mr. Munch was in form and his players rose to every demand. I think the beauty of the evening and the full moon did their share to make this opening concert memorable, for if there is anything more beautiful than the moonlight over the Stockbridge Bowl, I have yet to experience it.

Now for the concert. In the first place there was an audience of 3290 people which was 10 more than at the opening Bach concert last season. Mr. Munch opened the program with the "Suite No. 1 in C major." In its seven episodes there is limitless rhythmic and tonal variety and Mr. Munch strove mightily, and successfully to communicate them.

One listened [illegible] playing that was perfectly exact, yet flexible and warm. This was music which Bach's contemporaries played [illegible] and it seemed Friday night that the ensemble of Boston Symphony players was doing the same thing, musical history repeating itself if you will.

William Kroll was the soloist in the "Concerto for Violin in E major, No. 2." This is a joyous, light-hearted work with one of the most beautiful [illegible] movements. Bach [illegible] Mr. Kroll is a skilled [illegible] and if his approach was perhaps a bit over scholarly, he provided a dedicated performance rich in detail and rhythmic stability.

Applause Enthusiastic

The ensemble collaboration was excellent and [illegible] will not forget the lush beauty of the cello passages. The impact upon the audience was terrific and the applause as enthusiastic as it used to be for a Tschaikowsky symphony directed by Koussevitzky. Truly Bach and the Berkshire Festival are very close in a wonderful companionship.

In the "Piano Concerto in F minor" one realizes that Bach is working away from the concerto grossd style and is giving greater prominence to the single solo player. Seymour Lipkin, one of the most respected of the pianists who play regularly at the festival, was the soloist in this work. Lipkin is a sensitive pianist, abundantly equipped technically. In the slow movement, a long phrased cantabile melody, he provided exquisite pianism against the flutterings of the ensemble. He was one with Charles Munch in the hearty finale.

Bach's "Concerto for Clavier, Flute and Violin" is not too often heard, which is a pity for it is a lovely work, rich in melody and thoroughly ingratiating. Again Mr. Lipkin was at the piano and his solo associates were William Kroll, violinist, and James Pappoutsakis, flute. Once again Bach gives prominence to the piano, in fact, Mr. Lipkin was in perpetual motion throughout the work.

Resembles Trio

In the opening movement the soloists are used without orchestra so that the movement resembles a trio sonata, the piano providing the melody and bass and the companion instruments complementing in balanced alternate phrases. It was a finely balanced performance, pre[illegible] as to ryhthms, lovely in [illegible] tions and stimulating [illegible] ginning to end. The audience loved it and there were rounds of applause at the close of the concert.

Tonight the program will again be devoted to the music of Bach. It will open with the six-part ricercare from "The Musical Offering." This will be followed by four final movements from "The Art of the Fugue." Following intermission, Mr. Lipkin will be heard in the "Concerto for Clavier, in D minor" and the concert will conclude with "Suite No. 4 in D major."

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

JUL 11 1960

Tanglewood Draws 11,949 For Annual Bach Series

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — The opening week end of the Berkshire Music Festival as always was devoted to the music of Johann Sebastian Bach. The three concerts drew a total of 11,949 listeners, more than 900 more listeners than attended the Bach concerts of 1959. One wonders if Bach concerts of his day drew as large audiences. There were 4018 persons in attendance Sunday afternoon.

Stunning Renditions

During these three concerts, all directed by Charles Munch, we have heard stunning examples of the master's compositions. We shall not soon forget the magnificent performance by violinist William Kroll of the "Concerto No. 2 in E minor," or Seymour Lipkin's expressive pianism in the "Concerto for Clavier No. 5 in F minor." Then there were magnificent performances of the "Six-Part Ricercare" from the musical offerings and the final movements from "The Art of the Fugue." Then there were thrilling movements as the ensemble played the Bach Suites Nos. 1-4 and 3. In spite of their arduous tour of the Far East, Mr. Munch and his instrumentalists have been in fine form and seemingly relished playing the music.

The concert Sunday afternoon provided other facets of the art of Bach. It opened with a brilliant performance of the "Suite No. 3 in D major," traversed the Brandenburg concerti Nos. 6 and 2, and concluded with the cantata "Christ Lag in Todesbanden.". The festival chorus was prepared for this work by Lorna Cooke Devaron, assistant to Hugh Ross.

Interpretation Hailed

The Bach "Suite No. 1 in C major," was another brilliant performance with Mr. Munch providing a searching interpretation. The Second Brandenburg Concerto in F major, for trumpet, flute, oboe and violin, had as soloists the incomparable Roger Voisin, trumpet; James Pappoutsakis, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Richard Bergin, violin.

It was a splendid performance with Mr. Voisin conquering most of the problems facing the Bach trumpet. One could also admire the unity of the ensemble, a characteristic particularly noted in the "Brandenburg Concerto No. 6 in B flat major" for strings. Nor will one forget the exquisite performance of the adagio from this concerto. It was ethereal.

Listening to the cantata and the first appearance of the festival chorus, it appeared this season the chorus has some excellent material. The basses and tenors were solid, the sopranos and altos equal to all demands.

Training Lauded

Lorna Cooke Devaron had done an excellent job of training the singers for this difficult work. After all, a week's time is pretty short at the best and it is to her credit that the singers were so well prepared.

Mr. Munch stressed the majesty and joy of the work, the joy of the resurrection. The choruses were jubilantly expressive and the pace chosen by Mr. Munch served to emphasize every emotion.

Next week end will be devoted to the music of Mozart and the three concerts may draw an even larger audience. Be that as it may, the 1960 Berkshire Music Festival has gotten off to a tremendous start and records may yet be broken.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
GAZETTE
D. 47,453

JUL 11 1960

All-Bach Program Opens 23rd Berkshire Festival

By D. E. RITZ
Gazette Music Editor

An all-Bach program by the 40 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who make up the chamber orchestra for the Bach-Mozart concerts at Tanglewood, opened the 1960 Berkshire Music Festival Friday night.

BACH PROGRAMS on Saturday night and yesterday afternoon, all under the direction of Charles Munch, concluded the first weekend of the 23rd season of the summer festival.

A new rose-color acoustical backdrop has been added to the shed for use of the smaller orchestra during the first two weekends. Also new is the white painted floor of the stage.

Soloists for the Friday evening program were Seymour Lipkin, piano; James Pappoutsakis, flute, and William Kroll, violin. Lipkin also appeared as soloist for the Saturday night concert. Soloists yesterday were Roger Voisin, trtumpet; Pappoutsakis, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Richard Burgin, violin. The festival chorus, with Hugh Ross as director, assisted in "Christ Lag in Todesbanden" yesterday.

THE BACH-MOZART concerts of previous years were held in the theater-concert hall and the overflow audiences of the past few years caused the move to the 6,000-seat shed. A very fine arrangement has made the 3,000 seats back of the boxes open to those with general admission tickets (for the opening) — and on Friday evening they made the most of it.

Official figures for Friday (opening night) attendance were 3,290 but from this observer's view we would have estimated the audience as much larger.

Bach programs under Dr. Munch have an authoritative quality that draw enthusiasts from near and far.

The "Suite No. 1 in C Major," which opened the festival, has seven movements, each with its own melodic interest and characteristic tempo.

KROLL, as soloist in the "Concerto No. 2 in E Major" for violin drew enthusiastic applause for the fine performance of the difficult solo part. A beautiful tone, never forced, soared above or blended with the orchestra in a "joy-to-listen-to" performance.

Equally impressive was Lipkin in the "Piano Concerto No. 5 in F Minor" with its slow movement accompanied by pizzicato strings and the clean, clear technique of the first and finale movements.

BUT MOST interesting of all was the concluding "Concerto for Clavier, Flute and Violin in A Minor"—a number [illegible] could scarce expect to hear anywhere but at Tanglewood. The second movement, written for the three soloists without orchestra accompaniment, is a masterpiece of trio sonata writing. The opening allegro and the closing alla breve are rich textured and compelling music.

[illegible]
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
[illegible] 112,664

JUL 10 1960

AUDIENCE OF 4641 HEARS CONCERT AT TANGLEWOOD

Bach Music Performance Clear, Concise, Rich In Detail

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Johann Sebastian Bach has been "king" this week end at the Berkshire music festival where Charles Munch, an ensemble of Boston Symphony Orchestra instrumentalists and distinguished soloists have made his music known anew to several thousand people.

Ideal Conditions

There were 4641 people present Saturday night. The concerts have been given under ideal conditions and with the new shell within a shell it has been possible to give them in the huge music shed with excellent accoustical results. It is a tribute to both the great conductors of the festival, Serge Koussevitzky and Charles Munch that their efforts to popularize the music of Bach and Mozart during the past two decades has resulted in such an outpouring of people, so great indeed that it was no longer possible to restrict the concerts to the theater.

Saturday night's program brought us some of the most complicated of the master's works, as for example the final movements of "The Art of the Fugue," arranged for orchestra by Ernest Munch, and his six part Ricercare from "The Musical Offering." In addition to this, Mr. Munch offered the "Concerto for Clavier, No. 7 in D Minor" with Seymour Lipkin as soloist and "Suite No. 4 in D Major."

Bach composed his musical offering as a gift to the king of Prussia. It consists of 13 contrapuntal numbers upon a theme by Frederick the Great. There are two Ricercare, one in three voices and the one we heard in six voices. The orchestration was by Hans T. David, who uses a flute, oboe, English horn and bassoon, with string orchestra. Incidentally "Ricercare (the word meaning "search" was an early term for a fugal piece. The virtuosi of the Boston Symphony Orchestra provided an extraordinarily fine performance, clear, concise and rich in detail.

Simple Theme Used

From the gigantic "Art of the Fugue" in which Bach undertook in the last years of his life to demonstrate every possible treatment of a [illegible] subject. Mr. Munch chose the first four movements. These were the triple fugue, triple fuge (mirror of the above), quadruple fugue and the chorale "Dein Will Geschehn, Herr Jesu Christ." Bach used a very simple theme on which to work his magic. Here again, the Boston players provided performances of amazing [illegible], rhythmic stability and technical excitement. The chorale was given a finely proportioned performance by organist Berj Zamkochian.

Friday night Seymour Lipkin had played the "Concerto for Clavier No. 5 in F Minor." Saturday night he played the "Clavier Concerto No. 1 in D Minor." In this concerto increasing prominence is given to the solo instrument and Mr. Lipkin had not a moment's rest during its performance. The lovely slow movement is between two virile and ebullient movements. As he did Friday night, Mr. Lipkin displayed his fine musicality, his sensitive appreciation and his technical assurance. The ensemble collaboration was a happy one.

Another of the Bach suites, this time suite No. 4 in D Major concluded the concert. There is limitless variety of thematic material, rhythmic patterns and styles in the movements which make up this suite. This is the kind of music one listens to just for the joy of listening and which musicians play just for the joy of playing. So it seemed as the applause burst forth after the final note. There had been a cordial, even enthusiastic response during the concert, but the most vociferous was saved for the finale.

58

NEW YORK, N.Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
D 571,705 S. 778,682
JUL 11 1960

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Switch Costs Casual Touch

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., July 11.—Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony opened the 23d Berkshire Festival here traditionally with a Bach week-end. One important variation with tradition occurred, however; namely, all three concerts were held in the music shed.

This shift of location from the theater-concert hall robbed the event of its intimate character but made the 11,949 people attending more comforable.

Since the audiences have been growing yearly, the change might be regarded as inevitable. People still remained outside on the lawn, evidently preferring to take their Bach more informally.

To compensate for the former chamber effectiveness of these concerts, Mr. Munch had the regular stage foreshortened. A new shell within the Talbot Memorial Canopy enhanced the visual aspect of the performances and probably the acoustical.

Remarkably Strong

The harpsichord, for instance, sounded remarkably strong at considerable distance from the stage. It could not evoke the atmosphere of the smaller hall, however, something which always had given these early concerts in the festival their special quality.

Some variety in program-making came with more attention placed on solo concertos in the first two concerts. Nevertheless, three of the four orchestral suites turned up in only two of the six Brandenburg concertos.

The final program brought Cantata No. 4, "Christ Lag in Todesbanden." Seymour Lipkin, pianist, dominated the soloists by playing three concertos; William Kroll, violinist, played one.

Yesterday the program listed Suite No. 3, Brandenburgs Nos. 6and 2 and the Cantata. Mr. Munch conducted as he had on the other two occasions.

Retards Overlong

Some of the individual characteristics of his conducting Bach were quite evident in variable tempos, overlong retards at the end, and a tendency not to let the music breathe freely. Some of the playing became rougher than expected from the top men of the Boston. Still, they made music most agreeably and delighted an audience of 4,018.

One of the highlights of the afternoon was Roger Voisin's trumpet playing in the second Brandenburg. His performance on the "Bach" instrument has ebcome a distinguished tone de force. Ralph Gomberg's oboe, James Papoutsakis' flute, and Richard Burgin's violin completed the concertino. In its first appearance the festival chorus sang well, holding much promise for later events.

Mr. Munch himself appeared less aroused than usual and therefore softened some of the rhythmic strength he has usually imparted.

Those who take their Bach in large doses may not have heard top-notch Bach interpretation, but they found much to enjoy.

Music

Bach Program Attains Heights of Excellence

By Alfred Burke

LOWELL — The all Bach program of last week-end at the Berkshire Festival, Lenox, which Dr. Charles Munch selected, offered much in the way of musical excellence as well as the sheer joy of listening. Like the instrumental portions of the concert, the Festival chorus, whose destiny on this occasion was charted by Hugh Ross, closed the affair on a note of actual brilliance.

Claudio Arrau

Everything was a delight to hear — a revelation even for the most ardent of Bach's followers. It was an experience to find a program of Bach that provided a lustre, a medium of life and a complete musical message — all of it made possible without the least overdoing or lessening of the grand tradition.

Dr. Munch at times is overlooked among those conductors who do great things with the creations of the immortal master, but who could do more with the D Major Suite No. 3, especially during the Air and the Bourree? It all leads back to what we have often felt — so many musicians carry a misconception of Bach in their mind.

Their attitude that Bach must be handled only with a single style is not really good music. Dr. Munch believes that there must be an opinion in the interpretation as well as life-giving cadence.

This continued in the Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 6 and 2. The allegro of the former and the endeavors of such soloists as Voisin, Pappoutsakis, Gomberg and Burgin during the latter piece added up to a day of top performing and also top listening.

During the week-end of July 23-24, the soloists will be the celebrated pianist, Claudio Arrau and the most promising young violinist, Jaime Laredo. Pierre Monteux will conduct the Saturday concert and Dr. Munch will return on Sunday.

The concerti to be performed are the Beethoven No. 5 (Arrau) and the Mendelssohn (Laredo). The composers whose music will complete the programs include, (Saturday) Cherubini, Respighi and Strauss; (Sunday) Dello Joio and Beethoven.

MR. ARRAU WILL present a Chopin centenary recital next Wednesday evening. This program will be at 8:30 and in the afternoon a program of opera scenes will be performed by the BMC group under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

Betty White will star in the production of the all-time favorite "The King and I" which will be the featured attraction at the North Shore theatre next week. Miss White who is a leading figure on the American theatrical scene has received many awards. She has been recognized by several nationally known magazines as the "best actress in a film series on TV"; a cover girl and last but far from least, an Emmy winner.

Plans are progressing well for the coming campaign of the Lowell Community Concert series. The coming list of events should provide the local scene with one of the finest series ever recorded here.

At no time in the series history locally has there been such an enthusiasm and response on the part of the large campaign committee. The group scored a ten-strike by scheduling such a top event as the Ballet Russe, but in keeping with the intention of the organization, members of the coming season may rest assured that the other events will share a prominent place on the 1960-61 calendar.

ALBANY, N.Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
D. 66,739
JUL 11 1960

At the Concert

Tanglewood at Its Best for Bach Program

SEYMOUR LIPKIN
Tanglewood Soloist

By PETER B. TAUB
Knickerbocker News Staff Writer

In many ways, Tanglewood is at its best for the all-Bach concerts that traditionally open the Berkshire Music Festival at Lenox, Mass.

This was certainly the case Saturday night, when the program included a six-part ricercare (an early term for a fugal piece) from The Musical Offering, the four final movements from The Art of Fugue, the piano concerto No. 1 in D. Minor, with Seymour Lipkin the soloist, and the Suite No. 4 in D Major.

* * *

FOR SOME reason, the Bach concerts do not attract so many of those folks who, dressed as if they had just come off the beach or the tennis courts, descend on Lenox for the more popular programs that follow later in the season. And so Tanglewood's shaded, well-manicured lawns invite a leisurely pre-concert picnic.

Other Tanglewood Review on Page 16-B

The Saturday night concert, sparsely-attended by Tanglewood standards, was in the big Music Shed rather than the smaller Theater Concert Hall. A plywood backdrop of triangular-shaped pieces painted a pleasing raspberry red has been set up in the shed this year, accompanying, as it were, the new acoustical canopy installed last summer. The new backdrop creates a more intimate atmosphere for concerts in which the full orchestra is not on stage, such as the Bach programs.

Speaking of the Tanglewood acoustics, an associate of mine who spent the second half of the concert out—way out—on the lawn, purely for purposes of research, reports she heard every note perfectly.

* * *

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY musicians were in good form, as usual, and Dr. Munch was in fine fettle—scowling at the occasional between-movements applause and urging the audience to display greater enthusiasm for the orchestra at the end of the program.

The first half, the pieces from The Musical Offering and The Art of Fugue, was sedate and hardly as exalted as some other Bach works. But after the intermission, Mr. Lipkin, the Detroit wunderkind, gave a commanding performance in the concerto and the Suite No. 4 was punctuated with some crisp brass work, notably in the brief but spirited Rejouissance that ended the evening.

59

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,498

JUL 14 1960

MUSIC FESTIVAL CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD

TANGLEWOOD, JULY 8 and 9
By A. C. S.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch has begun its twenty-third season at Tanglewood.

This year, to make the series more available to patrons, the concerts are to be given in the Music Shed which seats 6000. A handsome new stage partition has been devised for these concerts by Eero Saarinen Associates. Made in triangular plywood panels and painted a handsome shade of maroon, it compliments the white-jacketed musicians and the gray background.

With all this splendor and the fine acoustics, one might presume that the concert would be equally grand. For some reason, however, the first weekend concert never got off the ground. The weather was perfect and the audience receptive but the playing was pedestrian. A rather lush, romanticized reading of the Suite No. 1, in C major was followed by the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E major with William Kroll as soloist. The artist's long and eminent career as a member of the quartet which bears his name, made him overly cautious as a soloist; he tended to blend too well with the orchestral ensemble.

Seymour Lipkin appeared in the Clavier Concerto No. 5, in F minor. Then he was joined by Mr. Kroll and James Pappoutsakis, flutist, in the Concerto for Clavier, Flute, and Violin, in A major. It would be nice to report that these works came off brilliantly, but with the exception of the lovely slow movement of the triple concerto, the most that can be said is that the playing was correct but the effect was one of heavy handedness.

Fortunately, Saturday evening presented a different picture. Charles Munch chose the six-part Ricercare from the Musical Offering as the program opener, and followed it with the final movements of the Art of the Fugue. It seems amazing that two such abstruse works would have the apparent and obvious appeal for a largely lay audience as was on hand. A pleasant extra (and one which is hoped will lead to further hearings of the fine Aeolian-Skinner installation in the Music Shed) was the use of the organ, both in the ensemble and as a solo instrument in the final chorale: "Dein Will gescher, Herr Jesus Christ." The organist on this occasion was Berj Zamkochian.

Seymour Lipkin was on hand again, this time playing the Concerto for Clavier, No. v, in D minor. This is a more grateful work for the soloist as well as a more demanding one from the technical standpoint. Mr. Lipkin met the challenge admirably and was especially successful in projecting the long and florid lines of the slow movement. The concert concluded with a spirited reading of the Suite No. 4 in D major.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON

By E. G. B.

On this beautiful Sunday afternoon, July tenth, there was a record breaking attendance at Tanglewood for a Bach chamber orchestra concert. Charles Munch conducted the Suite no. 3 in D major, the Sixth and then the Second Brandenburg Concertos. The orchestra was joined by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, which had been trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon, in the Cantata no. 4, "Christ Lag in Todesbanden."

How many threads, some stretching far back in musical history, were finally woven together to produce such a result of finished performance: the works of one of the greatest composers, interpreted by a vastly experienced and dedicated conductor, performed by excellent players many of whom have had the advantage of playing together for decades, and heard on rare instruments! The result was naturally impressive and moving. With the exception of places where one might disagree with the choice of tempo (as in the speediness of the first chorus of the Cantata) there was an underlying rightness in all the music, permeated with subtleties of tone and rubato possible only in the hands of seasoned experts led with imagination. One might point to the familiar Air of the Suite, which was almost a miracle of attenuation in slow tempo without becoming static.

Among the four very fine soloists heard in the Second Brandenburg, perhaps special compliments should go to Roger Voisin for his handling of the difficult passages in the high register.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 289,111

JUL 10 1960

Berkshire Festival

First of Three Bach Programs

By JULES WOLFFERS

LENOX—With the trans-Pacific tour safely over, with the Pops season ended and with the Esplanade concerts engaging the attention of only a part of th eorchestra, the Boston Symphony opened its Berkshire Festival season Friday in the Tanglewood Shed with the first of three all-Bach programs.

An audience of around 3300 persons was on hand to welcome Charles Munch and his players back for the six-week festival. The weather was perfect — not too hot, not too cold, not too dry, not too damp. Accordingly about half of the audience chose to listen from the Great Lawn outside the shed.

Traditionally the opening week-ends have been devoted to chamber orchestra music, most often concentrating on Bach and Mozart. To this extent Mr. Munch has followed the pattern of his distinguished predecessor, Serge Koussevitzky. But in former times the opening concerts were held in the more intimate Theater-Concert Hall where these events almost invariably turned out to be one of the high spots of the Symphony's activities, winter or summer.

Times Change

Times have changed and the increasing attendance at what used to be pre-festival events has decreed that the locale be shifted to the vast and impersonal Shed. Many persons regret the necessity for the change particularly since the rapport between conductors, players and hearers, so necessary in music chamber-orchestra music, is largely list in the vast reaches of the Shed really designed for full orchestral fare.

To do the orchestra credit, it has done all in its power to make the acoustics and atmosphere as agreeable as possible under the circumstances.

In addition to the new acoustic panels which were welcomed last summer for the resulting improvement in the sound, temporary panels have been placed on stage around the orchestra, in effect making a shell within a shell since the stage panels reach up almost to the overhead sriangular panels.

This rearrangement serves two purposes—it makes a smaller, more intimate, platform and it improves the carrying power of the sound still more. Not that the effect is ideal. From where I was sitting, about the 12th row, the orchestra sounded as if it were coming through a two-thousand-dollar stereo speaker system.

Still, the quality is good with perhaps only a little too much bass for absolute comfort. But, then, most stereo fans use too fine balance. Ralph Gomberg was much bass anyway so probably most of the listeners were happy with the sound.

Fine Balance

But quality of sound is not everything and it is not possible to say that the concert was an unqualified success. The opening Suite No. 1, ni C major was splendidly done, with verve, enthusiasm and brought forward by Mr. Munch to receive a special round of applause for his splendid work in his important oboe part.

But the remainder of the program suffered from various inadequacies in the performances of the soloists. It took William Kroll the entire first movement of the Violin Concerto [illegible] to settle down for a sensitive projection of the Adagio which was very beautifully played, but this improvement did not continue through the Finale. Things did not go much better with Seymour Lipkin as soloist in the Clavier Concerto No. 5.

It is always difficult to transfer these harpsichord works to the piano, but it can and has been done by artists who retain the spirit of the old while taking advantage of the [illegible] pianoforte's possibilities. Mr. Lipkin's way with the keyboard part was at [illegible] wooden.

The evening's final work, the Concerto for Clavier, Flute and Violin, in A minor, is far from being one of Bach's best works, but good projection on the part of the soloists can do much to redeem it. This was not particularly forthcoming and the routinely good is not good enough in the Concerto. With Doriot Anthony Dwyer, the orchestra's regular first flute, not willing to appear in public at this time, James Pappoutsakis joined Mr. Lipkin and Mr. Kroll for the solo sections.

The conductor gave firm and sensitive support in all three concertos and the audience, not particularly in an over-critical mood, rewarded all participants with hearty applause throughout the evening.

ALBANY, N.Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
D. 66,739

JUL 11 1960

Concert Of Bach A Delight

Despite the chirping of some off-beat and off-key sparrows in the rafters of the Tanglewood music shed yesterday afternoon, Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus through another magnificent Bach concert.

Harsh as it may be to deny birds their place at an outdoor concert, it must be said they were unmusical distractions at times—especially in the quiet slow movement of the Sixth Brandenberg Concerto when just 14 string players were demanding by their skill and balance the whole attention of the audience. Most of the time the music was loud and brisk and absorbing enough so the birds didn't matter.

Brilliant Trumpet Playing

There was, for example, the brilliant playing of Roger Voisin on his specially made high trumpet in the Second Brandenburg Concerto, and the chance to hear in the first, instrumental half of the concert, a lot of first rate [illegible] from perhaps the greatest strings in the world. There was wonderful vigor in the dance of the familiar Third Suite in D Major, although Dr. Munch takes the very familiar Air on a G String so slowly even the Boston orchestra can barely sustain it.

The gandest part of the afternoon was the last, the Cantata, "Christ lay in the bonds of death," when the voice parts joined the instrumental ones. The singers were trained and able, to let this triumphant Easter music emerge dramatically from its dark

Chorus Well Trained

All four parts had mastered their roles and sang separately and together equally well when the music was soft and flowing, soft and swift or full with some of the most dynamic rhythms Bach ever conceived. Lorna Cooke DeVaron, who trained the chorus, took many bows. If there had to be only one short Bach choral on this year's Tanglewood schedule, this was a good choice.

At one dramatic moment in a closing chorus, in a silence between a rousing chord and a quiet passage, the effect was so striking the cherping of the birds made no difference. The cantata ended after a tresoenio with an "Hallelujah" sung not loudly but in quiet wonder.

W. E. R.

background.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,498

JUL 14 1960

MUSIC FESTIVAL CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD

TANGLEWOOD, JULY 8 and 9

By A. C. S.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch has begun its twenty-third season at Tanglewood.

This year, to make the series more available to patrons, the concerts are to be given in the Music Shed which seats 6000. A handsome new stage partition has been devised for these concerts by Eero Saarinen Associates. Made in triangular plywood panels and painted a handsome shade of maroon, it compliments the white-jacketed musicians and the gray background.

With all this splendor and the fine acoustics one might presume that the concert would be equally grand. For some reason, however, the first weekend concert never got off the ground. The weather was perfect and the audience receptive but the playing was pedestrian. A rather lush, romanticized reading of the Suite No. 1, in C major was followed by the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E major with William Kroll as soloist. The artist's long and eminent career as a member of the quartet which bears his name made him overly cautious as a soloist; he tended to blend too well with the orchestral ensemble.

Seymour Lipkin appeared in the Clavier Concerto No. 5, in F minor. Then he was joined by Mr. Kroll and James Pappoutsakis, flutist, in the Concerto for Clavier, Flute, and Violin, in A major. It would be nice to report that these works came off brilliantly, but with the exception of the lovely slow movement of the triple concerto, the most that can be said is that the playing was correct but the effect was one of heavy handedness.

Fortunately, Saturday evening presented a different picture. Charles Munch chose the six-part Ricercare from the Musical Offering as the program opener, and followed it with the final movements of the Art of the Fugue. It seems amazing that two such abstruse works would have the apparent and obvious appeal for a largely lay audience as was on hand. A pleasant extra (and one which is hoped will lead to further hearings of the fine Aeolian-Skinner installation in the Music Shed) was the use of the organ, both in the ensemble and as a solo instrument in the final chorale: "Dein Will gescher, Herr Jesus Christ." The organist on this occasion was Berj Zamkochian.

Seymour Lipkin was on hand again, this time playing the Concerto for Clavier, No. v, in D minor. This is a more grateful work for the soloist as well as a more demanding one from the technical standpoint. Mr. Lipkin met the challenge admirably and was especially successful in projecting the long and florid lines of the slow movement. The concert concluded with a spirited reading of the Suite No. 4 in D major.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON

By E. G. B.

On this beautiful Sunday afternoon, July tenth, there was a record breaking attendance at Tanglewood for a Bach chamber orchestra concert. Charles Munch conducted the Suite no. 3 in D major, the Sixth and then the Second Brandenburg Concertos. The orchestra was joined by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, which had been trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon, in the Cantata no. 4, "Christ Lag in Todesbanden."

How many threads, some stretching far back in musical history, were finally woven together to produce such a result of finished performance: the works of one of the greatest composers, interpreted by a vastly experienced and dedicated conductor, performed by excellent players many of whom have had the advantage of playing together for decades, and heard on rare instruments! The result was naturally impressive and moving. With the exception of places where one might disagree with the choice of tempo (as in the speediness of the first chorus of the Cantata) there was an underlying rightness in all the music, permeated with subtleties of tone and rubato possible only in the hands of seasoned experts led with imagination. One might point to the familiar Air of the Suite, which was almost a miracle of attenuation in slow tempo without becoming static.

Among the four very fine soloists heard in the Second Brandenburg, perhaps special compliments should go to Roger Voisin for his handling of the difficult passages in the high register.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 289,111

JUL 10 1960

Berkshire [illegible]

First of Three Bach Programs

By JULES WOLFFERS

LENOX—With the trans-Pac[illegible] tour [illegible] over, with the Pops season ended [illegible] with [illegible] Esplanade concerts engaging the at[illegible] of [illegible] a part of th eorchestra, the Boston [illegible] opened its Berkshire Festival season Frid[illegible] Tanglewood Shed with the first of three [illegible] programs.

An audience of around 3300 persons was on hand to welcome Charles Munch and his players back for the six-week festival. The weather was perfect — not too hot, not too cold, not too dry, not too damp. Accordingly about half of the audience chose to listen from the Great Lawn outside the Shed.

Traditionally the opening week-ends have been devoted to chamber orchestra music, most often concentrating on Bach and Mozart. To this extent Mr. Munch has followed the pattern of his distinguished predecessor, Serge Koussevitzky. But in former times the opening concerts were held in the more intimate Theater-Concert Hall where these events almost invariably turned out to be one of the high spots of the Symphony's activities, winter or summer.

Times Change

Times have changed and the increasing attendance at what used to be pre-festival events has decreed that the locale be shifted to the vast and impersonal Shed. Many persons regret the necessity for the change particularly since the rapport between conductors, players and listeners, so necessary in music chamber-orchestra music, is largely lost in the vast reaches of the Shed really designed for full orchestral fare.

To do the orchestra credit, it has done all in its power to make the acoustics and atmosphere as agreeable as possible under the circumstances.

In addition to the new acoustic panels which were welcomed last summer for the resulting improvement in the sound, temporary panels have been placed on stage around the orchestra, in effect making a shell within a shell since the stage panels reach up almost to the overhead triangular panels.

This rearrangement serves two purposes—it makes a smaller, more intimate, platform and it improves the carrying power of the sound still more. Not that the effect is ideal. From where I was sitting, about the 12th row, the orchestra sounded as if it were coming through a two-[illegible] speaker stereo speaker system.

Still, the quality [illegible] [illegible] bass for [illegible]. But, then, mo[illegible] too fine balance [illegible] Goldberg was much [illegible] probably most of the [illegible] were happy with the [illegible].

Fine Balance

But quality of sound is not everything and it is not possible to say that the co[illegible] an unqualified success. The opening Suite No. 1, ni C major was splendidly done, with [illegible] and brought forw[illegible] Munch to receive a spe[illegible] of applause for his [illegible] in [illegible] important oboe [illegible].

But the remainder of the program suffered [illegible] inadequacies in the [illegible] of the soloists. [illegible] Kroll the entire first [illegible] of the Violin Concerto [illegible] to settle down [illegible] jection of the A[illegible] very beautifully [illegible] improvement [illegible] through the F[illegible] did not go much [illegible] Seymour Lipkin as so[illegible] in the Clavier Concerto No. 5.

It is always [illegible] these [illegible] piano, but [illegible] done by [illegible] spirit of the [illegible]

[illegible]

The [illegible] Concerto for Clavier, Flute and Violin, in A major, [illegible] being one of Bach's best [illegible] but good projection [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] This [illegible] [illegible] in the Concerto. [illegible] Arthur [illegible] Pappoutsakis [illegible] and Mr. Kroll [illegible]

[illegible] gave firm and [illegible] in all [illegible] the audience [illegible] an ever-[illegible] mood [illegible]

ALBANY, N.Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
D. 88,739

JUL 11 1960

Concert Of Bach A Delight

Despite the chirping of some off-beat and [illegible] sparrows in the rafters of the Tanglewood music shed yesterday afternoon, Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus through another magnificent Bach concert.

Harsh as it may be to deny birds their place at an outdoor concert, it must be said they were unmusical distractions at times—especially in the quiet slow movement of the Sixth Brandenberg Concerto when just 14 string players were demanding by their skill and balance the whole attention of the audience. Most of the time the music was loud and brisk and absorbing enough so the birds didn't matter.

Brilliant Trumpet Playing

There was, for example, the brilliant playing of Roger Voisin on his specially made high trumpet in the Second Brandenburg Concerto, and the chance to hear in the first, instrumental half of the concert, a lot of first rate [illegible] from perhaps the greatest strings in the world. There was wonderful vigor in the dance of the familiar Third Suite in D Major, although Dr. Munch takes the very familiar Air on a G String so slowly even the Boston orchestra can barely sustain it.

The gandest part of the afternoon was the last, the Cantata "Christ lay in the bonds of death," when the voice parts joined the instrumental ones. The singers were trained, and able, to let this triumphant Easter music emerge dramatically from its dark [illegible]

Chorus Well Trained

All four parts had mastered their roles and sang separately and together [illegible] well, when the [illegible] was soft and flowing, [illegible] and swift or full with [illegible] of the most dynamic [illegible] Bach ever conceived. Lorna Cooke DeVaron, who trained the chorus, took many bows. If there had to be only one short Bach choral [illegible] this year's Tanglewood schedule, this was a good choice.

At one dramatic moment in a closing chorus, in a silence [illegible] rousing chord [illegible] quiet passage, the effect was so striking the chirping of the birds made no difference. The cantata ended, after [illegible], with an "Hallelujah" sung not loudly but in quiet wonder.

W. E. R.

60

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121
JUL 11 1960

Attendance Records Set At Tanglewood's Concerts

By Francis D. Perkins

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 10.—With a [illegible] audience of [illegible], the Boston Symphony Orchestra's opening two days of concerts broke the record for the Bach series which has opened the symphonic portion of the Berkshire Festivals in most of their post-war summer programs.

Last night's concert in the music shed, with ideal moonlit weather, also broke the record for an individual Bach program, drawing a crowd of 4,641. Despite clouds overhead, this afternoon's program was heard by 4,613. Friday night's gathering of 3,290 and including the 2,334 figure for yesterday morning's open rehearsal, made a total which topped the corresponding 1959 figure by nearly 1,000, and was a tribute to the appeal of Bach's music.

Ovation for Lipkin

Seymour Lipkin received an unusually fervent ovation last night when he was the piano soloist in the Clavier Concerto in D Minor, which followed the opening Ricercare from the Musical Offering, and the closing sections of the Art of Fugue, in a program ending with the Fourth Suite, in D Major. The Festival chorus made its debut in this afternoon's concert when it sang the Cantata Christ Lag in Todesbanden; the first half of the concert offered the third suite and the Sixth and Second Brandenburg Concertos.

Mr. Lipkin's playing of the D Minor Concerto last night was remarkable for its technical virtuosity and polish, quality of tone and pervasive momentum, but even more for its interpretative intensity; the first movement in particular had a dramatic cogency which deepened into a sense of tragedy towards its close.

A Lyrical Adagio

The adagio was notable for its lyric appeal, while the finale had an emotional stimulation which was reflected in the ensuing demonstration. The forty musicians, under the direction of Charles Munch, played their share of the music in a similarly persuasive vein, stimulating but not overwrought in the fast movements. The opening Ricercare was ably presented in an arrangement by Hans T. David. The last four parts of the Art of Fugue were heard in a well wrought but rather solid orchestral version made by Ernest Muench. The chorale associated with this work as a finale, although not a part of it, was expressively played on the organ by Berj Zamkochian.

Today's performance of the Cantata under Charles Munch's leadership was laudable for its balance between the choral and instrumentalists. The festival chorus had had only a week for preparation, and the standard of its singing and interpretation was a tribute to its training by Lorna Cooke de Varon, who is assistant to Hugh Ross in the Berkshire Music Center's choral department. The various sections of the choir were even in balance with firm and appealing tones and well observed vocal proportion and continuity of musical line; the choristers revealed the details of the music as well as its expressive atmosphere.

Up to Standards

In general, the chamber orchestra which has played in the week-end concerts under Mr. Munch has lived up well to Boston symphony standards. In certain works, or parts of them, well organized routine has been more in evidence than interpretative evocation, but in most cases the performances have been also satisfying from the latter standpoint.

In today's concert, the Third Suite was played with stimulating vitality, although Mr. Munch took the familiar air rather deliberately. In the second Brandenburg Concerto, Roger Voison was laudable in the exacting trumpet solo; praise was also deserved by his fellow soloists, James Papoutsakis, flute; Ralph Gomberg, oboe, and Richard Burgin, violin.

The dozen or more players in the Sixth Brandenburg Concerto played the first movement suavely, and the others more communicatively. The new sounding board, which supplements the stage canopy for the first festival fortnight of chamber orchestra concerts, was very successful in its ability to project the music to the more remote parts of the music shed and to the listeners who preferred the lawn outside.

N.Y. Staats-Zeitung und Herold, Montag, 18. Juli 1960

Tanglewood-Saison erfolgreich mit Bach-Konzerten eröffnet

Seit 15 Jahren beginnt das Sommermusikfest in Tanglewood mit [illegible] die der Musik [illegible] Bach [illegible] und bisher haben diese Konzerte in dem verhältnismäßig kleinen "Theater-Concert" [illegible] stattgefunden, die für das Kammerorchester [illegible] besonders günstig war. [illegible] die Nachfrage zu diesen Konzerten über die Jahre immer größer wurde, wurden sie jetzt in den großen [illegible] verlegt, wobei eine große Wand, die direkt hinter dem Orchester auf der Bühne steht, den Klang der Musik der Größe des Raumes anzupassen sucht. Wenn der Ton auch nicht denselben intimen Charakter haben kann wie dies in der früheren Umgebung der Fall war, so ist der erste Eindruck doch durchaus positiv, ganz abgesehen von der Tatsache, daß auf diese Weise diese Konzerte von viel mehr Menschen gehört werden können als dies früher der Fall war.

Alle Konzerte standen unter der Leitung von Charles Muench. Und man kann sich wohl kaum einen größeren Gegensatz vorstellen als Koussevitzky, der vor 15 Jahren diese Bachkonzerte einführte und Muench, der die Tradition nun übernommen hat. Koussevitzky sah in erster Linie auf Schönheit des Tons und Harmonie des Zusammenklangs, während für Muench Herausstellung einer Melodie und Betonung des Rhythmus, was oft zu übersteigerten Tempi führt, mehr bedeutsam zu sein scheint.

Bei allem aber spürt man bei Muench eine große persönliche Verbundenheit mit Bach, die, wie er im Gespräch gerne zugibt, auf seine Leipziger Jahre im Gewandhausorchester zurückzuführen ist.

Der Höhepunkt der 3 Wochenend-Konzerte war am Sonntag die Kantate "Christ lag in Todesbanden", wobei es besonders erstaunlich war, in welch kurzer Zeit der jedes Jahr neu zusammengestellte Festchor eingeübt werden konnte. Er klang besser als viele jahrelang bestehenden Chöre und seine deutsche Aussprache war mustergültig. Das Programm der drei Konzerte (Freitag und Samstag abend, Sonntag nachmittag) brachte u. a. die Orchestersuiten 1, 3 und 4 und die Brandenburgischen Konzerte 2 und 6, wobei unter den Solisten die besondere Klarheit und der Ausdruck von Roger Voisin (Trompete) Erwähnung verdient.

In den Solokonzerten war der Pianist Seymour Lipkin (D minor und F minor) besonders eindrucksvoll, während die Tongebung des Violinisten William Kroll (E Major) nicht immer ganz rein war. Besonders schön war auch das Konzert für Klavier, Flöte und Violine mit den Solisten Lipkin, Papoutsakis und Kroll.

Ein Höhepunkt des Samstagkonzertes waren die drei letzten Sätze der "Kunst der Fuge", welchen das Orchester unter Muenchs anfeuernden Leitung ganz besondere Liebe und Hingebung widmete. Der letzte Satz wurde bis zu der Stelle gespielt, an der Bach diese unvollendete Komposition seiner Erkrankung wegen aufgeben mußte. Ein Choralnachspiel auf der Orgel war ein würdiger Schluß.

Was macht diese Sommerkonzerte in Tanglewood dieser Darbietung immer wieder so eindrucksvoll? Neben der Qualität der Boston Symphony, dem Temperament von Charles Muench und der Schönheit der lieblichen Berkshire-Hügel ist es wohl der Umstand, daß der Hörer, entfernt von dem Getriebe der Großstadt und sich voll und ganz der Musik widmend, viel empfänglicher und aufnahmefähiger ist als nach einem unruhigen und gehetzten Arbeitstag in der Stadt. Für Musikfreunde und solche, die diese Freude lernen wollen, können wir ein Wochenend in Tanglewood außerordentlich empfehlen.

W. St.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121
JUL 9 1960

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121
JUL 10 1960

Bostonians at Tanglewood Give First of 18 Concerts

By Francis D. Perkins

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 8.—The Boston Symphony Orchestra gave the first of eighteen concerts which it is offering in the twenty-third Berkshire Festival Friday night in Tanglewood's music shed. Following the practice of most of the festivals held here since World War II, Charles Munch devoted his opening program to music of Johann Sebastian Bach, conducting that master's Suite No. 1.

Violin Concerto in E Major with William Kroll as soloist, Clavier Concerto in F Minor with Seymour Lipkin as the solo pianist, and Concerto in F and Concerto in A Minor for clavier, flute and violin, James Pappoutsakis, the orchestra's first flutist, shared the solo roles with Mr. Kroll and Mr. Lipkin in the latter work. The ensemble for this week end's Bach concerts and next week end's Mozart concerts consists of approximately forty musicians. The full orchestra will be on hand for the rest of the series.

This is the first summer in which all six Bach and Mozart festival concerts are held in the 6,000 seat music shed instead of the 1,200 seat theater concert hall, which would have been much too small for tonight's audience of 3,290. For these six concerts the stage canopy is acoustically reinforced by a set of red panels. This device, in its first public use tonight, helped to provide an ample sonority which was particularly noticeable when Mr. Munch and his musicians began the opening suite.

The performance was spacious and dignified, unhurried but not lacking momentum and usually revealing of detail.

There were a few times, indeed, when the degree of sonority seemed slightly excessive, and some of the lighter scored measures could have been more transparently wrought, but the general interpretation was appealing.

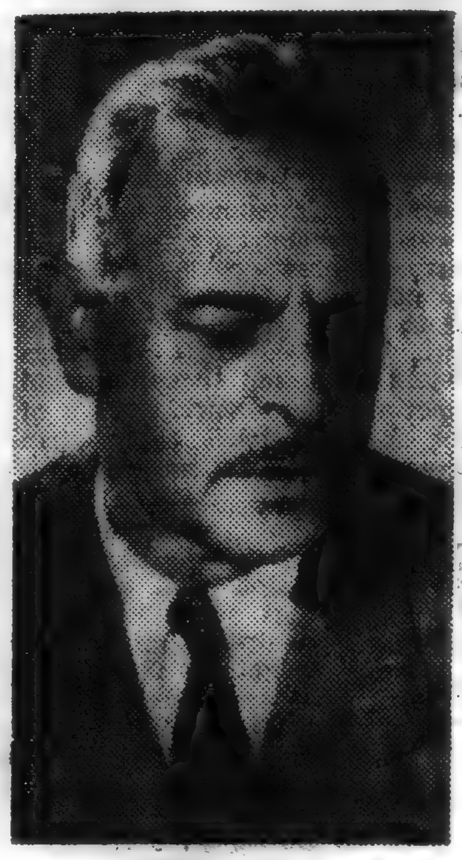
In the violin concerto, Mr. Kroll's playing was notable for its musical objectivity and relation to the general ensemble.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635
JUL 9 1960

Music: Bostonians Play Bach at Lenox

Give First Orchestral Program at Festival

Munch Leads Concert Attended by 3,290



William Kroll

By ALLEN HUGHES
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass, July 8—The Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, played the first orchestral concert of the 1960 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood tonight.

Tanglewood tradition was followed in terms of programing, the evening being given over entirely to music by Bach. But this year—for the first time—the 6,000-seat Music Shed is being used for all the concerts of the Bach and Mozart week-ends, with which the festival always opens. Heretofore, the 1,200-seat Theatre Concert Hall has housed these events, which are played by a reduced orchestra of about forty members.

•

To make the Music Shed as acceptable as possible for these supposedly more intimate events, a new portable stage enclosure has been built to go with the Talbot Memorial stage canopy installed last year. Designed by Eero Saarinen Associates, this enclosure is actually a handsome screen composed of twenty-eight plywood panels, each of which is more or less triangular in shape.

Since the audience for his first concert totaled only 3,290 persons, all could easily have been accommodated in the Music Shed. Because of habit, or preference, however, many of the audience chose to remain outside on the grass, even though it would have cost them no more to sit on chairs in the 3,000 unreserved seats under cover.

Mr. Munch's program included the Suite No. 1 in C, the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E, the Clavier Concerto No. 5 in F Minor and the Concerto for Clavier, Flute and Violin in A Minor.

•

The soloists were William Kroll, violinist; Seymour Lipkin, pianist, and James Pappoutsakis, flutist.

Generally speaking, the performances of the evening tended to be less arresting than the setting in which they were played. Bach's music, when lively, should be bracing, but this time, under Mr. Munch's leadership, its glinting edge was dulled through an excess of somewhat plush legato string playing.

•

Indeed, it was no coincidence that the most absorbing moments of the concert were those in which pizzicato playing was in order for the string instruments. Here crispness could not be avoided.

Despite the unsuitability of his instrument for Bach's music, Mr. Lipkin was probably the most convincing soloist on this occasion. He held his concert grand piano in check in both concertos, and played the exquisite second movement of his solo concerto compellingly.

Mr. Kroll tended to soften the contours of his lines in the fashion of the orchestral violinists and weakened his case thereby. There were times, too, when his intonation was not altogether reassuring.

•

Mr. Pappoutsakis was an able collaborator in the triple Concerto, and the balance among the solo instruments was just.

This was, in short, a concert in which the notes of Bach were played in good order and, for the most part, in good taste. The spirit of his personality and time, however, did not get through to us.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635
JUL 11 1960

Music: Successful Festival Opening

Three Bach Programs Offered at Lenox

Total of 11,949 Set an Attendance Record

Constantine Nanos

Charles Munch

By ALLEN HUGHES
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 10—The first week-end of the 1960 Berkshire Festival ended in agreeable weather this afternoon, after the sun had outdone itself early in the day to make this magnificent countryside as enticing as possible.

Well before the concert began, music fans clad in sports clothes settled under the great trees that shade Tanglewood to eat picnic lunches, while other early arrivals strolled through the formal gardens behind the old, gray gabled mansion. When the gate figures had been tabulated, it was discovered that 4,018 persons were present, the largest audience to have attended a Sunday-afternoon Bach concert at Tanglewood.

This was, in fact, a record-breaking opening week-end of the festival. A total of 11,949 persons heard the three Bach programs.

•

The Sunday concert was the best of the three. It began with the Suite No. [illegible] in D and moved through the Second and Sixth Brandenburg Concertos to the Cantata No. 4, "Christ Lag in Todesbanden." In the last work, the Boston Symphony was joined by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, which had been trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

Although compositions of great beauty were certainly present in the preceding two programs, this one came off best because of the scoring of the particular pieces involved. When dealing with music like that of the popular D Major Suite and the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, both of which contain much writing for wind instruments, Conductor Charles Munch simply cannot romanticize the sound of Bach as he tends to when string instruments are dominant.

The pungent sonorities Bach achieved with oboes and the blazing effects he got with high trumpets just will not be subdued and blended in the manner of nineteenth-century symphonic sounds. Tempos and dynamics can be varied, of course, and since Mr. Munch is not always given to moderation in such things, he drove some of the tempos of the afternoon rather frantically (the first "Alleluia" of the cantata, for example) and lingered inordinately over others (as in the air of the suite).

The second concert of this Bach week-end, played last night, was given over to Hans David's orchestral arrangement of the six-part ricercare from "The Musical Offering," Ernest Munch's arrangements of fugues from "The Art of the Fugue," the Clavier Concerto No. 1 in D Minor and the Suite No. 4 in D. Berj Zamkocnian played the chorale prelude "Dein Will Gescheh" as an organ solo at the end. Seymour Lipkin was soloist in the concerto.

This event, which drew the largest crowd of the three (4,641 persons), was, unhappily, the least rewarding musically. There were transcriptions that weakened the natural vigor of Bach's contrapuntal structures, and Mr. Munch's interpretations did minimize the unfortunate aspects of the arrangements.

Then there was the concerto, which Mr. Lipkin played rather too fast and rather too percussively. Finally, there was the suite, in which Mr. Munch had a kind of field day with "expressive" tempos (fast and slow), and which ended with the "Rejouissance," played at breakneck speed.

•

In all fairness, it must be said that Mr. Munch is obviously very sincere in his Bach performances and that he almost invariably seems to be working quite hard to make them successful. The fact remains, however, that immersion in symphonic esthetics and mastery of big-orchestra techniques provides very little in the way of preparation for truly satisfactory interpretations of the music of Bach.

Gazette
EAST HARTFORD
Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 3,951

JUL 28 1960

At Tanglewood

Lovely Setting Aids Concert

BY GEORGE STOWE

Tanglewood, the summer-in-residence of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, retains all the pastoral beauty for which it is famous. The gigantic trees, the impeccably groomed lawns, the gorgeous view of the surrounding lakes, are always exhilirating, even to veteran concertgoers.

Musically, the programs this year rely to a lesser extent on the overworked standard repertory pieces. There is a suprising number of Tanglewood premieres, even though no one pretends that Charles Munch has the dedicated interest in new works that his distinguished predecessor, Koussevitsky, had.

One innovation that particularly appealed to me this year was the choice of Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" to conclude the concerts on August 14th—rather than the perennial Beethoven Ninth Symphony. Munch is one of the great interpreters of the French composer and this is one of Berlioz, towering masterworks.

Another heartening aspect is the greater variety to be found in the Chamber Music Concerts, which are given in the Theater-Concert Hall, rather than the huge Shed. Merely a listing of the artists in this series gives some idea of the diversity.

The Budapest String Quartet, due to the illness of one of its members, did not appear but the Curtis Quartet substituted. Leon Fleischer, one of the outstanding young pianists, is giving a solo recital. Others in the series are Claudio Arrau, the Beaux Arts Trio, and the Kroll Quartet.

My major complaint this rate artists of the caliber of Francescatti and Serkin in the regular series. Tanglewood at the moment seems to have become a testing ground for our younger performers, which may be a fine opportunity for these individuals of undoubted talent but I feel that we should be given the chance to hear the great interpreters as well.

During the first week I heard the Curtis Quartet in one of the so-called "Haydn" Quartets of Mozart (in a performance that elicited loud chirping from the birds in nearby trees), as well as in quartets by Ravel and Persichetti.

On the following Saturday night Munch gave us a Bach program that relied on unusual works for its first half. The six part Ricercare from the composer's Musical Offering was followed by the final movements from Bach's last work, The Art of the Fugue.

There was a poignant reminder that Bach was forced by blindness to put down his pen at this point when Munch concluded these excerpts with the uncompleted Quadruple Fugue. The official organist of the Boston Symphony quietly played one of the chorale preludes while orchestra and conductor paid their respects in silent observance of the moment.

Once again the venerable Pierre Monteux is on hand to spell Munch for these orchestral concerts. This year he will conduct the Beethoven Ninth on July 31st, as well as lead performances of Beethoven 3rd Piano Concerto (with Fleischer), the Liszt Piano Concerto in E flat (with Bolet), and Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite on succeeding dates.

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

68

BLANK PAGE

Eagle 7/14/60

Music Review

The Bel Arte Trio

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

PIANIST Claude Frank, a 1947 student of the Berkshire Music Center, was the assisting artist with the Bel Arte Trio last night in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood for the second of the Wednesday evening chamber music concerts. The members of the trio are Ruth Posselt, violin, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and Samuel Mayes, cello.

The D major trio, the second of the three Beethoven wrote under his opus number nine, would not win first place for preference in many musical circles if a poll were taken. The Bel Arte has played the others on this same stage in other years, and thus its presentation now had at least that validity.

* * *

THE THREE artists are virtuosi, and, in addition, have an ensemble approach which is both keen and sensitive. However, they didn't play their Beethoven as if they themselves really enjoyed it. This was all the more strange as they gave exactly the contrary impression in the Mozart G minor quartet (K478) in which they were joined by pianist Frank. Here there was poise and relaxed contrasts, tonal beauty and clarity, wit, jubilation and the many moods and humors Mozart employed so abundantly in this medium which at the time was quite new.

There was much experimenting with new and different ensembles, but a keyboard with stringed instruments was not yet a familiar grouping, and especially not in music of serious expression. This G minor quartet is no longer, if Mozart ever wrote that way, music of mere sociability. Furthermore, G minor was a key which he found most congenial for his deepest inner feelings. The performance moved along this time with pleasure and thorough immersion, and the spirit was instantly and continuously conveyed to the audience.

* * *

FRANK'S opus 111 sonata of Beethoven was a performance of tremendous impact. It was conceived on broad, grand lines and executed with a command of the keyboard that was so complete that it was no factor in the appreciation of the magnetized audience.

He proclaimed the introduction with lusty majesty and made it, as Beethoven intended it, no mere ante-chamber of a more imposing structure, but as profound and meaningful an episode as he ever plumbed. There was spaciousness and tonal values based on most satisfying logic. It leads into one of those memorable phrases of Beethoven in which he poses an epic question, on the nature of the famous "Muss Es Sein?."

* * *

FRANK GAVE the development lucidity and shape. The Arietta was sung with no attempt to embellish or alter its appealing simplicity, and the ensuing variations never became bogged down in the intricacies of notes.

Beethoven could hardly have known which would be the last page he would write for a piano, and that prompts one to query what force influenced him to take his final and greatest bow at the conclusion of this great C minor sonata with the most simple and thus the most telling and humble of gestures a genius can write — in a quiet, even elementary chord in the major of the key at the conclusion of both of the sonata's movements.

Eagle 7/14/60

Concert, Lecture At Tanglewood This Evening

TANGLEWOOD — A concert by the student orchestra of the Berkshire Music Center in the Music Shed and a lecture on the programs to be presented are scheduled here tonight.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Music Center, will continue his series of lectures in the chamber music hall at 7:30. He will explain how concertgoers should listen to a symphony orchestra and discuss the music to be played.

The student orchestra's program at 8:30 will include Weber's Oberon Overture, conducted by Diego Pacheco of Sao Paulo, Brazil, who is in his second year at the center.

Harold Faberman, member of the BSO, and a conducting student will lead the students in a performance of the "Meditation," composed by Samuel Barber.

Seiji Ozawa of Tokyo will conduct the first movement of Mozart's Sinfonie Concertante, with Charles Treger, violin, and Jesse Levine, viola, as soloists.

Following the intermission, Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the second symphony of Sibelius.

Seminar Tomorrow

Luciano Berio, a composer in residence at the center this summer, will speak at the seminar in contemporary music tomorrow afternoon at 3:15 in the chamber music hall. In addition to discussing three of his own pieces, Mr. Berio will introduce "Rimes" by Henri Pousseur to the seminar. Music will be provided by members of the Fromm Fellowship Players.

All of these events are open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
GAZETTE
D. 47,453
JUL 12 1960

CLAUDE FRANK
Ex-Resident in Concert

Frank Joins Bel Arte Trio

Claude Frank, pianist, will make two appearances this week at the Berkshire music festival's second week of concerts.

FRANK, a former student at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will join the Bel Arte Trio in a concert of chamber music tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. in the theatre concert hall and on Saturday will play the Mozart Piano Concerto, K. 491, with the Boston Symphony in the music shed at 8:30 p.m., Charles Munch conducting.

Born in Nuremberg, Germany, Frank came to this country in 1942 and lived in Schenectady until entering army service.

He has been heard here with the Schenectady Choral Society, the Schenectady Symphony, on WGFM, at the Schenectady Museum and in recital programs at Union College.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815
JUL 14 1960

TRIO, PIANIST DRAW 1360 [illegible] TANGLEWOOD

Claude Frank, Bel Art Group Play Mozart, Beethoven

LENOX — An evening of expertly performed chamber music entertained an audience of 1360 in the second of the Wednesday night chamber music recitals. The participants were the Bel Arts Trio and Claude Frank, pianist. The Bel Arts Trio is composed of Ruth Posselt, violin, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and Samuel Mayes, cello. They are usually heard at least once during the Berkshire Music Festival season.

Former Student

Claude Frank, who was a student of conducting at the Berkshire center in 1947, returned Wednesday night as pianist, and a very fine one he proved to be. Born in Germany 35 years ago, he has lived in this country for 20 years. Last season he appeared as soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The program opened with a firm reading of the Beethoven "String Trio in D major, Op. 9 No. 2." The String Trio is a concertante group where the three voices are heard as matched individuals. Beethoven reveals a real affection for this form and has written most gratefully for it.

The three fine artists have been together long enough so that they now provide a fine ensemble. Miss Posselt is always persuasive and incisive, but these days she matches her tone with those of her associates.

There is much lovely thematic material in this trio and Beethoven throws it back and forth among the instruments with stunning effect. This was performance rich in detail and color by a trio of artists who had intimate and happy grasp of the music.

We had not heard Claude Frank before and it was a rich and exciting experience to hear his tremendous reading of Beethoven's "Sonata (No. 32) in C minor." Frank has a formidable technique and poetic insight. Seldom have we heard a pianist of his age with so profound a grasp of the material at hand. He plays easily and without personal assertiveness.

This last quartet may be called the tested and proven realization of the two-movement sonata. The first movement is furiously energetic, almost frightening in its intensity. Mr. Frank summons tremendous sonorities without resulting harshness of tone. The more lyric moments of the final movement, he revealed as perfect a thrill as we have heard in years. Much is written about a soprano's trill, but most sopranos could have learned a lot from Mr. Frank.

This final adagio and arietta movement is a welcome relief from the frenzy of the opening movement, yet in its very restraint it remains tense and attention holding. Mr. Frank received a real ovation after his performance. Let us hope he returns next season.

Mozart wrote the first of his two piano quartets in 1785. The combination of violin, viola and cello with piano was his own idea for it had no real precedent. Beethoven's piano quartets were to be revealed a year later, but they did not as closely approach true chamber music as Mozart's works, which bore no resemblance whatsoever to the piano concerto.

We heard Wednesday night the "piano quartet in G minor." Claude Frank was at the piano and the Bel Arts Trio made up the quartet. The work offers many difficulties for the pianist but Mr. Frank played throughout with consummate ease. It seemed at times that there was some inbalance, perhaps due to the voice characteristics of the first violin. The opening is dark and moody, but this does not last too long and by the time the final rondo is reached, everything is joyous. The rondo was played with lightness and charm. Here again was a performance into which four fine musicians put their very substantial resources.

Friday night the first of the week-end concerts devoted to the music of Mozart will be heard. The three concerts will be given in the Music Shed and even now it looks as though another week-end record will be broken, for Charles Munch has listed some of Mozart's most intriguing compositions for performances.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
JUL 15 1960

SOLOISTS TONIGHT at Tanglewood will be Sherman Walt, left principal bassoon of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and James Stagliano, right, principal French horn of the BSO, shown with Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the orchestra. Two other first desk players also will be soloists in performance of Mozart's Sinfonia Concertante. Concert to be in Shed at 8:30.

Springfield, Mass., Daily News
Thursday, July 14, 1960

This Week at the
BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL
TANGLEWOOD
LENOX, MASS.

Boston Symphony Orch.
Conductor: Charles Munch
3 Mozart Programs in the Music Shed
FRIDAY 8:30
SATURDAY 8:30
SUNDAY 2:30

Tickets: $2.50, $4.00, $5.00
FESTIVAL TICKET OFFICE
LENOX 600

NEW YORK, N.Y.
POST
D. 328,402 S. 262,240

JUL 10 1960

All-Mozart for Tanglewood

Charles Munch, who will conclude the first week of the Boston Symphony's Berkshire Festival Sunday at Tanglewood with an all-Bach program at 2:30, will conduct three all-Mozart concerts Friday at 8:30, July 16 at 8:30 and July 17 at 2:30.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121

JUL 17 1960

Programs In and Out Of the City

Stadium Concerts

Stadium Symphony Orchestra, Lewisohn Stadium of City College, Convent and Amsterdam Aves., 138th and 139th Sts., 8:30.

Tuesday. Conductor, Alfredo Antonini; soloist, Benny Goodman, clarinetist, and the Benny Goodman Sextet and Trio. Dance Overture, Creston; Concerto in A major for Clarinet and Orchestra, K. 622, Mozart; Jam with the Benny Goodman Sextet and Trio. (In case of rain before intermission, this concert will be played the next [illegible].)

Wednesday. Conductor, Alfredo Antonini; soloist, Renato Premezzi, pianist (Stadium debut). Festive Overture, Op. 21, Orrego-Salas; Symphony No. 4 ("Sinfonia Romantica"), Chavez; Two Cuban Dances (first N. Y. performance), Caturla; Nights in the Gardens of Spain, Symphonic Impressions for Piano and Orchestra; Three Dances from "The Three-Cornered Hat," De Falla.

Thursday. Conductor, Alfredo Antonini; soloists, Mary Curtis-Verna, soprano; Jan Peerce, tenor; Robert Merrill, baritone. Songs and Arias by Rossini, Verdi, Puccini, Donizetti, Leoncavallo, Catalani, Ponchielli, Giordano. (In case of rain before intermission, this program will be played the next clear night.)

Saturday. Conductor, Franz Allers; soloists, Martyn Green, baritone (Stadium debut); Margot Moser, soprano (Stadium debut; Morgan Stuart, tenor (Stadium debut). Selections from "The Mikado," "The Pirates of Penzance," "Princess Ida," "The Gondoliers," "Ruddigore," "H. M. S. Pinafore," "Trial By Jury," "The Yeomen of the Guard" and "Iolanthe," Gilbert and Sullivan. (In case of rain before intermission, this program will be played the next clear night.)

Goldman Band

Guggenheim Memorial Concerts, Richard Franko Goldman conducting, Central and Prospect Parks, 8:30.

Today, Central Park. Grand March, Prospera Aeterna (first performance in the United States), Ikuma Dan; Demetrios (first performance), Mel Brofles; Selection, Polish Folk Songs, Kossakowski; The Festival Galop (first performance in the United States), Yosaku Suma; Aurora March (first performance in the United States), Josef Kartinen; Three Grand Military Marches, Hummel; Cornet Solo, Danza Alegre (James Burke, cornetist), James Burke; Waltz, Artists' Life, Strauss; Excerpts "Porgy and Bess," Gershwin; Emblem of Freedom, Edwin Franko Goldman; King Cotton, Sousa.

Monday, Central Park. Overture, La Gazza Ladra, Rossini; Overture, Pique Dame, von Suppe; Overture, Italian in Algiers, Rossini; Overture, Beautiful Galatea, von Suppe; Overture, William Tell, Rossini; Suite from "The Fairy Queen," Purcell; Overture in C, Catel; Suite from "Il Cid," Sacchini; Excerpts, The King and I, Rodgers; Iowa; Boy Scouts of America, Edwin Franko Goldman.

Wednesday, Central Park. The People's Choice, Douglas Moore; Military Symphony, Gossec; Military Overture, Mendelssohn; Divertimento, Blacher; Praeludium and Allegro, Giannini; Cornet Solo, Valse Lulie (James Burke, cornetist), Rogers; Solemn March, Grieg; Shepherd's Hey; Molly on the Shore, Grainger; Hail to the Spirit of Liberty, Sousa; On the Alert, Edwin Franko Goldman.

Friday, Central Park. March, Pomp and Circumstance, No. 4, Elgar; Music for the Royal Fireworks, Handel; March of the Israelites, from "Eli," Costa; An Original Suite, Jacob; Overseas March, Arnold; Processional March, Sine Nomine, Vaughan Williams; Cornet Solo, The Lost Chord (James Burke, cornetist), Sullivan; Dances from Henry VIII, German; Passacaglia, Scott; Marching Song, Holst; March of the Herald, Nicholls.

Saturday, Prospect Park. Grand March, Freedom Forever, Edwin Franko Goldman; A Walt Whitman Overture, Lloyd; Soirees Musicales, Rossini-Britten; Cornet Solo, The Volunteer (James Burke, cornetist), Rodgers; Waltz, Liebeslieder, Strauss; Excerpts, The Sound of Music, Rodgers; Hands Across the Sea; The Bride Elect; The Liberty Bell; The Directorate; Kansas Wildcats; The Pathfinder of Panama; Fairest of the Fair; The Stars and Stripes Forever, Sousa.

Berkshire

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, 2:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Symphony No. 38 in D major, "Prague," K. 504; Violin Concerto No. 4 in D major, K. 218 (Joseph Silverstein, violinist); Symphony No. 39 in E flat major, K. 543, Mozart.

Monday, 8:30 William Masselos, pianist. Piano Fantasy; Piano Variations; Piano Sonata, Copland.

Wednesday, 8:30 Claudio Arrau, pianist. Fantasy in F minor; Ballade No. 4 in F minor; Scherzo No. 4 in E major; Sonata in B minor; Twenty-four Preludes, Chopin.

Friday, 8:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Symphony No. 3 in E flat major, "Eroica," Op. 55, Beethoven; Requiem (Festival Chorus, Sara Mae Endich, soprano; Donald Gramm, bass), Fauré.

Saturday, 8:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Overture to "Anacreon," Cherubini; Piano Concerto No. 5 in E flat major, "Emperor," Op. 73 (Claudio Arrau, pianist); "Fountains of Rome," Symphonic Poem, Respighi; "Till Eulenspiegel Merry Pranks," Op. 28, Strauss.

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 4,953

047

JUL 15 1960

Weekend Attractions

DORSET PLAYHOUSE, Dorset, Vt. — "Third Best Sport," July 14 - 17; "Summer of The Seventeenth Doll", July 21 - 24.

WILLIAMSTOWN PLAYHOUSE, Williamstown, Mass. Mildred Dunnock and E. G. Marshall in "The Skin Of Our Teeth," through Saturday; "Good News" (musical), July 19-23.

WESTON PLAYHOUSE, Weston, Vt. — "The Gazebo," July 14 - 18; "The Disenchanted," July 21 - 25.

COLONIE MUSICAL THEATRE, Latham, N. Y. — Red Buttons in "Teahouse Of The August Moon," July 12 - 17; Shirl Conway in "Guys and Dolls," July 19 - 24.

"Witness For The Prosecution," July 11 - 16; Misalliance," July 18 - 23.

SPA SUMMER THEATRE, Saratoga Springs, N. Y. — Hermione Gingold in "Abracadabra," July 11-16; "The Second Man," July 18 - 23.

SOUTHERN VERMONT ART CENTER, Manchester, Vt. — Les Grands Ballets Canadiens, July 17; Square dance, July 22; Exhibition of New York and New England artists ,through Sunday.

GREEN MOUNTAIN THEATRE, Poultney, Vt. — "Career," July 12 - 16; "Thieves Carnival," July 19 - 23.

MALDEN BRIDGE PLAYHOUSE, Malden Bridge, N. Y. — "Golden Fleecing," July 13 - 17; "Make A Million," July 20 - 31.

BERKSHIRE MUSEUM THEATRE, Pittsfield, Mass. — "Hansel and Gretel," July 15; "Adventures of Brer Rabbit," July 22.

MARLBORO MUSIC FESTIVAL, Marlboro, Vt. — Music concerts and workshops under direction of Rudolf Serkin.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass. — Boston Symphony Orchestra, conductor Charles Munch, July 15 - 17; Fromm Concert, July 18; Tanglewood Choir, July 19; Caudio Arrau Chopin recital, July 20; Music Center Orchestra, July 21.

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Circ. 106,090

JUL 10 1960

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL FEATURES MOZART

The Berkshire Music Festival's second group of weekend concerts is to be devoted to the music of Mozart. Highlights are the Boston Symphony's first performance of the "Litaniae de venerabili altaris sacramento" in Saturday's concert and the inclusion of the Violin Concerto No. 4 in D major (K. 218) in next Sunday afternoon's program. The Festival Chorus will assist in the choral presentation and the soloist in the concerto performance will be Joseph Silverstein, the only American to win honors in last year's International Music Competition at Brussels.

JANE FROMAN

Pianist Claude Frank will make two appearances at the festival this week. On Wednesday evening he will perform with the Bel Arte Trio in the second concert of the chamber music series and he will be heard with the orchestra in the Piano Concerto No. 24 in C minor (K. 491) in Saturday evening's concert.

Dr. Munch is to conduct all three of this weekend's concerts though Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's Choral Department, will conduct Saturday's Litany performance.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 14 1960

Mozart Weekend

Four First-Desk BSO Players Soloists Tomorrow in Shed

TANGLEWOOD — Four of the first-desk players in the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be soloists tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Music Shed when Dr. Charles Munch will open an all-Mozart weekend series of concerts.

Invited by the conductor to be soloists in the Sinfonia Concertante are Gino Cioffi, clarinet; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon.

The program will also include Mozart's Serenade No. 6 (Serenata Butturns) in D Major, the Divertimento in D Major for strings and Symphony No. 41, "Jupiter."

Piano Soloist

Pianist Claude Frank will be the guest at Saturday night's concert in a performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 24 in C Minor. The program will open with "Eine kleine Nachtmusik" and will close with the orchestra's first performance of "Litaniae de venerabili altaris sacramento." Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's choral department, will conduct the litany. His guests will be Margaret Kalil, soprano; Louise Parker, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Peter Sliker, bass; and the Berkshire Festival Chorus.

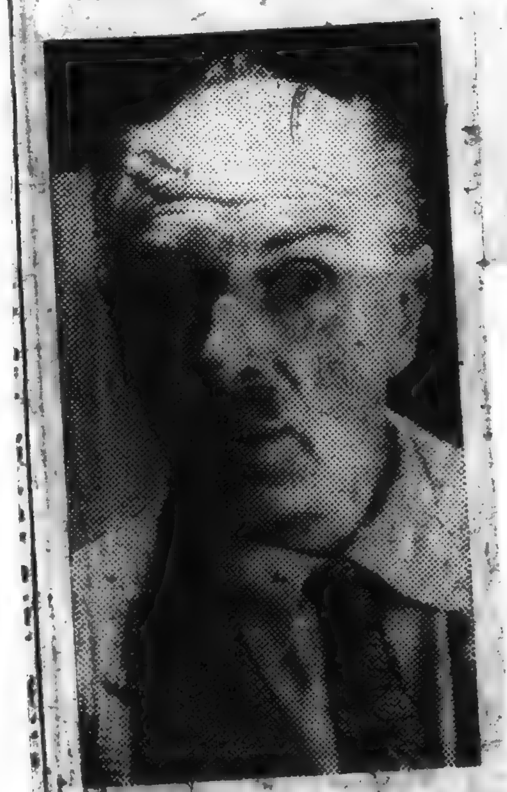
Sunday's Mozart program will include his symphonies Nos. 38 and 39, plus Joseph Silverstein, BSO violinist, as soloist in Mozart's Concerto No. 4 in D major.

The orchestra's rehearsal in the Music Shed Saturday morning at 10 will be opened to the public. The proceeds benefit the orchestra's pension fund.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037

JUL 8 1960

Mozart Litany



HUGH ROSS will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Festival Chorus in the Mozart Litany, K. 243, at Tanglewood July 16.

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 373,012

JUL 15 1962

DR. CHARLES MUNCH, who is conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, has invited four of his first-desk players to be soloists at this afternoon's concert. Clarinetist Gino Cioffi, Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, horn; and Sherman Walt, bassoon will feature in Mozart's Serenade No. 6 (Serenata Notturna) in D major, K. 239, the Divertimento in D major and the Symphony No 41 "Jupiter."

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 14 1960

All-Mozart Program Set for Tanglewood Starting Tomorrow

The second weekend series of preliminary Bach-Mozart concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival season will open tomorrow evening at 8:30 in the music shed at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Entirely Mozart

The concerts tomorrow and Saturday evenings and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 will be devoted entirely to the works of Mozart. Last week's three were comprised entirely of Bach compositions.

Last evening, the second chamber music program of the season was given in the Tanglewood theater-concert hall by Claude Frank, pianist, and the Bel Arte Trio. Mr. Frank performed Beethoven's Piano Sonata in C Minor, No. 32, Op. 111, and with the trio, Mozart's Piano Quartet in G. Minor, K. 478. The trio played Beethoven's String Trio in D Major, Op. 9, No. 2. The Boston orchestra's first violist Joseph de Pasquale, first cellist Samuel Mayes and violinist Ruth Posselt, comprise the Bel Arte Trio.

In the Friday evening concert, Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will call up four of his first-desk players, clarinetist Gino Cioffi, oboeist Ralph Gomberg, horn player James Stagliano and bassoonist Sherman Walt, to be soloists in a performance of the Mozart Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K. 279b. The program also will include the Serenade No. 6 ("Serenata Notturna") in D Major, K. 239; the Divertimento in D Major for Strings, K. 136, and the "Jupiter" symphony, No. 41, of Mozart.

Saturday Soloist

Pianist Frank will be the guest soloist at the Saturday evening concert in a performance of Mozart's Piano (Concerto No. 24 in C Minor, K. 491. The other Mozart works on the program are "Eine kleine Nachtmusik," and the "Litaniae de venerabili altaris sacramento" in its first performance by the Boston orchestra, with Hugh Ross, head of the Music Center's choral department, conducting and with Margaret Kalil, soprano; Louise Parker, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Peter Sliker, bass, as soloists, and the Festival chorus.

Sunday's all Mozart program will include his Symphonies Nos. 38 and 39 plus the Concerto No. 4 in D Major, K. 218, with Joseph Silverstein, Boston Symphony violinist, as soloist.

The orchestra's rehearsal in the music shed Saturday morning at 10 will be opened to the public. The proceeds will go to the orchestra's pension fund.

1

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 17 1960

At Tanglewood Today

JOSEPH SILVERSTEIN, violinist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be heard in the Violin Concerto, K.218 in the all-Mozart program in the Tanglewood Music Shed this afternoon beginning at 2.30. Charles Munch, music director of the Festival, will conduct.

HACKENSACK, N.J.
BERGEN RECORD
D. 90,211

JUL 9 1960

Mozart Concerts Set At Berkshire Festival

Charles Munch will lead the Boston Symphony Orchestra in three all-Mozart concerts Friday through next Sunday, July 17, at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

The first week of concerts ends tomorrow with an all-Bach program at 2:30 P. M. in the Music Shed.

Festival programs for the remainder of the month are:

TODAY

All-Bach program, excerpts from "Musical Offering" and "The Art of the Fugue"; Piano Concerto in D minor, Seymour Lipkin, soloist; and Suite No. 4; 8:30 P. M.

TOMORROW

All-Bach program, Suite No. 3; Brandenburg Concerti Nos. 2 and 6; Cantata, "Christ Lag in Todesbanden", Festival Chorus; 2:30 P. M.

WEDNESDAY

Piano Quartets 1 and 2, Mozart; Piano Sonata Op. 111, Beethoven; Claude Frank, pianist; Theater, 8:30 P. M.

CHARLES MUNCH

FRIDAY

All-Mozart program, Serenade No. 6 in D major; Sinfonia Concertante (Gomberg, Cioffi, Stagliano, Walt); Divertimento in D major; Symphony No. 41 in C major, "Jupiter", 8:30 P. M.

SATURDAY

All-Mozart program, "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik"; Piano Concerto No. 24 in C minor (Frank); Litaniae de venerabili altaris sacramento (Kalil, Parker, McCollum, Sliker, Festival Chorus, Hugh Ross conducting), 8:30 P. M.

JULY 17

All-Mozart program, Symphony No. 38 in D major, "Prague"; Violin Concert No. 4 in D major (Joseph Silverstein); Symphony No. 39 in E-flat major, 2:30 P. M.

JULY 20

Chopin centenary recital, Claudio Arrau, pianist, Fantasy in F minor; Ballade No. 4, F minor; Scherzo No. 4, E major; Sonata in B minor; 24 preludes, Theater, 8:30 P. M.

JULY 22

Koussevitzky memorial concert, Symphony No. 3, "Eroica", Beethoven; Requiem, Faure (Endlich, Gramm, Festival Chorus), 8:30 P. M.

JULY 23

Pierre Monteux conducting, "Anacreon" Overture, Cherubini; Piano Concerto No. 5 Beethoven (Arrau); "Fountains of Rome", Respighi; "Till Eulenspiegel", Strauss, 8:30 P. M.

JULY 24

Munch conducting, Variations, Chaconne, & Finale, Dello Joio; Violin Concerto, Mendelssohn (Jaime Laredo), Symphony No 5, Beethoven, 2:30 P. M.

JULY 27

Chamber music concert, Beaux Arts Trio of New York, Kakadu Variations, Beethoven; Trio in A minor, Ravel; Trio, Op. 8, Brahms; Theater, 8:30 P. M.

JULY 29

Munch conducting, "Jeu de cartes", Stravinsky; Symphony No. 1, Khrennikov; Piano Concerto No. 3, Rachmaninoff (Byron Janis), 8:30 P. M.

JULY 30

Munch conducting, "Symphonie Fantastique", Berlioz; Symphony No. 6, Piston; "Daphnis et Cloe" Suite No. 2, Ravel (Festival Chorus), 8:30 P. M.

JULY 31

Monteux conducting, Symphony No. 35, "Haffner", Mozart; Symphony No. 9, "Choral", Beethoven (Steber, Gray-Masse, McCollum, Laurent, Festival Chorus), 2:30 P. M.

Music Events

(Opening performance at the Empire State Music Festival has been postponed until next Saturday.)

TONIGHT

Paterson Lyric Opera Theater, outdoor concert, Act I of "Lucia di Lammermoor", Act II of "Faust", gardens of Mr. and Mrs. Marcel Jovine, 270 Harrington Avenue, Closter, dusk.

Lewisohn Stadium Concerts, Eartha Kitt, folk and theater music, 138th Street, Amsterdam Avenue, 8:30 P. M.

TOMORROW

Fair Lawn Summer Festival of Music, Philharmonic Orchestra of Northern New Jersey, Walter Schoeder, conductor, Memorial Park, 8 P. M.

Symphony No. 8 in B minor ______ Schubert
"Secret Marriage" Overture ______ Cimarosa
"Beautiful Galatea" Overture ______ Suppe
Hora Staccato ___ Dinicu-Schmidt
"William Tell" Overture ______ Rossini
Czardas ______ Monti
"Pop Goes the Weasel" — Cailliet
"Music of the Spheres" — Strauss

TUESDAY

Lewisohn Stadium Concerts, all-Brahms program, Concerto No. 1 in D minor, Thomas Scherman conducting, Rudolf Firkusny, pianist, 8:30 P. M.

WEDNESDAY

Lewisohn Stadium Concerts, all-French program, Symphony in C major, Bizet; Concerto in D minor, Lalo, Scherman conducting, Nathan Stutch, cellist, 8:30 P. M.

THURSDAY

Lewisohn Stadium Concerts, scenes from "Il Trovatore" by Verdi, Scherman conducting, Steber, Rankin, Baum, Merrill, Davidson, 8:30 P. M.

SATURDAY

Empire State Music Festival, New York City Ballet Company, Anthony Wayne Recreation Area, Harriman State Park, N. Y., 8:30 P. M.

Lewisohn Stadium Concerts, folk-music festival, the Belafonte Folk Singers, Robert de Cormier conducting, 8:30 P. M.

TROY, N.Y.
TIMES RECORD
D. 40,588

JUL 16 1960

Symphony Offers Two Concerts

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra today at 8:30 p.m. and tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. at Tanglewood in all-Mozart concerts.

Pianist Claude Frank will be guest at today's concert in a performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 24 in C minor. The program will open with "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" and will close with the orchestra's first performance of Mozart's "Litaniae de venerabili altaris sacramento."

Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's Choral Department, will conduct the Litany. His guests will be soprano Margaret Kalil, contralto Louise Parker, tenor John McCollum, bass Peter Sliker and the Festival Chorus.

Tomorrow's all-Mozart program will include his Symphonies Nos. 38 and 39 plus Joseph Silverstein, the orchestra's violinist, as soloist in Mozart's Concerto No. 4, in D major. Mr. Silverstein was the only American of the seven American entrants, among the first ten winners in the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music Competition at Brussels in 1959. He was awarded third prize.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635

JUL 10 1960

CONCERT AND OPERA PROGRAMS OF THE WEEK

Harriman State Park. New York City Ballet. For detailed program see The Dance column.

TUXEDO

TODAY, 8:30 P. M. St. John Terrell's Music Circus. Sterling Forest Gardens. George Shearing, jazz pianist.

FRIDAY, 9 P. M. Ahmad Jamal, pianist. Additional performances Saturday at 5:30 and 9 P. M. and next Sunday at 8:30.

WOODSTOCK

TODAY, 3 P. M. Maverick Concert Hall. Hartland Trio.

Trio in G........................Haydn
Dumky Trio......................Dvorak
Archduke Trio..............Beethoven

CHAUTAUQUA

TODAY, 3 P. M. Charlene Chadwick, soprano and Mischa Mischakoff, violinist.

TONIGHT, 8:30 P. M. The Dukes of Dixieland.

WEDNESDAY, 3:30 P. M. Ozan Marsh, pianist and Laszlo Varga, 'cellist.

FRIDAY, 8:30 Chautauqua Opera Association. Cosi fan tutte. Conductor, Ignace Strasfogel.

SATURDAY, 3 P. M. Recital by scholarship winners of the New York Federation of Music Clubs.

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Walter Hendl; Muriel Kilby, pianist.

NEW JERSEY

WEST ORANGE

TUESDAY, 8 P. M. St. Cloud Presbyterian Church. Oratorio Society of New Jersey summer sing. Margaret Hillis will lead Bach's Magnificat.

FAIR LAWN

TODAY, 8 P. M. Memorial Park. Pops concert. Philharmonic Orchestra of Northern New Jersey. Conductor, Walter Schoeder.

Program of works by Schubert, Cimarosa, von Suppe, Rossini, Monti and Strauss.

ASBURY PARK

THURSDAY, 8:15 P. M. Convention Hall. Cavalleria Rusticana and Pagliacci with Licia Albanese as Santuzza.

CONNECTICUT

NEW CANAAN

TODAY, 8 P. M. Silvermine Guild Chamber Music Center. The Silvermine String Quartet. Assisting artist, Robert Bloom, oboist.

Program of works by Haydn, Turina, Aitken, Beethoven and Mozart.

DEEP RIVER

THURSDAY, 8:30 P. M. Valley Regional Auditorium. Alexander Uninsky, pianist. Chopin recital.

NEW HAVEN

TUESDAY, 8:30 P. M. Saybrook College Courtyard. Starlight Festival String Quartet. Assisting artist, Robert Helps, pianist.

H. Landshoff

PIANIST—Claude Frank, at Berkshire Festival on Wednesday and Saturday.

Passacaglia for violin and viola
Handel-Halvorsen
Piano Quintet in C minor........Faure
Piano Trio in G minor..........Chopin

FAIRFIELD

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M. Fairfield University Shell. Connecticut Pops Orchestra. Jane Froman, soprano; Skitch Henderson, pianist.

NORFOLK

TUESDAY, 8 P. M. Music Shed. Yale Summer School of Music. Conductor, Keith Wilson; Gilbert Ross, violinist; Paul Ulanowsky, pianist. Assisting artist, Aldo Parisot, 'cellist.

Violin Sonata in C minor..Beethoven
Trio in A minor ....Brahms
Fantasy for 'cello and small orchestra ....Quincy Porter
Concerto No. 2 for 'cello and orchestra ....Villa-Lobos

FALLS VILLAGE

TODAY, 4 P. M. Music Mountain. Berkshire Quartet. Assisting artist, Ariana von Wurtzler, harpist.

Quartet in G ....Mozart
Concerto for harp and strings..Renie
Quartet in C minor ....Brahms
Harp solos

MASSACHUSETTS

LENOX

Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30 P. M. Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch; Festival Chorus.

Suite No. 3; Brandenburg Concertos Nos. 6 and 2; Cantata: Christ lag in Todesbanden ....Bach

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M. The Theatre. Claude Frank, pianist and the Bel Arte Trio.

Trio in D, Op. 9, No. 2; Piano Sonata in C minor, Op. 111....Beethoven
Piano Quartet in G minor (K. 478) Mozart

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M. Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Munch.

Serenade No. 6 in D (K. 239); Sinfonia Concertante for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon (K. 297b); Divertimento in D (K. 136); Symphony No. 41 ....Mozart

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. Music Shed. Boston Symphony. Conductor, Munch. Claude Frank, pianist; Margaret Kalil, soprano; Louise Parker, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; Peter Sliker, bass; Festival Chorus.

Eine kleine Nachtmusik (K. 525); Piano Concerto No. 24 in C minor (K. 491); Litaniae de venerabili altaris sacramento (K. 243)...Mozart

NEXT SUNDAY, 2:30 P. M. Music Shed. Boston Symphony. Conductor, Munch. Joseph Silverstein, violinist.

Symphony No. 38; Violin Concerto No. 4 (K. 218); Symphony No. 39 ....Mozart

Berkshire Music Barn

TODAY, 8:30 P. M. The Dave Brubeck Quartet.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M. Dinah Washington.

NEXT SUNDAY, 8:30 P. M. George Shearing.

IPSWICH

FRIDAY and SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. Castle Hill Foundation. Ania Dorfmann, pianist.

VERMONT

MARLBORO

TODAY, 4 P. M., SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. and NEXT SUNDAY, 4 P. M. Chamber music concerts presented by the Marlboro Music Festival.

BURLINGTON

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M. Lane Summer Series of the University of Vermont. Eugene List, pianist and Carroll Glenn, violinist.

Sonata for violin and piano....Bach
Sonata in F minor, Op. 57..Beethoven
Sonata for violin and piano...Franck
Le Bananier ....Gottschalk
Sonata for violin and piano; Hungarian Rhapsody No. 6........Liszt

MAINE

HANCOCK

TODAY, 4 P. M. Domaine Chamber Music Concert. Forest Studio. Conductor, Emery Davis; Claude Monteux, flutist; Matthew Raimondi, violinist; Philip Cherry, 'cellist; Fritz Jahoda, pianist.

Trio for flute, 'cello and piano
Leclair
Duet for violin and cello......Rolla
Sonata for flute and piano..Poulenc
Dumky Trio ....Dvorak

NEW HAMPSHIRE

HANOVER

THURSDAY, 8:30 P. M. Baker Library, Dartmouth College. Chamber music concerts by the Estival Quartet.

VALATIE, N.Y.
ROUGH NOTES
W. 1,502

JUL 8 1960

OUTSTANDING PIANIST: Claude Frank will make two appearances at the Berkshire Music Festival's second week of concerts. Mr. Frank, a former student at the Berkshire Music Center, maintained by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, will join the Bel Arte Trio in a concert of chamber music Wednesday, July 13 at 8:30 in the Theatre Concert Hall with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony. Mr. Frank will also play the Mozart Piano Concerto, K. 491 in the Music Shed at 8:30, Saturday, July 16.

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Circ. 42,164

JUL 9 - 1960

Music

Andover Organ Institute To Open on August 1

By Alfred Burke

LOWELL—Following the European session of the 1960 Andover Organ institute which will be completed on July 29, the Andover season will open on Aug. 1 and close on Aug. 20. Arthur Howes, director and internationally known organist will again head the Andover season.

Hugh Ross

Associate members of the faculty with Mr. Howes will be Heinrich Fleischer and Homer G. Mowe, the latter returning to head the department of voice. There will be three major recitals this season. On Aug. 5 Mr. Howes will be the guest artist. Donald Whiting, a distinguished member of the organ department faculty at the New England Conservatory of Music will appear on Aug. 12, and the final event, scheduled for Aug. 19, will feature Heinrich Fleischer.

The European institute session which is currently being conducted features a faculty whose members are listed among the finest organist-teachers in Holland, Denmark and Germany. While studying with such musical masters as Johannes Brenneke, Volcker Gwinner, Fritz Mehrtens, Leif Thybo, Joep Toebusch and Heinz Wunderlich, the students will be accorded the privilege of playing on some of the Baroque organs as well as some of the later installed modern tracker models. Climaxing the session will be festival programs in Holland and at Salzburg.

The noted choral director, Hugh Ross will direct the Festival chorus in Mozart's Litany K, 243, during next Saturday evening's all Mozart program at the Berkshire Festival in Lenox. Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the orchestral portions of the concert which will be played by the Boston Symphony orchestra. The guest artist will be Claude Frank, pianist, who will perform the Concerto, K 491.

On Sunday another Mozart program will be presented. Soloist will be Joseph Silverstein who will be heard in Concerto K, 218. Remaining parts of the program will be the Symphony No. 36 and Symphony No. 39.

Opening the week will be a concert Wednesday evening, another in the chamber series. Members of the Boston Symphony orchestra will be heard, and the assisting artist will be Claude Frank. The Berkshire Music Center orchestra will be heard Thursday evening, and on Friday an all-Mozart event is scheduled. To be heard are the Bassoon Concerto (Sherman Wait); Clarinet Concerto (Gino Cioffi) and the Sinfonia Concertante with Ralph Gomberg, Gino Cioffi, Sherman Wait and James Stagliano.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

JUL 11 1960

Regional Roundup

Bel Arte Trio, Symphony Scheduled at Tanglewood

Chamber Music Trio and Boston Orchestra to Give Concerts This Week

A chamber music concert and three concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be the main events this week through Sunday, July 17, in the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Bel Arte Trio

The chamber music Wednesday, July 13, at 8.30 p. m. in the Theater-Concert Hall, will be by the Bel Arte Trio, composed of Joseph de Pasquale, first violist, and Samuel Mayes, first cellist, of the Boston Symphony, with violinist Ruth Posselt. Claude Frank, pianist, will join them in one selection.

The Friday, Saturday and Sunday concerts by the full orchestra will be devoted to the works of Mozart, with Charles Munch conducting.

The programs are as follows:

July 13, 8.30, Theater, Claude Frank and Bel Arte Trio:

Beethoven, String Trio in D major, Op. 9, No. 2.
Beethoven, Piano Sonata in C minor, No. 32, Op 111.
Mozart; Piano Quartet in G minor, K. 478

July 15, 8.30, Music Shed:

All-Mozart Program:
Serenade No. 6 in D major, K. 239
Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K. 297b
Divertimento in D major, for Strings, K. 136
Symphony No. 41, in C major, "Jupiter," K. 551.

July 16, 8.30, Music Shed

All-Mozart Program
Eine Kleine Nachtmusik, K. 525
Piano Concerto No. 24, in C minor, K. 491 (Frank)
Litaniae de venerabili altaris sacramento, K. 243 (Kalil, Parker, Mc-McCollum, Sliker and Festival Chorus, Hugh Ross conducting.

July 17, 2.30 p. m. Music Shed

All-Mozart Program:
Symphony No. 38, in D major, "Prague," K. 504
Violin Concerto No. 4, in D major, K. 218 (Silverstein)
Symphony No. 39, in E flat major, K. 543.

Other Events

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center who contribute to its support are invited to the following events of the week:

July 14, 8.30 Music Shed, Berkshire Center Orchestra; July 15, 3.15, Chamber Music Hall, seminar in contemporary music; July 17, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall, BMC chamber music; July 17, 8:30 p. m., Chamber Music Hall, composer's forum.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 40,278

JUL 18 1960

Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 22,446

JUL 19 1960

Big Crowds Flock To Tanglewood

(Special To The Republican)

LENOX, MASS. — Tanglewood audiences at the all-Mozart concerts during the second week end of the Bach - Mozart portion of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival continued to pile up record - breaking attendance figures as they heard two young soloists, Claude Frank at the piano and Joseph Silverstein on the violin, with Hugh Ross conducting the Festival Chorus of 60 voices with four soloists. Attendance for the first two weeks was 36,323 as against 31,372 for the same concerts last year.

The major part of the festival with four week ends of music in the Shed begins on Friday with concerts to be conducted by Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, presenting a large number of solo performers. Friday night Munch will conduct Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and Faure's "Requiem" with the Festival Chorus in the annual Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. Saturday night will find Pierre Monteaux conducting the orchestra in music of Cherubini, Respighi, Strauss, with Claudio Arrau in Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. 5."

Sunday afternoon Munch will conduct Beethoven's "Fifth" with Mendelssohn's "Violin Concerto." This week will have two special programs honoring composers. Last night the Berkshire Music Center honored its faculty chairman, composer Aaron Copland, with a free public performance of three of his piano compositions in observance of Copland's 60th birthday year. The Chopin Centenary Recital with Claudio Arrau at the piano will be given tomorrow evening at 8:30 o'clock.

Saturday night's audience of 7,100 heard a brilliant performance by Claude Frank. He performed Mozart's "Piano Concerto No. 24, in C Minor", with vigor and considerable maturity and received merited plaudits. Sunday afternoon's soloist, Joseph Silverstein, regular member of the violin section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, gave a fine performance of Mozart's "Violin Concerto No. 4."

The Festival Chorus with Ross conducting Saturday night gave a beautiful performance of the "Litaniae de Venerabili Altaris Sacramento." The group of male and female voices is rapidly shaping up to a fine chorus and should be in excellent form by the time Beethoven's "Ninth" is presented July 31. Soloists with the Festival Chorus this season are Margaret Kalil, soprano; Louise Parker, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and Peter Sliker, bass.

S.M.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 18 1960

Thousands Crowd Beaches

PITTSFIELD — Somewhat overcast skies did not prevent thousands of persons from visiting local public beaches Sunday, about 5,000 at Burbank Park on Onota Lake and and 3,000 at Pontoosuc. The crowd at Onota was swelled by those who wanted to hear the two-hour concert played by the Eagles Band of Pittsfield, directed by John Noonan.

Tanglewood in Lenox reported a crowd of over 7,000 Sunday to swell the weekend total for the final Mozart series to a record 16,184, about 3,000 more than in 1959.

* * * *

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
ADVERTISER-DIGEST
W. 17,000
JUL 1 4 1960

BOSTON SYMPHONY CONCERTS—WQXR-RADIO

Boston Symphony Orchestra concerts from the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass. are broadcast over WQXR on Saturday from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m., the final of the series is scheduled for August 12. Charles Munch will be the conductor for all of the broadcast concerts except July 23 when Pierre Monteux, the orchestra's 85-year-old "conductor emeritus," will be on the podium. Compositions ranging from the classics of Mozart and Cherubini to the contemporary Dutilleux and Copland will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood this summer. Martin Bookspan will provide the commentary.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 10 1960

Soloists in Mozart Concert at Tanglewood Friday

RALPH GOMBERG

GINO CIOFFI

All-Mozart programs by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be heard at the Tanglewood Music Shed Friday and Saturday nights and one week from this afternoon. Soloists Friday night will include Ralph Gomberg, principal oboe of the orchestra, and Gino Cioffi, first clarinet. Other first-desk players to be heard Friday night will be James Stagliano, horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon. They are to be soloists in Mozart's Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K 297b.

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
KINGS COURIER
W. 15,719

JUL 9 1960

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
BAY NEWS
W. 11,909

JUL 9 1960

Schedule Announced For Tanglewood Festival

Wednesday, July 6, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival 1 commenced at Tanglewood, the Orchestra's 210-acre estate near Lenox in Western Massachusetts.

The program at Tanglewood has been announced by conductor Charles Munch. The program for the next two weeks is as follows:

Week of July 11: Wednesday, July 13 - 8:30 p.m.: Chamber Music Concert with Claude Frank at the piano. The program will include Mozart: Piano Quartets Nos. 1 and 2 and Beethoven: Piano Sonata Op. 1 11.

July 14: Berkshire Music Center Orchestra at 8:30 P.M.

July 15: At 3:15 P.M. - the Seminar in Contemporary Music - At 8:30 P.M.: Boston Symphony with its program of Mozart Concertos.

July 16: 10:00 A.M. - BSO Open Rehearsal - At 8:30 P.M. - Mozart Program incuding Eine Kleine Nachtmusik and Piano Concerto, K. 491.

July 17: 10:00 A.M. - BMC Chamber Music - 2:30 P.M. - More Mozart, including Symphony No. 38 "Prague" and Symphony No. 39 - 8:30 P.M. - Composer's Forum.

Week of July 18: July 18: 8:30 P.M. - Fromm Foundation Concert - All-Copland Program: Piano Fantasy; Piano Variations, Piano Sonata.

July 19: 8:30 P.M. - Tanglewood Choir.

July 20: 2:30 P.M. - BMC Opera Scenes - 8:30 P.M. - Chopin Centenary Recital with Claudio Arrau. Included are Fantasy in F Minor; Ballade No. 4, F Minor; Scherzo No. 4, E Major; 24 Preludes, Sonata in B Minor.

July 21: 8:30 P.M. - Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

July 22: 3:15 P.M. - Seminar in Contemporary Music - 8:30 P.M. - Boston Symphony: Beethoven: "Eroica" Symphony; Faure: Requiem; Koussivitsky Memorial Concert.

July 23: 10:00 A.M. - BSO Open Rehearsal - 8:30 P.M. - Boston Symphony with Pierre Monteux - Cherubini "Anacrean" Overture; Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 5 (Arrau); Respighi: Fountain of Rome; Straus: Till Eulenspiegel.

July 24: 10:00 A.M. - BMC Chamber Music - 2:30 P.M. - Boston Symphony with Munch: Dello Joio: Variations, Chaconne and Finale; Mendelsohn: Violin Concerto (Larado); Beethoven: Symphony No. 5- 8:30 P.M. - Composer's Forum.

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,290

JUL 14 1960

ATHENS, N.Y.
HERALD
W. 325

JUL 14 1960

News
WEST HARTFORD,
Weekly Independent
Circ. 7,059

JUL 7 - 1960

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

JUL 9 - 1960

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 289,111

JUL 10 1960

Post
NORTH HAVEN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 1,500

JUL 7 1960

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 51,447

JUL 10 1960

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. [illegible],572

JUL 14 1960

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,498

JUL 14 1960

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUL 12 1960

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 176,513

JUL 12 1960

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 27,809

JUL 7 1960

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Circ. 18,203

JUL 9 - 1960

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON,
Mass.
Circ. 12,847

JUL 6 - 1960

Gazette
Schenectady, NY
13 July 1960

The Echo
New Lebanon, NY

12 July 1960

Tanglewood Programs Announced

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 9—Charles Munch, who will conclude the first week of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival this Sunday at Tanglewood with an all-Bach program at 2:30 p. m. in the Music Shed, will conduct three all-Mozart concerts next Friday at 8:30 p. m., next Saturday at 8:30 p. m. and July 17 at 2:30 p. m.

Doctor Munch has invited four of his first-desk players: Clarinetist Gino Cioffi; Ralph Gomberg, oboe; James Stagliano, horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon—to be soloists at Friday's concert in the "Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K. 297b." The program will also include Mozart's "Serenade No. 6 (Serenata Notturna) in D major, K. 239, "the "Divertimento in D major, for Strings, K. 136," and the "Symphony No. 41, Jupiter."

Pianist Claude Frank will be guest at the Saturday concert in a performance of Mozart's "Piano Concerto No. 24 in C Minor, K. 491." The program will open with "Eine kleine Nachtmusik" and will close with the orchestra's first performance of Mozart's "Litaniae de venerabili altaris sacramento."

Hugh Ross, head of the Berkshire Music Center's Choral Department, will conduct the Litany. His guests will be soprano Margaret Kalil, contralto Louise Parker, tenor John McCollum, bass Peter Sliker and the Festival Chorus.

The July 17 all-Mozart program will include his "Symphonies Nos. 38 and 39" plus Joseph Silverstein, Boston Symphony Orchestra violinist, as soloist in Mozart's "Concerto No. 4, in D Major, K. 218." Mr. Silverstein was the only American, of the seven American entrants, among the first 10 winners in the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music Competition at Brussels in May 1959. The competition, which drew 37 contestants from 18 nations, awarded him third prize.

The orchestra's first violist Joseph de Pasquale, first cellist Samuel Mayes and violinist Ruth Posselt, Berkshire Music Center faculty member, will join pianist Claude Frank in the second concert of the Chamber Music Series in the Tanglewood Theater Wednesday.

Performing as the Del Arte Trio, Miss Posselt and Messrs. de Pasquale and Mayes will open the program with Beethoven's "String Trio in D major, Opus 9, No. 2." Mr. Frank will be heard in Beethoven's "Piano Sonata in C Minor, Opus 111," and he will be joined by the Trio in a performance of Mozart's "Piano Quartet in G minor, K. 478."

The orchestra's rehearsal in the Music Shed next Saturday at 10 a. m. will be opened to the public. The proceeds from this rehearsal will benefit the orchestra's pension fund.

Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, those whose interest in the school is reflected by their contributions toward its support, are invited to four events at Tanglewood next week. The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will perform in the Shed on Thursday at 8:30 p. m. Members of the school's Composition Department will conduct a seminar in contemporary music in the Chamber Music Hall at 3:15 p. m. next Friday and they will participate in a composer's forum in the Chamber Music Hall July 17 at 8:30 a. m. On next Sunday morning at 10, a concert of chamber music will be performed by members of that department.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 17 1960

SECOND CONCERT AT TANGLEWOOD GETS HIGH PRAISE

Mozart Program Played By Boston Symphony Orchestra

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Fine music and fine weather drew an audience of 7094 persons to Tanglewood Saturday night to hear the second in the three concerts devoted to the music of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, conducted by Charles Munch and performed by an ensemble of the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Claude Frank pianist, the Festival Chorus, directed by Hugh Ross and a quartet of singers who sang the "Litaniae" beautifully.

Sound Is Superb

The program opened with the charming "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik," which seemed the most appropriate music for this lovely summer night. One could let the imagination run loose as the music proceeded through its four movements. In this music there is high good humor, grace, romance and perhaps a little nostalgia. Mr. Munch dealt gently with this music making his points skilfully and without undue acceleration of tempi. Phrases were beautifully moulded and, as usual, the sound was superb.

Claude Frank was soloist in "Piano Concerto No. 24 in C minor, K. 491." As evidenced during the chamber music last Wednesday, Frank is a pianist of exceptional abilities. He is a sensitive interpreter, imaginative and equipped with adequate resources to make his impressions of whatever he plays abundantly clear. There was an exquisite rapport between Mr. Munch and the soloist in the gracious larghetto, one of the loveliest movements Mozart ever wrote. Mr. Frank played with consistently fine tone, phrasing with elegance and offering a truly eloquent performance in which he had the fullest orchestral collaboration.

Mozart's "Litaniae de Venerabili Altaris Sacramento" was given its first performance at a Berkshire Music Festival. The soloists were Margaret Kalil, soprano; Louise Parker, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Peter Sliker, bass. As noted, Hugh Ross had prepared the Festival Chorus and he conducted the performance.

Electrifying Work

Only four litanies by Mozart have survived. This litanae heard tonight was the second of the two sacramental litanies. It is a broad, electrifying work in which Mozart handles his instrumental and vocal resources with exciting results. For example, the tremendum utilizes a trombone choir and a dramatic violin accompaniment. The "Pignus" is a remarkable double fugue, instrumentally conceived. There were ornate and expressive solos hich each singer handled with taste and thorough understanding of the Mozart idiom.

The Festival Chrous is one of the best of recent years. They sang with well-balanced tone, clarity of phrase and wide variety of tonal color. Of the soloists Miss Kalil and Mr. McCollum most nearly met the vocal and technical requirements of the difficult music.

Mr. Ross conducted with Elan, holding his vocal and instrumental resources together in masterful manner. It was the kind of a performance one would like to hear again.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

JUL 16 1960

TANGLEWOOD CONCERT IS GIVEN PRAISE

Boston Symphony Orchestra Presents Program of Mozart

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Berkshire County offered its finest weather for the opening of the week-end concerts at Tanglewood devoted to the music of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart. It is reported that 3496 people were inattendance, but we think there were many more.

"Enchanting Melodies"

During this Mozart week end we shall hear some of the choicest examples of the works of the Salzburg master. Friday night we were enveloped in enchanting melodies and listened to performances as fine as we have ever heard from the Boston Symphony and conductor Charles Munch. The audience was entirely attentive and the applause was enthusiastic and prolonged after each work.

Munch chose to present such choice works as the "Serenade No. 6 in D minor" K 239; the lovely "Sinfonia Concertante, for oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon" K 297B; the "Divertimento in D major for strings" K 136 and the eloquent "Jupiter" symphony.

The serenade is scored for two groups, the first consisting of two solo violins, viola and bass; the second, a larger string body, with drums. Thus it is, as far as the distribution of instruments is concerned, the traditional concerto grosso. The group, with drums, joins them to complete each phrase. The larger group is never heard alone. This is a charming work, graceful and filled with melody. Munch, who is conducting the three Mozart concerts, provided a sensitive, finely proportioned performance.

"Brilliant" Performance

The Sinfonia Concertante in E flat was given a brilliant performance with the assistance of four virtuosi as soloists, Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn and Sherman Walt, bassoon. The work is symphonic in its scope and range of development. The quartet is a unified group rather than a succession of soloists. In fact, only in the adagio does each soloist have his extended phrase. With such soloists, these solo segments were magnificently uttered. The ensemble was well-night flawless. The work is heard but seldom, but when performed as it was Friday one realizes that only the finest instrumental resources can do it justice.

The "Divertimento in D major for strings" is the first of three which Mozart wrote for this combination. The performance was a striking example of the wondrous beauty of the orchestra's strings.

Charles Munch has a way with the Mozart symphonies. Friday night he chose to bring us the serene and beautiful "Symphony No. 41 in C major," familiarly known as the "Jupiter."

From the introduction to the first movement to the final glittering allegro, the Boston Symphony instrumentalists and Charles Munch were in complete accord. One could not miss the depth of feeling, the swift changes of mood or the splendor of the imagination which fused them into so perfect a whole.

Libya in North Africa was declared an independent state by a United Nations decision on Christmas Eve, 1951. It was once an Italian colony.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 16 1960

Music Review

Mozart at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE SECOND WEEK at Tanglewood, following a tradition established by Serge Koussevitsky in 1945, is again being devoted to music of Mozart. Last night the first of the three programs began with three of the less known and specialized works, but ending with the last and great C major symphony.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH selected two D major suites for strings alone with the E flat Sinfonia Concertante, which utilizes four solo wind instruments, separating them. The Serenata Notturno (K239) is one of a vast store of works which Mozart evidently dashed off to meet certain occasions when the available personnel to execute them was either propitious or, on the contrary, limited. He could always adjust his material to the means and even could take the equivalent in music of a good basic dress and add thereto a bit of lace, a colored belt or a piece of costume jewelry and embellish it so that you would hardly know the old tune.

This Serenade may have been such a piece as he scored it for two violins, a viola and double bass as soloists but set them within the orchestra rather than place them conspicuously at the forefront. Violinists Richard Burgin and Alfred Krips, Joseph de Pasquale, viola, and double-bassist Georges Moleux were the soloists. This is one of the most enchanting of Mozart's early works. It must have pleased the local Salsburg audience immensely as there were several coarse, short allusions to episodes which had a special meaning for the home town folks which Mozart does not allow to long disturb his own aristocratic nature.

* * *

THE SINFONIA Concertante gave four wind instrument players a comparable opportunity. They were Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon. They had a holiday in the final movement which is a theme with 10 connected variations, one oboe for each solo instrument and others for various combinations.

Mozart inserted a paragraph in each of these works where the orchestra was silent and allowed each quartet to play as a chamber music group. But while all these three works were replete with melody and the utilization of developments which came to the hand of the young Salsburgian as air to one's nostrils, they were essentially decorative rather than expressive.

Thus the great Jupiter symphony was the only food of the evening consisting of less frosting than cake, and Munch seemed intent on wreaking violence on it. Mozart here is deeply earnest. He may not have addressed himself to humanity in the sense that Beethoven or Brahms did later but he puts meaning in every page, not necessarily always serious or learned, for there is wit and humour even in his wizardly contrived counterpoint, but this is Mozart at his most mature.

* * *

MUNCH took a tempo at the outset which his brilliant band of musicians took in their stride but the conductor was later hoist by his own petard for he had to strain and use body English to come to some sort of an appropriate character for the more cultivated themes which follow the initial bold statement. It was much the same in the final fugue. This four note idiom was a Credo which attended Mozart throughout his life. Munch showed no perception of this feature of the music and only seemed concerned in testing the virtuosity of his men. They met it with such alert and scintillating response that the audience was moved to a tremendously spontaneous demonstration.

In the andante the orchestral tone and refinement were pure beauty. The conductor was expansive and loath to leave some of the most telling points. It was an evening of conflicting readings.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 16 1960

Tanglewood Opens Mozart Series With 3,496 in Audience

The music of Mozart was presented under the stars at Tanglewood, Lenox, last night with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra before 3,496 persons.

Serenade No. 6 in D minor, K 239; Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon, K 297 B; Divertimento in D Major for strings, K 136, and the "Jupiter" Symphony were performed.

Mr. Munch called on his first-chair players — clarinetist Gino Cioffi, oboeist Ralph Gomberg, horn player James Stagliano and bassoonist Sherman Walt for solos in the performance of the Sinfonia Concertante.

The weekend of Mozart continues this evening at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Pianist Claude Frank will be guest soloist tonight in a performance of Mozart's Piano Concerto No. 24 in C Minor, K 491.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815
JUL 18 1960

BACH, MOZART EVENTS DRAW 36,323 TOTAL

Tanglewood Will Have Annual Koussevitsky Concert Friday

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — There are interesting and gratifying statistics to offer following the two series of concerts devoted to the music of Bach and Mozart.

Over Last Year

Total attendance for the two series, six concerts, amounted to 36,323 against 31,372 for the 1959 season. Mozart won over Bach for the series with 16.184 persons attending this series against 13,747 who attended the 1959 series. There was an attendance of 5594 people this afternoon.

Saturday night continues to bring out the largest audiences. One wonders why. The Sunday afternoon concerts offer equally fine programs and people can get home during the daylight hours. However, getting in and out of Tanglewood is much more simple than it was a decade ago and night driving does not seem to be a deterrent.

Charles Munch offered a choice program Sunday afternoon and, in addition, presented a member of the orchestra as soloist in the Mozart "Violin Concerto No. 4 in D minor," K.218. He was Joseph Silverstein, born in Detroit, in 1932 and a student of such notables as Efrem Zimbalist, Joseph Gingold and Mischa Mischakoff. He joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1955. In 1959 he competed in the international competition under the patronage of Queen Elizabeth of Belgium. In this he took third place.

"Superb Collaboration"

Mr. Silverstein played the concerto with great beauty of tone, fine musicianship and unerring sense of the fitness of things. He drew a lovely tone in the andante cantabile from his Gaudagnini instrument. Mr. Munch and the orchestra provided superb collaboration. The audience was delighted and showed its pleasure in no uncertain manner. Mr. Silverstein made his first appearance with an orchestra last season when he played this same concerto with the Boston orchestra.

The program opened with an inspired performance of the "Prague" Symphony. Mr. Munch made much of the martial character of the music and made effective the exquisite andante movement. There was elegance and grace expressed through the performance.

The closing work on the program brought us another splendid symphony, namely the first of the final three great symphonic works, "Symphony No. 39, in E flat major," K.543. Once again Mr. Munch revealed his affectionate regard for Mozart and his music.

"Moments of Splendor"

There were moments of splendor in the performance, as well as moments of lightness and humor, as in the minuet and final allegro. It was no surprise when the audience rose to its feet and gave all concerned an ovation. Such performances are to be cherished in the memory; they do not come too often.

The Berkshire Music Festival gets into high gear this Friday night when the full orchestra makes its first appearance here. The concert, to be conducted by Mr. Munch will be the annual memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, longtime conductor of the Boston Symphony. The program will feature Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the Faure "Requiem."

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664
JUL 24 1960

Second Thoughts On Music

Mozart Triumphs During Lenox Week-End Concerts

Boston Symphony Orchestra in Fine Form Fromm Foundation Honors Aaron Copland

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Mozart triumphed during the three week-end concerts devoted to his music. He drew 16,184 persons to Tanglewood. Charles Munch directed the three concerts which encompassed some of the choice compositions of the Salzburg master. Also during the week we heard the first of several concerts sponsored by the Fromm Foundation, devoted to contemporary music. In honor of Aaron Copland's 60th birthday the foundation engaged the able American pianist, William Masselos to play Mr. Copland's Piano Sonata, Piano Variations and Piano Fantasy. Mr. Copland is director of the Berkshire Music Center and probably the best known of the contemporary American composers. A large and predominately youthful audience was on hand to hear these works played as well as they probably ever will be.

Adds to Laurels

Claude Frank who had been heard with pleasure during a chamber music concert, added to his laurels when he appeared with Mr. Munch and the orchestra ensemble in the Mozart Piano Concerto K. 491.

In this work he again revealed his fine equipment and his sensitive and knowing approach to the music of Mozart. Here is a young pianist who should be heard in Springfield. This same program offered the delightful "Eine Kleine Nacht Musik" and the seldom heard second Sacremental "Litanae" in which the Festival Chorus sang with fine balance, poise and tone. The soloists did little to enhance the music. Another fine soloist was the Boston orchestra's own Joseph Silverstein, who won third place in the violin contest sponsored by Queen Elisabeth of Belgium.

Young Mr. Silverstein played the lovely Violin Concerto in K. 218. He revealed those solid characteristics upon which fine violin playing is based. His technical equipment was admirable and his sense of style impeccable. One of our favorite works is the Sinfonia Concertante for clarinet, bassoon, horn and bass and ensemble. With such virtuosi as Messers Gomberg, Cioffi, Walt and Stagliano as soloists playing with such a close knit ensemble as the members of the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch provided a thoroughly rewarding performance. Mr. Munch was equally successful in his readings of Mozart's "Jupiter," "Prague," and Symphony No. 39.

Turning again to Claude Frank, who was star of the chamber music concert, the young pianist provided a splendid performance of the two movement Piano Sonata No. 111 by Beethoven. It was a spacious, tense and deeply felt interpretation which only a pianist of first caliber, imagination and temperament could have provided in the too seldom heard Mozart Piano Quartets, which he played with the Bel Arte Trio, composed of Ruth Posselt, Samuel Mayer and Joseph De Pasquale.

Real Service

In asking William Masseles to undertake the task of playing three piano works by Aaron Copland, the Fromm Foundation did a large audience a real service. [illegible] works show the [illegible] work in the 30's, [illegible] and the 50's. Mr. Copland, who lectures very well, spoke briefly noting that the contemporary composer writes for the contemporary piano, not the piano of Chopin. Today's piano has a brilliance, a hardness and metallic possibilities which the older pianos never had. During the evening it was revealed that Mr. Copland had used all these contemporary piano characteristics to the limit. His Piano Fantasy lasted 30 minutes without pause and was written in the composer's own 12 tone style. The piano sonata was the most listenable of the three for it had a considerable range of thematic material and considerable contrast. The Variations were angular and for the most part unpleasant. However, it was not until the middle of the 30 minute Fantasy, which closed the program, that we saw any persons leaving the theater.

We heard the first public efforts of the Opera Department the other day. Boris Goldovsky, director, has reason to be proud of the 20 young singers in the department. We heard some lovely voices and one tenor who was extraordinary. His name is George Shirley.

The young singers sang scenes from such operas as "Don Giovanni," "Cosi Fan Tutti," "Rigoletto," "Don Pasquale," "Faust," "La Boheme" and "Carmen." They sang on a bare stage, wearing their usual street clothes. Thus, one could listen intently to the voices and admire the skill with which Dr. Goldovsky had trained them in the art of pantomime. It needed only a little imagination to "dress" the stage with scenery and the singers in appropriate costumes.

Monday night the department will offer full scale productions of a number of scenes and one act operas including "Captain Lovelock" by John Duke, known to Springfield listeners as it was done last season by members of the Tuesday Morning Music Club. Dr Goldovsky told us it would be a long program, but we believe it will be a most interesting one. Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited to attend the affair.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267
JUL 18 1960

Tanglewood's Mozart Weekend

Claude Frank in Performance At Music Shed in Berkshires

By Brockman Morris

The second weekend of Berkshire Music Festival concerts at Tanglewood consisted of music by Mozart performed with éclat by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Drawing larger audiences than the first weekend, the festival proved a worthy destination for those who traveled many miles to the orchestra's lakeside summer home.

The concert on Friday evening began with the short Serenata "Notturna," admirably conducted by Dr. Munch with high regard for clarity in the give and take between the solo group and the larger ensemble. But the more striking of the two selections in the first half of the program was the second: Sinfonia Concertante, K. 297.

Therein featured as soloists were Ralph Gomberg, oboe; Gino Cioffi, clarinet; James Stagliano, horn, and Sherman Walt, bassoon. Each soloist demonstrated the depth of his ability by giving an outstanding performance at no sacrifice to his unity with the remainder of the quartet. Blend and interplay were accomplished with precision, and the extended phrases for the individual instruments were excellently played. Particular attention, however, ought to be drawn to Mr. Gomberg, whose handling of the oboe part was especially fine.

* * *

The nature of the Divertimento in D major for Strings, K. 136, enjoined Dr. Munch to traverse it with more buoyancy than he did, composed as it was by a very young Mozart and more dependent on charming simplicity than on its technical aspects. Yet enough of its simple beauties were brought out in the overly elegant presentation that rendered it pleasant to listen to.

The "Jupiter," however, was a triumph. Embodying a fine understanding of the manifold melodic richness and consummate technical skill by which Mozart expressed his greatness in maturity, the conductor made this the finest offering of the evening.

The Saturday night concert featured three major works. "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" opened the program on a note of superb performance, with Dr. Munch's treatment of the first and last movements being especially simple in their dignity and grace.

Claude Franck was the soloist for the Piano Concerto No. 24 in C minor, K. 491. A pianist of well-defined and mature technique, he offered an interpretation that was dynamic in a highly individual pacing that gave certain passages a somewhat contemporary sound. He colored the traditional with a novelty that did not distract.

* * *

The last half of the program was devoted to the "Litaniae de Venerabili Altaris Sacramento," given a successful reading under the baton of Hugh Ross. Conducting the orchestra and Festival Chorus, Mr. Ross presented as soloists Margaret Kalil, soprano; Louise Parker, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and Peter Sliker, bass.

The burden of solo work was carried by the soprano. Miss Kalil was worthy of the attention she thus received, her expressive voice capable of reaching both of its extremities with no thinning of quality while maintaining a vibrant richness. The chorus also rose powerfully to the occasion, proving itself as consistent in softness as in loudness.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657
JUL 18 1960

Devotees of Mozart Rally at Tanglewood

One would expect the Boston Symphony Orchestra to do a superb rendition of such a familiar work as Mozart's "Prague Symphony," but the applause that greeted Sunday's rendition in the final all-Mozart program of the Tanglewood season indicated a better than usual performance of this familiar work.

There was pure poetry in Charles Munch's sensitive direction of this number as well as the great E flat Symphony and the Violin Concerto No. 4 in D major in which Joseph Silverstein, one of the orchestra's own violinists as soloist made musical magic with his bow, striking clear, sweet notes in the upper register parts and never wavering in pitch on the many swift passages that showed his technical mastery of his instrument. The applause of fellow members of the string section was a tribute to his artistic performance, and the audience recalled him again and again.

* * *

MOZART'S music was written for a small orchestra and only about half the full membership was required for this weekend's programs. The new acoustic canopy, visually effective in its maroon and dark gray colors with the orchestra all in white, projected the sound beautifully, but the competition of birds in the leaves was distracting to say the least, in these soft-toned numbers. I have noticed birds in the upper framework of the shell in previous years, and I think the cruelty of their distraction of 6,000 people from Mozart's gentle music outweighs the possible cruelty of a fire hose that might oust those birds from their favored perch some morning, perhaps, when no audience would be present in the afternoon or evening.

* * *

THE PRINCIPAL work of the afternoon was the famous E flat major Symphony, K. 543, the first of Mozart's superlative last three symphonies. This listener could find no fault with Dr. Munch's interpretation of any of the four movements. The outstanding features of this performance were the clean, sharp entrances of all component sections of the orchestra, and the unison of the violins which sang as a single instrument. The most delicate — and always sensitive and graceful — movement of Dr. Munch's hand or baton brought instantaneous and perfectly attuned response.

Little wonder that reviewers of the orchestra's performances on its recently concluded Far Eastern tour rated it still the world's outstanding orchestra.

* * *

WITH THE select Mozart program and the orchestra of limited size, I didn't expect to find much of a crowd, but almost every seat was occupied and I never have seen more people occupying the benches outside the shed or spread out on the lawn, though there still was abundant parking space.

Next Friday, Saturday and Sunday the full orchestra will perform, and we are promised something special in the young violin soloist, Jaime Laredo who will be heard Sunday in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto.

—T.L.H.

ALBANY, N.Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
D. 88,739

JUL 18 1960

Tanglewood Applauds

Mozart Weekend Ends Successfully

By PETER B. TAUB
Knickerbocker News Staff Writer

Tanglewood's all-Mozart weekend ended yesterday with Charles Munch leading the Boston Symphony Orchestra through the 38th and 39th symphonies and the violin Concerto No. 4 before a large and approving audience in the Music Shed.

Pleasing as it was, yesterday's concert is not apt to go down as among the most satisfying of this year's Berkshire Music Festival. For one thing, Dr. Munch's choice of the Symphony No. 38 left something to be desired. This symphony, which thematically is rather formless, perhaps can be justified on the same program with the 39th and 40th. Taken together, as they were in last year's Mozart weekend, the three works complement one another and indicate the development of the composer's symphonic technique.

In itself, though, the 38th does not have a great deal to recommend it. There are no dominant themes, the second movement is tedious and ends on a somewhat precious note and the symphony in general is rather inconsistent. It is distinguished chiefly by some notable flute work in the (there is no minuet in the 38th).

39th More Vigorous

Unlike the 38th, the 39th has a definite air of authority about it, and it is a far more vigorous and appealing work. In it Mozart proves he was capable of writing fervent, moving and uplifting music, not just sprightly, dainty little airs. The 39th received an exciting treatment yesterday.

Joseph Silverstein, a 28-year-old member of the orchestra, was the soloist in the violin Concerto. He approached his assignment with a sort of cool detachment that did not make for the most inspired performance. Technically, Mr. Silverstein could not be faulted, but he failed to inject very much of his own feelings into his playing.

On His Own

Possibly because he seems to be more truly on his own and the chances of error seem greater, a violinist somehow comamnds much more sympathy from an audience than a piano soloist does. One felt a real sense of relief when the orchestra rejoined Mr. Silverstein after he had successfully negotiated a three-minute solo in the opening movement. No doubt we shall hear more of Mr. Silverstein as the years go by, but at the moment he definitely gives the impression of being a member of an orchestra, which he is, rather than a true concert violinist.

The only thing that really marred his performance was the insistent chirping of an impolite bird high up in the shed. Heaven forbid that the Tanglewood birds should start picking up the bad habits of some of the paid customers.

At the risk of being accused of pomposity or—worse yet—snobbery, I must again express dismay at the vulgar costumes which some of the unwashed choose to wear to Tanglewood. One would think these men and women themselves would be embarrassed to dress the way they do. But since they obviously are not, the management should insist on some standards of propriety, especially on shorts. Otherwise, Tanglewood will soon become simply a Coney Island with music.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON,
Mass.
Circ. 12,847

JUL 19 1960

Tanglewood Series Draws Second Record Audience

The second and final weekend of the Bach-Mozart concert series at Tanglewood, conducted by Charles Munch drew a second record crowd, making the total an all-time high for both weekends, an auspicious tribute to the music of these composers and to the musicianship of Dr. Munch and his chamber orchestra. A total of 16,184 Mozart devotees attended this weekend, Sunday's being 5,594, bringing the overall number to 36,323 as compared to last year's 31,372.

Sunday's agreeable but threatening weather served to enhance a fulsome program of two symphonies and one violin concerto. The "Prague" symphony, so-called because it was first performed there, is sometimes called "the symphony without a minuet, although it is not the only one of its kind composed by Mozart. Dr. Munch and his orchestra brought out all the colorful thematic invention and unique development with supreme charm and tenderness, even to the droll deliciousness of the Presto.

A member of the orchestra, Joseph Silverstein, violinist, was heard next in the familiar Concerto in D major, K. 218. Mr. Silverstein won third prize in 1959 in the International Music Competition under the patronage of Queen Elizabeth of Belgium. One of his eminent teachers was Joseph Gingold, whom most of us know as the concertmaster of the Cleveland Orchestra; the other two were Efrem Zimbalist and Mischa Michakoff. His playing reflects the soundness of his teaching and the seriousness of his study. Exact intonation carried throughout the concerto, each nuance was carefully rounded and finished, the tone warm but not overdone, the whole played with familiarity and pleasant assurance. The orchestra was a bit overbearing in spots; however, Dr. Munch kept all the performers in near perfect accord. Mr. Silverstein plays a beautiful instrument, a Guadagnini.

The first of the last three symphonies Mozart composed within seven weeks and three days marked the end of a choice program. Even to our ears, the few dissonances of the E flat, No. 39 stand out as audacious, though one is inclined to smile indulgently at the daring of this young genius. A moderate and sensitively paced reading by Dr. Munch and the orchestra brought out the inherent melodic interweavings, the artful descending sequences, the comic play of the finale and its sudden modulations of this not so familiar work. The responsive audience brought out Dr. Munch for repeated bows, as they had for Mr. Silverstein.

The coming weekend will see the Boston Symphony in toto in the Big Shed with Friday evening's concert featuring Beethoven's Eroica Symphony, Faure's Requiem in the annual Koussevitsky Memorial Concert. Saturday evening Claudio Arrau, Chilean pianist playing Beethoven's fifth piano concerto, including Cherubini's Anacreon Overture, Respighi's Fountains of Rome and Strauss' Til Eulenspigel, conducted by Pierre Monteux.

Sunday's concert will be the first Tanglewood appearance of the 19-year-old violinist, Jaime Laredo, playing the Mendelssohn violin concerto, conducted by Charles Munch.

M.deB.B.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 18 1960

Tanglewood Attendance Up, 36,323

An increase in attendance was noted at the first Tanglewood concert series this year compared with last year.

A three-concert program of Mozart starting Thursday drew a total of 36,323 persons. Last year 31,372 persons attended the first three-concert series offered.

This year's largest crowd, 7,094 came on Saturday night. Yesterday afternoon, 5,394 persons attended.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 1 8 1960

Mozart Weekend at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE SECOND week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, as usual devoted entirely to music of Mozart, was favored with ideal weather and record crowds. Saturday night attracted 7,094, and yesterday afternoon 5,500.

These first two weeks have become consistently more popular each year as the policy established by Serge Koussevitzky has been adhered to of playing Bach one week and Mozart the following. Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, chose two of the last symphonies for yesterday's program, two that he has played numerous times during his tenure but which never lose their freshness and appeal. He was in an expansive mood yesterday, and lingered over some of the more fragrant morsels as a bee resting on an especially luscious bud.

* * *

MUNCH BEGAN with the wonderful "Prague" symphony, No. 38, in D major (K504), and ended with the first of the final three, the E flat (K543). The "Prague" benefited by the leisurely pace because Munch was able to achieve it without sacrificing urgency, although the andante was slow to halting in some spots. The Boston Symphony Orchestra tone had full scope yesterday afternoon under this type of leadership, and details that are sometimes obscured under a swifter tempo were delineated with crystal clearness and sharp focus.

Such famous spots as the half-tone dissonances in the introduction of the E flat symphony were unmistakably defined. Other decorative phrases were most distinctly delineated. Munch played the "Prauge" andante with mutes, a conductor's license although it is not the composer's indication.

* * *

BOTH SYMPHONIES start with extended, slow introductions. Munch proceeded into the main movements in both cases with moderation, both in speed and in dynamics. The stronger occasional accents which Mozart wrote within quiet paragraphs were kept in character and perspective with unusually appropriate vision.

The soloist of the afternoon was Joseph Silverstein, a 28-year-old member of the orchestra's violin section and recently top American, although not first-place winner, of Queen Elizabeth competition in Brussels. Silverstein's playing is distinguished by a dolcissimo attribute. He has a tone of wonderfully sweet and endearing resonance fingers and bow of unsurpassed competence.

He plays with a nonchalant mastery of the instrument and he gave the three movements an explicit style marked by refinement and grace. The andante cantabile was of exquisite poignancy and the cadenza, of his own device, was both ingenious in conception and, by unusual understatement, most effective.

Joseph Silverstein

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT the music provoked several problems, caused by those qualities of Mozart which also make him one of the "immortals." If one is content to assign him his place as classic, that is that. But when one becomes aware that this man was far in advance of his time, and, in fact, has never been really outdistanced, the qualities of his writing remain permanent marvels.

The "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" is transparent enough, but the C minor piano concerto (K491) and the "Litaniae de Venerabili Altaris Sacremento" (K243) continually reveal fresh details to all but the most assiduous scholars, and become increasingly interesting subjects of admiration and wonder.

Mozart is difficult to catalogue. He always kept overstepping the bounds of one category or fusing two. For instance, the Nachtmusik is both chamber music or orchestral music, with double bass. It hardly warrants using a large contemporary orchestra with an eight-man bass section, but in the reduced ensemble and the distribution Munch had at his disposal Saturday night, he had a malleable group and the performance was deeply gratifying. There was a happy compromise between relaxation and stimulation.

* * *

THE INTRODUCTION to the C minor concerto is one of the longest Mozart wrote for any of his concerti. It has substance and dimensions of its own which lead an audience to expect something of commensurate grandeur when the piano enters. This expectation is not fulfilled. Mozart was writing at this time for the pianoforte and no longer the harpsichord, and this concerto was intended for a broader public than the intimate coteries feudal princes and ecclesiastical dignitaries usually invited.

Pianist Claude Frank repeated all the fine pianistic attributes that won him such an ovation on his appearance a few nights previously. His playing had power and aggressive bounce. The central larghetto is a simple folk tune that Frank played with moving tranquillity.

* * *

MOZART overstepped the usual accompanying role of the orchestra in this concerto, and gave it more importance than was the custom of the day just as he overstepped the usual devotional character of church music in the "Litanize" which closed the program.

Mozart gives the tenor and the soprano soloists—John McCollum and Margaret Kalil—arias with coloratura passages to please the most extrovert vocalists. There are many details in which solemnity is not the keystone of the arch and in which a spirit of supplication is buried far under musical exuberance.

Hugh Ross conducted the Festival chorus and the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the four soloists, of whom Louise Parker was the contralto and Peter Sliker, bass. These latter, unfortunately, have only minor opportunities. Ross gave the Litany vitality, and the chorus sang for him with tonal glow and youthful incisiveness.

In the choruses an organ was used to lend additional support, especially in the formidable "Tremendum" and the vigorous fugal "Pignus," in which Mozart projects his pledge with vehemence and sincerity.

Lowell, Mass. Sun, 23 July 1960

Music

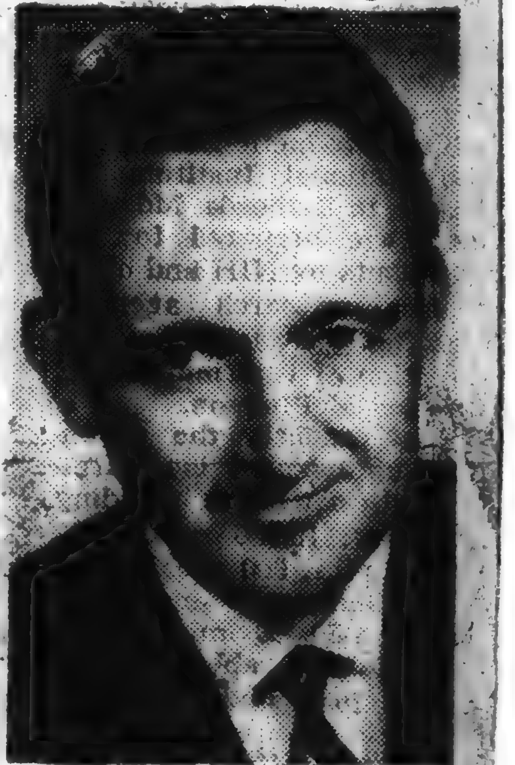
Berkshire Festival Features Silverstein

By Alfred Burke

LOWELL—The past week-end at the Berkshire Music festival was highlighted by an all-Mozart program that called on the combined musical excellence of Dr. Charles Munch, a brilliant young member of the orchestra's string section, violinist Joseph Silversmith, who played the Concerto K. 218, and the entire instrumental membership of the organization.

It is quite a thing to step out of the role of sectional string man to the center of the stage, but young Mr. Silversmith was quite capable of such a transition. Whether it was sheer ability, or a feeling that the giant ensemble behind him would save the day for him, will never be known, but from the listening angle the violinist is one of the real virtuoso type artists of the day.

He was in good form throughout. He plays legato passages with color, has a sense of phrasing that is a revelation and tops this off with some exciting technical styling. He did much with the opening allegro, made the performance that was both mature and sound in its interpretive structure.



John McCollum

The orchestra supports the demands of Dr. Munch superbly during the "Prague" and rounded out the afternoon with a fine performance of the E Flat Major Symphony.

The highlights of next Saturday and Sunday will be the performance of Walter Pistin's "Symphony No. 6" and the Beethoven Symphony No. 9. With soloists, Eleanor Steber, Freda Gray-Masse, John McCollum and David Laurent. Dr. Munch will conduct Saturday and Pierre Monteux will direct on Sunday.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635

JUL 16 1960

Music: Scenes From 'Il Trovatore'

Scherman Conducts at Lewisohn Stadium

By ALLEN HUGHES

BECAUSE of the rains of Thursday, the program of scenes from Verdi's "Il Trovatore" planned for that night was presented last night in Lewisohn Stadium. Thomas Scherman conducted the Stadium Symphony, the Choral Art Society and a rather high-powered cast in the opera excerpts. The concert was dedicated to Lawrence Tibbett.

The part of Leonora was sung by Eleanor Steber and that of Azucena by Nell Rankin. Kurt Baum was Manrico, Robert Merrill the Count di Luna, and Lawrence Davidson, Ferrando.

It is a pleasure to report that this ambitious midweek enterprise [illegible] worth the effort and expense it must have cost the management. This is not meant to imply that all was in perfect order on the concert stage, but things went well enough to provide [illegible] satisfaction.

These derived principally from the seasoned professionalism of the solo artists. It is true that Miss Steber had never sung the part of Leonora previously, but she is so accustomed to learning new roles that this one obviously gave her no difficulty.

Furthermore, this one seemed to fit her voice very well, and since she was in good voice, her singing was a pleasure to the ear as well as dramatically compelling.

The intermittent unsteadiness of Miss Rankin's voice was disturbing occasionally, but she, too, achieved dramatic impact with her interpretations.

•

It is possible that Mr. Merrill's was the most consistently beautiful singing of all heard during the evening. Both Mr. Baum and Mr. Davidson were in good form, and both were confident and reassuring in their contributions.

Since Stadium concerts seldom get all the rehearsal they need, it is probably not surprising that there was sometimes less cohesion among orchestra, conductor, and soloists than one might have wished for. Less understandable was the impression one got in some of the ensembles that the performers were not always hewing strictly to the same key.

Miss Rankin, and even Miss Steber, could be heard overreaching their pitches on occasion, but this did not account for the fact that the chorus and orchestra were also at odds on intonation now and then.

•

The explanation for everybody may have been that it was difficult for the performers to hear each other well enough to adjust their pitches properly. This is a hazard of outdoor music-making. Fortunately, it was not serious enough to impair the over-all effectiveness of the evening's performance.

Eleanor Steber

Mozart at Tanglewood

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 15—Charles Munch led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an all-Mozart concert tonight to open the second week-end of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood.

A feature of the evening's music was the Sinfonia Concertante (K. 297B), which, among other things, displayed the virtuosity of four first-desk players of the Boston Symphony—Ralph Gomberg, oboist; Gino Cioffi, clarinetist; James Stagliano, horn player, and Sherman Walt, bassoonist.

Eleanor Steber Sings Role of Leonora

The combination of woodwind dexterity, Boston Symphony Orchestra string tone and Mozart proved to be highly gratifying. The Sinfonia Concertante was among the outstanding features of a concert that maintained a generally fine standard of musical achievement.

•

An exception, however, was the opening work on the program, the Serenade No. 6 (Serenata Notturna) in D (K. 239). In this piece, although the Boston Symphony strings had their customary sheen, there were moments when their playing was neither precise as to ensemble nor in tune. Fortunately, this musical fall from grace proved to be only a temporary one.

Mr. Munch gave the strings still another opportunity for display after the intermission in the Divertimento in D (K. 136). By now the players were thoroughly warmed to their work and the Divertimento was received with special enthusiasm by the audience.

A splendid, spirited performance of the "Jupiter" Symphony in C (K. 551) brought the concert to a brilliant conclusion.

•

The attendance was 3,496 as compared to 2,687 for the second Friday evening concert last year.

An audience that filled the Chamber Music Hall turned out in the afternoon to hear the second of six seminars in contemporary music being sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation.

The seminar was conducted by Luciano Berio, 35-year-old composer, who is one of Italy's leading exponents of the use of electronics in music and who this summer is guest composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center.

An introductory talk by Mr. Berio was followed by performances of three of his works, "Thema (Homage to Joyce, 1958)," "Sequenza" and "Allelujah II." Henri Pousseur's "Rimes" completed the music heard at the seminar.

JOHN BRIGGS.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635

JUL 18 1960

Music: Young Violinist

Joseph Silverstein Appears as Soloist With Boston Symphony at Tanglewood

By JOHN BRIGGS

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 17—For an orchestra violinist to work his way upward through the ranks, so to speak, by appearing as soloist with his own orchestra is an event of some rarity. This fact lent added interest to the fine performance this afternoon of Joseph Silverstein with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Mr. Silverstein was one of the four violinists trained at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia who placed among the first ten in the Brussels International Music Competition last year. He is a native of Detroit and has played in the Boston Symphony since 1955. Before that, he performed with the orchestras of Houston, Denver and Philadelphia.

•

Winning third place in the competition brought Mr. Silverstein recognition in the form of an invitation to perform as soloist during the Boston winter season in the Mozart Concerto No. 4 in D (K.218), the same work he played this afternoon.

Mr. Silverstein's playing displayed the qualities that won him recognition in Belgium. His tone is warm, ingratiating, and, if not overpowering for fire and brilliance, silk-smooth and commendably free from scrape. The accuracy of his intonation was well displayed in the cadenza of the first movement. Even more striking was his performance of the slow movement.

Mr. Silverstein is not one of those players intimidated by Mozart to the point of seeking to make their playing of his music impersonal. (As a matter of fact, a surviving tradition of Mozart's time is that he was extraordinarily exacting in matters of expression.

The final rondeau brought the concerto to a lively conclusion and left no doubt that Mr. Silverstein is among the outstanding younger violinists of our time.

Today's final concert of the all-Mozart week-end opened with a graceful, spirited performance of the "Prague" Symphony in D (K 504) and closed with the Symphony No. 39 in E Flat (K 543).

At last night's concert the pianist, Claude Frank, played the Concerto No. 24 in C minor (K. 491), the same work in which he appeared as soloist at Carnegie Hall with the orchestra last season. Mr. Frank's playing last night was up to the high standard set at his New York performance.

Another highlight was the first performance at Tanglewood of the "Litaniae de Venerabili Altaris Sacramento" (K. 243). This magnificent work benefited from the fine singing of the Festival Chorus, trained under the direction of Hugh Ross. Soloists were Margaret Kalil, soprano; Louise Parker, contralto; John McCullom, tenor, and Peter Sliker, bass. Miss Kalil and Mr. McCullom were especially striking for their fine handling of their long, taxing, florid solo passages.

A good-humored, lively performance of "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" (K. 525) opened the concert.

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.
AUG 1960

Tanglewood

Traditional Opening

Traditionally, the 23rd Berkshire Festival opened with the Bach and Mozart week ends. Charles Munch and the chamber complement of the Boston Symphony began with Bach on July 8. Untraditionally, however, they played in the Music Shed, where all concerts will be held this year. The loss of intimacy in atmosphere [illegible] in audience comfort, though some people still preferred to listen from the lawn. The move to the shed for these early concerts became inevitable. For several years almost three times as many people as the 1,200 that the theatre-concert hall will hold have turned up. The fact that the 5,000 reserved seats in the shed sold out during the Mozart week end indicated how necessary the change was. Attendance figures for the two week ends showed an increase of almost 5,000 this year for a total of 36,323.

To compensate for the spaciousness of the larger auditorium, Mr. Munch had the Music Shed stage foreshortened by a maroon shell placed within the Talbot Memorial Canopy. Acoustically, this addition enhanced the sound noticeably in making audible the harpsichord at a surprising distance.

The programs of the Bach week end included three of the four orchestral suites, two of the six Brandenburg Concertos, four solo concertos, excerpts from "The Musical Offering" and the "Art of Fugue" and Cantata No. 6. The soloists included William Kroll, violin; Seymour Lipkin, piano; and James Pappoutsakis, flute.

Of the three concerts, the Sunday afternoon matinee fared best, with Suite No. 3, Brandenburg No. 6 and No. 2, and the cantata. The Festival Chorus in its first appearance showed unusual ability and sounded better than usual. Generally speaking, Mr. Munch and the players served Bach only adequately for them.

The Mozart week end was another story. The Serenade No. 6, K.239; Sinfonia Concertante, K.297b; Divertimento, K.136; and the "Jupiter" Symphony opened the series. "Eine kleine Nachtmusik", the Piano Concerto, K.491, with Claude Frank as soloist, and the "Litaniae de Venerabili Altaris Sacramento", K.243, with the Festival Chorus under Hugh Ross's direction made up the second program. The Violin Concerto, K.218, with Joseph Silverstein, the "Prague" and the E flat major (No. 39) symphonies made up the third program. The performance of the "Litany" marked a first time in the 80-year history of the Boston Symphony.

Mr. Frank gave an articulate but not wholly communicative performance of the concerto. Mr. Silverstein quite justified his third-prize award in the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Music Competition of 1959. His tone won special admiration. The soloists in the "Litany" included Margaret Kalil, Louise Parker, John McCollum and Peter Sliker.

Of unique character was the first Fromm Music Foundation Concert, in honor of Aaron Copland in the year of his 60th birthday. William Masselos played the Piano Variations (1930), the Piano Sonata (1939-41), and the Piano Fantasy (1955-57). The chronological exposition revealed a remarkable consistency of style, of musical invention and of chordal urgency. Though the Fantasy sustains interest in a half-hour performance, it never outclasses the Variations of a quarter-century earlier. In this company the Sonata emerges less important, even repetitive.

This is music for the contemporary piano as well as for the contemporary pianist, and possibly for the contemporary audience. It reveals clearly the pre-eminence of Copland as a contemporary American composer and Mr. Masselos as his interpreter.

—Miles Kastendieck

79

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.
AUG 1960

Tanglewood

Traditional Opening

Traditionally, the 23rd Berkshire Festival opened with the Bach and Mozart week ends. Charles Munch and the chamber complement of the Boston Symphony began with Bach on July 8. Untraditionally, however, they played in the Music Shed, where all concerts will be held this [illegible] year. [illegible] little [illegible] in audience comfort, [illegible] some people still preferred to listen [illegible] the shed for these early [illegible]. For several years almost [illegible] times as many people as the 1,200 that the theatre-concert hall [illegible] hold [illegible] up. The fact that the 5,000 [illegible] the shed sold out during the Mozart week end indicated how necessary the change was. Attendance figures for the two week ends showed an increase of almost [illegible],000 this year for a total of 36,323.

To compensate for the spaciousness of the larger auditorium, Mr. Munch had the Music Shed stage foreshortened by a maroon shell placed within the Talbot Memorial Canopy. Acoustically, this addition enhanced the sound noticeably in making audible the harpsichord at a surprising distance.

The programs of the Bach week end included three of the four orchestral suites, two of the six Brandenburg Concertos, four solo concertos, excerpts from "The Musical Offering" and the "Art of Fugue" and Cantata No. [illegible]. The soloists included William Kroll, violin; Seymour Lipkin, piano; and James Pappoutsakis, flute.

Of the three concerts, the Sunday afternoon matinee fared best, with Suite No. 3, Brandenburg No. 6 and No. 2, and the cantata. The Festival Chorus in its first appearance showed [illegible] ability and sounded better than usual. Generally speaking, [illegible] Munch and the players served Bach only adequately for them.

The Mozart week end was another story. The Serenade No. 6, K.239; Sinfonia Concertante, K.297b; Divertimento, K.136; and the "Jupiter" Symphony [illegible]. "Eine kleine Nachtmusik", the Piano Concerto, K.491, with [illegible] Frank as soloist, and the "Litaniae de Venerabili Altaris Sacramento", K.243, with the Festival Chorus under Hugh Ross's direction made up the second program. The Violin Concerto, K.218, with Joseph Silverstein, the "Prague" and the E flat major (No. 39) symphonies made up the third program. The performance of the "Litany" marked a first time in the 80-year history of the Boston Symphony.

Mr. Frank gave an articulate but not wholly communicative performance of the concerto. Mr. Silverstein quite justified his third-prize award in the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Music Competition of 1959. His [illegible] won special admiration. The soloists in the "Litany" included Margaret [illegible], Louise Parker, John McCollum and Peter Sliker.

Of unique character was the first Fromm Music Foundation Concert, in honor of Aaron Copland in the year of his 60th birthday. William Masselos played the Piano Variations (1930), the Piano Sonata (1939-41), and the Piano Fantasy (1955-57). The chronological exposition revealed a remarkable consistency of style, of musical invention and of [illegible] urgency. Though the Fantasy sustains interest in a half-hour performance, it never outclasses the Variations of a quarter-century earlier. In this company the Sonata emerges less important, even repetitive.

This is music for the contemporary piano as well as for the contemporary pianist, and possibly for the contemporary audience. It also reveals clearly the pre-eminence of Copland as a contemporary American composer and Mr. Masselos as his interpreter.

—Miles Kastendieck

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635

JUL 17 1960

CONCERT PROGRAMS IN NEW YORK AND IN EAST COAST FESTIVALS

STADIUM CONCERTS
LEWISOHN STADIUM

TUESDAY, Conductor, Alfredo Antonini; Benny Goodman, clarinetist; The Benny Goodman Sextet and Trio. All concerts begin at 8:30 P.M.
Dance Overture..............Creston
Clarinet Concerto in A (K. 622)..............Mozart
Jazz selections

WEDNESDAY, Conductor, Antonini; Renato Premezzi, pianist.
Festive Overture, Op. 21 Orrego-Salas
Symphony No. 4..............Chavez
Two Cuban Dances (1st N.Y. performance) ......Alejandro Garcia Caturla
Nights in the Gardens of Spain; Three Dances from The Three-Cornered Hat..............Falla

THURSDAY, Conductor, Antonini; Mary Curtis-Verna, soprano; Jan Peerce, tenor; Robert Merrill, baritone.
Overture to La Gazza Ladra..Rossini
Ernani, involami from Ernani; Credo from Otello; Dite alla Giovine from La Traviata..............Verdi
E lucevan le stelle and O dolci mani from Tosca..............Puccini
Overture to Don Pasquale; Tombe degl'avi miei from Lucia di Lammermoor..............Donizetti
Dance of the Hours from La Gioconda Ponchielli
Nemico della patria and Vicino a te s'acqueta from Andrea Chenier Giordano

SATURDAY, Conductor, Franz Allers. Margot Moser, soprano; Morgan Stuart, tenor; Martyn Green, baritone. Gilbert and Sullivan Night: Selections from The Mikado, The Pirates of Penzance, Princess Ida, The Gondoliers, Ruddigore, H.M.S. Pinafore, Trial by Jury, The Yeomen of The Guard and Iolanthe.

GUGGENHEIM MEMORIAL CONCERTS
GOLDMAN BAND

TONIGHT, Central Park, Conductor, Richard Franko Goldman. All concerts begin at 8:30 P. M.
Grand March Prospera Asterna (1st U.S. performance) ......Ikuma Dan
Demetrios (1st performance)...Brolles
The Festival Galop (1st U.S. performance) ....Yosaku Suma
Auroa March (1st U.S. performance) Josef Kaartinen
Works by Kossakowski, Hummel, Burke, Strauss, Gershwin, E. F. Goldman and Sousa.

MONDAY, Central Park.
Works by Rossini, von Suppe, Purcell, Catel, Sacchini, Rodgers and E. F. Goldman

WEDNESDAY, Central Park.
Works by Moore, Gosse, Mendelssohn, Blacher, Bruckner, Prokofieff, Giannini, Rogers, Grieg, Grainger, Sousa and E. F. Goldman.

FRIDAY, Central Park.
English Music: Works by Elgar, Handel, Costa, Jacobs, Arnold, Vaughan Williams, Sullivan, German, Scott, Holst and Michells.

SATURDAY, Prospect Park.
Works by E. F. Goldman, Lloyd, Rossini-Britten, Rodgers, Strauss and Sousa.

EVENTS IN NEW YORK
TODAY

SEUFFERT BAND, Music Grove, Forest Park, Queens, 3 P. M. Conductor, George F. Seuffert; Louis May [illegible], trumpeter.
Works by Saint-Saens, Strauss, Kreisler, Weinberger, Rodgers, Fosse, Romberg and Sousa.

CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERT, Cafe Figaro, 186 Bleecker Street, 7:30 P. M. Seymour Wakschal, violinist; Saul Kurtz, clarinetist; Gilbert Kalish, pianist. Admission free.
Suite for violin, clarinet and piano..............Milhaud
Sonata No. 3 in E..............Bach
Habanera..............Ravel
Four Waltzes..............Brahms
Fairy Tales, Op. 132 ....Schumann

MONDAY

GUSTAV LEONHARDT, harpsichordist, Union Theological Seminary, 4:30 P. M. One of a series of lecture-recitals on music of the 17th and 18th Centuries.

OPEN SING, Gershwin Hall, Brooklyn College, 8:30 P. M. Robert Abramson will lead the Brahms Requiem.

TUESDAY

DOWNTOWN MANHATTAN CONCERT BAND, Battery Park, 12 noon. Conductor, George F. Seuffert.

CHARLOTTE GARDEN, organist. The Riverside Church, 7 P. M.

SUMMER SING, presented by the Interracial Fellowship Chorus. The Broadway Congregational Church, 8 P. M. Paula Langberg will lead Beethoven's Mass in C.

EVENINGS-BY-THE-RIVER, East River Park Amphitheatre, F. D. R. Drive south of Grand Street, 8:30 P. M. Conductor, Howard Shanet, Billie Lynn Daniel, soprano; Cortez Franklin, baritone. Soloists are winners of LENA competition. In event of rain concert will take place indoors. Admission free.
Russian and Ludmilla Overture..............Glinka
Dove sono from The Marriage of Figaro..............Mozart
Pari siamo from Rigoletto ....Verdi
Finale from Symphony No. 2..Sibelius
Barcelona Suite ....Rebekah Harkness
Selections from Porgy and Bess. Gershwin-Bennett

BARBER of SEVILLE, Opera Workshop, Public School 75, Ninety-fifth Street and West End Avenue, 8 P. M.

WEDNESDAY

JAMES B. McGREGOR, organist, St. Paul's Chapel, Broadway and Fulton Street, 12:30 P. M.

SUMMER SING, presented by the Dessoff Choirs, 130 West Fifty-sixth Street, 8 P. M. J. Merrill Knapp will lead Schubert's Mass in E flat.

THE MARRIAGE OF FIGARO, Opera Workshop, Public School 75, 8 P. M.

GIANNI SCHICCHI and PAGLIACCI, the former in English, the latter in Italian. Walt Whitman Auditorium, Brooklyn College, 8 P. M. Conductor, Anton Guadagno.

SUMMER SING, presented by the Fordham University Glee Club with the Welch Chorale. Campus Center, Fordham University, 8 P. M. James B. Welch will lead the Mozart Requiem.

SUMMER CONCERT, Eisner and Lubin Auditorium, Loeb Student Center, New York University, Washington Square South, 8:30 P. M. Conductor, Maurice Peress. Admission free.
Concerto Grosso No. 1 ......Handel
Concerto for horn and strings (1st performance) ......Howard Brofsky
Suite for strings..............James
Allegro for strings..............Amram
Divertimento for two horns and strings (K. 205)..............Mozart

[illegible], St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, 8:30 P. M. Ravina String Quartet; Ann Utrecher, flutist; Herbert LeFroia, organist; Summer Choir of St. Paul's Chapel.
Works by Buxtehude, Purcell, Badings, [illegible], Stravinsky and Hindemith.

THURSDAY

CHILDREN'S CONCERT, presented by Lower Eastside Neighborhoods Association, East River Park Amphitheatre, 10 A. M. Program by Young Audiences Inc. The Manhattan Brass Quintet.

THE RAPE OF LUCRETIA, by Benjamin Britten, presented by the Summer Opera Workshop of the Manhattan School of Music, Hubbard Auditorium, 8:15 P. M. Conductor, Peter Paul Fuchs. Admission free but tickets must be requested in advance.

JAZZ IN THE GARDEN, Museum of Modern Art, 8:30 P. M.

SATURDAY

RIGOLETTO, presented by The City Symphony of New York in concert form, Central Park Mall, 8:30 P. M. Conductor, Franz Bibo.

EVENTS OUT OF TOWN
NEW YORK
CEDARHURST PARK, L. I.

TONIGHT, 8:15 P. M. Five Towns Summer Concert. Conductor, Charles Blackman. Susan Farrington, soprano; Charles Cooke, tenor.

EAST HAMPTON, L. I.

TONIGHT, 9 P. M. Evergreen Theatre. The Ruth Walton Dancers; Abbey Lincoln, vocalist; Max Roach and Allen Eager Quintets.

STONY BROOK, L. I.

SATURDAY and NEXT SUNDAY, 8:30 P. M. Dogwood Hollow Amphitheatre. Count Basie and his band with Joe Williams, vocalist.

BEAR MOUNTAIN
Empire State Music Festival

TONIGHT, TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M. Anthony Wayne Recreation Area, Harriman State Park. New York City Ballet.

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M. Peter Ibbetson by Deems Taylor. Conductor, Wilfrid Pelletier. Licia Albanese, soprano; Charles K. L. Davis, tenor; Peter van Ginkel, baritone.

SATURDAY, 8:30 Empire State Festival Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Jose Iturbi. Amparo Iturbi, pianist; Claramae Turner, contralto.
Mediterranean Sketches......Magenti
Pastoral (1st U. S. performance) ......Vincente Asencio
Nights in the Gardens of Spain; El Amor Brujo..............Falla
Cancion Triste (1st U. S. performance) ......Francisco Ros
Rapsodia Espanola..............Albeniz

TUXEDO

TODAY, 3:30 P. M. St. John Terrell's Music Circus, Sterling Forest Gardens. Ahmad Jamal, pianist.

FRIDAY, 9 P. M. The Modern Jazz Quartet. Additional performances Saturday at 8:30 and 9 P. M. and next Sunday at 8:30. [illegible]

LINWOOD

TONIGHT, 8:30 P. M. Round Garden of the Linwood Music School, York-Pavilion Road. Lecture-recital by Aksel Schiotz, baritone.

LONG LAKE

TODAY, 3 P. M. Town Hall. Stonegate Music and Arts Camp Orchestra. Conductor, Richard Karp.
Works by Strauss, Smetana, Mendelssohn and Tchaikovsky.

WOODSTOCK

TODAY, 3 P. M. Maverick Concert Hall. Christine Nazzi, flutist; Leo Rostal, 'cellist; Ilse [illegible], pianist.
Trio Sonata in D..............Leclair
Sonata da Camera..............Pierne
Sonata..............Poulenc
Aria..............Ibert
Serenade..............Gaubert

NEXT SUNDAY, 3 P. M. Renato Bonacini, violinist; Alexander Semmler, pianist.

TUPPER LAKE

MONDAY, 8 P. M. High School Auditorium. The Lake Placid Club Sinfonietta. Conductor, Paul White.

CHAUTAUQUA

TODAY, 3 P. M. Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Walter Hendl; Diana Steiner, violinist.

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M. Norton Memorial Hall. Chautauqua Opera Association. Cosi fan tutte. Conductor, Ignace Strasfogel.

TUESDAY, 8:30 P. M. Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Walter Hendl; Berl Senofsky, violinist.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M. Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Walter Hendl; Robert Spillman, pianist. Gershwin program.

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M. Norton Memorial Hall. Chautauqua Opera Association. La Traviata, Conductor, Walter Hendl.

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M. Recital by Berl Senofsky, violinist.

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Walter Hendl; Marjorie Gordon, soprano.

NEW JERSEY
WEST ORANGE

TUESDAY, 8 P. M. St. Cloud Presbyterian Church. Oratorio Society of New Jersey summer sing. Joseph Liebling will lead the Brahms Requiem.

HANOVER

WEDNESDAY, 8 P. M. Hanover Park High School. Masterwork summer sing. David Randolph will lead Bach's Christmas Oratorio.

ASBURY PARK

THURSDAY, 8:15 P. M. Convention Hall. Monmouth Opera presents The Barber of Seville.

CONNECTICUT
BLOOMFIELD

TUESDAY, 8:30 P. M. Grounds of the Connecticut General Life Insurance Company. The Hartford Festival of Music. Conductor, Vytautas Marijosius; Louise Rood, violist.
The Faithful Shepherd......Handel
Viola Concerto..............Telemann
The Cataclysm..............Miller
Italian Symphony..............Mendelssohn

WESTBROOK

TONIGHT, 8:30 P. M. Westbrook Chamber Music Festival.

NORFOLK

TUESDAY, 8 P. M. Music Shed. Yale Summer School of Music. Conductor, Jackson Wiley; Julius Baker, flutist.
Sonata for flute and piano...Poulenc
Choros No. 2..............Villa-Lobos
Grand Duo..............Schubert
Haffner Serenade for violin and orchestra..............Mozart
Suite for flute and strings..Telemann

SHARON

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M. First Church of Christ, Congregational. Fritz Magg, 'cellist.
Suite No. 2 in D minor; Suite No. 4 in E flat..............Bach

FALLS VILLAGE

TODAY, 4 P. M. Music Mountain. Berkshire Quartet. Assisting artists, Albert Sprague Coolidge, violist and Peter Rosenfeld, 'cellist.
Quartet in D minor, Op. [illegible]..............Haydn
Quartet No. 3..............Suleiman
Sextet in G..............Brahms

MASSACHUSETTS
LENOX
Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30 P. M. Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch; Joseph Silverstein, violinist.
Symphony No. 38; Violin Concerto No. 4 (K. 218); Symphony No. 39..Mozart

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M. The Theatre. Fromm Foundation Concert. William Masselos, pianist. [illegible]
Piano Fantasy; Piano Variations; Piano Sonata..............Copland

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M. The Theatre. Claudio Arrau, pianist.
Fantasy in F minor; Ballade in [illegible] minor; Scherzo in E; Sonata in B minor; Twenty-four Preludes..Chopin

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M. Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Munch. Festival Chorus, Saramae Endich, soprano; Donald Gramm, baritone.
Symphony No. 3..............Beethoven
Requiem..............Faure

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Pierre Monteux; Claudio Arrau, pianist.
Overture to Anacreon......Cherubini
Piano Concerto No. 5......Beethoven
Fountains of Rome..............Respighi
Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks..............Strauss

NEXT SUNDAY, 2:30 P. M. Music Shed. Boston Symphony. Conductor, Munch; Jaime Laredo, violinist.
Variations, Chaconne and Finale Dello Joio
Violin Concerto......Mendelssohn
Symphony No. 5..............Beethoven

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 27,809

JUL 14 1960

Laredo Soloist Tanglewood's 3rd Weekend Series

Concerts by Charles Munch and the full Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given in the Music Shed at Tanglewood Lenox, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, July 22-24.

Friday's concert, July 22, will be the Berkshire Festival's annual Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. The program will include Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the first performance at Tanglewood of Faure's "Requiem." Soprano Saramae Endich, baritone Donald Gramm and the Center's Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, will participate in the "Requiem."

Pierre Monteux will make the first of four Festival appearances on Saturday, July 23. Claudio Arrau will be soloist in a performance of Beethoven's Concerto for Piano and Orchestra, No. 5. Cherubini's "Anacreon" Overture and Respighi's "Fountains of Rome" will also be performed. The program will close with Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel."

Nineteen-year-old violin virtuoso Jaime Laredo, who won the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium Music Competition at Brussels in 1959, will make his first appearance with the Orchestra on Sunday, July 24 in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto. Sunday's concert will open with "Variations, Chaconne and Finale" by Norman dello Joio and will close with Beethoven's Symphony No. 5.

ALBANY, N.Y.
TIMES-UNION
D. 67,629 S. 118,093

JUL 19 1960

PIANIST

Claudio Arrau, world-famous Chilean pianist who will present an all-Chopin program tomorrow night at 8:30 P. M. for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center in the Theatre-Music Hall. Saturday night at 8:30 P. M. he will play the Beethoven Piano Concerto, No. 5 with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the guest conductorship of Pierre Mon-

---

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 289,111

JUL 17 1960

PIERRE MONTEUX, venerable and beloved maestro, who will make the first of four appearances as guest conductor with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival on Saturday evening at Tanglewood in Lenox.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
POST
D. 328,402 S. 262,240

JUL 21 1960

Soprano Saramae Endich will be soloist in Faure's Requiem at Berkshire Festival's Koussevitzky Memorial Concert at Tanglewood (Mass.) tomorrow.

90

THE KNICKERBOCKER NEWS

Saturday

The Week's TV Programs

Albany, N. Y., Saturday, July 30, 1960

The World's on His Strings

See Centerfold

'ETHEL MERTZ' LOVES EVERYBODY

See Page 3-B

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 25 1960

Beach Crowds Relatively Small

PITTSFIELD — Despite balmy weather, clear skies and 80-degree temperature, the crowds at the public beaches were relatively small yesterday, 2,400 at Pontoosuc and only 1,200 at Onota, usually the most populous.

The Pontoosuc gathering was apparently increased by those who wanted to hear the concert of the Turn Verein band in another in the series sponsored by the Department of Parks and Recreation.

The fact that thousands of General Electric employes are on two-week vacation and may be away from the city may have had some bearing on the slimness of the crowds, although over 10,000 were at the Tanglewood concert during the afternoon and some 1,500 at the Music Barn in Lenox during the evening.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

JUL 21 1960

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037

JUL 22 1960

JAIME LAREDO

Charles Munch will introduce the 19-year-old Bolivian violinist, Jaime Laredo, to the Berkshire Festival audience at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

For his first appearance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Laredo will perform Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto.

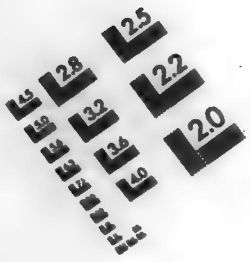
The young violinist won first prize in the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Musical Competition in May, 1959, against 37 other voilinists from 17 different countries.

REDUCTION
RATIO
19x

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

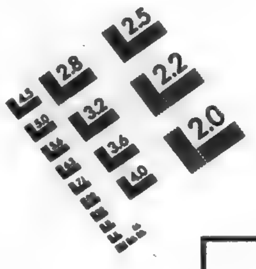
1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
3.6
2.0

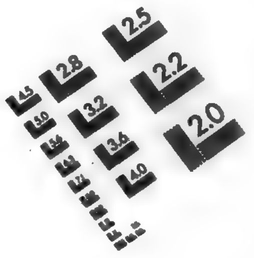
2.8
2.5
3.2
3.6
2.2
2.0

PM-MGP 13″x18″
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
3.6
4.0
2.0

2.8
2.5
3.2
3.6
2.2
2.0



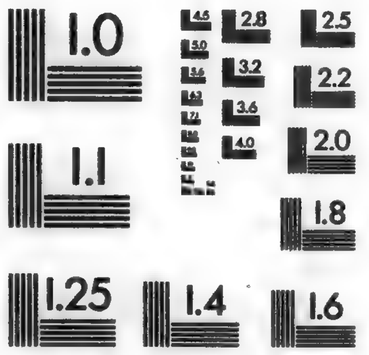
2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
3.6
4.0
2.0

2.8
2.5
3.2
3.6
2.2
2.0

200 mm

150 mm

100 mm



1.0
4.5
5.0
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
2.5
2.2
2.0
1.1
1.8
1.25
1.4
1.6

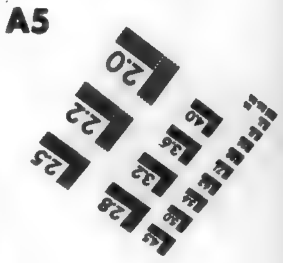
1.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

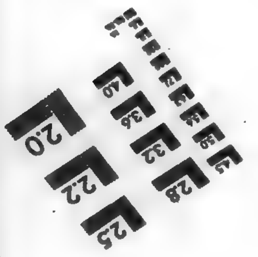
2.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

A5

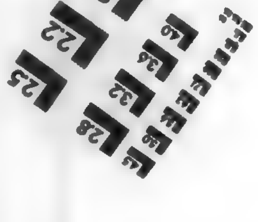


2.0
2.2
2.5
3.2
2.8

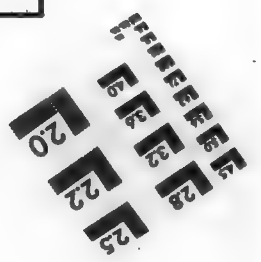


A4

A3

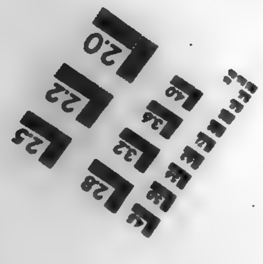


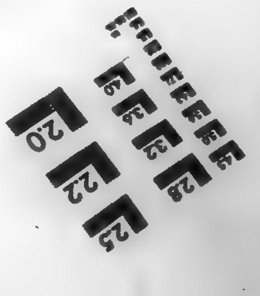
2.0
2.2
2.5
3.2
2.8



PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119





4.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

Young Violinist with a String--of Successes

By MICHAEL PILLEY

HE'S 19, JUST married, and destined, according to one critic, anyway, "to be one of the great names in violin playing."

His name is Jaime Laredo, he comes from a town in Bolivia a little smaller than Albany, and in the last week he's been fiddling away with Dr. Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Tanglewood.

What does fame in the arduous world of music do to one so young? How has this youth managed to press so much into his life?

And what kind of person is it that can walk away with the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music Award—one of the world's greatest musical prizes—at the age of 17.

Jaime—you find yourself calling his Jaime before you've been with him two minutes — is short, stocky, black-haired and smooth-complexioned. His solid shoulders and deep chest give the impression more of an operatic tenor or baritone than a violinist. He talks softly, naturally.

June 1 Wedding

Strolling round the lovely Tanglewood terrain, he and his dark-haired, diminutice wife, Ruth, look like, and talk like any other young couple at the famous music center.

"We were married in Detroit June 1," Jaime said. "I was 19 June 8. Ruth is a pianist. We were students at Curtis Institute together. We've played in concerts together. We hope we're going to be playing together for years."

Jaime is not very communicative about his music.

He says critics have been "kind" to him. He is young enough still to talk with reverence about the great violinists of today—Oistrakh, Menuhin and Francescatti are his heroes.

Where did his career begin.

"In Cochamamba, my home town in Bolivia, when I was given a violin as a Christmas gift," he says. "I was 6.

"I began to study, and my teacher suggested I should be brought to the United States for more study. I gave my first concert in San Francisco when I was 8. I had a piano accompaniment, and I played for about an hour. I can't remember what I played."

With Fiedler at 11

At 11, Jaime was playing with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra under Arthur Fiedler; at 14, he presented a recital in the Hall of the Americas of the Pan American Union in Washington, D. C.; at 15, he toured Peru, Bolivia and Puerto Rico.

At 16, he was playing with symphony orchestras all over America. And at 17, he went to Brussels for the Queen Elizabeth contest.

The smooth-skinned boy with the $40,000 Stradivarius loaned to him for the trip, was one of 37 contestants from 17 countries. They played before an awesome panel of 14 judges—including those three great violinists whom Jaime worships. Just a week short of his 18th birthday, the prize was his. In the last 12 months he has given recitals in New York and Philadelphia and Cleveland.

What now?

"After Tanglewood," said Jaine, "I go to the Ravinia Festival to play with the Chicago Orchestra. After that I shall play at the Hollywood Bowl."

It is in the fall, however, that Jaime will achieve one of his greatest ambitions. He will begin a series of concerts that will continue through next spring.

Wife to be Accompainst

And Ruth will be with him — not just as his wife but also as his accompanist.

"She's a most talented pianist," said Jaime. "She understands me. We shall tour America, Canada, Europe and South America."

He took her hand.

"We're going to travel all over the world," he said. "We're going to be playing together for years."

How about that? I asked Ruth.

"It's true," she said. "We're not going to think about children or settling down for a long time yet."

It's not all the concert stage, however.

"Musicians never stop learning," said Jaime.

"I'll be going to New York City to study for years yet!"

Jaime studies under the famous Ivan Galamian. He has made three recordings for Victor. His repertoire already includes seven concerti. He is the only violinist from South America to win a major international competition, perhaps the only South American violinist to achieve international recognition.

A Washington critic wrote of him when he was 17: "Jaime Laredo—that name is going to be one of the great names in violin playing for the generation just beginning to listen to great playing."

Live Music

You'd never think it as you walk 'round Tanglewood with him. He's quiet, unassuming, amiable. But you do notice one thing. His ear is cocked all the time to the music coming from the Shed (the Boston Symphony was rehearsing) And he and his wife talk of nothing but muisc.

Where did they go for their honeymoon? Where else but Puerto Rico—for the Pablo Casals' festival.

PORTRAIT OF THE ARTIST AS A YOUNG MAN — Bolivian violinist Laredo with the $40,00 Stradivarius he borrows for major appearances.

PAYING GUEST—Jaime buys tickets for himself and his wife to a Tanglewood concert which he attended as listener, not performer.

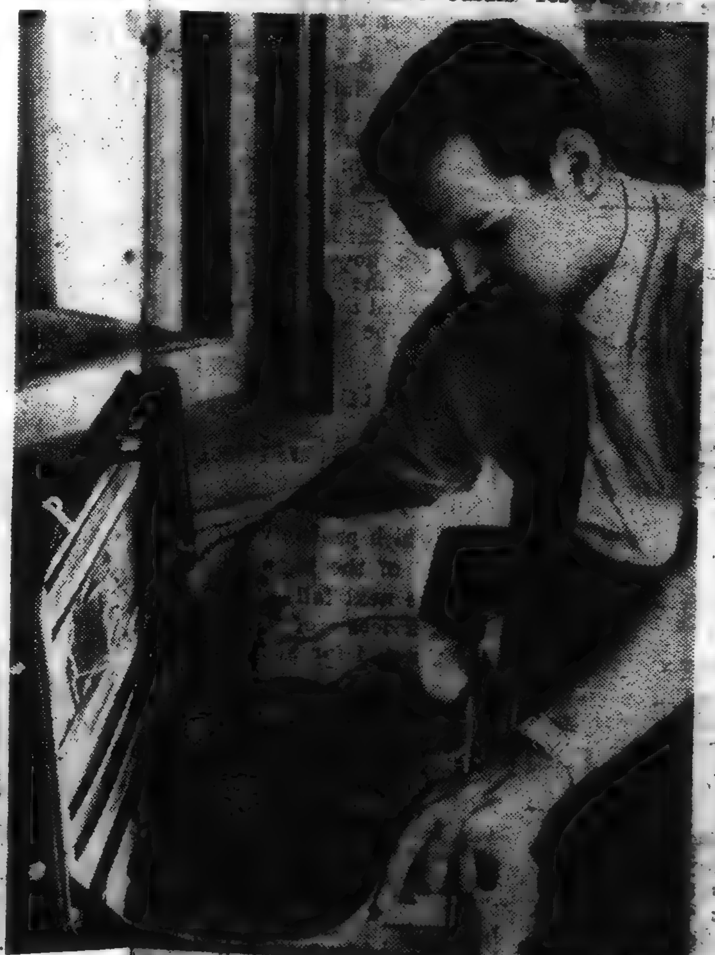
OFF THE PODIUM — Jaime chats with Boston Symphony conductor Charles Munch during a pause in rehearsal.

"Critics are kind."

"We'll tour the world."

"My wife understands me."

"I started at six."



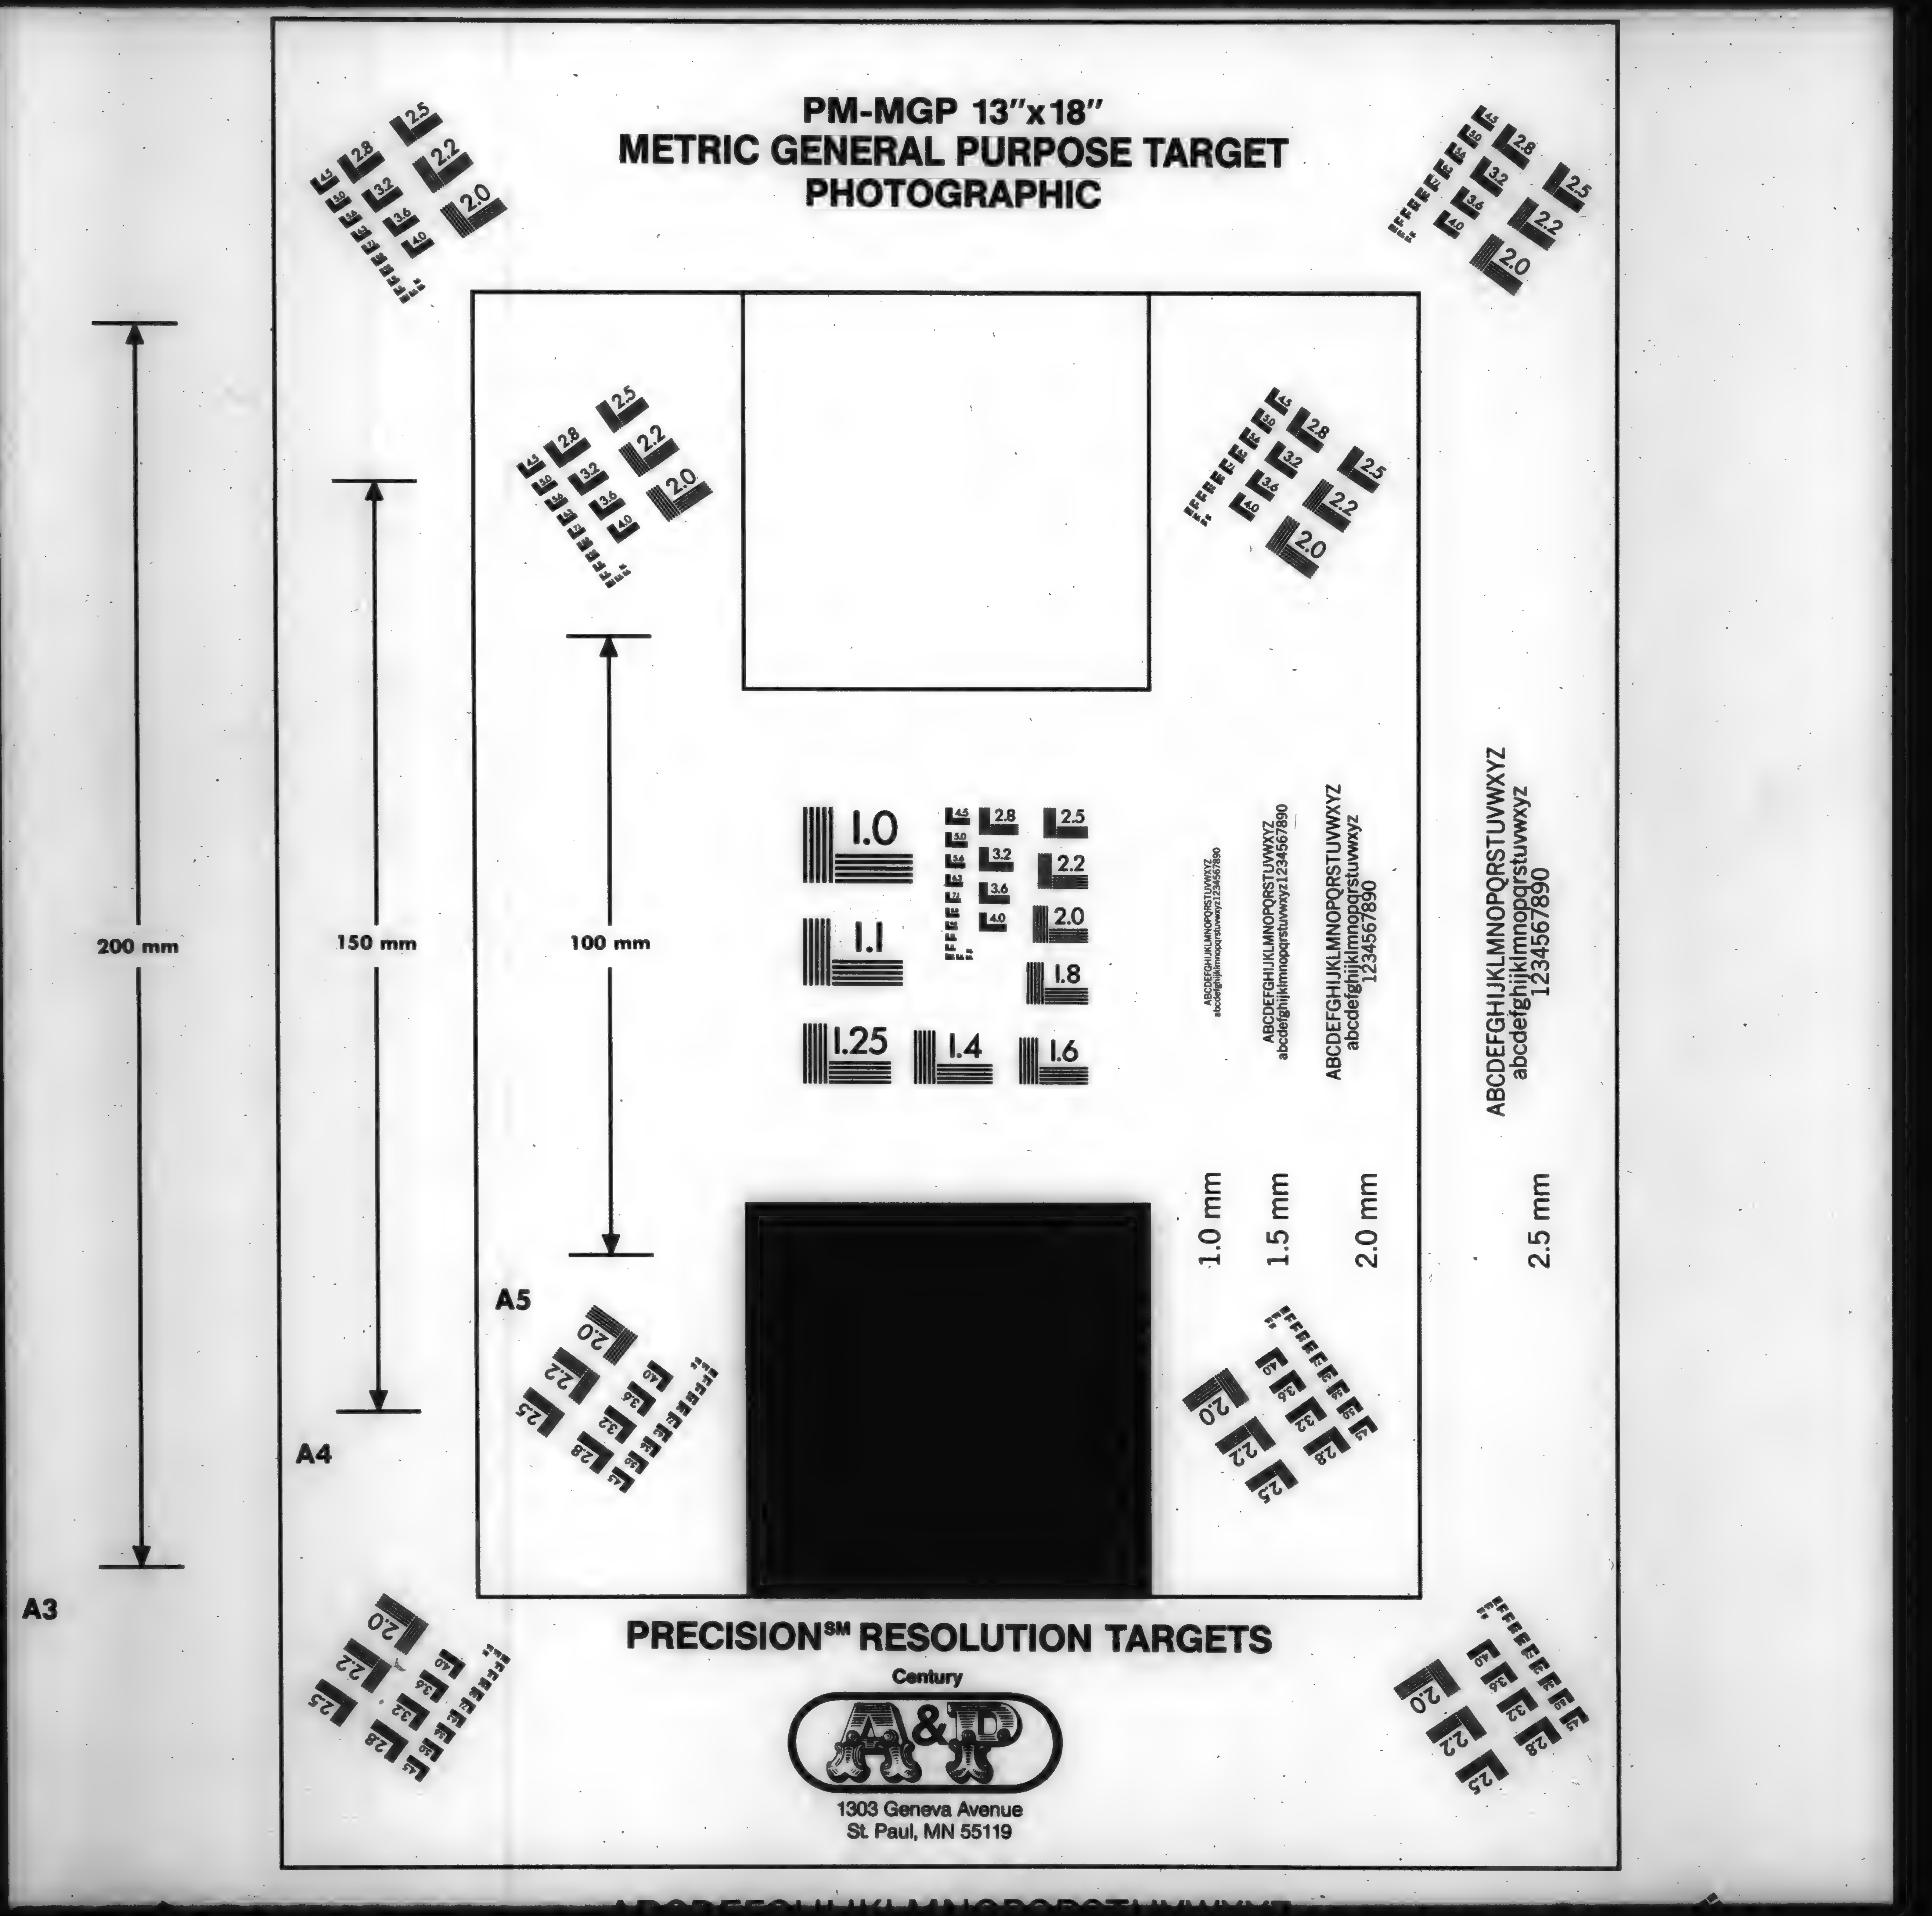
LAID TO [illegible] — Concert's [illegible] and [illegible] Stradivarius [illegible] to bed.

WITH SISTER AND BRIDE — Jaime chats with his sister Martha, left, and his wife, Ruth, before the Music Shed.

The Knickerbocker News Photos by Bob Rickey.

FIRST [illegible] Jaime and Ruth [illegible] with violinist Joseph Silverstein. When Jaime won the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium award, Mr. Silverstein placed third among the 37 competitors.

REDUCTION
RATIO
14x



PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC
200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
A5
A4
A3
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
1.0 mm
1.5 mm
2.0 mm
2.5 mm
PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS
Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

Young Violinist with a Str

By MICHAEL PILLEY

PORTRAIT OF THE ARTIST AS A YOUNG MAN — Bolivian violinist Laredo with the $40,00 Stradivarius he bor rows for major appearances.

OFF THE PODIUM — Jaime chats with Boston Symphony conductor Charles Munch during a pause in rehearsal.

HE'S 19, JUST married, and destined, according to one critic, anyway, "to be one of the great names in violin playing."

His name is Jaime Laredo, he comes from a town in Bolivia a little smaller than Albany, and in the last week he's been fiddling away with Dr. Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Tanglewood.

What does fame in the arduous world of music do to one so young? How has this youth managed to press so much into his life?

And what kind of person is it that can walk away with the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International Music Award—one of the world's greatest musical prizes—at the age of 17.

Jaime—you find yourself calling his Jaime before you've been with him two minutes — is short, stocky, black-haired and smooth-complexioned. His solid shoulders and deep chest give the impression more of an operatic tenor or baritone than a violinist. He talks softly, naturally.

June 1 Wedding

Strolling round the lovely Tanglewood terrain, he and his dark-haired, diminutice wife, Ruth, look like, and talk like any other young couple at the famous music center.

"We were married in Detroit June 1," Jaime said. "I was 19 June 8. Ruth is a pianist. We were students at Curtis Institute together. We've played in concerts together. We hope we're going to be playing together for years."

Jaime is not very communicative about his music.

He says critics have been "kind" to him. He is young enough still to talk with reverence about the great violinists of today—Oistrakh, Menuhin and Francescatti are his heroes.

Where did his career begin.

"In Cochamamba, my home town in Bolivia, when I was given a violin as a Christmas gift," he says. "I was 6.

"I began to study, and my teacher suggested I should be brought to the United States for more study. I gave my first concert in San Francisco when I was 8. I had a piano accompaniment, and I played for about an hour. I can't remember what I played."

With Fiedler at 11

At 11, Jaime was playing with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra under Arthur Fiedler; at 14, he presented a recital in the Hall of the Americas of the Pan American Union in Washington, D. C.; at 15, he toured Peru, Bolivia and Puerto Rico.

At 16, he was playing with symphony orchestras all over America. And at 17, he went to Brussels for the Queen Elizabeth contest.

The smooth-skinned boy with the $40,000 Stradivarius loaned to him for the trip, was one of 37 contestants from 17 countries. They played before an awesome panel of 14 judges—including those three great violinists whom Jaime worships. Just a week short of his 18th birthday, the prize was his. In the last 12 months he has given recitals in New York and Philadelphia and Cleveland.

What now?

"After Tanglewood," said Jaine, "I go to the Ravinia Festival to play with the Chicago Orchestra. After that I shall play at the Hollywood Bowl."

It is in the fall, however, that Jaime will achieve one of his greatest ambitions. He will begin a series of concerts that will continue through next spring.

Wife to be Accompanist

And Ruth will be with him — not just as his wife but also as his accompanist.

"She's a most talented pianist," said Jaime. "She understands me. We shall tour America, Canada, Europe and South America."

He took her hand.

"We're going to travel all over the world," he said. "We're going to be playing together for years."

How about that? I asked Ruth.

"It's true," she said. "We're not going to think about children or settling down for a long time yet."

It's not all the concert stage, however.

"Musicians never stop learning," said Jaime.

"I'll be going to New York City to study for years yet!"

Jaime studies under the famous Ivan Galamian. He has made three recordings for Victor. His repertoire already includes seven concerti. He is the only violinist from South America to win a major international competition, perhaps the only South American violinist to achieve international recognition.

A Washington critic wrote of him when he was 17: "Jaime Laredo—that name is going to be one of the great names in violin playing for the generation just beginning to listen to great playing."

Live Music

You'd never think it as you walk 'round Tanglewood with him. He's quiet, unassuming, amiable. But you do notice one thing. His ear is cocked all the time to the music coming from the Shed (the Boston Symphony was rehearsing). And he and his wife talk of nothing but muisc.

Where did they go for their honeymoon? Where else but Puerto Rico—for the Pablo Casals' festival.

WITH SISTER AND BR

PAYING GUEST—Jaime buys tickets for himself and his wife to a Tanglewood concert which he attended as listener, not performer.

"Critics are kind."

"We'll tour the world."

"My wife understands me."

"I started at six."

LAID TO REST — Concert's over, and a Stradivarius is [illegible] to bed.

FIRST AND THIRD

Mendelon first beth of Musical against 17 dif-

81

ung Violinist with a String--of Successes

By MICHAEL PILLEY

OFF THE PODIUM — Jaime chats with Boston Symphony conductor Charles Munch during a pause in rehearsal.

enough still to talk with reverence about the great violinists of today—Oistrakh, Menuhin and Francescatti are his heroes.

Where did his career begin.

"In Cochamamba, my home town in Bolivia, when I was given a violin as a Christmas gift," he says. "I was 6.

"I began to study, and my teacher suggested I should be brought to the United States for more study. I gave my first concert in San Francisco when I was 8. I had a piano accompaniment, and I played for about an hour. I can't remember what I played."

With Fiedler at 11

At 11, Jaime was playing with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra under Arthur Fiedler; at 14, he presented a recital in the Hall of the Americas of the Pan American Union in Washington, D. C.; at 15, he toured Peru, Bolivia and Puerto Rico.

At 16, he was playing with symphony orchestras all over America. And at 17, he went to Brussels for the Queen Elizabeth contest.

The smooth-skinned boy with the $40,000 Stradivarius loaned to him for the trip, was one of 37 contestants from 17 countries. They played before an awesome panel of 14 judges—including those three great violinists whom Jaime worships. Just a week short of his 18th birthday, the prize was his. In the last 12 months he has given recitals in New York and Philadelphia and Cleveland.

What now?

"After Tanglewood," said Jaine, "I go to the Ravinia Festival to play with the Chicago Orchestra. After that I shall play at the Hollywood Bowl."

It is in the fall, however, that Jaime will achieve one of his greatest ambitions. He will begin a series of concerts that will continue through next spring.

Wife to be Accompainst

And Ruth will be with him — not just as his wife but also as his accompanist.

"She's a most talented pianist," said Jaime. "She understands me. We shall tour America, Canada, Europe and South America."

He took her hand.

"We're going to travel all over the world," he said. "We're going to be playing together for years."

How about that? I asked Ruth.

"It's true," she said. "We're not going to think about chiloren or settling down for a long time yet."

It's not all the concert stage, however.

"Musicians never stop learning," said Jaime.

"I'll be going to New York City to study for years yet!"

Jaime studies under the famous Ivan Galamian. He has made three recordings for Victor. His repertoire already includes seven concerti. He is the only violinist from South America to win a major international competition, perhaps the only South American violinist to achieve international recognition.

A Washington critic wrote of him when he was 17: "Jaime Laredo—that name is going to be one of the great names in violin playing for the generation just beginning to listen to great playing."

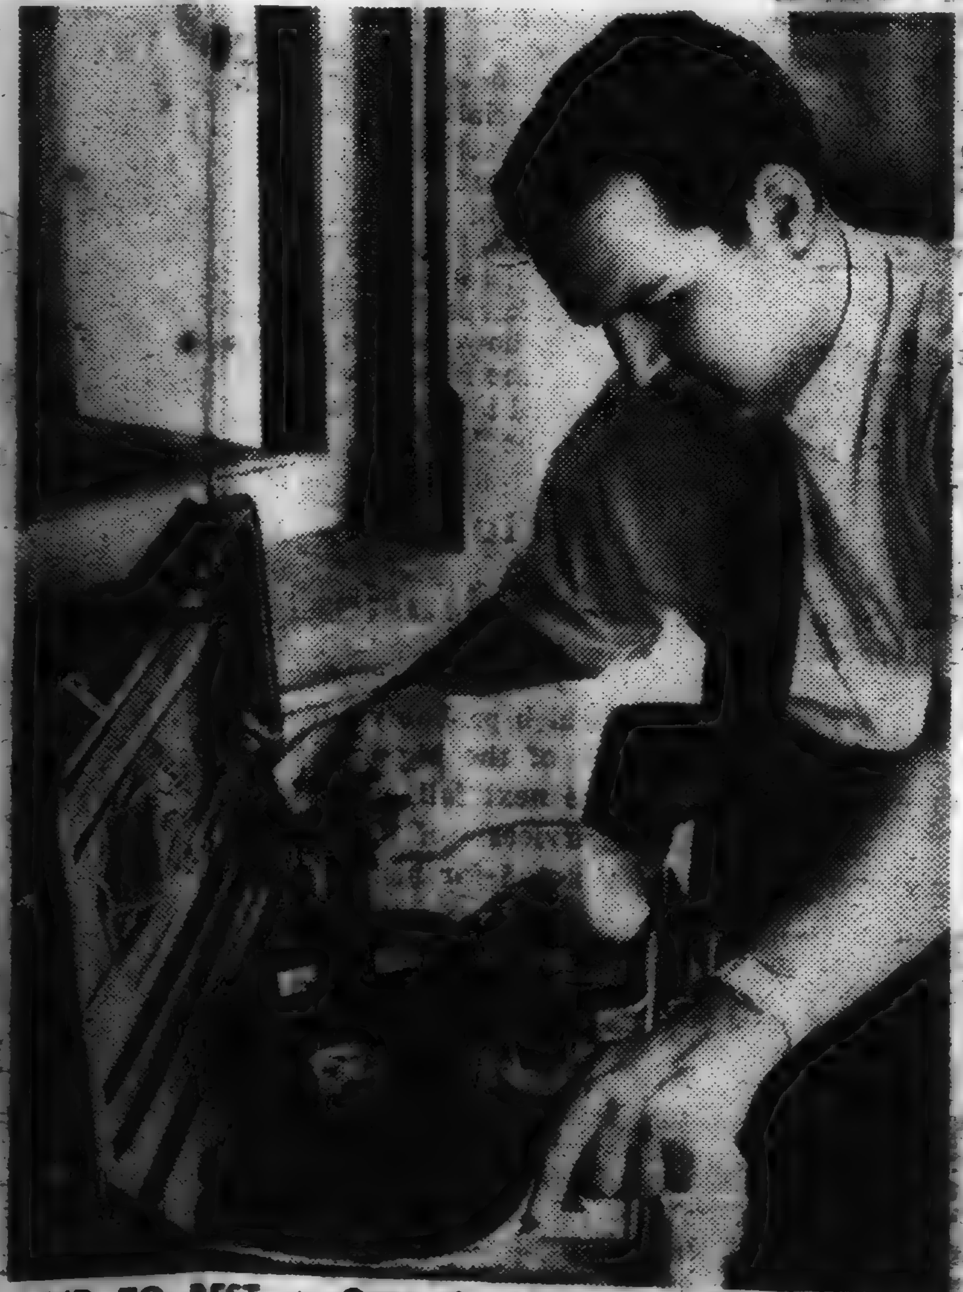
Live Music

You'd never think it as you walk 'round Tanglewood with him. He's quiet, unassuming, amiable. But you do notice one thing. His ear is cocked all the time to the music coming from the Shed (the Boston Symphony was rehearsing) And he and his wife talk of nothing but muisc.

Where did they go for their honeymoon? Where else but Puerto Rico—for the Pablo Casals' festival.

"We'll tour the world."

"I started at six."



LAID TO REST — Concert's over, and a Stradivarius is put to bed.

WITH SISTER AND BRIDE — Jaime chats with his sister Martha, left, and his wife, Ruth, before the Music Shed.

The Knickerbocker News Photos by Bob Rickey.

FIRST AND THIRD—Jaime and Ruth walk with violinist Joseph Silverstein. When Jaime won the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium award, Mr. Silverstein placed third among the 37 competitors.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

JUL 18 1960

Regional Roundup

Full Boston Symphony Will Be at Tanglewood

Entire Orchestra to Give Koussevitzky Memorial Concert Friday With Munch Conducting

On Friday will be the first of the Berkshire Festival's concerts in the Music Shed at Tanglewood by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra—the annual Koussevitzky memorial concert in honor of the orchestra's former music director under whose guidance the Berkshire Music Center was founded. Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra in Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the first performance at Tanglewood of Gabriel Faure's "Requiem."

Programs Listed

The Tanglewood programs for this week through Sunday, July 24, are as follows:

Wednesday, July 20, 8.30, Theater: Claudio Arrau, Chopin Centenary Recital.

ALL CHOPIN:
Fantasy in F minor
Ballade No. 4, F minor
Scherzo No. 4, E major
Sonata in B minor
Twenty-Four Preludes

Friday, July 22, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting.

BEETHOVEN Symphony No. 3, in E flat major, "Eroica," Op. 55
FAURE: Requiem (Festival Chorus, ENDICH, GRAMM)

Saturday, July 23, 8:30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Monteux conducting.

CHERUBINI Overture to "Anacreon"
BEETHOVEN Piano Concerto No. 5, in E flat major, "Emperor," Op. 73 (CLAUDIO ARRAU)
RESPIGHI "Fountains of Rome," Symphonic Poem
STRAUSS "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," Op. 28

Sunday, July 24, 2.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting.

DELLO JOIO Variations, Chaconne and Finale
MENDELSSOHN Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, in E minor, Op. 64 (JAIME LAREDO)
BEETHOVEN Symphony No. 5, in C minor, Op. 67

In honor of Aaron Copland's 60th birthday (born: Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 14, 1900), the American pianist William Masselos will perform three of Mr. Copland's works for the piano—the Piano Fantasy, Piano Variations, Piano Sonata—in the Tanglewood Theater tonight at 8.30. Mr. Masselos' recital, open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center and the public without charge, will be presented as part of the Fromm Music Foundation's program at the Berkshire Music Center.

In addition to this recital, Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited to seven other Berkshire Music Center activities this week at Tanglewood. On July 19, at 8.30, the Tanglewood Choir will give its first program of the summer; the Opera Department will present Opera Scenes in the Theater at 2.30 July 20, and at 3.30 there will be a lecture, "Aspects of Music," in the Chamber Music Hall. The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will perform in the Music Shed at 8.30 July 21; a seminar in contemporary music will be held in the Chamber Music Hall at 3.15 July 22, and two school events are listed for July 24: chamber music at 10 in the Chamber Music Hall and a composers' forum at 8.30 in the same hall.

* * *

U. S. where, among other things, her popularity was so great that Congress adjourned when she appeared in Washington because most of the congressmen were at her performances. Doors of the Ted Shawn Theater in Lee will open to the public at 8:15 p. m.

* * *

NEW YORK, N.Y.
POST
D. 328 402 S. 262,240

JUL 18 1960

Monteux, Arrau to Perform Beethoven 'Fifth' at Lenox

Beginning Friday the full complement of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will return to the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox (Mass.) for the first time this season. Charles Munch will lead the program, which includes Beethoven's "Eroica" and the Faure "Requiem."

Pierre Monteux will conduct Saturday night's concert with Claudio Arrau as soloist in Beethoven's Fifth Concerto, popularly known as the "Emperor." 19-year-old violinist Jaime Laredo, winner of the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium Competition at Brussels, will be soloist in the Mendelssohn Concerto Sunday afternoon, Munch conducting.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE
Monday, August 1, 1960

WAMC to Air Memorial to Koussevitzky

This year's Koussevitzky memo-ial concert, performed July 22 t Tanglewood by the Boston ymphony Orchestra, will be roadcast in its entirety at 8 to-ight on FM station WAMC 90.7 mc.).

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH will conduct the program, consisting of eethoven's "Eroica" Symphony nd the Faure "Requiem." Vocalists Saramae Endich and Donald Gramm will be soloists in the work by Faure.

At 10 WAMC will broadcast the irst program in a new series, Brian O'Doherty and the Artists." Tonight O'Doherty talks ith famous painter Josef Albers.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 16 1960

Tanglewood Music: Ludwig van Beethoven

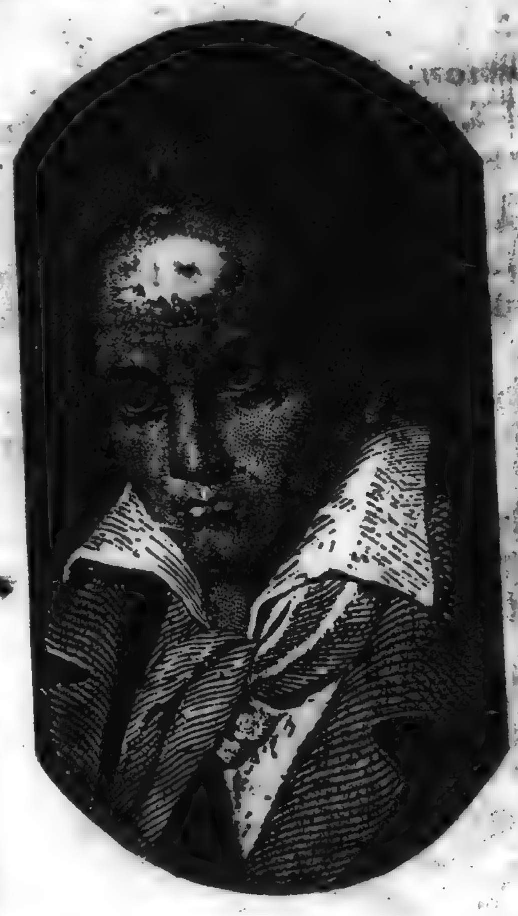
An elusive golden apple hung over the cradles of musically talented children born after the wonder boy Mozart triumphed before the courts and crowned heads of Europe. With proper training, other prodigies might follow in his footsteps.

Johann van Beethoven of Bonn, a musician at the court of the Elector of Cologne, dreamed of such a future for his son Ludwig, born in 1770. The Beethoven family needed a child prodigy: Johann's limited musical talents brought him a limited salary which barely paid for the liquor he drank, often in quantity. Other income was needed to feed his growing family.

* * *

But Ludwig van Beethoven did not follow in Mozart's footsteps. His father was not equipped to train him for a child prodigy's career, and although Ludwig was an admirable performer, he did not have that mercurial facility at the keyboard which drew applause from princes and peers.

As he grew older, however, Beethoven became successful in his own right, and largely on his own terms. There was a Promethean streak in the man's character which kept his head erect when other musicians bowed theirs with a humility befitting good courtiers. Beethoven never pandered to nobility. One summer day in 1812, he and the poet Goethe encountered royalty while they were out for a walk. Goethe stood aside and bowed his head; Beethoven kept on walking.



Beethoven

When he was 21, Beethoven left his native city of Bonn and went to Vienna. His striking, shaggy looks and somewhat uncivilized manner drew attention from the first, and his obvious musical talents soon won him friends—influential friends, such as Archduke Rudolph of Austria and Count Rasoumovsky, Russian ambassador to the Viennese court.

Genius the young musician undoubtedly had. But it did not reveal itself in a flood of brilliant works. Beethoven wrote slowly and methodically, often nursing an idea for years before he either discarded it or put it to use.

* * *

The composer's fifth and last piano concerto, which will be performed at Tanglewood July 23, received its world premiere at Vienna in 1812. Beethoven did not play the work himself but delegated the assignment to his talented pupil, Carl Czerny. The composer, who had begun to grow deaf some years before, could no longer hear well enough to appear with an ensemble in public.

Deafness was a serious blow, but not an insuperable one. If it crippled Beethoven's interpretive powers, it left his creative powers umimpaired. The compositions of his final years were his most ambitious and in many ways his greatest, though they were not immediately recognized as such. The early 19th century public responded less enthusiastically to Beethoven's ninth symphony, his "Missa Solemnis," his late piano sonatas and string quartets than it had to the composer's earlier works.

As his hearing deteriorated, Beethoven gradually withdrew from society. The artist who had always been ill at ease among people now found it impossible to tolerate the company of all but his closest friends. He had always lacked tact; now he became irritable and suspicious, quick to misunderstand what he could not hear well.

Without a wife — Beethoven never married — and without any dependable relatives, Beethoven was very much alone. He refused to live with his brother Johann, whom he despised, or with a widowed sister-in-law, whom he loathed. His nephew Karl, whom he worshipped, was the logical person to take care of the aged and ailing composer. But Karl, a selfish and spineless profligate, thought of himself first and his uncle last, and then only to rail at Beethoven's attempts to keep him out of Vienna's fleshpots.

* * *

A severe case of pneumonia, contracted in 1827, did not kill Beethoven, but he could not fight off a subsequent attack of a recurring liver ailment. His death was slow and painful, lasting almost three days. It is said that there was a thunderstorm in Vienna on the final day, and that Beethoven sat up in bed and shook his fist at the thunder just before he died.

—Walter Howar

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

JUL 19 1960

Arrau at Tanglewood

Claudio Arrau, pianist, will make two appearances in the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this week. In the Theater on Wednesday evening, July 20, at 8:30, Mr. Arrau will repeat the Chopin Centenary Recital which he gave last May at the Prague Spring Festival. For this recital, Mr. Arrau has contributed his services to benefit the Berkshire Music Center Scholarship Fund. Saturday evening, July 23, at 8:30, Mr. Arrau will be a guest of Pierre Monteux, conductor, and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 the "Emperor" Concerto.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 99,001

JUL 15 1960

Helping Make Musical History at Tanglewood

CLAUDIO ARRAU

SARAMAE ENDICH

PIERRE MONTEUX

Here are three of the galaxy of musical personalities who are helping make the 1960 Tanglewood season one of the most outstanding since the inception of the Berkshire Music Festival. Piano virtuoso Claudio Arrau will play a Chopin Centenary Recital next Wednesday, and will appear with the Boston Symphony the 23d. Saramae Endich, soprano, a former Music Center student, will be soloist in the Faure Requiem the 22d, and Pierre Monteux will conduct the orchestra the 23d, 31st, Aug. 7 and 12.

·Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON,
Mass.
Circ. 12,847

JUL 22 1960

Famous Pianist At Tanglewood

For the third of its six concerts of Chamber Music held in the Theatre concert hall last night the Berkshire Festival presented Claudio Arrau, world-famous pianist in an all-Chopin program, in honor of the 150th anniversary of the composer's birth.

It was a prodigious program, one which most artists would hesitate to undertake, not only for the technical exigencies, but for the constant demand upon one's artistic integrity.

Mr. Arrau's technique was unified, brilliant and more than adequate, but the poetry of Chopin was missing, although the Ballade in F minor, No. 4, more nearly approached the lyricism, the long singing line, the upward surge one expects to hear in this composer's works. The freely developed fourth Scherzo in E major followed the Ballade, with the Sonata in B minor, Op. 58, completing the first half. In the Sonata one is more fully aware of the prodigality of emotions, harmonic ingenuity and structural coherence which stamp Chopin as the romantic composer par excellence for piano.

The very familiar and distinctive twenty-four Preludes, a must in any student's repertoire, were unfolded in rapid succession by Mr. Arrau, after intermission, so rapidly, in fact, that hardly a breath was drawn between the closing cadence of one and the opening bars of the next. This is certainly a must, both for performer and listener, since the character and modo of each is so diverse.

Despite what must have been a discriminating audience, Mr. Arrau's interpretations seemed to please the majority; the applause was vocal and voluminous; many encore and were loath to encore and were loathe to leave.—M. deB. B.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

JUL 22 1960

Jaime Laredo, violinist, will make his debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra under Charles Munch at the Berkshire Music Festival, Tanglewood, in Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto on Sunday afternoon.

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 4,953

JUL 22 1960

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON,
Mass.
Circ. 12,847

JUL 18 1960

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, WEDNESDAY, JULY 20, 1960

Pianist Arrau Recital Set At Tanglewood Tonight

Claudio Arrau, pianist, last heard at Tanglewood in 1954, will present a Chopin centenary recital tonight at 8:30 at the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass. The centenary recital was originally given on May 25 at the Prague (Czechoslovakia) spring festival.

* * *

ARRAU IS contributing his services tonight to benefit the Berkshire Music Center scholarship fund.

Saturday evening at 8:30 Arrau will be the guest of conductor Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Beethoven's Piano Conerto number 5, the "Emperor" Concerto.

Now making his 19th consecutive tour of the United States and Canada, Arrau has been heard on every continent of the globe.

* * *

AFTER TWO New York Carnegie Hall recitals in February he flew to Europe for a month tour that included nine recitals in West Germany, three in West Berlin alone; six Scandinavian concerts plus three engagements in Paris: a public recital, a television recital and in concert with orchestra.

In mid-April Arrau was in London to make several recordings and in May, after Swiss engagements, he returned to England to perform at several festivals. On June 28 Arrau and conductor Monteux opened the Chicago Symphony Orchestra's Ravinia Festival.

* * *

FOLLOWING HIS orchestral appearance at Tanglewood this Sunday Arrau will fly to South America, where beginning July 27 he will give 17 concerts in 22 days.

Arrau's Chopin recital tonight will include the "Fantasy in F minor," "Ballade number 4, F minor," "Scherzo number 4, E major," "Sonata in B minor" and "Twenty-four Preludes."

The Saturday program will include Cherubini, "Anacreon Overture'; Beethoven "Piano Concerto number 5"; Respighi, "Fountains of Rome" and Strauss, "Till Eulenspiegel."

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 17 1960

Tanglewood Events

Today at 2.30. Music Shed: Boston Symphony Munch conducting; All-Mozart: Symphony No. 38, in D major, "Prague," K. 504; Violin Concerto No. 4, in D major, K. 218 (Silverstein); Symphony No. 39, in E flat major K. 543.

Monday, July 18, 8.30, Theater: Masselos, Fromm Foundation Program All-Copland: Piano Fantasy, Piano Variations, Sonata.

Wednesday, July 20, 8.30, Theater: Claudio Arrau, Chopin Centenary Recital. All-Chopin: Fantasy in F minor, Ballade No. 4, F minor, Scherzo No. 4, E major, Sonata in B minor, Twenty-Four Preludes.

Friday, July 22, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch Conducting Beethoven Symphony No. 3, in E flat major, "Eroica," Op. 55 Faure: Requiem (Festival Chorus, Endich, Gramm)

Saturday, July 23, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Monteux Conducting. Cherubini: Overture to "Anacreon"; Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 5 in E flat major, "Emperor," Op. 73 (Claudio Arrau) Respighi "Fountains of Rome," Symphonic Poem. Strauss "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," Op. 28.

Sunday, July 24, 2.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch Conducting Dello Joio Variations, Chaconne and Finale, Mendelssohn Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, in E minor, Op. 64 (Jaime Laredo) Beethoven Symphony No. 5, in C minor, Op. 67.

Activities of the Berkshire Music Center to which friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited:

Mon., July 18, 3.00, Theater: Fromm Foundation Concert, William Masselos in All-Copland Piano Recital.

Tues., July 19, 8.30, Theater: Tanglewood Choir.

Wed., July 20, 3.30, Theater: Berkshire Music Center Opera Scenes.

Wed., July 20, 3.30, Chamber Music Hall: Lecture, Aspects of Music.

Thurs., July 21, 8.30, Music Shed: Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

Fri., July 22, 3.15, Chamber Music Hall: Seminar on Contemporary Music.

Sunday, July 24, 10.30 a. m., Chamber Music Hall: BMC Chamber Music.

Sunday, July 24, 8.30, Chamber Music Hall: Composer's Forum.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 416,486

JUL 17 1960

The Week at Tanglewood

The first concerts by Charles Munch and the full Boston Symphony Orchestra since its return from an eight-week tour of the Far East, will be given in the 6000-seat [illegible] Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Dr. Munch has designated Friday's concert as the Berkshire Festival's [illegible] Koussevitzky Memorial [illegible] of the orchestra's former music director (1924-49) under whose guidance the Berkshire Music Center was founded in 1940.

Pierre Monteux, the revered octogenarian and a former music director of the orchestra, will make the first of four festival appearances on Saturday.

Programs for the week:

This afternoon at 2:30, Music Shed, Charles Munch conducting. Mozart: "Prague" Symphony; [illegible] Concerto in D major (K. 218), Joseph Silverstein, soloist; Symphony in E-flat (K. 543).

Monday at 8:30, Theater, Fromm Foundation Program. William Masselos will play piano music by Aaron Copland: Fantasy, Variations, Sonata.

Wednesday at 8:30, Theater, Claudio Arrau, pianist, in a Chopin Centenary program: Fantasy in F minor; Ballade No. 4, in F minor; Scherzo No. 4 in E major; Sonata in B minor; 24 Preludes.

Friday at 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Munch conducting. Koussevitzky Memorial Concert: Beethoven: "Eroica" Symphony. Faure: Requiem. Berkshire Festival Chorus, soloists: [illegible] soprano, and Donald Gramm, bass.

Saturday at 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Cherubini: Overture "Anacreon"; Beethoven: "Emperor" Piano Concerto, Claudio Arrau, soloist; Respighi: [illegible] Rome"; Strauss: "Till Eulenspiegel."

Sunday, July [illegible] at 2:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Munch conducting. Dello Joio: Variations, Chaconne and Finale; Mendelssohn: Violin Concerto in E minor, Jaime Laredo [illegible]

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 21 1960

Jaime Laredo Plays Sunday At Tanglewood

Nineteen-year-old Bolivian violinist Jaime Laredo will perform Mendelssohn's Violin Concert with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday afternoon. The concert which will begin at 2:30, will b conducted by Charles Munch.

Laredo graduated from the Cur tis Institute of Music in April o 1959, and immediately afterwar entered the Belgium Internationa Music Competition. He was award ed first prize, and became one o the concert stage's prize perform ers.

[illegible] on the program will b Variations, Chaconne and Finale by Dello Joio and Beethoven Symphony No. 5.

94

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 19 1960

Music Review

Masselos Plays Copland

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

William Masselos

A PROGRAM of Aaron Copland's piano music played by William Masselos was presented in the theater at Tanglewood last night under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation.

Copland preceded the performance of each half of the program with a few short remarks on the music. He quoted a friend who had told him that "a whole concert of your piano music is a tough evening." This did not prove true last night.

Copland, whose qualifications as a lecturer are held in esteem only second to his eminence as a composer, pointed out that the contemporary piano is not the instrument of Scarlatti or Chopin. Its percussive potential and rhythmic possibilities have increased. He might have added that, due to the intellectual curiosity, even audacity, of men such as he, the expressiveness of the instrument has been expanded beyond what one of previous generations might have dreamed.

* * *

COPLAND WAS indeed tremendously favored by having such a musician as Masselos to play his music. He was the ideal executant for this job, rather, one might say, the ideal interpreter, for Copland's music is not easy, first, to actually perform, but, more important, to give shape and inflection and meaning. It is involved, once the initial statement of each number has been exposed, and intricate and difficult to grasp.

This was the first of two public concerts the Fromm Foundation is sponsoring and this was in the nature of a birthday tribute to Copland although the anniversary, his 60th, does not arrive until November. This program showed the evolution of the dean of American composers through the 30 years of his mature development. It started with the (1930) Variations, proceeded to the Sonata (1941) and ended with the Fantasy (1957). This last, which takes 30 minutes and is played without a pause, seemed no longer than the Variations which take 11 minutes and Sonata which takes 23.

* * *

COPLAND HAS always used an economy of means which has contributed to a transparency of texture. Both the Variations and the Fantasy have massive four-note motives in stentorian seven-league strides. Masselos played with inexhaustible strength held in excellent discipline and devoid of tension. Copland employs a 12-tone method in his own adaptation. The variations are not easily discernible to an ear unfamiliar with the music and their austerity rarely relaxes.

It was thus a ray of sunshine to hear a legato passage and a lyric line early in the Sonata. Copland worked on this partially during his first year at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood. It was commissioned by Clifford Odets and the first performance, played by the composer, took place in Buenos Aires.

It has three movements and is one of his more serious works. He is a slow, careful worker, and he put some of his most earnest effort into it. Copland absorbed many influences along the route of his career: Schoenberg, Stravinsky, jazz, French impressionism, American folk-tunes, Hispanic rhythms, but he emerged on his own two legs. Some scholars like to point out the derivation of every detail of his works, but he himself has influenced more composers of our younger generation than any other American composer.

* * *

HIS ORCHESTRAL, ballet and operatic works, more widely known, are distinctive. They are also, on the whole, more accessible than this piano music, but the Sonata included a scherzo which is delicate and light, even wistful and poetic, and the final movement has a touching, elegiac ending.

The Fantasy is an intensely dramatic composition and Masselos gave it stupendous substance. The complicated rhythms Copland devises, starting back in those years of the Variations, and the compounded polytonal structure found a near-perfect collaborator in Masselos. The audience, which included the president of the Fromm Foundation himself, was insistent on showing the composer, the artist and the benefactor their all-out appreciation.

Press (e)
MIDDLETOWN, Conn.
Circ. 16,722

JUL 23 1960

Charles Munch Directs Symphony At Tanglewood

The Tanglewood Music Festival in Lenox, Mass., will present a program of Mendelssohn and Beethoven music Sunday afternoon by the Boston Symphony orchestra with Charles Munch conducting. The concert starts at 2:30 p.m. amidst the casual and relaxed setting of Tanglewood in the Berkshires.

The Tanglewood concerts are open to the public.

ALBANY, N.Y.
TIMES-UNION
D. 67,629 S. 118,093

JUL 17 1960

Boston Symphony Resumes...

The first concerts by Charles Munch and the full Boston Symphony Orchestra since its return from an 8-week tour of Formosa, Japan, the Philippines, Australia, and New Zealand, will be given at Tanglewood (Lenox, Mass.) on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, July 22-23-24.

Friday's concert, at 8:30 P. M., will be the Berkshire Festival's annual Koussevitzky Memorial Concert in honor of the orchestra's former music director (1924-49), under whose guidance the Berkshire Music Center was founded in 1940. The program will include Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the first performance at Tanglewood of Gabriel Faure's "Requiem."

Pierre Monteux, the revered octogenarian and a former music director of the orchestra, will make the first of four festival appearances at 8:30 P. M. Sunday. Claudio Arrau will be Monteux's guest in a performance of Beethoven's Concerto No. 5 for piano and orchestra. The program also includes Cherubini's "Anacreon" Overture and Respighi's "Fountains of Rome."

Nineteen-year-old Jaime Laredo, who won the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium Music Competition at Brussels in May, 1959, will make his first appearance with Munch and the Boston Symphony at 2:30 P. M., Sunday. He will be heard in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto.

This concert will open with the first Tanglewood performance of "Variations, Chaconne and Finale" by the contemporary American composer, Norman dello Joio, and will close with a performance of Beethoven's Symphony No. 5.

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 373,012

JUL 21 1960

MUSIC LOVERS WHO DIDN'T get a chance to hear the famed pianist Claudio Arrau at the Berkshire9 Festival, Tanglewood, last evening, may be lucky enough to hear him Saturday evening at Tanglewood as the guest of 85-year-old conductor Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He will present Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5, the "Emperor" Concerto.

Last night's performance of the Chopin Centenary Recital which he also gave last May at the Prague Spring Festival was his contribution to the Berkshire Music Center Scholarship Fund. Following Saturday night's appearance, Mr. Arrau will fly to South America, where he will give 17 concerts (beginning July 27) in 22 days.

UTICA, N.Y.
PRESS
D. 26,970

JUL 20 1960

Claudio Arrau Performs At Tanglewood Tonight

Lenox, Mass.—The famed pianist, Claudio Arrau, who recently performed in Rome, N.Y., will appear at 8:30 tonight in the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood here.

He will repeat the Chopin Centenary Recital he performed May 20 at The Prague, Czechoslovakia, Spring Festival. He is donating his services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center Scholarship Fund.

Arrau will appear again at 8:30 p.m. Saturday with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest conductor Pierre Monteux in a performance of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 (the "Emperor").

Other upcoming events at Tanglewood:

July 27, the Beaux Arts Trio of New York.

Aug. 3, pianist Leon Fleisher in a sonata program.

Aug. 10, the Kroll Quartet.

* * *

After his Tanglewood appearances, Arrau will fly to South America where he will give 17 concerts in 22 days. On Aug. 20, he will fly to Edinburgh, Scotland; on Aug. 30, to the Athens Festival. He will begin his European tour in early fall, and return to New York for his 20th consecutive U.S. tour opening with a recital Nov. 11 at the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

—CRB.

TROY, N.Y.
TIMES RECORD
D. 40,588

JUL 23 1960

TROY, N.Y.
RECORD
D. 6,664

JUL 23 1960

Tanglewood To Present Jaime Laredo

Tanglewood audiences will have the pleasure of hearing tomorrow the brightest young star of concerts when Charles Munch will introduce Jaime Laredo, the 19-year-old Bolivian violinist.

For his first appearance with the Boston Symphony at 2:30 p.m., Laredo will perform Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto.

Before he was five, young Laredo had learned the rudiments of music and at six he received his first violin. He made his first public appearance at eight in Sacramento, Calif., which included the Mendelssohn concerto.

Last year he won first prize in the Queen Elizabeth of Belgian International Competition. The Brussels trip was made possible by the sale of the Laredo family's baby grand piano, plus a $250 gift and a loan of a $40,000 Stradivarius.

After Brussels, Laredo returned to the United States to accept a handful of the concert engagements offered. In the fall he will begin a sold-out tour of 44 engagements on three continents.

95

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 24 1960

Violinist Laredo Performs With Boston Symphony at Tanglewood Today at 2.30

Nineteen-Year-Old Artist to Be Heard in Mendelssohn Violin Concerto; Pierre Monteux To Conduct Beethoven's Ninth Next Sunday

Jaime Laredo, 19-year-old Bolivian violinist who won the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium Music Competition at Brussels a year ago last May, will be introduced to Tanglewood audiences this afternoon. He will appear with Dr. Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto. This afternoon's program in the Music Shed begins at 2.30 and will open with the first Tanglewood performance of "Variations, Chaconne and Finale" by the contemporary American composer, Norman dello Joio. The program will close with Dr. Munch conducting the Boston Symphony in the beloved Symphony No. 5 by Beethoven.

Jaime Laredo

Violinist Laredo, after his Brussels success, returned to the United States to accept a handful of the concert engagements offered. Recitals in New York and in Philadelphia preceded his concerts with George Szell and the Cleveland Orchestra and with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra. This summer, in addition to marrying Miss Ruth Meckler of Detroit, a classmate at Curtis, Laredo will debut with the Chicago Orchestra at the Ravinia Festival and will be heard in the Hollywood Bowl in addition to his Berkshire Festival appearance. In the fall, Laredo will begin his first full season of concert engagements—a sold-out tour of 44 engagements on three continents.

Jaime Laredo was born in Cochabamba, Bolivia, on June 7, 1941 and before he was five had learned the rudiments of music. At six, he received his first violin as a Christmas gift and shortly thereafter began his studies. His first teacher advised his parents to bring him to the United States to further his studies. In 1948, he was taken to San Francisco where he studied with Antonio de Grassi and Frank Houser. He then went to Cleveland in 1953 and worked with Josef Gingold who later suggested he study with Ivan Galamian at the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia. Jaime missed the graduation exercises at Curtis because of the competition, but he received his diploma upon his return.

At the age of eight Jaime's first public appearance was a full recital in Sacramento, Cal., which included the Mendelssohn concerto. He played with the San Francisco Symphony under Arthur Fiedler, at the age of 11 during the orchestra's summer series. At 14 he presented a recital in the Hall of the Americas of the Pan American Union in Washington, D. C. and gave another concert at Severance Hall in Cleveland. In 1956, at the age of 15, Jaime made a 10 concert tour of Peru, Bolivia and Puerto Rico. Then followed engagements with the Spokane Symphony, the Akron Symphony and in January, 1959 he presented another recital in Washington. Then he entered the Brussels competition.

In the Week to Come

At Charles Munch's invitation, Pierre Monteaux will repeat at Tanglewood next Sunday (July 31, 2.30) his 85th birthday celebration performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Because of his long and close association with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, members of the orchestra asked Mr. Monteux if they might arrange a party in honor of his 85th birthday (born: April 4, 1875). Mr. Monteux answered that nothing would give him greater pleasure and he requested that the orchestra's present to him be a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony which he would conduct in Symphony Hall on April 6 for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

Soprano Eleanor Steber, contralto Freda Gray-Masse, tenor John McCollum, and bass David Laurent, who participated in the Symphony Hall performance, and the Festival Chorus (prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson) will be Mr. Monteux's guests at the Tanglewood performance. The concert will open with a performance of Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Friday and Saturday (July 29, 30; 8.30) Tanglewood concerts. The young American pianist Byron Janis will be his guest at Friday's concert in a performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3. At the same concert, Tikhon Khrennikov's Symphony No. 1 will be played for the first time at the Berkshire Festival. The program will open with "Jeu de Cartes" by Igor Stravinsky.

The orchestra's rehearsal on Saturday morning at 10 (July 30) will be opened to the public as a benefit for the orchestra's pension fund. The Festival Chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon, will participate in the Saturday night performance of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2. At this concert Doctor Munch will also conduct Symphony No. 6 by Walter Piston and Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique."

Beaux Arts Trio

"Kakadu Variations" by Beethoven, Ravel's Trio in A minor and the Trio, Op. 8 by Brahms will be performed by the Beaux Arts Trio of New York—Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano—on Wednesday (July 27; 8.30) in the Tanglewood Theater as the fourth concert of the Festival's Chamber Music Series. Hailed by Charles Munch as "worthy successors to the last great trio of Thibaud, Casals and Cortot," the Beaux Arts has performed at Tanglewood five times since its debut here in 1955.

Members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center—those whose voluntary contributions assist the work of the Center—are invited to the activities at Tanglewood this week: Opera Scenes in the Theater on Monday (July 25) at 8.30; Forum: "The Performer as Listener" at 8.30 Tuesday (July 26) in the Chamber Music Hall; Lecture: "Aspects of Music" Wednesday afternoon (July 27, 3.30); a concert by the Center's orchestra in the Shed on Thursday night (July 28) at 8.30. On Friday (July 29) at 4.15 members of the Friends are invited to a Seminar in Contemporary Music when the contemporary American composer, Elliott Carter, will make introductory remarks followed by performance of his works. Two events will be opened to the Friends on Sunday (July 31): a chamber music program at 10 a. m. in the Chamber Music Hall, and, in the same hall at 8.30 p. m., the Composer's Forum.

To Appear in Music Festival Concerts at Tanglewood

JOHN McCOLLUM

JAIME LAREDO

Jaime Laredo, 19-year-old Bolivian violinist, shown here with his violin collection, makes his Tanglewood debut this afternoon in Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto. John McCollum, tenor, and Eleanor Steber, soprano, will be among the soloists at Tanglewood one week from today (July 31) when Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

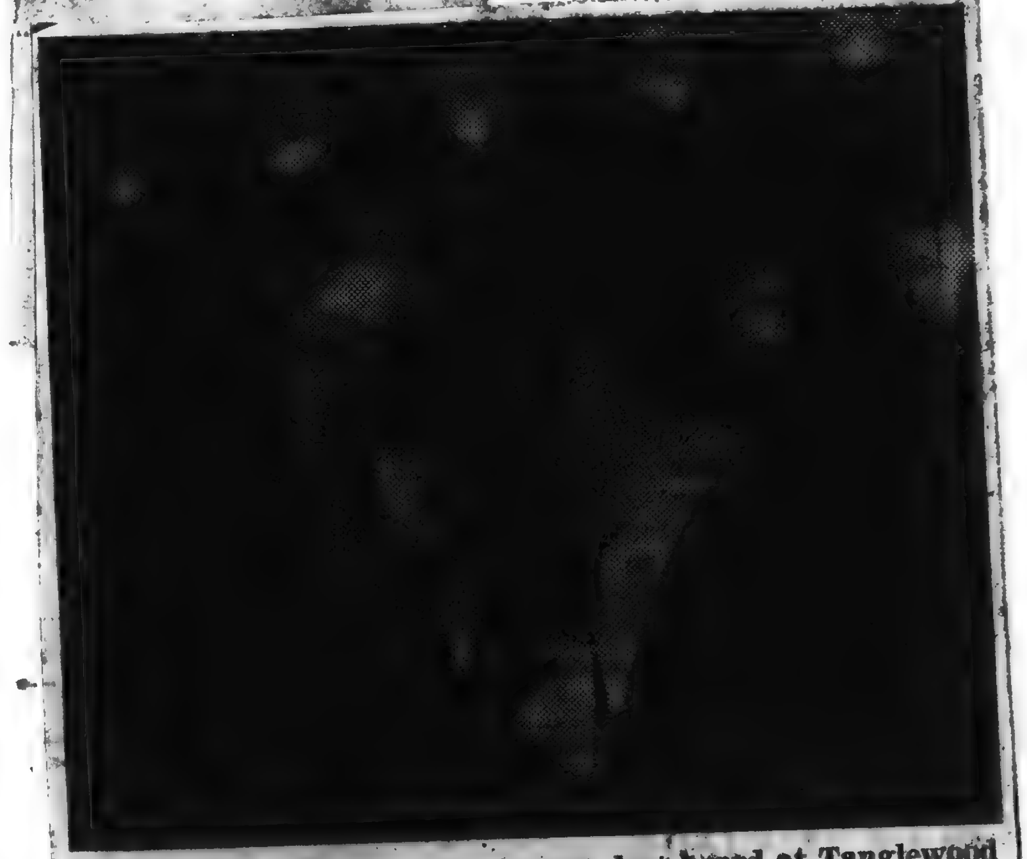
ELEANOR STEBER

Soloist for Friday Night

Byron Janis, brilliant young American pianist, will be the soloist in the Tanglewood Music Shed next Friday night in a performance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 2.

News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,700

JUL 21 1960



FAMED PIANIST Claudio Arrau, last heard at Tanglewood in 1954, will be the guest of conductor Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5, the "Emperor" Concerto. Arrau performed at Tanglewood last evening in a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center Scholarship Fund, giving a repetition of the Chopin Centenary Recital which he gave in May at the Prague, Czechoslovakia Spring Festival.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
GAZETTE
D. 47,453

JUL 23 1960

Bolivian Violinist Due At Berkshire Festival

The 19-year-old Bolivian violinist, Jaime Laredo, will make his first appearance at the Berkshire festival with the Boston Symphony Orchestra Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in a performance of Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto with Charles Munch conducting.

* * *

YOUNG LAREDO was winner of the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Music Competition in May, 1959, in competition with 37 other violinists from 17 other countries. The Queen Elisabeth Award was determined by a panel of 14 judges including Oistrakh, Menuhin, Grumiaux, Szigeti and Francescatti.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 108,563

JUL 24 1960

Busy Schedule This Week in Cool Berkshires

PITTSFIELD, Mass. — Music theater and the dance are sharing top billing with nature on this summer's vacation schedule in the Berkshire Hills and a full program of attractions will be on tap for the visitor to these cool, green hills again this week.

At Tanglewood in Lenox the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Conductor Charles Munch at the podium will perform Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30, and next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor.

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,920

JUL 22 1960

Musical Events

Connecticut Pops Concert, Fairfield University Shell, Fairfield, July 29, starring Roberta Peters.

At the Empire State Musical Festival at the Anthony Wayne Recreation Area in Bear Mountain, N.Y., July 23, Jose Iturbi conducting the festival symphony; July 24, "Barber of Seville."

Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., July 22-24: Koussevitzky Memorial Concert and works of Beethoven, Strauss, and Mendelssohn.

FADED TEXT

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 4,136
JUL 14 1960

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Circ. 18,203
JUL 18 1960

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664
JUL 17 1960

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657
JUL 19 1960

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026
JUL 21 1960

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 40,278
JUL 18 1960

Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 46,674
JUL 17 1960

Gazette
EAST HARTFORD
Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 3,951
JUL 21 1960

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,498
JUL 21 1960

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
JUL 19 1960

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267
JUL 16 1960

Post
NORTH HAVEN, Conn.
Weekly Circ. 1,500
JUL 14 1960

News
WEST HARTFORD,
Weekly Independent
Circ. 7,059
JUL 21 1960

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 148,332
JUL 17 1960

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 289,111
JUL 17 1960

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,572
JUL 21 1960

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,290
JUL 21 1960

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958
JUL 19 1960

SYRACUSE, N.Y.
POST-STANDARD
D. 98,088 S. 103,053
JUL 17 1960

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
GAZETTE
D. 47,453
JUL 18 1960

GREENVILLE, N.Y.
LOCAL
W. 550
JUL 20 1960

ATHENS, N.Y.
HERALD
W. 325
JUL 21 1960

Fauré Requiem Scheduled For Koussevitsky Memoria

The first concerts by Charles Munch and the full Boston Symphony Orchestra since its return from an eight-week tour of Formosa, Japan, the Philippines, Australia, and New Zealand will be given in the 6000-seat Music Shed at Tanglewood Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, July 22-24.

Dr. Munch has designated Friday's concert as the Berkshire Festival's annual Koussevitzky Memorial in honor of the orchestra's former music director (1924-1949) under whose guidance the Berkshire Music Center was founded in 1940. The program will include Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the first performance at Tanglewood of Fauré's Requiem. Saramae Endich, soprano, Donald Gramm, baritone, and the center's Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, will participate in the Requiem.

Pierre Monteux will make the first of four festival appearances on Saturday evening, July 23. Claudio Arrau will be Mr. Monteux's guest in a performance of Beethoven's Concerto for Piano and Orchestra, No. 5. Cherubini's "Anacreon" Overture and Respighi's "Fountains of Rome" will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood at the Saturday evening concert. The program will close with the Richard Strauss tone poem, "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks."

Jaime Laredo, who won the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium Music Competition at Brussels in 1959, will make his first appearance with Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Sunday afternoon, July 24. Sr. Laredo will be heard in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto. Sunday's concert will open with the first Tanglewood performance of Variations, Chaconne, and Finale by Norman Dello Joio and will close with a performance of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony.

Mr. Arrau, in addition to his performance of the Beethoven Concerto with Mr. Monteux and the orchestra on Saturday evening, will give a Chopin Centenary Recital in the Theater at Tanglewood on Wednesday evening, July 20. His program, the third of the festival's Chamber Music Series, will consist of Chopin's 24 Preludes, the Fantasy in F minor, Ballade No. 4, Scherzo No. 4, and the Sonata in B minor. Mr. Arrau gave the same recital in this year's May Festival in Prague.

In honor of Aaron Copland's 60th birthday, William Masselos will perform three of Mr. Copland's works for the piano—the Piano Fantasy, Piano Variations, and Piano Sonata—in the Tanglewood Theater on Monday evening, July 18.

In addition to the Fromm Foundation recital on Monday, Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited to seven other activities this week at Tanglewood. On Tuesday evening, July 19, the Tanglewood Choir will give its first program of the summer; the Opera Department will present opera scenes in the Theater on Wednesday afternoon, July 20, and on Wednesday afternoon Friends of the center are invited to a lecture, "Aspects of Music," in the Chamber Music Hall.

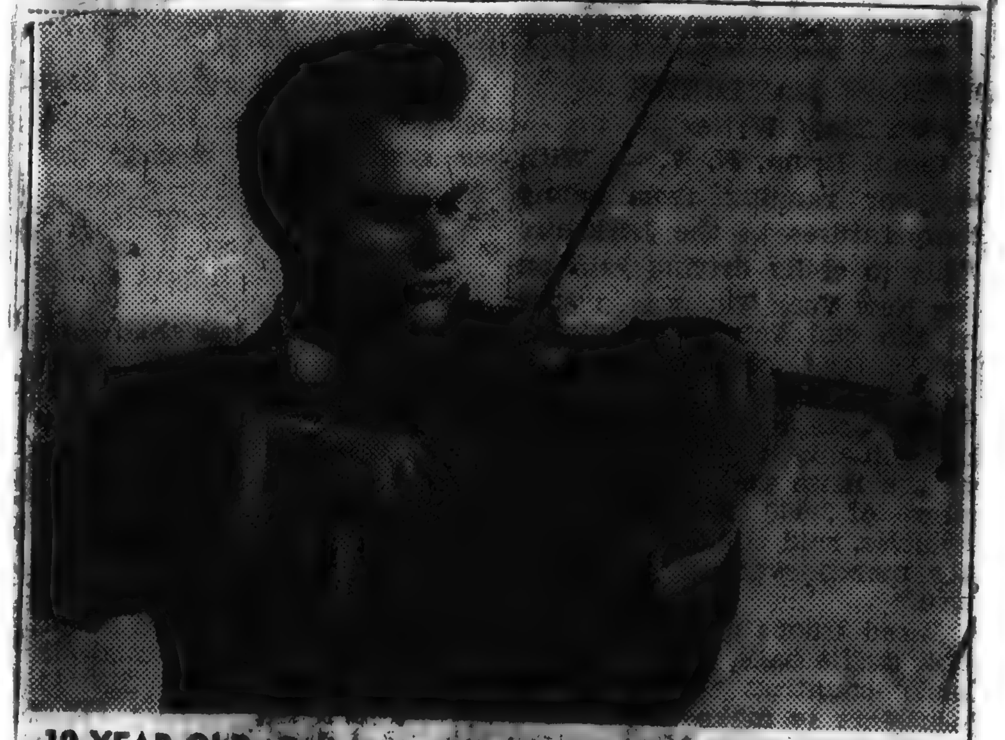
The Berkshire Music Center Orchestra will perform in the Music Shed on Thursday evening, July 21; a seminar in contemporary music will be held in Chamber Music Hall on Friday afternoon; and two school events are listed for Sunday, July 24: chamber music in the Chamber Music Hall that morning and a Composers' Forum in the same hall in the evening

---

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958
JUL 19 1960

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815
JUL 22 1960

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657
JUL 23 1960



19-YEAR-OLD Bolivian violinist Jaime Laredo will play Mendelssohn Concerto with Boston Symphony at Tanglewood.

Laredo Tanglewood Soloist

JAIME LAREDO, 19-year-old Bolivian violinist, will be introduced by Charles Munch to the Berkshire Festival audience at Tanglewood Sunday at 2:30 p.m. with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto.

After Laredo's second Washington, D. C., recital under auspices of the Pan American Union on Jan. 7, 1959, a music critic proclaimed: "Jaime Laredo, that name is going to be one of the great names in violin playing . . ."

Laredo was graduated from Philadelphia's Curtis Institute of Music a few weeks before leaving for Brussels in 1959 to enter the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Music Competition which he won, a week before his 18th birthday.

The Brussels trip was made possible by the sale of the Laredo family's baby grand piano plus a $250 gift from the Cleveland Society for Strings and the loan of a $40,000 Stradivarius.

Called "one of the world's greatest musical prizes" (New York Times, June 7, 1959), Laredo's award was determined by a panel of 14 judges including Oistrakh, Menuhin, Grumiaux, Szigeti and Francescatti.

New Lebanon, N Y
The Echo
19 July 1960

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
BROOKLYN DAILY
D. 40,280
JUL 22 1960

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
KINGS COURIER
W. 15,719
JUL 23 1960

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
UNION-STAR
D. 35,771
JUL 16 1960

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
JUL 19 1960

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815
JUL 19 1960

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026
JUL 20 1960

Pianist Arrau Will Play at Tanglewood Tonight, Saturday

Famed pianist, Claudio Arrau, who was last heard at Tanglewood in 1954, makes two appearances at the Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood, Lenox, this week.

In the theater tonight at 8:30 Mr. Arrau will repeat the Chopin Centenary Recital which he gave on May 25, 1960, at the Prague (Czechoslovakia) Spring Festival. For this recital, Mr. Arrau has contributed his services to benefit the Berkshire Music Center Scholarship Fund.

Saturday evening at 8.30 Mr. Arrau will be guest of conductor Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 the "Emperor" Concerto.

Aurrau's Tanglewood concerts:

Wednesday, July 20, theater, 8:30, Chopin Centenary Recital, Fantasy in F minor, Ballade No. 4, F minor, Scherzo No. 4, E major, Sonata in B minor and Twenty-four Preludes.

Saturday, July 23, Music Shed, 8:30, Pierre Monteux conducting, Cherubini: "Anacreon" Overture; Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 5 (Arrau); Respighi: Fountains of Rome; Strauss: Till Eulenspiegel.

Enterprise & Times (e)
BROCKTON, Mass.
Circ. 42,413
JUL 18 1960

Standard-Times (e)
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 62,208
JUL 18 1960

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 57,341
JUL 18 1960

Press-Herald (m)
PORTLAND, Me.
Circ. 52,135
JUL 18 1960

Journal (m)
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 58,872
JUL 18 1960

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 149,750
JUL 18 1960

Music Festival to Open Friday at Tanglewood

LENOX, July 18 (UPI)—The 1960 Berkshire Music Festival will open Friday night with the Boston Symphony Orchestra presenting a concert dedicated to the late Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the orchestra for 25 years.

The program, to be conducted by Charles Munch, will open the first of four week-end sessions in the 6000 seat music shed at Tanglewood. The Friday concert will be the first by the full Boston Symphony since its return from a tour of the Orient, Australia and New Zealand.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 21 1960

Music Review

Arrau Plays Chopin

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

CLAUDIO ARRAU played a program of Chopin in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood last night as the third in the Wednesday evening series of what otherwise has been chamber music concerts.

This is the 150th anniversary of Frederic Chopin's birth, and Arrau has played this program in the composer's native Poland as part of the celebration of the event. Thus it was no ordinary routine or arbitrary concert, but one by an artist exceptionally equipped for the task.

* * *

THE LITTLE trio of giants born almost within a twelvemonth — Mendelssohn, Chopin and Schumann, all wrote a new type of music for the piano. Only one called his efforts in this style "songs without words," but the others might well have usurped the nomenclature. Arrau's fitness to properly play Chopin, or, in fact, any pianist's artistic right, should be judged primarily by his ability to speak poetically, before assessing his ability to execute the great demands the composer makes on one's hands.

By this method Arrau passes handsomely. His execution was wholely at the command of expressiveness, and while there was continually reason to marvel at his swift dexterity, there was always better cause to enjoy the music as songs. If it pleases anyone to demand that Chopin remain within the confines of delicate and overly-sensitive playing, within the limits imposed by one physically incapable of using normal strength, he may well have quibbled with Arrau last night, for this was as healthy playing muscularly as it was wholesome and sound artistically.

* * *

CHOPIN'S originality was due to many factors. None was more conspicuous than his ability to invent accompaniment figures. Their extreme richness is, of course, based upon his harmonic versatility and his ingenuity in devising rhetorical expressions adapted to the character of the passage at hand. His understanding of the idiom, of the piano is not disputed. The resonance he obtained by the wide distribution of moving fingers was unique. What was mere passage work by other composers becomes significant in Chopin's pages. There is no display in any of his music. All the embellishments and ornaments contribute to the essence of the music. That was Chopin's deepest secret.

* * *

ARRAU PLAYED the F minor Ballade, No. 4 of opus 52, the E major Scherzo, No. 4, of opus 50, the second great sonata, B minor, opus 58, and the whole book of the Preludes, opus 28.

A new terminology arose with Chopin's music: The dances of his native national flavor, the Nocturnes, Etudes, Preludes, Fantasies, Ballades, etc., in addition to his contributions to existing classifications.

Arrau allowed us to actually see the F minor Ballade develop from the simple naive statement to the tremendous expanse of canvas Chopin later envisaged. The structure of each work was revealed in each case. The Preludes brought on a demonstration which was going full strength when we beat the huge audience to the exits after the fourth recall.

Sunday Advertiser
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 453,664

JUL 17 1960

Tanglewood Awaits Hub Musicians

The seating capacity of the great Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox is 6000 and it is expected to be filled to overflowing this week for the first concerts by Charles Munch and the full Boston Symphony Orchestra.

They recently returned from the eight-week tour of Formosa, Japan, the Philippines, Australia and New Zealand.

Friday's concert has been designated by Dr. Munch to be the Berkshire Festival's annual Koussevitsky Memorial Concert in honor of the Orchestra's former music director. Under his guidance the Berkshire Music Center was founded in 1940.

The program will include Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the first peformance at Tanglewood of Gabriel Faure's "Requiem."

On Saturday evening Pierre Monteux, revered octogenarian and a former music director of the orchestra, will make the first of four Festival appearances. He has chosen Claudio Arrau to be his guest in a performance of Beethoven's Concerto for Piano and Orchestra, No. 5.

Cherubini's "Anacreon" Overture and Respighi's "Fountains of Rome" will be performed for the first time at Tanglewood at the Saturday concert, the program closing with the Richard Strauss tone poem, "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks."

MILLERTON, N.Y.
NEWS
W. - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.

JUL 21 1960

Claudio Arrau To Play At Tanglewood Festival

Famed pianist, Claudio Arrau, who was last heard at Tanglewood in 1954, makes two appearances at the Berkshire Festival (Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.) this week. In the Theatre on Wednesday evening (July 20, 8:30) Mr. Arrau will report the Chopin Centenary Recital which he gave on May 25 (1960) at the Prague (Czechoslovakia) Spring Festival. For this recital, Mr. Arrau has contributed his services to benefit the Berkshire Music Center Scholarship Fund. Saturday evening (July 23, 8:30) Mr. Arrau will be guest of conductor Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5, the "Emperor" Concerto.

Now making his 19th consecutive tour of the United States and Canada, Arrau has been heard and hailed on every continent of the globe. After two New York Carnegie Hall recitals in February (1960) he flew to Europe for a four month tour that included nine recitals in West Germany, three in West Berlin alone, six Scandinavian concerts plus three engagements in Paris: a public recital, a television recital and in concert with orchestra.

Arrau interrupted his European tour to fly from France for two days participation in Pablo Casals' Puerto Rico Festival. He then returned to London for orchestral and television engagements before his arrival in the United States on June 26. On June 28 Mr. Arrau and conductor Pierre Monteux opened the Chicago Symphony Orchestra's Ravina Festival.

Spr. Union 7/21/60

CLAUDIO ARRAU WINS PRAISE IN LENOX CONCERT

Pianist Plays Chopin Program at Tanglewood; 1669 Attend

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Claudio Arrau and Chopin drew an audience of 1669 music lovers to the third in the chamber music series Wednesday night in the theater. The third chamber music concert last year drew an audience of 1216. Things are looking up in the chamber music series.

Imperfect Theory

Last May, in Prague, Arrau gave a Chopin centennial recital and this, in part, he repeated Wednesday night. There are those who profess to feel that only one of Polish descent can interpret the music of Chopin. It's a good thought, but it doesn't mean much, and it meant even less after hearing the interpretations by Arrau of the "Ballade in F Minor, No. 4, Op. 52," "Scherzo in E Major, No. 4, Op. 54"; "Sonata in B Minor, Op. 58" and the 24 preludes.

Arrau has a straightforward approach to music and, in the case of Chopin if there is schmaltz, or sentiment, the audience is enveloped in it before he moves on to larger things. However, it is beautifully articulated sentiment, for Arrau has a wonderful, singing legato and runs are as smooth as velvet. On the larger side, this pianist can summon magnificent sonorities with equal ease. Fluent in bravura passages, he has the true magic of lyricism at his finger tips.

The F Minor ballade, last of the four written, is less grandiose than the first three, but in it one finds more humor, playfulness and joie de vie. In the E Major Scherzo Chopin foregoes his pattern of minor tension major relief to give us a work more capricious. Its technical difficulties were the despair of his contemporaries, but these were as nothing to Arrau who remained completely composed and provided a well-disciplined pyrotechnics.

Fine Interpretation

The B Minor Sonata was given a tremendous interpretation by Arrau. As noted, there was plenty of sentiment and ample opportunity for its display, but in the first and final movements there was a grandeur of conception and brilliant utterance of its wealth of melodies. Most important, he brought the work to an impressive finale with broad, impetuous octaves. In many ways this sonata was the peak of the recital.

The 24 preludes are in a class of their own. They are not written for the purpose of demonstrating anything, but Chopin has written 24 complete pieces, many only fragmentary, others quite ample. Arrau understood completely the spirit of romance which pervades the preludes, just as he communicated the melancholy, the gaity and the romance of each separate song. The audience appeared to be enchanted and there were well deserved bravos at the close of the recital.

Ridgefield, Conn
Press
21 July 1960

Wilton Bulletin
WILTON, Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 1,949

JUL 20 1960

Tanglewood

On Friday at Tanglewood in the Berkshires Charles Munch will direct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Beethoven's Eroica, and Faure's Requiem in the shed at 8:30.

Pierre Monteux will direct the orchestra in Cherubini's Anacreon Overture on Saturday. Claudio Arrau will be soloist in Beethoven's fifth Piano Concerto and Mr. Monteux will conduct Respighi's Fountains of Rome and Strauss's Till Eulenspiegel.

On Sunday at 2:30 Mr. Munch will conduct Norman Dello Joio's Variations, Chaconne and Finale and Beethoven's Fifth. Jaime Laredo will be soloist in Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto.

Soloists next Friday will be Byron Janis in Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto. Further information may be obtained from the Festival Office Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass, Lenox 600.

Increase of Interest In Modern Music

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

This country's symphony orchestras are paying increasing attention to twentieth-century composers, while record companies are still more receptive toward them. This is the conclusion drawn by the American Symphony Orchestra League from a survey made by Broadcast Music, Inc., and reported at its recent national convention. The survey is based upon the 1959-'60 programs of seventy-four orchestras and the latest Schwann catalogue of long-playing records.

Not far from half (41 per cent) of the composers who figured in the orchestral programs were of this century, while the figure for recordings was 64.5 per cent. In number of works played, the current century scored 30.5 per cent of the works played by the orchestras and 16.2 per cent of the number of performances. In the share of the programs occupied by music of the last sixty years, this country was represented by 57.6 per cent of the composers, half of the works played and 37 per cent of the number of performances. Ravel, with ninety-three hearings, was the most represented foreign composer, and Aaron Copland headed the American share of the list with fifty-eight performances. Samuel Barber, George Gershwin, Roy Harris, Alan Hovanhess and Walter Piston were the next in order.

* * *

Fromm Series

The Fromm Music Foundation is sponsoring two concerts and six lecture-concerts of contemporary music at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. William Masselos' recital of Aaron Copland's piano music tomorrow in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall, in honor of the composer's approaching sixtieth birthday, offers works which Mr. Copland considers as representative of the three important periods in his career: the Variations (1930), Sonata (1939-'41) and Fantasy (1957).

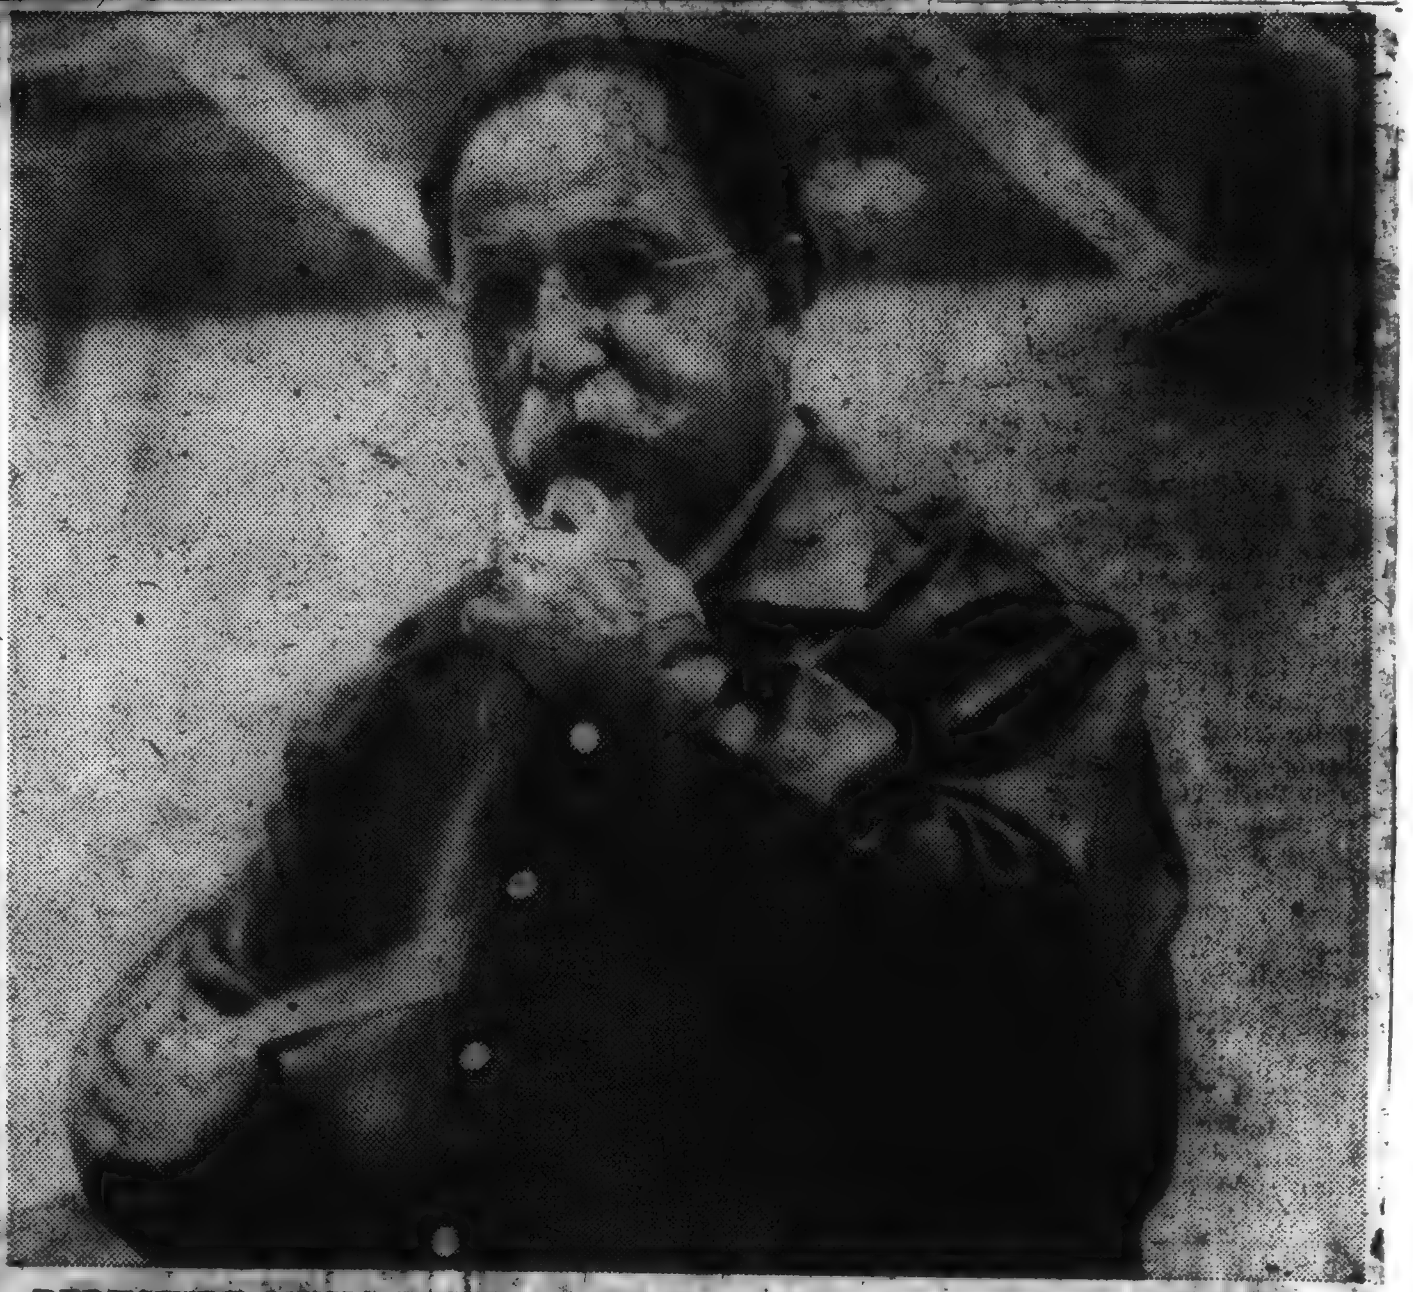
Luciano Berio's "Circles," for voice, harp and percussion, commissioned by the foundation, will have its first performance in a concert by members of the Boston Symphony and others under Richard Burgin's direction on Monday night, Aug. 1. Roger Sessions, Peter Maxwell Davies, Stravinsky and Martinu will also be represented. The remaining Friday afternoon lecture-concerts will be devoted to music by Leon Kirchner (July 22), Elliott Carter (July 29), Karl-Birger Blomdahl (Aug. 5) and John Cage (Aug. 12). Admission to all the Fromm events is free.

* * *

N Y Herald-Tribune
17 July 1960

98

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE, SUNDAY, JULY 17, 1960



BERKSHIRE MUSIC FESTIVAL—Charles Munch (at top) and Pierre Monteux (above) will conduct the opening concerts of Tanglewood's major series, which begins Friday night in the Music Shed. Mr. Munch will be in charge of the Boston Symphony on Friday and Sunday and Mr. Monteux will conduct on Saturday.

Programs In and Out Of the City

Stadium Concerts

Stadium Symphony Orchestra, Lewisohn Stadium of City College, Convent and Amsterdam Aves., 136th and 139th Sts., 8:30.

Tuesday. Conductor, Alfredo Antonini; soloist, Benny Goodman, clarinetist, and the Benny Goodman Sextet and Trio. Dance Overture, Creston; Concerto in A major for Clarinet and Orchestra, K. 622, Mozart; Jazz with the Benny Goodman Sextet and Trio. (In case of rain before intermission, this concert will be played the next clear night.)

Wednesday. Conductor, Alfredo Antonini; soloist, Renata [illegible], pianist (Stadium debut). Festive Overture, Op. 21, Orrego-Salas; Symphony No. 4 ("Sinfonia Romantica"), Chavez; Two Cuban Dances (first N. Y. performance), Caturla; Nights in the Gardens of Spain; Symphonic Impressions for Piano and Orchestra; Three Dances from "The Three-Cornered Hat," De Falla.

Thursday. Conductor, Alfredo Antonini; soloists, Mary Curtis-Verna, soprano; Jan Peerce, tenor; Robert Merrill, baritone. Songs and Arias by Rossini, Verdi, Puccini, Donizetti, Leoncavallo, Catalani, Ponchielli, Giordano. (In case of rain before intermission, this program will be played the next clear night.)

Saturday. Conductor, Franz Allers; soloists, Martyn Green, baritone (Stadium debut); Margot Moser, soprano (Stadium debut); Morgan Stuart, tenor (Stadium debut). Selections from "The Mikado," "The Pirates of Penzance," "Princess Ida," "The Gondoliers," "Ruddigore," "H. M. S. Pinafore," "Trial By Jury," "The Yeomen of the Guard" and "Iolanthe," Gilbert and Sullivan. (In case of rain before intermission, this program will be played the next clear night.)

Goldman Band

Guggenheim Memorial Concerts, Richard Franko Goldman conducting, Central and Prospect Parks, 8:30.

Today, Central Park. Grand March, Prospera Aeterna (first performance in the United States), Ikuma Dan; Demetrios (first performance), Mel Brolles; Selection, Polish Folk Songs, Kossakowski; The Festival Galop (first performance in the United States), Yosaku Suma; Aurora March (first performance in the United States), Josef Kartinen; Three Grand Military Marches, Hummel; Cornet Solo, Danza Alegre (James Burke, cornetist), James Burke; Waltz, Artists' Life, Strauss; Excerpts "Porgy and Bess," Gershwin; Emblem of Freedom, Edwin Franko Goldman; King Cotton, Sousa.

Monday, Central Park. Overture, La Gazza Ladra, Rossini; Overture, Pique Dame, von Suppe; Overture, Italian in Algiers, Rossini; Overture, Beautiful Galatea, von Suppe; Overture, William Tell, Rossini; Suite from "The Fairy Queen," Purcell; Overture in C, Catel; Suite from "Il Cid," Sacchini; Excerpts, The King and I, Rodgers; Iowa; Boy Scouts of America, Edwin Franko Goldman.

Wednesday, Central Park. The People's Choice, Douglas Moore; Military Symphony, Gossec; Military Overture, Mendelssohn; Divertimento, Blacher; Praeludium and Allegro, Giannini; Cornet Solo, Valse Laila (James Burke, cornetist), Rogers; Solemn March, Grieg; Shepherd's Hey; Molly on the Shore, Grainger; Hail to the Spirit of Liberty, Sousa; On the Alert, Edwin Franko Goldman.

Friday, Central Park. March, Pomp and Circumstance, No. 4; Elgar; Music for the Royal Fireworks, Handel; March of the Israelites, from "Eli," Costa; An Original Suite, Jacob; Overseas March, Arnold; Processional March, Sine Nomine, Vaughan Williams; Cornet Solo, The Lost Chord (James Burke, cornetist), Sullivan; Dances from Henry VIII, German; Passacaglia, Scott; Marching Song, Holst; March of the Herald, Nicholls.

Saturday, Prospect Park. Grand March, Freedom Forever, Edwin Franko Goldman; A Walt Whitman Overture, Lloyd; Soirées Musicales, Rossini-Britten; Cornet Solo, The Volunteer (James Burke, cornetist), Rodgers; Waltz, Liebeslieder, Strauss; Excerpts, The Sound of Music, Rodgers; Hands Across the Sea; The Bride Elect; The Liberty Bell; The Directorate; Kansas Wildcats; The Pathfinder of Panama; Fairest of the Fair; The Stars and Stripes Forever, Sousa.

Berkshire

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Today, [illegible] Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Symphony No. 38 in D major, "Prague," K. 504; Violin Concerto No. 4 in D major, K. 218 (Joseph Silverstein, violinist); Symphony No. 39 in E flat major, K. 543, Mozart.

Monday, 8:30 William Masselos, pianist. Piano Fantasy; Piano Variations; Piano Sonata, Copland.

Wednesday, 8:30 Claudio Arrau, pianist. Fantasy in F minor; Ballade No. 4 in F minor; Scherzo No. 4 in E major; Sonata in B minor; Twenty-four Preludes, Chopin.

Friday, 8:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor. Symphony No. 3 in E flat major, "Eroica," Op. 55, Beethoven; Requiem (Festival Chorus, Sara Mae Endich, soprano; Donald Gramm, bass), Faure.

Saturday, 8:30 Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Overture to "Anacreon," Cherubini; Piano Concerto No. 5 in E flat major, "Emperor," Op. 73 (Claudio Arrau, pianist); "Fountains of Rome," Symphonic Poem, Respighi; "Till Eulenspiegel Merry Pranks," Op. 28, Strauss.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 92,367

JUL 21 1960

AT THE CONCERT

Arrau Plays Chopin At Tanglewood

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX — Tanglewood continued its Wednesday evening concerts of chamber music last night with a magnificent recital by Claudio Arrau, pianist. Observing the 150th anniversary of the birth of Chopin, the program was identical with the all-Chopin recital Arrau played in May at the Prague, Czechoslovakia, Spring Festival, except that by omitting the Fantasy in F minor, the program was kept down to two hours.

Arrau began hs association with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1924, when the first American concert of this Chilean pianist was played under the baton of Pierre Monteux. This duo will appear Saturday at Tanglewood, when Arrau plays the Beethoven "Emperor" Concerto with Monteux and the Boston Symphony.

Worcester heard Arrau at its Saturday Festival concert in 1951.

Ideal Interpreter

Last night's recital was a parade of beauties. The Theater Concert Hall was sold out weeks in advance, and hundreds listened from the lawn. Arrau contributed his services for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center School.

The evening offered the Ballade in F minor, No. 4, Op. 52; the Scherzo in E major, No. 4, Op. 54; the Sonata in B Minor, Op. 58 and the Twenty-four Preludes, Op. 28.

Arrau seems the ideal interpreter of Chopin. His touch is immaculate, his phrasing fastidious. With no extravagances of motion or posture, he conveys the widest range of moods and volume.

Some of the finest moments last night were the contemplative slow passages. The episodes featuring velocity were marvels of lightness and brilliant spirit. Arrau made the piano speak eloquently and excitingly in two-fisted complexities where the strength of his wrists and fingers was revealed as prodigious.

Artful in Preludes

Nowhere was the art of the soloist more evident than in the Preludes, widely contrasted cameos which seemed to achieve perfect logic and sequence. Arrau is a perfectionist, but not a stiff one. His sentiment sings without being cloying, his thunders are authoritative without being noisy. The immense technical skill of the pianist becomes a vehicle for expressiveness, not an end in itself.

The Wednesday concerts have yet to present the Beaux Arts Trio of New York, also Leon Fleisher, pianist, in a sonata recital, and the Kroll String Quartet.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

JUL 21 1960

Fromm Foundation Sponsors Tanglewood Events

The Fromm Music Foundation is supporting a program for the study, teaching, and performance of contemporary music at the Berkshire Music Center. The Foundation commissions new works, awards prizes for existing works, and sponsors the study, performance, publication, and recording of contemporary music.

The Foundation's 1960 program at Tanglewood consists of fellowships for young musicians of special interest and skill in the field of contemporary music who work closely with the Fromm instructors. The Foundation will also sponsor two special concerts during the school term in addition to a series of six seminars in contemporary music.

Seven Fromm fellowships have been awarded for the summer. The recipients, known as the Fromm Fellows, are John Perras, flute; Bernard Shapiro, oboe; Jerome Rosen, clarinet; Jane Taylor, bassoon; William Brown, horn; Marguerite Willauer, soprano; and Paul Jacobs, piano.

Two Fromm Foundation concerts will be given at Tanglewood this summer. At the instruction of Mr. Fromm, these programs are open to the public and no admission is charged. William Masselos, pianist, will present the first in the Theater on Monday, July 18. In honor of Aaron Copland's 60th birthday, Mr. Masselos's program will consist of three Copland works: the Piano Fantasy, Piano Variations, and Piano Sonata.

Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest artists wll present the second Fromm concert on Aug. 1. The program of contemporary chamber music will include the world première of Luciano Berio's "Circles," scored for harp, percussion, and soprano, and commissioned by the Foundation. Mr. Berio, one of Italy's exponents of the use of electronics in music, is guest composer in residence at the center for the 1960 session.

FADED TEXT

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 25 1960

Weekend Tourist Influx Is Biggest of Summer

Berkshire County's bedrooms were filled with tourists this past weekend.

It was the first weekend for parents' visits to their children at various private camps thoroughout the county and the first in the regular series of four major weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Shed at Tanglewood.

Attendance at Tanglewood totaled 38,102 for the three weekend performances—3,462 more than the same weekend last year. A total of 70,184 have passed through the turnstiles at Tanglewood thus far this season 9,160 more than last year.

Yesterday afternoon's crowd of 0,508 was the highest this year at Tanglewood. Saturday night 0,087 turned out and Friday, 1,507.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 17 1960

In Berkshire Festival Spotlight Saturday Night

PIERRE MONTEUX

CLAUDIO ARRAU

The beloved Pierre Monteux will make the first of four Festival appearances at Tanglewood this season when he conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed next Saturday night. Claudio Arrau will be Mr. Monteux's guest in a performance of Beethoven's Concerto for Piano and Orchestra, No. 5. Also on the program will be Cherubini's "Anacreon" Overture, Respighi's "Fountains of Rome" and the Richard Strauss tone poem, "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks."

Music Shed At Tanglewood

New Lebanon N.Y. The Echo
19 July 1960

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 23 1960

7,500 Attend Koussevitzky Memorial Concert

Mitchell

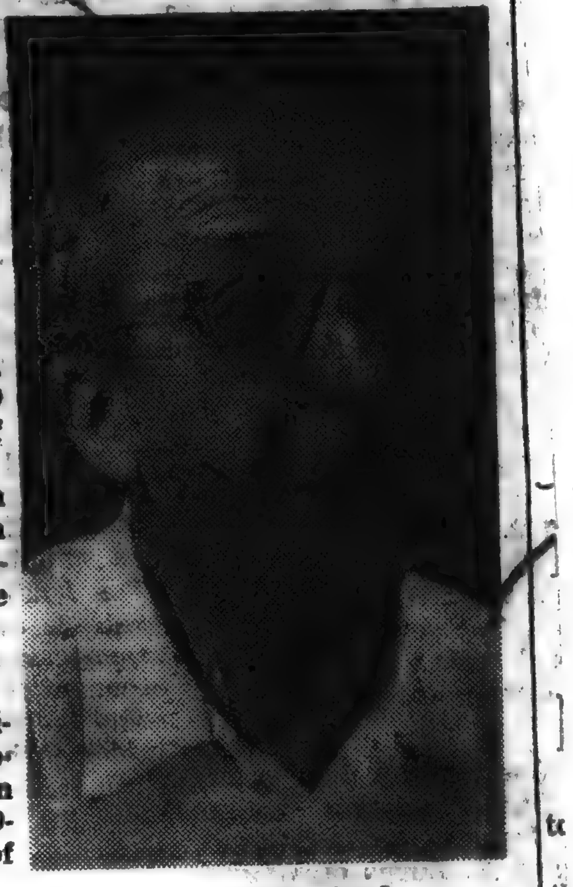
Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the renowned Boston Symphony Orchestra conductor, with guests during the Koussevitzky memorial concert last night at Tanglewood. Left to right are Eugene List, noted pianist; Mrs. Koussevitzky; Lucian Berio, visiting composer from Italy; and Mrs. Berio. Concert, conducted by Charles Munch, was attended by a crowd of 7,500.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 16 1960

Second Section

Free Recital by Masselos To Honor Composer Copland



Aaron Copland

TANGLEWOOD—The Berkshire Music Center will honor its faculty chairman, composer Aaron Copland, with a free public performance Monday evening of three of his piano compositions in observance of Mr. Copland's 60th-birthday year.

The Copland program will be a recital by William Masselos, one of the nation's leading young pianists, in the theater-concert hall at 8:30 p.m. It will be a presentation of the Fromm Music Foundation.

Mr. Copland, who will be 60 on Nov. 14, has been faculty chairman and head of the composition department of the Music Center since its inception in 1940.

From 1930 to 1957

To be performed by Mr. Masselos Monday night will be the Copland "Piano Variations," written in 1930, the "Piano Sonata" of 1939-1941, and the "Piano Fantasy" of 1955-57.

Pianist Masselos has concertized extensively in this country and has won the praise of critics and various awards. He has performed at least [illegible] times in Pittsfield on programs of the South Mountain Assn., his last appearance here having been in 1953.

He gave the Copland "Fantasy," the composer's latest work, its first public performance in October, 1957, in New York, and played it again for the International Society for Contemporary Music in Chicago in 1958 as a Fromm Foundation presentation. The work, which employs a 12-tone formula, consists of a single movement that lasts 30 minutes.

Versatile Composer

Composer Copland is widely recognized for his great versatility in significant contributions to the musical literature of the orchestra, ballet, opera and motion pictures. His awards, honors and citations are many, including honorary degrees that have hailed him as "a tireless champion in the cause of contemporary music."

Mr. Copland, born in Brooklyn, studied in France, returning to the United States in 1924. The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the late Serge Koussevitzky performed his "Symphony for Organ and Orchestra" in 1925, and since then has given more than 130 performances of 18 Copland works.

30 Orchestra Works

More than 30 Copland works for orchestra have been published, including the well-known "El Salon Mexico." In ballet compositions, perhaps the best known are such works as "Billy the Kid" and "Appalachian Spring," the latter having won a Pulitzer Prize. Among other works are the opera "The Tender Land" and such film scores as the one for "The Heiress" that won the composer an Oscar.

In addition to composing, Mr. Copland has toured Europe, England, Scandinavia, Central America and South America as guest orchestral conductor, and has guest-conducted the BSO and other major American orchestras. He also has been active as teacher and author, lecturing in New York, at Harvard, and in Buffalo and has written three books on music.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUL 23 1960

Stirring Tribute To Koussevitzky At Tanglewood

A splendid tribute was paid to Dr. Serge Koussevitzky at Tanglewood last night by Dr. Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and the Berkshire Festival Chorus at the first of the big shed concerts of the Berkshire Festival. This was the annual memorial concert honoring the founder of the present Festival and of the Berkshire Music Center.

Two magnificent works were chosen for this occasion, Beethoven's Third "Eroica" Symphony, and the Requiem for chorus and orchestra by Gabriel Faure. Both were played with a fervor and range of feeling, that made the occasion a stirring one.

Dr. Munch led the great symphony through the towering first movement at a fast pace, charging it with such excitement, then moved into a very warm handling of the second movement with its famous funeral march. The purity of the Boston Symphony was never more evident, each instrumental thread standing out clear.

In the Faure Requiem the Berkshire Festival chorus under the direction of Hugh Ross showed a state of perfection remarkable so early in the season. The sensitivity of this group in responding to the gentle serenity of this work reflects both the artistry of the singers and the taste and skill of their director. Chorus and orchestra, with fine solo work by Saramae Endich, soprano, and Donald Gramm, baritone, worked together to reach just the right density, to project the whole work to an audience of some 7000 people without losing its peculiar intimacy.

This evening, Pierre Monteux will be Dr. Munch's guest on the podium, conducting a program of Cherubini's Overture to "Anacreon", the "Emperor" Concerto by Beethoven with Claudio Arrau at the piano, Respighi's "Pines of Rome", and Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks by Richard Strauss.

—A.B.M.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657

JUL 23 1960

Koussevitsky Concert At Tanglewood

By DON O. NOEL JR.

Gabriel Faure's "Requiem," performed in memory of the late Serge Koussevitsky, longtime conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was the featured work Friday night in a program by the Boston Symphony under Charles Munch at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood.

The orchestra was joined in the Faure work by Soprano Saramae Endich, Baritone Donald Gramm, and the Festival [illegible] chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross.

Their performance of Faure's tranquil, serene work was excellent, well matched to the temper of the composition, and for the most part the orchestral and choral parts were nicely blended.

* * *

THE CHORUS in particular seemed much better this year than last. While their entrances could still be firmer and more incisive, there is no real raggedness. In the soprano section's pianissimo movements the voices seemed a bit too light, but these may have been, conversely, an overplaying in the string section.

[illegible] [illegible] object to the apparent use of an overhead mike to pick up the voices of the two soloists, in contrast to the rest of the ensemble, which appeared to rely solely on the fine acoustical qualities of the new, sweeping shell in the large music shed.

Both Miss Endich and Mr. Gramm sang well, and appeared to have rich, vibrant voices, Miss Endich's the more prettily colored of the two. But the electronic assistance made it almost impossible to judge the true timbre of their voices.

* * *

THE OTHER HALF of the program was a performance by the orchestra alone of Beethoven's Third, "Eroica," Symphony.

The Boston Symphony is a deceptively smooth, relaxed group of musicians. This impression is heightened, perhaps, by Mr. Munch's easy conducting style. Instead of the tension which many conductors communicate from the podium, he seems for the most part to take an attitude of listening enjoyment, and it is only when the orchestra lags—as it did briefly in the second movement last night—or when genuine tension enters the music, that he becomes more vigorous.

Yet if one slips for a moment from pleasurable listening to a more careful study of the music, one is immediately aware of the highly-polished craftsmanship of the group. This is a magnificent orchestra, playing in taut, vigorous unity.

So it was with the Beethoven. It was beautifully done, read by Mr. Munch at a moderate tempo, executed with both expressiveness and crispness.

The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood continues three more weeks.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 101,427

JUL 24 1960

Music:

Monteux and Arrau Star at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — In the 23 years of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood, there never has been a more fascinating conductor to watch on the podium than Pierre Monteux, who conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in last night's concert.

The ovation Monteux received last night from an audience of 10,087 was previewed yesterday morning at the rehearsal attended by another 4,090. These public rehearsals on Saturday mornings are for the benefit of orchestra's pension fund.

Last night's program: "Anacreon" overture by Cherubini; Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 5 in E flat major, Opus 73 ("Emperor"), with Claudio Arrau as soloist; Respighi's "The Fountains of Rome," and Richard Strauss "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks." Yesterday's rehersal was shared by Monteux and Charles Munch, regular conductor of the Boston Symphony.

The bulk of Munch's time was given to the Mendelssohn violin concerto, for which the 19-year-old Bolivian, Jaime Laredo, is to be soloist at this afternoon's concert. It would be very unjust to "jump the gun" with a critical review of the young man's capabilities.

Nervous Start

Suffice to say that he appeared extremely nervous, even though he has been "through the fire" as last year's winner of the Queen Elizabeth of the Belgians musical competition at Brussels.

There may be a more frightening experience for a young artist than a first appearance with the Boston Symphony, but we don't know what it could be.

We're reminded of what one of the Boston players said to us, one time: "We know by the way he picks up his bow, how the artist is going to sound."

As Laredo plowed through the Mendelssohn concerto, there were looks from orchestral players that could hardly be described as unbridled admiration. When he finished, a few gingerly applauded, or struck the backs of their instruments with the bows.

Shouts of Bravo

When Arrau ended the first movement of Beethoven's "Emperor," shouts of bravo and enthusiasm permeated the orchestra.

Octogenarian Monteux approached the podium with his usual short, shuffling steps. It's a specially-built podium protected by a fence.

At rehearsal, Monteux put the orchestra through the concerto alone. Again, he taught everyone concerned how to get the most out of the Boston Symphony with the least possible effort.

The panist himself seemed astonished at the precision with which Monteux brought in the orchestra at the conclusion of [illegible] technical passages in the solo instrument.

Arrau is a top-notch painist in every sense. He has the physical command of Rudolph R. Serkin without the latter's devasting mannerisms. There was, admitedly, a degree of athleticism in the Arrau-style-chords and octaves that came dangerously close to being hammered, but the tone never was harsh.

Arau achieved a tremendous range of dynamics. Some passages were of music-box lightness. [illegible] single trills were perfectly proportioned to each beat, and the trills in both hands were absolutely parallel.

The scale passages had velvety smoothness, while heavy arpeggios and octaves were doled out with fingers and wrists of steel. All of which may sound like an athletic meet of sorts, but superimposed over these physical virtues was a magnificent expose of the "Emperor's" concerto-filled as much with poetry as fire, and equally engrossing to lay audience and musician.

Dazzling Cadenza

The first-movement cadenza was dazzling in its tempestuous passages, ending in a resumption of the main theme, played with one of the gentlest and clearest tones we have ever heard from a piano at Tanglewood.

Monteux bought to the Cherubini overture, "Anacreon," a stature (or at least a sound potential) that one never suspected it of possessing. The large, brash chords at the start were perfect-formed, and wealthy with rich tone. What might have been "sing-song," sentimental melodies remained dignified, both in strings and expertly-operated woodwinds. Rampages upon which the overture embarks to create impressiveness were stirring and divorced from frenzy, and everywhere was a liberal sprinkling of real pianissimos. It was brought to a sonorous and vigorous close.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 92,367

JUL 25 1960

VARIETY

Tanglewood Concerts Set New Records

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX — Records continue to pile up at Tanglewood. The first weekend of the full 100-piece Boston Symphony Orchestra drew 28,104. Pierre Monteux was conductor and Claudio Arrau as pianist brought 10,087 Saturday night to wet grounds. Charles Munch's concert yesterday attracted 10,508 on a beautiful afternoon, to hear the 19-year-old prize-winning Jaime Laredo, violinist from Bolivia. The Koussevitzky Memorial concert on Friday had an audience of 7,509.

The Friday concert would not have been the choice of Koussevitzky, who never programmed the Faure Requiem here. To link this delicately shaded work with the Beethoven "Eroica" was odd programming, no matter how suitable the two works seemed as tribute to a great man.

Afternoon Novelty

Sunday's concert was a puzzle. New violin talent from South America was given the Mendelssohn Concerto to play. The afternoon's novelty was a work by Dello Joio, "Variations, Chaconne and Finale." The concert used the familiar Beethoven Fifth as its big work.

What an afternoon this could have been, had efforts been made to present some music from South America, Laredo's native continent!

The Saturday night program was typical Monteux: interesting variety along lines popular with the audience. Two works were given their first Tanglewood presentations.

With the economy of gesture for which he is famous, Monteux made neat, expressive listening of Cherubini's seldom-heard Overture to "Anachreon." This was a showcase for the various parts of the orchestra.

In this and the Beethoven concerto, the timpani sometimes exploded too loudly and the trumpets had a harsh edge.

Cooperation

The work of Arrau in the Beethoven "Emperor" Concerto (No. 5 in E flat major) was superlative, and he had marvelous cooperation from Monteux and the orchestra. Never buried, the soloist was nevertheless subjected to an orchestra of great body and fervor, and his intent face mirrored at these times his determination to give the piano its last degree of resonance and authority. The cooperation in the slow second movement was even more thrilling, as the tender melody soared over the soft backgrounds of the ensemble.

The qualities Arrau revealed on Wednesday in his Copin recital were put to good use Saturday, with ample strength to paint oven's thunderous moods and vast poetry for the manifold elaborations of the piece.

First Performance

After intermission, the audience was delighted with the first performance here of Respighi's luscious tone poem, "Fountains of Rome," composed in 1916.

The Valle Guilia Fountain at dawn inspired a pastoral scene; the Triton Fountain suggested a lusty orgy of naiads and tritons; the Trevi Fountain at noon, a sonorous heralding of Neptune's chariot followed by a procession of sea-creatures. The final soft beauties of sunset were brought to mind by the Villa Medici Fountain. Two harps added much to the appeal of Respighi's work.

Far from new to this audience, but beloved as ever, were the droll and dramatic sequences of Richard Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks." This was meat to Monteux's liking. He had the orchestra making its odd sounds with great gusto.

The audience was still cheering 85-year-old Pierre Monteux during his fifth recall to the platform.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657

JUL 25 1960

Tanglewood Review:

Munch, Orchestra in Fine Form At Tanglewood; Laredo Performs

By TERE PASCONE

It will be interesting to watch Jaime Laredo, 19-year-old Bolivian violinist mature. Winner of the first prize in the Queen Elisabeth competition in Brussels last year, Laredo performed Sunday afternoon with the Boston Symphony Orchestra before the Berkshire Festival audience at Tanglewood.

The work he chose was the Mendelssohn Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in E minor, Op. 64. To sum up the performance succinctly and in the vernacular his playing was "not bad."

His reading might be called modest, restrained, in the manner of a man, who, upon being presented to new faces, acts shyly, warily, leaning heavily on the introducer for moral support. This was reflected in part by his position on the stage, one in which he seemingly turned more towards Charles Munch who directed than the audience as though the communication was directed to him primarily.

But, nevertheless, Mr. Laredo was an interesting performer. He perked up the listener's ears by occasionally using a phrasing that was not traditional, noted particularly in the transition theme of the first movement. His tone was small and on occasion lacked crispness, but it was beautifully true to pitch and he demonstrated he has the kind of musical and technical equipment which should give him sturdy support through his violin career.

* * *

THE DAY was a perfect one for a Tanglewood concert. The blanket crowd listened under a blue sky across which even white, fluffy clouds moved only occasionally, while under the shed the coolness provided comfort further conducive to the enjoyment of the concert.

Mr. Munch and the orchestra were in excellent form. As the opener, they performed Norman Dello Joio's Variations, Chaconne and Finale, an ingenious work, based on a liturgical theme derived from the "Kyrie" in the Gregorian Missa de Angelis. The brass, woodwind and percussion work was supreb in the many variations of the themes.

Of particular delight was the highly rhythmical Allegro molto vivace movement in which Mr. Dello Joio (who incidentally was in the audience and received warm acclaim) took the Gregorian theme and transformed into a witty, jazzy, secular episode.

* * *

BUT THE HIGHLIGHT of the afternoon was the fresh, exciting way which Mr. Munch conducted Beethoven's Symphony No. 5 in C minor, Op. 67. It was a continuous source of delight from beginning to end. This universally loved work emerged with crispness beauty and perfection of detail and with an enthusiasm that quickly was absorbed by the audience. It was the kind of performance that the professional musician or critic having heard it performed hundreds of times, would have to admit was sweeping and irrisistible. And the C major chords at the end rang in our ears a long time after the concert was over.

All in all, the concert added up to an enjoyable afternoon of familiar music. Even birds were attracted and at one point in the Mendelssohn Concerto, the chirping chorus almost stole the show.

Republican (m)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 22,446

JUL 26 1960

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 40,278

JUL 25 1960

Attendance Record At Tanglewood

(Special to The American)

LENOX, MASS. — Berkshire Symphonic Festival's first week end with the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Shed at Tanglewood were performances conducted by Pierre Monteux Saturday evening and by Charles Munch yesterday afternoon and Friday evening to pile up a record of over 70,000 which is more than 9,000 ahead of last season's record. Sunday afternoon's audience of 10,508 on a perfect Berkshire afternoon heard the talented 19-year-old Jaime Laredo of Bolivia in a fine performance of Mendelssohn's "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra, in E minor." It heard the colorful performance of Dello Joio's "Variations, Chaconne and Finale" with the composer in the audience called to the platform for plaudits of enthusiastic listeners.

Saturday evening's audience of 10,087 despite a heavy rain late in the afternoon came for a spirited performance of Beethoven's "Concerto No. 5, in E Flat Major, (The Emperor)" with Claudio Arrau scoring another triumph second only to the one he achieved on Wednesday evening when he played an all-Chopin program in observance of the Chopin centenary. Monteux, in his 85th year, received a standing ovation from the musicians and a tremendous ovation from the audience when the concert was over. The venerable French conductor seems to extract from the musicians of the Boston Symphony Orchestra something even Conductor Munch does not get from them. His was a delightful concert topped off as it was with Respighi's "Fountains of Rome." Monteux only repeated his former successes with the Eulenspiegel, conducting it as no one else has done here.

The opening concert on Friday night was dedicated to Serge Koussevitzky in the annual Memorial Concert honoring the founder of the Music School at Tanglewood. The audience heard a rare performance of the Faure "Requiem" with the Festival Chorus joining the soloists.

Audiences next week end will find Munch conducting Friday night the music of Stravinsky, Khrennikov and Rachmaninoff with Byron Janis playing the "Piano Concerto." Saturday night Munch will conduct music of Berlioz, Piston and Ravel with the Festival Chorus. Pierre Monteu will be back Sunday afternoon with music of Mozart and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 9" with the Festival Chorus and soloists, including soprano Eleanor Steber, who in an unprecedented world tour visited and sang in 15 Asian countries.

SM

ALBANY, N.Y.
TIMES-UNION
D. 67,629 S. 118,093

JUL 26 1960

Tanglewood Puts Accent On Youth

Youth was in the saddle for the first series of weekend concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Big Shed at Tanglewood, Friday and Saturday nights and Sunday afternoon.

Two promising young instrumental soloists, Jaime Laredo, 19-year-old violinist and the perennialy youthful Claudio Arrau, Chilean violin virtuoso. Perfect weather brought out a record audience with the soloists receiving an ovation after their performances.

Guest conductor, Pierre Monteux, octogenerian (he is 85) conductor and Charles Munch, the regular conductor of the orchestra, were also received with very un-Boston-like applause with the younger members of the audience giving full vent to their uninhibited enthusiasm.

Mr. Arrau, playing his last concert of the season with the Bostonians left right after his masterful performance of the Beethoven piano concerto, for a series of concerts in his native country for Chilean-relief. Mr. Laredo, in spite of his youth, gave a scholarly if not impassioned performance of the Mendelssohn violin concerto.

The Sunday afternoon concert was devoted to the Beethoven Fifth Symphony under the baton of Mr. Munch, arousing the capacity audience to tremendous enthusiasm. Under his inspired direction the monumental "Fifth" took on new grandeur and authority.

Many Albany music lovers were noted in the shed and among the blanketeers on the lawn.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
D. 571,705 S. 778,582

JUL 25 1960

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Bostonians Please With Old Favorites

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, Mass., July 25.—Standard fare and a beautiful day drew 10,508 people for the Berkshire Festival's matinee concert yesterday. With Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto and Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra could hardly go wrong. The fact that they did not is hardly news, but their drawing larger and larger crowds is.

That the programs for these concerts have too many warhorses is to labor a sore point. Some compensation came yesterday in Norman Dello Joio's "Variations, Chaconne, and Finale," which opened the concert. This prize-winner (Music Critics Circle of New York City Award) sustained interest for the strength of its mood, the vitality of its rhythms, and the skill of its composer, who was present to take a bow. Here is one contemporary American whose music says something on first acquaintance as well as on repeated occasions. The audience applauded most enthusiastically.

Laredo In Bow

As soloist in the Mendelssphn, Jaime Laredo was making his first appearance with the Bostonians. This 19-year-old Bolivian violinist met the challenge of this concerto like an old trouper, though his playing created no sensation. His performance was musicianly and tonally a delight, and he played the finale with a light, nimble bow; but the eternally youthful spirit of the work did not come through to this listener. His career will be worth watching.

Why he played Beethoven's Fifth, only Mr. Munch will divulge. It exerted its customary forcefulness, masterpiece that it is; but some departure from this name brand would have been much more welcome.

Pierre Monteux conducted on Saturday night. Some 10,000 heard more familiar music like Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto with Claudio Arrau as solist, Respighi's "Fountains of Rome," and Strauss' "Till Eulenpiegel" with Cherubini's Overture to "Anacreon" to open the program. Mr. Munch did do the exceptional on Friday night in giving Faure's Requiem. The concert began with Beethoven's "Eroica." It was dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Some 7,500 attended, bringing the weekend total to 28,102. Obviously to hear the Boston Symphony these Summer days is mandatory. What it plays is secondary.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

JUL 23 1960

Audience Hears Special Concert At Tanglewood

By WILLARD CLARK

LENOX—The Berkshire Music Festival here at Tanglewood really got into high gear Friday night with the full Boston Symphony Orchestra directed by Charles Munch opening its series of concerts before an audience of 7507. This was a very special concert, the concert annually dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky, long-time conductor of the orchestra and the man who saw his dream of a music center come true.

Nostalgic Journey

The concert always brings out a large audience, many of whom were in reminiscent vein, remembering the brilliant concerts Dr. Koussevitzky had conducted at Tanglewood through the years. For others it was a nostalgic journey, yet a hopeful one, for there was always the hope that once again the electric current generated by the late conductor might again come to life.

Mr. Munch offered two sharply contrasting works on this program. It opened with Beethoven's towering expression of individuality, the "Eroica" and concluded with the serene, tender and noble "Requiem" by Gabriel Faure.

Much has been written about the "Symphony No. 3 in E Flat Major" and much more will be written. In this symphony Beethoven shook off the shackles of convention and expressed himself as a free soul. Surely the torrents of the opening movement could express little else than his expression of his own defiant nature freed at last to taste to the full artistic freedom. Even the funeral march is an expression of action; there is no sense of morbidity; rather there is a sense of awakening. The tremendous triumph of the variation finale was the only possible conclusion for this symphony.

Reveals Affection

Mr. Munch revealed anew his affection for and understanding of this work. It was never allowed to lag, in fact there was a rush and surge which left one a bit breathless. We have seldom heard the Boston players sound better strings and brasses emphasized the heroism in every phrase.

The performance was a stunning achievement for players and conductor. The audience was visibly stirred. Seated in back of the seats we have occupied ever since the shed was built were Madam Koussevitzky and her guests and in an adjoining box was Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, who, more than anyone else, made the Berkshire Music Festival a reality.

The Faure "Requiem" was given for the first time at Tanglewood if memory serves us correctly. We wondered if it would not be lost in the vast spaces of the music shed. Nothing was lost. Every ethereal note in this exquisite mass was heard. As we listened to this music we remembered the words of Nadia Boulanger writing of the religious music of Faure, "If anything could truly mitigate for us the thought of death, it would be the image of hope, of serenity which he has made for us."

Tonal Color Is Right

The Festival Chorus had been prepared for this work by Hugh Ross. It is an exceptionally good chorus this season and the tonal color employed in the mass was varied and inevitably right for the phrase sung.

The soloists were those two admirable artists Saramae Endich, soprano, and Donald Gramm, baritone. Both are favorably known in Springfield for their work with the orchestra and their skill in recitals in Springfield and Longmeadow.

Miss Endich is at her best in music of this sort and her tones soared beautifully. There was a delightful clarity and purity to the voice which was admirable for this work. Mr. Gramm used his fine baritone to advantage, singing with the fine, stable tone which characterizes his voice and vitalizing the message of his song. This was indeed a moving performance, impressive in its simplicity and warmth.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 25 1960

Tanglewood's Beethoven Concerts Attract 28,102

Music by Beethoven dominated the three-concert series, presented at the Tanglewood music shed this weekend, by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Attendance for the three concerts was 28,102 with the largest crowd, one of 10,508, coming on Sunday afternoon.

Koussevitzky Memorial

Friday night's concert of the "Eroica" by Beethoven and "Requiem" by Gabriel Faure, was dedicated to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky. Charles Munche conducted.

Pierre Monteux took the podium Saturday night and led the orchestra in the overture to "Enacreon," by Cherubini, "The Fountains of Rome" by Respighi and "Till Eulienspiegel's Merry Pranks" by Strauss.

Beethoven was again represented by the "Emperor Concerto" with Claudio Arrauas soloist.

Munch Sunday

Mr. Munch returned Sunday afternoon to conduct a program of "Variations, Chaconne and Finale," Dello Joio; "Concerto for Violin in E Minor," Mendelsohn; and "Symphony No. 5 in C Minor," Beethoven. Jaime Laredo was violin soloist.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON,
Mass.
Circ. 12,847

JUL 26 1960

Monteux, Munch Conduct Orchestra At Tanglewood

The full complement of the Boston Symphony Orchestra opened the third series in the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood this past weekend to a total audience of 28,402.

The annual Koussevitsky memorial concert occupied Friday evening's program conducted by Charles Munch with a vigorous performance of Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and a moving and memorable fabrication of Faure's Requiem, with Saramae Endich, Donald Gramm and the Festival Chorus prepared by Hugh Ross.

When the venerable Pierre Monteux appeared onstage to conduct Saturday night's concert the orchestra stood in his honor, but the audience didn't "take the cue," they remained seated; they did applaud most warmly, however, this remarkable personality.

The first performance at Tanglewood of Luigi Cherubini's Overture to "Anacreon" (a ballet opera which was hissed into oblivion) opened an agreeably chosen program. Cherubini's productive life straddled the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries; his music is virtually unknown and unplayed today, except derivatively, through those composers. Mozart, Gluck, Beethoven and Rossini, and others who were influenced by this "die hard classicist." The classic lines of the overture were drawn with dignity and clarity, the strikingly extended crescendos effectively displayed by the orchestra and Mr. Monteux.

Another highlight was the delightfully enchanting and eloquent "Fountains of Rome" by Respighi, made even more captivating by Mr. Monteux' interpretation and the orchestra's understanding.

The program also included Bethoven's "Emperor" Piano concerto in Eb major. Latecomers allowed to be seated after the first movement marred its continuity; Mr. Arrau, the soloist, did not seem to mind. His pianistic approach was not timid; accents were well-marked, co-ordination with the orchestra was beautifully timed, his technique as usual irreproachable, but as often happens with perfection the soul of the concerto was not evident.

The last number, Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks" did not quite achieve the Old-fashioned Roguish Manner, titivation was lacking, although the performance was superb.

Sunday's concert, conducted by Dr. Munch, featured the first appearance with the BSO of 19-year-old Jaime Laredo, Bolivian violinist, winner of the International Music Competition at Brussels in May, 1959. With the abrupt beginning of Mendelssohn's Concerto in E minor the young violinist displayed a silky tone, and throughout a highly developed technique and quite secure intonation. He encompassed the composers style with grace and gentleness, and showed himself worthy of the honors accorded him.

Another first performance was that of the contemporary composer Norman Della Joid's "Variations, Chorale and Finale, its theme based on the familiar liturgical Kyrie in the Gregorian Missa de Angelis. It is stimulating and wholly absorbing, from beginning to end, with its rhythmic and instrumental intricacies, as Dr. Munch and his incomparable orchestra demonstrated.

A martial, lucid, and some fresh interpretative moments marked the performance of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, which closed another weekend of magnificent music.

— M. deB. B.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815
JUL 25 1960

10,508 PERSONS HEAR MUNCH AT TANGLEWOOD

Powerful Performance of Dello Joio Work Given

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Cloudless skies, cooling breezes and a tried and true program directed by Charles Munch drew 10,508 persons to Tanglewood Sunday for the final concert of the three given this week end by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. Total audience for the three programs indicate 28,102 persons present as against 24,640 persons for the three concerts in the 1959 series. We were informed that up to date 70,184 persons have attended the various concerts given thus far in the festival. Last season at this time the number was 61,024.

Bit Daring

As noted the program was tried and true although the opening work, "Variations, Chaconne and Finale" by Dello Joio, may have been thought a bit daring by some of the box holders. However, Mendelsohn's "Concerto for Violin in E Minor" and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 5 in C Minor" were a sufficient antidote.

The violinist in the Mendelssohn concerto was the much-acclaimed 19-year-old Bolivian artist Jaime Laredo, who won first prize in the international music competition of 1959 named after Queen Elizabeth of Belgium. Laredo was evidently the victim of nerves Sunday afternoon.

Awesome Ordeal

It is an awesome ordeal for a youngster to appear with an orchestra of the caliber of the Boston Symphony. He had had a difficult rehearsal period on Saturday and the effects had not worn off by Sunday afternoon. The result was a performance filled with erratic rhythms, pitch deficiencies and much slurring. At times the violin was practically inaudible. Flashes of brilliance were heard during the final measures, but for the most part, the performance was far below what one had been led to expect from reports of previous concerts. At his best, he produces a beautiful, clear tone, resonant and he adds to this an assured technique.

Gregorian Theme

Mr. Dello Joio has written some intriguing music in his "Variations, Chaconne and Finale." The theme is Gregorian and the variations are written with fine clarity and interesting rhythmic patterns. The entire work is effective and Mr. Munch, who does this sort of music extremely well, led his orchestra through a powerful performance.

There is not much that any conductor can add to the multitude of interpretations of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Mr. Munch provided a straightforward, spacious reading of a work which needs little encouragement from its performers.

Ravel, Puccini

Tonight the opera department, directed by Boris Goldovsky, will present an evening of one-act operas and opera scenes. Among the operas will be John Duke's "Captain Lovelock," Ravel's "Spanish Hour" and Puccini's "Sister Angelica." This concert is open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. We have heard some fine voices from the department and this concert should prove a rewarding one. The Wednesday night chamber music concert will be given by the Beaux Arts Trio of New York.

Lawyer Begins

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 31 1960

Second Thoughts On Music

Conductors Please Large Audiences at Tanglewood

Pierre Monteux, Charles Munch Display Fine Artistic Talent; Miss Endich, Mr. Gramm Soloists in Faure's 'Requiem'

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Charles Munch shared his podium with veteran Pierre Monteux last week to the obvious enjoyment of the huge audiences which attended the three concerts. Berkshire weather has been fine and large crowds have attended each concert. The annual concert given in memory of Serge Koussevitsky was conducted by Charles Munch and the program opened with Beethoven's "Eroica" and closed with the Faure "Requiem." This concert is always a splendid affair for the men of the Boston Symphony are in the mood and play even more eloquently than usual.

Mr. Munch's "Eroica" is spacious, finely proportioned and eloquent. He paces it briskly, so that the funeral march becomes an integral part of the whole, rather than a long drawn out segment. Beethoven revelling in new freedom is demanding, but never capricious. Much of the music speaks for itself and needs little encouragement from a conductor.

For the Faure "Requiem," Mr. Munch had the assistance of the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross and a duo of soloists, namely Saramee Endich and Donald Gramm. Miss Endich will be remembered by Springfield audiences for one of the finest recitals we have heard, given on the Bay Path Junior College series, a couple of years ago.

Mr. Ross has good material in the Festival Chorus this season and the chorus singing during the Mass was of extraordinary beauty and elegance. The blend of parts was excellent and there were moments of excitement as well as serenity, which in fact is the essence of this Mass.

Miss Endich used her beautiful voice skillfully. Top notes soared and the middle voice carried to all parts of the Music Shed. This young singer is sincere in whatever she attempts and she has the vocal technique to be able to accomplish what she wishes.

Mr. Gramm, bass-baritone, is another singer favorably known in Springfield. He is one of the best of the male oratorio singers to be heard these days. Like Miss Endich he has an assured technique and a penetrating insight into whatever he attempts. The performance of the Mass was a beautiful one, radiant, sincere and of notable clarity.

Two Ovations

Saturday night more than 10,000 persons turned out to greet the beloved Pierre Monteux, now 85-years-old. He received two ovations, before and after the concert. With a minimum of effort he directed a program of tried and true works, sure-fire, all of them. His soloist was the gifted pianist Claudio Arrau, who had made his gifts known earlier in an all-Chopin recital. Arrau was heard in Beethoven's "Concerto No. 5 in E Flat major," the "Emperor."

Monteux opened the program with a scintillating performance of the overture to "Anacreon" by Cherubini. Then came a colorful, exciting and moving performance of "Fountains of Rome" by Respighi, with the program concluding with a second Tone Poem, "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks" by Strauss.

Mr. Monteux and Mr. Arrau made a stunning duo for the performance of Beethoven's Concerto No. 5 . There was plenty of temperament on tap, disciplined restraint and a glittering array of pyrotechniques when demanded. Arrau has plenty of power, yet he can manage a lovely legato and his ornamentations were clean and sparkling. Mr. Monteux brought his vast experience and insight to the concerto so that one heard a performance of utter grandeur.

Ideal Weather

Sunday was another big day at Tanglewood with literally hundreds of persons sitting outside the Shed enjoying an ideal day. One Chinese couple brought their month old boy, it was his first concert, they said. He seemed fascinated by the hubbub around him. Incidentally, audiences seem to be wearing more clothes this season. Of course, there is the usual guard of old duffers who sport Bermuda shorts, etc., and portly dames who apparently never look in a rear view mirror to see the total effect of their shorts. But on the whole, the younger set looks pretty nice, confortable and clean.

Charles Munch also offered a sure-fire program, the only contemporary work being "Variations, Chaconne and Finale" by Dello Joio. Beethoven's fifth symphony concluded the program and the soloist was the much acclaimed Jaime Laredo, 19-year-old Bolivian violinist, who won first place in the 1959 International Music Competition, sponsored by Queen Elizabeth of Belgium. He played the Mendelssohn violin concerto.

The young man was evidently suffering from a bad case of nerves. He seemed unable to follow Mr. Munch; his pitch was off and at times he was inaudible. In other words, it was not a performance one would expect after reading his press notices. Of course, it is an awesome thing to play with the Boston Symphony and before more than 10,000 people. Given another chance he probably will do better.

Beethoven's fifth symphony has had so many interpreters that there is nothing new for them to find in it. It can be said that one is not likely to hear a better performance than Mr. Munch and the Boston players gave it Sunday.

Mr. Dello Poio is a skilled craftsman who does not eschew melody. He bases his Variations on a liturgica theme and from there uses his imagination and skill to bring us a vital score. The concluding pages resolve into a wonderful chorale, afitting climax by a gifted composer.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 24 1960

Pierre Monteux In Fine Concert At Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—The focal point of this second concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the music shed was not the orchestra, not the brilliant soloist Claudio Arrau.

It was a short, round little man with a fine mustache. Pierre Monteux, 85 years old had returned to an orchestra which loved him and to an audience whose affection grows with every year.

It is a pleasure to watch Pierre Monteux conduct these days. He knows how to conserve his resources. There is not a superfluous gesture. Every motion, however slight, is meaningful, and the sum total of his interpretations is the result of years and years of experience.

It is hardly necessary to go into detail about the Monteux interpretations. His repertoire these days is tried and true.

The program opened with the overture to "Enacreon" by Cherubini. The other orchestral works were "Fountains of Rome," a symphonic poem by Respighi, a work which Mr. Monteux has made his own, and another tone poem, "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks" by Richard Strauss. This is another war horse which never fails to make its points.

Claudio Arrau had made known his splendid gifts during a recital of piano works by Chopin. Saturday night he played with magnificent bravura, restrained intensity and superlative musicianship the "Piano Concerto No. 5 in E Flat Major," (Emperor) by Beethoven.

This concerto was most radical for its time. Beethoven threw away all inhibitions and convention in the writing of this work. Its sweeping and impetuous grandeur were, to that time, unknown in this medium, and the elaborate bravura passages caused something more than astonishment to the listeners.

Arrau was entirely proficient. He displayed both dazzling virtuosity and lyrical beauty. His collaboration from conductor and orchestra was superb. The performance merited and got a tremendous ovation, conductor and soloist being called back a half-dozen times.

In his tone poem "The Fountains of Rome," Respighi successfully evokes the mood created by four fountains in as many different places in Rome. Mr. Monteux made each episode one of dramatic appeal. He had every resource he needed within the orchestra, and the result was a performance of surpassing beauty and vitality.

Sunday afternoon Charles Munch returns to the podium to direct a program which will introduce the youthful violinist Jaime Laredo in the Mendelssohn violin concerto, Beethoven's Symphony No. 5 in C Minor and "Variations, Chaconne and Finale" by Dello Joio.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 57,341

JUL 25 1960

Music: Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN,
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Rarely has Tanglewood heard a comparatively new and as wholesome a work as Norman Dello Joio's "Variations, Chaconne and Finale" that was played yesterday afternoon by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch.

The music and composer, who was present, received a glowing reception from an audience of 10,306. This brought the weekend's total attendance to 28,102.

Balance of the program was the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto with Jaime Laredo as soloist, and Beethoven's Symphony No. 5 in C Minor, Opus 67.

Based on Kyrie

The dello Joio work is based on the kyrie from the Gregorian Missa de Angelis.

In its initial stage, the theme is given with the utmost simplicity, taking into account a slightly-off-the-beaten-path approach of modern technique. However, it remains entirely perceptible to the ear and certainly makes no injury to pure sensitivities.

The variations are filled with spurious ideas, ranging from sombrous atitudes to gradiosity and ornate filigree. Combined, they create an engrossing serios of tonal effects, and require more than a normal amount of technique.

A Major Role

Brasses are exploited mainly as stentorean instruments, and the percussion section plays a major role.

The "Chaconne" tends to be morbid, or at least reflective. Skillfully contrived systems make a straight pavement to climax with brasses screaming in close harmony.

In the "Finale," Dello Joio abandons whatever reverent incentives he had and handles the theme with purely secular gloves. The results are braggartly, highly rhythmic, and almost harsh in tonalities.

In every respect, except for a slight detachment in continuity between movements, this is music that champions the inclusion of adventurous music in these programs.

Orchestra and conductor gave it a spectacular performance, apportioning with equal ease and purpose the work's "hoop-la," [illegible] sense of piety and virtuosity of purposes.

Young Laredo did his best to show them a thing or two.

The rehearsal on Saturday morning was not a glowing success.

Laredo is a short, stocky young man of 19 who was winner last year of the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium International music competition. He is a native of Bolivia.

Whatever disgressions occured during rehearsal were mechanical rather than interpretive. These can no doubt be attributed to nervousness over appearing for the first time with the great Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Yesterday afternoon, Munch and the orchestra gave Laredo a superb background, tailored in every sense to his individual approach to the Mendelssohn.

Laredo's individuality in the Concerto rested mainly in a sense of prudence and possibly inner conviction.

The Mendelssohn is not a "Warhorse" in the accepted sense.

The young man apparently has no pyrotechnical aspirations, or if he does, they've been temporarily set aside in favor of musicianship. His technique is far from spectacular, in fact, even the concerto's last movement was taken at a discreet pace.

Intonation was on the whole good. Harmonics were produced accurately, and most of the notes of hazardous passages were heard. Laredo produced a rich, sensitive tone in the slow movement.

The main lack at the present would seem to stem from a stoicism that sounds like lack of temperament and fire, plus a restriction in elan that is absolutely essential to great performance.

Munch conducted the orchestra in a standard performance of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, which, in itself, implies excitement. The powerful four-note figure was made to crackle through the first movement like a cry to battle.

The orchestra obliged Munch with a rather dazzling array of dynamics, tonal richness and synchronized phrasing, notable in the second movement whose variations were securely linked.

The epid finale triggered tremendous applause.

Friday evening, the main concerts of the festival resume with Munch conducting the Boston Symphony. Byron Janis will be soloist in Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto. The orchestra will be heard in Stravinsky's "Card Game" and Khrennikov's Symphony No.1.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 25 1960

Music Review

Weekend Concerts at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE BATON for the two weekend concerts at Tanglewood was held by Pierre Monteux Saturday night and Charles Munch yesterday afternoon.

Both conductors led the Boston Symphony Orchestra in programs which attracted crowds counted in five digits, but which read like tasty dishes ready-to-serve on a businessmen's lunch menu. There were two novelties, to be sure, one a contemporary work—the "Variations, Chaconne and Finale" by Norman Dello Joio, who was in the audience and was called to the front of the Shed to acknowledge the applause, and the other the overture to Cherubini's opera-ballet "Anacreon," which dates from before the Beethoven piano concerto on the same program.

* * *

YESTERDAY, favored by ideal weather, Munch ended his program with a dramatic Fifth Symphony of Beethoven. The orchestra played for him with all their exuberant zest and vivid tone.

To consider "the Fifth" as agreeable sounds is to miss the point completely. It defies translation or an attempt to read a story into it. The exhilaration and majesty and the pathos are elements which in a powerful performance is an experience none of the other arts can match. It is probably the most famous piece of music in the literature. The Bostonians' performance is a distilled, refined and polished reading but one which never sacrifices vigor to routine. Munch, on occasion, over-emphasizes some details graphically, and increases the stress in others, but they differ only rarely with the indications the composer intended and offended, if at all, only a few purists.

* * *

THE DELLO JOIO suite starts with a liturgical, five-bar theme played by the oboe, which includes a foreign and unexpected [illegible] sixth step. It soon unfolds [illegible] canonic succession in [illegible] progress and soon expands in involved variations. The [illegible] in spots recall [illegible] Vaughan Williams. The appearance of an irreverent rhythm of brazen coarseness in the Finale was difficult for one listener to justify. Dello Joio then makes use of the first four notes of the original theme in the violas which [illegible] in overpowering brass and percussion to a crash landing.

* * *

THE SOLOIST of the afternoon was 19-year-old Jaime Laredo, the Bolivian winner of the Queen Elisabeth Brussels violin concours. He has all the manual equipment anyone ever needs to play the Mendelssohn concerto or any other he may choose, and his tone is full and round, and especially resonant at the top of the fingerboard. It was an enjoyable performance.

Norman Dello Joio

Jaime Laredo

Laredo should be able by careful and skilled guidance to become an artist. He is as yet only a good violinist, and even there does not conform to standards more mature artists have established. It is no mean ordeal to play for an audience of 10,000 and more, and we are sure certain details of his playing were due only to momentary conditions.

* * *

THE COORDINATION between conductor and soloist in the Beethoven piano concerto was a gratifying joy. Beethoven gives the orchestra more than secondary support. In fact, there is a long, near-hundred bar introduction for the orchestra alone once the soloist has declared his opening flourish. Claudio Arrau and Monteux complemented each other in perfect understanding of each other and mutual penetration of the music.

The concerto has acquired the title of "Emperor" along the way, after and beyond the cognizance of the composer, but it has the ingredient of all immortal masterpieces and of Beethoven specifically, of never sounding jaded no matter how often it is heard. This is due, of course, to a performance such as Arrau gave it yesterday. Majestic where appropriate, gentle in the pathetic slow movement, and brilliant in the final rondo. Bloopers can occur anywhere, but we thought the one by the bassoon near the final coda was a high point in hilarity.

* * *

MONTEUX conducts with a minimum of gestures, yet colors, contrasts and variations in speed and dynamics take place prompted by long experience and deep-seated judgment and taste. The Respighi "Pines" and the Strauss "Till" came off with éclat. There was never any ostentation, but the moods and situations were depicted faithfully, all the way from pentitent to grotesque.

* * *

THE IMMENSE audiences leave no doubt of their enjoyment of such programs, abetted by the best July weather the Berkshires can provide, but it may be well to inspect and reappraise a policy which appeals to box office solely and less if at all to scholars. Everyone always asks "how's Tanglewood doin' this year?", and by that is meant attendance. If the answer should happen to be, which it isn't this year, "a bit behind last year," it might be interpreted as the beginning of a slip toward eclipse or demise, although General Motors hardly suffered permanently from the slip is suffered a couple of years ago.

We appreciate the responsibilities of management, but the distinction of Tanglewood as envisioned by its founder, Serge Koussevitsky, was to establish a summer music venture in which the participants and the conductor would be the entire, unabridged Boston Symphony, with all the principal chair men playing programs of winter series importance and unceasingly exploring the products of contemporary composers or examining the results of musical archaeology.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 190,246

JUL 25 1960

Jaime Laredo Performs at Tanglewood

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 24—Like Topsy, though to better effect and with more finesse, the Berkshire Festival has grown. It keeps on growing and there seems to be no limit other than the capacity of the grounds of Tanglewood.

The first weekend of the main portion of the 1960 Festival ended this afternoon with a total attendance of 28,102. (The same period in 1959 racked up a figure of 24,640).

Today's concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting, brought the Tanglewood debut (and first appearance with this orchestra) of the young Bolivian violinist, Jaime Laredo, in the E Minor Concerto by Mendelssohn.

The program began with a deft and gracious performance of Norman Dello Joio's Variations, Chaconne and Finale, which the composer was present to hear, and ended with the most familiar symphonic piece in the world, Beethoven's Fifth.

Large Talent

Laredo, who is now but 19, won the 1959 Queen Elizabeth competition in Brussels. He is a large talent, with much promise for the future. His technique is extensive if not yet of true virtuoso stature.

He plays musically—and yet, there was something a little disappointing about his account of the Mendelssohn concerto.

That he is still immature in the matter of musical communication, is not surprising but his playing seemed nervous, unsteady at times and not so clean as I have heard it upon recordings.

Dr. Munch gave him a good accompaniment, though for him rather staid and slow of pace.

Tanglewood has a new and finer sound, with its excellent acoustic shell and canopy. These adjuncts of larger resonance have given the Music Shed almost a new dimension.

For the many people who of an evening or a Sunday afternoon spread blankets on the lawn outside the shed, the effect is startlingly different.

Saturday night and this afternoon I had opportunity to roam and listen to the Boston Symphony from various points.

The quality of sound is much improved everywhere: the instruments blend better, with much more of the proportion and sheen to be heard in a fine indoor auditorium, such as Symphony or Carnegie Halls.

The orchestra also helps the shell and canopy to function because the players are now seated on a level stage, and well back from its rim.

For the people out on the lawn, the effect, naturally, is one of distance, but with true perspective. There is very little of that strange out-popping of stray inner voices which used to happen in the old days.

Saturday Concert

Pierre Monteux conducted Saturday night the "Anacreon" Overture by Cherubini; Beethoven's "Emperor" concerto with Claudio Arrau as soloist; Respighi's "The Fountains of Rome" and "Till Eulenspiegel" by Richard Strauss. The evening was one of orchestral splendor and finely-detailed, mellow and authoritative conducting.

The same I could not say of Mr. Arrau's own performance, which, quite unpredictably, ranged from lyric beauty to rough articulation, forced tone and wrong notes.

The slow movement he gave a most unbecoming rubato which stretched the melody out of shape and made it difficult for the orchestra to stay with him.

Where was the consummate artist who, just a few seasons ago, gave in Symphony Hall that magnificent performance of Brahms B-Flat Major Concerto? Nor was the instrument he used Saturday night —at least to my ears—of the best tonal quality.

ALBANY, N.Y.
TIMES-UNION
D. 67,629 S. 118,093

JUL 24 1960

Music at Tanglewood

"The Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, continues the 1960 Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., through Sunday, Aug. 14.

Guest conductors are Pierre Monteux and American composer Aaron Copland.

These pianists will appear as soloists: Byron Janis, Eugene Istomin, Leon Fleisher, Jorge Bolet, and Gary Graffman.

Jaime Laredo and Ruggierio Ricci, violinists, will also appear as soloists.

Friday and Saturday performances begin at 8:30 P. M., Sunday performances at 2;30 P. M.

THE PROGRAMS

Sunday, July 24: Dello Joio: Variations, Chaconne & Finale, Mendelssohn: Violin Concerto (Laredo), Beethoven: Symphony No. 5, Conductor: Charles Munch.

Friday, July 29: Stravinsky: Jeu de Cartes, Khrennikov: Symphony No. 1, Rachmaninoff: Piano Concerto No. 3 (Janis), Conductor: Charles Munch.

Saturday, July 30: Berlioz: Symphonie Fantastic, Piston: Symphony No. 6, Ravel: Daphnis et Chloe Suite (Festival Chorus), Conductor: Charles Munch.

Sunday, July 31: Mozart: "Haffner" Symphony, Beethoven: Symphony No. 9 (Steber, Gray-Masse, McCollum, Laurent, Festival Chorus), Conductor: Pierre Monteux.

Friday, Aug. 5: Wagner: "Die Meistersinger" Excerpts, Sibelius: Violin Concerto (Ricci), Mendelssohn: "Scotch" Symphony, Conductor: Charles Munch.

Saturday, Aug. 6: Beethoven: Prometheus Overture, Dutilleux: Symphony No. 2, Brahms: Piano Concerto No. 2 (Istomin), Conductor: Charles Munch.

Sunday, Aug. 7: Williams: Fantasia on a Theme by Tallis, Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 3 (Fleisher), Brahms: Symphony No. 4, Conductor: Pierre Monteux.

Friday, Aug. 12: Beethoven: Symphony No. 2, Liszt: Piano Concerto in E-flat (Bolet), Stravinsky: Firebird Suite, Conductor: Pierre Monteux.

Saturday, Aug. 13: Handel: Water Music Suite, Chopin: Piano Concerto No. 1 (Graffman), Copland: Symphony No. 1 (composer conducting), Conductor: Charles Munch.

Sunday, Aug. 14: Berlioz: Damnation of Faust (Steber, McCollum, Singher, Festival Chorus), Conductor: Charles Munch.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.
AUG 1960

New York

N. Y. Editor and Critic: WALTER F. LOEB, 445 West 23rd Street, New York City 11. Tel: WAtkins 4-5386
Other Critics: Shirley Cecille Cash (Orchestras), Harry L. Fuchs, Sherman Gottesman

With The Orchestras

By Shirley Cecille Cash

Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

The twenty-third Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood opened with the traditional Bach week-end, July 8-10. This year, for the first time, all the Bach and Mozart concerts are being given in the Music Shed rather than in the smaller Theatre-Concert Hall as previously in order to accommodate the ever-increasing number of people who have been attending these chamber concerts. (Personally, we prefer the acoustics in the Shed, anyway, although there may be those who disagree with us.) The new shell, which was dedicated only last year, is a pleasing shade of grey; but this year, something new was added. In order to make the large stage, which can hold the full 104-man orchestra, look appropriate for the chamber orchestra, about 40% of the full complement, an attractive new red screen was placed back of the men. This gives the impression of a much smaller stage, and probably aids the acoustics for the chamber group as well.

The weather couldn't have been more delightful than it was during the opening week-end. For one doesn't go to Tanglewood just to hear music. There is plenty of that available all winter. One goes for a delightful week-end of music in the country—where moths do an endless ballet overhead during the evening concerts, and where birds join in the music-making with complete abandon on Sunday afternoons.

Charles Munch conducted all three Bach concerts. His interpretations were elegant, Gallic, and romantic. It was not Bach as we are accustomed to hear it, and yet, should one say that it must not be done so? The July 8 program included Suite No. 1 in C Major; Concerto for Violin No. 2 in E Major; with William Kroll as the excellent soloist; Concerto for Clavier, No. 5 in F minor, with Seymour Lipkin doing a superlative job at the piano; and finally the delightful Concerto for Clavier, Flute and Violin, in A minor, with Mr. Lipkin, Mr. Kroll and James Pappoutsakis, flute, as soloists. The Saturday night concert, July 9, opened with two contrapuntal works, the Six Part Ricercare from "The Musical Offering," arranged by Hans T. David and the Final movements from "The Art of the Fugue," arranged by Ernest Munch, with Berj Zamkochian at the organ. After intermission, with Seymour Lipkin again as soloist, there was the Concerto for Clavier, No. 1, in D minor; and Suite No. 4, in D Major. The Sunday afternoon concert, musically speaking, was the most successful, particularly the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, in F Major, for trumpet, flute, oboe and violin—with Roger Voisin, James Pappoutsakis, Ralph Gomberg and Richard Burgin, respectively, as soloists—and the Cantata No. 4, "Christ Lag In Todesbanden." In this final work, the orchestra was joined by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, beautifully trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon. We were sorry that Dr. Munch didn't have more choral works during this Bach week-end, for it is here that Bach seems to find his fullest expression, and here, too, that the performers excelled. This program opened with Suite No. 3 in D Major and Brandenburg Concerto No. 6, in B Flat Major for strings. Notwithstanding some reservations about the interpretation, it was a delightful week-end of Bach. We can still hear those high trumpets, which always sound a little out of tune—we wouldn't have them any other way!

The all-Mozart week-end, July 15-17, proved to be a great delight and a rare musical experience. Both the orchestra and conductor Charles Munch were in top form. The improved acoustics did justice to the fine soloists and the general dynamic balance of the orchestra. The first concert, July 15, featured the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon with leading members of the Boston Symphony as soloists in a reading marked by extremely well-balanced ensemble work. The Jupiter Symphony, another highlight of that evening, was played at a brisk tempo with large contrasts. As soloist for the second night, pianist Claude Frank played the Concerto No. 24 in C with his usual high musical standard, displaying great sensitivity. Conductor Hugh Ross led the orchestra and Festival Chorus in the first Tanglewood performance of the Litany K. 243 with Margaret Kalil and John McCollum as the principal soloists. This early work has many features of the great Requiem. A charming performance of "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" opened the program. The program on Sunday afternoon, July 17, featured an exciting rendition of the Prague Symphony, followed by the Violin Concerto in D, with Joseph Silverstein, a member of the Boston Symphony, as soloist. His performance, while flawless, lacked the humor inherent in this work. The Symphony No. 39 concluded this lovely Tanglewood week-end.

(Continued on page 22)

New York

(Continued from page 2)

—L. F.

The third week-end, which started the series by the full Boston Symphony, opened July 22 with the annual Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. It was a beautiful musical tribute consisting of Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the first Tanglewood performance of Fauré's Requiem. There is little one can say about Dr. Munch's splendid interpretation of the "Eroica," familiar to both winter and summer audiences. But in the rarely played Fauré, the conductor surpassed himself. Here is a work that is gentle, haunting, devotional in an almost medieval sense. Orchestra, chorus (trained by Hugh Ross), and soloists Saramae Endich and Donald Gramm, all responded to the wishes of the inspired conductor. That noble and youthful octogenarian, Piere Monteux, conducted the July 23 concert, which included Cherubini's "Anacreon" Overture, Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto (Claudio Arrau as soloist), Respighi's "Fountains of Rome," and Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel." Mr. Arrau gave the concerto, a familiar item in his repertory, the artistry and warmth that comes with experience. As for Maestro Monteux, it is a source of constant wonder to us that he is able, with a bare minimum of visible motion, to inspire the orchestra to perform with such strength, profundity, and sometimes just plain lusty good humor. The final concert of the week-end, July 24, featured violinist Jaime Laredo, last year's winner of the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Competition, in Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto. It was a fluid and fluent reading, but we would have liked a little more fire. Norman Dello Joio was on hand to share the applause for his "Variations," and the program, which was conducted by Dr. Munch, concluded with Beethoven's Fifth Symphony.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
JUL 23 1960

Music Review

BSO Plays Faure, the Eroica

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST concert of the Tanglewood season in which the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra participated took place last night in the Shed under the direction of Charles Munch.

There were but two works on the program. Both were lofty peaks in their respective areas: The Beethoven Eroica Symphony and the Requiem of Gabriel Faure; this a first performance for Tanglewood, and one in which the Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, also took part. This choice was played in homage to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

* * *

FOR SOME inexplicable reason Faure and the French composers of his era have been strangely neglected, not only at Tanglewood, but in general in the United States. This Requiem was first performed in Paris at the Madeleine where the composer was at the time assistant organist to Saint-Saens. It has a consistent and distinctive character of devotion expressed with fastidious reticence. Except for one or two instances, especially in the "Libera Me" where the chorus rose to jubilant agitation, the whole Requiem remains in a distant, restrained mood, in which the virtues are mainly negative.

Faure reveals penetrating insight into the means of producing his desired effects. He does not call upon the violins at all in the first "Introit and Kyrie," using the sonority of the violas and celli which provide an inspired background for the excellently disciplined quiet control the chorus used. Faure writes supple phrases and gives the accompanying strings long sinuous lines.

SARAMAE ENDICH was the soprano soloist, Donald Gramm the baritone. Miss Endich had but one opportunity, but she deserved laurels for the purity of the mood she maintained and for avoiding the release of her full voice in favor of establishing the touchingly lovely quality of the "Pie Jesu." The quiet sustained nature of this verse was sung with exquisite serenity.

Mr. Gramm was deeply effective in the "Dies Illa" where he infused a fervor and cumulatively increased the tension of his message with vibrant resonance. Munch held his arms transfixed for breathless minutes following the final cadence in which the chorus is accompanied by muted strings with organ and harps. It was a most fitting memorial to a man, Serge Koussevitzky, whose vision is being revealed and justified with increasing conviction each year.

* * *

THE BOSTON Orchestra gave a stirring performance of the Beethven third. The tempi were comfortable, except possibly, the introduction to the Finale, but Munch conceded everything to tone production and the response was formidable. The Funeral March never retarded to a sluggish pace and the cohesion benefited by Munch's pauses and brisk resumptions. The violin sections sounded like soloists; the horns were letter perfect in the trio of the scherzo. The program and the performance augur well for this Festival. An audience of slightly over 7,500 filled the Shed and was sprinkled over the lawn to the rear.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121
JUL 24 1960

Boston Symphony Heard In Concert at Tanglewood

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 23.—Perhaps the recipe for first-class orchestra playing is to keep the personnel busy without a pause. With no rest or vacation after a busy winter season, a trans-Pacific tour, a week at pops, two week ends of chamber orchestra concerts at Tanglewood, and, concurrently with this last, two weeks of esplanade concerts in Boston, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra nevertheless achieved splendid results last night for the opening concert of the Berkshire Festival with full orchestra.

The orchestra never sounded better. Mr. Munch was in top form, with the players resilient and responsive. From the very opening of the Beethoven "eroica" Symphony it was evident that the hearers were in for a special experience. It was not only that the conductor led with verve, enthusiasm and authority. This he and others have achieved over and over again. The plus factor was the ease and freedom with which the various choirs responded and the way the choirs linked their ensembles. To see how Samuel Mayes, the orchestra's first cellist, brought his selection into position with the violins and violas while showing every fidelity to the conductor was in itself a delight to watch and hear. And this was only one example of many remarkable touches and effects.

The splendid performance may well have been the ideal of orchestral playing—leadership based on mutual respect and esteem with such perfect understanding that, in a sense, leadership vanished to be replaced by unity in means, purpose and results.

The Third Symphony projected under such conditions was the more welcome because the concert memorialized the late Serge Koussevitzky for whom Tanglewood and the Boston Symphony-Sponsored Berkshire music center are in themselves the finest living memorials.

After the forthright, objective and basically triumphant "eroica," the Faure "requiem" for chorus and orchestra with soprano and baritone solo, Op. 48, came as quite, meditative and touching contrast. Although the French composer wrote a good deal of what might be termed superior salon music, his best works deserve respectful attention. The "requiem" is among the compositions that place him among the finest secondary composer of recent times.

All of Faure's work has good taste and even his slightest piano pieces show refinement. When to these qualities are added conviction and inspiration the results are at once calming, peaceful and peculiarly convincing. His accents are generally mild and gentle. Qualities of urgency and climax are more suggested than actually realized. Yet he exerts a subtle fascination for many and his champions number some of our most eminent and respected musicians.

Munch let the work flow along in its own manner and at its own pace. The festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, sang with understanding and good timbre. Both soloists, Saramae Endich, soprano, and Donald Gramm, baritone, made telling contributions, while the orchestra was as remarkable in a supporting role as it had been in the symphony.

The 7,500 hearers in attendance left no doubt of their enthusiasm. JULES WOLFFERS

ROGRAMS
ly 24: Dello Joio:
s, Chaconne
delssohn: Viol
edo), Beethoven
No. 5, Conductor
y 29: Stravinsky
Khrennikov
1, Rachman
Concerto No.
ductor: Charles
30: Berlioz
tastic, Piston
6, Ravel: Daph
Suite (Festival
ductor: Charles
ly 31: Mozart
mphony, Beeth
No. 9 (Stober,
McCollum, Laur
Chorus), Conduc
nteux.
5: Wagner:
inger" Excerpts,
n Concerto (Ric sohn: "Scotch"
nductor: Charles
Aug. 6: Beetho
heus Overture,
mphony No. 2,
Concerto No.
Conductor:
7: Williams:
Theme by Tal
Piano Con
(Fleisher), phony No. 4,
re Monteux.
12: Beethoven:
2, Liszt: Piano
E-flat (Bolet), rebird Suite,
e Monteux.
13: Handel:
Suite, Chopin:
No. 1 (Graff
Symphony
er conducting),
Munch.
Berlioz
(Stober, ghez, Festival
ductor: Charles

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.
AUG 1960

New York

N. Y. Editor and Critic: WALTER F. LOEB, 445 West 23rd Street, New York City 11. Tel: WAtkins 4-5386
Other Critics: Shirley Cecille Cash (Orchestras), Harry L. Fuchs, Sherman Gottesman

With The Orchestras

By Shirley Cecille Cash

Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

The twenty-third Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood opened with the traditional Bach week-end, July 8-10. This year, for the first time, all the Bach and Mozart concerts are being given in the Music Shed rather than in the smaller Theatre-Concert Hall as previously in order to accommodate the ever-increasing number of people who have been attending these chamber concerts. (Personally, we prefer the acoustics in the Shed, anyway, although there may be those who disagree with us.) The new shell, which was dedicated only last year, is a pleasing shade of grey; but this year, something new was added. In order to make the large stage, which can hold the full 104-man orchestra, look appropriate for the chamber orchestra, about 40% of the full complement, an attractive new red screen was placed back of the men. This gives the impression of a much smaller stage, and probably aids the acoustics for the chamber group as well.

The weather couldn't have been more delightful than it was during the opening week-end. For one doesn't go to Tanglewood just to hear music. There is plenty of that available all winter. One goes for a delightful week-end of music in the country—where moths do an endless ballet overhead during the evening concerts, and where birds join in the music-making with complete abandon on Sunday afternoons.

Charles Munch conducted all three Bach concerts. His interpretations were elegant, Gallic, and romantic. It was not Bach as we are accustomed to hear it, and yet, should one say that it must not be done so? The July 8 program included Suite No. 1 in C Major; Concerto for Violin No. 2 in E Major, with William Kroll as the excellent soloist; Concerto for Clavier, No. 5 in F minor, with Seymour Lipkin doing a superlative job at the piano; and finally the delightful Concerto for Clavier, Flute and Violin, in A minor, with Mr. Lipkin, Mr. Kroll and James Pappoutsakis, flute, as soloists. The Saturday night concert, July 9, opened with two contrapuntal works, the Six Part Ricercare from "The Musical Offering," arranged by Hans T. David and the Final movements from "The Art of the Fugue," arranged by Ernest Munch, with Berj Zamkochian at the organ. After intermission, with Seymour Lipkin again as soloist, there was the Concerto for Clavier, No. 1, in D minor; and Suite No. 4, in D Major. The Sunday afternoon concert, musically speaking, was the most successful, particularly the Brandenburg Concerto No. 2, in F Major, for trumpet, flute, oboe and violin—with Roger Voisin, James Pappoutsakis, Ralph Gomberg and Richard Burgin, respectively, as soloists—and the Cantata No. 4, "Christ Lag In Todesbanden." In this final work, the orchestra was joined by the Berkshire Festival Chorus, beautifully trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon. We were sorry that Dr. Munch didn't have more choral works during this Bach week-end, for it is here that Bach seems to find his fullest expression, and here, too, that the performers excelled. This program opened with Suite No. 3 in D Major and Brandenburg Concerto No. 6, in B Flat Major for strings. Notwithstanding some reservations about the interpretation, it was a delightful week-end of Bach. We can still hear those high trumpets, which always sound a little out of tune—we wouldn't have them any other way!

The all-Mozart week-end, July 15-17, proved to be a great delight and a rare musical experience. Both the orchestra and conductor Charles Munch were in top form. The improved acoustics did justice to the fine soloists and the general dynamic balance of the orchestra. The first concert, July 15, featured the Sinfonia Concertante for Oboe, Clarinet, Horn and Bassoon with leading members of the Boston Symphony as soloists in a reading marked by extremely well-balanced ensemble work. The Jupiter Symphony, another highlight of that evening, was played at a brisk tempo with large contrasts. As soloist for the second night, pianist Claude Frank played the Concerto No. 24 in C with his usual high [illegible] standard, displaying great sensitivity. Conductor [illegible] led the orchestra and Festival Chorus in the first Tanglewood performance of the Litany K. 243 with Margaret Kalil and John McCollum as the principal soloists. This early work has many features of the great Requiem. A charming performance of "Eine Kleine Nachtmusik" opened the program. The program on Sunday afternoon, July 17, featured an exciting rendition of the Prague Symphony, followed by the Violin Concerto in D, with Joseph Silverstein, a member of the Boston Symphony, as soloist. His performance, while flawless, lacked the humor inherent in this work. The Symphony No. 39 concluded this lovely Tanglewood week-end.

(Continued on page 22)

New York

(Continued from page 2)

—L. F.

The third week-end, which started the series by the full Boston Symphony, opened July 22 with the annual Koussevitzky Memorial Concert. It was a beautiful musical tribute consisting of Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the first Tanglewood performance of Fauré's Requiem. There is little one can say about Dr. Munch's splendid interpretation of the "Eroica," familiar to both winter and summer audiences. But in the rarely played Fauré, the conductor surpassed himself. Here is a work that is gentle, haunting, devotional in an almost medieval sense. Orchestra, chorus (trained by Hugh Ross), and soloists Saramae Endich and Donald Gramm, all responded to the wishes of the inspired conductor. That noble and youthful octogenarian, Piere Monteux, conducted the July 23 concert, which included Cherubini's "Anacreon" Overture, Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto (Claudio Arrau as soloist), Respighi's "Fountains of Rome," and Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel." Mr. Arrau gave the concerto, a familiar item in his repertory, the artistry and warmth that comes with experience. As for Maestro Monteux, it is a source of constant wonder to us that he is able, with a bare minimum of visible motion, to inspire the orchestra to perform with such strength, profundity, and sometimes just plain lusty good humor. The final concert of the week-end, July 24, featured violinist Jaime Laredo, last year's winner of the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Competition, in Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto. It was a fluid and fluent reading, but we would have liked a little more fire. Norman Dello Joio was on hand to share the applause for his "Variations," and the program, which was conducted by Dr. Munch, concluded with Beethoven's Fifth Symphony.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
JUL 23 1960

Music Review

BSO Plays Faure, the Eroica

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIRST concert of [illegible] Tanglewood season in which [illegible] complete [illegible] Symphony Orchestra [illegible] last night in the Shed under the direction of Charles Munch.

There were but two works on the program. Both were [illegible] peaks in their respective areas. The Beethoven Eroica Symphony and the Requiem of Gabriel Faure, this a first performance for Tanglewood, and one in which the Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, also took part. This choice was played in homage to the memory of Serge Koussevitzky.

• • •

FOR SOME inexplicable reason Faure and the French composers of his era have been strangely neglected, not only at Tanglewood, but in general in the United States. This Requiem was first performed in Paris at the Madeleine where the composer was at the time assistant organist to Saint-Saens. It has a consistent and distinctive character of devotion expressed with fastidious reticence. Except for one or two instances, especially in the "Libera Me" where the chorus rose to jubilant agitation, the whole Requiem remains in a distant, restrained mood, in which the virtues are mainly negative.

Faure reveals penetrating insight into the means of producing the desired effects. He does not call upon the violins at all in the first "Introit and Kyrie," using the sonority of the violas and [illegible] which provide an inspired background for the excellently disciplined quiet control the chorus used. Faure writes supple phrases and gives the accompanying strings long sinuous lines.

SARAMAE ENDICH was the soprano soloist, Donald Gramm the baritone. Miss Endich had but one opportunity, but she deserved laurels for the purity of the mood she maintained and for avoiding the release of her full voice in favor of establishing the touchingly lovely quality of the "Pie Jesu." The quiet sustained nature of this verse was sung with exquisite serenity.

Mr. Gramm was deeply effective in the "Dies Illa" where he infused a fervor and cumulatively increased the tension of his message with vibrant resonance. Munch held his arms [illegible] for breathless minutes [illegible] the final cadence in [illegible] chorus is accompanied by [illegible] strings with organ and harps. It was a most fitting memorial to a man, Serge Koussevitzky, whose vision is being revealed and justified with increasing conviction each year.

• • • •

THE BOSTON Orchestra gave a stirring performance of the Beethven third. The [illegible] comfortable [illegible] introduction [illegible] but Munch [illegible] to tone production and [illegible] was formidable. The Funeral March never retarded to a sluggish pace and the [illegible] benefited by Munch's [illegible] and brisk [illegible] the violin sections sounded like soloists; the horns were [illegible] perfect in the trio of the scherzo. The program and the performance augur well for this Festival. An audience of slightly over 7 [illegible] filled the Shed and was [illegible] over [illegible] the [illegible]

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121
JUL 24 1960

Boston Symphony Heard In Concert at Tanglewood

Special to the Herald Tribune

LENOX, Mass., July 23.—Perhaps the recipe for first-class orchestra playing is to keep the personnel busy without a pause. With no rest or vacation after a busy winter season, a trans-Pacific tour, a week at pops, two week ends of chamber orchestra concerts at Tanglewood, and, concurrently with this last, two weeks of esplanade concerts in Boston, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra nevertheless achieved splendid results last night for the opening concert of the Berkshire Festival with full orchestra.

The orchestra never sounded better. Mr. Munch was in top form, with the players resilient and responsive. From the very opening of the Beethoven "Eroica" Symphony it was evident that the hearers were in for a special experience. It was not only that the conductor led with verve, enthusiasm and authority. This he and others have achieved over and over again. The plus factor was the ease and freedom with which the various choirs responded and the way the choirs linked their ensembles. To see how Samuel Mayes, the orchestra's first cellist, brought his selection into position with the violins and violas while showing every fidelity to the conductor was in itself a delight to watch and hear. And this was only one example of many remarkable touches and effects.

The splendid performance may well have been the ideal of [illegible] playing—leadership based on mutual respect and esteem with such perfect understanding that, in a sense, [illegible] wanted to be [illegible] jected under such conditions was the more welcome because the concert memorialized the late Serge Koussevitzky for whom Tanglewood and the Boston Symphony-Sponsored Berkshire music center are in themselves the finest living memorials.

After the forthright, objective and basically triumphant "eroica," the Faure "requiem" for chorus and orchestra with soprano and baritone solo, Op. 48, came as quite, meditative and touching contrast. Although the French composer wrote a good deal of what might be termed superior salon music, his best works deserve respectful attention. The "requiem" is among the compositions that place him among the finest secondary composers of recent times.

All of Faure's work has good taste and even his slightest piano pieces show refinement. When to these qualities are added conviction and inspiration the results are at once calming, peaceful and peculiarly convincing. His accents are generally mild and gentle. Qualities of urgency and climax are more suggested than actually realized. Yet he exerts a subtle fascination for many and his champions number some of our most eminent and respected musicians.

Munch let the work flow along in its own manner and at its own pace. The festival chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, sang with understanding and good timbre. Both soloists, Saramae Endich, soprano, and Donald Gramm, baritone, made telling contributions, while the orchestra was as remarkable in a supporting role as it had been in the symphony.

[illegible] in attend[illegible]

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

JUL 25 1960

Fauré Requiem as Koussevitzky Memorial

Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux Share Berkshire Conducting Honors

By Robert W. Dumm
Lenox, Mass.

For ears conditioned to music under roofs, there is something special about the mixture of sound and space at the Berkshire Music Center. The parabola of the new sound canopy seems to describe in visual terms the way the music spirals out from the Shed and over the lawns and lakes of Tanglewood.

These were the first concerts of the full complement of the Boston Symphony this summer, and also the first since the orchestra's notable tour of the Orient. The men's suntans did not quite mask a certain tiredness, and it is a testimony to their superb professionalism that the music they made was nevertheless satisfying.

Friday's concert was designated as a memorial to Serge Koussevitzky. His dream arrives at further realization with each passing year, and his lead has given rise to other festivals over the nation, which bring to numberless listeners the blessing of relaxation combined with reflection.

Charles Munch opened with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, but the performance missed the implication of its nickname. Those grinding dissonances which climax the first movement were accurate but heatless, as seemed other knots of tension in the piece. Only at the end of the Scherzo and with the slamming chords of the Finale did the call for extra power seem to be answered.

The Marcia Funebre was marred by a looseness in dotted rhythms, which deprived it of the stark but halting step of marchers in a cortege. Still, there is wisdom in Dr. Munch's occasional way of letting the music "play itself"—at moments of recoiling force — when he tilts backward slightly and lets his arms hang free at his side, as if he were waiting to be carried off by a mounting tidal wave.

* * *

But there was nothing accidental about the Fauré Requiem, which received its first hearing at these concerts. In every note, one could sense the loving concern shared by conductor and players alike. The music itself, freshly virile after more than 70 years, is a miracle of artful simplicity, calling for extreme evenness and purposefulness of delivery. Its interlacing lines have the open purity of Gregorian chant, without sacrificing the suavity of chromatic harmony, which can insinuate a distant tonality as smoothly as dropping a sharp or a flat.

The demand for deep feeling within refined control was wholly met by the orchestra and the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross. And as sometimes happens at a peak of awareness, the performance begins to waft a little, to exceed its own lovely sounds, and stand forth strong in the expression that inspired it originally.

This rare instance came with the baritone solo, "Libera Me," when Donald Gramm first set his own grave tempo, and then went on to unfold a vision in tones of strength and conviction. From this moment, the music moved forward in its course, as inevitably as a great river, which gradually loses itself in a sea of repose. It was magnificent.

* * *

Saturday evening's concert welcomed Pierre Monteux to the podium. The revered octogenarian utterly belied his age in the vigor and keenness of his signals, and the alerted response of his players. After the graceful but faded prettiness of Cherubini's overture to "Anacreon," Mr. Monteux returned with Claudio Arrau for a thrilling reading of Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto.

In recent years Mr. Arrau's pianism has taken on a tensile, sinewy strength, which invigorates all details, even the searching high notes of the Adagio theme. All is made sunnily explicit, and the authoritative production of the bigger chords must have neared Beethoven's own thunderous intentions, except that the pianist was frustrated by an instrument whose metallic timbre was capable only of decibels where sonority had been proposed.

The finale, a favorite pianists' war-dance, was enlivened by Mr. Arrau's unequivocal downbeats and dancing lilt. He made us feel that the concerto was all-of-a-piece. The performance was given a standing ovation, while Messrs. Arrau and Monteux returned for bow after bow.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 57,341

JUL 23 1960

Music:
Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — It must have been purely to fulfill the purpose of a Serge Koussevitzky memorial concert that Beethoven's Symphony No. 3 in E flat major, the "Eroica" and Faure's" Requiem" were combined last night at Tanglewood.

This was the opening concert of four weekends, engaging the full Boston Symphony Orchestra. Charles Munch conducted.

There was an audience of 7,507.

From 2 Standpoints

In a way, the revered Koussevitzky memory was stirringly recalled from two divergent standpoints.

Beethoven and Koussevitzky had revolutionary spirits in common. And Faure's work was certainly an eloquent tribute to the greatness of Koussevitzky, who conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra for 25 years and founded the Berkshire Music Center in 1940.

The Faure "Requiem" was sung by the festival chorus. Soloists were Saramae Endich, soprano, and Donald Gramm baritone.

Beyond the Koussevitzky application, it was questionable programming.

Beethoven Work

Munch and the orchestra gave a performance of Beethoven's "Eroica" that looked tired and sounded hurrying in its first, third and fourth movements.

There was no question that Munch attended zealously to the work's epic aspects. In many respects, technical performance was above par. Melodic features remained in the foreground of thought and sound.

Certainly one could ask for no more incisive chords than at the start of the first movement, as preface to [illegible], alleviated by beautiful solos in woodwinds.

Incidentally, the gentelest phrases were obliterated by planes that chose this enchanting moment to fly over the Music Shed.

Some of the movement's impetuous phrases had a similarly casual impression. And there was a measure of harshness in the brasses, the effect of which was further damaged by out-of-tune horns.

The opening and close of the second movement (funeral march) were magnificent. It was stateliness of first order, perfect stealth, without rigidity or morbidity.

Low Strings

[illegible] was particularly rich [illegible] strings and phrasing was [illegible]. The lighter-veined middle part was beautifully intoned in wind instruments, but here again was pummelling in percussion and an acrid, biting tone in trumpets.

The slow fugue at the end of the march restored an aura of grandeur. And the movement ended on a note of utter repose following its frequent cries of anguish.

The scherzo was hurried, but for reason of expert technique, it remained completely articulate. And here the horns made amends for their previous clinkers.

In the finale, plucked string passages were played with extrodinary precision. Munch caused the tempo to gain in momentum until it approached a virtuoso stage rather than the noble ebulient Slavic effects that Beethoven intended.

After the Beethoven, Faure's "Requiem" was an anti-climax, at least in terms of dramatic content and excitement.

The "Requiem's" intimacy of expression was pretty well engulfed in the hugeness of the Music Shed — like a small gem in a massive setting.

Chorus of 125

The chorus of 125 mixed voices had been expertly prepared by Hugh Ross, and it was obvious that Munch's approach to the score was one of consummate care and preparatory thought.

Tonight's program, by the Boston Symphony conducted by Pierre Monteux, will include Cherubini's "Anacreon" overture, Respighi's "Fountains of Rome", and Richard Strauss' "Tone Poem"; Claudio Arrau will be piano soloist in Beethoven's Concerto No. 5 in E flat major, the "Emperor."

N. Y. Staats-Zeitung und Herold, Donnerstag, 28. Juli 1960

Tanglewood Musik-Festwochen

Die Meister und der Nachwuchs: Claudio Arrau und Jaime Laredo

Auf der Heimfahrt über Turnpikes und Thruways hat der Schreiber [illegible] Zeilen lange über [illegible] Überschrift nachgedacht. [illegible] wieder spielte er mit [illegible] Gedanken, die beiden Wochenend-Konzerte in Tanglewood [illegible] "Konzerte der Kontraste" zu bezeichnen, bis er sich dann überlegte, daß der Begriff des Gegensatzes ja auch in den schließlich gewählten Worten "Meister" und "Nachwuchs" ausgedrückt ist. Denn "Meister" bedeutet Vollendung — und "Nachwuchs" in unseren Tagen leider nur zu oft Versuch der Vollendung oder auch nur eingebildete Vollendung.

Der Meister dieses Wochenendes im lieblichen Tanglewood war Claudio Arrau, der als Solist des Samstagabend-Konzerts Beethovens 5. Klavier-Konzert, das "Emperor", spielte. Der Nachwuchs war durch Jaime Laredo vertreten, einen 19jährigen Geiger, der Sonntag nachmittag das Mendelssohn-Konzert zu Gehör brachte.

Alt und jung. Der Meister und der Nachwuchs. Der Virtuose, der seit Jahrzehnten für sein Publikum das non plus ultra der Interpretation bedeutet — und der Wunderjüngling, der vor einem Jahr noch ein praktisch Unbekannter, in der Flut der internationalen Musik-Wettbewerbe einen ersten Preis erhielt — den Preis der Königin Elisabeth von Belgien. Über Nacht rückte er so in den Mittelpunkt des Publikumsinteresses, aber die Hörer können nicht immer zwischen einem von geschickten Managern zu früh zum Virtuosen gestempelten und einem wahren Meister unterscheiden.

Selten ist das klarer zu Bewußtsein gekommen, wie am vergangenen Wochenende in die grünen Hügeln der Berkshires. Sonnabend Claudio Arrau: Ein wahres Fest der Farben, ein Taumel unerhörter Klangwunder formte sich unter den Händen des Künstlers, der das Werk Beethovens mit espritvollem Pianistentum erfüllte und beseelte. Es war eine bezwingende Vermitthung, es war ein Höhepunkt geistvoller, eigenwilliger Ausdruckskunst. Und der Künstler von dem dieser Zauber ausging, schien in seinem Spiel aufzugehen, schien tief konzentriert, als ob er diese Musik zum ersten Mal vor einem Publikum spiele. Er schien mit den Tönen zu leben — und dankte seinem Publikum schlicht und bescheiden für den stürmischen Beifall.

Das war der Meister.

Am Sonntagnachmittag dann der Nachwuchs: Jaime Laredo. Ein begabter junger Geiger gewiß. Aber das Können des 19jährigen steht in keinem Verhältnis zu seiner Überheblichkeit. Weder die Tatsache, das er schließlich sein Tanglewood-Debüt gab, noch daß dieses Debüt unter einem der großen Dirigenten unserer Zeit, Charles Munch, und mit einem der bedeutenden Orchester Amerikas stattfand, schien den jungen Mann sonderlich zu beeindrucken. Man hatte mitunter den Eindruck, daß er vielmehr glaubte, dem Publikum, Munch und dem Boston Symphonie-Orchester einen Gefallen getan zu haben, überhaupt zu erscheinen und sie mit seinem Spiel zu ehren.

Dabei ist Jaime Laredo noch bei weitem nicht der Virtuose, der er zu sein glaubt. Er hat zweifelsohne eine interessante, aber durchaus nicht vollkommene Technik, er hat einen klaren aber durchaus nicht gleichmäßig reinen und starken Ton. Es ist klar, daß er über ein starkes Talent verfügt, — aber dieses Talent muß sorgfältig gepflegt, behutsam gefördert und entwickelt werden, und der junge Jaime würde sich selbst einen Gefallen tun, wenn er gelegentlich daran denken würde, daß eine Schwalbe keinen Sommer macht und ein gewonnener Musik-Wettbewerb, schwierig wie er gewesen sein mag, noch lange keinen Virtuosen.

*

Der orchestrale Teil der Programme, die am Sonnabend von Pierre Monteux und Sonntag nachmittag, wie gesagt, von Charles Munch dirigiert wurden, brachte Respighis "Fontana di Roma", die "Till-Eulenspiegel"-Suite von Richard Strauß und eine hier unbegreiflicherweise stark vernachlässigte Komposition: Cherubinis Ouvertüre zu "Anacreon" — ein bezaubernd melodiöses Stück reinster Musik. Munch brachte Beethovens "Fünfte", und eine mitreißende Interpretation von Norman Dello Joio's "Variationen", "Chaconne" und "Finale".

E. St.

107

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 175,076

JUL 25 1960

MUSIC

Final Concerts at Lenox Win Applause Despite Weaknesses

By JULES WOLFFERS

LENOX — It would have been expecting too much to have the last two concerts of this weekend reach the remarkable level achieved by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday when their projection of the Beethoven "Eroica" Symphony and the Faure Requiem could scarcely have been surpassed. But human nature being what it is, I hoped for more of the same, only, like Oliver Twist, to be disappointed.

It is not that the Saturday evening program and yesterday afternoon's concert failed to please the large audiences gathered in the Music Shed and listening from the lawns outside. But there were enough weaknesses in both events to take the fine edge off the proceedings.

ALWAYS A GAMBLE

The appearances of Pierre Monteux as guest conductor have become an established custom both at Symphony Hall and at the Berkshire Music Festival. The 85-year-old conductor started true to the excellent form he showed last summer, with a brisk and well-balanced reading of the Cherubini Overture to "Anacreon."

Then came what should have been the crown of this program—the Beethoven "Emperor" Concerto with Claudio Arrau as soloist. But it is always a gamble with the Chilean pianist. Sometimes he plays as if he were an inspired instrument of supernatural forces. The next time he will show awkwardness and lack of digital and interpretative control.

This was not one of the good ones although there were times when it seemed as if he might emerge from the idiosyncracies that got in the way of the score and of the musicians. The Concerto has the simple grandeur of a Doric temple. Too much change of pace, too much elaboration spoils the classic outlines of the creation.

The "Emperor" has its own rubatos and emphases, but these must never get in the way of the even development of the structure. Mr. Arrau was altogether too personal, bringing a Schumann style to the older work.

All this seemed to dispirit the players who paid only routine lip service to the succeeding Respighi's "Fountains of Rome," which, perhaps is all the fading piece deserves. The Strauss "Till Eulenspiegel" closed the program in good-humored style.

AUDIENCE APPLAUDS

Mr. Munch returned yesterday to open with the Dello Joio Variations, Chaconne and Finale. The conductor gave the American work all he had and the players responded gamely, but except for some clever and ingretiating effects in the shorter sections, the work as a whole becomes tedious in the larger sections. Nevertheless the audience applauded the work and composer warmly, when Mr. Dello Joio was brought forward for a bow.

Much interest attached to the first performance in these parts of Jaime Laredo who won first prize in this year's Brussels violin competition. The Bolivian-born, United States-trained young musician showed enough capability in the Mendelssohn Concerto to warrant that he be given every opportunity for future development. His considerable technical and musical attainments did not quite jell into an outstanding performance yesterday and he had some difficulty with his intonation. But let's wait and see before coming to final judgment. The Beethoven Fifth closed the concert and brought the third festival week to a close.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,498

JUL 28 1960

Weekend At Tanglewood

By A. C. S.

July 22

The first concert with full orchestra of this season at Tanglewood was given in memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky. For this year's observance of the annual event, Charles Munch chose Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, in E flat major, and the Faure Requiem. Both were given very personal readings: the "Eroica" tending to be just slightly faster than usual in the first movement, and the Faurer being subjected to all sorts of liberties in tempo.

The very fact that the Requiem was performed should be considered of interest. While it is frequently heard in churches, it is seldom performed in the concert hall and this was, I believe, the first time it has been heard at Tanglewood. The Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, sang with great sensitivity, lovely tone, and excellent diction. Saramae Endich, sopgrano, and Donald Gramm, baritone, were the soloists. Although Miss Endich has a fine voice and sang with conviction, there appeared to be a lack of rapport with the conductor which detracted from the performance. Mr. Gramm was superb as usual. Mr. Munch was obviously sincere in his interpretation of the work. It was a welcome change from the usual programming and one can hope that it will be heard again.

July 23

Pierre Monteux was on the podium Saturday evening for the first of four appearances this season. Both he and the orchestra were in fine form; in fact the orchestra played with such polish and response that were this the usual level of performance, it could be said to have no peer.

Claudio Arrau was piano soloist in the Beethoven Concerto No. 5, the "Emperor." The performance came as close to perfection as one is likely to hear. The balance between piano and orchestra was finely handled and a sense of "oneness" was the key to the execution. Arrau, with a prodigious technique and the imagination to put it to advantage, ran the dynamic gamut from a whisper to a roar with faultless articulation of beautifully molded phrases. It was a privilege to hear and would be considered a highlight of any Festival season.

The other works on the program were the Overture to "Anacreon" by Cherubini, Respighi's Fountains of Rome, and a rerading of Strauss' Till Eulenspiegel that made the work seem even more droll than usual.

July 24

Charles Munch conducted the Sunday program which began with a work by Norman Dello Jojo entitled Variations, Chaconne and Finale. While filled with a typically American flavor, it can hardly be called one of significance. It is "movie type" music and, although easy to listen to, can trace its ancestry to many sources, including the Debussy "cakewalk."

Jaime Laredo, winner of the Brussels International Competition in 1959, was soloist in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto. In his first appearance with this orchestra, the nineteen year-old Bolivian acquitted himself with distinction. Here is a first-class technician and solid musician. The performance was not without faults, but gave promise of stature with added maturity.

Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, in a more measured reading than is Mr. Munch's wont, brought the concert to a close.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 289,111

JUL 24 1960

'A Gripipng Experience'

Full Orchestra At Tanglewood

By JULES WOLFFERS

LENOX—The concert presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Tanglewood's Music Shed Friday night formerly would have been considered the official opening of the Berkshire Festival.

With the preliminary two weeknds of chamber orchestra conerts now raised to official status, he first appearance this summer of Charles Munch and the full [illegible] the third festival week.

[illegible]

Players Rise

[illegible]

But there was [illegible] pening just the same with the rchestra rising to greet Dr. Munch nd with the conductor shaking ands with concertmaster Burgin nd assistant concertmaster Krips.

But perhaps the concert was an opener just the same for never have I heard the Boston Symphony, or any other orchestra for that matter, sound better. The quality of music heard in this Koussevitzky Memorial concert literally was amazing.

What mysterious alchemy transmuted the conductor, the players, the chorus and the soloists into pure gold? What were the factors that made Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony a gripping, heartwarming and vital experience What made the Faure Requiem so poignant and touching that almost one could be persuaded that the French composer belongs to the elect?

Perfect Exposition

Perhaps it was that the concert produced a perfect exposition of the leadership principle as applied to the interpretation of great music. Munch was commanding and in full control, but this was no dictatorship of the baton with the players responding like so many beautifully-timbred puppets. For once the lie was given to the dictum, "There are no orchestras—only conductors." Each player seemed to come to life, to play with freedom and ease.

Each section—the strings, the woods and the brass, produced the cohesion of a fine chamber ensemble. And all the sections consciously and knowingly responded to each other with a precision and balance that was a joy to behold and hear.

As the Beethoven symphony continued, Mr. Munch almost ceased to be the leader. Rather it seemed that peers and equals were all engaged in a joint venture of high significance and great value. It is not certain that all the hearers knew exactly what was taking place on stage. But all sensed the magnitude and splendor of the performance.

Quiet Contrast

More of the same might have been too much. The Faure Requiem formed an intensely moving but contrast to the opening work. Written with the good taste, refinement, economy and discretion that is the composer's hallmark, the Requiem ranks among his finest works and perhaps it is the finest of all.

With Mr. Munch showing keen awareness of the score and with the orchestra supportining with sympathetic tact, the groundwork was laid for the splendid contributions of the vocalists. The Festival Chorus, so well trained by Hugh Ross, sang with excellent quality. As for the soloists, Saramae Endich was superably true in the soprano solos and Donald Gramm projected the baritone sections with dignity, fervor and consummate musicianship.

In the lives of musicians and critics there are landmarks which serve as guides and set the standards. This concert is surely such a landmark.

107

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 175,076

JUL 25 1960

MUSIC

Final Concerts at Lenox Win Applause Despite Weaknesses

By JULES WOLFFERS

LENOX — It would have been expecting too much to have the last two concerts of this weekend reach the remarkable level achieved by Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Friday when their projection of the Beethoven "Eroica" Symphony and the Faure Requiem could scarcely have been surpassed. But human nature being what it is, I hoped for more of the same, only, like Oliver Twist, to be disappointed.

It is not that the Saturday evening program and yesterday afternoon's concert failed to please the large audiences gathered in the Music Shed and listening from the lawns outside. But there were enough weaknesses in both events to take the fine edge off the proceedings.

ALWAYS A GAMBLE

The appearances of Pierre Monteux as guest conductor have become an established custom [illegible] at Symphony Hall and [illegible] Berkshire Music Festival. The 85-year-old conductor started true to the excellent form he showed last summer, with a brisk and well-balanced reading of the Cherubini Overture to "Anacreon."

Then came what should have been the crown of this program—the Beethoven "Emperor" Concerto with Claudio Arrau as soloist. But it is always a gamble with the Chilean pianist. Sometimes he plays as if he were an inspired instrument of supernatural forces. The next time he will show awkwardness and lack of digital and interpretative control.

This was not one of the good ones although there were times when it seemed as if he might emerge from the idiosyncracies that got in the way of the score and of the musicians. The Concerto has the simple grandeur of a Doric temple. Too much change of pace, too much elaboration spoils the classic outlines of the creation.

The "Emperor" has its own rubatos and emphases, but they must never get in the way of the even development of the structure. Mr. Arrau was altogether too personal, bringing a Schumann style to the older work.

All this seemed to dispirit the players who paid only lip service to the succeeding Respighi's "Fountains of Rome," which, perhaps, is all the [illegible] piece deserves. The [illegible] "Till Eulenspiegel" closed the program in good-humored style.

AUDIENCE APPLAUDS

Mr. Munch returned yesterday to open with the Dello Joio Variations, Chaconne and Finale. The conductor gave the American work all he had and the players responded gamely, but except for some clever and ingratiating effects in the shorter sections the work as a whole became tedious in the larger sections. Nevertheless the audience applauded the work and composer warmly, when Mr. Dello Joio was brought forward for a bow.

Much interest attached to the first performance in these parts of Jaime Laredo who won first prize in this year's Brussels violin competition. The Bolivian-born, United States-trained young musician showed enough capability in the Mendelssohn Concerto to warrant that he be given every opportunity for future development. His considerable technical and musical attainments did not [illegible] into an outstanding performance yesterday and he had some difficulty with his intonation. But let's wait and see before coming to final judgment. The Beethoven Fifth closed the concert and brought the third festival week to a close.

LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,498

JUL 28 1960

Weekend At Tanglewood

By A. C. S.

July 22

The first concert with full orchestra of this season at Tanglewood was given in memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky. For this year's observance of the annual event, Charles Munch chose Beethoven's Symphony No. 3, in E flat major, and the Faure Requiem. Both were given very personal readings: the "Eroica" tending to be just slightly faster than usual in the first movement, and the Faurer being subjected to all sorts of liberties in tempo.

The very fact that the Requiem was performed should be considered of interest. While it is frequently heard in churches, it is seldom performed in the concert hall and this was, I believe, the first time it has been heard at Tanglewood. The Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, sang with great sensitivity, lovely tone, and excellent diction. Saramae Endich, sopgrano, and Donald Gramm, baritone, were the soloists. Although Miss Endich has a fine voice [illegible] sang with conviction, there appeared to be a lack of rapport with the conductor which detracted from the performance. Mr. Gramm was superb as usual. Mr. Munch was obviously sincere in his interpretation of the work. It was a welcome change from the usual programming and one can hope that it will be heard again.

July 23

Pierre Monteux was on the podium Saturday evening for the first of four appearances this season. Both he and the orchestra were in fine form; in fact the orchestra played with such polish and response that were this the usual level of performance, it could be said to have no peer.

Claudio Arrau was piano soloist in the Beethoven Concerto No. 5, the "Emperor." The performance came [illegible] perfection as one is [illegible] to hear. The balance between piano and orchestra was [illegible] and a sense of "oneness" was [illegible] key to the execution. [illegible] Arrau with a prodigious technique and the imagination to put it to advantage, ran the dynamic gamut from a whisper to a roar with faultless articulation of beautifully molded phrases. It was a privilege to hear and would be considered a highlight of any Festival season.

The other works on the program were the Overture to "Anacreon" by Cherubini, Respighi's Fountains of Rome, and a rerading of Strauss' Till Eulenspiegel that made the work seem even more droll than usual.

July 24

Charles Munch conducted the Sunday program which began with a work by Norman Dello Joio entitled Variations, Chaconne and Finale. While filled with a typically American flavor, it can hardly be called one of significance. It is "movie type" music and, although easy to listen to, can trace its ancestry to many sources, including the Debussy "cakewalk."

Jaime Laredo, winner of the Brussels International Competition in 1959, was soloist in the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto. In his first appearance with this orchestra, the nineteen year-old Bolivian acquitted himself with distinction. Here is a first-class technician and solid musician. The performance was not without faults, but gave promise of [illegible] added maturity. Beethoven's Fifth Symphony in a more measured reading than is Mr. Munch's wont, brought the concert to a close.

JUL 24 1960

'A Gripipng Experience'

Full Orchestra At Tanglewood

By JULES WOLFFERS

LENOX—The concert presented by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Tanglewood's Music Shed Friday night formerly would have been considered the official opening of the Berkshire Festival.

With the preliminary two weekends of chamber orchestra concerts now raised to official status, the first appearance this summer of Charles Munch and the full [illegible]

But there was [illegible] opening just the same with the orchestra rising to greet Dr. Munch and with the conductor shaking hands with concertmaster Burgin and assistant concertmaster Krips.

But perhaps the concert was an opener just the same for never have I heard the Boston Symphony, or any other orchestra for that matter, sound better. The quality of music heard in this Koussevitzky Memorial concert literally was amazing.

What mysterious alchemy transmuted the conductor, the players, the chorus and the soloists into pure gold? What were the factors that made Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony a gripping, heartwarming and vital experience. What made the Faure Requiem so poignant and touching that almost one could be persuaded that the French composer belongs to the elect?

Perfect Exposition

Perhaps it was that the concert produced a perfect exposition of the leadership principle as applied to the interpretation of great music. Munch was commanding and in full control, but this was no dictatorship of the baton with the players responding like so many beautifully-timbred puppets. For once the lie was given to the dictum, "There are no orchestras—only conducters." Each player seemed to come to life, to play with freedom and ease.

Each section—the strings, the woods and the brass, produced the cohesion of a fine chamber ensemble. And all the sections consciously and knowingly responded to each other with a precision and balance that was a joy to behold and hear.

As the Beethoven Symphony continued, Mr. Munch almost ceased to be the leader. Rather, it seemed that peers and equals were all engaged in a joint venture of high significance and great value. It is not certain that all the hearers knew exactly what was taking place on stage. But all sensed the magnitude and splendor of the performance.

Quiet Contrast

More of the same might have been too much. The Faure Requiem formed an intensely moving but contrast to the opening work. Written with the good taste, refinement, economy and discretion that is the [illegible] hallmark, the Requiem [illegible] among his finest works and perhaps it is the finest of all.

With Mr. Munch showing keen awareness of the score and with the orchestra supporting with sympathetic tact, the groundwork was laid for the splendid contributions of the vocalists. The Festival Chorus, so well trained by Hugh Ross, sang with excellent quality. As for the soloists, Saramae Endich was superably true in the soprano solos and Donald Gramm projected the baritone sections with dignity, fervor and consummate musicianship.

In the lives of musicians and critics there are landmarks which serve as guides and set the standards. This concert is surely such a landmark.

l 108

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 190,246

JUL 23 1960

Symphony at Tanglewood: Music of Magnificence

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, July 22—To put the matter in simple, factual terms, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra tonight began the main portion of the 1960 Berkshire Festival here in the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

To state what happened in artistic terms, this was one night, one concert in a thousand. The sound, the playing, the music all were total glory and sheer magnificence.

Two large works made the program, Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony and the Requiem of Gabriel Faure, the latter performed in memory of Serge Koussevitzky. The Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross, participated, and the two excellent soloists were Saramae Endich, soprano, and Donald Gramm, bass-baritone.

Polished, Masterly

This was the first Berkshire Festival performance of Faure's tender and delicate Requiem, which is rare enough anywhere. The score is a masterly tissue of the most precisely calculated balances between instruments and instruments-and-voices. It is most distinctively—and distinguishedly—French, in the polished and sculptural lines of its melody and in the extreme care of its facture.

It seldom speaks out with the force and weight of orchestra and voices at their peak of volume, and there is no Dies Irae to depict the awful reckoning of the Day of Judgment.

This essentially is a gentle Mass for the repose of the dead, and it ends in the shimmering harp-and-strings promise of Paradise.

Accordingly, the Faure Requiem takes some doing. Tonight's performance, beyond any doubt, was the most polished and restrained of any I ever have heard. Indeed, when the chorus first uttered "Requiem aeternam, dona eis, Domine," the tone was so soft and remote that it seemed disembodied.

Because of Munch's extreme care for delicacy and clarity, there was a wealth of instrumental detail to be heard and savored. The entire performance had the quality almost of chamber music.

The singin gof Miss Endich, of the pure and lovely soprano resonance, and of the dark-velvet-voiced Gramm were scaled to these dimensions. The style, therefore, was of striking consistency.

A Classic Performance.

Munch had wrought equally well in account of Beethoven's "Eroica" so clean and vital and completely expressed that there is but one word to apply to it, that word is "classic."

The tempi were never too fast (or fast enough in scherzo and finale) and certainly not ever too slow. The drama of Beethoven's favorite among his own symphonies was marvelously powerful and neer exaggerated. It is this sort of loving care that can make even the most familiar music seem new and fresh and full of wonders.

Not to detract from the achievement of the musicians, one must add that the new acoustic reflector and the still newer dark-gray stage acoustic shell have greatly improved the sound in Tanglewood's Music Shed. The difference is extraordinary.

AMUSEMENTS

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Circ. 42,164

JUL 30 1960

Music

Monteux's Artistry Thrills Festival Folk

By Alfred Burke

LOWELL — The past week-end at the Berkshire Festival, Lenox, produced programs of performing value. Pierre Monteux conducted on Saturday evening, and as usual provided his listeners with a performance that was of the highest artistic order. Papa Pierre, as he is fondly called by countless artists who have played under his baton, continues a career that is remarkable both for its span of years and musical brilliance.

Leon Fleisher

His soloist on this accasion was the South American pianist, Claudio Arrau. Mr. Arrau has had better evenings in his career, but to his advantage is the fact that possibly no one today even approaches his playing of the Beethoven Concerto No. 5. No doubt, the pianist has his opinions about this music — some of them not in line with the ideas of some musicians and critics. However, he can be called a pianist who possesses a tremendous musical knowledge, uses a technical style that is suited for the "big" works of piano literature, and completing the picture, a gracious feeling that often times makes his playing over warm and poised.

On Sunday, Charles Munch returned to score an afternoon of success. His orchestra, repeating its excellence of Saturday evening, was notably good during the performance of the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto, which on this occasion was played by another South American, Jaime Laredo. The American trained violinist has the making of a top-flight artist, but remains among those who have talent but have yet to be called a mature and finished artist. He plays, very well, has a fine sense of feeling and a technical means above the average. He is promising and could in a few short years achieve the position of a violinist of artistic standing.

THE BRILLIANT young pianist, Leon Fleisher, will be guest artist next week at the Festival and he will be heard in the Beethoven Concerto No. 3. This program which is scheduled for Sunday afternoon, will include Williams' Fantasia on a theme by Tallis and the Brahms Symphony No. 4. Pierre Monteux will conduct. Charles Munch who will direct Saturday evening's concert has selected Beethoven's "Prometheus" overture; Dutilleux's Symphony No. 2 and the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2 with the gifted pianist, Eugene Istomin, as soloist.

Violinist Has Skill, Lacks Bravado

In a young artist one can reasonably expect bravura, or lacking that, bravado.

And, if the young artist is of sufficient stature to appear with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, one takes his technical skills almost for granted.

Now bravura may not always be called for by the composer, but one expects at least a bit of it from a 19-year-old soloist with the Boston. And bravado is always engaging in the young.

A Mystery

Jamie Laredo, who played the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto at Tanglewood Sunday, had neither.

Technical skill he had, as one would expect from one who had won the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Competition. But why should a 19-year-old with the promise of a brilliant career, appear to be taking it so easy as Mr. Laredo did on Sunday afternoon.

Could it be that he has a phenomenal conceit He certainly didn't appear to be scared. The trouble was he didn't appear to be much of anything.

Another Example

Not that he didn't play the concerto well, you understand, just that he was disappointing in his lack of anything approaching fire or enthusiasm.

JAMIE LAREDO
What's Missing?

Starngely enough another young violinist playing with the orchestra exhibited the same softness and lack of enthusiasm, last week. He was Joseph Silverstein who appeared in the Mozart Violin Concerto.

One hadn't, however expected quite so much of Mr. Silverstein, who is a member of the orchestra. He hadn't won the Queen Elisabeth award.

Truthfully he didn't play nearly as well as Mr. Laredo . . . but he didn't play as well for a different reason.

The Sunday Tanglewood program included Dello Joio's Variations, Chaconne and Finale, which Mr. Munch conducted with dash and vigor and apparently very much to the liking of Mr. Dello Joio who was in the audience and was called to the stage. The proram ended with Beethoven's Fifth, and very pleasingly done it was, too. (D. L[illegible].)

Do you see any Criticism like this locally?

This review appeared in an Albany paper on 26 July 1960! Which paper, I know not.

109

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635

JUL 25 1960

Music: Arrau and Laredo at Lenox

Pianist Plays 'Emperor' —Monteux Conducts

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 24—The week-end emphasis of the Berkshire Music Festival programs at Tanglewood was on two virtuosos—one established for many years, the other on his way up.

Claudio Arrau, the veteran pianist, was Saturday night's soloist in the Beethoven "Emperor" Concerto. Jaime Laredo, this afternoon, played the Mendelssohn Violin Concerto. The musicians have at least one thing in common: they are South Americans. Mr. Arrau was born in Chile, Mr. Laredo in Bolivia.

•

Youth is supposed to be the time for romanticism, impulsiveness, brio. Mr. Laredo, who is 19 years old, has the requisite age, but his playing is anything but romantic, impulsive or dashing. Rather it is careful, sweet and, to tell the truth, bland.

Two years ago Mr. Laredo was unknown. Last year, he was launched when he won the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Competition. He is a stocky young man who seems to have enormous self-possession. He walked on stage with a rather bored look and did not change his expression during his performance of the concerto. Even when accepting applause, he looked bored.

He is, of course, a fine (though not infallible) technician. He could not have otherwise captured the Brussels competition. His tone is sweet and his training has been thorough. But his approach to the instrument is of an old-fashioned and all but obsolete variety, featuring slides, a rather heavy vibrato and an emphasis on surface virtuosity. However, even in matters of virtuosity, he often failed to come to the fore. The coda of the Mendelssohn, for example, did not appear to excite him, and he played it down to the point where it was almost inaudible.

Violinistically speaking, the talent is there, and it is a big one. Musically speaking, Mr. Laredo has yet to find a style. When his playing develops passion, conviction and profile, his natural gifts should carry him to the top.

As for Mr. Arrau, his playing was, as always, that of the confident and experienced artist. His views toward the "Emperor" are familiar. Granting that his ideas were unconventional, the authority and finish of his presentation were more than enough to put the performance on a superior level.

Charles Munch conducted this afternoon's concert, and Pierre Monteux was in charge of Saturday evening's. Mr. Monteux led the Boston Symphony in Cherubini's "Anacreon" overture, Respighi's "Fountains of Rome" and

Jaime Laredo

Strauss' "Till Eulenspiegel," in addition to the "Emperor" Concerto. At the age of 85, Mr. Monteux still can order the thunders, command the lightning and summon the gale. His interpretation of the Strauss tone poem was that of a lusty young man—a young man, say, with eighty-five years of experience.

The novelty of the program was the Cherubini overture, and it was pleasant to hear it again. The work is almost out of the repertory. How many lesser pieces are in it? Not for nothing was Cherubini admired by Beethoven and every major musician of the day.

The "Anacreon" is a strong piece of music, beautifully worked out and masterfully orchestrated. It was composed in 1803, and it is amazing how much it anticipates some of the music Beethoven later was to write.

Mr. Munch conducted a program consisting of Norman Dello Joio's Variations, Chaconne and Finale; the Mendelssohn, with Mr. Laredo, and Beethoven's Fifth. The Dello Joio work is by way of becoming a classic. It apparently gets as many performances as any orchestral work by any American composer.

Considering its warm, romantic and relatively uncomplicated writing, one can see why conductors and audiences like it. The composer was in the audience, and Mr. Munch called him to the stage.

Violinist Led by Munch in Mendelssohn Work

Condensed 'Rigoletto'

THE City Symphony Orchestra of New York, at its Saturday evening concert on the Mall in Central Park, offered "Rigoletto" in "concert form," meaning, without sets, costumes or chorus. Franz Bibo was the conductor.

Imaginative work, from the musical standpoint, can be done on a bare stage, but the lack of a chorus necessitates severe cuts. The first scene of Act I consisted solely of the Duke's aria, "Questa o quella," and Monterone's curse. The second scene omitted the delightful chorus of the conspirators, "Zitti, zitti." About half the second act was omitted; it began with "Cortigiani, vil razza."

•

Under the circumstances a coherent, unified performance of "Rigoletto" was out of the question.

As far as they went, however, the excerpts were quite well done. Mr. Bibo ruled his musical forces with a firm hand and guided the performance at judicious speed.

•

Among the principals, especially fine performances were those of Lillian Messina, a 1958 winner of the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air, as Gilda; Rod McWherter, who disclosed a fresh, appealing tenor voice as the Duke, and Robert Paul, who found the title role congenial for his resonant baritone voice.

One would, in fact, like to hear the same principals in a more complete performance, and under less acoustically difficult conditions.

Philippa Leeds, as Maddalena, John Sadler, as Sparafucile, and Fred Patrick, as Monterone, completed the cast. The music was sung in English, in the excellent translation of Ruth and Thomas P. Martin.

JOHN BRIGGS.

Martyn Green Heard

MARTYN GREEN is back again, and New York is the merrier for it.

At Lewisohn Stadium on Saturday night, the stalwart master of W. S. Gilbert's impeccable lyrics made his first singing appearance here since the accident last November in which his left leg was amputated.

Mr. Green limped slightly as he walked on stage, but there, he delivered things like "A Modern Major-General" and "The Nightmare Song" with the flair, spirit and virtuosity for which he is famous.

Appearing with him in this Gilbert and Sullivan program were Margot Moser, soprano; Morgan Stuart, tenor, and a chorus that had been prepared by Charles Smith. Franz Allers conducted.

Mr. Stuart was consistently effective in his contributions, which included "Take a Pair of Sparkling Eyes," from "The Gondoliers," and—with Miss Moser—the duet "Were You Not to Ko-ko Plighted," from "The Mikado."

Once she got past early nervousness that made her voice unsteady, Miss Moser, too, was winning. Her biggest assignment was "The Hours Creep On Apace," from "H. M. S. Pinafore."

By the time the evening ended, the soloists and chorus, in varying combinations, had sung excerpts from nine operettas. An audience of 8,000 was on hand to listen, sing along surreptitiously on occasion and applaud enthusiastically everytime it got the chance.

ALLEN HUGHES.

~~Times~~ 7/24/60

Faure Requiem Offered at Tanglewood

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., July 22 — The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood has been in existence well over two decades, but Friday was the first time that the Fauré Requiem has been heard on the premises.

Blame should not be too greatly attached to the festival, for the Fauré is a rare visitor to any concert hall. Yet it is a masterpiece, if a most subtle one, and its presence helped to take the edge off the general banality and lack of enterprise characteristic of Berkshire festival programs.

•

Fauré was the most gentle of composers, and his requiem is a gentle work. It has none of the melodrama of the Berlioz, none of the fire of the Verdi. What is does have is sensitivity, with a devout quality that touches deeply.

The remarkable Sanctus, with its rippling harp and the exquisite violin melody woven around it, is the kind of vision that must have inspired Fra Angelico. And the Pie Jesus, that loveliest of soprano melodies, floats hauntingly in air before dying away.

This is not the place for an analysis of the work. One only hopes that the festival makes an annual event of it, dropping some of the tired old works that turn up again and again, both here and during the Boston Symphony's winter season.

Charles Munch was the conductor. The two soloists were Saramae Endich, soprano, and Donald Gramm, baritone. The choral sessions were taken by the fresh voices of the festival chorus.

•

Mr. Munch conducted as if the music really meant something to him. His was a beautifully paced and musically honest reading, one in which—barring a few slight shifts in orchestration involving the organ—he scrupulously observed every indication written into the score.

One of the reasons why the Fauré is so seldom done is that it is not superficially an exciting piece. None of the sections is fast, nor are there many climaxes. Mr. Munch never attempted to read into the music anything that was not there. Thus, when the few climaxes did come along, they sounded immense.

The orchestra played beautifully, the soloists sang with taste, the chorus sang with beauty of time. In short, this was a superb performance. It was the kind of music-making that Tanglewood should always represent.

The program was the annual Koussevitzky memorial concert, honoring the memory of the great conductor who founded the festival. The presence of the Fauré was indeed apt. The other work on the program was the Beethoven "Eroica" Symphony. Perhaps it was included because of the Funeral March. That is about the only reason one can conceive.

The "Eroica" is, of course, virtually an annual visitor to the festival, and one can say little about the performance that has not been said before. It was typical Munch—somewhat fast, somewhat nervous—sounding graceful rather than powerful. He never has had the rapport with the German repertory that he has had with the French.

But it must be said that in the scherzo, which he took at a fairly deliberate tempo without any repeats, he and the orchestra presented a view of the music that was as graceful as it was unusual. Perhaps grace is not the quality ordinarily associated with the Scherzo, yet somehow it all sounded elegant and quite in place with the rest of the conception.

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 38,700

AUG 1960

Bostonians Feted at Berkshire Festival

Tanglewood

For ears conditioned to music under roofs, the blend of sound and space at the Berkshire Music Center dims the flaws and magnifies the strength of great music. The daring parabola of Saarinen's acoustic canopy describes, in a visual way, how the sound swirls out from the shed, and over the lawns and lakes of Tanglewood.

After a weekend devoted to the music of Bach, with Seymour Lipkin as soloist, and then a weekend for Mozart, the Festival really got under way the weekend of July 23, when Charles Munch conducted the full complement of the Boston Symphony for the first time since their recent memorable tour of the Orient.

Friday's opening concert was designated as the annual memorial to Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony from 1924 to 1949, and founder of the Festival. His dream unfolds with each passing year, in the increasing thousands who sit in the shed and on the lawns, and in the many students whose art has been formed at this shrine.

Dr. Munch opened the program with Beethoven's "Eroica" Symphony, but the performance did not live up to the name. There was a certain literalness of climaxes, all accurate but heatless, which suggested that the players' golden sustains masked some tiredness after their heroic journey..

■ There followed the first performance of Fauré's "Requiem" at these concerts, which had all the glowing integrity of an authentic realization. The orchestra was joined by Saramae Endich, soprano, Donald Gramm, baritone, and the Festival Chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross. From the first note to the last, one could sense deep commitment and loving concern, on the part of conductor and players alike.

This music, fresh and virile after more than seventy years, is a miracle of artful simplicity, calling for extreme evenness and purposefulness of delivery. Its interlacing lines have the open purity of Gregorian chant, without having sacrificed the suavity of chromatic harmony, which insinuates a distant tonality as smoothly as dropping a sharp or flat.

The demand for deep feeling within refined control was wholly fulfilled by the orchestra and chorus. As it sometimes happens at a peak of awareness, the performance began to waft a little, to exceed its own lovely sounds, and stand forth strong in the expression that originally inspired it. This rare instance came with the baritone solo, Libera Me, in which Donald Gramm set a grave tempo, and then went on to unfold an apocalyptic vision in wonderful tones of strength and conviction. From this moment, the music moved forward in its course, as inevitably as a great river, which gradually merges into a sea of repose—it was magnificent.

(Continued on following page)

■ Saturday evening's concert welcomed Pierre Monteux, the Symphony's beloved conductor-emeritus, to the podium. This revered octogenarian utterly belies his age by his signals, the vigor of which put his men on an edge of keen response. High point of the evening came with his thrilling reading of Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto, with Claudio Arrau as piano soloist. Arrau's pianism has taken on in recent years a tensile and sinewy strength, which invigorates even the finest details. All is made sunnily explicit, and his authoritative delivery of the big chordal places must surely approach Beethoven's own thunderous intentions.

Sunday's concert that first week featured Jaime Laredo as violin soloist in Mendelssohn's Concerto. This remarkable 19-year-old artist won First Prize in the Queen Elisabeth of Belgium International Music Competition in 1959. All the fanfare proved valid, moreover, in the passioate sweep and precise intonation of his performance.

ROBERT W. DUMM

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
KINGS COURIER
W 15,719

JUL 30 1960

Brooklyn Daily
29 July 1960

BAY NEWS Page 8 Saturday, July 30, 1960

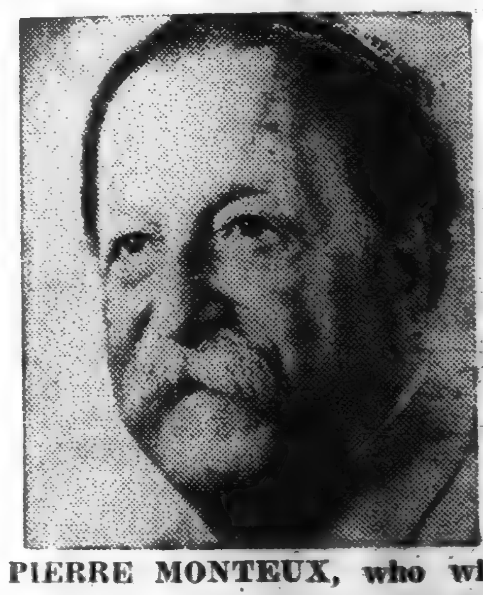
Monteux To Conduct At Tanglewood

Five events of particular sterest will take place at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Massachusetts in the coming days.

At Charles Munch's invitation, Pierre Monteux will repeat on July 31, 2:30, his 85th Birthday celebration performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Joining the beloved octogenarian at Tanglewood will be Eleanor Steber, Freda Gray-Masse, John McCollum and David Laurent. The concert will open with a performance of Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra on July 29 and 30 at 8:30. The young American pianist Byron Janis will be his guest at the concert of the 29th in a performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3.

The Orchestra's rehearsal on Saturday morning, July 30, 10:00 A.M., will be open to the public to aid the Orchestra's Pension Fund.



PIERRE MONTEUX, who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival concert.

The Festival Chorus will participate in the evening performance of July 30 which will feature

ELEANOR STEBER

Ravel's "Dauphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2 and Dr. Munch conducting Symphony No. 6 by Walter Piston and Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique."

The Beaux Arts Trio of New York will perform "Kakadu Variations" by Beethoven, Ravel's Trio, Op. 8 by Brahms on July 27 at 8:30 as the fourth concert in the Festival's Chamber Music Series.

Members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center - those whose voluntary contributions assist the work of the Center - are invited to a host of activities in coming days including performances and seminars.

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
SPECTATOR
W. 16,478

JUL 22 1960

Group Making Plans To Attend Festival

A number of Bay Ridge residents are making plans to attend the fourth annual excursion to the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Franklin Souls, of 120 Gatling Pl., is gathering a group to attend the program, which will be held Sun., July 31.

Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The package includes a round trip on the New Haven Railroad, a picnic lunch on the Tanglewood grounds, and a reserved seat at the concert, all for $12.

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
BAY RIDGE HOME REPORTER
W. 10,203

JUL 29 1960

Want To Hear A Concert At Tanglewood ?

Many Bay Ridge residents are making plans to attend the fourth annual excursion to the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Franklin Souls, of 120 Gatling Pl., is making up a party of Bay Ridgeites to attend the program together.

The one-day trip will be held Sunday, July 31. Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra, recently returned from a tour of the Far East. Mr. Monteux will conduct Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony and Beethoven's monumental Ninth Symphony.

Mr. Souls points out that the all-inclusive price of $12 covers a round trip on the New Haven Railroad, a picnic lunch on the beautiful Tanglewood grounds, and a reserved seat at the concert.

Mr. Souls, long active in veterans and community affairs, was a recent sponsor of the Piano Concert given by The Bay Ridge Forum.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
MIRROR
D. 847,979 S. 1,275,193

JUL 21 1960

DISCUSS TANGLEWOOD EXCURSION. Pierre Monteux, who will conduct Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival, discusses "Sunday at Tanglewood" excursion sponsored by Brooklyn Academy of Music with Mrs. Andrew L. Gomory, excursion chairman. One-day trip to Massachusetts will take place July 31.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
D. 453,331 SAT. 174,917

AUG 1 1960

Boro Music Lovers Trek to Tanglewood

Brooklyn, Beethoven and beautiful weather made perfect harmony yesterday at the Berkshire Music Festival in Tanglewood, Mass.

This borough was represented by a 220-member delegation of music lovers who took part in the Brooklyn Academy of Music's fourth annual one-day trip to Tanglewood.

The "Sunday at Tanglewood" budget-priced excursion, which cost $12 for adults and $10 for children, began at Grand Central Terminal at 8:30 a.m. yesterday. The charge included a round-trip ticket, a chicken box-lunch and a reserved seat under the huge music shed.

The Brooklynites, and many Academy members from other parts of the city, heard the Boston Symphony Orchestra play Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony and the feature work, Beethoven's Ninth (Choral) Symphony.

The excursionists arrived about an hour and a half before the concert began at 2:30 p.m. That gave them enough time to stroll around Tanglewood's beautifully landscaped grounds under a sunny Berkshire summer sky. They returned to New York at 10:12 last night.

The orchestra was under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Eleanor Steber, soprano, of the Metropolitan Opera; Freda Gray-Masse, alto; John McCollum, tenor; David Laurent, bass, and the Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, participated in the Beethoven work.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
D. 453,331 SAT. 174,917
JUL 6 1960

'Sunday at Tanglewood' Excursion Sponsored by Academy of Music

The Brooklyn Academy of Music will sponsor its fourth annual one-day trip to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., Sunday, July 31.

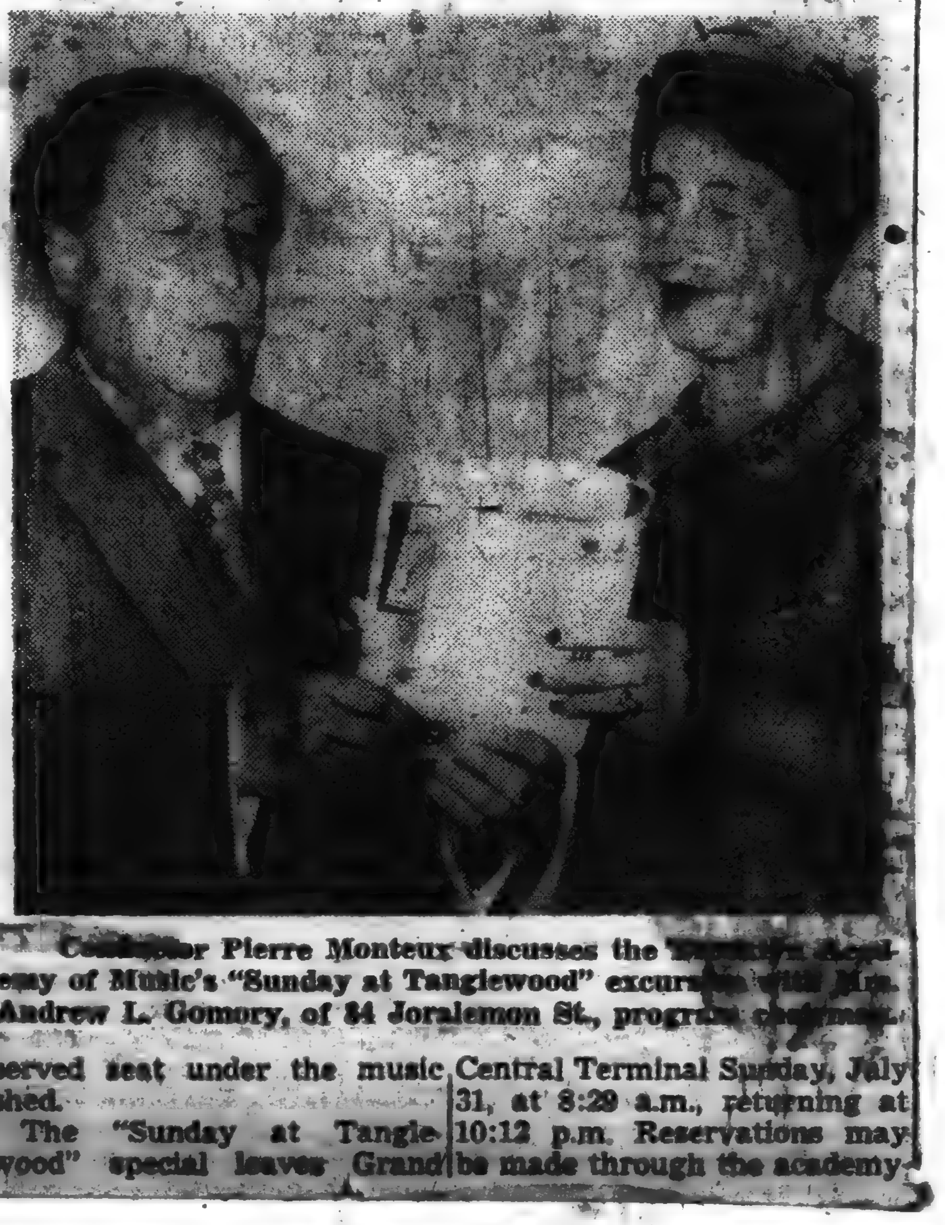
Excursionists will hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program including Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony (No. 35 in D Major), and Beethoven's Ninth (Choral) Symphony.

The orchestra will be under the direction of Pierre Monteux. Eleanor Steber, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera; Freda Gray-Masse, alto; John McCollum, tenor; David Laurent, bass; and the Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross, will participate in Beethoven's Ninth.

The "Sunday at Tanglewood" excursion, under the non-profit sponsorship of the Brooklyn Academy of Music, costs $12 for adults and $10 for children. Mrs. Andrew L. Gomory of 84 Joralemon St. is chairman.

That charge includes round-trip transportation on the New Haven Railroad, a luncheon of broiled half-chicken, relishes, salad, beverage and dessert, and a weather-protected reserved seat under the music shed.

The "Sunday at Tanglewood" special leaves Grand Central Terminal Sunday, July 31, at 8:29 a.m., returning at 10:12 p.m. Reservations may be made through the academy.



Conductor Pierre Monteux discusses the Brooklyn Academy of Music's "Sunday at Tanglewood" excursion with Mrs. Andrew L. Gomory, of 84 Joralemon St., program chairman.

118

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
GRAPHIC
W. 18,240
JUL 13 1960

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
CANARSIE COURIER
W. 6,125
JUL 7 1960

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
RECORD
BAY RIDGE RECORD
W. 9,000
JUL 15 1960

Tanglewood Tour On For Boro Music Fans

The Brooklyn Academy of Music will sponsor its fourth annual "Sunday at Tanglewood," a special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival on Sunday, July 31st. Mrs. Andrew L. Gomory of 84 Joralemon Street, Brooklyn Heights, is Chairman of the one-day trip, which in the past three seasons has attracted more than 750 excursionists from the Greater New York area.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which recently returned from a Far Eastern tour under the auspices of President Eisenhower's International Exchange Program for Cultural Presentations, will be conducted by Pierre Monteux, the beloved octogenarian. The program of July 31, chosen by The Brooklyn Academy of Music because of its unusual interest, includes Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony (No. 35 in D Major, K 385) and Beethoven's Ninth, the Choral Symphony.

Beethoven's Ninth has a particular and sentimental interest this year for Mr. Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Last Spring, members of the Orchestra asked the conductor what he wanted as a present on his 85th birthday. Mr. Monteux replied that he would like to lead them in a performance of the Ninth at Symphony Hall in Boston for the benefit of the musicians' own pension fund. The concert was arranged as Mr. Monteux suggested. He, the entire Orchestra, four important vocal soloists and a large chorus all performed without compensation, raising a substantial sum for the Boston Symphony Orchestra pension fund. The concert was enthusiastically received by the capacity audience and praised by Boston and New York critics.

At Tanglewood on the afternoon of July 31, Mr. Monteux will lead the same Boston Symphony Orchestra with the same notable quartet of singers as soloists in the Ninth Symphony. The vocal participants will be Eleanor Steber, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, Freda Gray-Masse, alto, John McCollum, tenor, David Laurent, bass, and the Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross.

Under the non-profit sponsorship of The Brooklyn Academy of Music, the "Sunday at Tanglewood" excursion costs only twelve dollars ($12) for adults and ten dollars ($10) for children, including round-trip transportation on the New Haven Railroad, a delicious luncheon consisting of a broiled half chicken, relishes, salad, beverage and dessert, and a weather-protected reserved seat under the Music Shed. Should the concert-goer wish to obtain a better seat location, he may apply $3. of the $12 "package-price" toward locations at $3.50, $4, $4.50, $5.50 and $6. Brooklyn Academy members for the 1960-61 season are entitled to a reduction of $1 on their reservations, making the price $11 for adults and $9 for children. The "Sunday at Tanglewood" Special leaves Grand Central Terminal on Sunday, July 31 at 8:29 a.m. (DST), returning at 10:12 p.m. Reservations may be made through the Brooklyn Academy of Music, 30 Lafayette Ave., Brooklyn 17, ST 3-6700.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
AMSTERDAM NEWS
SAT. 44,492
JUL 16 1960

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
BROOKLYN HEIGHTS PRESS
W. 2,811
JUL 7 1960

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
FLATBUSH LIFE
W. 13,000
JUL 16 1960

Bklyn. Academy Sponsoring Trip To Tanglewood

The Brooklyn Academy of Music will sponsor its fourth annual "Sunday at Tanglewood", a special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival on Sunday, July 31. Mrs. Andrew L. Gomory of 84 Joralemon St. is Chairman of the one-day trip, which in the past three seasons has attracted more than 750 excursionists from the Greater New York area.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Pierre Monteux, the beloved octogenarian. The program of July 31, chosen by The Brooklyn Academy of Music because of its unusual interest, includes Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony (No. 35 in D Major, K. 385) and Beethoven's Ninth, the Choral Symphony.

The vocal participants in this performance will be Eleanor Steber, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, Freda Gray-Masse, alto, John McCollum, tenor, David Laurent, bass, and the Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross.

Under the non-profit sponsorship of The Brooklyn Academy of Music, the "Sunday at Tanglewood" excursion costs only $12.00 for adults and $10.00 for children, including round-trip transportation on the New Haven Railroad, a luncheon, and a weather-protected reserved seat under the Music Shed. Should the concert-goer wish to obtain a better seat location, he may apply $3.00 of the $12.00 "package-price" toward locations at $3.50, $4.00, $4.50, $5.50 and $6.00. Brooklyn Academy members for the 1960-61 season are entitled to a reduction of $1.00 on their reservations.

Reservations may be made through the Brooklyn Academy of Music, 30 Lafayette Ave., Brooklyn 17, (STerling 3-6700).

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037
JUL 27 1960

Sunday Concert

ELEANOR STEBER, soprano, will take part in performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, conducted by Pierre Monteux Sunday at Tanglewood.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
JUL 26 1960

Publisher Is Tanglewood Visitor

Whitestone

Edgar R. Baker, publisher of Life International, and Mrs. Baker of Sharon, Conn., and New York, at Sunday's concert at Tanglewood. The Bakers were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller of 500 Williams St. Life International recently published a picture story on the Boston Symphony Orchestra's last tour of Europe.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
D. 571,705 S. 778,562
JUL 18 1960

Excursion to Tanglewood

Residents of Brooklyn and Long Island will renew acquaintances with an old friend, conductor Pierre Monteux, on Sun., July 31, at the fourth annual excursion to Tanglewood, under the auspices of The Brooklyn Academy of Music.

Mr. Monteux who will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony and the Beethoven Ninth, has made many appearances at the Academy, the last during the 1957-58 season.

Between 1919 and 1924 he was the music director and principal conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra which appeared five times each season at the Academy.

In addition, he has been the conductor at the last two Tanglewood concerts in 1958 and 1959.

Nearly 100 reservations have already been made for this year's excursion leaving Grand Central via the New Haven Railroad at 8:29 a.m., and returning 10:12 that evening.

Reservations may be made at The Brooklyn Academy of Music, 30 Lafayette ave., Brooklyn 17, (STerling 3-6700), through July 26.

NEW Week

118

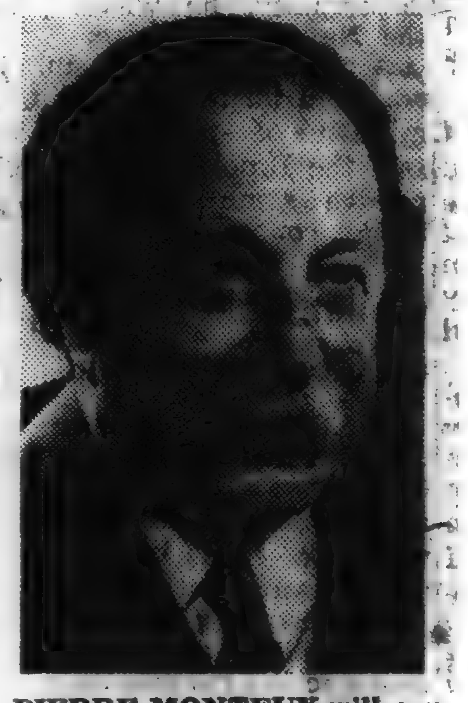
NEW YORK, N.Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
D. 453,331 SAT. 174,917

JUL 25 1960

Footlights and Spotlights

Brooklynites Can Hear Monteux Lead Beethoven 9th Performance

By ARTHUR ALPERT,
World-Telegram Staff Writer.



PIERRE MONTEUX will conduct for an audience of Brooklynites, among others, at Tanglewood Sunday.

When Pierre Monteux celebrated his 85th birthday last April, members of the Boston Symphony asked him what he wanted as a birthday present.

He answered that he would like to lead them in a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund. And so it came to pass. Instead of Monteux getting a present, he gave one.

The maestro conducted without a fee. In tribute to him, the soloists and chorus likewise performed without fee. The concert was a great triumph, won raves in Boston and New York newspapers, and raised a huge sum for the pension fund.

Not many Brooklynites, of course, could attend this performance in Boston's Symphony Hall. But this Sunday, the same Monteux will lead the same orchestra and the same quartet of soloists in Beethoven's Ninth at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. And you can be there.

The vocalists are Eleanor Steber, soprano; Fred Grayl Masse, alto; John McCollum, tenor; David Laurent, bass, and the Festival Chorus, trained by Hugh Ross. Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony also is on the program.

Happily, the Brooklyn Academy of Music is sponsoring a day-long excursion to Tanglewood for the concert. That means round-trip by train, reserved seat at the concert and complete lunch for $12 (adults) or $10 (children). Departure: Grand Central Station, 8:29 a.m. Arrival: Grand Central, 10:12 p.m. The Academy has all the details at ST 3-6700.

Pierre Monteux, by the way, conducted at the Academy in January, 1958, and led the Tanglewood orchestra at the '58 and '59 Academy excursion concerts. He's an old friend of Brooklynites.

* * *

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 416,486

JUL 24 1960

Berkshire Hills Feature Music, Theater, Dance

PITTSFIELD, Mass.—Music, theater and the dance are sharing top billing with nature on this Summer's vacation schedule in the Berkshire Hills and a full program of attractions will be on tap for the visitor to these cool, green hills again this week.

At Tanglewood in Lenox the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Conductor Charles Munch at the podium will perform Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30, and next Sunday afternoon at 2:30. Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 175,076

JUL 30 1960

Monteux and Munch Share Lenox Podium

Tonight at Tanglewood Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Berlioz' Symphonie Fantastique and the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston. The Festival Chorus will participate in a performance of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe."

Beethoven's Ninth Symphony will be conducted by Pierre Monteux tomorrow afternoon. Eleanor Steber heads the quartet of vocalists for the work.

Times
NEW MILFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 3,890

JUL 21 1960

Center to Sponsor Music Festival Trip

New Milford's Community Center has announced plans for a field trip to the Tanglewood Music Festival at Lenox, Mass. on July 31. Anyone interested in attending may contact George Fletcher, Harold Hunt or Mrs. Hugh Barnhart, Jr.

The featured performance of [illegible] afternoon will be Beethoven's Symphony [illegible] (the [illegible]) by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. An analysis of the music will be offered to persons interested in [illegible] at 7 p.m. Tuesday before the regular meeting of the Community Center choral group at the Congregational Church.

SYRACUSE HERALD AMERICAN
Sunday, July 24, 1960

Janis to Play For Festival

NB

Byron Janis plays Rachmaninoff's third piano concerto with the Boston Symphony this weekend at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

Also on the program for the Friday and Saturday evening concerts in the shed is Khrennikov's Symphony No. 1 and "Jeu De Cartes" by Stravinsky.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 24 1960

To Perform at Tanglewood Wednesday

The Beaux Arts Trio of New York will appear at the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood in Lenox Wednesday night at 8.30 for a program of chamber music. The program includes works of Beethoven, Ravel and Brahms. Left to right: Daniel Guilet, violin; [illegible] les, piano, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657

047

JUL 23 1960

Music Calendar for Week

SUNDAY

2:30 — Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting; Jaime Laredo, violin soloist; Tanglewood Shed, Lenox, Mass.

3:15 — Insurance City Band, Dayton Palmer conducting; Elizabeth Park.

4:00—Sidney Foster, guest pianist with Berkshire Quartet; Music Mountain, Falls Village.

8:30—Westbrook Chamber Music Festival, Westbrook Gallery, Route 1, Westbrook.

8:30—Empire State Music Festival: "Barber of Seville" with Roberta Peters, Carlo Zampighi (U.S. debut), Frank Guarrera, Nicola Moscona, Gerhard Pechner; Harriman State Park, Bear Mountain, N.Y.

8:30—Dukes of Dixieland; Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, Mass.

MONDAY

5:30 — Fritz Magg, cello; First Church, Sharon.

8:00 — Continental-Aires, vocal quartet; UConn, Storrs.

TUESDAY

8—Julius Baker, flute, and Yale Summer School of Music Chamber Orchestra, Jackson Wiley conducting; Norfolk Music Shed.

8:30—Hartford Festival of Music: Robert Brawley conducting Festival Orchestra and Chorus; Conn. General Life Ins. Co. grounds, Bloomfield.

8:30—Starlight Chamber Music Festival: Bruce Simonds, piano, with Festival String Ensemble; Yale's Saybrook College Courtyard, New Haven.

9—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival: Washington Ballet with Patricia Wilde, Istvan Rabovsky and Frederick Franklin; near Lee, Mass.

WEDNESDAY

[illegible]—Carillonneur Frank L. Johnson of Newtown; Plumb Memorial Carillon, Trinity College.

8:30—Beaux Arts Trio; Tanglewood Theater, Lenox, Mass.

9—Jacob's Pillow, as Tuesday.

THURSDAY

8:30—Conn. Valley Music Festival: Ann La Fratta, soprano, and Gerald Goodman, harpist; Valley Regional High School, Deep River.

9—Jacob's Pillow, as Tuesday.

FRIDAY

[illegible]—Jacob's Pillow, as Tuesday.

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting; Byron Janis, piano soloist; Tanglewood Shed, Lenox, Mass.

8:30—Connecticut Symphony Pops Concert, Jonel Perlea conducting; Fairfield University Shell, Fairfield.

8:30—Empire State Music Festival: Deems Taylor's "Peter Ibbetson" with Licia Albanese and Charles L. K. Davis; Harriman State Park, Bear Mountain, New York.

SATURDAY

4 & 9—Jacob's Pillow, as Tuesday.

8:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra, and Berkshire Festival Chorus, Charles Munch conducting; Tanglewood Shed, Lenox, Mass.

8:30 — Brothers Four; Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, Mass.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

JUL 25 1960

WEEK'S CONCERTS AT TANGLEWOOD

LENOX—Programs for the Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood this week through Sunday, July 31, are as follows:

Wednesday, July 27, 8.30 Theater: Beaux Arts Trio of New York:

Beethoven ..... "Kakadu" Variations
Ravel .... Trio in A mino
Brahms .... Trio, Op.

Friday, July 29, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting:

Stravinsky .... Jeu de Carte
Khrennikov .. Symphony No. 1, Op.
Rachmaninoff .. Piano Concerto No. 3 in D minor (Janis

Saturday, July 30, 10 a. m. Music Shed: Open rehearsal.

Saturday, July 30, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting:

Berlioz ..... Symphonie Fantastique,
Op. 14
Piston .... Symphony No.
Ravel ..... "Daphnis and Chloe," Suit
No. 2 (Festival Chorus

Sunday, July 31, 2.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Monteux conducting:

Mozart .... Symphony No. 35, in major, "Haffner," K. 38
Beethoven .... Symphony No. 9, in minor, Op. 12
(Steber, Gray- Masse, McCollum, Laurent; Festival Chorus)

Activities of the Berkshire Music Center to which friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited:

Monday, July 25, 8.30, Theater: Opera Scenes.

Tuesday, July 26, 8.30, Chamber Music Hall: Forum, "The Performer as Listener."

Wednesday, July 27, 3.30 Chamber Music Hall: Lecture "Aspects of Music."

Thursday, July 28, 8.30, Music Shed: Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

Friday, July 29, 3.15, Chamber Music Hall: Seminar on Contemporary Music — Elliott Carter.

Sunday, July 31, 10 a. m. Chamber Music Hall: BMC chamber music; 8.30, Chamber Music Hall: Composer's Forum

1, 120

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 23 1960

Tanglewood Music: Berlioz, Early Romantic

With the death of King Louis XVI, who lost his head on the guillotine in 1793, monarchy also died in France, and the steely disciplines of republicanism replaced the easy moralities of the old regime.

The republic soon followed its predecessor into oblivion, however. In 1804, the year after Louis-Hector Berlioz was born in southern France, Napoleon Bonaparte transformed France into an empire and placed the crown on his own head, where it stayed until his abdication and exile to the island of Elba in 1814.

* * *

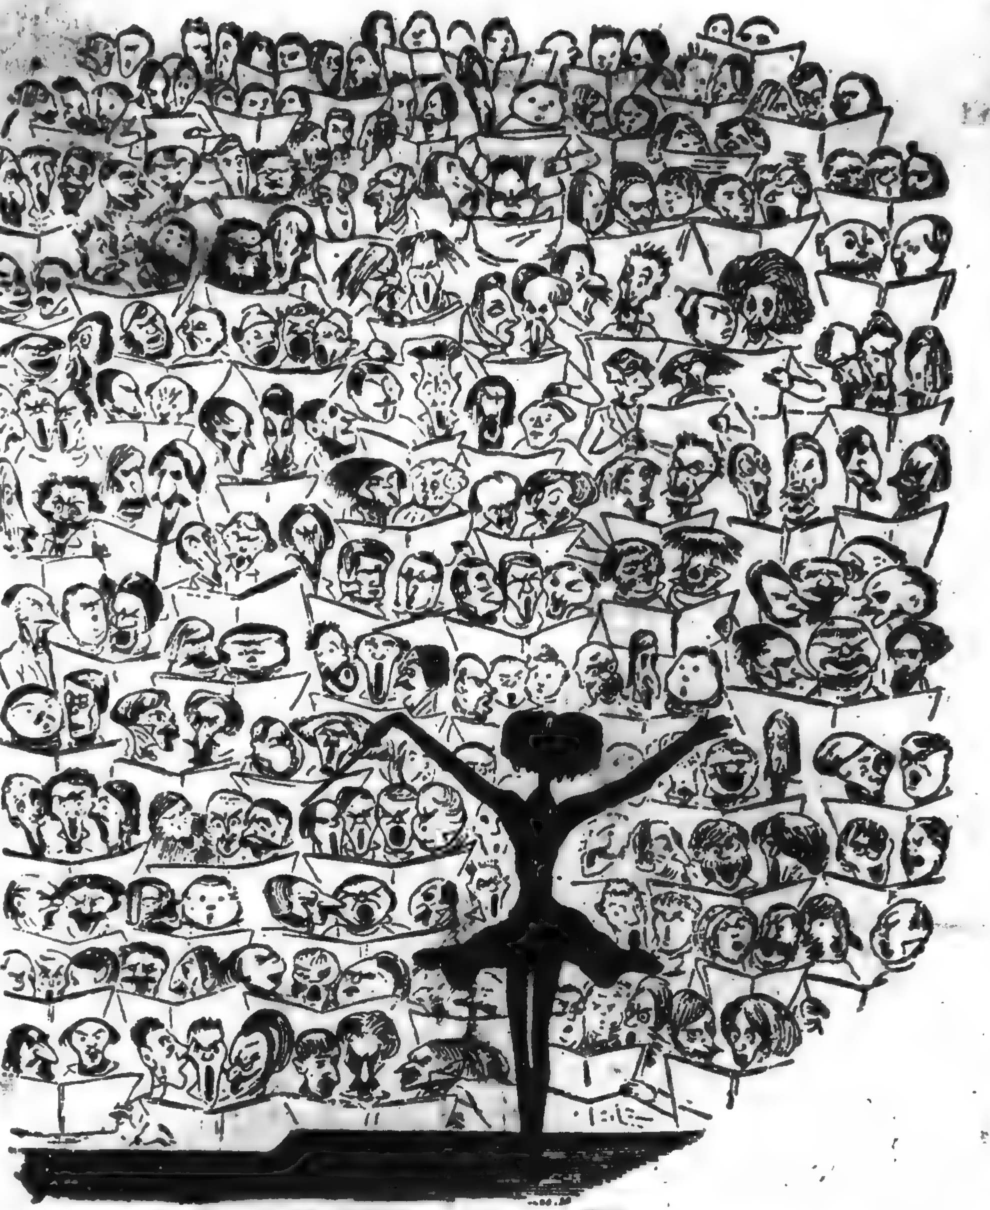
The House of Bourbon then returned to France. In 1830—Berlioz then was 27—another revolution shook the country and Louis Philippe, the citizen-king with the black umbrella, ascended the throne. He vacated the premises in 1848, and France again became a republic. In 1851 a coup d'état delivered the government into the hands of another Napoleon — Louis Napoleon, who established a second empire in 1852. Berlioz was then approaching 50. He died in 1869, at the age of 66, just a year before the Second Empire crumbled and the Third Republic was established.

In one sense, the turbulent first half of the 19th century made little impression on Hector Berlioz. Politics were not important in his life, except as they affected the sponsorship of the musical tributes he wrote for state occasions.

* * *

But the revolutions which swept aside France's monarchic heritage changed her artistic traditions, too, and Berlioz was one of the leaders of this artistic revolution, which brought the expressive passions of the romantic movement to a country long disciplined by reason and orthodoxy.

Berlioz' father, a conservative bourgeois, wanted his son to be a doctor. Berlioz himself was set upon a career as a composer, and soon after he moved to Paris in 1821, he threw over medicine for music. It took some time to convince his father and mother that a composer was not doomed to live at the bottom of the social ladder. Indeed, the first few years in Paris were lean years, full of disappointments which simply nourished parental convictions about the innate worthlessness of musicians.



Gustave Doré's 1850 cartoon of Berlioz conducting

* * *

Three times Berlioz competed for the coveted Prix de Rome, and each time he failed. Finally, in 1830, the jury gave him the award and sent him off to the Italian capital to compose for a free year at the Villa Medici.

Soon after his return to Paris, Berlioz married his first wife, Harriet Smithson, a Shakespearean actress from Ireland. She died in 1854 after the couple had been estranged for 13 years. That same year, the composer married his mistress, Marie Recio, but this union was no happier than the one which preceded it. Berlioz' only child, a son, died abroad of the fever in 1867, just two years after the composer himself succumbed to intestinal and nervous afflictions.

Throughout his life, Berlioz was in constant need of steady income. A successful production of one of his operas might have solved this problem, but Berlioz' operas weren't successful. The composer turned to musical criticism to earn money, and he became the most perceptive and courageous musical commentator in Paris in his time, quick to distinguish talent from mediocrity and outspoken in his opinions.

It would be an exaggeration to say that Berlioz was honored in his own time as a prominent composer. As he grew older, his works achieved a measure of popularity outside France, particularly in Russia and Germany. Audiences in his native country were less enthusiastic, sometimes with good reason. Many of the composer's works demanded such colossal musical forces that they became logistic failures, inadequately rehearsed. The composer, although he was an extraordinary conductor himself, could not always keep his armies of muscicians in step.

* * *

He also had to struggle with the frequent upheavals in the French government. The state often commissioned new works, but the reins of power changed hands rapidly, and artistic projects followed their sponsor governments into oblivion.

Moreover, Berlioz' music brought alien sounds to French ears. The composer's own war against academic rules and traditions carried him into new harmonic, thematic and rhythmic territory, where his audiences were sometimes reluctant to follow.

Even today, his major works are performed only sporadically. The Boston Symphony stands out as an orchestra which plays Berlioz regularly and well. Two of his compositions are on Berkshire Festival programs this summer — July 30, the "Symphonie Fantastique," and at the final Festival concert on Aug. 14, the "Damnation of Faust."

—Walter Howard

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

JUL 29 1960

Berkshire Summer Season In Full Swing This Week

The season for quiet relaxation or active participation has reached full tempo in the Berkshires, and what might well be called the best of everything beckons visitors who have recreational preferences as varied as the region itself.

For many, "The Berkshires" mean an annual experience in wonderful summer theater. For the coming week, here is what is offered:

Tanglewood

Tanglewood, Lenox — Today, 3.15, Chamber Music Hall, Seminar on Contemporary Music (Friends), and 8.30, Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conductor, Stravinsky, Khrennikov and Rachmaninoff; Saturday, 10 a. m., Shed, Boston Symphony open rehearsal; and 8.30 p. m., Shed, Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conductor, Berlioz, Piston and Ravele. Sunday, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall, BMC Chamber Music, (Friends), 2.30, Shed, Boston Symphony, Pierre Monteux, conductor, Mozart and Beethoven, with Festival Chorus, Steber, Gray-Masse, McCollum and Laurent, soloists; and 8.30, Chamber Music Hall, Composer's Forum (Friends). Monday, 8.30, Theater, Fromm Foundation Concert, Contemporary Chamber Music, Boston Symphony Orchestra Members (Friends); Tuesday, 8.30 p. m., Chamber Music Hall, Listeners Forum No. 3, "The critic as listener" (Friends). Wednesday, 8.30, Theater, sonata recital, Leon Fleisher, piano, Liszt, Kirchner, Schubert. Thursday, 8.30, Gala evening. Berkshire Music Center benefit program to include world premier of Meyerwowitz's opera, "Port Town."

Jacob's Pillow

Jacob's Pillow, Rte. 20 east of Lee—Today and Saturday at 4 and 9, the Washington Ballet. Sunday, 8.30, dance appreciation course, Rukmini Devi, "Dancing in India," demonstrated by Sarada. Tuesday through Saturday, 9, Valerie Bettis and Company, Robert Cohan and Matt Turney, Talley Beatty and Company.

Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge—Today, 2.30 and 8.45, and Saturday, 8.45, "The Gazebo;" Monday through Saturday, 8.45, and Wednesday at 2.30, "Waltz of the Toreadors."

Williamstown Theater — Today, 2.30 and 8.40, and Saturday, 8.40, "The Dark at the Top of the Stairs;" Tuesday through Saturday, 8.40, "The Disenchanted."

Storrowton Music Fair, West Springfield — Today, 8.30, and Saturday 5 and 9, "West Side Story." Sunday, 8, Benny Goodman. Monday through Friday 8.30, and Saturday 5 and 9, "West Side Story."

Kate McComb Playhouse, Great Barrington — Today through Sunday, 8.30, "American Blues." Tuesday through Aug. 14, 8.30, "La Ronde."

Music Barn

Berkshire Music Barn, South of Lenox—Saturday, 3.30, The Brothers Four. Sunday, 8.30, Maynard Ferguson. Tuesday, 8.30, Jonah Jones.

Red Fox Music Barn, New Marlboro — Saturday, 8.30, Chamber Music Concert, Loeillet, Schroth, Mendelssohn.

Music Mountain, Falls Village, Conn. — Sunday, 4, Berkshire String Quartet with Paul Ulanowsky, piano, assisting artist, Haydn, Guranieri and Brahms.

Cummington School of Arts, bet. Northampton and Pittsfield —Chamber Music, Sonya Monosoff, violin; Louise Rood, violin; Harold Sproul, viola; Gregory Tucker, piano; Beethoven, Bartok, Brahms.

Yale Summer School, Norfolk, Conn. — Tuesday, 8, Chamber Music Concert, David Dawson, viola; Gilbert Ross, violin; Keith Wilson, clarinet; Jackson Wiley, cello; Paul Ulanowsky, piano; Beethoven, Heiden, Mozart, Hindemith.

South Mountain

South Mountain, Pittsfield — Wednesday, 11 and 3, Young Audiences Concert, Rudi String Quartet.

Children specials — Berkshire Museum, today, 11 and 2.30, "Rumpelstilskin." Storrowton Music Fair, Saturday, 10.30, Zippy the chimp and Margie the clown. Sharon Playhouse, Thursday, 2.30, Bunin puppets, and chipmunks, Alvin, Simon and Theodore.

Not all who come to the Berkshires place the world of music and theater at the top of their list of things to do, however. For the outdoor loving family, here are but a few of the more notable attractions:

Mount Greylock, highest point in Massachusetts, with view of five states from tower. 8770 acre public reservation with hiking, camping and bird-watching. Dormitory beds available, $2.50 night for Friday; Saturday; $2, Sunday-Thursday. Enter via Rte. 2 along Notch Rd., North Adams; Rte. 7 via Rockwell Rd., Lanesboro, or Greylock Rd., New Ashford.

Windsor State Forest

Windsor State Forest, swimming, picnicking and parking fee, 50 cents per car, $1 on Sundays and holidays. Follow signs from Rte. 116 in Savoy or Rte. 9 in West Cummington.

Tolland State Forest, Otis Reservoir. Swimming, picnicing, parking fee, 50 cents per car, $1 Sundays and holidays. Rte. 23, East Otis, or Rte. 8, south of Otis Center.

Many fine art galleries, in addition to museums rich in New England lore, serve to entertain and educate young and old alike.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. †75,076

JUL 29 1960

ELEANOR STEBER, soprano, will be soloist with the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, July 31.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
JUL 30 1960

AN 85TH BIRTHDAY PRESENT, a facsimile reproduction of the manuscript score of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, which he will conduct at Tanglewood tomorrow afternoon, was presented yesterday to Pierre Monteux, right, by Charles Munch, conductor of the BSO, [illegible] and Thomas D. Perry Jr., BSO [illegible]

Ninth Symphony Score

Delayed 85th Birthday Gift Given Monteux at Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD—A facsimile reproduction of the manuscript score of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, autographed by the 104 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was presented to Pierre Monteux here yesterday as an 85th birthday present.

Mr. Monteux, who will conduct the Boston Symphony tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. in Beethoven's Ninth, celebrated his birthday April 4, but at his request the orchestra's gift of the score was delayed until yesterday's rehearsal of the great work. The Festival Chorus, prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson, will be heard in the performance with the following soloists: Eleanor Steber, soprano; Freda Gray Masse, contralto; John cOllum, tenor and David Laurent, bass.

Tonight's Concert

Tonight at 8:30 Dr. Munch will return to the podium to conduct the BSO. The Festival Chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon, will take part in tonight's performance of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2. Also to be heard tonight are Walter Piston's Symphony No. 6 and Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique."

Dr. Munch has revised the Berkshire Festival program next Friday night to invite the contemporary American composer, Leon Kirchner, to conduct the BSO in the first Tanglewood performance of his "Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion."

A member of the Berkshire Music Center's composition faculty, 41-year-old Mr. Kirchner has previously conducted the orchestra in his "Toccata" in Boston, New York and Washington. Dr. Munch will conduct the balance of the Friday concert which will be given in the Shed at 8:30. At this concert violinist Ruggiero Ricci will make his first Berkshire Festival appearance in a performance of the Violin Councerto by Sibelius. The program will open with excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" and conclude with the "Scotch" Symphony by Felix Mendelssohn.

First Performance Here

Henri Dutilleux' Symphony No. 2, the world premiere of which Dr. Munch conducted on Dec. 11, 1959, will receive its first Tanglewood performance at the orchestra's Saturday evening concert Aug. 6 at 8:30. To complement the contemporary symphony, Dr. Munch has scheduled Beethoven's Overture to "Prometheus" and the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms, in which Eugene Istomin will participate, for the Saturday concert.

Mr. Monteux' guest at the orchestra's concert on Sunday afternoon Aug. 7 at 2:30 will be pianist Leon Fleisher in a performance of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3. Mr. Monteux will open the program with "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis" by Vaughan Williams and the concert will conclude with Brahms' Fourth Symphony.

Mr. Fleisher will give a piano recital at Tanglewood in addition to his orchestral appearance with Mr. Monteux. On Wednesday evening at 8:30 in the theater, he will [illegible] in a program of sonatas. The recital, for which Mr. Fleisher has contributed his services to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, will include the Sonata in B Minor by Franz Liszt, Leon Kirchner's Sonata (1948), and the posthumous Sonata in B-[illegible] by Schubert.

Sentinel (m)
WATERVILLE, Me.
Circ. 18,382
JUL 29 1960

At Tanglewood

Mrs. Freda Gray-Masse, director of vocal music in the Waterville School System, and student of Pierre Monteaux, will star with Eleanor Steber of Metropolitan Opera fame, in a program Sunday at Tanglewood at Lenox, Mass. Mrs. Masse will be one of the two female voices in the presentation of Beethoven's Symphony Number 9. Music will be by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Pierre Monteaux. She left her summer home at Sullivan Harbor Thursday to prepare for her performance. A similar presentation in Boston last spring brought many favorable reviews.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 186,189
JUL 24 1960

DAVID LAURENT, assistant professor of music at Brown University, will be the baritone soloist in a performance of the Beethoven Ninth Symphony, conducted by Pierre Monteux next Sunday afternoon at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 373,012
JUL 26 1960

ary.

MONTEUX CONDUCTS

At Charles Munch's invitation, Pierre Monteux will repeat at Tanglewood on Sunday (July 31, 2:30) his 85th birthday celebration performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

LY AIR-CONDITIONED

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Circ. 106,090
JUL 24 1960

MUSIC

Two Yale Faculty Members To Highlight Area Events

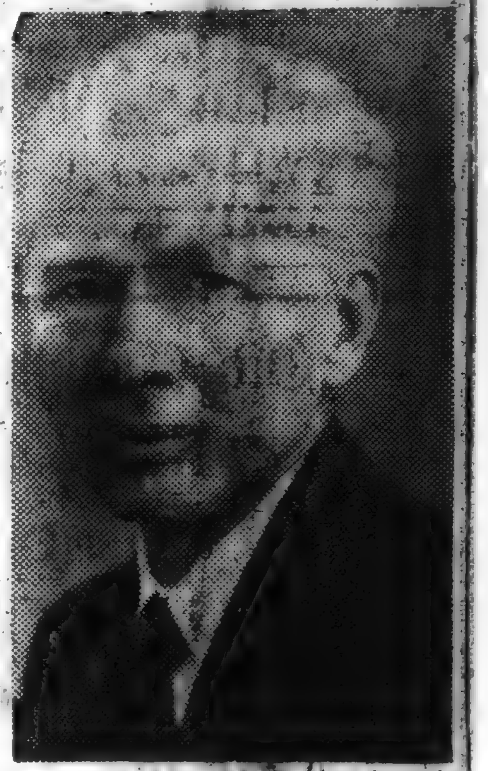
By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

Two distinguished musicians who happen to be the "newest and oldest" members respectively of the Yale Music School faculty figure prominently in news concerning this week's music events. The former is composer Elliot Carter, whose appointment to the faculty was announced a few months ago. The latter is Bruce Simonds, whose accomplishments both as a student, teacher, and performer have enriched this community's musical life for nearly four decades.

Carter, a winner of this year's Pulitzer Award, is to be honored at the Berkshire Music Festival on Friday when a program devoted to his music will be presented by chamber music groups. The composer will give an introductory talk and comment on contemporary music in general and his works in particular. The music to be heard includes his String Quartet No. 2, Eight Etudes, and the Fantasy for Woodwind Quintet. Friday's concert is the fourth in the festival's Seminars in Contemporary Music under the sponsorship of the Fromm Foundation. The eminent composer is to be a Visiting Professor of the Theory of Music at Yale during the coming college year.

STARLIGHT FESTIVAL AT YALE

Professor Simonds is sure to attract one of the season's largest audiences to the third Starlight Festival concert in the Saybrook College Courtyard on Tuesday evening. This series incidentally is enjoying its best attendance to date and the pianist's guest role in this week's event should add considerably to the attendance figures. His many performances both in recital and in guest roles with the New Haven Symphony have won him a large and enthusiastic following over the years.



BRUCE SIMONDS

On Tuesday evening, Professor Simonds will be heard with Julius Scheir's Starlight Players in two of the program's offerings—Mozart's Piano Quartet in G minor and Franck's Piano Quintet in F minor. The third work listed is the String Quartet No. 1 in E flat, Opus 12, by Mendelssohn.

To get back to the Berkshire Music Festival, the coming weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony will find Dr. Munch and Pierre Monteux sharing the podium. The regular conductor will conduct the concerts on Thursday and Friday evenings and the eminent French conductor will be on the podium in next Sunday afternoon's program.

The highlight of Friday evening's concert is to be the performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3 with the young American pianist, Byron Janis, as the soloist. The program also includes Tikhon Khrennikov's Symphony No. 1 and Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes."

Saturday evening's program lists Walter Piston's Symphony No. 6, the "Symphonie Fantastique" by Berlioz, and Ravel's Suite No. 2 of "Daphnis and Chloe". The Festival Chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon, will participate in the latter performance.

The Festival Chorus will also assist the orchestra in the featured work next Sunday afternoon, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. This is to be in the nature of a "repeat performance", honoring the 85th birthday of the venerable French conductor who conducted the Ninth in Symphony Hall, Boston, on April 6. The soloists, all of whom were heard in that earlier performance, are to be soprano Eleanor Steber, contralto Freda Gray-Masse, tenor John McCollum, and bass David Laurent. Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony will be presented as the opening work in Sunday's program.

The Beaux Arts Trio of New York will present Wednesday evening's regular chamber music event with a program including Beethoven's "Kakadu" Variations, Ravel's A minor Trio, and the Brahms Trio, Opus 8.

TROY TIMES RECORD
Saturday, July 30, 1960

Boston Symphony To Play Berlioz's Fantastique

The Boston Symphony Orchestra will play two symphonies and a suite today at 8:30 p.m. at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Tonight's program, which also will be broadcast by the FM Station WFLY of The Record Newspapers, will include Berlioz's Symphonie Fantastique, Piston's Symphony No. 6 and Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe, Suite No. 2. The festival chorus will join the orchestra in the last number. Charles Munch will conduct.

Tomorrow's program, scheduled for 2:30 p.m., will consist of Mozart's Haffner Symphony and Beethoven's Symphony No. 9 in D minor. Pierre Monteux will conduct and the guests will be soprano Eleanor Stever, contralto Freda Gray-Masse, tenor John McCollum and bass David Laurent. The festival chorus also will participate.

Mr. Monteux and the orchestra will repeat the performance heard last April in Boston's Symphony Hall on the conductor's 85th birthday.

1
2
2

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,498

JUL 28 1960

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657

JUL 28 1960

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 27,809

JUL 21 1960

Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 46,674

JUL 24 1960

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037

JUL 27 1960

Banner (e)
BENNINGTON, Vt.
Circ. 4,953

JUL 29 1960

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 23 1960

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 416,486

JUL 24 1960

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 289,111

JUL 24 1960

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE
Monday, July 25, 1960

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

JUL 23 1960

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 99,001

JUL 19 1960

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUL 25 1960

News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,700

JUL 28 1960

Monteux to Repeat His 85th Birthday Performance 31st

At Charles Munch's invitation, Pierre Monteux will repeat at Tanglewood on Sunday, July 31 at 2:30 his 85th birthday celebration performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Because of his long and close association with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, members of the Orchestra asked Mr. Monteux if they might arrange a party in honor of his 85th birthday (born: April 4, 1875). Mr. Monteux answered that nothing would give him greater pleasure and he requested that the Orchestra's present to him be a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony which he would conduct in Symphony Hall on April 6 for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund. Soprano Eleanor Steber, contralto Freda Gray-Masse, tenor John McCollum, and bass David Laurent, who participated in the Symphony Hall performance, and the Festival Chorus, prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson, will be Mr. Monteux's guests at the Tanglewood performance. The concert will open with a performance of Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony.

July 29 and 30

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Friday and Saturday, July 29 and 30 at 8:30 Tanglewood concerts. The young American pianist Byron Janis will be his guest at Friday's concert in a performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3. At the same concert Tikhon Khrennikov's Symphony No. 1 will be played for the first time at the Berkshire Festival. The program will open with "Jeu de Cartes" by Igor Stravinsky.

The Orchestra's rehearsal Saturday morning at 10, July 30, will be opened to the public as a benefit for the Orchestra's Pension Fund. The Festival Chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon, will participate in the Saturday evening performance of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2. At this concert Doctor Munch will also conduct Symphony No. 6 by Walter Piston and Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique."

"Kakadu Variations" by Beethoven, Ravel's Trio in A minor and the Trio, Op. 8 by Brahms will be performed by the Beaux Arts Trio of New York — Daniel Guilet, violin; Bernard Greenhouse, cello; Menahem Pressler, piano — on Wednesday, July 27 at 8:30 in the Tanglewood Theater as the fourth concert of the Festival's Chamber Music series. Haile by Charles Munch as "worthy successors to the [illegible] trio of Thibaud, Casals and Cortot," the Beaux Arts has performed at Tanglewood five times since its debut here in 1955.

Members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center — those whose voluntary contributions assist the work of the Center — have been invited to the activities at Tanglewood this week: Opera Scenes in the Theater Monday at 8:30; Forum: "The Performer as Listener" at 8:30 Tuesday in the Chamber Music Hall; Lecture: "Aspects of Music" Wednesday afternoon July 27 at 3:30; a concert by the Center's orchestra in the Shed on Thursday evening at 8:30.

Friday at 3:15 members of the Friends have been invited to a Seminar in Contemporary Music when the contemporary American composer, Elliott Carter, will make introductory remarks followed by performance of his works. Two events will be opened to the Friends on Sunday, July 31: a chamber music program at 10 a.m. in the Chamber Music Hall and, in the same hall at 8:30 p.m., the Composer's Forum.

Arrau Tonight

Tonight Claudio Arrau will be guest of Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Beethoven's "Emperor" Concerto at 8:30 in the Music Shed. Mr. Monteux's program will include the first Tanglewood performance of Cherubini's "Anacreon" Overture, the "Fountains of Rome" by Respighi and Richard Strauss' tone poem, "Till Eulenspiegel."

Charles Munch will introduce the 19-year-old violinist, Jaime Laredo, to Tanglewood tomorrow when Mr. Laredo is heard in a performance of Mendelssohn's violin concerto. At the same program, Doctor Munch will conduct the "Variations, Chaconne and Finale" by the contemporary American Norman dello Joio and the program will close with the Symphony No. 5 by Beethoven.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 814,169 S. 1,254,835

JUL 24 1960

CONCERT AND OPERA PROGRAMS OF THE WEEK

Boston Symphony

STADIUM CONCERTS
LEWISOHN STADIUM

TUESDAY, Conductor, Zubin Mehta; Rise Stevens, mezzo-soprano. All concerts begin at 8:30 P. M.
Symphony No. 5; Adieu, forets from Jeanne d'Arc ..... Tchaikowsky
Che faro senza Euridice from Orfeo ed Euridice ..... Gluck
Voi che sapete from The Marriage of Figaro ..... Mozart
Mon coeur s'ouvre a ta voix from Samson et Dalila ..... Saint-Saens
Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks ..... Strauss
Air de Lia from L'Enfant Prodigue ..... Debussy
Chanson Boheme from Carmen..Bizet

WEDNESDAY, Conductor, Mehta; Aldo Parisot, cellist.
Prelude to Die Meistersinger..Wagner
Cello Concerto ..... Schumann
Concerto for Orchestra ..... Bartok

THURSDAY, Conductor, Mehta; John Browning, pianist.
Overture to La Forza del Destino.Verdi
Symphony No. 1 ..... Brahms
Piano Concerto No. 2 ..... Rachmaninoff

SATURDAY, Conductor, Leopold Stokowski.
Chorale Prelude, [illegible] alle en einen Gott; Chorale Prelude, Schafe koennen sicher weiden; Fugue in G minor ..... Bach-Stokowski
Symphony No. 2 ..... Brahms
Don Juan; Dance of the Seven Veils from Salome ..... Strauss

GUGGENHEIM MEMORIAL CONCERTS
GOLDMAN BAND

TONIGHT, Central Park. Conductor, Richard Franko Goldman. All concerts begin at 8:30 P. M.
Works by E. F. Goldman, Lloyd, Rossini-Britten, Rodgers, Strauss and Sousa.

MONDAY, Central Park.
Works by Meyerbeer, [illegible] Suppe, Grieg, Gould, [illegible], Herbert, Mendelssohn, Offenbach, Anderson, Rodgers, Klohr and [illegible].

WEDNESDAY, Central Park.
Works by Moszkowski, Auber, Liadov, Leidzen, Rossini-Respighi, Dvorak, Rogers, Bizet, Offenbach, Smith and E. F. Goldman.

THURSDAY, Prospect Park.
Works by Berlioz, Bach, E. F. Goldman, Beeson, Holst, [illegible], White, Loewe, Bennett, plus the first performance of William Russo's Concerto Grosso for Saxophone Quartet and Band conducted by the composer with the Louis Topper Saxophone Quartet.

FRIDAY, Central Park.
Repeating Thursday's program.

SATURDAY, Prospect Park.
Works by Moszkowski, Auber, Liadov, Leidzen, Rossini-Respighi, Dvorak, Rogers, Bizet, Offenbach, Rattenberg and E. F. Goldman.

EVENTS IN NEW YORK
TODAY

SEUFFERT BAND, Music Grove, Forest Park, Queens, 3 P. M. Conductor, George F. Seuffert; [illegible] May Smith, trumpeter.
Works by Delibes, Tchaikovsky, Hartmann, Herbert, Bizet, Rodgers, Herman and Grieg-Wright-Forrest.

MICHEL LARUE, folksinger, The Village Gate, 185 Thompson Street, 4 P. M. Assisting artists: [illegible], folklore dramatist; Paul Rainier, guitarist.

MONDAY

GUSTAV LEONHARDT, harpsichordist, Union Theological Seminary, 4:30 P. M. Lecture-recital on the music of the 17th and 18th century.

OPEN SING, Gershwin Hall, Brooklyn College, 8:30 P. M. Peter Flanders will lead Bach's Magnificat.

AN EVENING AT THE OPERA, presented by The Community Civic Opera, Roof Garden of the Educational Alliance, 197 Broadway, 8:15 P. M. Excerpts from Lucia di Lammermoor, La Rondine, L'Amico Fritz and Porgy and Bess.

TUESDAY

JOSEPHINE [illegible], organist, St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, 12 noon.

FREDERICK SWANN, organist, The Riverside Church, 7 P. M.

EVENINGS BY THE RIVER, East River Park Amphitheatre, F. D. R. Drive south of Grand Street, 8:30 P. M. Conductor, Arnold Gamson; Reri Grist and Laura [illegible], [illegible]; [illegible], tenor.
Symphony No. 26; The Impresario (in concert version) ..... Mozart
Incidental Music to A Midsummer Night's Dream ..... Mendelssohn
Water Music Suite ..... Handel-Harty

WEDNESDAY

WALLACE M. COURSEN, Jr., organist, Trinity Parish, Broadway and Fulton Streets, 12:30 P. M.

SUMMER SING, [illegible] soff Chorus, [illegible] West 56th Street, [illegible] P. M. Frank Brieff will lead Handel's Israel in Egypt.

SUMMER CONCERT, [illegible] Auditorium, Loeb Student Center, New York University, Washington Square South, 8:30 P. M. Conductor Maurice Peress; [illegible] Arroyo, soprano;

Mitchell Jellin, trumpeter; Cynthia Otis, harpist. Admission free.
Sonata for trumpet and strings.Purcell
Danses Sacree et Profane ..... Debussy
Sur la sponda del mare ..... Scarlatti
Concert Piece for Chamber Orchestra (1st performance) William Sydeman
Knoxville: Summer of 1915 ..... Barber

UN BALLO IN MASCHERA, Opera Workshop, Public School 73, 8 P. M. Repeat performance Thursday at 8 P. M.

WILMA JENSEN, organist, St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, 8:30 P. M. Works by de Mage, Grigny, Bach, Franck, Sowerby, Haines, Honegger, Langlais and Alain.

THURSDAY

ALEXANDER BOGGS RYAN, organist, St. Paul's Chapel, Columbia University, 12 noon.

THE NEW YORK SINFONIETTA, McMillin Theatre, Columbia University, 8:30 P. M. Conductor, Max Goberman.
The Four Seasons; Concerto for mandolin in C; Concerto for two mandolins in G; Concerto for viola d'amore in A; Concerto [illegible] minor; Concerto for flute ..... Vivaldi

JAZZ IN THE GARDEN, Museum of Modern Art, 8:30 P. M.

LA TRAVIATA, presented by Brooklyn Heights Opera Association, Cadman Plaza Park, 8:30 P. M. Admission free.

SATURDAY

CITY SYMPHONY OF NEW YORK, Central Park Mall, 8:30 P. M. Conductor, Franz Bibo; Mary Lou Galen, violinist.
Romeo and Juliet Overture.Tchaikovsky
Violin Concerto ..... Mendelssohn
Symphony No. 5 ..... Dvorak
Blue Danube Waltz ..... Strauss

LA TRAVIATA, presented by Salmaggi Opera, Triboro Stadium, Randalls Island, 8:45 P. M.

MARTINA ARROYO, soprano, presented by Afro Arts Cultural Center, Colonial Park, 148th Street west of Eighth Avenue, 8:30 P. M. Assisting group, The Prince Hall Band.

EVENTS OUT OF TOWN NEW YORK
EAST HAMPTON, L. I.

FRIDAY and SATURDAY, 8:40 P. M. John Drew Theatre. La Boheme presented by Amato Opera-In-Brief. Lila Caputo, soprano; Chester Ludgin, tenor.

STONY BROOK

TONIGHT, 8:30 P. M. Dogwood Hollow Amphitheatre. Count Basie and his band with Joe Williams, vocalist.

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. Dogwood Hollow Amphitheatre. Stony Brook Festival Orchestra, Conductor, Raymond Paige. Pops Night.

BEAR MOUNTAIN
Empire State Music Festival

TONIGHT, 8:30, Anthony Wayne Recreation Area, Harriman State Park. The Barber of Seville. Conductor, Jonel Perlea. Roberta Peters, soprano; Carlo Zampighi, tenor; Frank Guarrera, baritone; Gerhard Pechner and Nicola Moscona, basses.

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M. Peter Ibbetson by Deems Taylor. Conductor, Wilfrid Pelletier. Licia Albanese, soprano; James Wainner, tenor; Peter van Ginkel, baritone.

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. Katia Kabanova by Leos Janacek. Conductor, Laszlo Halasz, Amy Shuard, soprano; Rudolf Petrak and Giulio Gari, tenors.

TUXEDO

TODAY, 5:30 P. M. St. John Terrell's Music Circus, Sterling Forest Gardens. The Modern Jazz Quartet.

FRIDAY, 9 P. M. Dizzy Gillespie and his group. Additional performances Saturday at 5:30 and 9 P. M. and next Sunday at 5:30.

BROCKPORT

WEDNESDAY, 8 P. M. Brockport Summer Arts Festival. The After Dinner Opera Company.
Sixty-Six; Sweet Betsy From Pike; Apollo and Persephone.

LINWOOD

TONIGHT, 8:30 P. M. Ground Garden of the Linwood Music School. Linwood Chamber Orchestra. Conductor, Willis Page.
Works by Purcell, Bach, Haydn, Buxtehude and Brahms.

PIERMONT

FRIDAY and SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. Lyric Theatre. The Clarkstown Witch by Augustus Nowak.

RENSSELAERVILLE

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. Conkling Hall. Chamber music concert.
Works by Kreisler, Mendelssohn, Kodaly, Medina, Wieniawski, Cassado and Frescobaldi-Cassado.

WOODSTOCK

TODAY, 3 P. M. Maverick Concert Hall. Renato Bonacini, violinist; Alexander Semmler, pianist.

CHAUTAUQUA

TODAY, 3 P. M. Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Walter Hendl; Berl Senofsky, violinist.

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M. Norton Memorial Hall. Chautauqua Opera Association. La Traviata. Conductor, Walter Hendl.

TUESDAY, 8:30 P. M. Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, [illegible] Armin Watkins, pianist.

WEDNESDAY, [illegible] Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Hendl. Viennese Night.

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M. The Barber of Seville. Conductor, Wolfgang Schanz

SATURDAY, 8:30 P. M. Chautauqua Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Hen Muriel Kilby, pianist. Mendelssohn program.

NEW JERSEY
FAIR LAWN

TODAY, 5 P. M. Shell of Memorial Pa Paterson Symphonic Band. Conducto John Gambuti.

WEST ORANGE

TUESDAY, 8 P. M. St. Cloud Presbyterian Church. Oratorio Society of New Jersey summer sing. Walter Nolline will lead Haydn's Lord Nelson Mass.

LAMBERTVILLE

MONDAY, 8:30 P. M. St. John Terrell's Music Circus. Bobby Hackett and his Sextet.

CONNECTICUT
WESTPORT

TONIGHT, 8:30 P. M. Westbrook Galler Chamber music concert.
Works by Bach, Stamitz, Berg, Brahms, Telemann, Franchetti and Mozart.

FAIRFIELD

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M. Fairfield University Shell. Connecticut Pops Orchestra. Conductor, Gustave Haenschen Jose Melis, pianist; Margarita Sierr soprano.

DEEP RIVER

TUESDAY, 8:30 P. M. Valley Region Auditorium. Connecticut Valley Mus Festival. Ann Lafratta, soprano; Geral Goodman, harpist.

BLOOMFIELD

TUESDAY, 8:30 P. M. Grounds of th Connecticut General Life Insuranc Company. Hartford Festival of Mus Orchestra. Conductor, Robert Brawle Nelga Lynn, soprano.
Cantata No. 51, Jauchzet in allen Landen ..... Bach
Verklaerte Nacht ..... Schoenberg
Capricorn Concerto ..... Barber
Suite from Les Brigands ..... Offenbach

NEW HAVEN

TUESDAY, 8:30 P. M. Saybrook Colleg Courtyard, Yale campus. Starlight Festival of Chamber Music. Guest artis Bruce Simonds, pianist.
Piano Quartet in G minor ..... Mozart
Quartet No. 1 in [illegible], Op. 12 ..... Mendelssohn
Piano Quintet ..... Franck

NORFOLK

TUESDAY, 8 P. M. Music Shed, Yal Summer School of Music. Conductor Keith Wilson; [illegible], harpsichordist.
Sonata No. 8 [illegible]; Brandenburg Concerto No. 5 ..... Bach
Concerto a Tre ..... Dahl
Recitative and Toccata ..... Powell
Overture in the Italian Style ..... Schubert

SHARON

MONDAY, 5:30 P. M. First Church of Christ Congregational. [illegible], cellist.
Suite No. 1 in G; Suite No. 5 in C minor ..... Bach

FALLS VILLAGE

TODAY, 4 P. M. Music Mountain. Berkshire Quartet. Assisting artist, Sidney Foster, pianist.
Quartet in B flat ..... Mozart
Quartet No. 2 ..... Prokofieff
Piano Quintet ..... Dvorak

MASSACHUSETTS
LENOX
Berkshire Festival, Tanglewood

TODAY, 2:30 P. M. Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra. Conductor, Charles Munch; Jaime Laredo, violinist.
Variations, Chaconne and Finale ..... Dello Joio
Violin Concerto ..... Mendelssohn
Symphony No. 5 ..... Beethoven

MONDAY, 8:30, The Theatre. John Duke's one act opera, Captain Lovelock, presented by the Tanglewood Opera Workshop.

WEDNESDAY, 8:30 P. M. The Theatre. Beaux Arts Trio of New York.
Kakadu Variations ..... Beethoven
Trio in A minor ..... Ravel
Trio, Op. 8 ..... Brahms

FRIDAY, 8:30 P. M. Music Shed, Boston Symphony. Conductor, Munch; Byron Janis, pianist.
Jeu de Cartes ..... Stravinsky
Symphony No. 1 ..... Krennikov
Piano Concerto No. 3 ..Rachmaninoff

SATURDAY, 8:30 Music Shed. Boston Symphony. Conductor, Munch.
Symphonie Fantastique ..... Berlioz
Symphony No. 6 ..... Piston
Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2.Ravel

NEXT SUNDAY, Music Shed. Boston Symphony. Conductor, Pierre Monteux

Eleanor Steber, soprano; Freda Gray-Masse, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; David Laurent, bass.
Symphony No. 35 ..... Mozart
Symphony No. 9 ..... Beethoven

7

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 24 1960

Tanglewood Events

Today at 2.30 p. m., Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting. Dello Joio: Variations, Chaconne and Finale; Mendelssohn: Violin Concerto (Laredo). Beethoven: Symphony No. 5.

Wednesday, July 27, 8.30, Theater: Beaux Arts Trio of New York. Beethoven: "Kakadu" Variations; Ravel: Trio in A minor; Brahms: Trio, Op. 8.

Friday, July 29, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting. Stravinsky: Jeu de Cartes; Khrennikov: Symphony No. 1, Op. 4; Rachmaninoff: Piano Concerto No. 3, in D minor (Janis).

Saturday, July 30, 10 a. m., Music Shed: Open rehearsal.

Saturday, July 30, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting. Berlioz: "Symphonie Fantastique," Op. 14a; Piston: Symphony No. 6; Ravel: "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2 (Festival Chorus).

Sunday, July 31, 2.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Monteux conducting. Mozart: Symphony No. 35, in D major, "Haffner," K. 385; Beethoven: Symphony No. 9, in D minor, Op. 125; (Steber, Gray-Masse, Mc Collum, Laurent; Festival Chorus).

Activities of the Berkshire Music Center to which friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited:

Today, July 24, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall: BMC Chamber Music.

Today, July 24, 8.30, Chamber Music Hall: Composer's Forum.

Monday, July 25, 8.30, Theater: Opera Scenes.

Tuesday, July 26, 8.30, Chamber Music Hall: Forum, "The Performer as Listener."

Wednesday, July 27, 3.30, Chamber Music Hall: Lecture, "Aspects of Music."

Thursday, July 28, 8.30, Music Shed: Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

Friday, July 29, 3.15, Chamber Music Hall: Seminar on Contemporary Music, Elliott Carter.

Sunday, July 31, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall: BMC Chamber Music.

Sunday, July 31, 8.30, Chamber Music Hall: Composer's Forum.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 24 1960

EVENTS FOR WEEK IN THE BERKSHIRES

PITTSFIELD — Music, theater and the dance are sharing top billing with nature on this summer's vacation schedule in the Berkshire Hills and a full program of attractions will be on tap for the visitor to these cool, green hills again this week.

BSO Performs

At Tanglewood in Lenox the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Conductor Charles Munch at the podium will perform Friday and Saturday evenings at 8.30, and next Sunday afternoon at 2.30. Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor.

VALATIE, N.Y.
ROUGH NOTES
W. 1,502
JUL 22 1960

BYRON JANIS once again makes an appearance at the Berkshire Festival with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The spectacular American pianist will play the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3 at the Friday evening, July 29, concert at 8:30 in the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Publishers From Brazil Arrive Here

Will Attend Weekend Concerts At Tanglewood

Seven publishers and editors from Brazil arrived at Union Station shortly after midnight last night and were escorted by state police to the Red Lion Inn, Stockbridge, where they will spend the weekend.

The journalists were welcomed by John F. Downing and John V. Geary of the Berkshire Hills Conference and Lawrence J. Flynn of Boston, promotion director for the Massachusetts Department of Commerce.

The Brazilian newspapermen are here as part of a nationwide tour arranged by the Governmental Affairs Institute in cooperation with the U.S. State Department. They plan to attend Tanglewood concerts today and tomorrow and will be interviewed by the Voice of America at Tanglewood this noon.

Times (e)
PAWTUCKET-
CENTRAL FALLS, R. I.
Circ. 37,868
AUG 1 1960

AP Wirephoto

CONDUCTOR HONORED — Pierre Monteux, right, receives congratulations on his 85th birthday as he prepares to lead Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Mass. Monteux, former conductor, is greeted by Charles Munch, left, present conductor, and Thomas Perry Jr., orchestra manager.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
UNION-STAR
D. 35,771
JUL 23 1960

Beaux Arts Trio Set at Tanglewood

LENOX, Mass., July 23—The fourth concert of the Berkshire Festival's chamber music series at Tanglewood near here will be given Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. by the Beaux Arts Trio. The program will include Beethoven's "Kakadu Variations," Ravel's "Trio in A Minor" and Brahms' "Trio, Op. 8."

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the concert Friday at 8:30 p.m. when the program will consist of Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes," Khrennikov's "Symphony No. 1, Op. 4" and Rachmaninoff's "Piano Concerto No. 3 in D Minor" with Byron Janis as soloist.

Munch also will conduct the open rehearsal Saturday, July 30, at 10 a.m. and the concert at 8:30 p.m. The program will include the "Symphonie Fantastique" by Berlioz, Piston's "Symphony No. 6" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe, Suite 2."

The program Sunday, July 31, at 2:30 p.m. will be conducted by Pierre Monteux. Mozart's "Symphony No. 35 in D Major (Haffner), K. 385" and Beethoven's "Symphony No. 9 in D Minor, Op. 125" will make up the program.

The soloist for the Beethoven symphony will be Eleanor Steber, soprano; Freda Gray-Masse, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and David Laurent, bass. The Festival Chorus, prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson, will assist.

The program for the concert tonight at 8:30, conducted by Monteux, includes "Anacreon Overture," Cherubini; "Piano Concerto No. 5," Beethoven; "Fountains of Rome," Respighi; and "Till Eulenspiegel," Strauss. Claudio Arrau will be the concerto soloist.

Munch will conduct the concert tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. The program will include "Variations, Chaconne and Finale," Dello Joio; "Violin Concerto," Mendelssohn, with Jaime Laredo as soloist; and "Symphony No. 5," Beethoven.

Record (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 373,012
JUL 25 1960

INTERNATIONALLY-FAMOUS SOPRANO Eleanor Steber's host of Boston friends will be interested in the fascinating collection of names she has acquired in her round-the-world tours. She is making the first of two Berkshire Festival appearances at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the 6000-seat Tanglewood Music Shed.

In Hong Kong they called her "Number One Sing-Song Girl, USA"; in Saigon they hailed her as "The Primitive Donna". "A Good Sport" was the way they headlined her in Ankara because she sang with a fever of 103 degrees. In Bombay she was titled "Musical Diplomat" because she had done so much for Indo-American relations.

When the great Metropolitan Opera star went to Baghdad, she was called a "Miracle" because, as the first Western singer to appear there she "put the city on the musical map." Here in America, Variety (the theater bible) described her as "a one-woman entertainment industry at the Met."

In a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, conducted by the great Pierre Monteux, Miss Steber will be joined at Sunday's concert by alto Freda Gray-Masse, tenor John McCollum and bass David Laurent. The Festival Chorus prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson, [illegible] in this program.

ATHENS HERALD
Thursday, July 28, 1960

GREENVILLE LOCAL
Wednesday, July 27, 1960

RAVENA NEWS HERALD
Friday, July 29, 1960

CAIRO HERALD
Thursday, July 28, 1960

/ Echo

TUESDAY, JU[illegible] 1960

Lebanon

Berkshire [illegible]ival Enters [illegible]eek

Eleanor Steber[illegible]no, is to make the first of [illegible]arances at the Berkshire Fe[illegible] the performance of the Ni[illegible]phony of Beethoven. Miss St[illegible] also sing in the concluding [illegible] (August 14) during the performance of the Damnation of Faust by Berlioz.

Pierre Monte[illegible] will repeat at Tanglewood on Su[illegible] July 31, at 2:30 his 85th birthd[illegible] celebration performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Because of his long and close association with the Boston Symphony O[illegible] of the Orchestra [illegible]onteux if they might [illegible] party in honor of his 85th [illegible] was born April 4, 1875). [illegible] Monteux answered that nothing would give him greater pleasure and he requested that the Orchestra's present to him be a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony which he would conduct in Symphony Hall on April [illegible] for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund. Soprano Eleanor Steber, contralto [illegible] Gray-Masse, tenor John McCo[illegible] and bass

ELEANOR STEBER

David Laurent, who participated in the Symphony Hall performance, and the Festival Chorus will be Mr. Monteux's guests at Sunday's Tanglewood performance. The concert will open with a performance of Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Friday and Saturday evening Tanglewood concerts. The young American pianist, Byron Janis will be his guest at Friday's concert in a performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3. At the same concert, Tikhon Khrennikov's Symphony No. 1 will be played for the first time at the Berkshire Festival. The program will open with "Jeu de Cartes" by Igor Stravinsky.

The Orchestra's rehearsal on Saturday morning at 10:00 will be open to the public as a benefit for the Orchestra's Pension Fund. The Festival Chorus will participate in the Saturday evening performance of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2. At this concert, Doctor Munch will also conduct Symphony No. 6 by Walter Piston and Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique."

Members of the friends of the Berkshire Music Center — those whose voluntary contributions assist the work of the Center — are invited to these activities at Tanglewood this week: Forum: "The Performer as Listener" at 8:30 tonight, Tuesday, in the Chamber Music Hall; Lecture: "Aspects of Music", Wednesday afternoon at 3:30; a concert by the Center's orchestra in the Shed on Thursday evening at 8:30. On Friday at 3:15 members of the Friends are invited to a Seminar in Contemporary Music when the contemporary American composer, Elliott Carter, will make introductory remarks followed by performance of his works. Two events will be opened to the Friends on Sunday: a chamber music program at 10:00 a.m. in the Chamber Music Hall and, in the same hall at 8:30 p. m., the Composer's Forum.

1 : 124

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 29 1960

Janis Soloist At Festival Tonight

Monteux To Conduct Ninth Symphony On Sunday

TANGLEWOOD—The second series of major concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open in the Music Shed tonight at 8:30 when the young American pianist Byron Janis will be the guest soloist in a performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3.

Byron Janis

Also at tonight's concert Tikhon Krennikov's Symphony No. 1 will be played for the first time at the Berkshire Festival. The program will open with Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes."

The orchestra's rehearsal tomorrow morning at 10 will be open to the public as a benefit for the orchestra's pension fund.

Tomorrow's Program

At tomorrow night's concert the Festival Chorus prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon will participate in a performance of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe" Suite No. 2. Dr. Charles Munch will also conduct the BSO tomorrow night in performance of Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony and Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique."

At Dr. Munch's invitation, Pierre Monteux will repeat on Sunday at 2:30 his 85th birthday celebration performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. He conducted the work at Symphony Hall in Boston on April 6 for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

Soprano Eleanor Steber, contralto Freda Gray-Masse, tenor John McCollum and bass David Laurent, who participated in the Symphony Hall performance, and the Festival Chorus will be heard with the BSO. The concert will open with Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON, Mass.
Circ. 12,847

JUL 22 1960

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Circ. 18,203

JUL 29 1960

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 176,513

JUL 25 1960

NEW YORK, N.Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
D. 453,331 SAT. 174,917

JUL 27 1960

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

JUL 28 1960

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUL 26 1960

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657

JUL 29 1960

SYRACUSE POST STANDARD
Sunday, July 24, 1960

Eleanor Steber Appears Sunday

Soprano Eleanor Steber makes the first of two Berkshire Festival appearances with the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood Sunday.

At Sunday's concert Miss Steber will be joined by alto Freda Gray-Masse, tenor John McCollum and bass David Laurent in a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony conducted by Pierre Monteux. The Festival Chorus, prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson, will also participate in this concert in the 6,000-seat Tanglewood Music Shed at 2:30.

Miss Steber, again with tenor John McCollum, baritone Martial Singher and the Festival Chorus, will be heard in the final program of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 14, when Charles Munch will conduct the "Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz.

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

JUL 23 1960

Byron Janis will appear as soloist with the Boston Symphony in Rachmaninov's Piano Concerto No. 3 at Tanglewood on Friday night, July 29.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,572

JUL 28 1960

Monteau To Conduct Beethoven's "Ninth"

To Lead Boston Symphony Sunday Afternoon

Will Repeat Program Given Him As 85th Birthday Present Last April.—Young American Pianist, Byron Janis, Guest Of Orchestra Under Munch Friday Night.

At Charles Munch's invitation, Pierre Monteux will repeat at Tanglewood in Lenox on Sunday at 2:30 p. m., his 85th birthday celebration performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony.

Because of his long and close association with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, members of the orchestra asked Mr. Monteux, if they could arrange a party in honor of his 85th birthday. He was born April 4, 1875. Mr. Monteux answered that nothing would give him greater pleasure and he requested that the orchestra's present to him be a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony which he would conduct in Symphony Hall on April 6, for the benefit of the orchestra's Pension Fund.

Soprano Eleanor Steber, contralto Freda Gray-Masse, tenor John McCollum, and bass David Laurent, who participated in the Symphony Hall performance, and the Festival Chorus, prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson, will be Mr. Monteux's guests at the Tanglewood performance on Sunday. The concert will open with a performance of Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony.

Mr. Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Friday and Saturday Tanglewood concerts this week. The young American pianist, Byron Janis, will be his guest at Friday's concert in a performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3. At the same concert Tikhon Khrennikov's symphony No. 1 will be played for the first time at the Berkshire Festival. The program will open with "Jeu de Cartes" by Igor Stravinsky.

The orchestra's rehearsal on Saturday morning at 10:00 o'clock will be opened to the public as a benefit for the orchestra's pension fund. The Festival Chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon, will participate in the Saturday evening performance of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2. At this concert Dr. Munch will also conduct Symphony No. 6 by Walter Piston and Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique."

Two special events to benefit the scholarship funds of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, will be held at Tanglewood in Lenox, on Thursday, August 4, and Thursday, August 11.

The world-premiere of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Port Town" is included in the August 4 activities. To be presented in the Music Shed, the opera has been prepared by the Opera Department students at Tanglewood under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. In the Music Shed at 8:15, preceding the one-act opera, Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the center's student orchestra. The student orchestra will also participate in the post-intermission opera performance.

The August 4, Tanglewood program will begin at 4:30 p. m., (grounds open at 3:30) with the performance of opera scenes in the Formal Gardens. The Fromm Fellowship Players will be heard in a concert of music by the Tanglewood composition students in the Theatre at 6:00 p. m., and there will be a supper concert by the Tanglewood Choir on the porch of the main house at 7:00 p. m.

The Boston Pops conducted by Arthur Fiedler will present an all-Gershwin program at Tanglewood on Thursday, August 11. Mr. Fiedler's guest will be pianist Earl Wild. The program includes Gershwin's "An American in Paris," Mr. Wild as soloist in Concerto in F and in the "Rhapsody in Blue," "Strike Up the Band," and "Porgy and Bess"—the Robert Russell Bennett Symphonic Picture for Orchestra.

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,290

JUL 28 1960

Monteux To Lead Boston Symphony In Beethoven's 9th

At Charles Munch's invitation Pierre Monteux will repeat at Tanglewood Sunday (July 31, 2:30) his 85th birthday celebration performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Because of his long and close association with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, members of the Orchestra asked Mr. Monteux if they might arrange a party in honor of his 85th birthday (born: April 4, 1875). Mr. Monteux answered that nothing would give him greater pleasure and he requested that the Orchestra's present to him be a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony which he would conduct in Symphony Hall on April 6 for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund. Soprano Eleanor Steber, contralto Freda Gray-Masse, tenor John McCollum and bass David Laurent, who participated in the Symphony Hall performance, and the Festival chorus (prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson) will be Mr. Monteux's guests at the Tanglewood performance. The concert will open with a performance of Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony.

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Friday and Saturday (July 29, 30; 8:30) Tanglewood concerts. The young American pianist Byron Janis will be his guest at Friday's concert in a performance of Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3. At the same concert Tikhon Khrennikov's Symphony No. 1 will be played for the first time at the Berkshire Festival. The program will open with "Jeu de Cartes" by Igor Stravinsky. [illegible]

The Orchestra's rehearsal on Saturday morning at 10:00 (July 30) will be opened to the public as a benefit for the Orchestra's Pension Fund. The Festival Chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon, will participate in the Saturday evening performance of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," Suite No. 2. At this concert Doctor Munch will also conduct Symphony No. 6 by Walter Piston and Berlioz's "Symphonie Fantastique."

Soprano Eleanor Steber — The International Star — makes the first of two Berkshire Festival appearances at Tanglewood Sunday (July 31). Miss Steber will also be heard in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's final Tanglewood concerts [illegible] Sunday, August 14.

The mantle of "International Star" is well placed upon Miss Steber's shoulders.

Three years ago, at the invitation of the United States Department of State, she undertook an unprecedented world-tour which included visits to fifteen Asian countries, many of which had never before heard an American-born diva. The tour started in Vienna with a performance of "Tosca" at the Staatsoper and an equally acclaimed Lieder recital. Miss Steber again revisited Yugoslavia. The Asian part of her tour began in Turkey, and then led her to Lebanon, Iraq, West Pakistan, Ceylon, India, East Pakistan, Indonesia, the Malay States, Vietnam, Thailand, Hong Kong, Taiwan, The Philippines and Japan.

From each of these places reports came back to the United States of the successes scored by the American prima donna, and of the importance of her visit on the level of international cultural relations.

125

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 27 1960

TANGLEWOOD FIRST will be marked at the regular concert of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra tomorrow night when Joseph de Pasquale, principal viola with the Boston Symphony, will perform in Berlioz' "Harold in Italy." Orchestra will be conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, head of Music Center's Department of Instrumental Music. This will be first time that a member of the Boston Symphony has been a soloist with student orchestra. Concert is at 8:30.

Beaux Arts Trio At Tanglewood Theater Tonight

TANGLEWOOD — The Beaux Arts Trio will give the fourth concert of the Berkshire Festival's chamber music series in the Tanglewood Theater tonight at 8:30. The trio, hailed by Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the Boston Symphony, as "worthy successors to the last great trio of Thibaud, Casals and Cortot," made its debut here in 1955 and has given five performances here since that time.

The trio will perform Beethoven's "Kakadu Variations"; Ravel's Trio in A minor and Trio, Opus 8, by Brahms.

Tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Music Shed the Berkshire Music Center's student orchestra will present a program, featuring for the first time a soloist from the BSO. Joseph de Pasquale, first violist with the orchestra, will perform Berlioz' "Harold in Italy," with Eleazar de Carvalho conducting the student orchestra.

The program will open with Beethoven's "Lenore Overture No. 1," followed by Dukas' "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," and Rimsky-Korsakov's "Capriccio Espagnol."

Eagle 7/28

Music Review

Beaux Arts Trio

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

A RECITAL by the Beaux Arts Trio has become almost an annual event in the chamber music series at the Berkshire Festival. Last night they played a program in the Theater Concert Hall at Tanglewood to an audience that kept demanding more.

The members of the trio are Menahem Pressler, piano, Daniel Guilet, violin, and Bernard Greenhouse, cello. Their program consisted of the "Kakadu" variations of Beethoven, the Ravel trio and the Brahms B minor, opus 8.

* * *

THEIR ENSEMBLE playing was never better. There was unanimity of thinking on all aspects of their performance, the details and the overall perspective. The balance was debatable at times, but this could have been due to two factors: the composer's allotments and the expressive strength of the individual performers.

The Beethoven variations on a popular tune of the day are pure Viennese musical pastry of the most enjoyable kind. The Ravel trio of almost exactly a century later is from another musical planet. It is daring in every channel — harmonically and rhythmically—and yet it remains discreet and as reserved as his other chamber music.

* * *

RAVEL HAD a great knowledge of the possibilities of each instrument, and it becomes interesting to compare it from that angle with the Brahms the trio played later, for that is written with themes essentially for a piano. As beautiful as Greenhouse made his opening statement sound, it took all the ingenuity and the skill he as an eminent virtuoso possesses to make his line agree with that expressed initially by the piano.

And in the scherzo a bow can not combine the rhythmic crispness and clarity which in this instance is so suitable on a keyboard. This is no reflection at all on the artists of the evening, although Pressler is a remarkable ensemble player and adjusts his tone and fits his phrasing to the strings with unexcelled musicianship.

* * *

THE RAVEL is in many ways the greatest of his chamber works. The performance maintained an unlabored lightness in spite of the turgid counterpoint in many spots and the excited and elaborate nature of the movements such as the last one.

Many musicians categorically insist that a piano trio is not a natural ensemble group and when the piano, naturally the more powerful instrument, overshadows the two strings, no more evidence is required. But there is the matter of the individual who is the pianist and secondly the material it has pleased composers to write for this combination.

* * *

DANIEL Gregory Mason, who wrote his "Chamber Music of Brahms" while he was passing his summers in Pittsfield many years ago, claims that his uncle William Mason was the pianist of the trio which performed the Brahms B major in New York in 1855, 18 days before it was played in Europe. But if it is true, they did not play the trio the Beaux Arts played for us last night as Brahms himself revised his earliest essay in the chamber music field 35 years later. While it still retains its opus number eight, it is quite a different piece from the original.

The artists were forced to add two encores to their program, and they played excerpts from Mendelssohn and Beethoven.

THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1960 Springfield Union

BEAUX ARTS TRIO HAILED AT FESTIVAL

1150 Attend Tanglewood Program in Spite of Bad Weather

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — In spite of wet weather and fog, an audience of 1150 persons was on hand in the theater to welcome back the splendid Beaux Arts Trio of New York and it heard the sort of ensemble playing which is all too rare these days. I remember hearing only one other trio the equal of the Beaux Arts Trio and that was the Nieuw Amsterdam Trio from Holland.

Blends Perfectly

The trio is composed of Manahem Pressler, pianist; Daniel Guilet, violin, and Bernhard Greenhouse, cello. Of the three, Pressler is the most colorful. In his early years with the trio he was always predominant, but he has learned to curb his enthusiasm and now blends perfectly with violin and cello.

The program opened with the engaging "10 Variations, in G major for Piano Trio" by Beethoven. These are based on a solo, the cookoo from the opera "Die Schwestern von Prag" by William Muller, which was popular at the time Beethoven wrote these variations. They are now more familiarly known as the "Kakadu" variations. The theme is lovely and the variations imaginative, whimsical and always light-hearted. In fact, they might be characterized as light diabelli variations.

The piano trio by Ravel followed the Beethoven and beautiful was the performance. The opening movement was played with transparent tone. The violin and cello sang expressively in the scherzo, there was a splendid spaciousness to the passacaglia and the finale was spirited without bombast. Everything in the performance was clean cut, whether it be the shimmer of strings or the waltz rhythm of the scherzo.

Ends With Brahms

The program concluded with the "Piano Trio in B major" by Brahms.

It was given one of the most musical performances possible. The exquisite melody with which piano and cello begin the first movement is exploited with living care by the composer and at considerable length as though he were loth to give it up. There was some superb playing during the scherzo and there was impressive depth and climax to the finale, which seems to step out of the picture which heretofore had been warmly melodic.

Small wonder this fine ensemble received a warm and affectionate ovation at the end of the concert. The audience had listened with real intensity to the entire program, realized the worth of the music and performances and gave it just due.

Next Wednesday, pianist Leon Fleisher will be heard in a sonata recital playing the "Sonata in B minor" by Liszt; piano sonata (1948) by Kirchner and the Schubert "Piano Sonata in B flat major" (posthumous).

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 148,332

JUL 31 1960

Freshness Feature at Tanglewood

LENOX, MASS. (Special)—Just when both the Republicans and Democrats were getting ready to amend their civil rights planks to demand more interesting programs at Tanglewood, the Berkshire Music Festival authorities decided to do something about the problem themselves.

Friday, Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra played Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes," the Symphony No. 1 by Tikhon Khrennikov, and the third piano concerto by Rachmaninoff. While in some respects the program could not be called a big deal, it did have elements of freshness about it.

The Stravinsky score is so completely balletic that it does not have too much validity as a pure listening piece. The dance for which it was originally written is an integral part of the musical meaning. Nevertheless, by concentrating separately on the 10 or so segments of which it is composed, there is considerable of the shrewd and entertaining Stravinsky to be heard. "Jeu de Cartes" has the composer's piquant melodies, his provocative orchestration, and his hypnotic rhythmic climaxes stemming back to another ballet venture, "Petrouchka." What is missing is the relationship and connection of the sections, and this could only be made plain by the choreography itself.

First Performance

The Khrennikov First Symphony was having its Tanglewood premiere tonight. This contemporary Russian work stands somewhat to the right of Shostakovitch. It has the latter's facetiousness, his popular heroics, and a great deal of his clatter. But the actual writing is a little more on the academic side. Generally the symphony is a rabble-rouser, and when at the end recollections of the "Marche Slave" and the Tuba Mirum in Berlioz's requiem are braided in a blatant climax, the result is pretty flamboyant.

Byron Janis was soloist for the Rachmaninoff Concerto, and he gave the work a bravura performance. His pianistic energies were such that they caused him to hop about on the piano bench much like the fabled hen on the hot griddle. Whether the composer himself thought of the concerto in such terms of technical glitter and furious temperament is a little late to inquire. One would guess not, however. The work, though fervent, is not entirely fevered. On the other hand, Mr. Janis made it sound, not to say resound. His passagework had a hair-raising brilliance, and the weight and dimension of his playing made the orchestral score and the orchestral performance almost pallid by comparison. Perhaps the vividness was parlayed by the new acoustical treatment of the Tanglewood shed.

But in any event, Mr. Janis' contribution was enormously powerful by itself, and just about knocked the audience's hat off before they had time to doff it in cheering him.

Mr. Munch, who seems to get increasingly [illegible] with the customers, was in an energetic mood of his own tonight, driving the performance of the Stravinsky and the Khrennikov to peaks of vigor and vitality, and generally shaking the scores in his teeth. The orchestra played quite handsomely after pulling itself together from some shady ensemble work in the initial "Jeu de Cartes." The quality of the tone is not much to write home about, but the verve and virtuosity of what the players turn out is still pretty stimulating.

—T.H.P.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

JUL 30 1960

U. S. PIANIST GETS OVATION AT FESTIVAL

Byron Janis Is Featured With Hub Symphony in Rachmaninoff Work

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—Byron Janis, 32-year-old American pianist, was the bright star of the Berkshire Festival program Friday night in the music shed at Tanglewood. He played Rachmaninoff's "Piano Concerto No. 3 in D Minor," a work he had performed here with the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the 1958 season. It appears to be the concerto with which he is most closely affiliated.

Opens With Stravinsky

The program opened with another familiar Tanglewood work, the "Jeu de Cartes," a ballet in three deals, by Stravinsky. New to Tanglewood audiences was the first symphony by Tikhon Khrennikov. Charles Munch has directed the work in Boston, but it was a Tanglewood first, and a very exciting one.

Byron Janis is an exciting pianist. He has a prodigious technique, a fine sensitivity for musical line and nuance and an intelligent grasp of whatever he is playing. He brought all these characteristics to bear in his stunning performance of the concerto Friday night. The superbrilliant finale brought the audience to its feet and a tremendous ovation was the result.

Mr. Munch and Mr. Janis were completely en rapport and the orchestra provided superb collaboration. The performance had unity and all the excitement of the 1958 performance.

Should Be Seen

Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes" is a ballet which should be seen in order to make the music fully appreciated. It concerns a card game in which the cards are the characters in a game of poker disputed between several players on the green baize table of a gaming house. The ballet is divided into three deals and each deal gives opportunity for intimate, rollicking and strange dances.

Again, one can only admire the craftsmanship of Stravinsky, his wry wit and his ability to write music which makes his characters live. Mr. Munch provided a crystal clear reading of this complex score. It was a fine performance and it was well received by the audience.

The Khrennikov symphony has its moments. The first movement enables many melodic fragments to amble about without getting to any particular place, but it's pleasant listening. The second movement, an adagio, is in a somber mood high lighted by some stunning brass and percussion work. The final movement, a sort of scherzo-finale, is tremendously exciting because of its bombast and the brisk pace at which it was taken.

Every Phrase Telling

Mr. Munch spared neither himself nor his orchestra to make every phrase a telling one and the result was a brilliant performance which held the interest and at the end resulted in a fine tribute of applause.

Tonight, Mr. Munch offers the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony," one of his finest achievements; Piston's "Symphony No. 6" and "Daphnis et Chloe Suite No. 2," with the festival chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon.

The concert drew an audience of 6078. More than a 1000 less than the concert last season.

Spr. Union 8/1/60

PERFORMANCE BY SYMPHONY DRAWS PRAISE

Tanglewood Program of Boston Orchestra Attracts 12,387

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—The music of Mozart and Beethoven, the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the presence of Pierre Monteux on the podium drew 12,387 persons to Tanglewood Sunday afternoon. The program consisted of Mozart's "Haffner" symphony and Beethoven's "Ninth" symphony. Monteux was leading the Boston players through the "Ninth" for the second time this season. The first time was in Paris on the occasion of his 85th birthday.

Now Less Controversial

Ever since its first performance, Beethoven's "Ninth" has been a controversial work. Today it is less so and the chorale finale is accepted as an integral part of the whole. One of the tersest programs for this symphony has been assigned by Marion M. Scott who puts it this way: The first movement is destiny and the "inexorable order of the universe;" the second, physical exuberance and energy; the third, love; the fourth, joy, which was to Beethoven what charity was to St. Paul, "the one thing without which all else was incomplete."

It is the baritone who gives the clue to the emotional transition when he silences the preceding clamor with the words, "O friends, friends, not these sounds. Let us sing something more pleasant, more full of gladness." This first solo utterance in the chorale movement was sung with solid tone and nobility of expression by Mr. Laurent, setting the key for the rest of the chorale performance.

The soloists were Eleanor Steber, soprano; Freda Grey-Maas, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and David Laurent, bass. The festival chorus which had been prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson sang enthusiastically, the best choral work I have heard at the festival. Miss Steber's brilliant high tones soared above the clamor and carried to every part of the music shed. Miss Maas was satisfactory even though the contralto part has little opportunity for display. Mr. McCollum was just right in the tenor role, singing with fine style and ample tones.

Performance to Treasure

Pierre Monteux directed a full bodied, carefully detailed performance. In this reading was the result of his years of association with the work, his own sense of the oneness of humanity and his own humility. Beethoven's eloquence gained added vitality through Mr. Monteux.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 31 1960

TANGLEWOOD'S AUDIENCE CUT BY DOWNPOUR

Berlioz Work Heard by 6227; Monteux On Podium Today

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—The torrential rains Saturday did a lot of damage as far as audience participation was concerned with the night's Tanglewood concert. Only 6227 persons ventured out to hear Charles Munch direct a program which included the Berlioz "Symphonie Fantastique," Walter Piston's "Symphony No. 6" and Ravel's "Daphne et Chloe" second suite, in which the festival chorus was used.

Sure-Fire Hit

Every so often during the past Tanglewood Berkshire Festival concerts, Mr. Munch gives us this Berlioz symphony. It is one of his finest readings and a sure-fire hit, no matter how often played. Saturday night's performance was no exception. The awesome march to the scaffold, taken Saturday at an unprecedented rapid pace, and the fearsome "Dream of the Witches' Sabbath" never fail to draw an ovation. But there were other beauties Saturday night. The singing strings in the opening "reveries" and the long, somewhat drawn out idyllic scene in the meadows. Mr. Munch dwelt on these with a wealth of understanding and depth of feeling.

Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony was written especially for the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the composer writes that in so doing he had the sound of the orchestra always in his mind. This four-movement work is by a superb craftsman who is not afraid of melody and who wrote in a manner that tests even the virtuosi of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The opening movement is a free flowing expression; the second movement light and gracious; the adagio more somber and deeply expressive and the finale a consumation of splendid impact. It was a stunning performance. It has been played during all the symphony tours.

Myriad Colorations

The program concluded with the charming second suite of "Daphne et Chloe." Here again the strings and woodwinds brought myriad colorations to every phrase. The opening episode "Lever du Jour" was particularly effective while the "Danse Generale," with its chorus, rises to a terrific climax. This is the sort of music which Mr. Munch directs so effectively. He seems to feel acutely this well worn tale of love, tribulation and final union of a shepherd and shepherdess. Every audience takes it to its heart and so Saturday night the concert concluded amid a warm and friendly atmosphere.

This afternoon Pierre Monteux returns to the podium to direct a performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, using the same soloists as he used at the 85th anniversary concert he directed in Boston, the occasion of his birthday. The soloists will be Eleanor Stever, soprano; John McCollum, tenor; David Laurent, bass, and Freda Gray-Masse, contralto. Mr. Laurent will be remembered by Springfield Symphony audiences for his splendid singing last season in Vaughan-Williams' "Sea Symphony."

The concert will open with Mozart's "Haffner Symphony."

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

AUG 1 1960

Rain Reduces Tanglewood 3-Day Crowds to 24,692

Inclement weather caused a drop in attendance at the Tanglewood music shed this weekend.

A total of 24,692 attended three days of concerts in which both Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Last weekend's attendance came to 28,102.

Munch Conducts

Friday evening 6,078 heard Mr. Munch lead the orchestra in Stravinski's "Jeu de Cartes" ballet and, heard there for the first time a new symphony by the modern composer, Tikhon Khrennikov.

Soloist Byron James played Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3 in D minor.

Saturday Mr. Munch conducted the "Symphonie Fantastique" by Berlioz, Symphony No. 6 by Walter Piston, and the "Daphne et Chloe," second suite by Ravel before an audience of 6,227 persons who braved driving rains.

Monteux Takes Baton

Mr. Monteux wielded the bato yesterday afternoon in a program of Mozart's "Haffner" symphony and the Ninth b Beethoven.

The soloists were Eleanor Steber, soprano; Freda Grey-Maa contralto; John McCollum, teno and David Laurent, bass. Fine weather swelled the crowd 12,387 persons.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

AUG 7 1960

Second Thoughts On Music

Two Performances Are Outstanding at Festival

Bryan Janis' Piano Concerto and Towering Effort of Beethoven's Ninth Are Cited

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Two performances stand out as one remembers the three week-end concerts of the Berkshire Music Festival here at Tanglewood. First is the exciting performance of Rachmaninoff's third piano concerto by Bryan Janis. The second is the towering performance of Beethoven's "Ninth" symphony, conducted by Pierre Monteux.

Intriguing Ballet

Charles Munch opened the week-end concerts, conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Stravinsky's intriguing ballet "Jeu de Cartes"; Khrennikov's first symphony and then offering splendid collaboration to Mr. Janis in the Rachmaninoff concerto. Stravinsky's ballet really needs to be seen for full effectiveness, but the music stands up pretty well on its own.

The ballet is really a card game in three deals with the dancers assuming the characters in a deck of cards. All this is accomplished around a huge green baize table. Mr. Munch has played the work here in the past and he provides an exciting listening experience.

The Khrennikov symphony was played here for the first time, although Boston had heard it. It is a pleasant work, well-constructed and interest holding. There is plenty of pleasant melodic material and the Russian composer is not afraid to expose melody for its own sake. Bryan Janis has become definitely associated with Rachmaninoff's third piano concerto. He played it here two seasons ago. Presumably, he knows other concertos but is saddled with this one because of his tremendous performance of it. Mr. Janis has a prodigious technique that fears none of the demands of the work. He is also a sensitive musician who makes a melody sing beautifully, and he is one who understands the value of understatement on occasion. It was a splendid performance and earned for pianist and orchestra a real ovation.

It was at his concert we saw our most exotic costume to date. The wearer was a white-haired gentlemen well past middle age. He wore pink trousers, a green plaid shirt and topped this off with a chatreuse necktie. He was the cynosure of all eyes when he stood up to view the audience.

Pierre Monteux, now 85 years old, has made one concession to advancing years. A hand rail has been added to the steps leading to the podium. Last year, he allowed others to help him mount the steps. Now he does not need them. Early this year, (April, I think) he conducted a performance of Beethoven's "Ninth" symphony in Boston, a birthday present from the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Last week he again conducted this work using the same soloists and the festival chorus which had been prepared by Alfred Nash Paterson. It was a memorable occasion and a wonderful sight to watch this veteran conductor gain every effect he desired with minimum effort. The orchestra response was immediate.

Monteux provided a close-knit performance, broad and spacious in scope. The solo quartet, although composed of veteran singers, was not the ideal one for the work. Eleanor Steber and John McCollum seemed to have to use all their energies to force their voices to come through. Freda Grey-Masse, contralto, was, for the most part inaudible. David Laurent, bass-baritone was the only one who appeared to be singing easily, if such a thing is possible in this music.

It has been several seasons since we have heard such fine singing from a festival chorus. Entrances were just right and the quality of tone generally good even in the altitudinous soprano part. There was a good balance of voices and clarity of enunciation. It was no surprise that the audience rose to its feet at the close and offered a standing ovation.

Monteux opened the program with a highly-polished, beautifully proportioned performance of Mozart's "Symphony No. 35 in D major," the "Haffner" symphony. In this performance we heard the results of years of experience, study and admiration for the composer and his work.

Finest Achievements

Charles Munch offered one of the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony." Munch and Berlioz are very close and a festival season program is seldom without one or more of his works. One can not blame Mr. Munch for offering Berlioz works for he has just the orchestra to play them. They seem made to order for the Boston players, the rich strings, the exquisitive wood winds and brilliant brasses and percussion. All these are necessary to the Berlioz music.

Walter Piston and Charles Munch appear to see eye to eye musically. Mr. Munch has played a number of Piston works and has taken his symphony No. 6 on tour, here and in Europe and the Far East. This was the work place next to the Berlioz symphony. It did not suffer from this position for Piston is a skilled craftsman blessed with imagination and sometimes wry humor. He wrote the symphony for the Boston Symphony and he knew well the resources for which he was writing. The result is a tailor-made work and a scintillating performance.

Debussy's music is another Munch specialty and in the second "Daphne at Chloe" suite one heard sumptuous tone, beautiful ensemble and some excellent singing from the Festival chorus, this time prepared by Lrona Cooke de Varon.

Lengthy Program

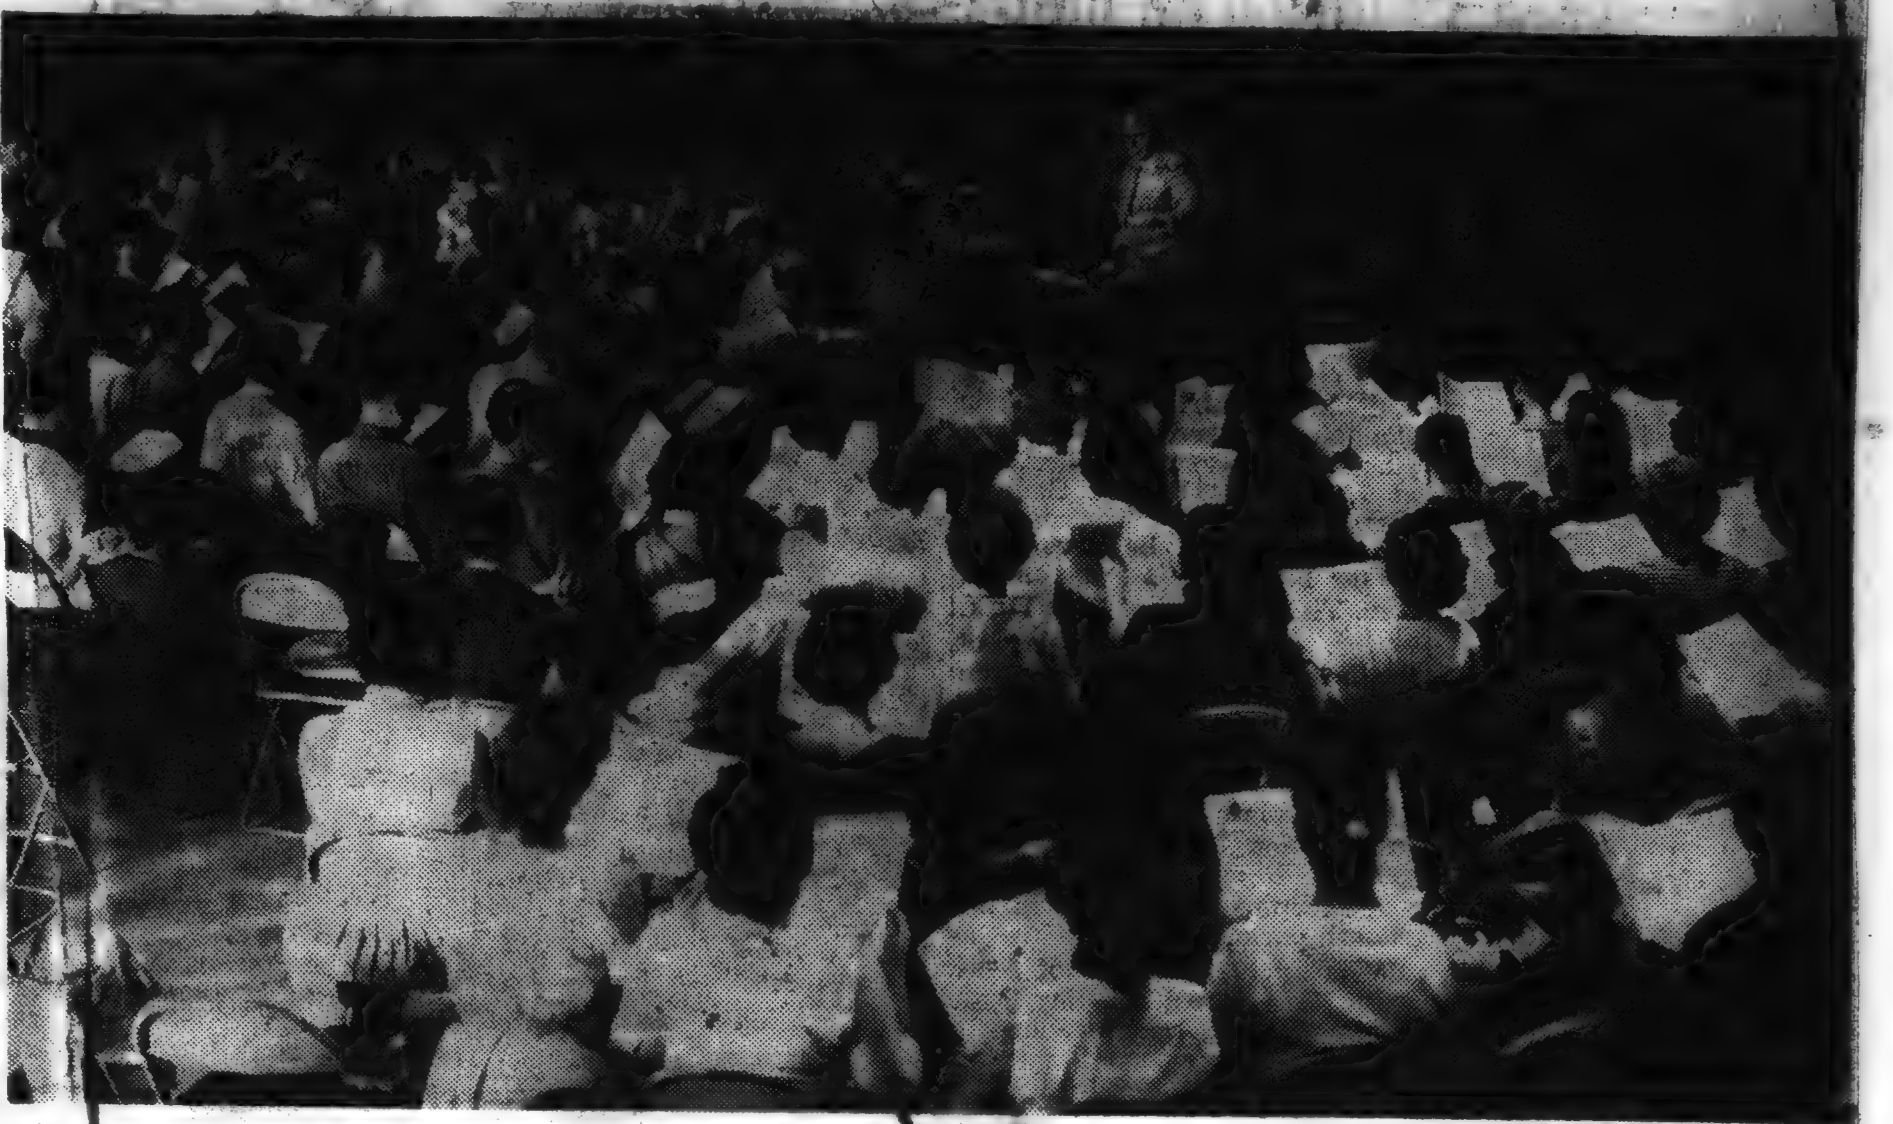
Boris Goldovsky, director of the opera department offered his young singers in a lengthy program which included Ravel's "Spanish Hour", Puccini's "Sister Angelica" and John Duke's "Captain Lovelock". The program ended with a scene from Mozart's "Don Giovanni." There are some good voices in the department, especially among the men, who seemed to be more sure of themselves vocally than the women.

Mr. Duke was on hand to see his opera and he must have enjoyed it for it was given a brisk and hilarious performance. Puccini's poignant "Sister Angelica" is heard too seldom. It is an all-woman cast and the demands on the soprano "Sister Angelica" are enormous. Many of these demands were met and the whole performance once again revealed the uncanny skill of Mr. Goldovsky in training his singers to act naturally, as if no conductor was present.

Students of the Fromm Foundation and members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra joined to present a program of music which, if nothing else, was extraordinary. Pianist Paul Jacobs, who hails from Paris, provided a brilliant performance of Roger Session's "Second Sonata for Piano." Written in 1946, it is typical of Sessions, exciting, unpleasant and difficult. Igor Stravinsky's "Septet" also was given a fine performance and seemed almost tame beside Luciano Berio's "Circles, for Voice, Harp and Percussion." Mr. Berio is composer in residence at Tanglewood this summer and the work was being given its first performance.

The singer was Cathy Berberian, who proved she is a magnificent musician with well-nigh perfect pitch and a voice of interesting quality. Her accompaniment consisted of some 20 percussive elements and the harp. From these, she did not appear to get a single pitch clue, but the combination and singer always came out even. At moments, she even conducted. Just what this work proved, we are not prepared to say. It has been performed and some adventurous souls may try it again, but we believe we heard a definitive performance. There was much applause for the soloist, percussionists and composer. The audience was a predominately youthful one, which discussed the patterns and the musical vocabulary involved in the work with great seriousness as they left the theater.

Preparing for Berkshire Festival's Final Concert



Charles Munch conducts a rehearsal of the Festival Chorus in preparation for the final Berkshire Festival concert, "The Damnation of Faust," by Berlioz. The concert will be held in the Music Shed at Tanglewood next Sunday afternoon beginning at 2.30.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 30 1960

Music Review

Janis Triumphs at Festival

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FOURTH weekend at Tanglewood started last night with a program completely of this century. The sensation of the evening was the triumphal piano playing of Byron Janis in the third Rachmaninoff concerto. He played with the spark of one possessed that broke into flame every instant. A crowd of 6,078 attended.

Charles Munch directed the Boston Symphony Orchestra before the intermission in the Stravinsky "Jeude Cartes" and Tikhon Krennikov's first symphony. These latter two works date from about the mid-1930's but the first was the product of an established 55-year-old man; the latter of a composer of 22.

* * *

KHRENNIKOV was in this country last year when a group of six Russian composers visited here. One of the group was Shostakovitch, to whom this symphony is dedicated.

They all were in the audience at Carnegie Hall when the Boston orchestra played this symphony in New York. He is reported to have said that he never heard his symphony played so well.

It is vivacious and imaginative, even if not original in any sense. It provides many grateful opportunities for the instruments, notably the bassoon in the opening theme of the first movement and the fireworks allotted the clarinet and brilliantly played by Gino Cioffi to start the third and last movement.

* * *

THE CENTRAL adagio seems more deeply felt than the trivial first movement. There is a luscious quality to the writing, not unlike the Rachmaninoff which was to follow it on the program but which ante-dated it by 25 years. The final allegro is a gay scherzo which gives way to a romantic section full of climaxes reminiscent of Strauss and as far back as Wagner. When the scherzo returns it ends with a short coda pure Tschaikovsky.

Stravinsky divides his "Card Game" into three deals which are played without interruption but are clearly indicated by a harmonic idiom which marks the start of each section. This was originally planned as ballet music which justifies the frequent changes of every element of the work.

* * *

IT IS CHEERFUL and every fragment shows the composer's personal stamp and the quotation from Rossini's "Barber of Seville" is not plagiarism as Stravinsky makes no pretense of surreptitiously borrowing it.

In spite of the conductor's lack of consideration in the accompaniment of the Rachmaninoff, Janis carried the audience on the wings of his dauntless virtuosity. Munch gave the orchestra its head, even exhorted it to greater effort, and while Janis has fingers of steel, much of his dazzling élan was obscured within the overstrong orchestral tone. There was intrepid propulsion to Janis' impetuous ardor, yet he sang the opening statement with tonal poetry and reticent grace.

* * *

RACHMANINOFF writes a symphonic background for his concerti and it takes power and comprehension to dominate such a performance. The young Janis never showed that the means were of any concern to him. The goal was expressiveness which he fulfilled with a broad and massively controlled sweep. This was big piano playing and the audience gave him an ovation of unsurpassed spontaneity.

128

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 30 1960

Tanglewood Attendance Said 6,078

Attendance at the Berkshire Festival program last night in the music shed at Tanglewood fell more than 1,000 under the same concert last season. Official attendance last night was 6,078.

Featured soloist at Tanglewood was Byron Janis, 32-year-old American pianist, who played Rachmaninoff's "Piano Concerto No. 3 in D Minor," a work he performed at Tanglewood with the Berkshire Symphony Orchestra in 1958.

Janis's performance was well received, and his brilliant finale brought the audience to its feet.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Charles Munch, played Stravinski's "Jeu de Cartes" ballet, and a symphony, played for the ifrst time at Tanglewood, by the modern composer, Tikhon Khrennikov.

Tonight Mr. Munch and the orchestra off the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony," Piston's "Symphony No. 6," and "Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2" with the Festival Chorus.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
AUG 1 1960

Music Review

Monteux's Magnificent Ninth

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

MOST of the 12,387 music lovers who attended the concert at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon jumped to their feet cheering, applauding and shouting "Bravo" as guest conductor Pierre Monteux concluded a performance of the Beethoven Choral Symphony with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Festival chorus and four eminent soloists.

The ovation continued for six minutes, by the clock, as the venerated octogenarian-plus beamed with deserved satisfaction for a job magnificently done, one in which all the participants outdid themselves. The tribute was both a reflection of the audience's enjoyment and a demonstration of the affection he attracts. Among the touching incidents of the acclaim was the embrace Monteux gave to concertmaster Richard Burgin who had come to the Boston orchestra during Monteux's tenure as permanent director of the organization.

* * *

THE CHORUS had been trained by Alfred Nash Patterson. The soloists were Eleanor Steber, soprano, Freda Gray-Masse, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and David Laurent, bass.

Favored again, as last week, by keen, clear air and sunny warmth, the immense audience heard a program that started with the Mozart "Haffner" symphony.

* * *

THE ORCHESTRA played for both conductors with vivid zest. Monteux makes his points with a minimum of gestures; Munch achieved his usual excitement with a diminution of indications from his usual wont.

Pierre Monteux

Monteux employs deft trompe-l'oreille devices. As early as the sixth bar of the "Haffner," he deliberately measures the violins' soft reiteration with an exaggerated articulation beautifully fitted between the spirited phrases of the introduction. He realized the essential gaiety of the whole symphony just as he gave a proper awesome character to the great "Ninth."

* * *

ON THE OCCASION of Monteux's 85th birthday this spring the Boston orchestra invited their one-time leader to come back to conduct the last Beethoven symphony. We cannot imagine a more grandiose birthday present. Yesterday's performance was a repetition of that event. We were not in the audience at the spring concert, but we doubt if there could have been deeper insight into the cornucopia of Beethoven than was revealed from the Shed stage yesterday.

Monteux made no attempt to make anything more of the symphony than the enduring classic and simple materials Beethoven used. The themes are almost elementary in their guilelessness, and that may be why they withstand endless repetition without losing their bloom and stirring effect. The chorus sang for him with all their voice. The soloists made assignments, meager in duration, but large in importance, deeply effective. Basso Laurent trumpeted the initial vocal utterance of the symphony with stentorian authority, echoing the statement by the celli at the outset of the movement. Tenor McCollum was moving in his only solo opportunity, and the quartet not only acquitted themselves heroically in their too short opportunities, but Monteux gave them ample assistance and subservient support.

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT Munch began his program with his favorite — the Berlioz "Fantastic" symphony, a work with which he has shown great affinity over the years. Never did he seem to be more in the vein and rarely has the performance had more brilliance. We don't stop to think very often that this is only six years later than the last Beethoven, but usually thoughtlessly place it in a later era. It grows in stature as time goes on, and the revival certainly is not impeded by the complete immersion in which Munch covers himself.

The orchestra as a whole was in magnificent fettle. Whenever solos appeared they were executed with conspicuous taste; and Munch allowed the audience in every case to show its appreciation. He called English horn Louis Speyer to his feet for the lovely soliloquy in the "Country Scenes" of the Berlioz; Samuel Mayes for the sonorous playing of the cello solo in the third movement of the Walter Piston sixth symphony; and in the final number of the evening, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloe," James Pappoutsakis for his outstanding and graceful rendition of the flute solos throughout the work.

* * *

RAVEL WROTE a part for a wordless mixed chorus in the score. It is optional, and, when omitted, can be replaced by instruments. But its inclusion adds an incomparable richness to the music, and the chorus, in this case trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon, made it completely effective.

Piston's symphony was commissioned for the 75th season of the Boston orchestra, and it is dedicated to the memory of Serge and Natalie Koussevitzky. The four short movements are in Piston's freest and happiest disposition. There is an obvious forward urgency in the first movement; the second, played with mutes in the strings, is featherlight and hummingbird swift which give it a fairy and magic fleetness. The finale is a carnival and is higher off the ground than anything else of Piston with which we are acquainted. The composer was in the audience, and Munch invited him to the stage to be the direct target of the outburst of applause the performance evoked.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,498
AUG 4 1960

Weekend At Tanglewood

July 30 by E. G. B.

July 29
by A. C. S.

Works by Russian composers were chosen by Charles Munch for the first program of the weekend. All three were written in this century but only one reflects the musical trends of our times. This is Stravinsky's Jeu de Cartes, a ballet in "three deals" composed for the American Ballet in 1936. It is a tonal work and only mildly dissonant, and while it is pleasant listening, ones does miss the visual complement of the dance.

The Symphony No. 1 by Khrennikov was completed only one year earlier than the "Card Game" but represents the late nineteenth century in its musical viewpoint. Mr. Munch gave it a sympathetic reading.

The program concluded with a surging performance of Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto. A work that makes almost unbelievable demands on the soloist, it was played with enormous drive by the young American, Byron Janis. No technical obstacle deterred him; none of the myriad changes in tempo or dynamic level went unaccounted for. The tone was big but not harsh, the rhythms were clearly imparted, every aspect was superbly handled, and yet for this listener that indescribable spine-tingling thrill was absent. Mr. Janis certainly deserved the tumultuous ovation given him at the close.

July 30
by E. G. B.

Charles Munch and the Boston orchestra were in top form Saturday evening. The program was colorful and strenuous, with Munch not sparing himself or the players. A clue to the inner intensity of the whole concert was revealed when we saw something fly over the heads of the violinists, and then found Munch waving a half baton which had snapped in mid-air, solely from the vigor of his beat!

Berlioz' Symphonie Fantastique, which was revolutionary at the time it was written, still sounds highly dramatic and original. It runs the gamut of expressiveness from humor to horror.

Walter Piston's lovely Sixth Symphony, written expressly for the Boston orchestra was beautifully done.

The Festival Chorus joined the instrumentalists for the final number, Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe Suite.. The use of voices here is rather unusual; they contributed color and support, always blending right in with what the orchestra has to say, with the utmost smoothness and beauty of tone. The interpretation reached impassioned heights of expression.

July 31 by E. G. B.

Pierre Monteux (at a ripe age of 85) was the conductor on Sunday of a singularly lucid revelation of Mozart's Haffner Symphony, (the 35th one,) and of the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven. It was a great performance, ,and a veritable tumult broke out and continued lengthily at its close. The Festival Chorus had been prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson, and was larger than the number used the evening before. Eleanor Steber, soprano; Freda Gray-Massé, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and David Laurent, bass, were the soloists. All sang superbly.

It is harder to describe a great interpretation than a lesser one. Monteux welded together the orchestra, chorus, and soloists, with the hand, mind, and heart of a master. Perhaps it takes about 85 years, and that would be only the beginning of what is needed, to produce such a memorable result. Every note, every voice, every cumulative effect indicated, was there.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 40,278
AUG 1 1960

Rain Cuts Tanglewood Attendance

(Special to The American)

LENOX, Mass.,—Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony with its final chorus on Schiller's Ode to Joy" was indeed a paean of praise for the 12,387 who crowded Tanglewood yesterday afternoon after Saturday's torrential downpour for one of the finest performances of this great work heard at the Berkshire Symphonic Festival in years. It was for Beethoven as well as for 85-year-old Conductor Pierre Monteux, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Festival Chorus of some 100 voices, and four soloists a triumphant re-affirmation of the grandeur of man so moving that when it was over the audience remained applauding as though its members had no homes to hurry to or long motor trips to make.

Following Saturday's heavy rains which cut the evening's attendance down to a mere 6.227 for one of the finest performances Charles Munch has ever conducted at Tanglewood in a reading of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe, Ballet Suite No. 2" with chorus that was so brilliant as to be one of the high spots of the season, Sunday's audience came with the brilliant sun as though to make up for the loss of numbers occasioned by the evil play of the elements the day before. Despite the cool Friday night and rain on Saturday the figures for the weekend were just short of 25,000.

The performance yesterday afternoon presented Eleanor Stebber, soprano, Freda Gray-Masse, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and David Laurent, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson.

The Saturday evening audience that braved the elements, wet and somewhat muddy grounds, heard Munch conduct Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony" and Piston's "Symphony No. 6," written especially for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the composer called to the stage for a warm round of applause. But it was the "Daphnis and Chloe" that saw so inspired a conductor that even when half of his baton broke off and flew into the orchestra, Munch continued to conduct as one beyond time and place. It was a brilliant and inspired performance all around and the audience showed it was aware of the fact.

The week end began on Friday night with a program of Russian music and a fine performance of Rachmaninoff's "Third Piano Concerto" by the young, talented pianist Byron Janis, who has delighted Tanglewood audiences before.

Leon Fleisher will give a piano recital Wednesday night in the theater. The world-premier of Meyerowitz' opera, "Port Town" will be given Thursday evening. Music of Wagner, Sibelius, and Mendelssohn will be conducted by Charles Munch Friday night and music of Beethoven, Dutilleux, and Brahms Saturday night. That evening Istomin will be piano soloist. Sunday Monteux will conduct music of Williams, Beethoven, and Brahms.

SM

128

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 30 1960

Tanglewood Attendance Said 6,078

Attendance at the Berkshire Festival program last night in the music shed at Tanglewood fell more than 1,000 under the same concert last season. Official attendance last night was 6,078.

Featured soloist at Tanglewood was Byron Janis, 32-year-old American pianist, who played Rachmaninoff's "Piano Concerto No. 3 in D Minor," a work he performed at Tanglewood with the Berkshire Symphony Orchestra in 1958.

Janis's performance was well received, and his brilliant finale brought the audience to its feet.

The Boston Symphony Orches ra, under the baton of Charles Munch, played Stravinski's "Jeu le Cartes" ballet, and a sym hony, played for the ifrst time t Tanglewood, by the modern omposer, Tikhon Khrennikov.

Tonight Mr. Munch and the orhestra off the Berlioz "Fantas c Symphony," Piston's "Symhony No. 6," and "Daphnis and hloe Suite No. 2" with the stival Chorus.

AUG 1 1960

Music Review

Monteux's Magnificent Ninth

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

MOST of the 12,387 music lovers who attended the concert at Tanglewood yesterday afternoon jumped to their feet cheering, applauding and shouting "Bravo" as guest conductor Pierre Monteux concluded a performance of the Beethoven Choral Symphony with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Festival chorus and four eminent soloists.

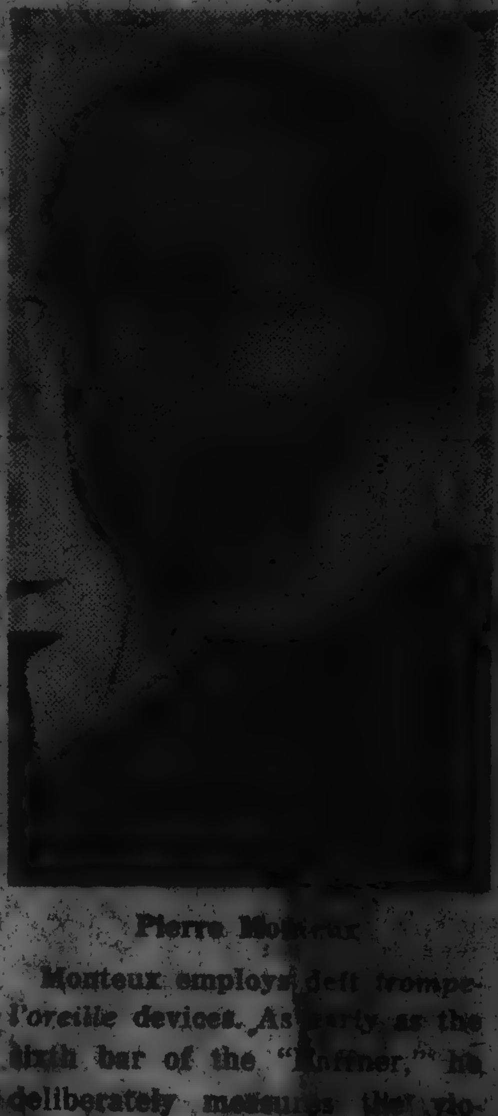
The ovation continued for six minutes, by the clock, as the venerated octogenarian-plus beamed with deserved satisfaction for a job magnificently done, one in which all the participants outdid themselves. The tribute was both a reflection of the audience's enjoyment and a demonstration of the affection he attracts. Among the touching incidents of the acclaim was the embrace Monteux gave to concertmaster Richard Burgin who had come to the Boston orchestra during Monteux's tenure as permanent director of the organization.

* * *

THE CHORUS had been trained by Alfred Nash Patterson. The soloists were Eleanor Steber, soprano, Freda Gray-Masse, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and David Laurent, bass.

Favored again, as last week, by keen, clear air and sunny warmth, the immense audience heard a program that started with the Mozart "Haffner" symphony.

THE ORCHESTRA played for both conductors with vivid zest. Monteux makes his points with a minimum of gestures; Munch achieved his usual excitement with a diminution of indications from his usual wont.



Pierre Monteux

Monteux employs deft trompe-l'oreille devices. As early as the sixth bar of the "Haffner," he deliberately measures the violins' soft reiteration with an exaggerated articulation beautifully fitted between the spirited phrases of the introduction. He realized the essential gaiety of the whole symphony just as he gave a proper awesome character to the great "Ninth."

* * *

ON THE OCCASION of Monteux's 85th birthday this spring the Boston orchestra invited their one-time leader to come back to conduct the last Beethoven symphony. We cannot imagine a more grandiose birthday present. Yesterday's performance was a repetition of that event. We were not in the audience at the spring concert, but we doubt if there could have been deeper insight into the cornucopia of Beethoven than was revealed from the Shed stage yesterday.

Monteux made no attempt to make anything more of the symphony than the enduring classic and simple materials Beethoven used. The themes are almost elementary in their guilelessness, and that may be why they withstand endless repetition without losing their bloom and stirring effect. The chorus sang for him with all their voice. The soloists made assignments, meager in duration, but large in importance, deeply effective. Basso Laurent trumpeted the initial vocal utterance of the symphony with stentorian authority, echoing the statement by the celli at the outset of the movement. Tenor McCollum was moving in his only solo opportunity, and the quartet not only acquitted themselves heroically in their too short opportunities, but Monteux gave them ample assistance and subservient support.

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT Munch began his program with his favorite — the Berlioz "Fantastic" symphony, a work with which he has shown great affinity over the years. Never did he seem to be more in the vein and rarely has the performance had more brilliance. We don't stop to think very often that this is only six years later than the last Beethoven, but usually thoughtlessly place it in a later era. It grows in stature as time goes on, and the revival certainly is not impeded by the complete immersion in which Munch covers himself.

The orchestra as a whole was in magnificent fettle. Whenever solos appeared they were executed with conspicuous taste; and Munch allowed the audience in every case to show its appreciation. He called English horn Louis Speyer to his feet for the lovely soliloquy in the "Country Scenes" of the Berlioz; Samuel Mayes for the sonorous playing of the cello solo in the third movement of the Walter Piston sixth symphony; and in the final number of the evening, the second suite from Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloe," James Pappoutsakis for his outstanding and graceful rendition of the flute solo throughout the work.

* * *

RAVEL WROTE a part for a wordless mixed chorus in the score. It is optional, and, when omitted, can be replaced by instruments. But its inclusion adds an incomparable richness to the music, and the chorus, in this case trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon, made it completely effective.

Piston's symphony was commissioned for the 75th season of the Boston orchestra, and it is dedicated to the memory of Serge and Natalie Koussevitzky. The four short movements are in Piston's freest and happiest disposition. There is an obvious forward urgency in the first movement; the second, played with mutes in the strings, is featherlight and hummingbird swift which give it a fairy and magic fleetness. The finale is a carnival and is higher off the ground than anything else of Piston with which we are acquainted. The composer was in the audience, and Munch invited him to the stage to be the direct target of the outburst of applause the performance evoked.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 40,278

AUG 1 1960

Rain Cuts Tanglewood Attendance

(Special to The American)

LENOX, Mass.—Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony with its final chorus on Schiller's Ode to Joy" was indeed a paean of praise for the 12,887 who crowded Tanglewood yesterday afternoon after Saturday's torrential downpour for one of the finest performances of this great work heard at the Berkshire Symphonic Festival in years. It was for Beethoven as well as for 85-year-old Conductor Pierre Monteux, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Festival Chorus of some 100 voices, and four soloists a triumphant re-affirmation of the grandeur of man so moving that when it was over the audience remained applauding as though its members had no homes to hurry to or long motor trips to make.

Following Saturday's heavy rains which cut the evening's attendance down to a mere 6,227 for one of the finest performances Charles Munch has ever conducted at Tanglewood in a reading of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe, Ballet Suite No. 2" with chorus that was so brilliant as to be one of the high spots of the season, Sunday's audience came with the brilliant sun as though to make up for the loss of numbers occasioned by the evil play of the elements the day before. Despite the cool Friday night and rain on Saturday the figures for the weekend were just short of 25,000.

The performance yesterday afternoon presented Eleanor Stebber, soprano, Freda Gray-Masse, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and David Laurent, bass, with the Festival Chorus prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson.

The Saturday evening audience that braved the elements, wet and somewhat muddy grounds, heard Munch conduct Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony" and Piston's "Symphony No. 6," written especially for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with the composer called to the stage for a warm round of applause. But it was the "Daphnis and Chloe" that saw so inspired a conductor that even when half of his baton broke off and flew into the orchestra, Munch continued to conduct as one beyond time and place. It was a brilliant and inspired performance all around and the audience showed it was aware of the fact.

The week end began on Friday night with a program of Russian music and a fine performance of Rachmaninoff's "Third Piano Concerto" by the young, talented pianist Byron Janis, who has delighted Tanglewood audiences before.

Leon Fleisher will give a piano recital Wednesday night in the theater. The world-premier of Meyerowitz' opera, "Port Town" will be given Thursday evening. Music of Wagner, Sibelius, and Mendelssohn will be conducted by Charles Munch Friday night and music of Beethoven, Dutilleux, and Brahms Saturday night. That evening Istomin will be piano soloist. Sunday Monteux will conduct music of Williams, Beethoven, and Brahms.

SM

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,498

AUG 4 1960

Weekend At Tanglewood

July 30 by E. G. B.
July 29
by A. C. S.

Works by Russian composers were chosen by Charles Munch for the first program of the weekend. All three were written in this century but only one reflects the musical trends of our times. This is Stravinsky's Jeu de Cartes, a ballet in "three deals" composed for the American Ballet in 1936. It is a tonal work and only mildly dissonant, and while it is pleasant listening, ones does miss the visual complement of the dance.

The Symphony No. 1 by Khrennikov was completed only one year earlier than the "Card Game" but represents the late nineteenth century in its musical viewpoint. Mr. Munch gave it a sympathetic reading.

The program concluded with a surging performance of Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto. A work that makes almost unbelievable demands on the soloist, it was played with enormous drive by the young American, Byron Janis. No technical obstacle deterred him; none of the myriad changes in tempo or dynamic level went unaccounted for. The tone was big but not harsh, the rhythms were clearly imparted, every aspect was superbly handled, and yet for this listener that indescribable spine-tingling thrill was absent. Mr. Janis certainly deserved the tumultuous ovation given him at the close.

July 30
by E. G. B.

Charles Munch and the Boston orchestra were in top form Saturday evening. The program was colorful and strenuous, with Munch not sparing himself or the players. A clue to the inner intensity of the whole concert was revealed [illegible] we saw something fly over the heads of the violinists [illegible] found Munch waving a half baton which had snapped in mid-air, solely from the vigor of his beat!

Berlioz' Symphonie Fantastique, which was revolutionary at the time it was written, still sounds highly dramatic and original. It runs the gamut of expressiveness from humor to horror.

Walter Piston's lovely Sixth Symphony, written expressly for the Boston orchestra was beautifully done.

The Festival Chorus joined the instrumentalists for the final number, Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe Suite. The use of voices here is rather unusual; they contributed color and support, always blending right in with what the orchestra has to say, with the utmost smoothness and beauty of tone. The interpretation reached impassioned heights of expression.

July 31 by E. G. B.

Pierre Monteux (at a ripe age of 85) was the conductor on Sunday of a singularly lucid revelation of Mozart's Haffner Symphony, (the 35th one,) and of the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven. It was a great performance, ,and a veritable tumult broke out and continued lengthily at its close. The Festival Chorus had been prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson, and was larger than the number used the evening before. Eleanor Steber, soprano; Freda Gray-Massé, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; and David Laurent, bass, were the soloists. All sang superbly.

It is harder to describe a great interpretation than a lesser one. Monteux welded together the orchestra, chorus, and soloists, with the hand, mind, and heart of a master. Perhaps it takes about 85 years, and that would be only the beginning of what is needed, to produce such a memorable result. Every note, every voice, every cumulative effect indicated, was there.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 57,341

JUL 30 1960

Music: Berkshire Music Festival

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Playing a heavily contrasted program last night at Tanglewood, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch, conductor, with Byron Janis as piano soloist, opened the second big weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival.

There was an audience of 6,078, and the fare offered may have had something to do with this comparatively small number.

The program: "Jeu de Cartes" (Card Game) a "Ballet in Three Deals," by Stravinsky, Symphony No. 1 by Khrennikov, and Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto.

Whatever risk was entailed by opening with the Stravinsky was confirmed with tepid audience reaction. This score is not heard often, for obvious reasons. It lies somewhere between the barbaric, vicious sounds of Stravinsky's early "Rite of Spring" and his offensively motley "Canticum Sacrum."

Consistently Impoverished

The work is quite consistently impoverished except for dubiously arresting ideas that begin with promise and get nowhere. It opens with an even-stepping march rhythm, around which revolves a lot of folderol. The succession of effects is rapid and suspiciously striking.

There are machine-like figures in strings while the woodwinds play detached solos. Certainly no melodies are heard that you might want to take home with you.

The sections that represent chaos or apprehension in the card-playing ballet have a small measure of stimulation and vital instrumental color. But in the main they are drab and drag. The orchestra played it with a kind of valor minus conviction. Solos by wind instruments were particularly pleasing and rhythms decisive.

Overall Impression

But the overall impression was a parade of disjointed ideas that might have had more consequence if associated with the visual art of ballet.

Khrennikov's symphony is a thrilling work that made a considerable impact on last night's audience.

This was apparent from the opening sinister, skirmishing theme of the first movement, in bassoons that spreads in counterpoint through the orchestra. The orchestra raced through the heavily note-populated passages with admirable ease. Persistent changes of volume were instantaneous and sometimes dramatic.

The first movement ended with a wild rise of excitement that suddenly subsided to a final whisper.

Munch approached the second movement as a magnificent lament. Striges and high woodwinds wept disconsolately, making sounds of great beauty. Central point of the movement was an interlude of shattering volume.

The Finale

The finale returned to the maniacal dance style of the first movement, but more boisterous with crashing timpani and explosive brasses. Janis caused much the same furor with the Rachmaninoff Third Piano Concerto that he did here two summers ago and at the Worcester Music Festival. Young Janis is rapidly becoming the ideal pianist. While he hasn't the rich temperament of the late William Kapell or the technical virtuosity of Vladimir Horwitz (his teacher), he possesses qualities of both.

His inherent sense of taste and musicianship were trademarks of last night's performance. The Rachmaninoff Third can easily be discharged as a "whiz-bang" exhibition. It has a high technical potential, particularly in the cadenzas of the first and third movements. There's no problem for any imaginative pianist to sugar-coat its emotional melodies.

Janis, Munch, and the orchestra kept the work geared to a lofty purpose. The earnestly-expressive theme of the first movement seemed to generate the prophecy that this was to be a studious but opulent performance—which it was. Janis made the piano sing and storm alike. He displayed an excellent command of the physical requirements. Passagework was neat as wax. Changes of volume extended from a vaporized tone that was utterly clear to immense sounds produced without hammering the instrument.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 57,341

AUG 1 1960

Music: Festival at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — A supreme performance of Beethoven's Ninth Symphony was given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Pierre Monteux, yesterday afternoon at Tanglewood.

The finale of the Beethoven had the Festival Chorus and these soloists: Eleanor Steber, soprano; Freda Gray-Masse, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and David Laurent, bass.

This closed the second big weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival, which will resume next Friday evening.

Weather Perfect

The weather was perfect for yesterday's concert, encouraging an audience of 12,387. The weekend total was 24,692, about 400 less than last weekend. This may be attributed to Friday night's concert, which had less general appeal, and Saturday's downpour.

Yesterday's program opened with Mozart's Symphony No. 35 in D minor, "Haffner," a work of considerably greater proportions than those previously coupled with the Beethoven Ninth at Tanglewood.

The Ninth had become generally accepted as traditional as the closing work of the Berkshire Music Festivals.

Poles Apart

Had one watched Monteux in silent performances of the Mozart and Beethoven, he would have been disarmed, or at least deceived by the same general expenditures of podium action.

Yet, the works are poles apart. The Mozart "Haffner" is a beautiful network of polished nuances, sensitive and happy statements, complete order in formulas of volume, phrasing and tonal shadings.

Beethoven's Ninth Symphony in D minor, Opus 125, is an omnipotent outburst of all that's magnificent in sound. The themes are sometimes philosophic. In the 1st. 2nd, and 4th movements, they were engineered (for want of a better term) to generate tremendous impact.

First Movement

Monteux paced the first movement of the Mozart to extract its total energy. Shrings responded with absolutely parallel action even in intricate ornaments that are constantly encountered en route.

For the benefit of the scholar, Monteux provided a clear exposition of the text. Even without scholarly advantages, one could sense the unity of structure and clarity of procedure.

Volume of sound was comparatively small in the slow movement, but made crystal clear by the orchestra. The conductor contented himself with exploring the tuneful amiability of the movement.

He handled the third movement as a slow, sturdy minuet. Somehow it lost none of its dance character at this retarded tempo but gained a lot of typical 18th Century charm. In the finale, Monteux rushed full speed ahead and the orchestra responded with brilliance, notably the strings.

Vibrant Theme

Conducting from memory, Monteux approached the Beethoven Ninth with full responsibility to its epic nature and emotional fervor.

The vibrant theme of the first movement was the generating force that led through vistas of heroic proportions. But the conductor treated the lyrical interims with equal care, transforming them into levels from which drama gained new strength and impetus.

In the "Scherzo," the dance that begins in the woodwinds spreads like wildfire through the orchestra. Monteux' cueing was immaculate and almost imperceptible. There were moments of great warmth in the third, slow movement.

Finale

The great climax that set off an ovation was the finale, engaging the orchestra, chorus, and soloists.

Monteux made a stirring preamble of manifold nuances that precede the first appearance of the "Ode to Joy" as extolled by the low strings. Brasses and timpani brought it to a state of grandeur and from this point the movement underwent a thrilling development.

The chorus of 150 Berkshire Music Center students obviously knew the score so thoroughly that they made little reference to the German printed text. A fine composition of sound emerged from individual sections of the chorus. The men's voices were forceful but unforced. The women's voices didn't lean too heavily on the soprano section.

Miss Steber

Miss Steber took the "Ode to Joy" quite literally, casting smiles of enthrallment at conductor, concert master, and audience. She must have confused loftiness with fun. Her singing voice was ample, penetrating, and not infallibly on pitch.

The contralto score is not "exposed" in Beethoven's Ninth, but enough was heard of Miss Gray-Masse to acquire the impression of sound musicianship and attractive tone quality.

Laurent followed a steady course in the bass score, utilizing to good effect a voice of resonance and security. McCollum delivered the tenor part in a fine, declamatory style, enhanced by good diction and substance.

Friday night's concert by the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, will be excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," Leon Kirchner's 'Toccata," and Mendelssohn's Third Symphony. Ruggiero Riici will be soloist in the Sibelius violin concerto.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 101,427

JUL 31 1960

Music: Beethoven Ninth At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Very expensive rain fell on Tanglewood all through the day and last night.

Yesterday morning's rehearsal was attended by an audience of 1,929, less than half the usual number.

Last night's concert by the Boston Symphony, conducted by Charles Munch, had 6,227, the capacity of the music shed.

Out of the Question

The previous Saturday night there had been over 10,000 people, 4,000 of whom half each paid two dollars and half to hear the concert from the spacious grounds. Last night, this out of the question.

Pierre Monteux' magic was in high gear at yesterday's rehearsal. Incidentally, these Saturday morning rehearsals are open to the public for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund.

The rehearsed work was Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony" with the Boston Symphony, festival chorus and soloists Eleanor Steber, soprano, Fredan Gray-Masse, contralto, John McCollum, tenor, and David Laurent, bass.

Extremely Involved

After getting to his special-built, railing-protected podium slowly and carefully, 85-year-old Monteux then proceeded to conduct from memory the extremely involved finale of the Beethoven ninth.

It is the main work on this afternoon's program which also includes Mozart's "Haffner Symphony."

The Berkshire Music Festival has become renowned for starting its events on time, and rehearsals are included. This one began and continued for about 10 minutes without a soprano soloist.

Tardy Miss Steber paraded gingerly before the first violin section to her seat. She apparently apologized to Monteux who gave her a forgiving smile while conducting the orchestra.

Bit of a Buzz

Apart from her conspicuous arrival, Miss Steber's colorful attire—a blue-flowered coat and awning-type rain hat to match—also caused a bit of a buzz.

Conservative as they may seem, programs for this festival are causing lively debates.

The managerial faction argues that a majority of familiar works are healthy for the box-office. Contemporary music advocates and critics who want something new to write about are discontented.

When the press was given the attendance figure of 6,078 for Friday night's concert (beautiful weather), a Boston Symphony official exclaimed:

"It's the Stravinsky."

Poorly Received

Admittedly, Stravinsky's "Jeu de Cartes" was poorly received. But on the same program was the Tanglewood premiere of Khrennikov's "First Symphony" and it received a tremendous reception.

Last night's program was a mixture of staid and new:

Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony," opus 14A; Walter Piston's "Symphony No. 6," and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe Suite No. 2," assisted by the festival chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke De Varon.

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony extracted all the drama to be found in Berlioz' rampant and fantastic [illegible]

Zealous Interpreter

There probably isn't a more enlightened and zealous interpreter of Berlioz' music than Munch. Last night's performance of the "Fantastic" heavily underscored two factors.

In each of the five movements, the "Henrietta" theme was treated as the dominant feature. This is the melody that Berlioz varied according to the love, scorn, or belligerence withwhich he reacted to Henrietta Smithson, his aloof enamorata.

Secondly, Munch gave articulate and exhaustive directives to showcase the symphony's magnum of instrumental color.

Extended Phrases

The "Reveries" section of the first movement had a beautiful muted quality in strings. Munch extended phrases at will, giving the feeling of casual dialogue the feeling of casual dialogue between instruments. Plucked string passages were absolutely precise.

Rugged passages of the "Passions" were held somewhat in restraint (a stituatin that certainly didn't exist later) but results were potent. Ascending and descending sclaes had exact unity in the entire section. At one point, Munch did permit the movement to become a noisy rampage, but this probably would have been heartily condoned by Berlioz.

Less Successful

The waltz movement was less successful. Until it reached its conclusion, there was a curious detachment that was partly concealed by exquisite passages in harps and melodic beauty in strings. The woodwinds did not always behave properly but last night's weather was no help to intonation.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 92,367

AUG 1 1960

Tanglewood Weekend Provides Varied Fare

By JOHN F. KEYES

LENOX — The second weekend at Tanglewood by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra brought varying results. Friday Charles Munch offered modern orchestral fare, Stravinsky's rather unpalatable "Card Game" ballet music and Khrennikov's Symphony No. 1, impressive in its Berkshire debut. The beauties of the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 3 in D minor with Byron Janis as soloist doubtless drew most of the 6,078 listeners.

Saturday's admirable orchestral program was cursed with bad weather, the attendance of 6,227 being far below normal.

Sunday, beautiful weather and the Beethoven Ninth Symphony brought out 12,387, comparing well with other years when this work was programmed on the season's final Sunday. Yesterday's concert duplicated that given in Boston on April 6 (and reviewed by this paper) with Pierre Monteux as conductor, Eleanor Steber, Freda Gray-Masse, John McCollum and David Laurent as soloists, and a chorus prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson.

For Saturday's concert, the 125-voice chorus was trained by Lorna Cooke de Varon and heard in the Ravel "Daphnis and Chloe" Ballet Suite No. 2. Singing syllables, the chorus added much to "Daybreak" and was thoroughly exciting in the "General Dance."

Orchestral Fortissimo

If Munch's demands brought forth a mighty finale in the Ravel suite, it was as nothing in comparison with the sounds which capped the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony." Kettledrums pounded at full strength were in no way too loud for the orchestral fortissimo produced here.

The symphony as a whole was a tribute to the rapport between Munch and this great orchestra. The conductor eschewed extreme effects frequently in order to enhance the coherence and appeal of the widely varying movements. "Reveries and Passions" accented the former rather than the latter. "A Ball" lifted the idiom of the waltz close to symphonic estate. "Scene in the Meadows," frequently too long for the hearer's patience, seemed fresh and engrossing. The bold, fearsome elements of the symphony emerged in "The March to the Scaffold" and "Dream of the Witches' Sabbath." After these efforts, Munch appeared fatigued. Whether or not the whipping of his baton like a pliant willow wand, with its violent expenditure of energy, was essential, the resultant Berlioz was a feat meriting the audience's frenzied applause.

Louis Speyer received an especial ovation for his English horn solos in the symphony, as did James Pappoutsakis for flute passages in the Ravel.

Composer Honored

Walter Piston, New England composer, shared the plaudits after his Symphony No. 6. Placed in a [illegible] position between two arresting works, this music stood up well, except perhaps in portions of the first movement. The light, tricky, extremely rapid figures of the Scherzo were a well-met challenge to the Boston players. Piston's rhythmic treatment of the vigorous finale was most interesting and exciting. The beauty of the "serene Adagio" took several forms, developing lovely solos.

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Circ. 42,164

AUG 8 1960

Man About Town

Starvation And Tanglewood

By Frank E. Makarewicz

I hope you enjoyed your week-end as much as I did recently. A party of us went to a concert at the Tanglewood Music Festival at Lenox on Sunday. It was one of those days when nearly everything worked out beautifully. Even the weather co-operated.

The ingredients of this enjoyable day included clear sunny weather for a pleasant ride with interesting and compatible new acquaintances, who become friends before the day ended. Add to this, good food, exceptionally fine music, and a few little surprises to disturb a planned schedule.

The 150-mile trip from Lowell to the picturesque New England hamlet, nestled in the Berkshire mountains near Pittsfield, could have been dreary if the company couldn't get along. Even the magic of the Boston Symphony wouldn't have helped.

Vincent DiMartino of South Highland street first suggested the trip two months ago to several of his friends, none of whom knew each other. We all took a chance and ordered tickets.

The first problem concerning who was going to have the honor of doing the three or more hours of tedious driving on the Massachusetts turnpike, was settled very easily.

Page Brent, a young Raytheon engineer, originally out of Kansas, who lives in North Tewksbury, volunteered not only his new convertible, but to be chauffeur as well. The other five drivers in the car had only to sit back and watch the scenery whiz by.

OUR SCHEDULE ON that day called for us to leave in plenty of time to have dinner someplace before the afternoon concert. But a brief stop at the usual highway restaurant for a coffee break, and other things, was the first mistake. For one cup of coffee we were delayed enough to miss our dinner. I'm afraid the rumblings of our empty stomachs competed with the timpany in the orchestra.

The music program featured Beethoven's Ninth symphony, which was tremendous. It was marvelous to see the 80-year-old conductor, Pierre Monteux, control a whole orchestra, 500 voice chorus, and four star vocalists so perfectly.

During intermission, the six of us scouted the crowd of 10,000 people from all over the world, in search of Lowellians, especially those who might be carrying a picnic lunch.

Alberto Henriques and his wife, Sylvia, with another young lady of our group, fanned out in one area, while we covered another, all with no luck. It was kind of an ironic situation. Al is a chemist at a local food processing plant. From their home in Chile, So. America, this couple traveled around a good part of the world before they moved to Hovey street, where they left a refrigerator full of food, so they might starve graciously at Tanglewood. Sylvia's returning to Santiago for a vacation soon, and she'll be carrying a lunch basket I think.

WHEN YOU'RE hungry, it's funny how you associate everything with food and drink. The program announced Beethoven's Ninth, and I thought of his fifth. The distinguished conductor, a portly, pleasant looking gentleman with an impressive bushy, white moustache, made me think of a French baker, who might make magic with delicious pastries.

The first thing we did after the concert was to get lost in Tanglewood looking for a little restaurant in New York state, that advertised "cuisine Francaise." We went some 20 miles, in a circle, to get to it, although it was only a few miles from the starting point.

By this time, we were ready to eat the bark off the trees, but patience paid off. The menu offered tempters like imported guinea hen under glass, chicken-champagne, filet-mignon, and what not. We all settled on Les Canards a l'orange, a delightful way to associate a duck with an orange.

After the Canards had been consumed, and we paid the bad news, we continued our gypsy tour for home about five hours behind schedule. Thoroughly exhausted after 15 hours, we sat down to plan an evening at the Esplanade in Boston—where there are many restaurants.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE
Monday, August 1, 1960

Boston Symphony Excels At Tanglewood Concert

By D. E. RITZ
Gazette Music Editor

We are not at all sure that anyone who starts out in a deluge like that of ~~late~~ Saturday afternoon for Tanglewood and the evening concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is quite right mentally but we were among the 6,227-member audience present that evening.

* * *

ARRIVING early we found the deluge just letting up, trees dripping, raincoats and hats much in evidence and the gate guards hoping the clearing would come soon. The lawns were sodden but a beautiful emerald green, the trees dripping but magnificent and the view of the lake a bit on the hazy side.

But it wasn't long before the audience came flocking in and long before concert time the Shed was filled.

The audience may have been all-wet (at least in getting to Tanglewood) but the orchestra was in fine condition and we can assure anyone that it takes more than wet weather to dampen the enthusiasm of the Boston Symphony men or to affect in the slightest their intonation.

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH conducted the program which included the Berlioz "Fantastic Symphony," Walter Piston's "Symphony number 6," written on commission by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Koussevitzky Music Foundation; and the "Daphnis et Chloe Ballet Suite number 2" with the festival chorus, prepared by Lorna Cooke deVaron, assisting.

The music was pure delight and ovation after ovation was given to conductor and participants.

The Piston work, new to the reviewer, was given its first performance by the Boston Symphony Orchestra on Nov. 25, 1955, and has been performed on tour in the United States, Europe and the Far East.

* * *

WITHOUT QUESTION Piston knows his orchestral instruments and the effects and tonal combinations obtainable. Like much of the music of today it, however, has a tendency to wander with no central or compelling motif. The four movements, "Fluendo expressivo," "Leggerissimo vivace," "Adagio sereno" and "Allegro energico" were written, according to the composer, "with no intent other than to make music to be played and listened to."

The second and fourth movements interested us most on a first hearing — the second, a scherzo, has delightfully gay percussive effects and the finale is a vigorous presentation. The third movement is notable for adagio themes for the solo cello and flute. In the first movement we were very busy trying to accommodate ourselves to the Piston idiom.

The composer was present at the Saturday evening program and shared the enthusiastic applause accorded the number with the orchestra and Dr. Munch.

* * *

DR. MUNCH'S programs at Tanglewood are noted for their happy combination of the old and the new. Saturday evening we thoroughly enjoyed the ever magnificent music of Berlioz and Ravel in their brilliant tone color and finesse. Each hearing is a joy and a re-creation under the skilled baton of the Boston Symphony's music director.

By concert closing time there was a brilliant moon visible and stars were shining and who minded if the grass was still quite sodden and the parking lot muddy?

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Circ. 42,164

AUG 6 1960

Music

Berkshire Festival Continues to Entrance

by Alfred Burke

LOWELL — Dr. Charles Munch provided one of the big programs of the current season at the Berkshire Festival last Saturday evening. The Berlioz Symphonic Fantastice came to the audience with a great deal of authority and instrumental excellence. The contrast of Walter Piston's Symphony No. 6 was not less appreciated for having followed the aforementioned work. There is little doubt that Piston has sufficient musical strength, especially in structure and creativeness, to warrant his standing for many years to come. Closing with the Ravel, Daphnis et Chloe, Suite No. 2, and aided by the presence of a well balanced festival chorus, the concert ended on a note of listening pleasure as well as a performance of front rank execution.

Sunday afternoon found Pierre Monteux in his usual brilliant form. Highlight was a performance of the Beethoven Ninth with soloists, Steber, Gray-Masse, McCollum and Laurent, supported by the festival chorus. The leads had their moments, some quite good, others rather fair, but as a whole, right in vocal technique and musicianship. However, it was the conductor who gained the honors. His reading of Mozart's "Haffner" did not always stir his listeners, but on the other hand, was sufficient in cadence and color to make the occasion one of happy musical remembrance.

ON SATURDAY of next week Gary Graffman, pianist will appear as soloist in the Chopin Concerto No. 1. Aaron Copland will appear as guest conductor for a performance of his Symphony No. 1. Charles Munch will conduct for the remainder of the program which will open with Handel's "Water Music."

Gary Graffman

N. Y. Staats-Zeitung und Herold, Mittwoch, 3. August 1960

Tanglewood Festival:

Beethovens "Neunte" wird unter Monteux zu grossem Erlebnis

Seit Jahren ist die Aufführung der "Neunten" der traditionelle Höhepunkt der Festwochen in Tanglewood gewesen. Seit Jahren hat die Leitung dieser Aufführung, die immer Tausende und aber Tausende in die lieblichen Hügel der Berkshires zieht, in den Händen von Charles Munch gelegen — und die ganze Liebe eines großen Musikers für dieses einmalige Werk spiegelte sich in der unendlichen Sorgfalt wieder, mit der es ein einstudiert und wiedergegeben wurde.

Es kann Munch nicht leicht gefallen sein, in dieser Saison die Leitung der "Neunten" abzutreten. Daß er es tat, beweist einmal mehr seine innere Größe — und die Verehrung, die er für einen Mann hat, der dem Musikschaffen der Neuen und Alten Welt in mehr als einem halben Jahrhundert unermüdlicher Arbeit unvergeßliche Feierstunden bereitet hat: Pierre Monteux.

Unter Monteux wurde die Symphonie der Freude auch an diesem Sonntag in den Berkshires wieder zu einer Feierstunde, zu einem mächtigen Bekenntnis zu allem, was in dieser Welt schön und wertvoll ist. Fast mystisch schwangen die Geigen und bauten das Thema auf, ungestüm und zugleich voller Zartheit und in sonorer Harmonie — geführt von einem Künstler, der allein auf einsamen Höhen steht, von einem 85jährigen, der sich dieser Musik mit jugendlicher Inbrunst, wachen Sinnen, erschöpfendem Verständnis und klarem Herzen hingab.

Man mag in einem vollen Menschenalter die "Neunte" in den Konzertsälen Europas und hier wohl an die hundertmal gehört haben. Niemals aber hat sie den Schreiber dieser Zeilen so gepackt, so mitgerissen wie an diesem Sonntagnachmittag in den sonnenbeschienenen Hügeln und Wiesen von Tanglewood, unter der Führung eines Meisters, der ihr mit seiner inneren Abgeklärtheit einen eigenen Glanz verlieh.

Das Orchester, die ausgezeichneten Solisten — Eleanor Steber, Freda Gray-Masse, John McCollum und David Laurent — und das Publikum waren sich der Tatsache bewußt, daß sie eine der Sternstunden der Musik erlebt hatten, und brachten dies im gemeinsamen Beifall, der sich zu einer Ovation steigerte, dankbar zum Ausdruck.

•

Es gab an diesem Wochenende noch zwei weitere Konzerte: Freitag abend war Byron Janis der Solist in Rachmaninoffs Drittem Klavierkonzert, das er duftig und poetisch zu Gehör brachte, und der Sonnabend war unter der Leitung von Charles Munch französischer Musik gewidmet. Nein — es waren nicht die Ausläufer des Hurrikans Brenda, die durch das Musik-Shed und über die Wiesen von Tanglewood donnerten; es war der atemlose Orkan gallischen Temperaments, den Munch mit Berlioz' "Symphonie Fantastique" und der Suite aus Ravels "Daphnis et Chloe". Musik, in der er im wahrsten Sinne des Wortes "zu Hause" ist, entfesselte. Die Kaskaden der Musik hatten Brillans, Kraft, Tiefe und das lodernde Feuer, ohne das sie niemals wirken kann. Unwillkürlich fragte man sich auf dem Weg nach Hause, ob es nach drei Konzerten, wie denen des Wochenendes eine Steigerung in Tanglewood geben kann.

Vielleicht. Vielleicht auch nicht. Aber das ist unwesentlich. Am nächsten Freitag wird man doch wieder auf dem Weg in die Berkshires sein. E. St.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121
AUG 1 1960

Beethoven's Ninth Is Led By Monteux at Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS.
Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting; soloists, Eleanor Steber, soprano; Freda Gray-Masse, contralto; John McCollum, tenor; David Laurent, bass; and the Festival Chorus. The program:
"Haffner" Symphony..............Mozart
Symphony No. 9 in D minor, Op. 125..............Beethoven

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., July 31.—The novelty at the Boston Symphony Tanglewood concert this afternoon was not the piece—Beethoven's Ninth—but the conductor, Pierre Monteux.

Here at the Berkshire Music Center, Beethoven's last symphony traditionally belongs to Charles Munch; he has made an annual event of it, has, indeed, frequently used it as a grand finale to conclude the season in the Festival's Music Shed. In turning the work over to his eighty-five-year-old colleague he has, in effect, made a gesture of respect to a maestro whom the music world holds in reverence. And the performance on this occasion indicated why the veneration with which he is regarded is due him in every detail.

He gets to the heart of the Ninth, for example, by a process I can only describe as divination. He unfolds each aspect of the score as though he had a direct means of contact with its creator: at any rate, he makes explicit precisely what the music implies. That is ever the root of Pierre Monteux's greatness.

Thus in the first movement he crystallized perfectly the fact that the entire opening is a suspense drama which, like all good suspense literature, needs time to unwind its mystery. The hollow starting measures with the gradual intrusion of the main theme was built bit by bit, note by note, until all the ground-swells, all the subterranean rumbles that introduce the Ninth exploded with the impact of a volcano. And having once established this element of power unleashed from the depths of the work, he never let it diminish, never let it grow faint, never backed away from the problem of keeping the piece's elemental force before the listener's ear.

So, too, in the second movement, in which he wielded Beethoven's octave hammer with an incredible show of musical muscle. The bolts of octave fire thrown out by timpani and strings were shattering not only in their thrust and urgency, but also in their inevitability. They seemed, as he set them forth, to be the only possible answer to the tempers of the opening Allegro. The effect was cumulative. By the time the Scherzo was done, all energy and rage was spent. There was then room for a plateau of calm.

In the case of the Ninth, of course, this takes the form of an Adagio for sublimity not equalled anywhere in the annals of music. Besides finding movement, he also curved its a perfect pace for the entire main tunes with such plasticity you could practically reach out to feel their texture and touch their roundness. Further, Mr. Monteux clearly regards "rests" as a kind of inaudible music, for during even long pauses in the course of the work there was no break in the sound continuum; it moved on as though there was no silence at all. As a result, the third movement was an expansive stream of tone, given out almost as a prayer. Like any prayer offered in faith, it was a tonic to the spirit.

I must confess that I am of the school which happens to believe that the Ninth's Choral Finale is a mighty spotty piece of work, what with surges of glory being mixed with pure honky-tonk. Still, through some manifestation of conducting resource, Mr. Monteux made it seem less vulgar and uneven than it is. In this respect, he was enormously aided by a fine quartet of soloists, including soprano Eleanor Steber, contralto Freda Gray-Masse, tenor John McCollum and basso David Laurent. They all sang grandly, with high color and genuine artistic vigor. And the Festival Chorus, trained by Alfred Nash Patterson, was in every way first-rate throughout its range and on all dynamic levels.

The afternoon had begun with a delicious performance of Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony that was an essay in style and grace. Each phrase was shaped as though Mr. Monteux had just discovered the right way it should go, and despite the use of a fairly large complement of players, much of the piece emerged like chamber music of vintage rare. It was all a special occasion, as 12,000 listeners were pleased to agree. The only sad note to strike the proceeding was the realization that in order to conduct with the insight of a Monteux you need eighty-five years of experience behind you.

138

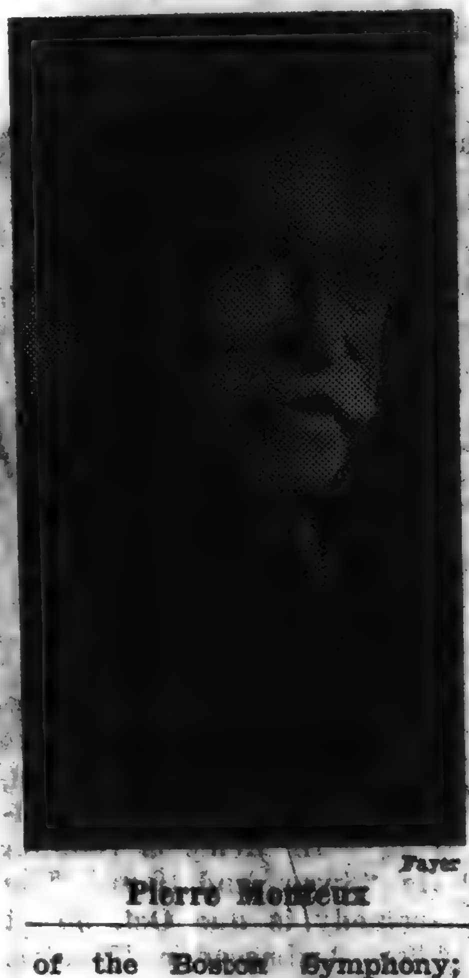
NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635

AUG 1 1960

Music: Big Week-End at Tanglewood

Monteux Is Conductor of Beethoven's Ninth

Munch Directs Works by Berlioz and Ravel



Fayer

Pierre Monteux

By ERIC SALZMAN
Special to The New York Times

LENOX, Mass., July 31—This week-end's music at Tanglewood was on a big scale.

There was Byron Janis' drive and virtuosity in the Rachmaninoff Third Piano Concerto on Friday. Last night Charles Munch led rousing versions of the Berlioz Symphonie Fantastique and the Suite No. 2 from Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe," a performance that was augmented by the addition of the rarely heard choral parts, and Pierre Monteux capped it all off today with a grand Beethoven Ninth.

The scale and scope of this bigness was different each time. Mr. Janis' achievement has already been reported on. Mr. Munch's Saturday night excursion into the world of French music was full of storm and sweep. And, today, clarity and breadth were the virtues that generated excitement.

•

As "Daphnis and Chloe" swept breathlessly toward its finish, Mr. Munch's exhortations to the musicians grew so strenuous that a vigorous motion of his arm actually snapped his willowy baton in two. It was that kind of performance.

Mr. Munch communicated this energy to the orchestra and chorus and from them it flooded the Shed and the festival grounds. The musicians and the music are old friends, of course. The conductor knew exactly what he wanted and how to get it. Sometimes detail was lost in the grand gesture. Sometimes the notes and the instruments were strained to their limits to produce the big sound and drive. But the magnificence was undeniable.

On quite a different scale was Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony. Mr. Piston, who has just resigned from the faculty at Harvard, has been almost the "official" composer of the Boston Symphony; composer and orchestra have had a long and harmonious (the pun is intended) relationship.

The Sixth Symphony is not notably striking in invention and orchestration, but it was not lost amid the luxurious and romantic excitement of the rest of the program. Aside from a last movement that seems short and out of place, it makes its own way by virtue of its authority, substance and fluid ease. The ideas and their elaboration seem to spring up together, unified and spun out with skill and naturalness, the mark of true symphonic thinking.

•

The really extraordinary thing about the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven this afternoon was its transparency. This symphony must often swim in muddy waters, but not today. It was the kind of performance where you hear things you never heard before.

Mr. Monteux is one of the few conductors who still puts the second violins on the right and that is where Beethoven expected them to be. Since the two choirs of violins are constantly in dialogue, this was by no means a mere extra. The proportions and relationships in all the string writing suddenly were clear and clean and meaningful.

But this clarity was far more than a matter of mere orchestral seating. Mr. Monteux did the simple and the correct things to clear the waters. Perhaps it was also what he did not do. By taking Beethoven at his word, Mr. Monteux could let every musician, every sound find the right place and the right expression.

All this did not preclude a deep sense of phrase, drive and expression; indeed, all the elements but one were beautifully integrated. Only the tempo relationships were not wholly satisfactory.

•

The conductor did not solve the big problem of the alternating tempos in the slow movement, and an otherwise joyous version of Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony was marked by some strange slow downs. But these difficulties could interfere with the scope of the rest of the conception only slightly.

Eleanor Steber, Freda Gray-Masse, John McCollum and David Laurent were the soloists, and the Festival Chorus participated in both yesterday's and today's performances. The attendance for the week-end was 24,692, more than half of whom were drawn here today by the combination of Monteux, Beethoven and beautiful weather.

Sunday Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Circ. 1,221,337

JUL 31 1960

JANIS IS SOLOIST AT TANGLEWOOD

Pianist Plays Rachmaninoff Work—Boston Symphony Conducted by Munch

By ERIC SALZMAN
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass, July 29—A young man with a poetic look and a way with a piano keyboard, the Boston Symphony under Charles Munch, a cool summer evening in the Berkshires and the Rachmaninoff Third Piano Concerto. How could it miss?

It didn't.

Anyone who can play most of the notes in a work like the Rachmaninoff is bound to impress a lot of people; it's that kind of a piece. On Friday, at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Byron Janis not only played the notes but he also managed to make it sound as if no one had ever played it before.

How do you go about making a tired old piece sound fresh and new? Mr. Janis did it with his sense of musical phrase. More impressive than his technique (which was impressive indeed) was the way he was able to impart not merely expression but real shape and drive.

Mr. Janis was also a pianist who knew what was happening around him. The soloist, Mr. Munch and the orchestra had a happy collaboration.

Survey of Russian Music

The program was a kind of short survey of twentieth-century Russian music. The Rachmaninoff is, of course, a late romantic expression. Tikhon Khrennikov's First Symphony, Op. 4, is a sample of the favored Soviet musical trends of a number of years ago, and the Stravinsky "Jeu de Carts" ballet music represents—well, represents Stravinsky in his fullest "neo-classical" flower.

Like Shostakovich, Khrennikov attempted his first symphony in his student days. He also used some of the same musical material. The cribbing was undoubtedly unconscious, but the composer did dedicate the work to the older colleague. Unfortunately, the best parts are those that sound most like Shostakovich.

Mr. Munch and the orchestra did their best with a weak work. With the strong, sly Stravinsky score they did well, too, staying on the dry side of a stubborn, wry piece of music.

Carter Quartet Offered

A notable event earlier in the day was a superb performance of Elliott Carter's Second String Quartet by the Lenox Quartet. This piece is hard enough for the old-timers but these young whippersnappers delivered it as if they had been playing it these many years.

This extraordinary work, which won the Pulitzer Prize for 1959, impresses more and more with each hearing. For these young people it was as if it had been written in their own native language—perhaps it is.

The work was presented in one of the seminars in contemporary music presented here on Friday afternoons. Mr. Carter gave a short talk, and the program also included his Eight Etudes and a Fantasy for Woodwind Quartet.

The musicians (including the Lenox Quartet) are drawn from the Fromm Fellowship Players, who do yeoman service for contemporary music on a growing and exciting program of new music studies and concerts at Tanglewood.

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

139

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, TUESDAY, AUGUST 2, 1960

Pianist Leon Fleisher Soloist at Tanglewood

LEON FLEISHER
In Reci . Tomorrow

Pianist Leon Fleisher will appear twice at the Tanglewood music festival to highlight its next-to-last week of the 1960 season.

* * *

HE WILL GIVE a piano recital tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. in the theater and again Aug. 7, when he will perform Beethoven's third piano concerto in the music shed's afternoon concert under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

His recital tomorrow will be a program of sonatas contributed by Fleisher to benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

Thursday marks the 20th anniversary celebration by students of the center for the center's scholarship fund. Tanglewood grounds will be open at 3:30 p.m. and at 4:30 opera scenes will be presented in the garden.

A student concert will be performed by the Fromm fellowship players in the theater; at 7 a supper concert will be given by the Tanglewood choir on the porch of the main house, and at 8:15 in the music shed Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the student orchestra. One of the selections will be the world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-act opera "Port Town."

* * *

THE PROGRAM for Friday, beginning at 8:30 p.m., will feature Leon Kirchner, contemporary American composer, conducting the Boston Symphony in the first Tanglewood performance of his "Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion." Kirchner is a member of the music center's composition faculty. Munch will conduct the remainder of the evening's program. At this concert violinist Ruggiero Ricci will make his first Berkshire festival appearance in a performance of Sibelius' violin concerto.

The second Berkshire Music Center benefit will be presented Aug. 11. The Boston Pops, conducted by Arthur Fiedler, will play an all-Gershwin program in the music shed. Guest will be pianist Earl Wild.

SCHENECTADY UNION STAR
Saturday, July 30, 1960

Kirchner's 'Toccata' to Be Presented

LENOX, Mass., July 30 — Leon Kirchner, American composer, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first Tanglewood performance of his "Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion" Firday at 8:30 p.m. Kirchner is a member of the Berkshire Music Center's composition faculty.

The Friday program will include excerpts from the third act of Wagner's "Meistersinger," Sibelius' "Violin Concerto" with Ruggiero Ricci as soloist and Mendelssohn's "Symphony No. 3 in A Minor, Op. 56." These will be conducted by Charles Munch.

Public Rehearsal

The orchestra's rehearsal Saturday, Aug. 6, at 10 a.m. will be open to the public. The program that evening at 8:30 will include Beethoven's "Prometheus" overture, the "Symphony No. 2 for Large Orchestra and Chamber Orchestra" by Henri Dutilleux and Brahms' "Piano Concerto No. 2 in B Flat Major, Op. 83" with Eugene Istomin as soloist. Charles Munch will conduct.

Pierre Monteux will conduct the program Sunday, Aug. 7, at 2:30 p.m. It will consist of Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis," Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. 3 in C Minor, Op. 37" with Leon Fleisher as soloist, and Brams' "Symphony No. 4 in E Minor, Op. 98."

Next week's Berkshire Festivaie programs will begin with a recital Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. by Fleisher who will present sonatas by Liszt, Kirchner and Schubert.

Thursday Benefit

Grounds will open at 3:30 p.m. Thursday for a "gala evening" to benefit the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds. At 4:30 opera scenes will be presented in the formal gardens. The Fromm Fellowship Players will give compositions by Tanglewood students at 6 and the Tanglewood Choir will give a supper concert at 7. Opera department students at 8:15 will present the world premiere of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowtiz opera, "Port Town."

The program tonight at 8:30 will include "Symphonie Fantastique" by Berlioz, Piston's "Symphony No. 6" and Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe, Suite No. 2."

Mozart's "Haffner" symphony will open the program tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. when Pierre Monteux will be the conductor. Beethoven's "Symphony No. 9 in D Minor, Op. 125" will be presented also.

AUG 1960

The attached clipping appeared in "Connecticut Life", a monthly supplement carried by approximately 44 daily and weekly papers.

Connecticut EVENTS

August

4-7 Golf, Insurance City Open, Wethersfield Country Club. Many of the nation's top pros.

4-Sept. 20 Furniture Exhibit — William B. and Mary Goodwin Collection, Wadsworth Atheneum, Hartford. Includes controversial Winslow chest (see cut) now being examined microscopically to determine authenticity.

4-14 Art Exhibits. Annual Jury Show, Essex Art Association, Essex. Lyme Art Association summer exhibit, Lyme. New England Regional Exhibition, Mystic Art Association, Mystic.

5 Concert, Munch and Monteux with Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Also, Boston Pops Aug. 11.

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 4,136

JUL 28 1960

MILLERTON NEWS REPUBLICAN
Thursday, August 4, 1960

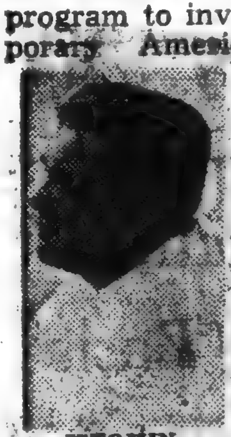
LEON FLEISHER, bright young American pianist, will give a sonata recital at the Wednesday Evening Chamber Music Concert (Aug. 3.) In this the first of two Tanglewood performances this week, Mr. Fleisher has selected sonatas by Liszt, Kirchner, and Schubert. Sunday afternoon (Aug. 7) in the Music Shed with Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Fleisher will play the Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 3.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 416,486

JUL 31 1960

Berkshire Festival

Charles Munch has revised the Berkshire Festival's Friday program to invite the contemporary American composer, Leon Kirchner, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first Tanglewood performance of his Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion. A member of the Berkshire Music Center's composition faculty, 41-year-old Kirchner has previously conducted the orchestra in his Toccata in Boston, New York and Washington.



ISTOMIN

Dr. Munch will conduct the balance of the Friday concert in the 6000-seat Music Shed at 8:30. Ruggiero Ricci will make his first Berkshire Festival appearance in a performance of the Violin Concerto by Sibelius. The program will open with excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" and conclude with the "Scotch" Symphony by Mendelssohn.

Saturday morning at 10, the orchestra's rehearsal will be open to the public.

Programs of the week:

This afternoon at 2:30, Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Mozart: "Haffner" Symphony; Beethoven: Ninth Symphony, with the Berkshire Festival Chorus, prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson, and the following soloists: Eleanor Steber, soprano; Freda Gray-Masse, contralto; John McCollum, tenor, and David Laurent, bass.

Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. Theater. Sonata concert by Leon Fleisher, piano.

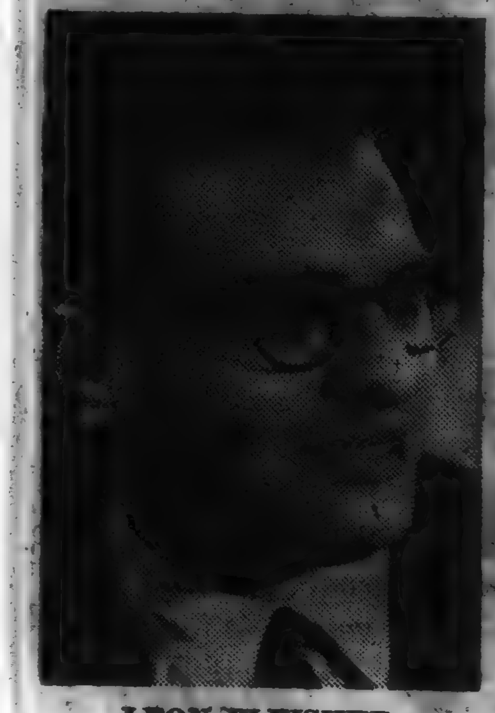
Friday at 8:30 p.m. Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Wagner: Excerpts from "Die Meistersinger"; Sibelius: Violin Concerto, Ruggiero Ricci, soloist; Leon Kirchner; Toccata (the composer conducting); Mendelssohn: "Scotch" Symphony.

Saturday at 8:30 p.m., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Munch conducting. Beethoven: "Prometheus" Overture; Henri Dutilleux: Symphony No. 2; Brahms: Piano Concerto No. 2 in B-flat major, Eugene Istomin, soloist.

Sunday, Aug. 7, at 2:30 p.m., Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Monteux conducting. Vaughan Williams: Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis; Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 3, in C minor, Leon Fleisher, soloist; Brahms: Symphony No. 4, in E minor.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, TUESDAY, AUGUST 2, 1960

Pianist Leon Fleisher Soloist at Tanglewood



LEON FLEISHER
In Reci . Tomorrow

Pianist Leon Fleisher will appear twice at the Tanglewood music festival to highlight its next-to-last week of the 1960 season.

* * *

HE WILL GIVE a piano recital tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. in the theater and again Aug. 7, when he will perform Beethoven's third piano concerto in the music shed's afternoon concert under the direction of Pierre Monteux.

His recital tomorrow will be a program of sonatas contributed by Fleisher to benefit the Berkshire Music Center.

Thursday marks the 20th anniversary celebration by students of the center for the center's scholarship fund. Tanglewood grounds will be open at 3:30 p.m. and at 4:30 opera scenes will be presented in the garden.

A student concert will be performed by the Fromm fellowship players in the theater; at 7 a supper concert will be given by the Tanglewood choir on the porch of the main house, and at 8:15 in the music shed Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the student orchestra. One of the selections will be the world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-act opera "Port Town."

* * *

THE PROGRAM for Friday, beginning at 8:30 p.m., will feature Leon Kirchner, contemporary American composer, conducting the Boston Symphony in the first Tanglewood performance of his "Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion." Kirchner is a member of the music center's composition faculty. Munch will conduct the remainder of the evening's program. At this concert violinist Ruggiero Ricci will make his first Berkshire festival appearance in a performance of Sibelius' violin concerto.

The second Berkshire Music Center benefit will be presented Aug. 11. The Boston Pops, conducted by Arthur Fiedler, will play an all-Gershwin program in the music shed. Guest will be pianist Earl Wild.

SCHENECTADY UNION STAR
Saturday, July 30, 1960

Kirchner's 'Toccata' to Be Presented

LENOX, Mass., July 30 — Leon Kirchner, American composer, will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first Tanglewood performance of his "Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion" Firday at 8:30 p.m. Kirchner is a member o the Berkshire Music Center's composition faculty.

The Friday program will in clude excerpts from the thir act of Wagner's "Meister singer," Sibelius' "Violin Con certo" with Ruggiero Ricci a soloist and Mendelssohn's "Sym phony No. 3 in A Minor, Op 56." These will be conducte by Charles Munch.

Public Rehearsal

The orchestra's rehearsa Saturday, Aug. 6, at 10 a.m will be open to the public. Th program that evening at 8:3 will include Beethoven's "Pro metheus" overture, the "Sym phony No. 2 for Large Orches tra and Chamber Orchestra" by Henri Dutilleux and Brahms "Piano Concerto No. 2 in B Fla Major, Op. 83" with Eugen Istomin as soloist. Charle Munch will conduct.

Pierre Monteux will conduc the program Sunday, Aug. 7 at 2:30 p.m. It will consist o Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia o a Theme by Thomas Tallis," Beethoven's "Piano Concert No. 3 in C Minor, Op. 37" with Leon Fleisher as soloist, an Brams' "Symphony No. 4 in Minor, Op. 98."

Next week's Berkshire Festi vale programs will begin with recital Wednesday at 8:30 p.m by Fleisher who will presen sonatas by Liszt, Kirchner an Schubert.

Thursday Benefit

Grounds will open at 3:30 p.m Thursday for a "gala evening" to benefit the Berkshire Musi Center's scholarship funds. A 4:30 opera scenes will be pre sented in the formal garden The Fromm Fellowship Player will give compositions by Tan glewood students at 6 and the Tanglewood Choir will give supper concert at 7. Opera de partment students at 8:15 wil present the world premiere o the Langston Hughes-Jan Meye rowtiz opera, "Port Town."

The program tonight at 8:3 will include "Symphonie Fan tastique" by Berlios, Piston's "Symphony No. 6" and Ravel' "Daphnis and Chloe, Suit No. 2."

Mozart's "Haffner" sym phony will open the progra tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. whe Pierre Monteux will be the con ductor. Beethoven's "Symphon No. 9 in D Minor, Op. 125" wil be presented also.

AUG 1960

The attached clipping appeared in "Connecticut Life", a monthly supplement carried by approximately 44 daily and weekly papers.

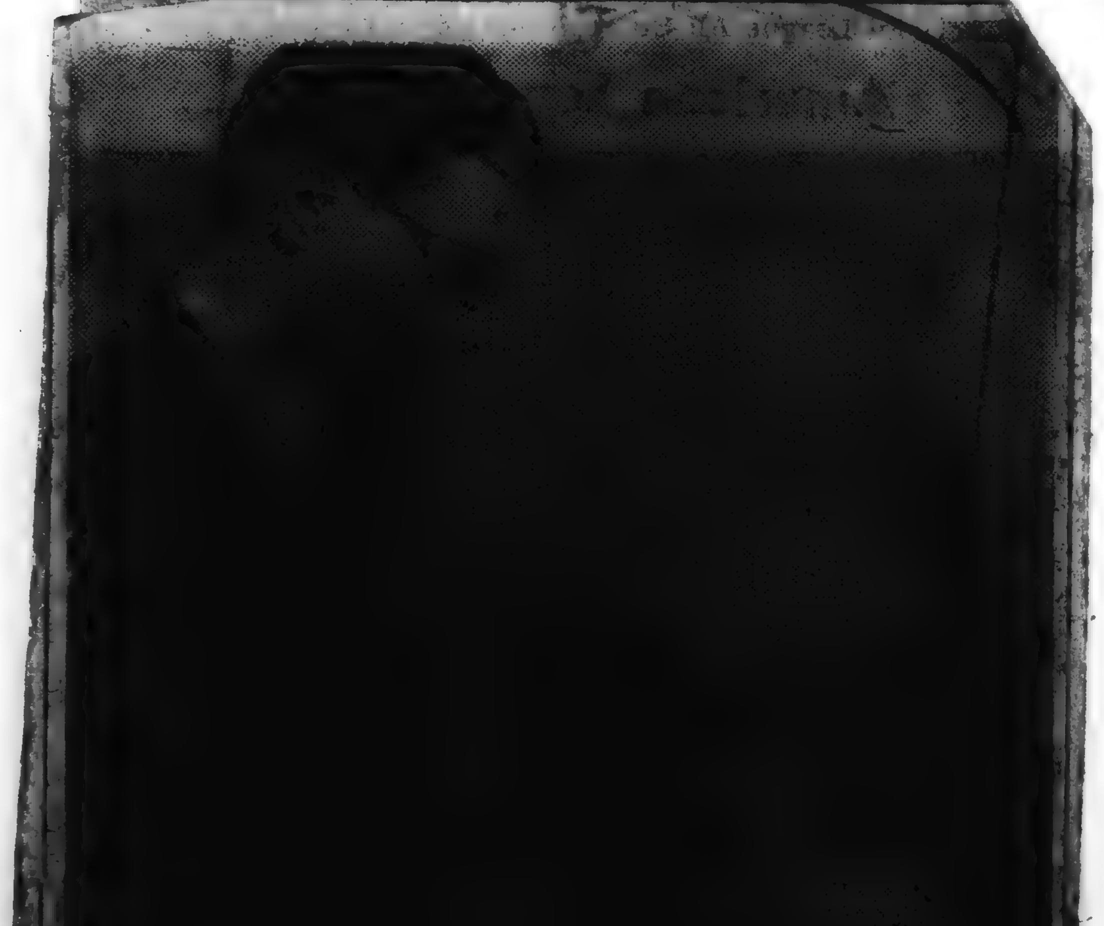
Connecticut

August

- 4-7 Golf, Insurance City Open, Wethersfield Country Club. Many of the nation's top pros.
- 4-Sept. 20 Furniture Exhibit — William B. and Mary Goodwin Collection, Wadsworth Atheneum, Hartford. Includes controversial Winslow chest (see cut) now being examined microscopically to determine authenticity.
- 4-14 Art Exhibits. Annual Jury Show, Essex Art Association, Essex. Lyme Art Association summer exhibit, Lyme. New England Regional Exhibition, Mystic Art Association, Mystic.
- 5 Concert, Munch and Monteux with Boston Symphony at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Also, Boston Pops Aug. 11.

Post
WALLINGFORD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 4,136
JUL 28 1960

MILLERTON NEWS REPUBLICAN
Thursday, August 4, 1960



LEON FLEISHER, bright young American pianist, will give a sonata recital at the Wednesday Evening Chamber Music Concert (Aug. 3.) In this the first of two Tanglewood performances this week, Mr. Fleisher has selected sonatas by Liszt, Kirchner, and Schubert. Sunday afternoon (Aug. 7) in the Music Shed with Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Mr. Fleisher will play the Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 3.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 416,486
JUL 31 1960

Berkshire Festival

Charles Munch has revised the Berkshire Festival's Friday program to invite the contemporary American composer, Leon Kirchner, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first Tanglewood performance of his Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion. A member of the Berkshire Music Center's composition faculty, 41-year-old Kirchner has previously conducted the orchestra in his Toccata in Boston, New York and Washington.

ISTOMIN

Dr. Munch will conduct the balance of the Friday concert in the 6000-seat Music Shed at 8:30. Ruggiero Ricci will make his first Berkshire Festival appearance in a performance of the Violin Concerto by Sibelius. The program will open with excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" and conclude with the "Scotch" Symphony by Mendelssohn.

Saturday morning at 10, the orchestra's rehearsal will b open to the public.

Programs of the week:

This afternoon at 2:30, Music Shed Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierr Monteux conducting. Mozart: "Haffner" Symphony; Beethoven: Nint Symphony, with the Berkshire Festival Chorus, prepared by Alfre Nash Patterson, and the followin soloists: Eleanor Steber, sopran Freda Gray-Masse, contralto; Joh McCollum, tenor, and David Lauren bass.

Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. Theate Sonata concert by Leon Fleishe piano.

Friday at 8:30 p.m. Music She Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charle Munch conducting. Wagner: Excerpt from "Die Meistersinger"; Sibeliu Violin Concerto, Ruggiero Ricci, solo ist; Leon Kirchner; Toccata (the com poser conducting); Mendelssoh "Scotch" Symphony.

Saturday at 8:30 p.m., Music She Boston Symphony Orchestra, Munc conducting. Beethoven: "Prome theus" Overture; Henri Dutilleu Symphony No. 2; Brahms: Piano Con certo No. 2, in B-flat major, Euge Istomin, soloist.

Sunday, Aug. 7, at 2:30 p.m., Mus Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra Monteux conducting. Vaughan Wil liams: Fantasia on a Theme b Thomas Tallis; Beethoven: Pia Concerto No. 3, in C minor, Le Fleisher, soloist; Brahms: Sympho No. 4, in E minor.

1 : 140

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657

JUL 30 1960

Music Calendar for Week

SUNDAY

2:30 — Boston Symphony Orchestra, Berkshire Festival Chorus and soloists, Pierre Monteux conducting Beethoven's 9th Symphony; Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

3:15—Insurance City Band, Elizabeth Park.

4—Paul Ulanowski, piano, and Berkshire Quartet, Music Mountain, Falls Village.

8:30—Chamber music concert; Evening with Timothy Cheney; Westbrook Gallery, Route 1, Westbrook.

8:30—Maynard Ferguson; Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox, Mass.

MONDAY

5:30 — Fritz Magg, cello; First Church, Sharon.

8 — Open rehearsal, Jose Limon Dance Company with Pauline Koner and Lucas Hoving; Palmer Auditorium, Conn. College, New London.

8:30 — Boston Symphony Orchestra members and guests in Fromm Foundation chamber music concert; Tanglewood Theater, Lenox, Mass.

TUESDAY

8—David Dawson, viola, and Yale Summer School of Music Chamber Orchestra, Jackson Wiley conducting; Norfolk Music Shed.

9—Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival modern dance program; Valerie Bettis Dance Theater Robert Cohan and Matt Turney, Talley Beatty & Co.; near Lee, Mass.

WEDNESDAY

7:15—Carilloneur Raymond Wingate; Plumb Memorial Carillon, Trinity College.

8:30—University of Hartford Chamber Orchestra, Sayard Stone conducting; Marine Museum, Mystic Seaport.

8:30—Leon Fleisher, piano sonata recital; Tanglewood Theater, Lenox, Mass.

9—Jacob's Pillow, as Tuesday.

THURSDAY

3:30—Tanglewood grounds open for Gala Evening with world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz' opera "Port Town" at 8:30, following instrumental and vocal concerts by student groups.

8:30—Empire State Music Festival; "Madama Butterfly"; Harriman State Park, Bear Mountain, N. Y.

9—Jacob's Pillow, as Tuesday.

FRIDAY

4 & 9—Jacob's Pillow, as Tuesday.

8:30 — Boston Symphony Orchestra, Leon Kirchner and Charles Munch conducting; Ruggiero Ricci, violin soloist; Tanglewood Shed, Lenox, Mass.

8:30—Empire State Music Festival; "Barber of Seville" with Roberta Peters, etc.; Harriman State Park, Bear Mountain, N. Y.

SATURDAY

4 & 9—Jacob's Pillow, as Tuesday.

8:30 — Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting; Eugene Istomin, piano soloist; Tanglewood Shed, Lenox, Mass.

8:30—Empire State Music Festival: Henry Swoboda conducting Festival Orchestra; Berl Senofsky, violin soloist; Harriman State Park, Bear Mountain, N. Y.

VALATIE ROUGH NOTES
Friday, July 29, 1960

CHATHAM, N.Y.
COURIER
W. 3,786

JUL 28 1960

EUGENE ISTOMIN, piano virtuoso, appears at the Berkshire Festival on Saturday, August 6 at 8:30, with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for a performance of the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2.

Special Tanglewood Events To Aid Scholarship Funds

ne

The first of two special events to benefit the scholarship funds of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, will be held at Tanglewood on Thursday, August 4.

The world premiere of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Port Town," is included in the August 4 Gala Evening to be presented in the Music Shed. The opera has been prepared by the Opera Department students at Tanglewood under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. In the Music Shed at 8:15, preceding the one-act opera, Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Center's student orchestra. The student orchestra will also participate in the post-intermission opera performance.

At Tanglewood, Saturday, July 30, Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Berlioz' Symphonie Fantastique, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston and the Festival Chorus will participate in a performance of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe."

Beethoven's Ninth Symphony will be conducted by Pierre Monteux Sunday afternoon, July 31, 2:30 at Tanglewood. Eleanor Steber heads the quartet of vocalists for the work.

* * *

THE COMPLETE PROGRAMS

Saturday, July 30, 10 a.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony Open Reheasal.

Saturday, July 30, 8:30 p.m., Music Shed, Boston Symphony, Munch conducting:
Berlioz Symphonie Fantastque
Piston: Symphony No. 6
Ravel: Daphnis and Chloe, Suite No. 2 (Festival Chorus).

Sunday, July 31, 2:30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Monteaux conducting:
Mozart: "Haffner" Smyphony
Beethoven: Symphony No. 9, in D minor, Op. 125 (Steber, Gray-Masse, McCollum, Laurent, Festival Chorus).

Wednesday, August 3, 8:30, Theatre: Leon Fleisher, Pianist, Sonata Recital.

Thursday, August 4, A Gala Evening to benefit Berkshire Music Center, 3:30 Grounds open; First Event 4:30.

Whitestone

FIVE CONTEMPORARY COMPOSERS who gathered at Tanglewood this weekend are, left to right, Henri Dutilleux, who came from France for the Tanglewood debut of his Symphony No. 2 to be performed in the Music Shed tonight by the Boston Symphony; Luciano Berio and Leon Kirchner, members of the Berkshire Music Center faculty; Karl-Birger Blomdahl, who lectured at a seminar, and Aaron Copland, head of the composition department at the Berkshire Music Center.

Eagle 8/6/60

Bee
NEWTOWN, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 5,920

AUG 5 1960

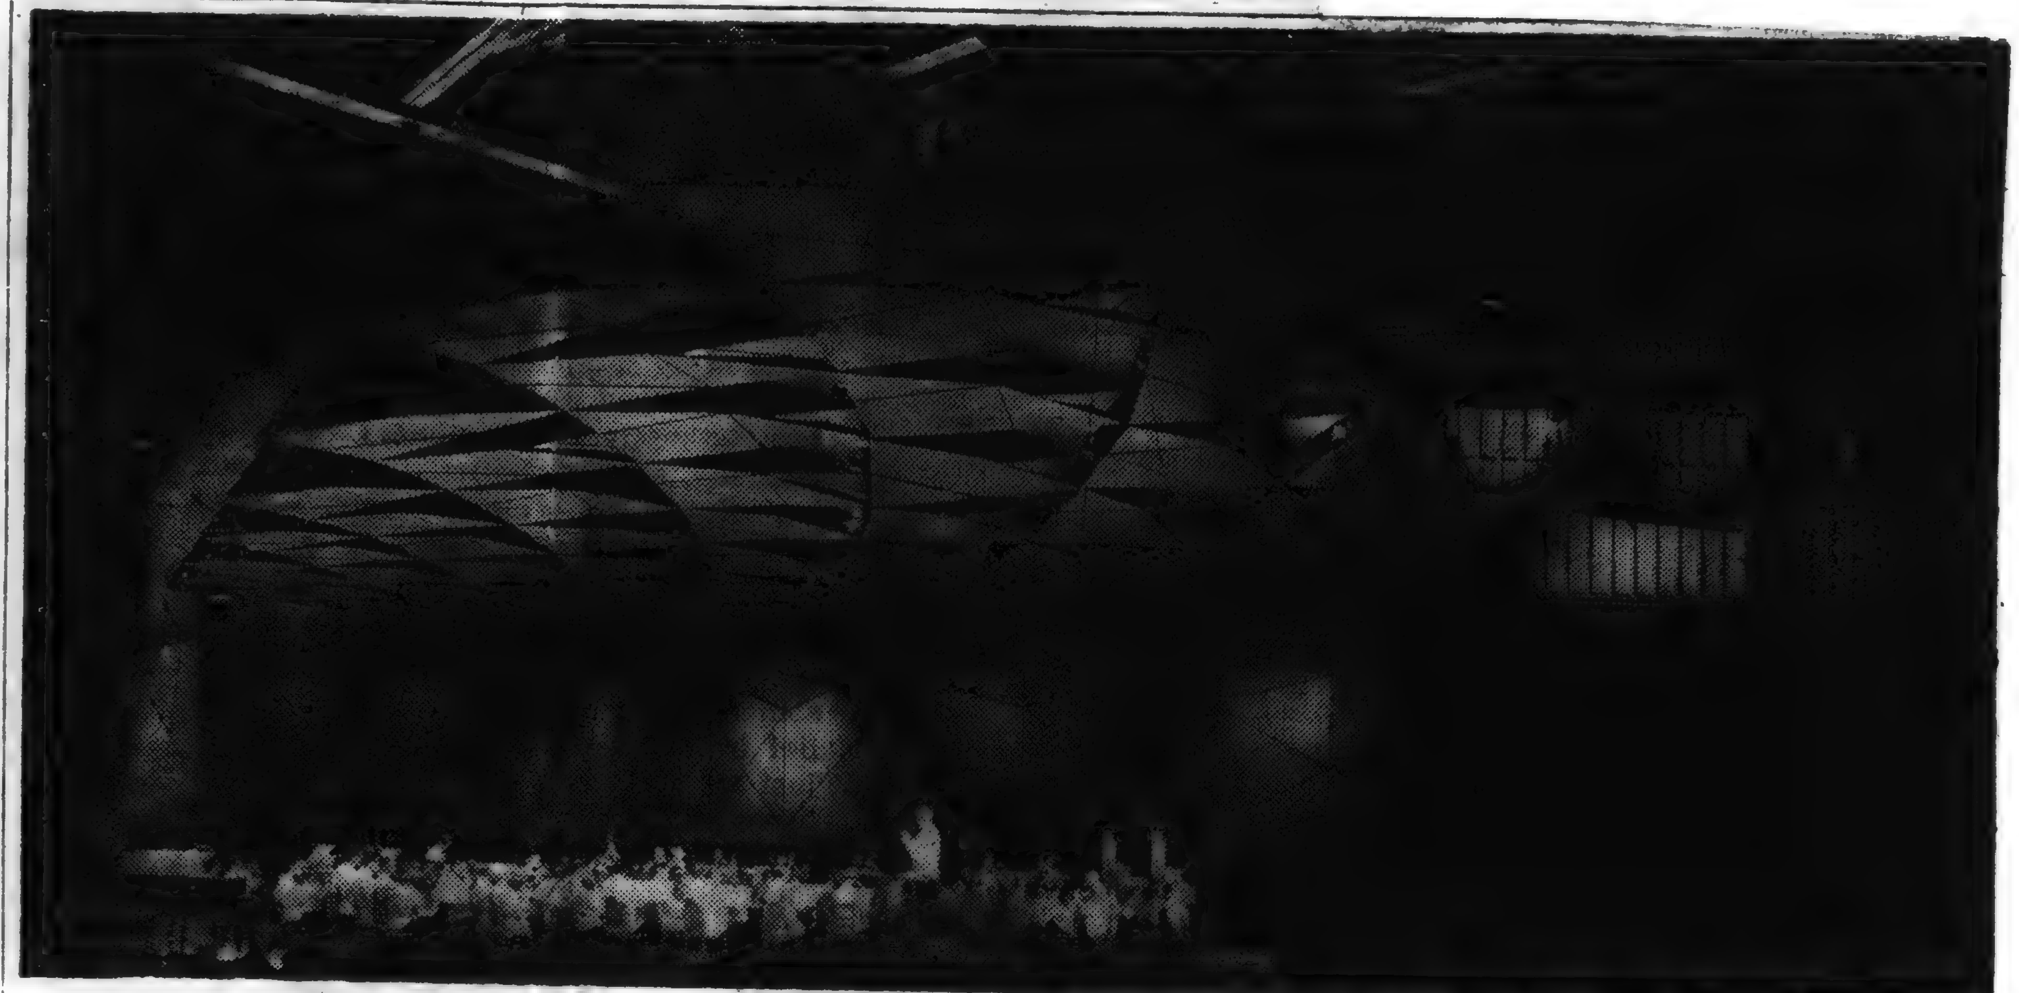
Musical Events

Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.; August 5, Wagner's Die Meistersinger; Mendelssohn's Scotch Symphony, August 6, Beethoven's Prometheus Overture; Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2; August 7, Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3; Brahms' Symphony No. 4; August 11, Boston Pops Orchestra with Arthur Fiedler conducting.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

JUL 30 1960

Events on Tanglewood Horizon



Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood during the Berkshire Music Festival, continuing to mid-August

Kirchner To Conduct His Toccata

Charles Munch has invited Leon Kirchner to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first Tanglewood performance of this composer's Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds, and Percussion on Friday evening, Aug. 6. Dr. Munch will conduct the balance of the concert, which will be held in the Music Shed at 8:30. At this concert Ruggiero Ricci, violinist, will make his first Berkshire Festival appearance in a performance of the Violin Concerto by Sibelius. The program will open with excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" and conclude with the "Scotch" Symphony by Felix Mendelssohn.

On Saturday morning, Aug. 6, at 10 o'clock, the orchestra's rehearsal will be opened to the public.

Henri Dutilleux's Symphony No. 2 will receive its first Tanglewood performance at the orchestra's Saturday evening concert, Aug. 6. To complement the contemporary symphony, Charles Munch also has scheduled Beethoven's Overture to "Prometheus" and the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms, in which Eugene Istomin will solo.

Pierre Monteux's guest at the orchestra's concert on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7, at 2:30, will be Leon Fleisher in a performance of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3. Mr. Monteux will open the program with "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis" by Vaughan Williams and the concert will conclude with Brahms' Fourth Symphony.

Mr. Fleisher will give a piano recital at Tanglewood in addition to his orchestral appearance on Wednesday evening, Aug. 3, at 8:30 in the Theater. The recital, for which he has contributed his services to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, will include the Sonata in B minor by Franz Liszt, Leon Kirchner's Sonata (1948), and the posthumous Sonata in B-flat by Schubert.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267
AUG 3 1960

Ruggiero Ricci will make his Tanglewood debut with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Music Festival concert on Friday evening. Mr. Ricci will play the first Tanglewood performance of the Sibelius Violin Concerto.

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Circ. 18,203

AUG 5 1960

Weekend at Tanglewood

Charles Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a program of music by Wagner, Sibelius and Mendelssohn, to inaugurate the next to the last weekend of the Berkshire Festival in the Music Shed at Tanglewood in Lenox, Mass., tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Ruggiero Ricci will be soloist in the Sibelius Violin concerto, and the orchestra will perform excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" and the "Scotch" Symphony of Mendelssohn.

Tomorrow night at 8:30, the program will consist of the Beethoven "Prometheus" Overture, the Dutilleux Symphony No. 2 and the Brahms piano Concerto No. 2, to be performed by Eugene Istomin as soloist. Dr. Munch will conduct.

The Sunday afternoon concert at 2:30 o'clock, will present Leon Fleischer, in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3. Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Williams' Fantasia on a Theme by Tallis, and the Brahms Symphony No. 4.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

AUG 4 1960

Third Tanglewood Series; Fleisher to Play Sunday

The third series of major Berkshire Festival Concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will open tomorrow evening at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Munch and Monteux

Charles Munch, music director of the orchestra, will conduct the concerts tomorrow and Saturday evenings in this weekend's series. Pierre Monteux will conduct the Sunday afternoon concert.

This is the next-to-last series of this year's festival. It will be concluded with the programs of the following weekend.

Tomorrow evening Ruggiero Ricci will be soloist with the orchestra in a performance of the Sibelius Violin Concerto. The orchestra will play excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" and Mendelssohn's "Scotch" Symphony.

On Saturday evening the soloist will be Eugene Istomin who will perform Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 with the orchestra under Dr. Munch's direction. The orchestra will play Henri Dutilleux' Symphony No. 2 and the "Prometheus" Overture by Beethoven.

Sunday Soloist

On Sunday, pianist Leon Fleisher will be the guest soloist. He and the orchestra under Mr. Monteux' baton will perform Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3, while Mr. Monteux will lead the orchestra in performance of Vaughan Williams' Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis and the 4th Symphony of Brahms.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657

AUG 6 1960

MUSIC CALENDAR

SUNDAY

2:30 — Boston Symphony Orchestra, Berkshire Festival, Pierre Monteux, conducting Williams Fantasia on a Theme by Tallis; Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 3 (Fleisher); Brahms Symphony No. 4, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

8:30 — Chamber Music Hall, composer's forum.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657
AUG 3 1960

Meyerowitz Opera Set at Tanglewood

Jan Meyerowitz's opera Port Town" will have its orld-premiere at Tanglewood hursday at 8:15 p. m.

The one-act opera, the third eyerowitz opera to have its rst performance at Tanglepod, will be given by students the Berkshire Music Center r benefit of the center's holarship funds.

* * *

IN ADDITION to this special vent, the regular Boston Symphony Orchestra Tanglewood eries will begin its next to st week of activity with a conert Friday night.

Charles Munch will conduct Vagner's "Die Meistersinger" xcerpts, Sibelius, Violin Conerto with Ruggiaro Ricci, iolin soloist, and Mendelsshon's "Scotch" Symphony.

On Saturday night, Dr. Munch will conduct the Beethoven's "Prometheus" Overture, the Dutilleux Second Symphony, and the Brahms, Second Piano Concerto with Eugene Istomin, piano soloist. Both night concerts start at 8:30.

* * *

PIERRE MONTEUX will conduct at 2:30 p. m. Sunday in the following program: Williams, Fantasia on a Theme by Tallis; Beethoven, Third Piano Concerto with Leon Fleisher, soloist and Brahms, Fourth Symphony.

7
4
2

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Circ. 106,090

JUL 31 1960

GALA EVENING AT BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

The Berkshire Music Festival has a special "Galà Evening" scheduled for Thursday in addition to the three regular orchestral programs next weekend. Thursday's program and a Pop concert on August 11 are replacing this season the annual "Tanglewood on Parade" formerly given for the benefit of the festival's school, the Berkshire Music Center.

EUGENE ISTOMIN

Thursday's events will commence at 4:30 p.m., with the performance of opera scenes in the Formal Gardens. At 6, the Fromm Fellowship Players will give a concert in the Theater and at 7 the Tanglewood Choir will be heard in a Supper Concert on the porch of the Main House. The highlight of the day's events will come in the concert at 8:15 when the Opera Department presents the world premiere of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Port Town." Selections by the Center's student orchestra will be heard both before and after the opera performance.

Dr. Munch and Pierre Monteux are to share the podium in the weekend concerts. The regular conductor will conduct the Friday and Saturday evening concerts while Monteux will conduct next Sunday afternoon's program.

Friday's program highlight is to be the Sibelius Violin Concerto with Ruggiero Ricci as soloist. Also listed are "Die Meistersinger" (excerpts from Act III), Mendelssohn's "Scottish" Symphony, and Leon Kirchner's Toccata with the composer himself conducting.

The soloist in Saturday evening's concert is to be Eugene Istomin who will be heard in the Piano Concerto No. 2, by Brahms. The "Prometheus" Overture, by Beethoven, and the Symphony No. 2, by Henri Dutilleux are the other program listings. The latter work received its world-premiere by Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony last December.

For next Sunday afternoon's program, the venerable French conductor has chosen the following works: Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis, by Vaughan Williams; Piano Concerto No. 3 by Beethoven; Symphony No. 4 by Brahms. Leon Fleisher is to be the soloist in the Beethoven performance.

Fleisher will also be heard in a sonata recital on Wednesday evening, this week's event in the regular chamber music series.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 31 1960

Soloists at Tanglewood for Friday and Saturday

RUGGIERO RICCI

EUGENE ISTOMIN

Violinist Ruggiero Ricci makes his Tanglewood debut with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Music Shed Friday night. Mr. Ricci will play the first Tanglewood performance of the Sibelius Violin Concerto. On Saturday night, piano virtuoso Eugene Istomin will appear with the orchestra in a performance of the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2.

Tanglewood Events

Today, July 31, 2.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Monteux conducting.

Mozart: "Haffner" Symphony.

Beethoven: Symphony No. 9, in D minor, Op. 125; (Steber Gray-Masse, McCollum, Laurent, Festival Chorus).

Wednesday, August 3, 8.30, Theatre: Leon Fleisher, Pianist, Sonata Recital.

Thursday, August 4, a gala evening to benefit Berkshire Music Center, 3.30 grounds open; First Event 4.30.

Friday, August 5, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting.

Wagner: "Die Meistersinger," exerpts from Act III.

Sibelius: Violin Concerto (Ruggiero Ricci).

Kirchner: Toccata (composer conducting).

Mendelssohn: Symphony No. 3, in A minor, "Scottish," Op. 56.

Saturday, August 6, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting.

Beethoven: "Prometheus" Overture.

Dutilleux: Symphony No. 2, for large orchestra and chamber orchestra.

Brahms: Piano Concerto No. 2, in B-flat major, Op. 83 (Eugene Istomi).

Sunday, August 7, 2.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Monteux conducting; Vaughan Williams: Fantasia on a theme by Thomas Tallis; Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 3, in C minor, Op. 37 Leon Fleisher) Brahms: Symphony No. 4, in E minor, Op. 98.

The activites at Tanglewood to which members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited this week are as follows:

Monday, August 1, 8.30 Theater: Fromm Foundation Concert, Contemporary; Chamber music, Boston Symphony Orchestra members.

Tuesday, August 2, 8.30 Chamber Music Hall: Listeners Forum, The Critic as listener.

Wednesday, August 3, 3.30 Chamber Music Hall: Lecture aspects of music.

Friday, August 5, [illegible], Chamber Music Hall: Seminar in contemporary music.

Sunday, August 7, 10 a. m., chamber music.

Sunday, August 7, 8.30, Cham-
Forum. ce facCuHaoq ber Music Hall: Composer's forum.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037

AUG 5 1960

Where To Go—What To Do

Saturday, Aug. 6-Sunday, Aug. 7

If you enjoy the nostalgic tunes of the Gay Ninties, you'll delight in Sunday's "OLD TIMERS' CONCERT" to be sponsored by the Rockefeller Art Association.

Some 25 singers from the Rockport Community Chorus will be directed by Signe A. Burnham. The concert will be presented in the Association's main gallery, 12 Main St., at 8:30 p.m,

Speaking of music, there'll be an open rehearsal of the BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA at 10 a.m. in the Shed at Tanglewood Saturday. The evening concert will be at 8:30 p.m.. Sunday's concert will be at 2.30 p.m.

In case you can't make the opening concert of the BEAUX ARTS QUARTET at Castle Hill, Ipswich, Friday, there'll be a repeat performance Saturday at 8:30 p.m.

Weekend events at the MUSEUM OF FINE ARTS include a lecture Saturday at 11 a.m. on "Sculpture of the Middle Ages" and one Sunday at 3 p.m. on "Pageantry in Italian Painting."

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,572

AUG 4 1960

AT TANGLEWOOD

EUGENE ISTOMIN

Mr. Istomin appears at the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox at 8:30 p.m., Saturday with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra for a performance of the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 175,076

AUG 1 1960

RUGGIERO RICCI, violinist, who will make his Tanglewood debut Friday when he joins the Boston Symphony in the first Berkshire Festival performance of the Sibelius Violin Concert

---

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

AUG 7 1960

Today in the Berkshires

10 a. m., Berkshire Music Center, chamber music at Tanglewood.

2.30, Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood.

2.00, state finals, American Legion baseball; Pittsfield vs. Brockton at Wahconah Park, Pittsfield.

3.30, music for violin and harpsicord at Cummington School of Arts.

7.00, "Look Homeward Angel" at Malden Bridge (N. Y.) Playhouse.

8.30, "La Ronde," Kate McComb Playhouse, Great Barrington.

8.30, composers forum, Tanglewood.

8.30, Modern Jazz Quartet, Berkshire Music Barn, Lenox.

8.30, dance appreciation course, Jacob's Pillow, Lee.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

AUG 5 1960

Entertainment Is Varied Within 50 Miles of Lenox

In Easy Reach Are Facilities for Outings as Well As Music, Art and Drama

As August showers its golden days on pleasure seekers in the Berkshires and surrounding western New England communities, a large measure of the salutary powers of the area is found in the accessibility of some of the finest parks and woodlands to be found anywhere.

If you consider Lenox as a hub, here are some of the natural attractions available within a 50-mile radius:

Mount Everett, Rte. 22 via Copake Falls or Rtes. 23 or 41 via South Egremont. Picnicking, berry picking, hiking, bird watching. Path leads to fire tower at summit with views into New York and Connecticut. Free.

Pittsfield State Forest, west of Pittsfield. Parking, picnicking and swimming fee, 50 cents per car weekdays, $1 on Sundays and holidays.

Benedict Pond, Beartown State Forest, Great Barrington. Rte. 102 from South Lee or follow signs from Rte. 23. Parking, picnicking and beach fee, 50 cents per car, $1 on Sundays and holidays.

Hebert's Beach, Rte. 57, on Lake Buel, Monterey. Admission 20 cents, picnic tables free. Canoes 75 cents an hour, boats $1.25 a day.

Fisherman's Fancy

Whether the fisherman goes alone or whether the family goes fishing, here are some of the places where you may catch a fish if you combine good management with luck:

Trout—Goose Pond, Lee and Tyringham; Lake Buel, Monterey; York Lake, New Marlboro; Stockbridge Bowl, Stockbridge; Pontoosuc Lake, Pittsfield.

Smallmouth bass — Lake Garfield, Monterey; Lower Spectacle Pond, Sandisfield; Yokum Pond, Becket; Richmond Pond, Richmond; Otis Reservoir, Otis.

Bullhead, pickerel and yellow perch can be taken in any of these places, but check fishing regulations locally.

Where to Eat

For those who prefer to have others catch, cook and serve their protein here are a few top-rated eating places:

Wiggins Old Tavern, King St., Northampton. Open daily 7 a. m.-11 p. m. Reservations requested.

Four Chimneys, Old Bennington, Vt., weekdays 12-3.30, 5-10. Sunday and holidays, noon-9.

Ida and John's, Rte. 20, west of Pittsfield. Weekdays ex. Thursday, 5 p. m.-1 a. m. Saturday, 5-midnight. Sunday, noon-1 a. m. Reservations suggested.

Mill on the Floss, Rte. 7, New Ashford. Weekdays, 5-10.30. Saturday, noon-10.30. Sunday, noon-8.30.

Stay a While

For a comfortable extended stay, fine accommodations are offered by:

Heaton Hall, Prospect Hill, just north of junction of Rtes. 7 and 102 at Stockbridge. Features games and bridge parties.

Wendell-Sherwood Hotel, Park Sq., Pittsfield. Cocktail lounge, dining room and coffee shop.

Curtis Hotel, Lenox. Dining room, bar, heated pool.

Williams Inn, Rte. 2, Williamstown. Cocktail lounge, dining room.

For the admirer of beauty close at hand, or for those who enjoy their art when the weather is bad, these are worth visiting:

Art Exhibits

Clark Art Institute, South St. Williamstown. Paintings from six centuries include 33 Renoirs, 12 Sargents, 11 Corots, 7 Winslow Homers, as well as works by Remington, Rubens, Rembrandt, Hals, VanDyck, Millet, Manet, Monet, Goya, Gainsborough and Gericault. There are also on exhibit prints and drawings from the 15th to the 20th centuries, sculpture, ceramics and early American, English and French silver. Open Tuesday through Sunday, 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Berkshire Museum, South St., Pittsfield, Spalding Chinese collection and a number of old masters, rooms on biology, birds and minerals, The Original One Horse Shay of Oliver Wendell Holmes' famous poem, and the sledge which took Admiral Robert E. Pearl to the North Pole are among other exhibits. Open Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a. m. to 5 p. m., Sunday from 2 to 5 p. m.

Chesterwood Studio, off Rte. 183 at Glendale in Stockbridge. Casts and bronzes by Daniel Chester French shown here include his Concord Minuteman and the seated Lincoln of the Lincoln Memorial. Open daily from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Music, Dance, Drama

Possibly the most active and exciting summer theater fare in the country, certainly of tremendous popularity wit hnatives and visitors alike, the arts as presented here draw their followers from the dinner jacket set to the come-as-you-are advocates. For the next week, here are the offerings:

Tanglewood, Lenox. Today, 3:15, Chamber Music Hall, Seminar in Contemporary Music (Friends); 8:30, Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conductor, Ruggiero Ricci soloist, Wagner, Sibelius, Kirchner, Mendelssohn. Saturday, 10 a. m., Shed, Boston Symphony open rehearsal, and 8:30, Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conductor, Eugene Istomin, soloist, Beethoven, Dutilleux, Brahms. Sunday, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall, Berkshire Music Center Chamber Music (Friends); 2:30, Shed, Boston Symphony, Pierre Monteux conductor, Leon Fleischer soloist, Williams, Beethoven, Brahms, and 8:30, Chamber Music Hall, Composer's Forum (Friends). Tuesday, 8:30, Theater, Tanglewood Choir (Friends). Wednesday, 8:30, Theater, Chamber Music Concert, Kroll Quartet, Piston, Haydn, Beethoven. Thursday, Tanglewood on Parade, Grounds open at 5:45. At 8:30 in the Shed, Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conductor, Earl Wild, pianist.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 175,076

AUG 5 1960

Berkshire Festival Week End Concerts

The Boston ~~Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire~~ Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will present its fifth week-end of concerts in the Shed tonight, tomorrow and Sunday, August 7.

Charles Munch conducts this evening with Ruggiero Ricci the soloist in the Sibelius Violin Concerto. Dr. Munch will also conduct tomorrow night with Eugene Istomin the soloist in the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2. The week-end closes the following afternoon with Pierre Monteux conducting and with Leon Fleisher performing in the Beethoven Third Piano Concerto.

CAIRO HERALD
Thursday, August 4, 1960

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 5 1960

ATHENS HERALD
Thursday, August 4, 1960

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 289,111

JUL 31 1960

GREENVILLE LOCAL
Wednesday, August 3, 1960

News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,700

AUG 4 1960

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 27,809

JUL 28 1960

Leon Kirchner Will Conduct His Own Work

LENOX — Charles Munch has revised the Berkshire Festival's 8:30 Friday program to invite the contemporary American composer, Leon Kirchner, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first Tanglewood performance of his "Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion."

A member of the Berkshire Music Center's composition faculty, 41-year-old Leon Kirchner has previously conducted the Orchestra in his "Toccata" in Boston, New York and Washington.

Munch will conduct the balance of the Friday concert which will be given in the 6000-seat Music Shed. At this concert violinist Ruggiero Ricci will make his first in a performance of the Violin Concerto [illegible] Sibelius.

The program will open with excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistesinger" and conclude with the "Scotch" Symphony by Felix Mendelssohn.

On Saturday morning the Orchestra's rehearsal will be opened to the public.

Henri Dutilleux' Symphony No. 2, the world-premiere of which Charles Munch conducted on Dec. 11, 1959, will receive its first Tanglewood performance at the Orchestra's Saturday evening concert at 8:30.

To complement the contemporary symphony, Charles Munch has scheduled Beethoven's Overture to "Prometheus" and the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms, in which Eugene Istomin will participate, for the Saturday concert.

Pierre Monteux' guest at the Orchestra's concert on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 will be pianist Leon Fleisher in a performance of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3.

Monteux will open the program with "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis" by Vaughan Williams and the concert will conclude with Brahms' Fourth Symphony.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037

AUG 5 1960

LEON FLEISHER will be soloist Sunday afternoon with Pierre Monteux and the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood in the Beethoven Piano Concerto No. 3.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 40,278

AUG 8 1960

Tanglewood Season Is Near Close

(Special to The American)

LENOX, MASS. — Week-end audiences at the Tanglewood concerts, numbering almost 25,000 despite bad weather Friday night, heard three of the [illegible] concerts the Berkshire Symphonic Festival presented this summer. Sunday afternoon's audience of just under 10,000 heard Leon Fleisher perform the Beethoven "Piano Concerto No. 3, in C minor," in one of the finest performances given this season and with competition throughout from a lone bird high in the rafters that could have wrecked the playing of a soloist. Eugene Istomin had given a brilliant performance in Brahms' "Piano Concerto No. 2, in B flat major" Saturday night. Friday night's feature was violinist Ruggiero Ricci in the Sibelius "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra in D minor."

As Pierre Monteux began yesterday afternoon's concert for a beautiful and delicate reading of Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis, for double string orchestra," a lone baby bird that would have fitted into the palm of a small child began its unmusical chirping high on one of the rafters in the Music Shed.

Monteux concluded the concert with an excellent reading of Brahms' "Symphony No. 4 in E minor" for an audience which just continued to applaud.

Saturday night's audience of 9,325, which enjoyed the lawns of Tanglewood bathed in the light of a full moon, heard Beethoven's "Overture to Prometheus" conducted by Charles Munch and a colorful piece, "Symphony No. 2, for Large Orchestra and Chamber Orchestra" by Dutilleux with the young composer called to the platform for an ovation. This symphony in three movements gave ample opportunity for the brasses, a field day for the trumpet, and the utmost delicacy for the strings. Istomin, somewhat nervous in the first movement of the Brahm's, in which he seemed to throw his arms about and continued to wipe the keys of the piano, settled down in the remaining three movements to a spirited and masterful performance.

This week will see the end of this year's Berkshire Festival with Jorge Bolet as soloist in Liszt's "Piano Concerto in E flat" under Monteux' conducting Friday night, Gary Graffman as soloist Saturday night in Chopin's "Piano Concerto No. 1" with Munch conducting. An all-Gershwin concert will be given Thursday evening with Arthur Fiedler conducting the Boston Pops to benefit the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds. Sunday afternoon's final concert of the season will present Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" with the Festival Chorus and soloists heard earlier in the season.

1
4
4

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,290
AUG 4 1960

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. [illegible]
AUG 4 1960

NEW YORK, N.Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
D. 453,331 SAT. 174,917
AUG 3 1960

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,498
AUG 4 1960

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958
AUG 1 1960

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 99,001
JUL 29 1960

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026
JUL 30 1960

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 51,447
JUL 31 1960

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664
JUL 31 1960

Kirchener Invited To Conduct BSO In 'Toccata on Friday

Charles Munch has revised the Berkshire Festival's next Friday program to invite the contemporary American composer Leon Kirchner, to conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first Tanglewood performance of his "Toccato for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion."

A member of the Berkshire Music Center's composition faculty, 41-year-old Leon Kirchner has previously conducted the Orchestra in his "Toccata" in Boston, New York and Washington. Doctor Munch will conduct the balance of the Friday concert which will be given in the 6000-seat Music Shed at 8:30. At this concert violinist Ruggiero Ricci will make his first Berkshire Festival appearance in a performance of the Violin Concerto by Sibelius. The program will open with excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistesinger' and conclude with the "Scotch" Symphony by Felix Mendelssohn.

Saturday Morning

Saturday morning, Aug. 6, at 10, the orchestra's rehearsal will be opened to the public.

Henri Dutilleux' Symphony No. 2, the world-premiere of which Charles Munch conducted on December 11, 1959, will receive its first Tanglewood performance at the Orchestra's Saturday evening concert (August 6, 8:30). To complement the contemporary symphony, Charles Munch has scheduled Beethoven's Overture to "Prometheus" and the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms, in which Eugene Istomin will participate, for the Saturday concert.

Pierre Monteux' guest at the Orchestra's concert on Sunday afternoon, Aug. 7, at 2:30, will be pianist Leon Fleisher in a performance of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3. Mr. Monteux will open the program with "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis" by Vaughan Williams and the concert will conclude with Brahms' Fourth Symphony.

Piano Recital

Mr. Fleisher will give a piano recital at Tanglewood in addition to his orchestral appearance with Mr. Monteux. Wednesday evening at 8:30 in the Theater, he will be heard in a program of sonatas.

The recital, for which Mr. Fleisher has contributed his services to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, will include the Sonata in B Minor by Franz Liszt, Leon Kichner's Sonata (1948), and the posthumous Sonata in B-flat by Schubert.

The first of two special events to benefit the scholarship funds of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, will be held at Tanglewood Thursday.

The world-premiere of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Port Town," is included in the Aug. 4 Gala Evening. To be presented in the Music Shed, the opera has been prepared by the Opera Department students at Tanglewood under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. In the Music Shed at 8:15, preceding the one-act opera, Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Center's student orchestra. The student orchestra will also participate in the post-intermission opera performance.

Aug. 4 Special Events

The Aug. 4 special events begin at 4:30, grounds open at 3:30, with the performance of opera scenes in the Formal Gardens. The Fromm Fellowship Players will be heard in a concert of music by the Tanglewood composition students in the Theater at 6:00 p. m. and there will be a supper concert by the Tanglewood Choir on the porch of the Main House at 7:00 p. m.

The Boston Pops conducted by Arthur Fiedler will present an all-Gershwin program at Tanglewood on Thursday, Aug. 11 as the second Berkshire Music Center benefit. Mr. Fiedler's guest will be pianist Earl Wild. The program includes Gershwin's "An American in Paris," Mr. Wild as soloist in Concerto in F and in the "Rhapsody in Blue," "Strike Up the Band," and "Porgy and Bess" — the Robert Russell Bennett Symphonic Picture for Orchestra.

The activities at Tanglewood to which members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited this week are as follows: Monday, Aug. 1, 8:30, Theater: Fromm Foundation Concert, Contemporary Chamber Music, Boston Symphony Orchestra members; Tuesday, 8:30, Chamber Music Hall: Listeners Forum, The Critic as Listener; Wednesday, 3:30, Chamber Music Hall: Lecture, Aspects of Music; Friday, 3:15, Chamber Music Hall: Seminar in Contemporary Music; Sunday, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall: BMC Chamber Music; Sunday, 8:30, Chamber Music Hall: Composer's Forum.

Tonight's Program

Tonight at Tanglewood Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Berlioz' Symphonie Fantastique, the Sixth Symphony by Walter Piston and the Festival Chorus will participate in a performance of Ravel's "Daphnis and Chloe."

Beethoven's Ninth Symphony will be conducted by Pierre Monteux tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 at Tanglewood. Eleanor Steber heads the quartet of vocalists for the work.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958
AUG 8 1960

Tanglewood Attracted 24,481 Over Weekend

The Boston Symphony Orchestra won especially warm applause for its week-end concerts at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood from audiences somewhat restricted by the weather. Total attendance figures of 24,481 for the three concerts are relatively low by Tanglewood standards.

Charles Munch, Boston Symphony director, conducted the Friday evening concert with a program including excerpts from "Die Meistersinger," Violin Concert by Sibelius, and Mendelssohn's "Scotch" Symphony.

On Saturday evening Dr. Munch led the orchestra in the overture to Beethoven's "Prometheus," as an opener, followed by a welcome new composition, Symphony No. 2, by Henri Dutilleu. This work was commissioned for the 75th anniversary of this orchestra and was first played in Boston last year. Eugene Istomin concluded the program with the Brahms Piano Concerto No. 2, and was, as usual, received with acclaim.

Pierre Monteux was guest conductor for the Sunday afternoon concert, at which another soloist, pianist, Leon Fleisher, won great applause in Beethoven's third Piano Concerto. A Vaughan Williams work, "Fantasia on a Theme," by Tallis, opened the program and a brilliant performance of the Fourth Symphony of Brahms closed it.

The Festival will last one more week, with several notable programs scheduled. The Kroll Quartet will give a chamber music concert in the theatre on Wednesday evening. Thursday evening the Boston Pops Orchestra, led by Arthur Fiedler, will give a Gershwin concert with Earl Wild as pianist. On Friday evening Mr. Monteux will lead the Boston Symphony, while Dr. Munch will conduct on Saturday night. The Festival closes Sunday afternoon with a performance of Berlioz Damnation of Faust, with the Festival chorus and soloists, Dr. Munch conducting.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657
AUG 6 1960

Works of Wagner, Sibelius, Mendelssohn at Tanglewood

By GEORGE STOWE

Lenox, Mass.—Charles Munch this year is making a determined effort to rescue Tanglewood from its programatic doldrums. Last night's musical fare was a shining example, a heartening sign.

While Mendelssohn's "Scotch" Symphony is hardly to be considered a dusty museum piece, it get little workout during the symphony season. Yet it has a perfection of form and joyous lyricism to charm the most obtuse listener.

And the Boston orchestra gave it a graceful symmetry and a golden patina of sound-hallmarks of this great ensemble at its best. Munch refuses to equate Mendelssohn with Beethoven or even Brahms—with the result that its gentle romanticism had an individual voice, a unique quality.

* * *

EVEN THE MODERNIST was served last night. How many there are in an average Tanglewood audience, of course, is problematical. Yet they were exposed to the astringent and propulsive music of Leon Kirchner, one of the more important young composers this country has produced.

I have a feeling that Mr. Kirchner's Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds, and Percussion is not one of his significant works. It is interesting experiment in the use of changing rhythms, dynamic contrasts, and percussive effects, but for me, at least, it did not have cumulative excitement. The composer acted as conductor for this work.

For many, the piece de resistance was the Sibelius Violin Concerto with the one-time boy prodigy, Ruggiero Ricci, as soloist. Although the work dates back to 1903, it has never become a part of the repertory because of the fiendish technical demands it makes upon the performer. Actually, only about three or four violinists—the pick of the virtuosi—can do full justice to it.

* * *

IT WAS NOT surprising, therefore, that Mr. Ricci had a few uneasy moments in the first movement. His tone throughout was inclined to be coarse-grained. However, he earned an ovation for his dynamic projection of the pyrotechnical finale.

Mr. Munch concluded one of the season's most satisfying concerts with the refulgent music from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger." The excerpts from Act Three included the Introduction, Dance of the Apprentices, and Procession of the Master-singers.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657
AUG 8 1960

Works of Three Heard at Tanglewood

By GEORGE STOWE
Special to the Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass.—The classical solidity of Beethoven and Brahms was effectively juxtaposed against the trenchant modernism of Henri Dutilleux Saturday night at Tanglewood.

Beethoven's "Prometheus" Overture is probably the least performed of his popular works in this form but it is the only surviving remnant of the ballet score heard in the concert hall today. Out of context it has all the familiar lineaments of the composer's style—which Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony set forth with incisive vigor and tonal warmth.

* * *

DUTILLEUX'S Second Symphony, to my mind, is the most interesting modern work encountered in several years of concertgoing in the Berkshires. Commissioned by the Boston Symphony and the Koussevitsky Music Foundation for the orchestra's 75th anniversary, it is dedicated to the memory of Serge and Natalie Koussevitsky.

In point of form it sets a chamber orchestra against a large orchestra. Sometimes the smaller group is performing in opposition, sometimes in unanimity with the large orchestra. Often the smaller group is superimposed on the larger to produce polyrhythms and polytonality with striking effect.

There is no doubt that this young French composer is a master orchestrator. This is particularly evident in the haunting second movement and the finale with its provocative rhythmic scheme. It deserves a repetition at Tanglewood.

Eugene Istomin, who is more familiar as a recording artist than as a concert performer, was the soloist for Brahms' challenging Second Piano Concerto Saturday night.

Despite his patent nervousness, Mr. Istomin proved himself a dynamic and musicianly interpreter of this taxing score. Its four long movements are a tremendous hurdle, even for an experienced veteran of the concert hall.

* * *

THERE WERE times when the orchestra, particularly the brass choir, was a little overpowering for Istomin's piano tone, which is not notably large. The inequalities of playing in the semi-out-of-doors must also be taken into account.

However, all things considered, this young pianist acquitted himself with honor and we can confidently expect that he will develop into one of the important instrumentalists of his day. He has the equipment for the role.

* * *

CLOSE TO 10,000 attended this Saturday night concert for which the weather conditions were ideal. Cool but not chilling temperatures and a full moon provided just the right atmosphere for the large crowd on the lawn.

145

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 4 1960

Music Review

Pianist Leon Fleisher

Leon Fleisher

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

A RECITAL last night by Leon Fleisher, one of the select young generation of American pianists, was the fifth event in the Wednesday series in the Theater-Concert Hall at Tanglewood, which drew an audience of 1,192.

We have rarely heard a program that was inherently so interesting in its exposition and contrasts, starting with the Liszt sonata proceeding to a 1948 sonata of Leon Kirchner, on the Berkshire Music Center faculty again this year, and ending with the B flat (posthumous) Schubert. There were three major channels of musical thinking—the romantic Liszt, bombastically soaring to heroic splendor and subsiding to commonplace fustian, the poetic Kirchner, searching deepest in his soul, and the tender to naive Schubert, appealing with elegiac intimacy to our heartstrings.

* * *

IT THUS becomes obvious how successfully and faithfully Fleisher achieved the spirit and the mood of the three composers. Liszt carried the production of pianistic effects to extreme limits of physical possibility, but at the same time demanded a dextral control and discipline quite beyond mere dazzling display. The Kirchner sonata seemed to demand this same kind of command of the instrument's resources. Pedaling played an important part in the effect desired at the outset of both sonatas.

The Kirchner sonata consists of three movements played without pause in a most unusual sequence. There are first two slow movements, a lento and an adagio, each with departures within the movement from the prevailing color, and also each with its individuality. There is a descending scale at the introduction which is used to mark the movement's end, and which matches strangely the direction of the opening phrase of the Liszt sonata.

* * *

THERE IS warmth rising to heat in the Kirchner, and it is not apparent that he has subscribed to any special style or school in its expression. It seems to come naturally. The second movement is an even deeper plea for compassion. The third has a syncopated rhythm of decisive clarity which encloses short references to the preceding movements. The composer was in the audience and had good reason to be gratified with the audience's reaction and with the performance and revealing exposition Fleisher gave his work.

* * *

THE SCHUBERT, one of his last three and published long after his death, was touching in its simplicity and affectionate sympathy. Its elusive and lyric charm was an exquisite miniature against the more intense inspiration of the Kirchner which had preceded it and of the broadly conceived and boldly dashing mural on which Liszt drew his lively display. The wealth of melodic invention sustained the ties of compassionate fellow-feeling although the preponderance of a minor role to the left hand is a restricting influence in Schubert's piano.

That we were continually aware of the colors and contrasts, of the spirit and character of the music of the three composers is the measure of the performer, and Fleisher, from his immersion as the servant of the music, emerged as a true artist.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 190,246

AUG 8 1960

Beethoven in the Berkshires, Or Here's a Bird for the Birds

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 7—A memorable week-end of music in the Berkshires came to an end this afternoon, in the music shed at Tanglewood, as Pierre Monteux conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Vaughan Williams' Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis; the C Minor Piano Concerto of Beethoven and the Brahms E Minor Symphony.

Soloist for Beethoven was Monteux's discovery of his days in San Francisco, Leon Fleisher. Now a mature young man of 32, Fleisher is among the foremost American musicians of the keyboard, as his playing this afternoon substantiated.

The C Minor Concerto, standing between Beethoven's unique lyrical masterpiece, the Fourth, and the majestic plangencies of the "Emperor," is a work of lighter texture and fleet rhythms, with one of those long-drawn Beethoven cantabiles for slow movement.

He who would play it well must judge carefully when to be slightly percussive and when not, to sustain the long rhythmic episodes, and remember not to stretch out the slow movement with rubato.

Mr. Fleisher judged and remembered extraordinarily well, and if, when the going was fast, he would scamp the end of a passage and anticipate conductor Monteux's downbeat by a fraction of a second—well, that is easily forgiven. His performance was much delight, and so was that of the Orchestra. The strings had sounded with a fine and delicate and noble tone in the Tallis Fantasia.

Yet there was an obbligato that the 9820 persons at Tanglewood could have done without; the chirping of sparrows high on the steel beams of the music shed. The resonance of the sparrows was nothing special to start with, but their sense of time and phrase was shockingly inadequate, and as for rhythm, they had none. That is indeed surprising in a place where, if they would, they could learn to be musical. All you can say is, a bird to the birds.

Saturday night had seen a real event, one of those performances which come but occasionally, when conductor, soloist, orchestra, players and music seem to blend into fabulous glory and beauty. Outstanding work was that monumental Piano Concerto, the Second, in B-Flat Major, of Brahms. The soloist was Eugene Istomin, who on this occasion outdid his extraordinary talents.

With no intent of condescension, one may point out that this great score is full of pitfalls for the young artist at the keyboard.

The first movement demands uncommon strength and power, the second a dionysiac vitality, the third a sustained lyrical rapture enough to tes the powers of any pianist, an the third must be a long, connected and outgiving song.

That Istomin met all thes requirements was trium enough. That his playin soared upon a stratospheri level throughout was caus first for wonder and then general rejoicing. Charles Munc and the Orchestra likewis soared and sang, with Samue Mayes phrasing and bowin the cello solo of the slov movement with a lovelines that I have seldom heard i quite a few years of concert going. Little wonder, then that an ovation of major proportions ensued.

The evening had been idea for music-making, cool anc crisp, with a full moon silvering the sky above the music shed. The audience was large, if not exceptional, the count reaching 9325 persons.

Henri Dutilleux was present to hear the first performance at Tanglewood of his large and long and extremely well-organized Second Symphony.

This unusual work, designed for a small orchestra within the bosom of the larger symphonic group, is not easy to grasp in a few hearings, and quite impossible at first acquaintance. There were those in the music shed who sadly confessed to bafflement. To this the answer must be, "Listen again and again whenever you have the opportunity to hear the piece."

(OTHER THEATER NEWS ON PAGE 17)

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

AUG 6 1960

Audience of 5,336 At Tanglewood As Third Series Opens

An audience of 5,336 persons, nearly filling the huge Music Shed and overflowing onto the adjacent lawns despite unfavorable weather, last evening heard the first concert in the third major series of the 1960 Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox.

Munch, Kirchner

Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, led its members in a performance of Mendelssohn's Third ("Scotch") Symphony which critics called brilliant, vital and tonally resplendant. Leon Kirchner conducted the orchestra in his own Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion. Ruggiero Ricci appeared as soloist in a performance with the orchestra under Mr. Munch's direction of Sibelius' Violin Concerto in D Minor, and the orchestra concluded the evening wtih a rendition of excerpts from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg."

Tonight, Eugene Istomin will be soloist in the second piano concerto of Johannes Brahms. The concert will open with the overture to "Prometheus" and will include Symphony No. 2 for large orchestra and chamber orchestra by Henry Dutilleux.

Monteux Tomorrow

Tomorrow afternoon Pierre Monteux will conduct the orchestra in performances of Williams' Fantasia on a Theme by Tallis, Brahm's Fourth Symphony and Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3 with Leon Fleisher as soloist.

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 190,246

AUG 6 1960

Sibelius Concerto, Kirchner Toccata Heard at Tanglewood

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 5—The Violin Concerto of Sibelius, with Ruggiero Ricci as soloist, and Leon Kirchner's Toccata, conducted by the composer, were featured by the Boston Symphony Orchestra's concert at Tanglewood, tonight.

The program, otherwise conducted by Charles Munch, was the first in the third week-end of the main part of the Berkshire Festival. Mendelssohn's Scottish Symphony began the evening, and excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" brought the conclusion.

Attendance was down from the usual Friday night figure, due to intermittent rain during the day and a shroud of fog which settled down shortly before dusk.

Nonetheless, the audience count was 5336. Those within the Music Shed were perfectly comfortable, but it was not a night to spread a blanket on the lawn and listen from there.

The atmosphere could not have been beneficial to strings, but it did not prevent a rich and lustrous resonance from the orchestra's massed string section, or a big round tone from Mr. Ricci.

Keeping strictly on pitch was another matter, however, and there were a few times when the edge of Ricci's tone was a trifle depressed. Nonetheless, he accomplished a performance to be remembered for its technical prowess, its finely sustained rhythm and, above all, for its uninhibited romantic warmth.

This is a work which demands not only conviction but strong emotional ardor. That was evident every moment of Ricci's performance, for which he was both applauded and cheered.

Kirchner's Toccata, as we Bostonians learned last Winter, is a remarkably fine modern work. It is beautifully and solidly organized, with a logic of structure and of harmonic idiom, though there are those who will hear it only as far as its harmony and at that point sadly give up.

The fact is, nonetheless, each successive hearing brings it up. But the piece must be very tricky to play, for the currents of rhythmic flow are involved. Kirchner conducted it ably.

The Boston Symphony was in fine form. Mendelssohn's Scottish Symphony, under Munch came to and to his liking had a rousing conclusion which drew cheers. So, too, were the orchestral portions of the Violin Concerto which Much came to find to his liking, and which he managed extremely well.

1 146

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 57,341

AUG 6 1960

Music: Berkshire Fete at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The third big weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival got under way last night at Tanglewood before an audience of 5,336. Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a prudent program, seasoned with a brief contemporary work.

Ruggiero Ricci was soloist in the Sibelius Violin Concerto. Leon Kirchner conducted the orchestra in his "Toccata."

The Friday night programs are being promoted to attract a larger local audience. It is felt that the Saturday night and Sunday afernoon concerts will take care of themselves, weather permitting.

For visitors to attend the three weekend concerts means two nights' lodging, and expenses can run high. For example, one local motel is said to charge up to $28 a day for a double room.

To supplement this, patrons are offered four Friday night concerts for the price of three. It is interesting to note that reasonably "safe" programs are added to the inducements.

In addition to Sibelius and Kirchner, last night's program also included excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" and Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 3, "Scotch."

Audience Reaction

While it's not possible to determine the percentage, probably the smaller number attend concerts at Tanglewood merely for the sake of doing so. Most people select their programs, and deliberately stay away from some.

The paradox is that one can't always determine audience reaction by applause. Genuine enthusiasm is always unmistakable, but everything performed at Tanglewood seems to receive some semblance of hearty applause — even the noisy but defective opera, "Port Town" by Jan Meyerowitz, that received its world premiere here on Thursday night.

Excepting the Kirchner "Toccata," last night's program was pretty "old hat."

Sibelius Concerto

Compared with Tanglewood's violin fodder of recent years, the Sibelius concerto was an oasis of delight. In a sense, it is a paradise of fireworks and sentiment, but of a more complex nature than the Tchaikovsky and Mendelssohn concertos that have been heard here so many times.

The Sibelius offers the soloist an opportunity to exercise maximum intellect along with the ingredients for emotionally stirring an audience.

In the main, Ricci gave the Sibelius a technically adroit performance which Munch and the orchestra sustained admirably.

It opened with a rather passive effect, methodically played and not spotless in intonation. Once the hazardous cadenza near the beginning of the movement was disposed of, the sparkle of tonal and technical brilliance set in.

The extremely difficult solo passages were a trifle unstable here and there, but the total effect was one of virtuosity, with admirable companionship between solo instrument and orchestra.

It was a waste of time and an imposition on audience tolerance to include the Kirchner Toccata, which was added to the program about two weeks ago.

After a plaintive opening in the reeds, strings add some warmth. But this idyllic condition is short-lived. Thereafter are tonal protestations and murky remarks in which percussion intrudes frequently with rude effect.

Moods pursue a regulated course of confusion, alleviated with interludes of comparative quietude. But when the work reaches its merciful conclusion, it is far from clear what has been said concretely or plausibly.

Mendelssohn's "Scotch" symphony received a dazzling performance. The finely polished chords of the introduction were filled with resonance and richness. First violins carried the melody with absolutely uniform phrasing and brasses projected a big sound without sharpness.

Climax was aroused minus storm or stress, and some of the most significant passages were magnificently initiated in cellos. In all four movements, exactnes of speed was used by Munch in differentiating moods.

The second movement was taken at an unusually rapid tempo guaranteeing its folksy ebullience. In spots it tugged at the baton to maintain momentum. The "Adagio" could hardly be divorced from its basic sentimentality, but tonal warmth and unfailing continuity were underlying stabilizers. Only here did the trumpets exceed balanced volume.

The sinister, frantic finale not only illustrated brilliant technical performance but carried fine dramatic power, with a quality of exaltation at the end.

Exacting Material

Munch and the orchestra lifted the "Meistersinger" excerpts out of their subservient operatic status, and turned them into exciting concert material. Because of their very familiarity, a new level of purpose was reached with the orchestra's marvelous resources.

Tonight's program by the Boston Symphony and Munch will include Beethoven's "Prometheus" overture, Symphony No. 2 by Dutilleux and Brahm's Second Piano Concerto with Eugene Istomin as so

TOM CONROY'S

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

AUG 6 1960

5

TANGLEWOOD PERFORMANCE IS BRILLIANT

Munch Gives Audience Of 5336 Rewarding Evening

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra provided an audience of 5336 with as brilliant, vital and tonally resplendant performance as has been heard this season, Mendelssohn's (Scotch) Symphony No. 3 in A minor" was played with magnificent elan. The lavish, broad melodies fell over each other in a profusion of beautiful sound. Brasses and percussion were Wagnerian in their splendor and the audience loved it. Mr. Munch seemed very tired when it was over, but had to acknowledge the tremendous applause.

Kirchner Conducts

Mr. Munch is always kind in allowing the younger composers to both hear and conduct their works. Tonight Leon Kirchner conducted his "Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion." Last week his piano sonata was played by Leon Fleisher. The toccata is in one movement of four parts. It seems probable that given the opportunity to hear it two or three times, this listener would enjoy it for it is a vital creation, melodious and rhythmically intriguing. Its harmonies are well blended. The orchestra gave it an excellent performance.

Tremendous Evening

This has been an evening of tremendous performances. Violinist Ruggiero Ricci, Charles Munch and the orchestra turned in a handsome performance of the Sibelius "Violin Concerto in D Minor." Sibelius had a feeling for mood and for sensuous, atmospheric color, as well as a gift for sustained lyricism. In this concerto written in 1903 and revised in 1905, he explores all the facets of the old fashioned, sure fire romantic violin technique such as dramatic double stoppings, high register trills, bravura runs and the sustained vocal line. His soloists can both sing and storm to their hearts' content. Ricci, unassuming and vastly gifted, had all the requirements to make a vital and exciting experience of the concerto. He received tumultuous applause, justly deserved.

Wagner Performed

Excerpts from the third act of "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg" by Wagner was the concluding work on the program. The introduction and final scene provide some of the greatest music Wagner wrote, and it is music for which Charles Munch seems to have a genuine affection. The performance was broad and spacious and pleasantly gay in the final scene which closed with the majestic entrance of the mastersingers.

Saturday night Eugene Istomin will be soloist in the second piano concerto of Johannes Brahms. The concert will open with the overture to "Prometheus" and will include "Symphony No. 2 for large orchestra and chamber orhestra" by Henry Dutilleux.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,498

AUG 11 1960

Weekend At Tanglewood

August 5 — By A. C. S.

Charles Munch opened the third weekend with the full orchestra with Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 3 and closed with excerpts from Act III of Die Meistersinger by Wagner. The program noted that the "Scottish" Symphony would be played without pause and it was. How nice not to have a work sabotaged by late arrivers! With the exception of the second movement it was a delightful reading. The scherzo was unfortunately deprived of its inherent grace by too rapid a tempo.

Leon Kirchner took the podium to conduct his own Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion. While not a very meaty piece, it has its complement of interesting rhythms and migrant excursions into the land of dissonance.

The highlight of the evening was the appearance of Ruggiero Ricci as soloist in the Sibelius Violin Concerto. It affords ample opportunity to display technical facility and musicianship which were fully demonstrated by Mr. Ricci. His tone in the low register is not always smooth, but his obvious grasp of the concerto in all its dimensions overshadowed any slight deficiency. He was most deserving of the enthusiastic applause from both audience and orchestra.

August 6 — By J. G. B.

Dr. Munch opened the concert with a brisk performance of the Beethoven "Prometheus" Overture. This is definitely minor-league Beethoven and should have remained on the shelf. The second work, however, the Symphony No. 2, for Large Orchestra and Chamber Orchestra, is something else again. Uncompromising in its demands on the listener's attention—it is complex, often exciting, occasionally moving, as in the elegiac theme for strings that opens and closes the slow central movement. There are all sorts of interesting effects of timbre and syncopation in the dialogue between chamber and large orchestra. The orchestra played fervently, and at the end the composer appeared to share in the considerable applause.

Eugene Istomin was soloist in an impressively muscular rendition of the Brahms Second Concerto. There was perhaps too much of nervous energy in his playing; the work somehow never seemed to expand and play itself.

August 7 — By A. C. S.

"May the good Lord give him many more years" was the thought that ran through my mind as Pierre Monteux left the podium at the close of this concert. What a privilege to hear him conduct the Brahms Fourth Symphony! The tempi seemed so right; each motif and rhythm given the perfect dimension. The typical Brahmsian trait of pitting two against three was given its due; the marvelous triplet rhythm of the third movement was not nullified by excessive speed; and the finale was both "energetic and passionate" without losing sight of details. It was truly a joy to hear.

M. Monteux began with a sympathetic reading of Ralph Vaughan Williams' Fantasia on a theme by Thomas Tallis, a pleasant piece which evokes memories of the antiphonal choral works of the 16th century. This was followed by a fine performance of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3, in C minor, with Leon Fleisher as soloist. He played well despite violent competition from a raucous bird, but with an overdose of histrionics for one listener's taste.

146

[illegible]
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 57,341
AUG 6 1960

Music: Berkshire Fete at Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The third big weekend of the Berkshire Music Festival got under way last night at Tanglewood before an audience of 5,336. Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a prudent program seasoned with a brief contemporary work.

Ruggiero Ricci was soloist in the Sibelius Violin Concerto. Leon Kirchner conducted the orchestra in his "Toccata." [illegible]

The Friday night programs are being promoted to attract a larger local audience. It is felt that the Saturday night and Sunday afternoon concerts will take care of themselves, weather permitting.

For visitors to attend the three weekend concerts means two nights' lodging, and expenses can run high. For example, one local motel is said to charge up to $28 a day for a double room.

To supplement this, patrons are offered four Friday night concerts for the price of three. It is interesting to note that reasonably "safe" programs are added to the inducements.

In addition to Sibelius and Kirchner, last night's program also included excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger" and Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 3, "Scotch."

Audience Reaction

While it's not possible to determine the percentage, probably the smaller number attend concerts at Tanglewood merely for the sake of doing so. Most people select their programs, and deliberately stay away from some.

The paradox is that one can't always determine audience reaction by applause. Genuine enthusiasm is always unmistakable, but everything performed at Tanglewood seems to receive some semblance of hearty applause — even the noisy but defective opera, "Port Town," by Jan Meyerowitz, that received its world premiere here on Thursday night.

Excepting the Kirchner "Toccata," last night's program was pretty void [illegible].

[illegible] Concerto

Compared with Tanglewood's violin fodder of recent years, the Sibelius concerto was an oasis of delight. In a sense, it is a paradise of fireworks and sentiment, but of a more complex nature than the Tchaikovsky and Mendelssohn concertos that have been heard here so many times.

The Sibelius offers the soloist an opportunity to exercise maximum intellect along with the ingredients for emotionally stirring an audience.

In the main, Ricci gave the Sibelius a technically adroit performance which Munch and the orchestra sustained admirably.

It opened with a rather passive effect, methodically played and not spotless in intonation. Once the hazardous cadenza near the beginning of the movement was disposed of, the sparkle of tonal and technical brilliance set in.

The extremely difficult solo passages were a trifle unstable here and there, but the total effect was one of virtuosity, with admirable companionship between solo instrument and orchestra.

It was a waste of time and an imposition on audience tolerance to include the Kirchner Toccata, which was added to the program about two weeks ago.

After a plaintive opening in the woods, strings add some warmth. But this idyllic condition is short-lived. [illegible] are tonal protestations, and murky remarks in which percussion intrudes frequently with rude effect.

Moods pursue a regulated course of confusion, alleviated with interludes of comparative quietude. But when the work reaches its merciful conclusion, it is far from clear what has been said concretely or plausibly.

Mendelssohn's "Scotch" symphony received a dazzling performance. The finely polished chords of the introduction were filled with resonance and richness. First violins carried the melody with absolutely uniform phrasing and brasses projected a big sound without sharpness.

Climax was aroused minus storm or stress, and some of the most significant passages were magnificently initiated in cellos. In all four movements, exactness of speed was used by Munch in differentiating moods.

The second movement was taken at an unusually rapid tempo guaranteeing its [illegible] ebullience. In spots it [illegible] at the baton to maintain [illegible]. The "Adagio" could [illegible] divorced from its basic sentimentality, but tonal warmth and unflagging continuity were underlying [illegible]. Only here did the [illegible] exceed balanced volume.

The sinister, frantic finale not only [illegible] brilliant technical [illegible] but carried fine dramatic power, with a quality of [illegible] at the end.

Exacting Material

Munch and the orchestra lifted the "Meistersinger" excerpts out of their subservient operatic status, and turned them into exciting concert material. Because of their very familiarity, a new level of purpose was reached with the orchestra's marvelous resources.

Tonight's program by the Boston Symphony and Munch will include Beethoven's "Prometheus" overture, Symphony No. 2 by Dutilleux and Brahm's Second Piano Concerto with Eugene Istomin as so

TOM CONROY'S

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815
AUG 6 1960

TANGLEWOOD PERFORMANCE IS BRILLIANT

Munch Gives Audience Of 5336 Rewarding Evening

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra provided an audience of 5336 with as brilliant, vital and tonally resplendant performance as has been heard this season. Mendelssohn's (Scotch) Symphony No. 3 in A minor" was played with magnificent elan. The lavish, broad melodies fell over each other in a profusion of beautiful sound. Brasses and percussion were Wagnerian in their splendor and the audience loved it. Mr. Munch seemed very tired when it was over, but had to acknowledge the tremendous applause.

Kirchner Conducts

Mr. Munch is always kind in allowing the younger composers to both hear and conduct their works. Tonight Leon Kirchner conducted his "Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion." Last week his piano sonata was played by Leon Fleisher. The toccata is in one movement of four parts. It seems probable that given the opportunity to hear it two or three times this listener would enjoy it for it is a vital creation, melodious and rhythmically intriguing. Its harmonies are well blended. The orchestra gave it an excellent performance.

Tremendous Evening

This has been an evening of tremendous performances. Violinist Ruggiero Ricci, Charles Munch and the orchestra turned in a handsome performance of the Sibelius "Violin Concerto in D Minor." Sibelius had a feeling for mood and for sensuous, atmospheric color, as well as a gift for sustained lyricism. In this concerto written in 1903 and revised in 1905, he explores all the facets of the old fashioned, sure fire romantic violin technique such as dramatic double stoppings, high register trills, bravura runs and the sustained vocal line. His soloists can both sing and storm to their hearts' content. Ricci, unassuming and vastly gifted, had all the requirements to make a vital and exciting experience of the concerto. He received tumultuous applause, justly deserved.

Wagner Performed

Excerpts from the third act of "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg" by Wagner was the concluding work on the program. The introduction and final scene provide some of the greatest music Wagner wrote, and it is music for which Charles Munch seems to have a genuine affection. The performance was broad and spacious and pleasantly gay in the final scene which closed with the majestic entrance of the mastersingers.

Saturday night Eugene Istomin will be soloist in the second piano concerto of Johannes Brahms. The concert will open with the overture to "Prometheus" and will include "Symphony No. 2 for large orchestra and chamber orchestra" by Henry Dutilleux.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,498
AUG 11 1960

Weekend At Tanglewood

August 5 — By A. C. S.

Charles Munch opened the third weekend with the full orchestra, with Mendelssohn's Symphony No. 3 and closed with excerpts from Act III of Dier Meistersinger by Wagner. The program noted that the "Scottish" Symphony would be played without pause and it was. How nice not to have a work sabotaged by late arrivers! With the exception of the second movement it was a delightful reading. The scherzo was unfortunately deprived of its inherent grace by too rapid a tempo.

Leon Kirchner took the podium to conduct his own Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion. While not a very meaty piece, it has its complement of interesting rhythms and migrant excursions into the land of dissonance.

The highlight of the evening was the appearance of Ruggiero Ricci as soloist in the Sibelius Violin Concerto. It affords ample opportunity to display technical facility and musicianship which were fully demonstrated by Mr. Ricci. His tone in the low register is not always smooth, but his obvious grasp of the concerto in all its dimensions overshadowed any slight deficiency. He was most deserving of the enthusiastic applause from both audience and orchestra.

August 6 — By J. G. B.

Dr. Munch opened the concert with a brisk performance of the Beethoven "Prometheus" Overture. This is definitely minor-league Beethoven and should have remained on the shelf. The second work, however, the Symphony No. 2, for Large Orchestra and Chamber Orchestra, is something else again. Uncompromising in its demands on the listener's attention—it is complex, often exciting, occa[illegible] the cl[illegible] that c[illegible] the slow centra[illegible]. There are all sor[illegible]resting effects of timbre [illegible]ncopation in the dialogue between chamber and large orchestra. The orchestra played fervently, and at the end the composer appeared to share in the considerable applause.

Eugene Istomin was soloist in an impressively muscular rendition of the Brahms Second Concerto. There was perhaps too much of nervous energy in his playing; the work somehow never seemed to expand and play itself.

August 7 — By A. C. S.

"May the good Lord give him many more years" was the thought that ran through my mind as Pierre Monteux left the podium at the close of this concert. What a privilege to hear him conduct the Brahms Fourth Symphony! The tempi seemed so right; each motif and rhythm given the perfect dimension. The typical Brahmsian trait of pitting two against three was given its due; the marvelous triplet rhythm of the third movement was not nullified by excessive speed; and the finale was both "energetic and passionate" without losing sight of details. It was truly a joy to hear.

M. Monteux began with a sympathetic reading of Ralph Vaughan Williams' Fantasia on a theme by Thomas Tallis, a pleasant piece which evokes memories of the antiphonal choral works of the 16th century. This was followed by a fine performance of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3, in C minor, with Leon Fleisher as soloist. He played well despite violent competition from a raucous bird, but with an overdose of histrionics for one listener's taste.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 92,367

AUG 8 1960

New Symphony Is Cheered At Tanglewood

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX — After bad weather Friday, the concerts at Tanglewood rallied to draw normal audiences Saturday and Sunday. The total for the season still is running ahead of any previous year.

Twentieth century works programmed originally for each of these concerts were well received. An added "Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion," conducted by its composer, Leon Kirchner, failed to arouse much enthusiasm on Friday, whereas a piano work by the same composer was hailed Wednesday in Leon Fleisher's recital for the benefit of Berkshire Music Center.

Ruggiero Cicci, violinist, playing the Sibelius Concerto in D minor on Friday, shared the applause with Charles Munch and the orchestra, the latter offering as well-liked fare some excerpts from "Die Meistersinger" and Mendelssohn's "Scottish" Symphony.

Sunday's concert brought forward Fleisher in the Beethoven Piano Concerto No.3 in C minor, for renewed Berkshire recognition of his artistry. The orchestra under Pierre Monteux contributed a Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis, composed by Ralph Vaughan Williams for double string orchestra, also the Brahms Symphony No. 4 in E minor.

Series of Triumphs

The Saturday night concert conducted by Munch, with Eugene Istomin as pianist, was a series of triumphs. The cleancut and highly polished rendition of Beethoven's "Prometheus" Overture was a brief appetizer for interesting things to follow.

Henri Dutilleux, 44-year-old French composer, was called forward to receive enthusiastic applause after the first Tanglewood performance of his Symphony No. 2, commissioned several years ago by the Symphony in conjunction with the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, and heard in Boston previously.

This novel work uses a chamber orchestra of 12 players in addition to the large orchestra. Tremendously attractive aspects of this symphony include its ability to promote a central idea, and its use of unusual and brilliant tonal textures.

Many modern writers dart restlessly from one idea to another. Dutilleux names the theme of this work as that of questioning, and expresses this at times by the use of a focal tone, around which developments move.

Throws Dissonance

Throwing dissonance at you, he knows how to make you feel it is part of an overall consonance. His loud effects are terrific, but attractive. In softer moments, he projects pure beauty, as in the harplike sounds of the full orchestra in the first movement, when the harp is not even playing, the pure and sustained tone at the end of the "Andante sostenuto," and the harmonics for concerted violins in the final movement.

Istomin and Munch wrought a palatable version of the Brahms Concerto No. 2 in B flat. It had poetry, but tended to be alert and brisk. The authoritative playing of Istomin made itself felt a onc, Isomin made itself felt at once, and rose to heights of expressiveness without bombast in the "Allegro appassionato." The "Andante" was truly lovely, with superb work by the orchestra, fine cello solos by Samuel Mayes, and continually close cooperation between the artist and conductor.

Tremendous Ovations

The final "Allegretto grazioso" was spirited and often fiery. The concerto drew tremendous ovations from the audience of 9,820.

Thursday will offer a full evening of Gershwin by the Boston "Pops" under Arthur Fiedler with Earl Wild as soloist. The final Tanglewood weekend has Jorge Bolet and Gary Graffma an piano soloists on Friday and Saturday, and Eleanor Steber, John McCollum and Martial Singher as vocalists with the chorus and orchestra in Berlioz's "The Damnation of Faust" on the final Sunday afternoon.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 101,427

AUG 7 1960

Music: Boston Symphony At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The public Saturday morning rehearsals by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood are getting to be pretty hectic affairs.

A week ago, soprano soloist Eleanor Steber came on stage some time after the rehearsal for the finale from Beethoven's Ninth Symphony had started.

It was later explained that she and her car had been detained at the main gate. Very few vehicles are allowed on the Tanglewood grounds.

More Complications

Yesterday there was more complication. Piano soloist Eugene Istomin didn't appear until hopelessly behind schedule.

He gave a performance last night of Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 2 in B Flat Major, Opus 83. Balance of the program played by the Boston Symphony, Charles Munch conducting, was Beethoven's "Prometheus" overture, and Symphony No. 2 for Large Orchestra and Chamber Orchestra by the young French contemporary composer, Henri Dutilleux.

Had Promise

The rehearsal yesterday, attended by 3,793, had great promise. Istomin was to be heard in the Brahms concerto with Munch, and pianist Leon Fleisher in Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto, with the orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux.

Two conductors, two pianists in two highly - contrasted works.

The piano was set up for the Brahms concerto and Istomin, but at 10:05 a.m. (five minutes late) Munch came out and launched into Handel's "Water Music Suite, which is scheduled for next weekend.

Never Again

We probably will never again see a conductor lead an orchestra while periodically watching entrances to the Tanglewood music shed for a missing soloist.

Next Saturday night will be time enough to report on Handel's "Water Music." Suffice to say that it received a casual going over yesterday.

The Handel was finished and still no Istomin. Saturday morning is a paying audience (the orchestra's pension fund) so music must be played. Munch continued with Beethoven's "Prometheus."

Rumors Plenty

Backstage rumors were plentiful and most of them inaccurate. Istomni was "indisposed" — he "thought the rehearsal was to begin at noon."

The fact is that he was delayed in travel from the Midwest and reached the music shed about the time that Fleisher was scheduled to rehearse the Beethoven concerto with Monteux. Munch departed, but returned later and the orchestra got overtime.

Monteux, the venerable octogenarian, had his piano soloist and a tremendous audience of ecstatic birds that chirped their admiration.

Judging by Monteux' facial expressions, he was delighted.

Last night's perfect weather and an inviting program attracted an audience of 9,325.

The orchestra gave a resounding performance of Beethoven's "Prometheus." In the introduction was tone of the utmost refinement from all quarters.

Unusual Vitality

Munch injected unusual vitality into the main body of the overture, giving the feeling that it was purposefully headed toward a clearly - marked climax.

Accents that enliven the rhythm were soundly applied changes of volume were instantaneous and perfectly pronounced. In fact, the overture's "Bon Vivant" character was the supermost impression, leaving traces of Mozart craftsmanship coupled with Rossini elan.

Dedicated to the memory of Natalie and Serge Koussevitzky, Dutilleux' second symphony was world-premiered last year by the Boston Symphony and Munch.

Work for Two

This is a work for two orchestras. The large one is in the background, and the chamber group of twelve players placed in a semicircle between the conductor and the main orchestra.

The Dutilleux is a gorgeous tapestry in glaring but extreme tonal colors.

It's initiated with a figure in percussion to which strings add eerie sounds. Soon the brasses contribute their pomposity, concert master Richard Burgin had something interesting to say, and a state of general chaos was launched ameliorated by the same strange tonal mixtures as at the beginning.

Rapid Progress

In last night's performance, progress was rapid into raucous, wailing motives harsh dissonances abetted by timpani, tinkling passages in celesta and harpsichord, and other incidents that touched the borderline of violence.

Some of the harmonies were so close as to reassemble tone clusters yet none of it was repellent, mainly because of magical instrumental shadings that Dutilleux concocted from the modern French school.

There was great beauty in the slow movement, supplied with unique combinations such as solo in one viola (played by Joseph De Pasquale), thick chordal background in reeds, and light explosions in the brasses.

The finale spurted out with brutality in crashing percussion and brasses played to the bursting point. Rhythms were out in the open so that one's feet were kept busy while ears were receiving what we suspect some of the audience considered to be injuries.

To summarize it, the entire work might be catalogued as essentially original—with insinuations of Ravel-style sophistication, Stravinsky idioms and Latin-American rhythms prodding away in the background.

Pierre Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony in this afternoon's concert. In addition to the Beethoven concerto with Leon Fleisher as soloist will be Ralph Vaughan Williams' Fantasia on a theme by Thomas Tallis, and Brahms' Fourth Symphony.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

AUG 8 1960

Tanglewood Draws 24,481; Istomin and Fleicher Play

The Tanglewood Music Shed in Lenox counted a total attendance of 24,481 this weekend, a crowd only slightly reduced by ominous weather warnings, as Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux, alternately conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, gave interpretations of works of Beethoven, Brahms, Ralph Vaughn Williams and Henri Dutilleux.

Saturday Concert

Saturday evening's concert, opening with the overture to Beethoven's "The Creatures of Prometheus," played to an audience of 9,325. Symphony No. 2 for Large Orchestra and Chamber Orchestra by Henry Dutilleux, followed the Beethoven performance, also under the baton of Charles Munch. The evening's soloist, pianist Eugene Istomin, completed the concert with Brahm's Concerto No. 2 in B-flat Major.

An audience of 9,820 was on hand yesterday afternoon to greet Pierre Monteux, who directed the Boston Symphony Orchestra in an interpretation of "Fantasia on a theme by William Tallis," by Ralph Vaughn Williams.

Leon Fleicher

Completing yesterday's performance — and the weekend's three-concert schedule — was pianist Leon Fleicher, who offered Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto.

On Friday evening, the third series of major festival performances opened with a concert attended by 5,336.

148

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 8 1960

Music Review

Tanglewood Concerts

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE LAST concerts of the weekend at Tanglewood offered two programs that conformed remarkably to a single formula and with many other factors of similarity. Charles Munch, the musical director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted the Saturday night concert. He yielded the baton yesterday afternoon to guest conductor Pierre Monteux.

Each program included a concerto in which the soloist was one of the outstanding members of the elite new clique of young American pianists who have established a new standard of artistry in contemporary American music. Saturday night Eugene Istomin played the second Brahms concerto and yetserday Leon Fleisher the Beethoven third.

* * *

THERE WAS another striking feature of the programs. Composers always are seeking means and methods of extending the vocabulary of music and of exploring potentialities of the instruments with which they work. Saturday night Munch played the second symphony of Henri Dutilleux, written on commission of the Boston Orchestra in celebration of their 75th anniversary, and also with the assistance of the Koussevitzky Music Foundation. Dutilleux dedicated it to the memory of Serge and Natalie Koussevitzky.

Dutilleux places a semi-circle of 12 soloists from the ranks of the orchestra before the conductor, and the main orchestra is disposed in a wider arc beyond them. There is occasion for each group — the chamber ensemble and the larger orchestra —to be heard alone and together, and the resultant sonorities produce effects which, while not exactly novel, are provocative. Dutilleux's harmonies, however, are not pioneering, but his use of the instruments involves weird, aeolian flights rather than strictly conventional lines.

The 44-year-old composer flew from France to be present at the performance, and Munch called him to the stage to share the demonstration the audience seemed eager to accord him.

* * *

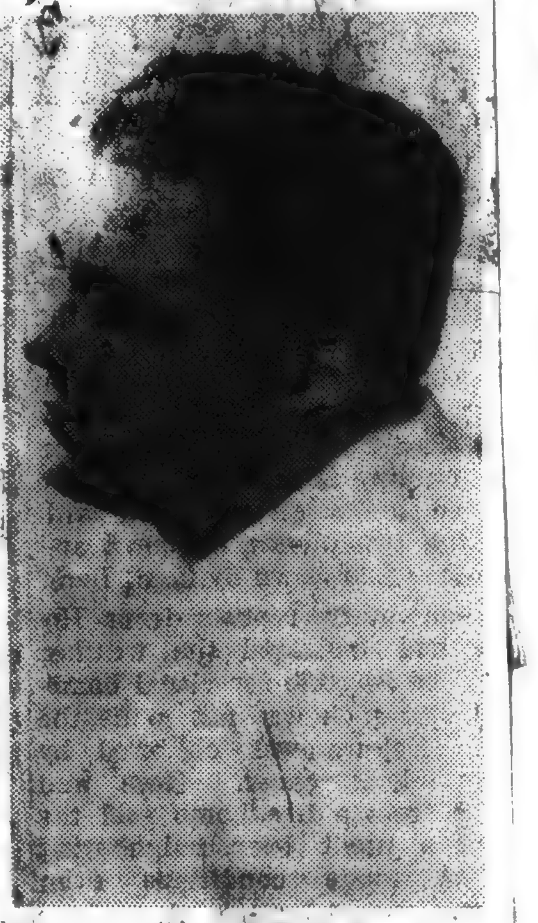
YESTERDAY afternoon Monteux played a shorter number, but one which also ventured in the same previously little-tred path. Vaughan-Williams 50 years ago attempted a Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis for a double string orchestra. It is scored for an orchestra divided into three sections—the full body of strings, a small orchestra of nine players and a solo quartet. These three bodies are used in various ways, sometimes playing as one body, sometimes antiphonally and sometimes accompanying each other.

This is now an accepted part of the orchestral literature, and, we must say, is a lusciously gratifying piece when played by the rich strings of the Bostonians.

* * *

EACH CONDUCTOR had a Brahms work on his program: Monteux the fourth symphony and Munch the piano concerto which is really also a symphony. Monteux played his Brahms spaciously and unhurried. It was distinguished by tonal grandeur. Even at this contemplative pace, however, he anticipated some of the ritards; but as a rule kept faithfully to the score's indications.

Both conductors are past masters of the art of accompanying a soloist, and thus both artists benefitted by the unusual support each leader was able to supply. The Beethoven of yesterday afternoon is in a much more classical manner than the profusely bountiful Brahms. The slow movement of the Beethoven is a deeply reverent avowal. Its counterpart in the Brahms has the heavenly cello solo which Samuel Mayes, principal cellist of the orchestra, played with exquisite sensitivity.



Eugene Istomin

* * *

NO PIANIST'S strength is in excess of what is demanded in the Brahms first movement. Some sections actually require or benefit from a ruthless barbarity, others burgeon under hands of tender grace. Each artist generated terrific excitement, and it pleased the audience to release an expression of their delight in the uninhibited manner which is one of the pleasures of Tanglewood.

Munch opened his Saturday program with the Beethoven overture to his ballet music "Die Geschopfe des Prometheus." This coming weekend will be the final set of concerts of this season. Attendance figures have been high up to now, although this factor varies much as stock market quotations. The character of the programs has been stimulating, and the performances in most cases brilliant. The only part of the Festival enterprise on which the management seems to need prodding is the Berkshire Music Center, the school which was envisioned as a complement to the concerts by the Boston Orchestra. There is evidence of malnutrition in this section of Tanglewood activities. It is too important to be neglected, and it is earnestly hoped that a thorough analysis with a view of reinvigorating this project will be undertaken and its findings activated before another season rolls around.

Eagle 8/2/60

Music Review

Wild Night at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE SECOND of the two concerts of contemporary music presented at Tanglewood under the auspices of the Fromm Music Foundation proved to be one of the most exciting events of the Berkshire Festival season.

The work which evoked the greatest curiosity was a "Ricercare and Doubles" written last year by Peter Maxwell Davies, a 25-year-old Englishman. This is for reed quartet, French horn, viola, cello and harpsichord, and has been performed only once before in this country. It is a jerky, fragmentary composition in serial technic after Webern. We cannot claim to have discerned its direction, let alone its purpose, and from the manner of the performance it was not apparent that the musicians penetrated it any deeper than this listener.

We must have faith and give it credence for its serious goal, but it will never "soothe the savage breast."

* * *

BUT THE WORK which was the peak of the evening was the "Circles" of Luciano Berio, for voice, harp and percussion. This was a first performance and was a commission by the Fromm Music Foundation. The vocalist was Cathy Berberian, the composer's wife, and no limit should be imposed on the credit due her for the deep impression the performance made.

Berio is a pioneer in sound, and when the artists were distributed amid the musical impedimenta which filled the stage of the Theater-Concert Hall, it was evident that we were in for a new experience. The vocalist took her place at the front center of the stage with her music, printed, or drawn, on large cardboards placed on two adjacent music stands. To the rear of the stage were two percussionists with 27 various instruments and a harp placed between them.

* * *

BERIO'S MUSIC is based on three poems of e.e. cummings. The vocalist sings, speaks and whispers. Miss Berberian is a master of graphically conveyed expressiveness. Her initial "sting" was stabbed so that the "ing" hummed with the mouth closed. The harp echos the sound with pedal sustained, and then follows the delineation of the poems in which the meaning is depicted with means hitherto, so far as we can remember, never before utilized nor thought to be capable for such dramatic stimulation.

Berio, brought to Tanglewood in 1952 on a Koussevitzky scholarship, is back this year on the composition faculty of the Berkshire Music Center. His imaginative music is fascinating, although we are sure that the vocalist compounded the interest the score contains. There is a degree of improvisation allowed, and there is no assurance that a second performance would be a duplication, even within fallible human capacities. Miss Berberian dominated the performance by her personal magnetism.

* * *

THE PERCUSSION players stood in a sea of instruments, but it would be an error to think of the sounds they produced as merely rhythmic. There was far more substance and color to them than that. Miss Berberian moved on occasion to two other braces of stands, also with the same huge cardboards. She gestured at times to intensify the meaning of the words and music, and at other times to replace a conductor. Among the instruments which the percussionists used were bundles of fasces hung from parrot perches within a circle. These they squeezed and swung. Mobiles of glass were gently put into motion by the vocalist.

Berio has been a Joyce champion and his involvement with cummings, spelled without ease, is a natural step. How he portrays a word like

"THuNdeRB loSSo!M"

and how Miss Berberian vocalizes it is incredible. The audience gave the artist and the composer spontaneously enthusiastic acclaim.

* * *

NOT TO BE overlooked was the masterly and forceful piano playing of Paul Jacobs in the Roger Sessions second sonata, and the performance of the Stravinsky septet and the Martimu sextet (this 1932 commission of Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge) by musicians of the Boston Symphony conducted by Richard Burgin.

The influence the Fromm Foundation exercises at Tanglewood is one of the greatest forces for musical exploration in effect at the famous institution. Now in its fifth year at the Berkshire Festival it comes nearest to bringing to fruition the ideals for which the Center was intended.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

AUG 7 1960

PIANIST PLEASES AUDIENCE OF 9325 AT TANGLEWOOD

Koussevitzky Memorial Work Also Performed At Festival

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—Clear skies, a full moon, pianist Eugene Istomin and the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch drew an audience of 9325 to Tanglewood Saturday night. This was no record audience but it was an enthusiastic one, and rightly so, for there was some mighty fine music making.

Beethoven Opening

The concert opened with a big, spacious, full-toned performance of the overture to Beethoven's "The Creatures of Prometheus." This is good theater music and the ballet was generally a success. Beethoven works his magic in every phrase, from the heroic moments of brasses and percussion, to the lyrical moments when only the murmur of strings is audible.

New to Tanglewood audiences was the "Symphony No. 2 for large orchestra and chamber orchestra" by Henri Dutilleux. Written on commission for the 75th anniversary of the Boston orchestra and for the Koussevitzky Music Foundation, the work was dedicated to the memory of Serge and Natalie Koussevitzky. It received its world premiere last year in Boston. Henri Dutilleux's music was first heard in the United States when his first symphony was introduced by Mr. Munch and the Boston orchestra in 1954.

More of Craftsmanship

As is the case with many commissioned works, this symphony reveals more craftsmanship than inspiration, but there is in it clever devices and what is characteristic of its three movements is that the discourse is constantly elaborated from a cellule, usually short, which constantly exercises its attraction. There is some charming thematic material in the quieter moments and lengthy passages which offer extreme contrast. This all makes for good listening. The performance was arresting and powerful and it ended with one glorious chord.

Eugene Istomin has been a favorite pianist with Tanglewood audiences for several seasons. Saturday night, playing Brahms "Concerto No. 2 in B-flat major" for piano and orchestra, Mr. Istomin again revealed what a fine and sensitive pianist he is. Brahms demands much of the pianist and Istomin has the necessary resources to meet the demands. He played the work in the grand manner, powerful, yet restrained and studded with sentiment which never became cloying. The orchestra collaboration was excellent and the performance will go down as one of the high lights of the Berkshire Festival season.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

AUG 8 1960

TANGLEWOOD PERFORMANCE IS MEMORABLE

9820 at Afternoon Concert; Week-End Attendance 24,481

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Let us begin with a few statistics about the three week-end concerts just completed. Weather conditions somewhat reduced the crowds, but the week-end total was 24,481 as against the 1959 same week-end total of 29,341. An audience of 9820 was on hand this afternoon to greet Pierre Monteux, the orchestra, and pianist Leon Fleisher.

Williams Work Beautiful

If one remembers only the glow and utter beauty of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's performance of the "Fantasia on a theme by Thomas Tallis" by Ralph Vaughan Williams this Sunday afternoon, the concert would still be a wondrous memory. Under the baton of Pierre Monteux, the Boston players were in top form and the double string orchestra which is employed for the Vaughan Williams work could hardly be duplicated anywhere for sheer beauty of sound.

That admirable pianist Leon Fleisher was the soloist in Beethoven's third piano concerto. Fleisher is a pianist of poise, sensitivity and technical assurance. There are those who feel that pianists have failed to generate much excitement this season but it should be remembered that the music shed holds 6000 persons, is open on three sides and that tones have a tendency to spread thus causing a certain lack of impact. Fleisher is not a pianist with a grand style, a style which is rapidly disappearing. He is a pianist of the sort who search for the inner meanings of a work, who pays meticulous attention to detail and who has all the technical equipment necessary to meet the demands of the composer.

In Complete Rapport

Mr. Monteux and Mr. Fleisher seemed in complete rapport during the performance. There was lucidity in the lengthy orchestral opening and a fine blend of tone as the pianist entered with the three strong C major scales. Immediately one realizes that one is meeting the expanding Beethoven who has brushed aside much of the conventional and is embarking on new experiences. The final rondo is a brilliant piece of writing, gay and exhuberant in the piano with the orchestra matching it in its voice. Fleischer provided [illegible] fine pianism, with notable collaboration from the orchestra.

As I write, Pierre Monteux and the Boston players are receiving a magnificent ovation for a tremendous performance of Brahms Fourth Symphony. It was a performance of heroic stature, superbly proportioned and sung from the first note to the last. Too often, conductors are prone to bang out this work but Monteux kept everything in line. I have seldom heard the Boston Symphony play with greater brilliance, tonal opulence and in so complete rapport with a conductor. Surely, thus far, the Berksire Music Festival has had no finer orchestral performance and it is doubtful if it

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

AUG 14 1960

Second Thoughts On Music

Tanglewood Performances Continue to Be Outstanding

Munch, Monteux and Kirchner Conduct Fine Concerts; Electronic Music Unenlightening

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Several performances stand out as one remembers the three week-end concerts of Aug. 5-7. Charles Munch provided a bravura performance of the Mendelssohn "Scotch" symphony on Friday night and Monteux provided a relaxed, singing performance of Brahms' fourth symphony Sunday afternoon. Leon Kirchner conducted his own "Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion."

Details Were Clear

The acoustics of the Music Shed are so fine that every detail of the Mendelssohn symphony was clear. The Boston symphony players responded ~~nobly to this~~ music and everything was handsomely displayed. Brass and percussion blared forth with Wagnerian brilliance, while the incomparable strings and woodwinds sang beautifully. Mr. Munch sensed the drama in this symphony and communicated it to the listeners.

Pierre Monteux brought his years of experience and his great musicianship to Brahms' fourth symphony. There is always a temptation to play this work in bombastic manner from beginning to end. Not so, with Monteux. He provided a splendid vitality throughout, but the music always sang. It was a relaxed reading, while lacking nothing in depth of feeling.

Leon Kirchner has had his piano sonata played here by Leon Fleisher during the pianist's sonata recital last week. Charles Munch invited the 41-year-old composer to conduct his own "Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion." This is one of the more grateful contemporary works we have heard here. Mr. Kirchner is also an able conductor. The work has all the brio that the word "Toccata" indicates, while the orchestra medium offers ample opportunity for the presentation of these characteristics.

The soloists during the week end were violinist Ruggiero Ricci and pianists Eugene Istomin and Leon Fleisher. Mr. Munch and Mr. Ricci combined to offer a superb performance of the Sibelius violin concerto. Mr. Munch and Mr. Istomin provided a performance of Brahms' "Piano Concerto No. 2 in B flat major," which many listeners felt did not quite come off. They complained of a lack of excitement in the reading.

We do not think that Brahms' second piano concerto is a vehicle of every pianist. It requires tremendous reserve power and a searching imagination. On the other hand, it must be remembered that the Music Shed is huge and open on three sides. Tones tend to spread and the full impact is often lost. We feel that within such limitations, the performance was an excellent one, but that playing some other work, Istomin might have been more effective.

Leon Fleisher is having a fine season here. He is an able pianist and sensitive and imaginative as an interpreter. The Beethoven "Piano Concerto No. 3 in C minor was an ideal vehicle for him and with the admirable collaboration of Pierre Monteux and the Boston players a fine performance resulted. Fleisher is not a pianist in the great tradition (the group is fast disappearing) but he is a pianist of great technical skill and intelligence. His readings penetrate the score and the message comes through cleanly.

Incomparable Reading

While on the subject of orchestral music, let us not forget the incomparable beauty of Monteux's reading of the Vaughan-Williams "Fantasie on a Theme" by Thomas Tallis, for Double String Orchestra. One heard the Boston players at their best. Surely such strings are not equalled in any other orchestra, or was it the Monteux magic that made them sound the way they did?

Charles Munch offered a first Tanglewood hearing of the "Symphony No. 2, for Large Orchestra and Chamber Orchestra" by Henri Dutilleux. The composer flew in from Paris to hear the performance. Introduced to the audience, the applause was long and enthusiastic. Was it for the music or the composer?

The writing is ingenious and often effective. To the large orchestra which is normally constituted, there is a real chamber orchestra of 12 musicians who are placed in a semicircle between the conductor and the main orchestra. Very often the two instrumental forms are fused or superimposed and elsewhere problems of timbre as well as form have determined the choice.

Wagner was represented Friday night when Mr. Munch presented excerpts from Act II of "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg"; a performance which was tonally opulent and tremendously effective. The same miight also be written of his reading of Beethoven's Overture to "The Creatures of Prometheus."

Special Concert

Monday night, I attended a special concert of electronic music presented by Lusicano Berio, composer in residence at Tanglewood. It was billed as the first electronic concert in the open air. Due to technical difficulties, we believe, the concert was held in the theater where a small audience gathered to be surrounded by speakers and to be thoroughly enveloped in music, if that is what the wierd, fantastic noises which emanted from the speakers can be called.

Electronics can certainly produce strange sounds. The tapes used were by such composers as Mr. Berio, Andre Boucouretchliev, Edgard Varese, Bruna Maderna, Vladimir Ussachevsky and Karlheinz Stockhausen. They were taped in various European studios. In spite of titles, all sounded pretty much alike, as single tones only appeared to be used, ranging from tiny tinkles to the agonies of the damned. It was all very confusing and, to this listener, unenlightening.

There is a segment of Tanglewood audiences which deserves special mention and commendation. These are the number of handicapped who come to every concert. Some come in wheel chairs, others, with braced legs, move so slowly to their seats, while still others are led by those who see better.

Thus they come and, for a while, forget their handicaps in the joy of listening to music. There are true music lovers. No effort is too great, if music is at the other end.

Sometimes when performances are particularly eloquent, we like to think that Dr. Munch and the Boston players are playing just for them. Perhaps they are.

Air View of Tanglewood Where Festival Ends Today

Another Berkshire Music Festival comes to a close at Tanglewood in Lenox this afternoon when Dr. Charles Munch conducts the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Hector Berlioz "Damnation of Faust." Singers Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, Martial Singher and the Festival Chorus will participate. The program begins at 2.30 and will conclude the Festival's 20th year. An aerial view of the Berkshire Festival grounds at Tanglewood is shown here.

Eagle 8/6/60

Music Review

Ruggiero Ricci Returns to the Berkshires

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FIFTH weekend, and last but one, of the Berkshire Festival got off to a start with unfavorable weather last night yet it attracted an audience of 5,336. Between the Mendelssohn third symphony in A minor, and excerpts from the third act of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger von Nurnberg," were two novelties for the Berkshire Festival although one was far from a late composition.

When Sibelius came touring through the Berkshires in 1914, his violin concerto was already some 11 years old. Last night Ruggiero Ricci gave it an astounding performance. It was Ricci's second appearance in the county—he was brought to Pittsfield in recital some 26 years ago as a boy of 14. He had been one of a brace of prodigies, (the other was Yehudi Menuhin) whom Louis Persinger, the famous teacher in San Francisco, launched shortly before he, himself, came to this county as first violinist of the South Mountain string quartet sponsored by Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge.

Ruggiero Ricci: "an astounding performance"

* * *

RICCI PLAYS with disarming ease and nonchalance and it takes an instant to appreciate the passionate fervor with which he endows every note he touches. His beautifully tempered intonation and the big tone he produces allows him to play with an abandon seldom equalled in fiddledom.

Sibelius wrote music of symphonic proportions for the orchestra and Munch propelled his musicians with driving insistence, but relinquished the floor when the soloist's opportunities were uppermost. Ricci's command of the fingerboard and the grasp and warmth of his double stops were uncanny. He throws caution away in the use of his marvelous bow and allows an occasional roughness, but that is a small price to pay for the elan and forward thrust of his playing. Still, in the adagio central movement he played with heartbreaking appeal.

* * *

THE CONTEMPORARY novelty on the program was the toccata for strings, solo winds and percussion of Leon Kirchner. Munch gave the baton to the composer for this single work, which takes about 14 minutes. Smaller works of Kirchner have been played on Tanglewood programs this year and last, but this was the first opportunity to hear his orchestral writing.

This one was played on the orchestra's recent tour to Japan and conducted then by the orchestra's assistant conductor and concertmaster, Richard Burgin. On those occasions the assistant concertmaster moved to the first chair and played the solos Kirchner allots him. Last night in a chivalrous gesture, Burgin withdrew in favor of his assistant, Alfred Krips, who acquitted himself with distinction as did the half-dozen wind instrument players for whom Kirchner wrote solo parts.

* * *

KIRCHNER always has something to say, but here he seemed at times to gush with overabundance. He writes well for the instruments and gives them long undulant lines which more often get very involved than remain transparently perceptible. The balance between the strings and the diminished wind forces was a happy choice and the composer was equally felicitous between giving the performers ample liberty and retaining confident control.

Public Events

MILLERTON NEWS REPUBLICAN
Thursday, August 4, 1960

Ruggiero Ricci, violinist, will make his Tanglewood debut with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the Berkshire Festival concert on Friday evening (August 5, 8:30). Mr. Ricci will play the first Tanglewood performance of the Sibelius Violin Concerto.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 57,341

AUG 8 1960

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Yesterday's audience of 9,820 at Tanglewood confirmed that the biggest ovations at the Berkshire Music Festival are given to Pierre Monteux as guest conductor of the Boston Symphony.

The weekend's total attendance was 24,481, as compared to 29,541 last year.

Charles Munch has been conducting two concerts each weekend to Monteux' one.

Yesterday's program: Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis," Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3 in C minor, Opus 37, with Leon Fleisher as Soloist, and Brahms' Symphony No.4 in E minor, Opus 98.

Unwanted Soloist

There was also an unwanted soloist right up to intermission yesterday.

Not since Ottorino Respighi included a nightingale's song (Recorded) in his "Pines of Rome" has a bird played a more prominent role in a symphony concert. Yesterday it was an English sparrow that lustily shrieked from beam to beam in the music shed. Without the slightest concern for Monteux' beat or musical dynamics.

It must have been a real tribulation for Pianist Fleisher, particularly during the slow, gentle movement of the Beethoven Concerto — and it certainly was a nuisance to the audience.

Great Warmth

Sounds of great warmth and expressiveness were produced by the strings in Williams' "Fantasia". Vibrating chords were perfectly formed. Within short phrases and some sinble beats, variances, nuances, and shadings were galore.

Solo viola was glowing employed by Joseph De Pasquale — also Richard Burgin's violin and Samuel Mayes' cello. The work reached moments of sound affluence without heavy bowing.

Over it all soared the modal, religious thought-provoking melodies, and it ended with a phrase that evaporated into stillness.

Piano Concerto

Monteux and the orchestra set the stage for a studious and objective reading of Beethoven's third piano concerto. There were finely polished phrases and meticulous treatment of details.

Fleisher accepted this. The only instances of instability appeared at the offset of the first movement and during passages of the third.

He's a highly individual pianist. Quite devoid of mannerisms except that he balances his left foot in midair during vigorous passages. His tone was lightly liquid in rippling passages, trills were mathematically accurate in alternations, and not mere flutterings between two tones. In the first and third movement cadenzas, there was some tugging at the bit to inflate their potentials with a somewhat hammering result.

The slow movement tended to be sentimental. Almost in the sugary style of a John Field nocturne. Monteux restored order in this tender chapter, not the least contribution being James Papousakis' flute solo.

In the finale, Fleisher was emphatic in his accents and fairly reserved in tempo. He played the notes accurately and with elan. But it didn't get far beyond the province of skilled mechanics.

Monteux led the orchestra in a "grand manner" performance of the Brahms Fourth. His speed for the first movement might have been thought sluggish. But as it progressed, the clarity with which materials were brought out into the light justified his method.

Unique Feature

A unique feature was Monteux' order for suppressed brasses in favor of melody-carrying strings-also fine exposition of woodwind solos. In so doing, he laid stress on its three prevailing qualities-Majesty, soaring melody and meditation.

The theme of the second movement was expressively addressed by horns and woodwinds in the style of a slow, serious waltz. In the third movement, Monteux permitted maximum penetration from the brasses, vigorously bowed strings and heavy support from timpani. The quiet chorale portion was brought out as a polished, poised wind ensemble.

The finale received, in every sense, a heroic performance.

Thursday night is "Tanglewood on Parade," with Arthur Fiedler conducting and Earl Wild, piano soloist. It will be an all Gershwin program.

The festival begins its final week Friday night. Monteux will conduct the Boston Symphony in Beethoven's Second Symphony, and Stravinsky's "Firebird" suite. Jorge Bolet will be soloist in Liszt's Piano Concerto in E flat.

Herald Tribune (m)
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Circ. 325,065

'AUG 3 1960

Luciano Berio's 'Circles' Presented at Tanglewood

Fromm Foundation Concert

Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.
Boston Symphony Orchestra and Guest Artists.
The program:
Second Sonata for Piano....Roger Sessions
(Piano: Paul Jacobs)
Ricercare and Doubles on "To Many a Well"................Peter Maxwell Davies
Circles for Voice, Harp and Percussion (first performance)..........Luciano Berio (Voice: Cathy Berberian)
Septet ....Stravinsky
Sextet ....Martinu

By Jay S. Harrison

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 2.—I believe I have started a new trend. It came to light at a special concert of contemporary chamber works presented last night at anglewood under the auspices of the From Music Foundation and it is, to put it succinctly, a lulu. Also it is as interesting as it is disquieting, the roots of that disquiet stemming directly from the nature of a single piece, Luciano Berio's "Circles for Voice, Harp and Percussion," which had its world premiere.

Now "Circles," if I read its intentions correctly (and I am by no means certain that I do), is a kind of "Musique Concrete" in reverse. "Musique Concrete," you may remember, utilized as its prime operative tool a tape recorder, which was made to capture all sorts of natural, physical sound such as train whistles, the shattering of a glass, shrieks of ecstasy, and the like. These, then, were sifted and sorted in an electronic lab, with the ultimate intention of making them emerge like recognizable music — however odd.

Berio Does Opposite

But in "Circles" Mr. Berio has done quite the opposite. He has taken all manner of true musical instruments and made them play so that they seem to be imitating natural, physical sounds. At any event, with music, as the term is commonly understood, his work has absolutely nothing to do. Perhaps if I describe it the picture will come into focus.

The voice part, which concerns itself with three poems o e. e cummings, is not designe for singing. Instead, the pe former—in this case Cathy Be berian, who was just plain won derful — grunts, groans, hum moans, barks, hoots, make portamenti from register to reg ister. Mind you, all of this i done to specified pitches, bu the the character of the voca offering is anti-song in the com mon sense.

Well-Outfitted Percussionists

Further, there are on stag two percussionists who, in addi tion to presiding over the run-of-the-mill type battery, also have at their disposal bongos, marimbas, gourds, hunks of wood hung on a string, bits of glass similarly outfitted, and a huge variety of other bizarre noisemakers. And at times the two percussionists seemed called upon to whack as many as five of these within the second, thereby causing them to outdo in sheer industry the proverbial one-armed paperhanger with the hives.

The harpist, too, was kept mighty busy, what with the edgy and nervous atonal complex she was made to pluck. At any event, the sight of the whole business had audience risibilities rising all over the hall.

But the sound of it did not, for Mr. Berio, thirty-five year-old Italian now resident at Tanglewood, has a remarkable ear for effective sonority. Music, after all, is no more than organized tone; if it happens that the tone involved resembles the demise of a piece of crockery and the composer can still fit it into an artistic context, then I am all for him.

Edifice of Exotic Sound

Mr. Berio, for his part, has with great care constructed an edifice of exotic sound—not all of it musical, to be sure, but all of it vigorous and fresh and alive. Even the words of Mr. Cummings are twisted into so many patches of color. Their literal meaning is to Mr. Berio of no importance; their sonority weight is his prime concern. At all costs, in the final analysis, "Circles" comes out as a piece that can be listened to and liked. Strange it may be and certainly is, but that is no reason to tick it off as a wild-eyed experiment.

The other unfamiliar work of the night was Peter Maxwell Davies' Ricercare and Doubles on "To many a well." Mr. Davies, at twenty-five, is said to be one of England's fairest fair-haired boys, which, I am afraid, speaks frightfully for the current state of English musical health. His piece, for eight instruments, is a post-Webern exploration of the twelve-tone methodology, even to the point where no more than a handful of notes are ever played consecutively by any soloist; and, naturally, the extreme ranges of each instrument Mr. Davies finds more congenial than their more acceptable and comfortable registers.

Fuque and Variations

The title, incidentally, Ricercare and Doubles, can be roughly translated as Fuque and Variations, though without score in hand none of it can be followed with any ease. Not that I, for one, really care to follow it, since it seems to me fidgety, cerebral, aurally bothersome and expressively awkward. It is, moreover, the kind of music that can be made with out the composer having heard a note of it in his ear. It is paper-music, slide-rule-music. No one, so far as I am aware, has ever accused a slide-rule of having much of a heart.

The remainder of the program, all of it superbly played by members of the Boston Symphony, consisted of rather familiar works by established masters in their field. The numbers were, at the date of their composition, considered somewhat advanced, though today they present no more listening problems than "Comin' Thru The Rye." Whether, in future, the same will be said of Messrs. Berio and Davies is anybody's guess. Anybody's. Not mine.

Times (m)
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Circ. 614,169

AUG 8 1960

Music: 2 U. S. Pianists at Tanglewood

Fleisher and Istomin Heard on Week-End

Monteux and Munch Conduct Programs

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 7—The Berkshire Music Festival ended its fifth week with two orchestral concerts that drew a combined audience of 9,145. Charles Munch led one and Pierre Monteux the other, and both featured a young American pianist.

Mr. Munch's concert was last night and his pianist was Eugene Istomin, who had made four previous appearances here with the Boston Symphony. He played the Brahms Second Concerto. Mr. Monteux's pianist this afternoon was Leon Fleisher, whose only previous orchestral appearance in Tanglewood was in 1958. Mr. Fleisher played Beethoven's Third Concerto.

Leon Fleisher

•

Mr. Monteux's concert also had an unwanted soloist—a bird with a single note in its song, and that note like the creaking of a rusty hinge. Insistently the bird cheeped in the rafters, ninety-nine cheeps a minute, and it was always in a different key from the music. Once or twice at the beginning it was a cheerful rustic note, but as it persisted it became maddening.

Mr. Fleisner's performance was all the more remarkable because of that overhead competition. The pianist retained his composure, and, what was even more remarkable, his inwardness. He seemed totally immersed in the music. His subtle and poetic playing in the largo was especially lovely. He matched the poetry of this movement with the spirit and temperament and sometimes delicious lightness of the others.

The applause was prolonged and one sensed in it enthusiasm for the pianist's gallantry as well as appreciation for his musicianship.

Mr. Istomin's performance in the Brahms was far more objective and external. He had the strength for it and the big line, but there was little color in his tone and not very much temperament in his playing. But he, too, got a big hand from the audience.

•

The contemporary work of the two concerts was Henri Dutilleux's Symphony No. 2 for Large Orchestra and Chamber Orchestra. It was led by Mr. Munch, who introduced it to Boston and New York audiences last season. This was its Tanglewood première and the 44-year-old French composer was present to acknowledge the substantial applause.

The symphony itself is a substantial one—that is, in its dimensions. It runs to thirty-one minutes. It uses a twelve-member chamber orchestra. It calls on the combined forces for some massive climaxes and it is obviously ambitious in its emotional scope.

Whether it was always successful in filling out its big form with adequate substance is an open question. This listener felt that it was not in either the first movement, which was greatly influenced by Ravel and Debussy, or in the last one, which showed suggestions of American jazz. But the long middle movement, the andantino sostenuto, was impressive. It had the seriousness of thought and feeling to justify its scope and, as it died away in the final strings, one had the experience of having been taken on a journey of some importance.

•

Mr. Munch's other selection from the standard repertory was Beethoven's Overture to "Die Geschoepfe des Prometheus." Mr. Monteux's were Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis" and Brahms' Symphony No. 4.

The weather was beautiful for both concerts, with the moon being full last night. The festival will be fortunate if such weather continues for its final week.

Sunday Times
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Circ. 1,221,337

AUG 7 1960

Music: Modern Program

Karl-Birger Blomdahl of Sweden Is the Master of Ceremonies at Tanglewood

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 5—Every Friday at the Berkshire Music Festival there is a program of contemporary music, with a composer serving as master of ceremonies. This week the speaker was Karl-Birger Blomdahl, whom Aaron Copland introduced as "the outstanding composer of Sweden."

Tieless, with his shirt open at the collar, the stocky Swedish composer paced the stage of the Chamber Music Hall as he talked informally. In his hand he held the stump of a cigar; the regulations would not let him smoke. A chipmunk came in to see what was going on. The attentive audience enjoyed the view of trees and hedges that could be seen because a big sliding panel of the west wall was rolled back.

Sweden, Mr. Blomdahl said, encouraged its composers to work in their own country. He indicated that, thanks largely to the state radio, it was not so difficult for young composers there to get performances. Hilding Rosenberg, he said, was "the grand old man of Swedish music." And the younger generation was sharply divided into the very advanced and those opposed to nearly all the new developments.

•

This year the composer in residence at Tanglewood is Luciano Berio, an Italian who writes a good deal of electronic music and who has composed a whole program of it to be given on Monday.

One therefore expected a few fireworks when Mr. Blomdahl said he thought electronic music was now "in a very primitive stage of development" and that he would not dream of having the electronic music he composed for his opera "Aniara" performed outside of its operatic context.

But, in the question-and-answer period that followed the performance of three of Mr. Blomdahl's works, no one was in an argumentative mood. The matter was not brought up again.

Mr. Blomdahl's works were not of the sort to stir controversy in an audience so musically sophisticated, but each was impressive in its delicate sonorities, its personal expressiveness, its often dark-hued melancholy and its individuality. The Dance Suite, which made a percussionist the third member of a trio with a clarinetist and a 'cellist, was the one that explored differing timbres most fully.

Allen Hovey was the student percussionist who sat in with Jerome Rosen and Donald McCall of the Fromm Fellowship Players to perform the suite. Paul Jacobs, pianist, joined Mr. Rosen and Mr. McCall for the Trio for Piano, Clarinet and 'Cello. And Mr. Jacobs accompanied Marguerite Willauer in the Five Songs.

•

Miss Willauer, an able soprano, is one of the "players" provided by the Fromm Music Foundation. It was the entry of this foundation into the Tanglewood picture in 1956 that made these contemporary programs possible. Mr. Copland, Mr. Berio, Leon Kirchner and Elliott Carter were the composers of previous Fridays. Next week it will be John Cage.

Mr. Kirchner is an associate in the composition department of the Berkshire Music Center. He was represented both as a composer and conductor in the big evening concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Shed. He led his Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion. Charles Munch conducted the rest of the program. It consisted of the Sibelius Violin Concerto, with Ruggiero Ricci as the soloist; excerpts from "Die Meistersinger" and Mendelssohn's "Scottish" Symphony.

Mr. Kirchner led his toccata with plenty of bounce and vitality, but it was Mr. Ricci who took the highest honors of the evening. This was his first appearance at Tanglewood and he made the most of it. From the start, his performance of the Sibelius concerto was a commanding one.

•

When the music was songful Mr. Ricci's lyricism was intense, but this was not solely a melodious reading, for the dramatic aspects of the concerto were also strikingly realized.

In fact, the violinist was the master of all the concerto's moods and always had the technical resources and the richness of tone—including a good deal of somberness—to meet the work on its own level.

Mr. Munch's accompaniment was on a high level, too, and conductor and violinist received an ovation.

152

NEW YORK, N.Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
D. 571,705 S. 778,562
AUG 8 1960

BERKSHIRE FESTIVAL

Big Tribute to Pierre Monteux

By MILES KASTENDIECK

TANGLEWOOD, LENOX, MASS., Aug. 8.—Pierre Monteux was lionized at yesterday's Berkshire Festival concert by a crowd of 9,820 persons. As he walked on stage, he received a tremendous ovation.

At the end of the concert another surged forth indicating full appreciation of what he represents and how much he gives them musically.

At 85 Mr. Monteux can bask in the warm reception he received especially here at Tanglewood. What other living conductor has inspired more general love among his listeners and his muscians? Both are assured that the essential nature of the music rather than the nature of the performance will claim his full attention.

That he gave to Vaughan Williams' Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis, Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto, and Brahms' Fourth Symphony. This was a concert where the listener could luxuriate in the florious sound of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, enhanced by the Talbot Memorial Canopy and in solid interpretations of this music. Everything fell into its proper proportion so readily that only the beauty of the moment mattered.

Fleisher Pleases

Leon Fleisher gave a very fine account of the concerto. His ability to color a phrase imparted much to the articulate aspect of his interpretation. He can communicate both virility and lyricism through a technical equipment admirably controlled. He has yet to express the true grandeur of the work even though he is obviously emotionally involved in it. Some of that involvement, incidentally, is too visually portrayed.

He was one of the three performers who made this a young-soloists' weekend. Ruggiero Ricci had played the Sibelius Violin Concerto on Friday night and Eugene Istomin the Brahms Second Piano Concerto on Saturday. Charles Munch conducted both evenings except for the few moments when Leon Kirchner led the orchestra in his "Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds, and Percussion" as he had done with the Bostonians in New York last season.

A weekend attendance of 24,481 may have run 5,000 short of a year ago, but the weather on Friday was bad. Only one series remains. This will terminate the festival's 23d season next Sunday with a performance of Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust" under Mr. Munch's direction. Mr. Monteux will conduct the Friday concert.

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
BAY NEWS
W. 11,909
AUG 6 1960

Monteux, Fiedler Ba[illegible] To Wave at Tangle[illegible]

American composer Leon Kirchner [illegible] cond[illegible] the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of his "Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion" Friday, August 5, at the Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

A teacher of musical composition at the Berkshire Music Center, 41-year-old Kirchner has previously conducted the orchestra in his "Toccata" in Boston, New York and Washington.

Charles Munch will conduct the balance of the Friday concert which will be given in the 6000-seat Music Shed at 8:30. At this concert violinist Ruggiero Ricci will make his first Berkshire Festival appearance in a performance of the Violin Concerto by Sibelius. The program will open with excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meister-singer" and conclude with the "Scotoh" Symphony by Felix Mendelsohn.

An all-Gershwin program conducted by ARTHUR FIEDLER with the Boston Pops will be performed at Tanglewood August 11.

On Saturday morning (August 6, 10:00) the orchestra's rehearsal will be opened to the public.

Henri Dutilleux's Symphony No. 2, will receive its first Tanglewood performance at the Saturday evening concert (August 6) 8:30). To complement the contemporary symphony, Charles Munch has scheduled Beethoven's Overture to "Prometheus" and the Piano Concerto No. 2 by Brahms, with Eugene Istomin, pianist.

CHARLES MUNCH

Pierre Monteux's guest at the orchestra's concert on Sunday afternoon (August 7, 2:30) will be pianist Leon Fleisher in a performance of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3. Monteux will open the program with "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis" by Vaughan Williams and to his orchestral appearance with the concert will conclude with Brahms' Fourth Symphony.

Fleisher will give a piano recital at Tanglewood in addition Monteux Wednesday evening (August 3) at 8:30 in the Theatre. The recital, for which Fleisher has donated his services, will benefit the Berkshire Music Center. Works to be performed in- [illegible] the Sonata in B Minor by Franz Liszt, Leon Kirchner's Sonata (1948), and the posthumous Sonata in B-flat by Schubert.

Pianist EUGENE ISTOMIN who will be heard in Brhams second Piano Concerto.

The Berkshire Music Center is the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music.

The world-premiere of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Port Town," will be performed Thursday, August 4, in the Music Shed. It was written by the Tanglewood opera department students under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

Special events on Thursday, August 4, begin at 4:30 P.M. with a performance of opera scenes in the Formal Gardens. Music by Tanglewood composition students will be performed by the Fromm Fellowship Players in the Theatre at 6 P.M. On the porch of the Main House, the Tanglewood Choir will be heard in a supper concert at 7 P.M.

LEON FLEISHER'S piano recital at Tanglewood will be devoted to sonatas.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in an all-Gershwin program on Thursday, August 11. The concert will be the second Berkshire Music Center benefit.

Earl Wild will be piano soloist. Featured on the program will be Gershwin's "An American in Paris," Concerto in F, "Rhapsody in Blue," "Strike Up the Band" and "Porgy and Bess."

Musical programs will be held daily for members of the Friends of the [illegible]

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
KINGS COURIER
W. 15,718
AUG 6 1960

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

Times 8/7/60

159

Whitestone

SEASON'S WIND-UP—Charles Munch, at right, rehearses Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" with the Berkshire Festival Chorus. The work, which will be given next Sunday afternoon with Mr. Munch conducting, will bring to a close the current series of concerts at Tanglewood.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121
AUG 14 1960

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 416,486

AUG 7 1960

Soloists at Tanglewood

Pianists Jorge Bolet and Gary Graffman will be soloists next week-end at the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood. Graffman then will make his Tanglewood debut.

GRAFFMAN

The Boston Pops Orchestra, Arthur Fiedler conducting and with Earl Wild as piano soloist, will present a Gershwin program Thursday evening to benefit the Berkshire Music Center's Scholarship Funds. The Festival will be concluded Sunday, Aug. 14, with Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust."

Programs of the week:

Wed. eve. at 8:30, Chamber Musi Hall. The Kroll Quartet. Haydn Quartet in C major, Op. 54, No. 2 Piston: Quartet No. 1; Beethoven Quartet in F major, "Rasoumovsky" No. 1.

Thurs. eve. at 8:30, Music Shed Boston Pops Orchestra, conducte by Arthur Fiedler; Earl Wild, pian soloist. Gershwin: "An American in Paris", Concerto in F, "Porgy and Bess", Symphonic Picture by Robert Russell Bennett; "Rhapsody in Blue", "Strike Up the Band".

Fri. eve., at 8:30, Music Shed, Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. Beethoven: Symphony in D major, No. 2; Liszt: Piano Concerto in E-flat, Jorge Bolet soloist; Stravinsky: "Firebird" Suite.

Sat. morning at 10, Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, open rehearsal.

Sat. eve. at 8:30, Music Shed. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Handel: Suite from the "Water Music"; Chopin: Piano Concerto in E minor, Gary Graffman soloist; Copland: First Symphony (the composer conducting).

Sunday, Aug. 14, at 2:30 p.m. Music Shed. Final concert. Boston Symphony Orchestra, Charles Munch conducting. Berlioz: "The Damnation of Faust", Festival Chorus; soloists: Eleanor Steber, soprano; John McCollum, tenor; Martial Singher, bass-baritone.

AUGUST 7, 1960 Tribune Section 4 5

Gary Graffman, pianist, who will be Saturday night's soloist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood.

Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Circ. 42,164

AUG 13 1960

Music

Sunday Concert to End Berkshire Season

by Alfred Burke

LOWELL — Tomorrow afternoon's concert at the Berkshire Festival will bring the brilliant season to a close. Dr. Charles Munch will direct the Boston Symphony orchestra in a program featuring the Berlioz "Damnation of Faust."

Eleanor Steber

The score will be performed by guest soloists Eleanor Steber, John McCollum and Martial Singher. The Festival Chorus will also appear in the program.

Miss Steber who was heard earlier in the season at the Festival and in the Community Series here is enjoying one of her best seasons. Mr. McCollum, a fine artist, has also appeared to advantage during the current season at Lenox. Mr. Singher who is one of the ranking baritones of our time was heard during the past year in opera in Paris and at the Mertopolitan.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

AUG 7 1960

Tanglewood Events

Today, at 2.30 p. m., Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Monteux conducting; Vaughan Williams: Fantasia on a theme by Thomas Tallis; Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 3, in C minor, Op. 37 (Leon Fleisher); Brahms: Symphony No. 4 in E minor, Op. 98.

Wednesday, Aug. 10, 8.30 p. m., Chamber Music Hall: The Kroll Quartet. Haydn: Quartet No. 2 in C major, Op. 54; Piston: Quartet No. 1; Beethoven: Quartet No. 1 in F major, Op. 59.

Thursday, Aug. 11, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed: Boston Pops, Arthur Fiedler. All-Gershwin: An American in Paris; Concerto in F, for Piano and Orchestra (Earl Wild); Porgy and Bess; A Symphonic Picture for Orchestra by Robert Russell Bennett; Rhapsody in Blue, for Piano and Orchestra (Earl Wild); Strike Up the Band.

Friday, Aug. 12, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Monteux conducting. Beethoven: Symphony No. 2 in D major, Op. 36; Liszt: Piano Concerto in E-flat major, No. 1; Stravinsky: "Firebird" Suite.

Saturday, Aug. 13, 10 a. m., Music Shed: Boston Symphony Open Rehearsal.

Saturday, Aug. 13, 8.30 p. m., Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting. Handel: "Water Music" Suite; Chopin: Piano Concerto in E minor, Op. 11 (Gary Graffman); Copland: First Symphony (Composer conducting).

Sunday, Aug. 14, 2.30 p. m., Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting. Berlioz: "The Damnation of Faust," Dramatic Legent, Op. 24 Chorus).
(Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, Martial Singher, Festival Chorus).

160

GREATER ROCHESTER
COMMERCE
ROCHESTER, N.Y.
MONTHLY 7,500
AUG 1960

Artists Series Bringing Royal Ballet to Eastman

The Royal Ballet, on its first American tour since 1957, will begin a four-week engagement at the Metropolitan Opera House on September 11. This summer the troupe from the Royal Opera, Covent Garden, London, is appearing at the Edinburgh Festival.

The Boston Symphony is now in its traditional summer season at Tanglewood in the Berkshires of Massachusetts —where good music lovers combine the enjoyment of one of the nation's top orchestras with the lure of the outdoors.

During the months of May and June the Boston Symphony made an historic Far Eastern tour of Japan, Australia, New Zealand and the Philippines. In Japan alone they presented 22 concerts. The tour was made under the President's Special International Program for Cultural Presentations administered by the American National Theatre and Academy.

Also on the spring tour circuit this year was Artur Rubinstein, who is sought all over the world as the last of the pianists in the grand manner.

Rochester is privileged to have the only New York state performance of the world's greatest ballet company, The Royal (Sadler's Wells) Ballet at the Eastman Theatre, Wednesday night, January 4.

The ballet event highlights a list of six Artists Series events recently released by the Civic Music Association.

The 1960-61 Artists Series, which CMA officials consider a "once-in-a-lifetime" list of attractions, includes two of the country's greatest orchestras, the world's master pianist, a unique four piano group, and an outstanding representative from the exclusive group of world-renowned violinists.

The complete schedule is:

Monday, October 24—THE BOSTON SYMPHONY.

Tuesday, November 29—THE PIANO QUARTET.

Thursday, December 15—ARTUR RUBINSTEIN.

Wednesday, January 4—THE ROYAL BALLET.

Thursday, March 9—ZINO FRANCESCATTI.

Thursday, April 27—THE PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 289,111

AUG 7 1960

TANGLEWOOD

Saturday evening for the last time we will hear a concert from Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra broadcast exclusively by WXHR at 8:30. Mr. Munch, the music director will conduct the Orchestra in Handel's — Water Music Suite, Chopin's — Piano Concerto No. 1 in e, with a solo by Gary Graffman. Last on the program will be Aaron Copland conducting the orchestra in one of his own works—Symphony No. 1.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

AUG 13

Boston Orchestra Ends Tanglewood Stay Sunday

Boston Symphony Orchestra will conclude its 1960 series of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon.

Charles Munch and composer Aaron Copland will share conducting honors in Saturday night's program while Munch will direct the orchestra, soloists, and the center chorus in Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" to conclude the festival.

An audience of 13,168 attended an all-Gershwin program by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra held Friday night to benefit the music center.

Philadelphia Sunday Bulletin

Music

8/7/60

Tanglewood Draws Philadelphians

By CAROL GABLER

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 6

NOW THAT the Robin Hood Dell has ended its 1960 season, music-hungry Philadelphians are flocking to the Berkshire Music Festival in its idyllic setting.

In perfect harmony with nature, Robin-Hood-Dell familiars are gathering outdoors here to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, in a summer-long program featuring outstanding guest artists.

The Tanglewood grounds, in which the festival takes place, are breathtaking in their beauty. There are acres and acres of well-cared for grass surrounding the large Music Shed, which accommodates 6,000 lucky reserved seat ticket holders.

Thousands more sit on carpet-soft green grass — the Great Lawn — and listen to the music beside tall, straight pine trees, with the great, awesome beauty of the ridges of the Berkshires stretching off in the distance.

• • •

IT IS only a six hour drive at the most from Philadelphia to this lovely center of culture. Each year, more and more Philadelphians plan for the trip, make themselves at home in the comfortable atmosphere that abounds here —and plan to come back again the next year.

In addition to the pleasures of outdoor-music, other aspects of it make Robin Hood Dell goers feel right at home: the lineup of cars is endless, parking is time-consuming. Moreover, during a performance of Beethoven's Ninth, the other day, conducted by Pierre Monteux, a screaming jet tore through the sky—but Monteux, unlike Stokowski, remained on stage throughout.

Last week's program included Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony as well as Beethoven's ninth, featuring Eleanor Steber; works by Liszt, Kirchner, Schubert, Wagner, Sibelius, Mendelssohn, Dutilleux and Brahms, were presented. Chamber music is played each evening and an original opera, "Port-Town" by Jan Meyerwitz was given.

Next week, the last week, of Tanglewood, Pierre Monteux will lead the orchestra in works by Williams, Beethoven, Brahms, Haydn, Piston, Liszt and Stravinsky; Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops; and Charles Munch will take over the podium for the last two days with a program of Handel, Chopin and Berlioz, the latter composer being represented by "Dam-

Continued on Page 9, Col. 2

BIRD'S-EYE VIEW: Audience attending Berkshire Festival overflows triangular music shed onto green lawn.

Tanglewood Draws City's MusicLovers

Continued from Page 6

nation of Faust," with singers Steber, McCollum and Martial Singher featured. Aaron Copland will conduct his own Symphony No. 1 next Saturday, August 13.

• • •

THE APPROACH to music here is a serious one and it permeates the entire area. The lad who fills your water pitcher at lunch in a local inn is a promising composer; the tennis coach at a nearby resort is an excellent jazz musician; the chamber maid is studying opera.

There is a six-week summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony. Among those enrolled here from the Philadelphia area are Carol Courtman, of Upper Darby, Eva Nir, 3804 Chestnut st. and Rita Kolacz, Camden, opera students; Martin Silverberg, 4403 Chestnut st., and John Harbison, Princeton, orchestra conducting; Mary Jane Huse, of Swarthmore, violin, and Elizabeth Albertson, 6318 City Line, listening and analysis.

Heading the Tanglewood publicity and press office is Sanford Sistare, a seventh grade teacher at Episcopal Academy.

GREATER ROCHESTER
COMMERCE
ROCHESTER, N.Y.
MONTHLY 7,500
AUG 1960

Artists Series Bringing Royal Ballet to Eastman

The Royal Ballet, on its first American tour since 1957, will begin a four-week engagement at the Metropolitan Opera House on September 11. This summer the troupe from the Royal Opera, Covent Garden, London, is appearing at the Edinburgh Festival.

The Boston Symphony is now in its traditional summer season at Tanglewood in the Berkshires of Massachusetts—where good music lovers combine the enjoyment of one of the nation's top orchestras with the lure of the outdoors.

During the months of May and June the Boston Symphony made an historic Far Eastern tour of Japan, Australia, New Zealand and the Philippines. In Japan alone they presented 22 concerts. The tour was made under the President's Special International Program for Cultural Presentations administered by the American National Theatre and Academy.

Also on the spring tour circuit this year was Artur Rubinstein, who is sought all over the world as the last of the pianists in the grand manner.

Rochester is privileged to have the only New York state performance of the world's greatest ballet company, The Royal (Sadler's Wells) Ballet at the Eastman Theatre, Wednesday night, January 4.

The ballet event highlights a list of six Artists Series events recently released by the Civic Music Association.

The 1960-61 Artists Series, which CMA officials consider a "once-in-a-lifetime" list of attractions, includes two of the country's greatest orchestras, the world's master pianist, a unique four piano group, and an outstanding representative from the exclusive group of world-renowned violinists.

The complete schedule is:

Monday, October 24—THE BOSTON SYMPHONY.

Tuesday, November 29—THE PIANO QUARTET.

Thursday, December 15—ARTUR RUBINSTEIN.

Wednesday, January 4—THE ROYAL BALLET.

Thursday, March 9—ZINO FRANCESCATTI.

Thursday, April 27—THE PHILADELPHIA ORCHESTRA.

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 289,111
AUG 7 1960

TANGLEWOOD

Saturday evening for the last time we will hear a concert from Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony Orchestra broadcast exclusively by WXHR at 8:30. Mr. Munch, the music director will conduct the Orchestra in Handel's — Water Music Suite, Chopin's — Piano Concerto No. 1 in e, with a solo by Gary Graffman. Last on the program will be Aaron Copland conducting the orchestra in one of his own works—Symphony No. 1.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815
AUG 13

Boston Orchestra Ends [illegible] Sunday

Boston Symphony Orchestra will conclude its 1960 series of Berkshire Festival concerts at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon.

Charles Munch and composer Aaron Copland will share conducting honors in Saturday night's program while Munch will direct the orchestra, soloists, and the center chorus in Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" to conclude the festival.

An audience of 13,168 attended an all-Gershwin program by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra held Friday night to benefit the music center.

Philadelphia Sunday Bulletin

Music

8/7/60

Tanglewood Draws Philadelphians

By CAROL SABLER

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 6—NOW THAT the Robin Hood Dell has ended its 1960 season, music-hungry Philadelphians are flocking to the Berkshire Music Festival in its idyllic setting.

In perfect harmony with nature, Robin-Hood-Dell familiars are gathering outdoors here to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch, in a summer-long program featuring outstanding guest artists.

The Tanglewood grounds, in which the festival takes place, are breathtaking in their beauty. There are acres and acres of well-cared for grass surrounding the large Music Shed, which accommodates 6,000 lucky reserved seat ticket holders.

Thousands more sit on carpet-soft green grass — the Great Lawn — and listen to the music beside tall, straight pine trees, with the great, awesome beauty of the ridges of the Berkshires stretching off in the distance.

• • •

IT IS only a six hour drive at the most from Philadelphia to this lovely center of culture. Each year, more and more Philadelphians plan for the trip, make themselves at home in the comfortable atmosphere that abounds here—and plan to come back again the next year.

In addition to the pleasures of outdoor music, other aspects of it make Robin Hood Dell goers feel right at home: the lineup of cars is endless, parking is time-consuming. Moreover, during a performance of Beethoven's Ninth, the other day, conducted by Pierre Monteux, a screaming jet tore through the sky—but Monteux, unlike Stokowski, remained on stage throughout.

Last week's program included Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony as well as Beethoven's ninth, featuring Eleanor Steber; works by Liszt, Kirchner, Schubert, Wagner, Sibelius, Mendelssohn, Dutilleux and Brahms, were presented. Chamber music is played each evening and an original opera, "Port-Town" by Jan Meyerwitz was given.

Next week, the last week, of Tanglewood, Pierre Monteux will lead the orchestra in works by Williams, Beethoven, Brahms, Haydn, Piston, Liszt and Stravinsky; Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops; and Charles Munch will take over the podium for the last two days with a program of Handel, Chopin and Berlioz, the latter composer being represented by "Dam-

Continued on Page 9, Col. 2

BIRD'S-EYE VIEW: Audience attending Berkshire Festival overflows triangular music shed onto green lawn.

Tanglewood Draws City's MusicLovers

Continued from Page 6

nation of Faust," with singers Steber, McCollum and Martial Singher featured. Aaron Copland will conduct his own Symphony No. 1 next Saturday, August 13.

• • •

THE APPROACH to music here is a serious one and it permeates the entire area. The lad who fills your water pitcher at lunch in a local inn is a promising composer; the tennis coach at a nearby resort is an excellent jazz musician; the chamber maid is studying opera.

There is a six-week summer school of music maintained at Tanglewood by the Boston Symphony. Among those enrolled here from the Philadelphia area are Carol Courtman, of Upper Darby, Eva Nir, 3804 Chestnut st. and Rita Kolacz, Camden, opera students; Martin Silverberg, 4403 Chestnut st., and John Harbison, Princeton, orchestra conducting; Mary Jane Huse, of Swarthmore, violin, and Elizabeth Albertson, 6318 City Line, listening and analysis.

Heading the Tanglewood publicity and press office is Sanford Sistare, a seventh grade teacher at Episcopal Academy.

FADED TEXT

161

Christian Science Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

AUG 6 1960

Tanglewood Closing Next Week

Plans Range From Berlioz To Electronics by Berio

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will ~~close the 1960~~ Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood on Sunday, Aug. 14, with a performance of Hector Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust," in which Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, Martial Singher, and the Festival Chorus will participate.

Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor at Tanglewood Friday evening, Aug. 12 at 8:30 when his guest will be Jorge Bolet in a performance of Liszt's Piano Concerto in E-flat. Mr. Monteux's program also will include Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 and the "Firebird" Suite by Stravinsky.

Dr. Munch has invited Aaron Copland, chairman of the faculty at the orchestra's Berkshire Music Center and guest conductor on the orchestra's recent Far-Eastern tour, to conduct his Symphony No. 1 on Saturday evening, Aug. 13. On the same program, which will open with the "Water Music" Suite by Handel, Gary Graffman will make his first Tanglewood appearance as soloist in Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1.

The Boston Pops with Arthur Fiedler and Earl Wild, pianist, will give a Gershwin program at Tanglewood on Thursday evening, Aug. 11, at 8:30, to benefit the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds. Mr. Fiedler's program will include "An American in Paris," Mr. Wild as soloist in both the Concerto in F and in the "Rhapsody in Blue," Robert Russell Bennett's symphonic picture for orchestra from "Porgy and Bess" and "Strike Up the Band."

The Kroll Quartet will present the final concert of the Festival's Chamber Music Series in the Tanglewood Theater Wednesday evening, Aug. 10, at 8:30. The program is to include the Haydn Quartet No. 2 in C major, Beethoven's Quartet No. 1 in F major, and the Quartet No. 1 by Walter Piston.

* * *

Tapes al Fresco

The Berkshire Music Center's 1960 composer-in-residence, Luciano Berio, will give the first open-air electronic concert in the United States at Tanglewood on Aug. 8, Monday evening at 8:30. The concert—consisting of works especially composed by Mr. Berio for the occasion—will employ electronic equipment supplied by the East Coast Electronic Company of Boston and the Concert Network, Boston. The equipment will consist of an Ampex 300 series stereo tape recorder, and four groups of speakers (Altec-Lansing Hi Fidelity 50 watt outdoor horns) placed in trees on the Tanglewood lawns adjoining the Main House along with necessary transformers and amplifiers.

In each group of speakers, two speakers will broadcast channel A and two will broadcast channel B from the stereo tape recorder. The volume controls will be mounted on a master control console, and Mr. Berio will manipulate the console from within the Tanglewood Main House. The audience—on the lawns—will be encouraged to move about in order to hear the 360 degree perimeter of sound.

Mr. Berio's appointment to the Tanglewood faculty follows a tradition established by Serge Koussevitzky when the school was founded in 1940. Former guest-composers in residence include Messrs. Babbitt, Blacher, Chávez, Dallapiccola, Fine, Foss, Hindemith, Ibert, Martinů, Messiaen, Petracci, and Toch.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 416,486

AUG 14 1960

Tanglewood Finale

The 1960 Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will ~~end this~~ afternoon at Tanglewood, in Lenox. Charles Munch will conduct, in the Music Shed at 2:30, Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," in which the Festival Chorus will participate. The soloists will be Eleanor Steber, soprano; John McCollum, tenor, and Martial Singher, bass-baritone.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON, Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,5[illegible]

AUG 11 1960

Concert on Sunday Closes Tanglewood

"Damnation of Faust" to Be Final Concert

Arthur Fiedler To Conduct Boston Pops Tonight In All-Gershwin Program.—Earl Wild Will Be Guest Pianist.—Monteux Will Lead Boston Symphony Friday Night.

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will close ~~the 1960~~ Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox on Sunday with a performance of Hector Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" in which Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, Martial Singher and the Festival Chorus will participate.

Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor at Tanglewood Friday when his guest will be pianist Jorge Bolet in a performance of Liszt's piano Concerto in E-flat. Mr. Monteux' program also includes Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 and the "Firebird" Suite by Stravinsky.

Doctor Munch has invited Aaron Copland, chairman of the faculty at the orchestra's Berkshire Music Center and guest conductor on the orchestra's recent Far-Eastern tour, to conduct his Symphony No. 1 at the Saturday evening concert. On the same program, which will open with the "Water Music" Suite by Handel, pianist Gary Graffman will make his first Tanglewood appearance as guest in Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1.

The Boston Pops with Arthur Fiedler and pianist Earl Wild will give an all-Gershwin program at Tanglewood tonight at 8:30 to benefit the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds. Mr. Fiedler's program will include "An American in Paris," Mr. Wild as soloist in both the Concerto in F and in the "Rhapsody in Blue," Robert Russell Bennett's symphonic picture for orchestra from "Porgy and Bess" and Strike Up the Band."

A pace-setter and record-breaker, the indefatigable Mr. Fiedler will fly into Tanglewood, almost literally, this morning after having finished his 10th season of concerts for the Art Commission in San Francisco on Tuesday evening.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

AUG 8 1960

Regional Roundup

Boston Orchestra to End Festival at Tanglewood

Arthur Fiedler to Conduct Gershwin Concert Thursday Night to Benefit Scholarship Funds

The final week of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's ~~Berkshire Festival~~ at Tanglewood, which closes Sunday, Aug. 14, will include a concert by the Boston Pops, Arthur Fiedler, conducting, on Thursday night, Aug. 11, to benefit the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds.

Electronic Concert

Tonight at 8 there will be a special concert of electronic music by Luciano Berio, a specialist in this field who is a composer in residence at Tanglewood.

Programs for the week through Sunday:

Wednesday, Aug. 10, 8.30, Chamber Music Hall: the Kroll Quartet

Haydn:
Quartet No. 2 in C major, Op. 54
Piston: .... Quartet No. 1
Beethoven:
Quartet No. 1 in F major, Opp. 59

Thursday, Aug. 11, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Pops, Arthur Fiedler

All-Gershwin:
.... An American in Paris
Concerto in F, for Piano and Orchestra (Earl Wild)
Porgy and Bess
A Symphonic Picture for Orchestra by Robert Russell Bennett
Rhapsody in Blue, for Piano and Orchestra (Earl Wild)
Strike Up the Band

Friday, Aug. 12, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Monteux conducting

Beethoven:
Symphony No. 2, in D major, Op. 36
Liszt:
Piano Concerto in E-flat major, No. 1
Stravinsky: .... "Firebird" Suite

Saturday, Aug. 13, 10 a. m., Music Shed: Boston Symphony Open Rehearsal

Saturday, Aug. 13, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting

Handel: .... "Water Music" Suite
Chopin:
Piano Concerto in E minor, Op. 11 (Gary Graffman)
Copland:
First Symphony (composer conducting)

"Damnation of Faust"

Sunday, Aug. 14, 2.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting

Berlioz:
"The Damnation of Faust," Dramatic Legend, Op. 24 (Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, Martial Singher, Festival Chorus)

Events at Tanglewood open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are:

Tuesday, Aug. 9, 8.30, Theater: Tanglewood Choir.

Wednesday, Aug. 10, 3.30, Chamber Music Hall: lecture, "Aspects of music."

Friday, Aug. 12, 3.15, Chamber Music Hall: seminar in contemporary music.

Saturday, Aug. 13, 3, Music Shed: Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

Sunday, Aug. 14, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall: BMC chamber music.

* * *

Recital of Opera Scenes Set Tuesday Afternoon

The opera department at Tanglewood under the direction of Boris Goldovsky will present a recital of opera scenes Tuesday afternoon at 2 in the Theater Concert Hall. Included in the program will be two scenes from Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte" and two from "Carmen." Other operas portrayed in part will be "Don Giovanni," "The Marriage of Figaro," "La Traviata" and "Madame Butterfly."

In the preparation of this series of performances, Goldovsky has been assisted by Robert Evans, Thomas Philips, Frederic Popper, Arthur Schoep and Felix Wolfes.

The opera scenes Tuesday will mark the completion of the opera department's season. This performance is open to members of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

* * *

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657

047

MUSIC CALENDAR

SUNDAY

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra, Berkshire Festival chorus and soloists, Charles Munch conducting Berlioz, Damnation of Faust, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass

---

World-Telegram & Sun (e)
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Circ. 454,224

AUG 9 - 1960

Berkshire Festival Nears End

Special to World-Telegram and Sun.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 9.—The 1960 Berkshire Music Festival closes its season this weekend with a group of varied musical specialties. On Thursday evening, the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler will present an all-Gershwin program. Earl Wild, pianist, will play the "Concerto in F" and the "Rhapsody in Blue."

Friday, the Boston Symphony will be conducted by Pierre Monteaux in favored works of Beethoven, Liszt and Stravinsky.

The feature night of the weekend, Saturday, will present the internationally famous pianist, Gary Graffman, in Chopin's "Piano Concerto No. One." The Boston Symphony Orchestra closes its 1960 Tanglewood season with Charles Munch conducting Berlioz "Damnation of Faust."

NEW YORK POST, WEDNESDAY, JULY 27, 1960

Copland to Compose Music for 'Misfits'

American composer Aaron Copland has signed with producer Frank E. Taylor of "The Misfits" to write the musical score for the Clark Gable-Marilyn Monroe movie, which also top-casts Eli Wallach and Thelma Ritter, and is currently before the cameras in and around Reno. Copland has written music for "Of Mice and Men," "North ~~Star," "The Red Pony," "The~~ Heiress" and other films. He won an Academy Award for his "Heiress" score in 1950.

Soon to start on the "Misfits" music, the composer will be conducting his First Symphony at thet Berkshire Music Festival, Aug. 13 at Tanglewood, Lenox (Mass.).

FADED TEXT

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

AUG 6 1960

Tanglewood Closing Next Week

Plans Range From Berlioz To Electronics by Berio

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will close the 1960 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood on Sunday, Aug. 14, with a performance of Hector Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust," in which Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, Martial Singher, and the Festival Chorus will participate.

Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor at Tanglewood Friday evening, Aug. 12 at 8:30 when his guest will be Jorge Bolet in a performance of Liszt's Piano Concerto in E-flat. Mr. Monteux's program also will include Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 and the "Firebird" Suite by Stravinsky.

Dr. Munch has invited Aaron Copland, chairman of the faculty at the orchestra's Berkshire Music Center and guest conductor on the orchestra's recent Far-Eastern tour, to conduct his Symphony No. 1 on Saturday evening, Aug. 13. On the same program, which will open with the "Water Music" Suite by Handel, Gary Graffman will make his first Tanglewood appearance as soloist in Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1.

The Boston Pops with Arthur Fiedler and Earl Wild, pianist, will give a Gershwin program at Tanglewood on Thursday evening, Aug. 11, at 8:30, to benefit the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds. Mr. Fiedler's program will include "An American in Paris," Mr. Wild as soloist in both the Concerto in F and in the "Rhapsody in Blue," Robert Russell Bennett's symphonic picture for orchestra from "Porgy and Bess" and "Strike Up the Band."

The Kroll Quartet will present the final concert of the Festival's Chamber Music Series in the Tanglewood Theater Wednesday evening, Aug. 10, at 8:30. The program is to include the Haydn Quartet No. 2 in C major, Beethoven's Quartet No. 1 in F major, and the Quartet No. 1 by Walter Piston.

* * *

Tapes al Fresco

The Berkshire Music Center's 1960 composer-in-residence, Luciano Berio, will give the first open-air electronic concert in the United States at Tanglewood on Aug. 8, Monday evening at 8:30. The concert—consisting of works especially composed by Mr. Berio for the occasion—will employ electronic equipment supplied by the East Coast Electronic Company of Boston and the Concert Network, Boston. The equipment will consist of an Ampex 300 series stereo tape recorder, and four groups of speakers (Altec-Lansing Hi Fidelity 50 watt outdoor horns) placed in trees on the Tanglewood lawns adjoining the Main House along with necessary transformers and amplifiers.

In each group of speakers, two speakers will broadcast channel A and two will broadcast channel B from the stereo tape recorder. The volume controls will be mounted on a master control console, and Mr. Berio will manipulate the console from within the Tanglewood Main House. The audience—on the lawns—will be encouraged to move about in order to hear the 360 degree perimeter of sound.

Mr. Berio's appointment to the Tanglewood faculty follows a tradition established by Serge Koussevitzky when the school was founded in 1940. Former guest-composers in residence include Messrs. Babbitt, Blacher, Chávez, Dallapiccola, Fine, Foss, Hindemith, Ibert, Martinů, Messiaen, Petracci, and Toch.

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 416,486

AUG 14 1960

Tanglewood Finale

The 1960 Berkshire Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra will end this afternoon at Tanglewood, in Lenox. Charles Munch will conduct, in the Music Shed at 2:30, Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," in which the Festival Chorus will participate. The soloists will be Eleanor Steber, soprano; John McCollum, tenor, and Martial Singher, bass-baritone.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,5[illegible]

AUG 11 1960

Concert on Sunday Closes Tanglewood

"Damnation of Faust" to Be Final Concert

Arthur Fiedler To Conduct Boston Pops Tonight In All-Gershwin Program.—Earl Wild Will Be Guest Pianist.—Monteux Will Lead Boston Symphony Friday Night.

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will close the 1960 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox on Sunday with a performance of Hector Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" in which Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, Martial Singher and the Festival Chorus will participate.

Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor at Tanglewood Friday when his guest will be pianist Jorge Bolet in a performance of Liszt's piano Concerto in E-flat. Mr. Monteux' program also includes Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 and the "Firebird" Suite by Stravinsky.

Doctor Munch has invited Aaron Copland, chairman of the faculty at the orchestra's Berkshire Music Center and guest conductor on the orchestra's recent Far-Eastern tour, to conduct his Symphony No. 1 at the Saturday evening concert. On the same program, which will open with the "Water Music" Suite by Handel, pianist Gary Graffman will make his first Tanglewood appearance as guest in Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1.

The Boston Pops with Arthur Fiedler and pianist Earl Wild will give an all-Gershwin program at Tanglewood tonight at 8:30 to benefit the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds. Mr. Fiedler's program will include "An American in Paris," Mr. Wild as soloist in both the Concerto in F and in the "Rhapsody in Blue," Robert Russell Bennett's symphonic picture for orchestra from "Porgy and Bess" and Strike Up the Band."

A pace-setter and record-breaker, the indefatigable Mr. Fiedler will fly into Tanglewood, almost literally, this morning after having finished his 10th season of concerts for the Art Commission in San Francisco on Tuesday evening.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

AUG 8 1960

Regional Roundup

Boston Orchestra to End Festival at Tanglewood

Arthur Fiedler to Conduct Gershwin Concert Thursday Night to Benefit Scholarship Funds

The final week of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival, at Tanglewood, which closes Sunday, Aug. 14, will include a concert by the Boston Pops, Arthur Fiedler, conducting, on Thursday night, Aug. 11, to benefit the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds.

Electronic Concert

Tonight at 8 there will be a special concert of electronic music by Luciano Berio, a specialist in this field who is a composer in residence at Tanglewood.

Programs for the week through Sunday:

Wednesday, Aug. 10, 8.30, Chamber Music Hall: the Kroll Quartet

Haydn:
Quartet No. 2 in C major, Op. 54
Piston: .... Quartet No. 1
Beethoven:
Quartet No. 1 in F major, Opp. 59

Thursday, Aug. 11, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Pops, Arthur Fiedler

All-Gershwin:
.... An American in Paris
Concerto in F, for Piano and Orchestra (Earl Wild)
Porgy and Bess
A Symphonic Picture for Orchestra by Robert Russell Bennett
Rhapsody in Blue, for Piano and Orchestra (Earl Wild)
Strike Up the Band

Friday, Aug. 12, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Monteux conducting

Beethoven:
Symphony No. 2, in D major, Op. 36
Liszt:
Piano Concerto in E-flat major, No. 1
Stravinsky: .... "Firebird" Suite

Saturday, Aug. 13, 10 a. m., Music Shed: Boston Symphony Open Rehearsal

Saturday, Aug. 13, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting

Handel: .... "Water Music" Suite
Chopin:
Piano Concerto in E minor, Op. 11 (Gary Graffman)
Copland:
First Symphony (composer conducting)

"Damnation of Faust"

Sunday, Aug. 14, 2.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting

Berlioz:
"The Damnation of Faust," Dramatic Legend, Op. 24 (Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, Martial Singher, Festival Chorus)

Events at Tanglewood open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are:

Tuesday, Aug. 9, 8.30, Theater: Tanglewood Choir.

Wednesday, Aug. 10, 3.30, Chamber Music Hall: lecture, "Aspects of music."

Friday, Aug. 12, 3.15, Chamber Music Hall: seminar in contemporary music.

Saturday, Aug. 13, 3, Music Shed: Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

Sunday, Aug. 14, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall: BMC chamber music.

* * *

Recital of Opera Scenes Set Tuesday Afternoon

The opera department at Tanglewood under the direction of Boris Goldovsky will present a recital of opera scenes Tuesday afternoon at 2 in the Theater Concert Hall. Included in the program will be two scenes from Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte" and two from "Carmen." Other operas portrayed in part will be "Don Giovanni," "The Marriage of Figaro," "La Traviata" and "Madame Butterfly."

In the preparation of this series of performances, Goldovsky has been assisted by Robert Evans, Thomas Philips, Frederic Popper, Arthur Schoep and Felix Wolfes.

The opera scenes Tuesday will mark the completion of the opera department's season. This performance is open to members of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

HARTFORD, Conn.
[illegible] 121,637

MUSIC CALENDAR

SUNDAY

2:30—Boston Symphony Orchestra, Berkshire Festival chorus and soloists, Charles Munch conducting Berlioz, Damnation of Faust; Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

World-Telegram &
Sun (e)
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Circ. 454,224

AUG 9 - 1960

Berkshire Festival Nears End

Special to World-Telegram and Sun.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 9.—The 1960 Berkshire Music Festival closes its season this weekend with a group of varied musical specialties. On Thursday evening, the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler will present an all-Gershwin program. Earl Wild, pianist, will play the "Concerto in F" and the "Rhapsody in Blue."

Friday, the Boston Symphony will be conducted by Pierre Monteaux in favored works of Beethoven, Liszt and Stravinsky.

The feature night of the weekend, Saturday, will present the internationally famous pianist, Gary Graffman, in Chopin's "Piano Concerto No. One." The Boston Symphony Orchestra closes its 1960 Tanglewood season with Charles Munch conducting Berlioz "Damnation of Faust."

NEW YORK POST, WEDNESDAY, JULY 27, 1960

Copland to Compose Music for 'Misfits'

American composer Aaron Copland has signed with producer Frank E. Taylor of "The Misfits" to write the musical score for the Clark Gable-Marilyn Monroe movie, which also topcasts Eli Wallach and Thelma Ritter, and is currently before the cameras in and around Reno. Copland has written music for "Of Mice and Men," "North Star," "The Red Pony," "The Heiress" and other films. He won an Academy Award for his "Heiress" score in 1950.

Soon to start on the "Misfits" music, the composer will be conducting his First Symphony at the Berkshire Music Festival, Aug. 13 at Tanglewood, Lenox (Mass.).

162

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, SATURDAY, AUGUST 6, 1960

First Open-Air Electronic Concert Set at Tanglewood

Luciano Berio, the Berkshire Music Center's 1960 composer in residence, will give the first open-air electronic concert in the United States Monday at 8:30 p.m. at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass. Berio is on the Tanglewood faculty under a grant from the Ford Foundation.

* * *

THE OPEN-AIR electronic concert will consist of works especially composed for the occasion by Berio and will employ electronic equipment supplied by the East Coast Electronic Co. of Boston and the Concert Network, Boston.

The equipment will consist of an Ampex 300 series stereo tape recorder and four groups of speakers (Altec-Lansing Hi Fidelity 50-watt outdoor horns) placed in trees on the Tanglewood lawns adjoining the main house along with necessary transformers and amplifiers. In each group of speakers, two speakers will broadcast channel A and two will broadcast channel B from the stereo tape recorder. The volume controls will be mounted on a master control console and Berio will manipulate the console from within the Tanglewood main house. The audience—on the lawns — will be encouraged to move about in order to hear the 360 degree perimeter of sound.

* * *

LUCIANO BERIO was born in Imperin Oneglia in 1925 and began his music studies with his father, who is an organist and composer. A graduate of the Milan Conservatory of Music with highest honors, he has been active as a conductor both on the radio and in concerts throughout Europe.

In 1952 he was granted a Kousevitsky Foundation scholarship to attend the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood where he studied with Luigi Dallapiocola. On his return to Italy he began working at the Italian radio where he founded the Studio de Fonologia Musicale for electronic music.

His compositions have been performed on the radio and in concerts throughout Europe as well as at all the major international contemporary music festivals — Donaueschingen, Darmsada, Venice, Warsaw, Cologne, etc.

Gazette
EAST HARTFORD
Conn.
Weekly Non-Partisan
Circ. 3,951

AUG 11 1960

News
WEST HARTFORD,
Conn.
Weekly Circ. 7,059

AUG 11 1960

Goings On

FRIDAY, AUGUST 12

Oval In The Grove — "The Rose Tattoo" through August 13. Beginning August 16, "Once More, With Feeling." Every evening except Sunday.

UConn Summer Theatre — "My Three Angels," also August 13. This is UConn's final play of the season.

Yale Music — In the Norfolk Music Shedf, the Festival of the Yale Summer School of Music and Art presents a chamber opera, "Sarah," a Biblical music drama. At 8 p.m. Also August 13 at 2:30 p.m., chamber concert.

Shakespeare Festival — In Stratford. "Twelfth Night" evenings of August 16, 17, 26. Matinee August 14. "The Tempest" evenings August 13, 20, 24, and afternoon August 17. "Antony and Cleopatra" evenings August 12, 18, 19, and afternoons of August 13, 21.

Ivoryton Playhouse — "Goodbye Charlie" runs the week of August 15.

Oakdale Musical Theater — In Wallingford presents "Redhead" through August 13, and "Carousel" August 15-20.

Jacob's Pillow — Through August 13, Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo stars, plus Myra Kinch troupe, and Carola Goya and Matteo.

Somers Stock Theater — Through August 13, "Hellzapoppin 1960."

Southbury Playhouse — "Blue Denim" through August 13, and "Bus Stop" beginning August 15.

Westport Playhouse — "The Late Christopher Bean" through August 13, and 'Burnt Flower Bed" beginning August 15.

Tanglewood Berkshire Festival — Boston Pops Concert with Monteux conducting August 13 at 8:30 p.m. and August 14 at 2:30 p.m. is the final concert of the season. Much conducts Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust."

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 175,076

AUG 13 1960

Boston Symphony Closes Festival

With the concerts tonight and tomorrow afternoon, Charles Munch brings to a close the six-week Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in Lenox.

A large section of the orchestra returns to Boston immediately to begin the final week of Esplanade concerts on Monday, Aug. 15 under the direction of Arthur Fiedler.

News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,700

AUG 4 1960

Week Ahead Has Variety

By THE BERKSHIRE HILLS CONFERENCE

PITTSFIELD, Mass. — Arthur Fiedler and his Boston Pops Orchestra will share the Berkshire Hills spotlight with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra next weekend in the final sessions of the 1960 Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

Mr. Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops at Tanglewood Thursday evening at 8:30 in the huge Shed as the feature of annual Tangle-

The Pops concert will climax a program which will open at 5:45 with a tour of the spacious and lush Tanglewood grounds and performances by various groups of students from the Berkshire Music Center. Pianist Earl Wild will be soloist with the Boston Pops.

Next Friday evening Pierre Monteux will conduct the BSO in the program that will include Stravinsky's Firebird suite and Beethoven's Symphony No. 2. Dr. Munch will be at the podium Saturday evening at 8:30 for Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1 with Graffman as soloist and Handel's Water Music Suite.

Composer Aaron Copland will conduct his own Symphony No. 1 and the Festival Chorus will join Dr. Munch and the BSO in Berlioz's Damnation of Faust next Sunday Afternoon at 2:30 in the final performance of the season.

Sunday Republican
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 46,674

AUG 7 1960

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Circ. 18,203

AUG 8 1960

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 27,809

AUG 4 1960

POUGHKEEPSIE NEW YORKER
Sunday, August 7, 1960

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON,
Mass.
Circ. 12,847

AUG 6 1960

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 289,111

AUG 7 1960

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 51,447

AUG 7 1960

Sunday Post
BRIDGEPORT, Conn.
Circ. 67,391

AUG 7 1960

Waterbury
American
aug. 8, 1960

erkshire Festival n Final Concerts

Charles Munch and the Boston ymphony Orchestra will close the 960 Berkshire Festival at Tangle- ood, Lenox, on Sunday, August , with the Berlioz "Damnation Faust" in which Eleanor Steber hn McCollum, Martial Singher d the Festival Chorus will articipate.

Pierre Monteux will be guest nductor at Tanglewood Friday hen the soloist will be pianist rge Bolet in Liszt's Piano Conrto in E-flat. The program also cludes Beethoven's Symphony o. 2 and the "Firebird" Suite Stravinsky.

Aaron Copland, chairman of the aculty at the Orchestra's Berkire Music Center and guest conuctor on the Orchestra's recent ar-Eastern tour, will conduct his ymphony No. 1 at the Saturday vening concert. On the same proram, which will open with the Water Music" Suite by Handel, ianist Gary Graffman will make is first Tanglewood appearance Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1. The Kroll Quartet will present the final concert of the Festival's Chamber Music Series in the Tanglewood Theater on Wednesday. The program includes the Haydn Quartet No. 2 in C major, Beethoven's Quartet No. 1 in F major and the Quartet No. 1 by Walter Piston.

A special concert of electronic music will be presented by Luciano Berio at Tanglewood tomorrow evening. Composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center, Mr. Berio is a leading exponent in the field of electronic music.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

AUG 11 1960

Cold, Soggy Night Holds Tanglewood Attendance to 993

Cold and soggy weather last night held attendance to 993 at the final chamber music concert of the 1960 Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The audience was the smallest at any of the six chamber music concerts on Wednesday evenings this season.

The Kroll Quartet gave last evening's concert in the Theater-Concert Hall. It performed Haydn's String Quartet in C Major, Op. 54, No. 2; Walter Piston's First String Quartet, and Beethoven's String Quartet in F Major Op. 59, No. 1.

Tomorrow evening the Boston Symphony Orchestra will give the opening concert of this season's final series. Another will be presented Saturday evening and the last performance of the season will be given Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

AUG 7 1960

Sunday Courant
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 148,332

AUG 7 1960

Berkshire Festival Heads For Final Week; Monteux Conducts Today's Concert

Pianist Leon Fleisher Soloist in Beethoven's Concerto No. 3; Berlioz 'Damnation of Faust' Scheduled for Closing Program Next Sunday Afternoon

The next-to-last Sunday afternoon concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the 1960 Berkshire Festival ~~will take place in the Music Shed~~ today beginning at 2.30. The orchestra will be under the baton of Pierre Monteux. Guest soloist will be pianist Leon Fleisher, who will be heard in a performance of Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3. Also listed on this afternoon's program are Vaughan Williams' "Fanasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis," and the Fourth Symphony by Brahms. This excellent program is expected to attract another great assemblage of music lovers to Lenox and the colorful Tanglewood scene.

Final Week Programs

Charles Munch and the orchestra will close the 1960 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, next Sunday (Aug. 14) with a performance of Hector Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" in which Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, Martial Singher and the Festival Chorus will participate.

Pierre Monteux will be guest conducter at Tanglewood Friday (Aug. 12, 8.30) when his guest will be pianist Jorge Bolet in a performance of Liszt's Piano concerto in E-flat. Mr. Monteux' program also includes Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 and the "Firebird" Suite by Stravinsky.

Dr. Munch has invited Aaron Copland, chairman of the faculty at the orchestra's Berkshire Music Center and guest conductor on the orchestra's recent Far-Eastern tour, to conduct his Symphony No. 1 at the Saturday night (Aug. 13, 8.30) concert. On the same program, which will open with the "Water Music" Suite by Handel, pianist Gary Graffman will make his first Tanglewood appearance as guest in Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1.

The Boston Pops

The Boston Pops with Arthur Fiedler and pianist Earl Wild will give an all-Gershwin program at Tanglewood on Thursday (Aug. 11, 8.30) to benefit the Berkshire Music Center's Scholarship Funds. Mr. Fiedler's program will include "An American in Paris," Mr. Wild as soloist in both the Concerto in F and in the "Rhapsody in Blue," Robert Russell Bennett's symphonic picture for orchestra from "Porgy and Bess", and "Strike Up the Band."

The Kroll Quartet will present the final concert to the Festival's Chamber Music Series in the Tanglewood Theater Wednesday (Aug. 10, 8.30). The program includes the Haydn Quartet No. 2 in C major, Beethoven's Quartet No. 1 in F major and the Quartet No. 1 by Walter Piston.

A special concert of electronic music will be presented by Luciano Berio at Tanglewood Monday (Aug. 8) night. Composer in residence at the Berkshire Music Center, Mr. Berio is a leading exponent in the field of electronic music. In addition to Mr. Berio's concert, Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are also invited to the following events at Tanglewood this week:

Sun., Aug. 7, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall: BMC Chamber Music

Sun., Aug. 7, 8.30, Chamber Music Hall: Composer's Forum

Tues., Aug. 9, 8.30, Theater: Tanglewood Choir

Wed., Aug. 10, 3.30, Chamber Music Hall: Lecture, Aspects of Music

Fri., Aug. 12, 3.15, Chamber Music Hall: Seminar in Contemporary Music

Sat., Aug. 13, 3.00, Music Shed: Berkshire Music Center Orchestra

Sun., Aug. 14, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall: BMC Chamber Music

---

GREENVILLE, N.Y.
LOCAL
W. 550
AUG 1 0 1960

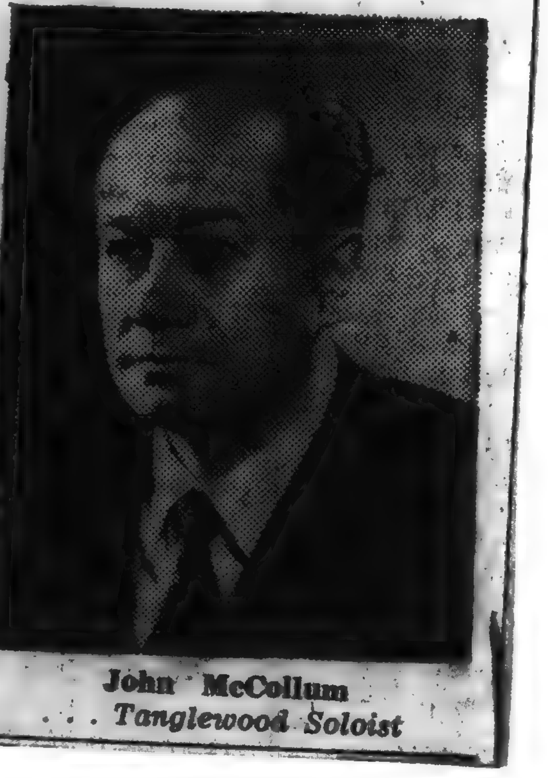
VALATIE, N.Y.
ROUGH NOTES
W. 1,571
AUG 1 2 1960

Ridgefield Press
RIDGEFIELD, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,127

AUG 11 1960

Munch To Conduct Last Of 1960 Tanglewood Programs

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will close the 1960 Berkshire Festival at ~~Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.,~~ Sunday, August 14, with a performance of Hector Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" in which Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, Martial Singher and the Festival Chorus will participate.



John McCollum
. . . Tanglewood Soloist

Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor at Tanglewood Friday August 12, 8:30 when his guest will be pianist Jorge Bolet in a performance of Liszt's Piano Concerto in E-flat. Mr. 'Morteux' program also includes Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 and the "Firebird" Suite by Stravinsky.

Doctor Munch has invited Aaron Copeland, Chairman of the Faculty at the Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center and guest conductor on the Orchestra's recent Far-Eastern tour, to conduct his Symphony No. 1 at the Saturday evening, August 13, 8:30 concert. On the same program, which will open with the "Water Music" Suite by Handel, pianist Gary Graffman will make his first Tanglewood appearance as guest in Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1.

Eagle 8/11/60

Music Review

Kroll String Quartet

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FINAL chamber music of the Tanglewood season was a program in the Theatre-Concert Hall last night by the Kroll string quartet. The violins are William Kroll and Louis Graeler, the viola, David Mankowitz, the cello, Avron Twerdowsky. They played Haydn, Piston and Beethoven for an audience of 1,000.

Kroll is the dean of American chamber musicians. He has participated in chamber music perhaps as long as anyone in the field today, and headed a quartet longer than any other native-born artist. His ability personally as a performer is characterized by a style as distinguished for elegance and taste as for authority and tradition. His colleagues are sterling performers, but in this case the first violinist's magnetic playing holds more eyes than would be the normal percentage in a chamber music recital.

* * *

THE HAYDN C major, Opus 54, No. 2, was commissioned by Kroll, so marvelously is it suited to his fashion of discrimination. After a big symphonic first movement, comes an adagio with a sepulchral melody over and around which the first violin has the most florid decorative ornamentation in all Haydn. Evidently "Papa" decided here to set down what many performers were in the habit of doing as their own prerogative in that day, adding their own flourish and panache to the printed notes.

This Haydn ends with a freak adagio and only inserts a very short swift presto between two versions of a lovely simple song. The cello has the spotlight here for a short instant when in the second sentence he soars to the top of his fingerboard with an obligato ascending arpeggio, which Twerdowsky achieved with conspicuous tone and accuracy.

* * *

PROCEEDING to the Piston and Beethoven the tasks were more evenly shared, as even Beethoven no longer wrote for three players subservient most of the time to the first violin part. Piston, of course, revels in counterpoint, and his voices get involved and intertwined from the very outset. This quartet, his first, dates from as far back as 1934, and its freshness derives from a forward and onward drive rather than from an inspection of details. The middle adagio and final allegro vivace makes a more grateful immediate impact than the first movement. The Krolls gave it excellent cohesion.

* * *

THE FIRST "Rasoumoffsky," opus 59, No. 1, in F major, is one of the greats among all the great Beethoven quartets, great in the sense of perspective. The advance from the preceding quartet was the distance between planets. The Kroll conception represents a lifetime of study and refinement. It was apparent that no phrase, no note, had been played without years-long, thoughtful, fond upbringing. And if the quartet was treated as a beloved offspring, there was also evidence of indulging and "spoiling" the child, for care was expended on some details, which, it might be argued, could have well been allowed to speak for themselves. But these were quibbles.

* * *

THIS WAS virtuoso playing moderated by a discipline of the highest artistic integrity. The quartet takes its identity from the name of the Russian ambassador at Vienna who commissioned Beethoven to write him (he was an amateur violinist) three quartets. Ludwig was not above inserting a little lagniappe to his princely patron, and thus in the final movement there is a pert Russian dance theme that follows the unforgettable adagio which the composer asked to be played "sadly."

The Krolls were compelled to add to their program, and played the final larghetto from the same composer's opus 95.

MILLERTON NEWS REPUBLICAN
Thursday, August 4, 1960

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,498

AUG 11 1960

Town Times
OAKVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,290

AUG 11 1960

News
WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 1,700

AUG 11 1960

Tanglewood Season End Comes Soon

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra will close the 1960 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Sunday with a performance of Hector Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" in which Eleanor Steber, John McColl u m, Martial Singher and the Festival Chorus will participate.

Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor at Tanglewood Friday at 8:30 when his guest will be pianist Jorge Bolet in a performance of Liszt's Piano Concerto in E-flat.

Monteux' program also includes Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 and the "Firebird" Suite by Stravinsky.

Munch has invited Aaron Copland, Chairman of the Faculty at the Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center and guest conductor on the Orchestra's recent Far - Eastern tour, to conduct his Symphony No 1 at the Saturday evening concert at 8:30.

On the same program, which will open with the "Water Music" Suite by Handel, pianist Gary Graffman will make his first Tanglewood appearance as guest in Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1.

The Boston Pops with Arthur Fiedler and pianist Earl Wild will give an all - Gerswin program at Tanglewood tonight at 8:30 to benefit the Berkshire Music Center's Scholarship Funds. Fiedler's program will include "An American in Paris," Wild as soloist in both the Concerto in F and in the "Rhapsody in Blue," Robert Russell Bennett's symphonic picture for orchestra from "Porgy and Bess" and "Strike Up the Band."

164

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 101,427

AUG 7 1960

Tanglewood Concerts Close Next Weekend

THOSE WHO PLAN to attend concerts of the Berkshire Festival this summer have only one more weekend in which to make the journey to Tanglewood, summer home in Lenox of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Six weekend concert series were scheduled this summer, with the fifth now going on and the final group of programs to be given next weekend.

Special programs earlier in the week will be a chamber music concert by the Kroll Quartet on Wednesday evening in the theater, and the annual presentation of the Boston Pops at Tanglewood on Thursday evening in the Music Shed with Arthur Fiedler conducting.

Next weekend's concerts will begin on Friday evening with Pierre Monteux conducting the orchestra in Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 and Stravinsky's "Fire Bird" Suite. Jorge Bolet, familiar to local music-lovers from Worcester appearances, will be soloist in Liszt's Piano Concerto in E flat. At the Saturday evening concert Charles Munch will conduct Handel's "Water Music" Suite and Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1 with Gary Graffman as soloist. The orchestra will play Aaron Copland's Symphony No. 1 with the composer conducting.

The final program a week from this afternoon will be the Damnation of Faust by Berlioz.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

AUG 13 1960

Audience of 6,783 At Tanglewood To Open Last Weekend

An audience of 6,783 persons at Tanglewood, Lenox, last evening heard the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the guest leadership of Pierre Monteux, with Jorge Belot as piano soloist, present the first concert in the final weekend series of the 1960 Berkshire Music Festival.

Mr. Monteux, who has conducted one in each of the four series of major concerts this year, led the orchestra through readings of Beethoven's Second Symphony and Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite. Mr. Belot and the orchestra performed Liszt's Concerto for Piano and Orchestra No. 1 in E-flat Major.

This evening at 8:30 Charles Munch, music director of the Boston Orchestra, will return to the podium to lead the orchestra in Handel's "Water Music" Suite, and Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1 with Gary Graffman as soloist. Then he will step aside to permit Aaron Copland, head of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center to conduct a performance by the orchestra of his own Symphony No. 1.

The 1960 festival will close with the concert tomorrow afternoon in which the Boston Symphony the Festival Chorus and three soloists will give Hector Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," with Mr. Munch conducting.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 13 1960

Music Review

Monteux, Bolet at Festival

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

Jorge Bolet

THIS is the home stretch for the Berkshire Festival this year. Last night Pierre Monteux made his final appearance of the season at Tanglewood. Charles Munch will conduct the final two programs tonight and tomorrow afternoon. The Boston Symphony Orchestra played the Beethoven second symphony, a suite from Stravinsky's ballet "The Firebird," and with Jorge Bolet as soloist, the Liszt piano concerto in E flat major, No. 1

Stravinsky, once l'enfant terrible at the beginning of the century, is no longer even controversial in his "l'Oiseau de Feu." It is all obvious and transparent, at least when played by the sterling musicians of the Boston orchestra under Monteux. The decade preceding World War I was dominated musically by the Russian ballet entrepreneur Diaghilev. He commissioned music right and left, enlisted the assistance of all sorts of painters, designers and workers in the affiliated arts. Women's styles of the day derived from the stage decor and costumes of Leon Bakst. Stravinsky was one of Diaghilev's most dependable sources of music and last night's conductor one of his most reliable directors.

* * *

MONTEUX creates excitement in his performance of Stravinsky but through his insight into the essence of the music, not from any lack of confidence. The seven divisions are played with only an air-space separating them. The colors emerge vividly in the contrasting movements, and everyone familiar with the scenario can practically visualize the action as it ensues.

The Beethoven second has not been played at Tanglewood as much as some of the others. It has no underlying problems nor depressive elements, only melody and strong rhythmic features. The Bostonians play such a piece for Monteux with relaxed conviction.

* * *

PIANIST BOLET is no stranger to the Tanglewood stage but it was a much more mature artist that appeared last night than the one whose artistic acquaintance we made some few years ago. Bolet came as a conqueror, overcoming the huge obstacles of the terrain that Liszt sets up with formidable power and command. The three movements are played without a pause.

There is a tendency in some quarters to scoff a bit at Liszt and to consider him pigeonholed and dated but no one knew where the best parts of the piano were better than he. He was an originator in many ways yet was not free of the reflection of some of the other luminaries of his day. The gracefully turned phrase at the start of the adagio, resting just a half-tone short of its later point of repose would not have surprised anyone on a page of Chopin and the decisive orchestral initial introduction has the gruff salutation of a Beethoven.

Bolet caught every nuance with penetrating comprehension and he invaded the more intricate episodes fearlessly and with astonishing command of the keyboard. Pianist and conductor were recalled time after time.

Sunday Advertiser
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 453,664

AUG 14 1960

'Faust' Closes Music Season

A performance of Hector Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" closes the 1960 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, this afternoon. Participating in the program, conducted by Charles Munch, will be Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, Martial Singher and the Festival Chorus.

Friday evening Pierre Monteux was guest conductor in performance of Listz's Piano Concerto in E-flat. He had as his solo pianist Jorge Bolet. Also included was Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 and the "Firebird" Suite by Stravinsky.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657

AUG 15 1960

Handel, Chopin and Copland Works Heard at Tanglewood

By GEORGE W. STOWE
Special to the Hartford Times

Lenox, Mass. — The usual symphonic protocol of concluding with a familiar work was discarded Saturday night at Tanglewood when Aaron Copland's seldom-performed First Symphony was conducted by the composer.

Not to be confused with Copland's more widely acclaimed "Dance Symphony," this work had its genesis in the same year (1925) and was first given with the Boston Symphony under Serge Koussevity, that great protagonist of the contemporary composer.

* * *

THIS WAS the period when the composer was preoccupied with the characteristic jazz idioms, the period that produced his Concerto for Piano which had the most obvious references to those characteristics. The First Symphony includes a saxophone in its instrumentation but otherwise is not notably jazzy.

In its strong lyric vein it is not as dated as the concertgoer might expect, for we seem to have come full cycle again in our musical predilections. No longer is dissonance in itself de rigueur, no longer are the Schoenbergians as firmly in the saddle.

Mr. Copland has built his symphony on a recurrent motto, which is not at all obvious at the beginning, but gradually assumes greater importance. However, I detect a lack of emotional cohesion in the whole thing that may explain its long neglect. Somehow it does not fall together.

Something more palatable to the average Tanglewood visitor was to be found in the first half of the program which included Chopin's Concerto in E minor and Sir Hamilton Harty's popular arrangement of Handel's "Water Music."

* * *

CHARLES MUNCH has not offered a more stylish performance in my hearing this Summer than the Handel Suite Saturday night. The music flowed with an unhurried grace that had an old world charm. The slow movements, particularly the Andante expressivo, had an expansive quality that beguiled the ear and the fast movements were taken at something less than breakneck speed, for which I was deeply grateful.

Gary Graffmann, another young artist better known through recordings than concert performances, was the sure-fingered soloist in the popular Chopin concerto. His straightforward and no-nonsense attitude is, I'm sure, in the best modern tradition of Chopin interpreters. It was an excellent performance.

However, I missed the poetic orientation of an older generation of pianists — Paderewski, dePachmann, Hofmann (Rubinstein is one of the last representatives of this school). A sensitively applied rubato was a prime characteristic of these Chopin that wonderful improvisational quality.

Almost 10,000 turned out for this final Saturday night con-

CHARLESTON, S.C.
NEWS AND COURIER
D. 61,125 S. 71,547

AUG 21 1960

Musical Notes

Summer Festivals Enjoy Real Success

By CLAIRE McPHAIL

The summer music festivals are coming to a close, and it is generally agreed that most of them have enjoyed real success.

The Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass. concluded its season Aug. 14 with Pierre Monteux conducting the "Damnation of Faust". The 1960 season marked the 25th year since the Boston Symphony first participated; the 10th season of Charles Munch's Berkshire Festival direction; and the 20th anniversary of the founding of the Berkshire Music Center. Total attendance for the season is listed as 173,570 with ticket sales totaling $385,892.50.

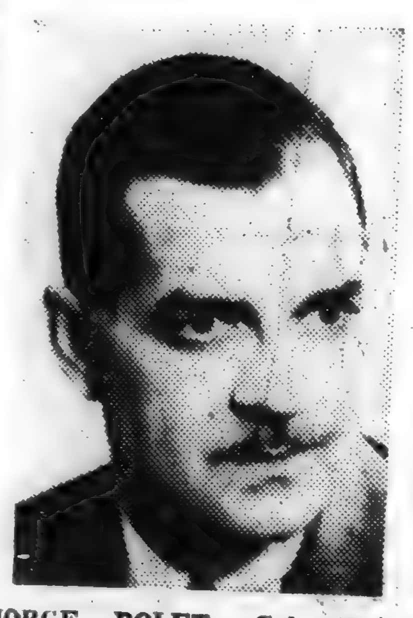
The Brevard Music Center at Brevard, N. C. concludes its 24th season this weekend with a matinee which will feature Leonard Pennario, pianist in an all - Brahms program. (Community Concert members will remember Mr. Pennario's concert here in Oct. 1958.)

The Brevard Music Center is frequently called the "Summer Music Capitol of the South." Officials have proclaimed the 1960 season as highly successful.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037

AUG 12 1960

Liszt Player



JORGE BOLET, Cuban-born pianist who did the sound track for a film about Franz Liszt, "Song Without End," appears at Tanglewood, Lenox, tonight and tomorrow.

American (e)
WATERBURY, Conn.
Circ. 40,278

AUG 15 1960

Tanglewood Concludes '60 Season

(Special to The American)

LENOX, MASS. — The 25th year of Boston Symphony Orchestra participation in the Berkshire Symphonic Festival at Tanglewood came to a magnificent end yesterday afternoon with a brilliant performance of Berlioz,s "Damnation of Faust" conducted by Charles Munch before an audience of 8,913 which listened to a memorable performance by orchestra, more than 100 voices of the Festival Chorus, and four soloists. The entire performance was one of the high spots of an excellent season which had turned in a total attendance of 173,579, somewhat less than the 1959 record of 179,651, despite inclement weather at numerous events.

The week-end audiences, totaling 25,429, heard Pierre Monteux conduct music of Beethoven, Liszt, and Stravinsky Friday night with Jorge Bolet giving a beautiful performance of the Liszt "Concerto for Pianoforte in B flat Major, No. 1." Nearly 10,000 on Saturday night heard Handel's "Suite for Orchestra from the Water Music," the delicate and sparkling performance of Gary Graffman in Chopin's "Piano Concerto in E minor, Op. 11," another of the fine pianists heard this season. Aaron Copland, conducting his own "First Symphony" after intermission, gave the audience an exhibition of his own conducting that was an added interest to the music provided by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

It was yesterday afternoon's concert, however, that sent away the summer audiences of the six weeks at Tanglewood with the awareness that "The Damnation of Faust" was something they would long remember. Martial Singher, singing without a score almost to the end, was such a spirited, theatrical Mephistopheles that his relish in the role was contagious. John McCollum, tenor, sang the difficult role of Faust straight and well though he seemed to add little of inner fire to what he did. Eleanor Steber, soprano, gave a stirring performance as Marguerite and David Laurent, bass, was a fine Brander. The Festival Chorus showed the results of weeks of training and made it a performance one will not forget. Dr. Munch, in one of his best concerts of the summer, was in top form, conducted the orchestra with full color and brilliance and seemed to be enjoying it all.

As the huge Music Shed at Tanglewood becomes silent for another year it is only fitting that one take stock and gather up a few facts and signifcant figures of the season just ended. The grand attendance of 173,579 bought in $385,592 as compared with $338,587 last year. The concerts of the Berkshire Festival season had a total attendance of 138,871 as compared with 148,061 in 1959 when weather was more favorable. The six open rehearsals on Saturday mornings to benefit the orchestra's pension fund drew 19,092 who paid $25,700 into the fund. Last year, 21,797 paid $19,353 to the same fund.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 15 1960

Plouffe

TANGLEWOOD OVATION for Dr. Charles Munch, the Boston Symphony Orchestra, soloists and the Festival chorus lasted for 20 minutes following the last program of 1960 Berkshire Festival season yesterday afternoon, when a performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," was given before crowd of 8,913, bringing weekend total to 25,429; season's total to 173,579.

Attendance Down, $$$$ Up As Festival Curtain Drops

By JOHN G. W. MAHANNA

Tanglewood had its ups and downs this season, the 25th year since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated in the Berkshire Music Festival. As usual, the weatherman held the wand.

Attendance was down 6,072, but receipts were up $47,005 for the season.

24 Major Concerts

The 24 major Festival concerts drew 9,190 fewer people than last year when an all-time attendance record of 148,061 was set; 2,705 fewer people attended the open rehearsals of the orchestra which realized $6,347 more for the orchestra's pension fund than in 1959. Price of admission to the rehearsals this season jumped from $1 to $1.50.

The Wednesday evening chamber music events, the all-Bach and all-Mozart concerts ran ahead of last year in attendance, but the 12 concerts in the Music Shed by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra dropped off 12,357, due principally to inclement weather.

$39,999 for Music Center

The benefit performances held at Tanglewood for the Berkshire Music Center netted $14,439 more than last year when only one event — Tanglewood on Parade — was scheduled. This season, the Boston Symphony officials decided to divide the "Parade" program. They offered at "A Gala Evening," Music Center demonstrations the first half, when 2,448 turned out and paid $5,974 and for the second half, "The Boston Pops at Tanglewood," when 13,168 showed up and turned over $33,625 to the fund, making a total for the two events of 15,616 and receipts of $39,599, compared to last year's "Parade," when 9,793 attended, leaving $25,160 behind for the Music Center's treasury.

The over-all attendance this season was 173,579 compared to 179,651 in 1959, but the ticket sales this year, because of an increase in some ticket price ranges, amounted to $385,592, compared to $338,587 in 1959.

43 Student Events

The 43 student events attracted 12,569 Friends of the Music Center this season, reflecting the increased interest each year in the Music Center activities. Membership in the Friends this year totaled 4,067, with contributions of $34,195, compared to 2,767 last year and contributions of $28,544. The Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago sponsored eight programs featuring contemporary music, which were attended by 3,113.

Inclement weather prevailed at five of the major 18 BSO concerts, at four of the six chamber music programs and at three of the six open rehearsals.

For the past four years, the Boston Symphony Orchestra has closed its six-week Festival with Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. This year Dr. Charles Munch altered the program, presenting Beethoven's Ninth the last Sunday in July with Pierre Monteux conducting before an audience of about 13,000. Yesterday the season ended with Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," before an audience of 8,913.

Weekend Crowd 25,429

Despite reports of occasional rains and thunderstorms over the weekend, the three final Festival concerts attracted 25,429 listeners. The ovation given to the conductor, the orchestra, soloists and Festival chorus yesterday afternoon appeared to be the most thunderous in many years at a closing Festival concert.

Immediately after the afternoon concert, Dr. Munch, who ended his 10th season as musical director of the BSO, left for Albany (N.Y.) Airport, where he boarded a plane for Idlewild Airport and from there left by jet plane for a vacation in Paris, France.

The last of the 286 students in the Berkshire Music Center from 34 states and 13 foreign countries left the Berkshires today for their homes.

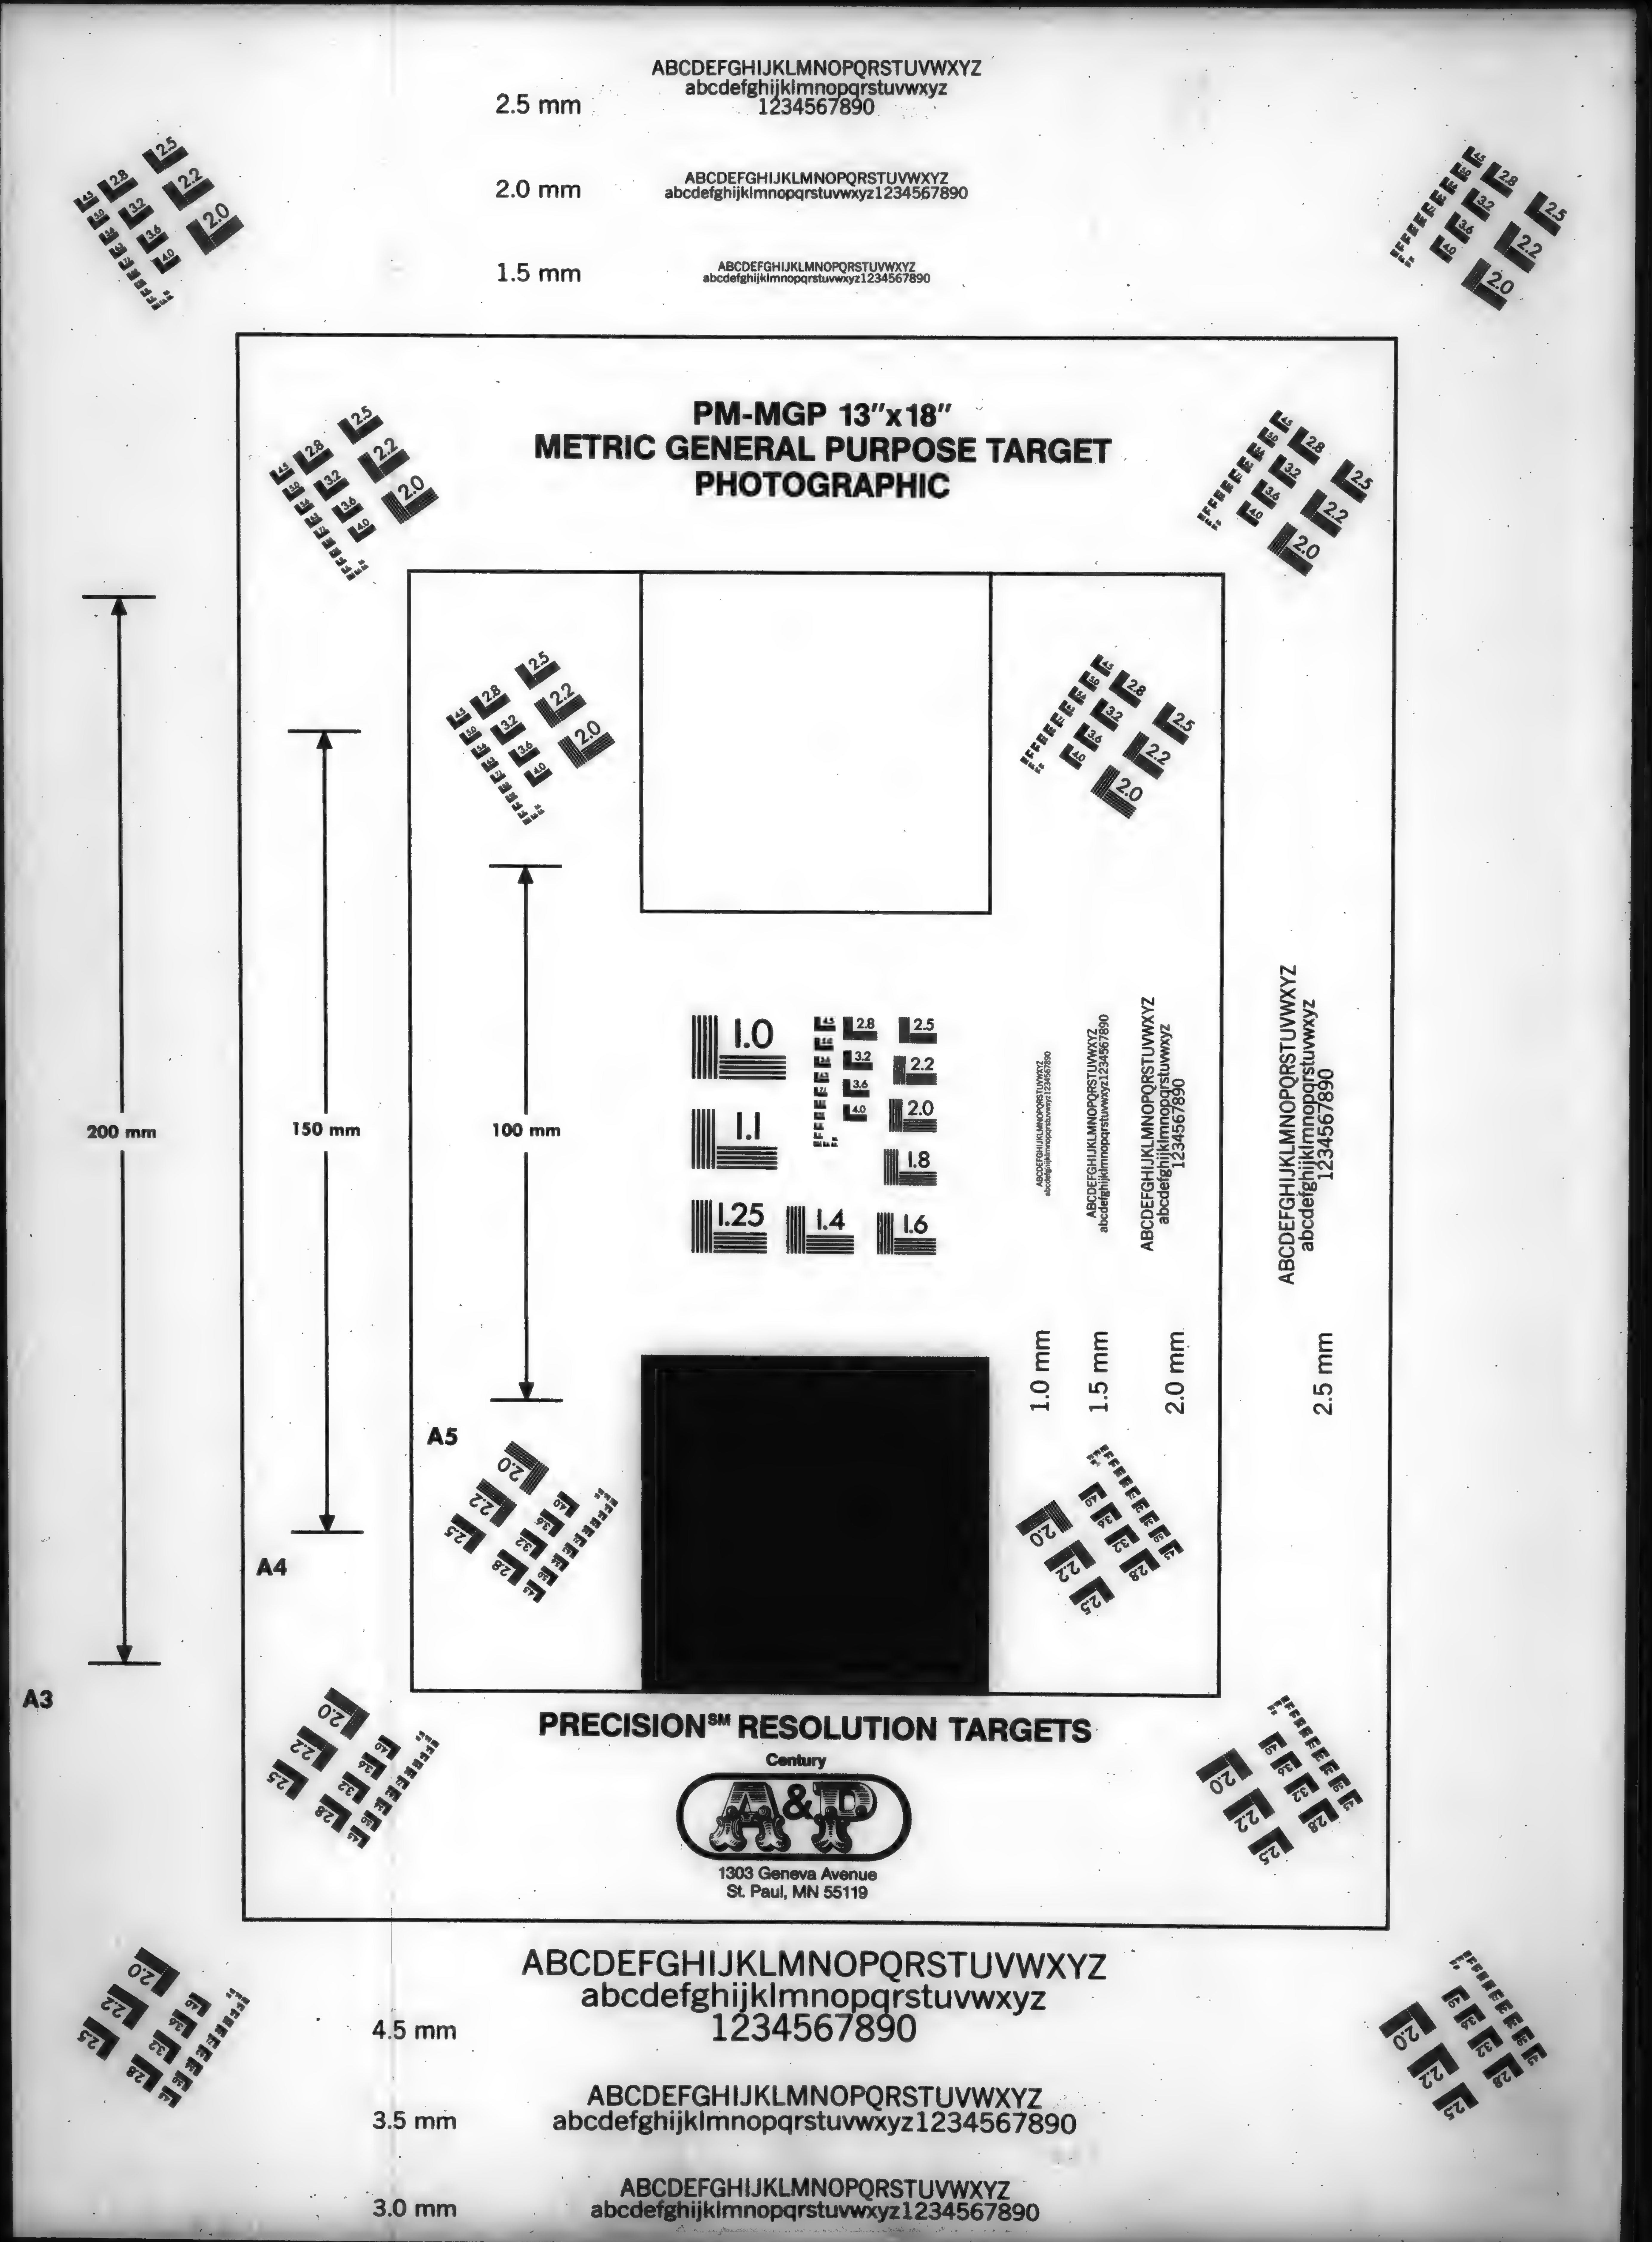
Most of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's staff left last night for Boston to prepare for the opening of the Boston Pops concerts at the Esplanade tonight and the opening of the 80th Symphony Hall concerts by the BSO Oct. 7.

The 1961 Berkshire Festival will open Wednesday, July 4 with the first Wednesday night chamber music concert. The opening exercises of the Music Center are scheduled for July 1.

REDUCTION

RATIO

16x



2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC

1.0 mm

1.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

2.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

2.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

4.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890

3.5 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

3.0 mm

ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz1234567890

166

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

AUG 15 1960

Weather Hurts Attendance

Berkshire Music Festival Ends Season; Seen Success Financially, Artistically

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—All good things must come to an end, so Sunday afternoon the Berkshire Music Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra concluded its six-week visit at Tanglewood with a performance of "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz, conducted by Charles Munch.

Chorus On Hand

The fine festival chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross was on hand to provide some excellent singing. Soloists were Eleanor Steber, soprano; John McCollum, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone and David Laurent, bass. An estimated 8913 persons were on hand for this romantic song story.

In its original form, this work is a "romantic legend" for the concert stage; the music by Hector Berlioz, the words, after Gerald De Nerval's version of the Goethe play, by Berlioz, Gerard and Gandonniere. It was performed in New York in this original form by Dr. Leopold Damrosch in 1880.

Berlioz, disregarding Goethe's poem, transferred the action of his "Faust" to Hungary simply to excuse the interpolation of the Rokoczy March. This march and the delicate dance of the sylphs have been orchestral favorites ever since, and in them Berlioz shows his great genius at orchestral writing.

There was some good singing during the performance. As Faust, John McCollum sang eloquently after a brief warm-up period. Martial Singher as Mephistopheles grimaced and worked hard at the portrait, but sang with less virility than some of his colleagues. The voice lacks warmth or much color at best. David Laurent, singing a bass role, was effective particularly in his enunciation of the text, equalling Mr. Singher in this respect.

Miss Steber knows her way around any part she sings and she brought a poignancy and sweetness to the role of Marguerite. The music lay well in the voice, and all was well. There was also some rousing chorus singing, yet the chorus was able to encompass some beautiful lyric passages.

A Sure Hand

Charles Munch directed with sure hand and thorough knowledge of the score. He made much of the Rokoczy, playing it at break-neck speed, and the exquisite dance of the sylphs was an example of the Boston Symphony at its most rewarding. Applause was lavish. So ended a festival where great performances have been the rule.

It appears from the statistical sheet that the festival has been a financial as well as an artistic success. Attendance this season was 173,579, with ticket sales amounting to $385,592.50. Attendance at the 1959 festival was 179,851 with ticket sales amounting to $338,587.75. Increase in some ticket price ranges accounts for the increase in sales, even though the attendance was off slightly from 1959.

This season 4062 friends memberships brought in a total of $34,195. Last season 2767 friends memberships brought in $28,544.

More Bach Listeners

The six Wednesday night chamber music recitals drew 8034 persons, against 7638 last season. A total of 11,949 persons attended the three all-Bach concerts against 11,001 last season. The three all-Mozart concerts drew 16,184 members against 13,747 last season, and the 12 concerts by the full Boston Attendance at the 1959 festival Symphony Orchestra this season attendance for these 24 Berkshire Festival concerts was 138,871 against the 1959 attendance of 148,061.

The six open rehearsals, to benefit the orchestra's pension fund, drew an attendance of 19,797. The 1959 total attendance was 21,797. The pension fund netted $25,700 this season and $19,353 last season.

Two events were given for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. There was no Tanglewood On Parade. Instead "A Gala Evening" and "Boston Pops at Tanglewood" drew a total attendance of 15,615, and ticket sales amounted to $39,599.50. The Fromm Music Foundation free concerts attracted 3113 persons.

It is interesting to note that inclement weather prevailed at five of the 18 orchestra concerts; at four of the six chamber music concerts and at three of the six open rehearsals.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

AUG 14 1960

Boston Symphony Offers 'Summer' Music at Lenox

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—Music for a summer evening might well be the title of the program Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra offered to an audience of 9733 people Saturday night.

One Concert Left

Only one more concert remains in the current Berkshire Music Festival which closes Sunday afternoon following a performance of "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz, conducted by Charles Munch.

The program opened with Handel's delightful "Water Music," the suite arrangement by Sir Hamilton Harty. This was followed by the graceful, youthful emotional "Piano Concerto in E [illegible]or" by Chopin. The fine American pianist Gary Graffman was soloist.

The concluding work was Aaron Copland's First Symphony and Mr. Copland, after a tour of the Far East with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted his symphony. The result was much more satisfying than other composers we have watched conduct their works.

Composed for Occasion

Handel could compose music for most any occasion and one of his specialties was the composing of entertaining, light music. The suite from "The Water Music" is a case in point. Its six movements include such charming episodes as a bourree, hornpipe and air, along with a couple of allegro movements and an expressive andante.

Mr. Munch seems to have an affection for this music and he evoked lovely sounds from the orchestra and made each little episode a vital and charming revelation.

Chopin, only 20, was emotionally involved when he wrote his two piano concertos within a year of each other. It is said he wrote them for his own use on tour.

Many pianists treat these concertos as vehicles for virtuoso display. Mr. Graffman played them musically, yet with assured technique which met every demand. He dwelt lovingly on the melodies and spun delicious tonal effects. In the final movement he generated excitement, both through his dashing pianism and through his personality. In a huge place like the Music Shed, personality becomes an important part of the ensemble. Mr. Munch and the Boston players contributed warm and skillful collaboration.

Aaron Copland wrote his first symphony, which he called an organ symphony, in Paris in 1924. The following year it was performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Since then he revised the symphony, omitting the organ.

This symphony is relatively early Copland when he was wisely influenced by Nadia Boulanger. Many a non-American composer has been vastly less successful in writing his first symphony than Mr. Copland has been in his first effort. He is a fine craftsman and imaginative. Some passages fall harshly upon the ear but there is a notable stability and unity in the symphony. Undoubtedly we heard Saturday night a definitive performance, for who should know better than the composer how his music should be performed.

The festival closes this afternoon with a performance of "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz. The festival chorus will be on hand as will Eleanor Steber, soprano; John McCollum, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone and David Laurent, bass.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 57,341

AUG 15 1960

Music: Berkshire Music Festival Closes

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The 23rd Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood ended yesterday afternoon with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Festival Chorus, and soloists in Berlioz' dramatic legend, Opus 24, "The Damnation of Faust."

Soloists were John McCollum, tenor, Faust; Martial Singer, baritone, Mephistopheles; David Laurent, Bass, Brander, and Eleanor Steber, soprano, Margherite.

In spite of frowning skies, there was an audience of 8,913.

This made a total attendance of 188,871 for the 24 Berkshire Festival concerts this summer. It's 9,190 less than last summer. The six open rehearsals, to benefit the orchestra's pension fund, were attended by 19,092. The fund was thereby augmented by $25,700.

Additional Contributions

The "Gala Evening," and "Tanglewood on parade" attracted 15,[illegible]16 persons, contributing $[illegible] to the Berkshire Music Center. "Friends of the Berkshire Music Center" made additional contributions of $34,195.

There were 12,569 persons at the 43 events of the Be[illegible] Music Center.

Inclement weather prevailed at five of the 18 orchestral concerts, at four of the six chamber music concerts, and three of the six open rehearsals.

Total attendance of all events at Tanglewood this summer was 173,579, with total receipts of $385,592, as against inclusive attendance of 179,651 last summer, and $338,587. Increased cost of tickets brought in this festival's additional $47,005.

Final Concert

A Tanglewood tradition was broken with Berlioz' "Damnation" for the final concert. During the late Serge Koussevitzky's Regime (ending 11 years ago), Sibelius' Second Symphony was the favorite festival wind-up.

Subsequently, with Munch, it became Beethoven's Ninth Symphony which was performed here two teeks ago.

Munch is a staunch disciple of Berlioz' music. There probably isn't a more enlightened Berlioz interpreter. It is to Munch's credit that the "Damnation" proved to be an impressive festival climax.

Yesterday's performance had some superlative merits, and a smattering of liabilities.

Can't Be Ignored

No matter what degree of efficiency in performance, it can't be ignored that Goethe's text was the magnet that set off Berlioz' musical score. Without a clear literary text, there cannot be such compelling opposites as the "Rakoczy" march versus "Dance of the Sylphs" — or such ingenious contrasts as Faust and Mephisto.

Had it not been for a superlative male chorus (supplemented by six seminarians and a priest from nearby Shadowbrook) the choral message would have been partly negated. One difficulty was incoherent pronunciation of the French language — another, a heavy orchestration with brasses as the main offenders.

The entire mixed chorus of 125 voices had obviously been painstakingly prepared by Hugh Ross, Lorna Cooke De Varon, and Alfred Nash Patterson.

Eloquent Contributions

Their most eloquent contributions as a mixed group were the "Easter Hymn" and as "Spirits of the Air." In the former, balances were sensitive, tonal body had largess, and phrase beginnings were punctual. The latter was a finer blend of sounds but just as effective in perspective.

It was the male chorus,however, that gave the entire work its solid foundation and vivacious spirit.

The 50 gentlemen literally emblazoned the scenes in which Faust revels in anticipated delight, Mephisto mocks, and Brander (student ring-leader) dignifies a rat with song.

Male Ensemble

"Drinking Song" by the male ensemble was valiant, but partly suffused in an instrumental sea. The sacrilegious "Rest in Peace" (an elegy to the dead rat) was a superb demonstration of polished and secure part-singing.

Disciplined work by the total chorus was mainstay of the scene in which Faust and Margherite are jeered by the populace — and the angelic welcome of Margherite into their celestial company.

The leading roles in "Damnation" must be personal creations of the soloists. Although it's an oratorio-style presentation, Berlioz clearly had in mind operatic vitality and character portrayal.

Most Compelling

Most compelling of yesterday's characterizations (apart from purely vocal considerations) was McCollum's Faust.

He even prevented Berlioz' Melodramatic wailings, "I suffer"

and calls for Margherite from sounding insipid.

McCollum reached that happy medium between static concert delivery and florid operatic flair. His tenor was rich, expressive, and ample. Also, he placed a wide dramatic terrain between such bucolic arias as that which relects on delights of carefree life and those of tragic consequences.

Subject to Debate

Singher's 'Mephisto' was subject to debate. He overworked at trying to make this the dominant matter of the score and story. Absence of scenery, costumes, and action was no obstacle to Singer's efforts. Furthermore he stood out from the rest of the soloists by singing without holding a score, although his peekaboos at McCollum's music were frequent enough.

The baritone has a voice of moderate proportions, excellent quality (not infallible in pitch) and impeccable pronunciation.

But his Mephisto was a grimacing figure rather than one of sinister or sardonic awe. In his defense, it should be said that the orchestra blasted away at some of his phrase endings. Best of his scenes were the "Soliloquy" in which he entices Faust to the banks of the Elbe, and the oratory that summons the "Will-O'-the-Wisps."

Laurent's "Song of the Rat" did not have the potency of which it is capable, but his quality of voice was attractive and there was crispness of phrase.

Wasn't Far Removed

Miss Steber's Margherite wasn't far removed from a Mimi or a Violetta.

She projected tonal warmth, notably in the opening aria that was glowingly reinforced by Joseph DePasquale's viola solo.

Except for occasionally excessive volume (which was Munch's dictate), the orchestra was magnificent.

The "Rakoczy" march couldn't have exuded more resonance or energy without an enlarged orchestra. And the "Sylph Dance" was a masterpiece of delicacy and tonal beauty.

8/13/60

LD UNION, SPRINGFIE

6783 APPLAUD PIANIST BOLET AND MONTEUX

Stravinsky, Liszt and Beethoven Works Played At Festival

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Three splendid exciting works conducted by the old master, Pierre Monteux, introduced the final week end of concerts Friday night at Tanglewood. Perfect weather and a fine program drew 6783 persons to the Music Shed and the lawns.

Concerto Offered

The program opened with Beethoven's "Symphony No. 2" and concluded with Stravinsky's magnificent "Firebird Suite." In between these masterpieces, Jorge Belot was heard in a scintillating performance of the Liszt Concerto for Piano and Orchestra No. 1 in E-Flat Major.

Mr. Bolet is a pianist of unusual attainments. A big man, he plays big and this expansive manner becomes him. Liszt's first concerto can stand a spacious reading and when the soloist has the necessary technical equipment, which Mr. Bolet has in abundance, the work, though dated, can be exciting. Mr. Bolet can make a piano thunder or whisper. His playing of florid passages is neat and his mastery of legato something to wonder at.

Continuous Movement

The concerto is in one continuous movement subdivided into four sections, each corresponding to a short symphonic movement. There is the moderate opening movement; a lyrical adagio; a scherzo, introduced by a triangle solo; and a final martial allegro. The concerto is compact and closely integrated thematically. The use of the triangle was considered very radical when introduced. Indeed it caused a controversy of long standing.

Mr. Bolet and Mr. Monteux saw eye to eye performance-wise and the collaboration of orchestra and soloist was excellent. The audience went somewhat wild with its applause, and conductor and soloist were recalled many times. It is interesting to note that this pianist of unlimited technique and flaming interpretation was chosen to perform for the sound track of "Song Without Words," the motion picture on the life of Franz Liszt.

Pierre Monteux made Stravinsky's "Firebird" known to a Parisian audience in 1910. He has written that the audience remained silent for the first two minutes, then came boos and catcalls from the gallery and soon from the lower floors. There were even personal scuffles, when neighbors berated each other.

Of Early Period

Stravinsky's music is as full of change and revolution as the times through which he has lived. He has written musical history and, as Aaron Copland writes, "has influenced two succeeding generations in ways diametrically opposed."

Yet today the "Firebird" is considered to belong to Stravinsky's Russian, or early primitive period. The story of the "Firebird" is an ancient Russian legend. It was commissioned and composed in 1910 for Serge Diaghivlev's famous Ballets Russes. The work consists of six movements.

The music is the sort that seems tailor-made for the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It is full of color, contrasting rhythms, passages of opulent sound and others of the wry, dissonant sort, that so often is characteristic of Stravinsky. The depth of knowledge of this work which Mr. Monteux possesses was evident in every phrase of his interpretation. There was grandeur when grandeur was indicated, and serenity, as in the exquisite lullaby. We shall cherish the memory of this performance.

Beethoven's second symphony is a happy one. Environment, contentment and music combined to make the summer of 1892 a happy one for Beethoven and this contentment may be noted in every phrase of the music.

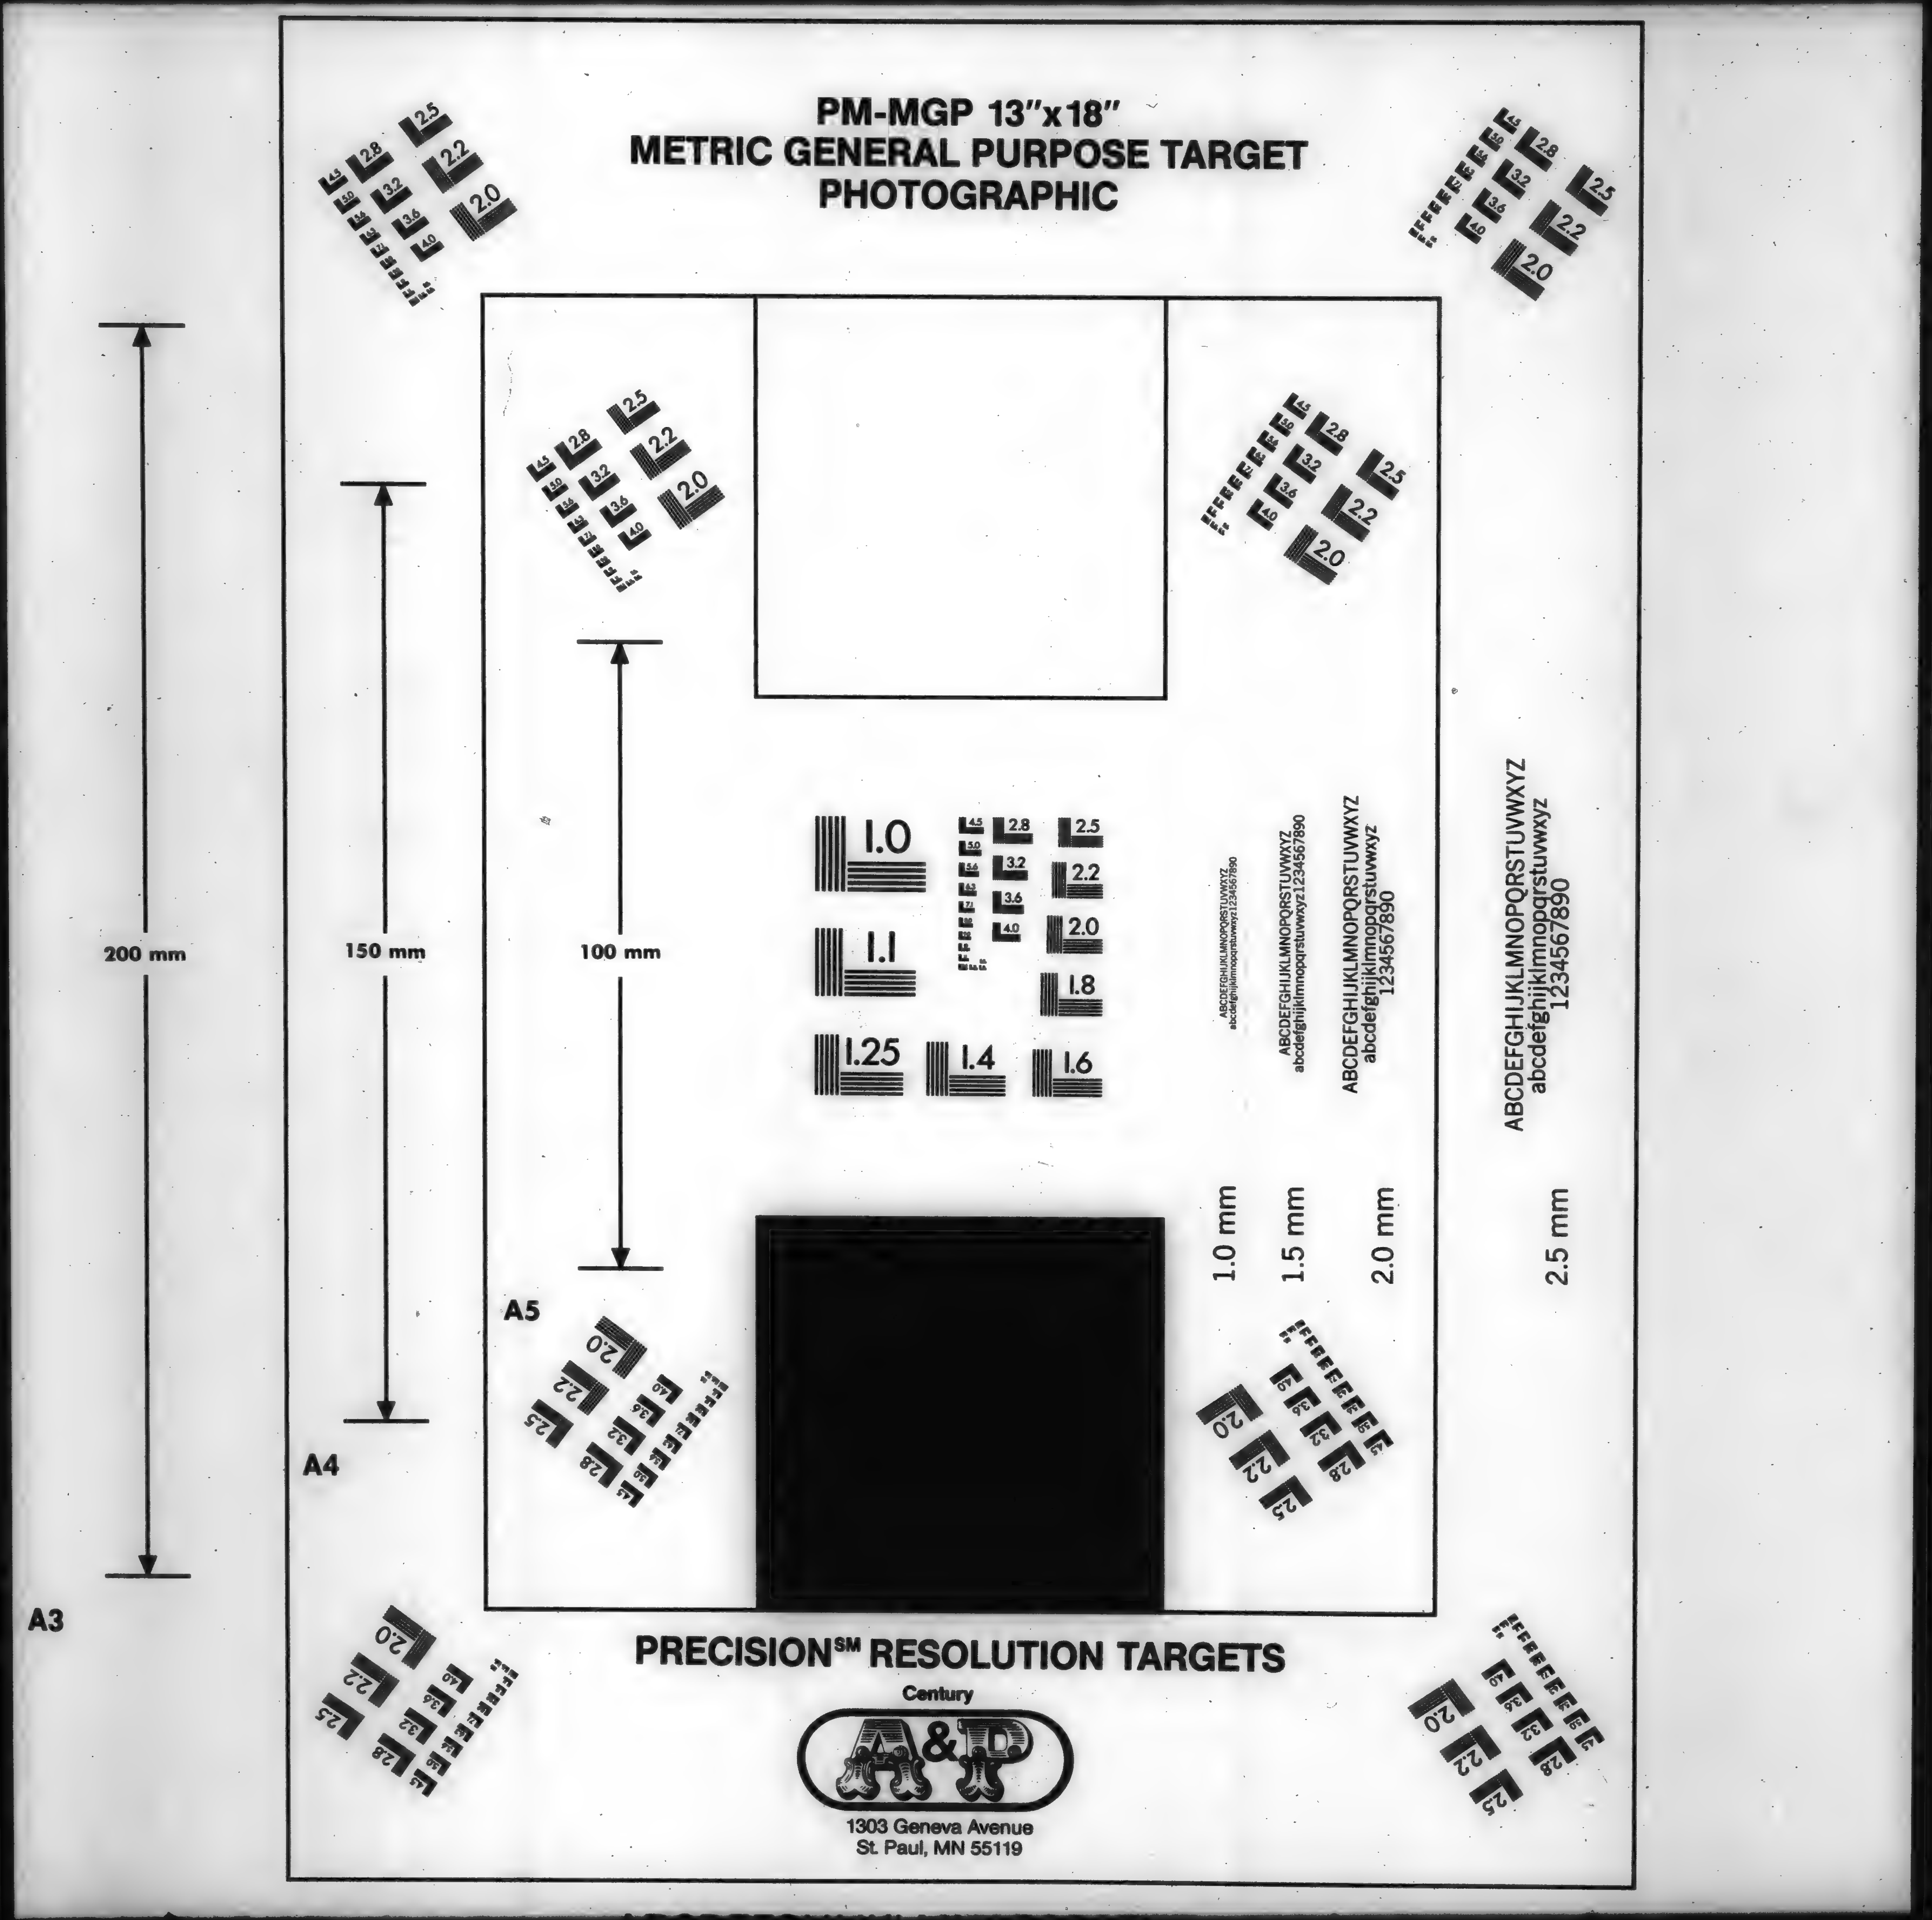
Pierre Monteux offered a relaxed, yet vital performance and received warm and sympathetic collaboration from the Boston players.

The opening movement is charged with hearty, earthy good humor. The second movement, one of the most beautiful larghettos ever written, was played with exquisite tonal beauty. The scherzo was brisk, robust and co-ordinated and the final movement was eloquent in its utterance.

There was no rush or bustle in the performance, only a calm and intelligent approach which let the music speak for itself.

REDUCTION
RATIO
14x

PM-MGP 13"x18"
METRIC GENERAL PURPOSE TARGET
PHOTOGRAPHIC



2.5
2.8
2.2
3.2
2.0
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
200 mm
150 mm
100 mm
1.0
1.1
1.25
1.4
1.6
1.8
2.0
2.2
2.5
2.8
3.2
3.6
4.0
4.5
5.0
5.6
6.3
7.1
ABCDEFGHIJKLMNOPQRSTUVWXYZ
abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz
1234567890
1.0 mm
1.5 mm
2.0 mm
2.5 mm
A5
A4
A3

PRECISION℠ RESOLUTION TARGETS

Century
A&P
1303 Geneva Avenue
St. Paul, MN 55119

166

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

AUG 15 1960

Weather Hurts Attendance

Berkshire Music Festival Ends Season; Seen Success Financially, Artistically

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—All good things must come to an end, so Sunday afternoon the Berkshire Music Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra concluded its six-week visit at Tanglewood with a performance of "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz, conducted by Charles Munch.

Chorus On Hand

The fine festival chorus, prepared by Hugh Ross was on hand to provide some excellent singing. Soloists were Eleanor Steber, soprano; John McCollum, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone and David Laurent, bass. An estimated 8913 persons were on hand for this romantic song story.

In its original form, this work is a "romantic legend" for the concert stage; the music by Hector Berlioz, the words, after Gerald De Nerval's version of the Goethe play, by Berlioz, Gerard and Gandonniere. It was performed in New York in this original form by Dr. Leopold Damrosch in 1880.

Berlioz, disregarding Goethe's poem, transferred the action of his "Faust" to Hungary simply to excuse the interpolation of the Rokoczy March. This march and the delicate dance of the sylphs have been orchestral favorites ever since, and in them Berlioz shows his great genius at orchestral writing.

There was some good singing during the performance. As Faust, John McCollum sang eloquently after a brief warm-up period. Martial Singher as Mephistopheles grimaced and worked hard at the portrait, but sang with less virility than some of his colleagues. The voice lacks warmth or much color at best. David Laurent, singing a bass role, was effective particularly in his enunciation of the text, equalling Mr. Singher in this respect.

Miss Steber knows her way around any part she sings and she brought a poignancy and sweetness to the role of Marguerite. The music lay well in the voice, and all was well. There was also some rousing chorus singing, yet the chorus was able to encompass some beautiful lyric passages.

A Sure Hand

Charles Munch directed with sure hand and thorough knowledge of the score. He made much of the Rokoczy, playing it at break-neck speed, and the exquisite dance of the sylphs was an example of the Boston Symphony at its most rewarding. Applause was lavish. So ended a festival where great performances have been the rule.

It appears from the statistical sheet that the festival has been a financial as well as an artistic success. Attendance this season was 173,579, with ticket sales amounting to $385,592.50. Attendance at the 1959 festival was 179,651 with ticket sales amounting to $338,587.75. Increase in some ticket price ranges accounts for the increase in sales, even though the attendance was off slightly from 1959.

This season 4062 friends memberships brought in a total of $34,195. Last season 2767 friends memberships brought in $28,544.

More Bach Listeners

The six Wednesday night chamber music recitals drew 8034 persons, against 7638 last season. A total of 11,949 persons attended the three all-Bach concerts against 11,001 last season. The three all-Mozart concerts drew 16,184 members against 13,747 last season, and the 12 concerts by the full Boston Attendance at the 1959 festival Symphony Orchestra this season attendance for these 24 Berkshire Festival concerts was 138,871 against the 1959 attendance of 148,061.

The six open rehearsals, to benefit the orchestra's pension fund, drew an attendance of 19,797. The 1959 total attendance was 21,797. The pension fund netted $25,700 this season and $19,353 last season.

Two events were given for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. There was no Tanglewood On Parade. Instead "A Gala Evening" and "Boston Pops at Tanglewood" drew a total attendance of 15,615, and ticket sales amounted to $39,599.50. The Fromm Music Foundation free concerts attracted 3113 persons.

It is interesting to note that inclement weather prevailed at five of the 18 orchestra concerts; at four of the six chamber music concerts and at three of the six open rehearsals.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

AUG 14 1960

Boston Symphony Offers 'Summer' Music at Lenox

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX—Music for a summer evening might well be the title of the program Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra offered to an audience of 9733 people Saturday night.

One Concert Left

Only one more concent remains in the current Berkshire Music Festival which closes Sunday afternoon following a performance of "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz, conducted by Charles Munch.

The program opened with Handel's delightful "Water Music," the suite arrangement by Sir Hamilton Harty. This was followed by the graceful, youthful emotional "Piano Concerto in E minor" by Chopin. The fine American pianist Gary Graffman was soloist.

The concluding work was Aaron Copland's First Symphony and Mr. Copland, after a tour of the Far East with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted his symphony. The result was much more satisfying than other composers we have watched conduct their works.

Composed for Occasion

Handel could compose music for most any occasion and one of his specialties was the composing of entertaining, light music. The suite from "The Water Music" is a case in point. Its six movements include such charming episodes as a bourree, hornpipe and air, along with a couple of allegro movements and an expressive andante.

Mr. Munch seems to have an affection for this music and he evoked lovely sounds from the orchestra and made each little episode a vital and charming revelation.

Chopin, only 20, was emotionally involved when he wrote his two piano concertos within a year of each other. It is said he wrote them for his own use on tour.

Many pianists treat these concertos as vehicles for virtuoso display. Mr. Graffman played them musically, yet with assured technique which met every demand. He dwelt lovingly on the melodies and spun delicious tonal effects. In the final movement he generated excitement, both through his dashing pianism and through his personality. In a huge place like the Music Shed, personality becomes an important part of the ensemble. Mr. Munch and the Boston players contributed warm and skillful collaboration.

Aaron Copland wrote his first symphony, which he called an organ symphony, in Paris in 1924. The following year it was performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Since then he revised the symphony, omitting the organ.

This symphony is relatively early Copland when he was wisely influenced by Nadia Boulanger. Many a non-American composer has been vastly less successful in writing his first symphony than Mr. Copland has been in his first effort. He is a fine craftsman and imaginative. Some passages fall harshly upon the ear but there is a notable stability and unity in the symphony. Undoubtedly we heard Saturday night a definitive performance, for who should know better than the composer how his music should be performed.

The festival closes this afternoon with a performance of "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz. The festival chorus will be on hand as will Eleanor Steber, soprano; John McCollum, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone and David Laurent, bass.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 57,341

AUG 15 1960

Music: Berkshire Music Festival Closes

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The 23rd Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood ended yesterday afternoon with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Festival Chorus, and soloists in Berlioz' dramatic legend, Opus 24, "The Damnation of Faust."

Soloists were John McCollum, tenor, Faust; Martial Singer, baritone, Mephistopheles; David Laurent, Bass, Brander, and Eleanor Steber, soprano, Margherite.

In spite of frowning skies, there was an audience of 8,913.

This made a total attendance of 138,871 for the 24 Berkshire Festival concerts this summer. It's 9,190 less than last summer. The six open rehearsals, to benefit the orchestra's pension fund, were attended by 19,092. The fund was thereby augmented by $ 25,700.

Additional Contributions

The "Gala Evening," and "Tanglewood on parade" attracted 15,616 persons, contributing $[illegible] to the Berkshire Music Center. "Friends of the Berkshire Music Center" made additional contributions of $34,195.

There were 12,569 persons at the 43 events of the Berkshire Music Center.

Inclement weather prevailed at five of the 18 orchestral concerts, at four of the six chamber music concerts, and three of the six open rehearsals.

Total attendance of all events at Tanglewood this summer was 173,579, with total receipts of $385,592, as against inclusive attendance of 179,651 last summer, and $338,587. Increased cost of tickets brought in this festival's additional $47,005.

Final Concert

A Tanglewood tradition was broken with Berlioz' "Damnation" for the final concert. During the late Serge Koussevitzky's Regime (ending 11 years ago), Sibelius' Second Symphony was the favorite festival wind-up.

Subsequently, with Munch, it became Beethoven's Ninth Symphony which was performed here two teeks ago.

Munch is a staunch disciple of Berlioz' music. There probably isn't a more enlightened Berlioz interpreter. It is to Munch's credit that the "Damnation" proved to be an impressive festival climax.

Yesterday's performance had some superlative merits, and a smattering of liabilities.

Can't Be Ignored

No matter what degree of efficiency in performance, it can't be ignored that Goethe's text was the magnet that set off Berlioz' musical score. Without a clear literary text, there cannot be such compelling opposites as the "Rakoczy" march versus "Dance of the Sylphs" — or such ingenious contrasts as Faust and Mephisto.

Had it not been for a superlative male chorus (supplemented by six seminarians and a priest from nearby Shadowbrook) the choral message would have been partly negated. One difficulty was incoherent pronunciation of the French language — another, a heavy orchestration with brasses as the main offenders.

The entire mixed chorus of 125 voices had obviously been pain-and calls for Margherita from sounding insipid.

McCollum reached that happy medium between static concert delivery and florid operatic flair. His tenor was rich, expressive, and ample. Also, he placed a wide dramatic terrain between such bucolic arias as that which relects on delights of carefree life and those of tragic consequences.

Subject to Debate

Singher's 'Mephisto" was subject to debate. He overworked at trying to make this the dominant matter of the score and story. Absence of scenery, costumes, and action was no obstacle to Singer's efforts. Furthermore he stood out from the rest of the soloists by singing without holding a score, although his peekaboos at McCollum's music were frequent enough.

The baritone has a voice of moderate proportions, excellent quality (not infallible in pitch) and impeccable pronunciation.

But his Mephisto was a grimacing figure rather than one of sinister or sardonic awe. In his defense, it should be said that the orchestra blasted away at some of his phrase endings. Best of his scenes were the "Soliloquy" in which he entices Faust to the banks of the Elbe, and the oratory that summons the "Will-O'-the-Wisps."

Laurent's "Song of the Rat" did not have the potency of which it is capable, but his quality of voice was attractive and there was crispness of phrase.

Wasn't Far Removed

Miss Steber's Margherite wasn't far removed from a Mimi or a Violetta.

She projected tonal warmth, notably in the opening aria that was glowingly reinforced by Joseph DiPasquale's viola solo.

Except for occasionally excessive volume (which was Munch's dictate), the orchestra was magnificent.

The "Rakoczy" march couldn't have exuded more resonance or energy without an enlarged orchestra. And the "Sylph Dance" was a masterpiece of delicacy and tonal beauty.

8/13/60

LD UNION, SPRINGFIE

6783 APPLAUD PIANIST BOLET AND MONTEUX

Stravinsky, Liszt and Beethoven Works Played At Festival

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Three splendid exciting works conducted by the old master, Pierre Monteux, introduced the final week end of concerts Friday night at Tanglewood. Perfect weather and a fine program drew 6783 persons to the Music Shed and the lawns.

Concerto Offered

The program opened with Beethoven's "Symphony No. 2" and concluded with Stravinsky's magnificent "Firebird Suite." In between these masterpieces, Jorge Belot was heard in a scintillating performance of the Liszt Concerto for Piano and Orchestra No. 1 in E-Flat Major.

Mr. Bolet is a pianist of unusual attainments. A big man, he plays big and this expansive manner becomes him. Liszt's first concerto can stand a spacious reading and when the soloist has the necessary technical equipment, which Mr. Bolet has in abundance, the work, though dated, can be exciting. Mr. Bolet can make a piano thunder or whisper. His playing of florid passages is neat and his mastery of legato something to wonder at.

Continuous Movement

The concerto is in one continuous movement subdivided into four sections, each corresponding to a short symphonic movement. There is the moderate opening movement; a lyrical adagio; a scherzo, introduced by a triangle solo; and a final martial allegro. The concerto is compact and closely integrated thematically. The use of the triangle was considered very radical when introduced. Indeed it caused a controversy of long standing.

Mr. Bolet and Mr. Monteux saw eye to eye performancewise and the collaboration of orchestra and soloist was excellent. The audience went somewhat wild with its applause, and conductor and soloist were recalled many times. It is interesting to note that this pianist of unlimited technique and flaming interpretation was chosen to perform for the sound track of "Song Without Words," the motion picture on the life of Franz Liszt.

Pierre Monteux made Stravinsky's "Firebird" known to a Parisian audience in 1910. He has written that the audience remained silent for the first two minutes, then came boos and catcalls from the gallery and soon from the lower floors. There were even personal scuffles, when neighbors berated each other.

Of Early Period

Stravinsky's music is as full of change and revolution as the times through which he has lived. He has written musical history and, as Aaron Copland writes, "has influenced two succeeding generations in ways diametrically opposed."

Yet today the "Firebird" is considered to belong to Stravinsky's Russian, or early primitive period. The story of the "Firebird" is an ancient Russian legend. It was commissioned and composed in 1910 for Serge Diaghivlev's famous Ballets Russes. The work consists of six movements.

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — The 23rd Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood ended yesterday afternoon with Charles Munch conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Festival Chorus, and soloists in Berlioz' dramatic legend, Opus 24, "The Damnation of Faust."

Soloists were John McCollum, tenor, Faust; Martial Singer, baritone, Mephistopheles; David Laurent, Bass, Brander, and Eleanor Steber, soprano, Margherite.

In spite of frowning skies, there was an audience of 8,913.

This made a total attendance of 138,871 for the 24 Berkshire Festival concerts this summer. It's 9,190 less than last summer. The six open rehearsals, to benefit the orchestra's pension fund, were attended by 19,092. The fund was thereby augmented by $ 25,700.

Additional Contributions

The "Gala Evening," and "Tanglewood on parade" attracted 15,616 persons, contributing $[illegible] to the Berkshire Music Center. "Friends of the Berkshire Music Center" made additional contributions of $34,195.

There were 12,569 persons at the 43 events of the Berkshire Music Center.

Inclement weather prevailed at five of the 18 orchestral concerts, at four of the six chamber music concerts, and three of the six open rehearsals.

Total attendance of all events at Tanglewood this summer was 173,579, with total receipts of $385,592, as against inclusive attendance of 179,651 last summer, and $338,587. Increased cost of tickets brought in this festival's additional $47,005.

Final Concert

Tanglewood tradition was broken with Berlioz' "Damnation" for the final concert. During the late Serge Koussevitzky's Regime (ending 11 years ago), Sibelius' Second Symphony was the favorite festival wind-up.

Subsequently, with Munch, it became Beethoven's Ninth Symphony which was performed here two teeks ago.

Munch is a staunch disciple of Berlioz' music. There probably isn't a more enlightened Berlioz interpreter. It is to Munch's credit that the "Damnation" proved to be an impressive festival climax.

Yesterday's performance had some superlative merits, and a smattering of liabilities.

Can't Be Ignored

No matter what degree of efficiency in performance, it can't be ignored that Goethe's text was the magnet that set off Berlioz' musical score. Without a clear literary text, there cannot be such compelling opposites as the "Rakoczy" march versus "Dance of the Sylphs" — or such ingenious contrasts as Faust and Mephisto.

Had it not been for a superlative male chorus (supplemented by six seminarians and a priest from nearby Shadowbrook) the choral message would have been partly negated. One difficulty was incoherent pronunciation of the French language — another, a heavy orchestration with brasses as the main offenders.

The entire mixed chorus of 125 voices had obviously been painstakingly prepared by Hugh Ross, Lorna Cooke De Varon, and Alfred Nash Patterson.

Eloquent Contributions

Their most eloquent contributions as a mixed group were the "Easter Hymn" and as "Spirits of the Air." In the former, balances were sensitive, tonal body had largess, and phrase beginnings were punctual. The latter was a finer blend of sounds but just as effective in perspective.

It was the male chorus, however, that gave the entire work its solid foundation and vivacious spirit.

The 50 gentlemen literally emblazoned the scenes in which Faust revels in anticipated delight, Mephisto mocks, and Brander (student ring-leader) dignifies a rat with song.

Male Ensemble

"Drinking Song" by the male ensemble was valiant, but partly suffused in an instrumental sea. The sacrilegious "Rest in Peace" (an elegy to the dead rat) was a superb demonstration of polished and secure part-singing.

Disciplined work by the total chorus was mainstay of the scene in which Faust and Margherite are jeered by the populace — and the angelic welcome of Margherite into their celestial company.

The leading roles in "Damnation" must be personal creations of the soloists. Although it's an oratorio-style presentation, Berlioz clearly had in mind operatic vitality and character portrayal.

Most Compelling

Most compelling of yesterday's characterizations (apart from purely vocal considerations) was McCollum's Faust.

He even prevented Berlioz' Melodramatic wailings "I suffer"

and calls for Margherite from sounding insipid.

McCollum reached that happy medium between static concert delivery and florid operatic flair. His tenor was rich, expressive, and ample. Also, he placed a wide dramatic terrain between such bucolic arias as that which relects on delights of carefree life and those of tragic consequences.

Subject to Debate

Singher's 'Mephisto" was subject to debate. He overworked at trying to make this the dominant matter of the score and story. Absence of scenery, costumes, and action was no obstacle to Singer's efforts. Furthermore he stood out from the rest of the soloists by singing without holding a score, although his peekaboos at McCollum's music were frequent enough.

The baritone has a voice of moderate proportions, excellent quality (not infallible in pitch) and impeccable pronunciation.

But his Mephisto was a grimacing figure rather than one of sinister or sardonic awe. In his defense, it should be said that the orchestra blasted away at some of his phrase endings. Best of his scenes were the "Soliloquy" in which he entices Faust to the banks of the Elbe, and the oratory that summons the "Will-O'-the-Wisps."

Laurent's "Song of the Rat" did not have the potency of which it is capable, but his quality of voice was attractive and there was crispness of phrase.

Wasn't Far Removed

Miss Steber's Margherite wasn't far removed from a Mimi or a Violetta.

She projected tonal warmth, notably in the opening aria that was glowingly reinforced by Joseph DePasquale's viola solo.

Except for occasionally excessive volume (which was Munch's dictate), the orchestra was magnificent.

The "Rakoczy" march couldn't have exuded more resonance or energy without an enlarged orchestra. And the "Sylph Dance" was a masterpiece of delicacy and tonal beauty.

Charles Munch directed with sure hand and thorough knowledge of the score. He made much of the Rokoczy, playing it at break-neck speed, and the exquisite dance of the sylphs was an example of the Boston Symphony at its most rewarding. Applause was lavish. So ended a festival where great performances have been the rule.

It appears from the statistical sheet that the festival has been a financial as well as an artistic success. Attendance this season was 173,579, with ticket sales amounting to $385,592.50. Attendance at the 1959 festival was 179,651 with ticket sales amounting to $338,587.75. Increase in some ticket price ranges accounts for the increase in sales, even though the attendance was off slightly from 1959.

This season 4062 friends memberships brought in a total of $34,195. Last season 2767 friends memberships brought in $28,544.

More Bach Listeners

The six Wednesday night chamber music recitals drew 8034 persons, against 7638 last season. A total of 11,949 persons attended the three all-Bach concerts against 11,001 last season. The three all-Mozart concerts drew 16,184 members against 13,747 last season, and the 12 concerts by the full Boston Attendance at the 1959 festival Symphony Orchestra this season attendance for these 24 Berkshire Festival concerts was 138,871 against the 1959 attendance of 148,061.

The six open rehearsals, to benefit the orchestra's pension fund, drew an attendance of 19,797. The 1959 total attendance was 21,797. The pension fund netted $25,700 this season and $19,353 last season.

Two events were given for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. There was no Tanglewood On Parade. Instead "A Gala Evening" and "Boston Pops at Tanglewood" drew a total attendance of 15,615, and ticket sales amounted to $39,599.50. The Fromm Music Foundation free concerts attracted 3113 persons.

It is interesting to note that inclement weather prevailed at five of the 18 orchestra concerts; at four of the six chamber music concerts and at three of the six open rehearsals.

---

hornpipe and air, along with a couple of allegro movements and an expressive andante.

Mr. Munch seems to have an affection for this music and he evoked lovely sounds from the orchestra and made each little episode a vital and charming revelation.

Chopin, only 20, was emotionally involved when he wrote his two piano concertos within a year of each other. It is said he wrote them for his own use on tour.

Many pianists treat these concertos as vehicles for virtuoso display. Mr. Graffman played them musically, yet with assured technique which met every demand. He dwelt lovingly on the melodies and spun delicious tonal effects. In the final movement he generated excitement, both through his dashing pianism and through his personality. In a huge place like the Music Shed, personality becomes an important part of the ensemble. Mr. Munch and the Boston players contributed warm and skillful collaboration.

Aaron Copland wrote his first symphony, which he called an organ symphony, in Paris in 1924. The following year it was performed by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Since then he revised the symphony, omitting the organ.

This symphony is relatively early Copland when he was wisely influenced by Nadia Boulanger. Many a non-American composer has been vastly less successful in writing his

---

PIANIST BOLET AND MONTEUX

Stravinsky, Liszt and Beethoven Works Played At Festival

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — Three splendid exciting works conducted by the old master, Pierre Monteux, introduced the final week end of concerts Friday night at Tanglewood. Perfect weather and a fine program drew 6783 persons to the Music Shed and the lawns.

Concerto Offered

The program opened with Beethoven's "Symphony No. 2" and concluded with Stravinsky's magnificent "Firebird Suite." In between these masterpieces, Jorge Belot was heard in a scintillating performance of the Liszt Concerto for Piano and Orchestra No. 1 in E-Flat Major.

Mr. Bolet is a pianist of unusual attainments. A big man, he plays big and this expansive manner becomes him. Liszt's first concerto can stand a spacious reading and when the soloist has the necessary technical equipment, which Mr. Bolet has in abundance, the work, though dated, can be exciting. Mr. Bolet can make a piano thunder or whisper. His playing of florid passages is neat and his mastery of legato something to wonder at.

Continuous Movement

The concerto is in one continuous movement subdivided into four sections, each corresponding to a short symphonic movement. There is the moderate opening movement; a lyrical adagio; a scherzo, introduced by a triangle solo; and a final martial allegro. The concerto is compact and closely integrated thematically. The use of the triangle was considered very radical when introduced. Indeed it caused a controversy of long standing.

Mr. Bolet and Mr. Monteux saw eye to eye performance-wise and the collaboration of orchestra and soloist was excellent. The audience went somewhat wild with its applause, and conductor and soloist were recalled many times. It is interesting to note that this pianist of unlimited technique and flaming interpretation was chosen to perform for the sound track of "Song Without Words," the motion picture on the life of Franz Liszt.

Pierre Monteux made Stravinsky's "Firebird" known to a Parisian audience in 1910. He has written that the audience remained silent for the first two minutes, then came boos and catcalls from the gallery and soon from the lower floors. There were even personal scuffles, when neighbors berated each other.

Of Early Period

Stravinsky's music is as full of change and revolution as the times through which he has lived. He has written musical history and, as Aaron Copland writes, "has influenced two succeeding generations in ways diametrically opposed."

Yet today the "Firebird" is considered to belong to Stravinsky's Russian, or early primitive period. The story of the "Firebird" is an ancient Russian legend. It was commissioned and composed in 1910 for Serge Diaghivlev's famous Ballets Russes. The work consists of six movements.

The music is the sort that seems tailor-made for the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It is full of color, contrasting rhythms, passages of opulent sound and others of the wry, dissonant sort, that so often is characteristic of Stravinsky. The depth of knowledge of this work which Mr. Monteux possesses was evident in every phrase of his interpretation. There was grandeur when grandeur was indicated, and serenity, as in the exquisite lullaby. We shall cherish the memory of this performance.

Beethoven's second symphony is a happy one. Environment, contentment and music combined to make the summer of 1892 a happy one for Beethoven and this contentment may be noted in every phrase of the music.

Pierre Monteux offered a relaxed, yet vital performance and received warm and sympathetic collaboration from the Boston players.

The opening movement is charged with hearty, earthy good humor. The second movement, one of the most beautiful larghettos ever written, was played with exquisite tonal beauty. The scherzo was brisk, robust and co-ordinated and the final movement was eloquent in its utterance.

There was no rush or bustle in the performance, only a calm and intelligent approach which let the music speak for itself.

167

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 15 1960

Music Review

Grand Finale at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE 1960 Berkshire Festival came to a glorious close yesterday afternoon with a memorable performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust."

It was a personal triumph for Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who held the multifarious forces in hand like an experienced commander in chief, and achieved one of the great artistic successes of his career with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

* * *

MUNCH MADE his Boston debut with Berlioz' "Fantastic" symphony. He has increased his championship of the celebrated but often misunderstood Frenchman over the past decade. Yesterday he marked the completion of 10 years tenure with the Boston Symphony with a majestic performance of a work rarely heard, partially because of the requirements demanded by the composer.

Berlioz based his music on Goethe's "Faust." A performance fills an entire concert and Munch made but few cuts yesterday. There is a question in which category it should be placed. It was early considered a concert opera: then it was suggested as a dramatic symphony. Berlioz finally called it "a dramatic legend."

* * *

YESTERDAY the Boston orchestra was assisted by the Festival chorus prepared by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department of the Berkshire Music Center, and a quartet of soloists of which John McCollum, tenor, was the Faust; Martial Singher, baritone, Mephistopheles; David Laurent, bass, Brander; and Eleanor Steber, soprano, Marguerite.

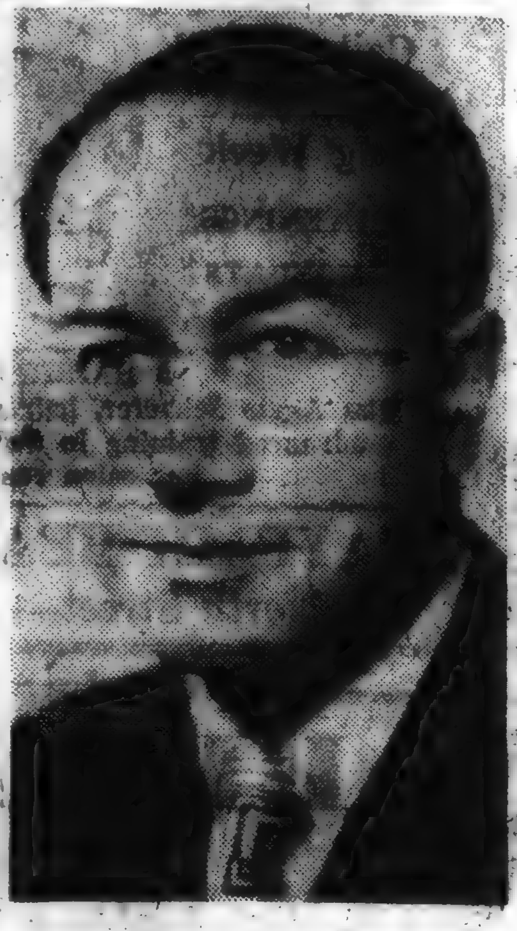
Singher was more than a vocalist. His sardonic smile, his satanic leer at Faust, the demonic bound to his feet, and other trivial but significant histrionic details put real damnation into the afternoon which unceasingly maintained tremendous interest and afforded the highest artistic gratification.

* * *

ORCHESTRAL excerpts from the complete Legend are familiar to concert audiences. The Hungarian March which Berlioz developed from a celebrated Hungarian theme known under the name of Rakoczy, the ballet of the Sylphes, and the Minuet of the will-o'-the-wisps are typical of the composer's orchestral prowess. But the larger and whole dramatic conception is less known to concert audiences.

Berlioz was a sort of musical Mencken of his day, not compromising if his inspiration offended the public, and even delighting in provoking certain elements of the musical world. He inserted a footnote that "the next 10 pages may be skipped if anyone is displeased with a fugue on the words 'Amen'," and he continuously refuted his critics.

Munch dominated the afternoon with cool confidence. He shared the unprecedented ovation with the many principals and the larger ensembles of the afternoon. He singled out Louis Speyer, whose English horn solos were so outstanding in the Romance played as an obbligato to Marguerite, and Joseph de Pasquale for the distinction of his playing in the many opportunities Berlioz allots the viola, particularly the scene in Marguerite's chamber. He invited Hugh Ross, who had trained the excellent chorus, to take bows each time the conductor and the soloists were recalled, and also called to the front of the stage two of the veterans of the orchestra who were retiring, violinists Melvin Bryant and Saverio Messina, who were given a deeply affectionate accolade by their colleagues.



Martial Singher

* * *

SATURDAY EVENING Munch dealt himself a minor half of the program, sharing the polium with Aaron Copland who directed his own first symphony. He resigned himself to the part before the intermission, during which the Hamilton Harty arrangement of the Handel "Water Music" was played, and the accompaniment of the Chopin E minor piano concerto in which Gary Graffman was the solist.

Many factors contributed to make this one of the least interesting programs of the festival. No one disputes the good-natured amiability of this Handel; many would dispute its appropriateness under these circumstances. No one protests Chopin's niche in music, but many, of whom we would be in the forefront, would question whether this concerto is his most representative example. This is certainly not the Chopin of the shorter piano solos.

It was unfortunate that Graffman drew such an unrewarding assignment. He is an outstanding pianist, excelling exactly in the poetic qualifications which this dull concerto demands, and he made no attempt for osentatious reasons to alter its facade or contents. Nor was Munch's collaboration a help. In the lovely larghetto Romanza the conductor flailed his arms in apparent bewilderment while the soloist was spinning some of his most serene, introspective lines, and, in addition, Chopin's 1830 orchestra was a lot smaller than Munch's of 1960. Graffman produced an appealing round tone, and his command of the keyboard was unquestionable.

* * *

COPLAND'S FIRST symphony dates from 1924. It was written originally for orchestra and organ for the New York debut of his teacher, Nadia Boulanger, with the New York Symphony Orchestra. He later revised and omitted the organ, but Walter Damrosch, the conductor on that occasion, is reported to have turned to the audience after playing it and saying, "If a young man of 24 can write such music, in five years he would be capable of murder." But Copland has thrived under and in spite of years-long castigation.

Today he is conceded to be the most important influence in native composers. No barbs have lessened the essential purpose and direction of his writing, and while it may have been amusing to call him, as has been printed, a second-rate Stravinsky or a Prospect Park Schoenberg, the name of Copland stands on its own merits and accomplishments.

* * *

HIS CONDUCTING IS enthusiastic. It is vigorous and dynamic. He has been described in this capacity as "a benevolent and scholastic grasshopper," but there is no doubt of his convictions. He knows the orchestra and he writes with keen appreciation of their specific and proper potentialities, and the Boston orchestra played for him eloquently.

The symphony is not in conventional sequence. There is first a prelude which is sonorous and seriously imaginative. There is never any frivolity in any part of the whole symphony, even in the brisker moments and those in which there is a suggestion of blues. In the second movement there is rhythmic complexity and jarring percussive dissonances and to satisfy his compulsion for the big sound he excited and forced the brasses to extremely vigorous limits. The third and last movement is a tense, slow sonata which builds up in a tough, rhythmic idiom by loud brass to a strident climax.

* * *

ATTENDANCE at both concerts was far beyond the capacity of the Shed, 9,733 Saturday evening and 8,913 yesterday afternoon. The weather for the concerts has been favorable in general, although there were a few inevitable rainstorms and some threatening skies which no doubt influenced many who had planned to use the adjacent lawns to listen. Total attendance compilations are treated sometimes as market quotations. They have little relevance to the artistic achievements. From that viewpoint Tanglewood 1960 was a brilliant credit from Munch down, or up, to the last tympani tap.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

AUG 21 1960

Second Thoughts On Music

Berkshire Festival Season Artistic, Financial Success

Many Exciting Performances Heard During 25th Anniversary at Tanglewood

By WILLARD M. CLARK

The 1960 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood is over. It marked the 25th year since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated; the 10th season of Charles Munch's festival direction; and the 20th anniversary of the founding of the Berkshire Music Center. It was both an artistic and financial success with 173,579 persons contributing some $385,592.50 to the box office.

Exciting Moments

The 24 Berkshire Festival concerts consisted of six Wednesday evening chamber music concerts attended by a total of 8034 persons; three all-Bach programs by BSO members which drew a total of 11,949 persons; three all-Mozart programs by BSO members which drew 16,184 persons and 12 concerts by the full BSO which drew 102,704 persons to the Music Shed.

Six open rehearsals for the benefit of the Orchestra's Pension Fund netted $25,700 while two events to benefit the Berkshire Music Center, "Gala Evening" and "Boston Pops at Tanglewood," netted the school $39,599.50.

Aside from pecuniary results this 1960 festival resulted in some exciting and musical performances. In the chamber music series, Claudio Arrau contributed a Chopin program and Leon Fleisher played a sonata program featuring Liszt, Kirchner and Schubert sonatas, and Claude Frank was heard for the first time at Tanglewood playing the Beethoven "Piano Sonata in C minor, Op. 32, No. 111" and, with the Bel Arte Trio, Mozart's "Piano Quartet in G minor." The Curtis String Quartet was a brilliant substitute for the Budapest String Quartet and the splendid Beaux Arts Trio of New York and Kroll String Quartet made their always awaited annual appearances. In many ways, this chamber music series is the most significant single cultural aspect of the festival.

The final week-end concerts in the Music Shed provided exciting moments. Pierre Monteux took over the Friday night concert and with the fine collaboration of the orchestra offered a relaxed, finely proportioned performance of Beethoven's second symphony and what must be a difinitive performance of Stravinsky's "Firebird" suite, since it was he who introduced the work to Paris in 1910. Then he collaborated with Cuban pianist Jorge Bolet in a tremendous performance of Liszt's "Concerto for Piano in E Flat major, No. 1." Bolet is one of the finest pianists of this generation. He is a true bravura pianist and Liszt is his ideal medium. It was a flaming performance, yet always within a reasonably sized framework.

Gifted Pianist

Charles Munch took over on Saturday night and he also had a pianist. This time it was the gifted American Gary Graffman making his first appearance at Tanglewood. He played Chopin's "Piano Concerto in E minor." It was one of the finest piano performances of the season. Graffman is sensitive, a true artist and skilled technician. He draws a beautiful tone from the instrument, never forces, and the softest lyric passages could be heard throughout the Music Shed.

Munch also offered a fine performance of Handel's "Water Music" as arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty. Here was ideal music for a summer evening. The music sparkled and crackled and its infinite variety of moods made for good listening. Aaron Copland, dean of the Berkshire Music Center and most respected among American composers, was conductor for his own first symphony. Copland was well represented during the season. His piano sonata, "Theme and Variations" and "Piano Fantasy" were given remarkable performances by pianist William Massolos in a Fromm Foundation sponsored recital. The first symphony is an early work, (1924) and the influence of the eminent Nadia Boulanger is present. There were some dissonant moments, but for the most part the music sang and phrases flowed smoothly.

The closing concert last Sunday afternoon, also directed by Mr. Munch, provided a brilliant performance of "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz, a composer whose music is very close to Mr. Munch. The soloists were Eleanor Steber, soprano; John McCollum, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone and David Laurent, bass. Miss Steber was beautiful to see and pleasant to hear. Mr. McCollum was an eloquent "Faust," singing with virility and fine style. Mr. Singher, a veteran Mephistopheles, sang the Berlioz music with distinction. Mr. Laurent, singing the bass role of Brander, sang his one aria well and his French enunciation was equal to that of Mr. Singher, which is saying a lot.

Fine Chorus

The Festival Chorus, one of the best in years, had been prepared by Hugh Ross, head of the choral department. Its singing was magnificent. The true glory of this work is the orchestration and Mr. Munch made the most of every opportunity. The famed "Hungarian" march went at breakneck speed, but there was an ethereal delicacy present in the "Dance of the Sylphs" and wonderful earthiness to the chorus of peasants. The applause was loud and long at the conclusion. We note that in addition to Mr. Ross, the chorus had been prepared by Lorna Cooke de Varon and Alfred Patterson.

268

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
GAZETTE
D. 47,453

AUG 15 1960

Tanglewood Season Ends With a Brilliant 'Faust'

By D. E. RITZ
Gazette Music Editor

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch closed its 1960 Berkshire Festival season yesterday afternoon with a vivid presentation of "The Damnation of Faust," Dramatic Legend, opus 24, Berlioz.

* * *

SOLOISTS for the performance were John McCollum, tenor, in the role of Faust; Martial Singher, baritone, Mephistopheles; David Laurent, bass, Brander, and Eleanor Steber, soprano, Marguerite. The Boston Symphony was assisted in the presentation by the Festival Chorus, Hugh Ross, director.

In weather that never achieved rain but threatened it until concert time 8,913 persons gathered for the program yesterday, the third of the weekend series that drew a total of 25,429. At intermission a golden haze diffused the lovely Tanglewood landscape and at closing time the sun was warm but not hot.

There is a sheen to the Berlioz music, which under the direction of Dr. Munch and through the playing of the Bostonians, revealed nuances and the fine points of the score as well as the flamboyant aspects which are a part of the nature of the composer.

* * *

THE FESTIVAL Chorus, large but marvelously trained, presented the songs of students and soldiers, the "Requiescat in pace" (to a dead rat), the jeering chorus of neighbors and eventually a chorus of angels.

McCollum as Faust revealed a tenor voice of great beauty combined with virility. Singher starred as Mephistopheles and one could well have believed the gentleman was there in person. David Laurent, in a lesser role, presented "the Song of the Rat" most effectively.

Miss Steber's voice was admirable in the role of Marguerite from the opening notes of the artless "The Song of Thule" to the tragic song of grief when she believes she has been abandoned by her lover.

* * *

BUT IT'S THE wonderful orchestral score that holds all together and that makes the work so fascinating.

The familiar Hungarian March is one of the most stirring of numbers and yesterday completely electrified the audience. We'll admit that it was only with great difficulty that we remained in our seat — the urge to participate was so great. No one ever needs to point out when Mephistopheles arrives — the orchestra brings him in on a fire-ball.

"The Song of the Flea" is a magnificent solo and Singher certainly did it justice.

* * *

BUT BACK to the orchestra and the "Ballet of the Sylphs," the will-o'-the-wisps, and the horses galloping, (violins, cellos and basses but don't ask us how).

Magnificent blending of all made for a perfect performance of a monumental work.

Opening and closing concerts of a season are always highlights and yesterday all participants received ovation after ovation at the close of the program.

The 1960 Berkshire Festival marked the 25th year since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first took part in 1936. Yesterday also concluded Dr. Munch's 10th year as director of the Berkshire Music Center.

Poor weather this year cut total festival attendance to 173,579, compared with 179,651 in 1959.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.
SEP 1960

New York

N. Y. Editor and Critic: WALTER F. LOEB, 445 West 23rd Street, New York City 11. Tel: WAtkins 4-5386
Other Critics: Shirley Cecille Cash (Orchestras), Harry L. Fuchs, Sherman Gottesman

With The Orchestras

By Shirley Cecille Cash

Boston Symphony Completes Tanglewood Season

Fourth Week End: Pianist Byron Janis distinguished himself in a persuasive performance of Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto, July 29. A performer of mere technical skill can give this work a rousing performance, but Mr. Janis did far more than this. Completely secure in the physical requirements of the concerto, he brought out its poetry, its lyricism, and gave it individuality and freshness. Credit for the success of the presentation must also be given to Charles Munch, who conducted. There was excellent rapport between soloist and conductor, and of course, the Boston Symphony responded beautifully to Dr. Munch's directions. The all-Russian program also included two contrasting works written in the 1930's, Stravinsky's neo-classic "Jeu de Cartes" and Tikhon Khrennikov's First Symphony, the full-blown neo-romantic style typical of Soviet music. Both works were well played, but there is no question that the Stravinsky was more worth the trouble. Those of us who admire him never tire of the crisp, witty style, the dry humor, the individual orchestral color. . . . Dr. Munch led an orchestral program, July 30, comprised of two works by French composers—Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony" and Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloe" Ballet, Suite No. 2 (with chorus)—and one contemporary American work, Piston's Symphony No. 6. Munch has often displayed his flair for French music, and this occasion was no exception. There was tremendous sweep and power in the Berlioz and Ravel, an excitement which the conductor generated, in which the orchestra (and in the Ravel, the Festival Chorus, as well) was caught up. The Piston Sixth Symphony, which was sandwiched between the other two works, was in contrasting style, but expressive in its own right, and equally well performed. . . . A week end of many exciting moments was brought to a close Aug. 1 with an extraordinary performance of Beethoven's Ninth, led by the incomparable Pierre Monteux. (Monteux led one concert each of the last four week ends.) It is always a delight to hear a familiar masterpiece when it is conducted by an interpreter who has both impeccable taste and a tremendous joy in music-making. The Boston Symphony was joined by soloists Eleanor Steber, Freda Gray-Masse, John McCollum and David Laurent as well as the Festival Chorus. The program opened with Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony.

Fifth Week End: The week end of Aug. 5-7 featured a fine American artist at each concert: Ruggiero Ricci on Aug. 5, Eugene Istomin on Aug. 6 and Leon Fleisher on Aug. 7. Mr. Ricci gave a moving performance of the Sibelius Violin Concerto, which was matched in depth by Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony. Sibelius' low scoring for the orchestra gives the solo violin a fine opportunity to sing out clearly, so that the concerto is a balanced dialogue of soloist and orchestra. Dr. Munch also gave delightful readings of Mendelssohn's "Scottish" Symphony and excerpts from Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger." Leon Kirchner was on hand to lead a spirited performance of his own 'Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion." . . . The novelty on the program directed by Charles Munch, Aug. 6, was Henri Dutilleux' Second Symphony, scored for a combination of large and chamber orchestra. This interesting work was introduced by Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony to both Boston and New York audiences last season, and this was its Tanglewood premiere. It is a worthy addition to the contemporary repertory, written skillfully as well as creatively. The 44-year-old French composer was present to share the applause for the fine performance of his work. From the standard repertory, there were Beethoven's Overture to "Die Geschopfe des Prometheus" and Brahms' Second Piano Concerto, which received a perceptive reading by Eugene Istomin. . . . Pierre Monteux was on the podium, Aug. 7, to conduct the program including Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis for Double String Orchestra," Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto, with Leon Fleisher as soloist, and Brahms Fourth Symphony. Mr. Fleisher was sorely tested by the persistent obbligato of a bird in the rafters who was continuously out of tune and out of time. We were lost in admiration for the solo artist's complete concentration, for his reading was poetic and sensitive, as if he were completely unaware of the distraction. Mr. Monteux was again in top form in the concerto as well as the wholly orchestral selections.

(Continued on page 22)

Sixth Week End: Jorge Bolet played Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 1 in E flat, at the Aug. 12 concert, in true virtuoso style. Mr. Bolet has the remarkable ability to play tastefully at all times, even in the most bravura passages, so that his playing is simultaneously exciting and artistic. (Mr. Bolet did the sound track of the piano portions of "Song Without End," the motion picture biography of Liszt. We highly recommend the picture for this, among other virtues.) Pierre Monteux, a fine collaborator in the concerto, also conducted a hearty performance of Beethoven's Second Symphony, and a really stirring one of Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite. . . . There were a couple of interesting features in the Aug. 13 program, Charles Munch conducting. For example, there was the fine performance of the Chopin First Piano Concerto, with Gary Graffman as soloist. The work at the piano was gratifying, but particularly effective was the colorful orchestral share, notably inspired by Dr. Munch. Then there was Aaron Copland's First Symphony, conducted by the composer. This work dates back to 1924, revised in 1930. Mr. Copland is experienced in conducting his own works, and there is an authenticity here that is interesting as well as appealing. The program opened with Handel's "Water Music" Suite . . . The final program of the current Tanglewood season, Aug. 14, was devoted to a full-length performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust." In addition to orchestra, the spectacular work had the services of the Festival Chorus and the superlative contributions of Eleanor Steber, Martial Singher, John McCollum and David Laurent as vocal soloists. Dr. Munch is in his element with Berlioz, and he provided a sparkling afternoon of exciting music.

Tanglewood Statistics: The 1960 Berkshire Festival marked the 25th year since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated; the 10th season of Charles Munch's Berkshire Festival direction; and the 20th anniversary of the founding of the Berkshire Music Center. The total attendance at the 24 events of the Festival, 138,871, was down from last year, no doubt as a result of inclement weather at 9 of these events. However, receipts were up as a result of an increase in some ticket price ranges.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,189 S. 1,254,635

AUG 13 1960

BOLET IS SOLOIST AT TANGLEWOOD

Pianist Plays Liszt Concerto as Final Week-End of the Berkshire Fete Begins

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 12—The final week-end of the Berkshire Music Festival also brought with it the first touch of autumn. There was a decided chill in the air for tonight's concert, and many women wrapped themselves in sweaters or coats.

Jorge Bolet helped to raise the temperature. The Cuban-American pianist was the soloist in Liszt's piano concerto No. 1 in E Flat, with Pierre Monteux leading the Boston Symphony.

Mr. Bolet's performance can fairly be described as heroic. Without walloping the keys, without bringing his arms down from on high or without bouncing his body all over the stage, he drew a sonorous, unforced tone from his piano, and his brilliant technique, supported by fine musicianship, provided as elegant a reading as this listener has heard in quite some time.

The concerto may lie well for the hand, but it still remains a very difficult piece of music. Mr. Bolet calmly picked off each note like a trick sharpshooter, one hand tied behind his back and working from a mirror. Musically he rose to the big moments without ever becoming vulgar. Which is as it should be. This concerto may be flashy, but it is not vulgar; and heard in this kind of performance it proved a reminder that Liszt still has much to offer.

Pianist and conductor were recalled for several bows. The tall and husky Mr. Bolet came striding out about twice as fast, and twice the size of Mr. Monteux—a giraffe accompanied by a walrus.

The program otherwise consisted of Beethoven's Second Symphony and the "Firebird" Suite by Stravinsky.

There were several points of interest about the "Firebird." For one thing, there was Mr. Monteux's long association with the score. For another, he did not conduct the standard and familiar 1919 suite. Instead he went to the original version, with its bigger orchestra and additional material.

He did not do the complete score, but he added two sections to those commonly heard. These were the "Supplications of the Firebird" and the Golden Apple sequence. The chances are that these two sections are known only to those who remember the Royal Ballet revival of a few years ago, or to those who own the LP disks of the complete score, of which two versions are currently available.

In any version the "Firebird" remains one of the exemplars of orchestral technique. Mr. Monteux and the orchestra presented it for all it was worth. The music sounded supple, colorful and exciting. Tempos were, on the whole, a shade faster than those heard from most other conductors. Mr. Monteux pressed on, and the final section of the ballet sounded far less pretentious and that much more agreeable, than usual.

The Beethoven symphony also was a spirited, happy-sounding performance, though here, for once, the articulation of the Boston strings was not all that it might have been.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
GAZETTE
D. 47,458

AUG 15 1960

Tanglewood Season Ends With a Brilliant 'Faust'

By D. E. RITZ
Gazette Music Editor

The Boston Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Charles Munch closed its 1960 Berkshire Festival season yesterday afternoon with a vivid presentation of "The Damnation of Faust," Dramatic Legend, opus 24, Berlioz.

* * *

SOLOISTS for the performance were John McCollum, tenor, in the role of Faust; Martial Singher, baritone, Mephistopheles; David Laurent, bass, Brander, and Eleanor Steber, soprano, Marguerita. The Boston Symphony was assisted in the presentation by the Festival Chorus, Hugh Ross, director.

In weather that never achieved rain but threatened it until concert time 8,913 persons gathered for the program yesterday, the third of the weekend series that drew a total of 25,429. At intermission a golden haze diffused the lovely Tanglewood landscape and at closing time the sun was warm but not hot.

There is a sheen to the Berlioz music, which under the direction of Dr. Munch and through the playing of the Bostonians, revealed nuances and the fine points of the score as well as the flamboyant aspects which are a part of the nature of the composer.

* * *

THE FESTIVAL Chorus, large but marvelously trained, presented the songs of students and soldiers, the "Requiescat in pace" (to a dead rat), the jeering chorus of neighbors and eventually a chorus of angels.

McCollum as Faust revealed a tenor voice of great beauty combined with virility. Singher starred as Mephistopheles and one could well have believed the gentleman was there in person. David Laurent, in a lesser role presented "the Song of the Rat" most effectively.

Miss Steber's voice was admirable in the role of Marguerite from the opening notes of the artless "The Song of Thule" to the tragic song of grief when she believes she has been abandoned by her lover.

* * *

BUT IT'S THE wonderful orchestral score that holds all together and that makes the work so fascinating.

The familiar Hungarian March is one of the most stirring of numbers and yesterday completely electrified the audience. We'll admit that it was only with great difficulty that we remained in our seat — the urge to participate was so great. No one ever needs to point out when Mephistopheles arrives — the orchestra brings him in on a fire-ball.

"The Song of the Flea" is a magnificent solo and Singher certainly did it justice.

* * *

BUT BACK to the orchestra and the "Ballet of the Sylphs," the will-o'-the-wisps, and the horses galloping, (violins, cellos and basses but don't ask us how). Magnificent blending of all made for a perfect performance of a monumental work.

Opening and closing concerts of a season are always highlights and yesterday all participants received ovation after ovation at the close of the program.

The 1960 Berkshire Festival marked the 25th year since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first took part in 1936. Yesterday also concluded Dr. Munch's 10th year as director of the Berkshire Music Center.

Poor weather this year cut total festival attendance to 173,579 compared with 179,651 in 1959.

MUSICAL LEADER
CHICAGO, ILL.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.
SEP 1960

New York

N. Y. Editor and Critic: WALTER F. LOEB, 445 West 23rd Street, New York City 11. Tel: WAtkins 4-5386
Other Critics: Shirley Cecille Cash (Orchestras), Harry L. Fuchs, Sherman Gottesman

With The Orchestras

By Shirley Cecille Cash

Boston Symphony Completes Tanglewood Season

Fourth Week End: Pianist Byron Janis distinguished himself in a persuasive performance of Rachmaninoff's Third Piano Concerto, July 29. A performer of mere technical skill can give this work a rousing performance, but Mr. Janis did far more than this. Completely secure in the physical requirements of the concerto, he brought out its poetry, its lyricism, and gave it individuality and freshness. Credit for the success of the presentation must also be given to Charles Munch, who conducted. There was excellent rapport between soloist and conductor, and of course, the Boston Symphony responded beautifully to Dr. Munch's directions. The all-Russian program also included two contrasting works written in the 1930's, Stravinsky's neo-classic "Jeu de Cartes" and Tikhon Khrennikov's First Symphony, the full-blown neo-romantic style typical of Soviet music. Both works were well played, but there is no question that the Stravinsky was more worth the trouble. Those of us who admire him never tire of the crisp, witty style, the dry humor, the individual orchestral color. . . . Dr. Munch led an orchestral program July 30, comprised of two works by French composers—Berlioz' "Fantastic Symphony" and Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloe" Ballet, Suite No. 2 (with chorus)—and one contemporary American work, Piston's Symphony No. 6. Munch has often displayed his flair for French music, and this occasion was no exception. There was tremendous sweep and power in the Berlioz and Ravel, an excitement which the conductor generated, in which the orchestra (and in the Ravel, the Festival Chorus, as well) was caught up. The Piston Sixth Symphony, which was sandwiched between the other two works, was in contrasting style, but expressive in its own right, and equally well performed. . . . A week end of many exciting moments was brought to a close Aug. 1 with an extraordinary performance of Beethoven's Ninth, led by the incomparable Pierre Monteux. (Monteux led one concert each of the last four week ends.) It is always a delight to hear a familiar masterpiece when it is conducted by an interpreter who has both impeccable taste and a tremendous joy in music-making. The Boston Symphony was joined by soloists Eleanor Steber, Freda Gray-Masse, John McCollum and David Laurent as well as the Festival Chorus. The program opened with Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony.

Fifth Week End: The week end of Aug. 5-7 featured a fine American artist at each concert: Ruggiero Ricci on Aug. 5, Eugene Istomin on Aug. 6 and Leon Fleisher on Aug. 7. Mr. Ricci gave a moving performance of the Sibelius Violin Concerto, which was matched in depth by Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony. Sibelius' low scoring for the orchestra gives the solo violin a fine opportunity to sing out clearly, so that the concerto is a balanced dialogue of soloist and orchestra. Dr. Munch also gave delightful readings of Mendelssohn's "Scottish" Symphony and excerpts from Act III of Wagner's "Die Meistersinger." Leon Kirchner was on hand to lead a spirited performance of his own 'Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion." . . . The novelty on the program directed by Charles Munch, Aug. 6, was Henri Dutilleux' Second Symphony, scored for a combination of large and chamber orchestra. This interesting work was introduced by Dr. Munch and the Boston Symphony to both Boston and New York audiences last season, and this was its Tanglewood premiere. It is a worthy addition to the contemporary repertory, written skillfully as well as creatively. The 44-year-old French composer was present to share the applause for the fine performance of his work. From the standard repertory, there were Beethoven's Overture to "Die Geschopfe des Prometheus" and Brahms' Second Piano Concerto, which received a perceptive reading by Eugene Istomin. . . . Pierre Monteux was on the podium, Aug. 7, to conduct the program including Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis for Double String Orchestra," Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto, with Leon Fleisher as soloist, and Brahms Fourth Symphony. Mr. Fleisher was sorely tested by the persistent obbligato of a bird in the rafters who was continuously out of tune and out of time. We were lost in admiration for the solo artist's complete concentration, for his reading was poetic and sensitive, as if he were completely unaware of the distraction. Mr. Monteux was again in top form in the concerto as well as the wholly orchestral selections.

(Continued on page 22)

Sixth Week End: Jorge Bolet played Liszt's Piano Concerto No. 1 in E flat, at the Aug. 12 concert, in true virtuoso style. Mr. Bolet has the remarkable ability to play tastefully at all times, even in the most bravura passages, so that his playing is simultaneously exciting and artistic. (Mr. Bolet did the sound track of the piano portions of "Song Without End," the motion picture biography of Liszt. We highly recommend the picture for this, among other virtues.) Pierre Monteux, a fine collaborator in the concerto, also conducted a hearty performance of Beethoven's Second Symphony, and a really stirring one of Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite. . . . There were a couple of interesting features in the Aug. 13 program, Charles Munch conducting. For example, there was the fine performance of the Chopin First Piano Concerto, with Gary Graffman as soloist. The work at the piano was gratifying, but particularly effective was the colorful orchestral share, notably inspired by Dr. Munch. Then there was Aaron Copland's First Symphony, conducted by the composer. This work dates back to 1924, revised in 1930. Mr. Copland is experienced in conducting his own works, and there is an authenticity here that is interesting as well as appealing. The program opened with Handel's "Water Music" Suite . . . The final program of the current Tanglewood season, Aug. 14, was devoted to a full-length performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust." In addition to orchestra, the spectacular work had the services of the Festival Chorus and the superlative contributions of Eleanor Steber, Martial Singher, John McCollum and David Laurent as vocal soloists. Dr. Munch is in his element with Berlioz, and he provided a sparkling afternoon of exciting music.

Tanglewood Statistics: The 1960 Berkshire Festival marked the 25th year since the Boston Symphony Orchestra first participated; the 10th season of Charles Munch's Berkshire Festival direction; and the 20th anniversary of the founding of the Berkshire Music Center. The total attendance at the 24 events of the Festival, 138,871, was down from last year, no doubt as a result of inclement weather at 9 of these events. However, receipts were up as a result of an increase in some ticket price ranges.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635

AUG 13 1960

BOLET IS SOLOIST AT TANGLEWOOD

Pianist Plays Liszt Concerto as Final Week-End of the Berkshire Fete Begins

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 12—The final week-end of the Berkshire Music Festival also brought with it the first touch of autumn. There was a decided chill in the air for tonight's concert, and many women wrapped themselves in sweaters or coats.

Jorge Bolet helped to raise the temperature. The Cuban-American pianist was the soloist in Liszt's piano concerto No. 1 in E Flat, with Pierre Monteux leading the Boston Symphony.

Mr. Bolet's performance can fairly be described as heroic. Without walloping the keys, without bringing his arms down from on high or without bouncing his body all over the stage, he drew a sonorous, unforced tone from his piano, and his brilliant technique, supported by fine musicianship, provided as elegant a reading as this listener has heard in quite some time.

The concerto may lie well for the hand, but it still remains a very difficult piece of music. Mr. Bolet calmly picked off each note like a trick sharpshooter, one hand tied behind his back and working from a mirror. Musically he rose to the big moments without ever becoming vulgar. Which is as it should be. This concerto may be flashy, but it is not vulgar; and heard in this kind of performance it proved a reminder that Liszt still has much to offer.

Pianist and conductor were recalled for several bows. The tall and husky Mr. Bolet came striding out about twice as fast, and twice the size of Mr. Monteux—a giraffe accompanied by a walrus.

The program otherwise consisted of Beethoven's Second Symphony and the "Firebird" Suite by Stravinsky.

There were several points of interest about the "Firebird." For one thing, there was Mr. Monteux's long association with the score. For another, he did not conduct the standard and familiar 1919 suite. Instead he went to the original version, with its bigger orchestra and additional material.

He did not do the complete score, but he added two sections to those commonly heard. These were the "Supplications of the Firebird" and the Golden Apple sequence. The chances are that these two sections are known only to those who remember the Royal Ballet revival of a few years ago, or to those who own the LP disks of the complete score, of which two versions are currently available.

In any version the "Firebird" remains one of the exemplars of orchestral technique. Mr. Monteux and the orchestra presented it for all it was worth. The music sounded supple, colorful and exciting. Tempos were, on the whole, a shade faster than those heard from most other conductors. Mr. Monteux pressed on, and the final section of the ballet sounded far less pretentious and that much more agreeable, than usual.

The Beethoven symphony also was a spirited, happy-sounding performance, though here, for once, the articulation of the Boston strings was not all that it might have been.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 101,427

AUG 14 1960

Music: Aaron Copland At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX—It wouldn't seem normal if the Tanglwood audience wasn't exposed to an Aaron Copland composition in the course of the Berkshire Music Festival.

Last night Copland, who is on the Berkshire Music Center faculty, led the Boston Symphony Orchestra through his "Symphony No. 1."

Significant parts of the program were conducted by Charles Munch: Handel's "Water Music Suite" and Chopin's Piano Concerto in E Minor, Opus 11 with Gary Graffman as soloist. There was an audience of 733.

Public Rehearsal

Anyone who attended yesterday morning's public rehearsal by the orchestra had cause to admire the vitality of Munch's conducting last night.

The rehearsal was of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," for chorus, orchestra, and soloists. The work will be performed at the festival's concluding concert this afternoon.

It was an exhaustive and exhausting rehearsal.

Munch repeatedly stopped orchestra and singers, including soloists. We've rarely seen him get more excited or speak more sharply. The problems, as he saw them, weren't merely tonal. He was just as critical in matters of phrasing, attacks, word-groupings, and even characterization.

Rumors Again

Rumors are again circulating that Munch plans to leave the Boston Symphony at the end of the season.

Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the orchestra said to us: "We've been hearing that since Munch first came to the orchestra."

Munch is completing his 11th year with the Boston Symphony and 10th summer at Tanglewood.

A member of the orchestra told us that "They are shopping around" for Munch's successor.

It is generally understood that Munch is a person of considerable means, therefore money is thought to be a minor consideration.

If he retires, it will be for reasons of health, and it's pointed out that on the orchestra's recent tour of the Far East, his conducting schedule was considerably curtailed. But his services yesterday gave no indication of any slackening vitality.

Furthermore, he did a superlative job with Handel's "Water Music," and gave Graffman podium cooperation that is a pianist's dream.

Sir Hamilton Harty's arrangement of the Handel was used.

Without a crafty baton, this music can easily become commonplace. The notes aren't difficult to play, at least for the Boston Symphony.

The work is quite devoid of depth, except for the "air," which is more gem-like for its melodic beauty than emotion.

Charm and Nobility

Qualities of charm and nobility perceated the suite's fast movements. Here, melody was of uppermost importance and spotless in intonation. Munch's accelerated speeds gave impressions of impetuosity, akin to traveling too fast to really see the scenery.

But apparently he sought a vitality with which the music will conform, without sacrificing some of its 18th Century elegance.

Woodwinds and strings came through with spotless tone in the "Air," "Andante," and "Horn pipe."

On Parade

Pianists have been on parade at Tanglewood this summer.

There have been philosophical virtuoso, and poetic pianists.

None have been more successful in assimilating all three qualities than Graffman.

There was a fourth quality—extraordinary sensitivity.

Only a charlatan could make a "Tour de force" of Chopin's E Minor Concerto. It is highly personal music, motivated entirely by inner incentive.

Graffman was quite admirable in tracing the work's flexible rhythms that prevent it from sounding like machine-produced music. In phrases of lustrous melodic contours, he pursued the course of an aristocratic Chopin — not a weak-kneed sentimental gusher.

Entirely Competent

The young pianist's technique was entirely competent, and probably would have been sensational had he chose not to be objective.

Runs were played fluently, cleanly, and articulately. In the slow movement (Romanza), Graffman demonstrated a gift for making the instrument sing. He never pummeled the keyboard, and in the concluding "vivace," the speed was more in favor of Chopin than the soloist's technical potential.

A Revision

Copland's "First Symphony" is another of his bountiful "Revisions." This one was first offered in 1924, as "Organ Symphony."

Six years later, Copland rescored the work, omitting the organ.

The composer has offered as a much needed guide that the three movements are loosely connected by a recurrent motto that "is not easily recognizable as such."

Sufficiently Interested

Anyone in last night's audience who was sufficiently interested (and not distracted by the tonal subject matter) might conceivably have followed Copland's labyrinthian symphonic melange by following his iterary annotations. Most people prefer to enjoy their music without referring constantly to a map of highways and byways.

The festival chorus (Students of the Berkshire Music Center) will appear in Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" this afternoon. Soloists are John McCollum, tenor; Martial Singher, baritone; David Laurent, bass, and Eleanor Steber, soprano.

Times (m)
NEW YORK, N. Y.
Circ. 614,169

AUG 15 1960

Music: Finale at Lenox

Berlioz' 'Damnation of Faust' Led by Munch

By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 14—Several milestones were passed as the Berkshires Music Festival came to an end this afternoon. It marked the completion of twenty-five years since the Boston Symphony first participated, the tenth year under the direction of Charles Munch and the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the Berkshire Music Center.

Karsh

Charles Munch

The final concert was something a little special. It was devoted to a substantially complete performance of "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz. As this is a large-scale choral work that demands a large orchestra and four vocal soloists, in addition to several choral groups, performances do not turn up with any great frequency. A large audience, 3,913 in number, took advantage of the chance to hear this stupendous score.

How the music must have crashed upon European ears in the Eighteen Forties. The ride to hell in Part IV still can create goose-pimples, and it makes nearly all subsequent essays of its type sound as tame as a nursery tune. But the "Damnation" is not all fire and brimstone. The duet between Faust and Marguerite is surely one of the most tender evocations in the literature and there is some delicate nature painting that none but the mind of a Berlioz could have begun to conceive.

Charles Munch did a little tinkering with the score. He made a few cuts, including Faust's first aria in Part III and a few additional trims here and there. There was no boys' chorus; and instead of Marguerite's voice sounding from the wings, as indicated in the score, Eleanor Steber sang the phrases pianissimo from her seat on the stage.

None of these mattered much. Nor did a few seeming miscalculations of tempo, including the fastest "Rakoczy March" within the memory of man. By and large, the strength and poetry of the score came through. The singers—Martial Singher, John McCollum and David Laurent, in addition to Miss Steber—were experienced, the orchestra sounded superb and the festival chorus was well-trained. Those who made the trip to hear the "Damnation" were well rewarded.

Saturday night's program also had a novelty, when Aaron Copland conducted his First Symphony. This dates 1924, though it was revised in 1930. It cannot be called a and one welcomed the chance to hear this early work by the dean of American composers.

In retrospect, it is easy to read things into the music. But perhaps it is not only retrospect that would lead a listener to decide that it is the work of a young composer. Full of an exultant, even savage, quality, the score is a mixture of styles and ideas—all very well controlled, to be sure—that none but a young composer, out to startle his elders, would have penned.

Most original of the three movements is the seond—a scherzo, full of syncopations and rowdiness, and very American in its lusty brass-band quality. The third presents a pile-up of dissonat sonority; the first is simple, relatively tuneful and not especially dissonant. All three add up to a powerful work, well worth acquaintance.

Mr. Munch conducted the first half of this program. It contained the Handel-Harty "Water Music" and Chopin's E minor Piano Concerto with Gary Graffman as soloist. Mr. Graffman was, as always, the most skillful of executants. His interpretation, unfortunately, failed to project: it was too restrained and too careful for much poetry to come through.

Here is a name to remember: Seiji Ozawa. Mr. Ozawa is Japanese, 23 years old, and he has been studying conducting at the Music Center this summer.

Yesterday afternoon he led the studenet orchestra in the last movement of Tchaikovsky's Fifth, and left no doubt that he is a major talent. He has a good deal of temperament, a propulsive rhythm and thorough command over his forces.

He also has, and this will do him no harm at all, showmanship. His gestures are a la Bernstein, and that includes the most swivel-hipped action since that great man himself. What with his talent, exotic good looks, flair and choregraphic ability, Mr. Ozawa is a young man who will go far.

170

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.

SEP 1960

Tanglewood

Musical Policy Wanted

With no over-all programmatic idea to give it shape as in recent years, the Berkshire Festival adhered mostly to its standard repertory during the four festival week ends. To be sure the Boston Symphony played splendidly under both Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. Audience reverence for Mr. Monteux gave his concerts special aura, for undoubtedly many came because at 85 he is a unique figure in the music world.

Seasoned festivalgoers nevertheless wished for more provocative programs. They recalled with Aaron Copland, reminiscing at the 20th anniversary of the opening of the Berkshire Music Center, that Tanglewood had heard the first performance of Britten's "Peter Grimes" under the composer's guidance, the first concert performance of Shostakovich's Seventh Symphony, and other works including Vaughan William's Sixth Symphony. The world premiere of Meyerowitz's one-act opera "Port Town" on Aug. 4 did not compensate.

The two big events of the 23rd season were Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, conducted by Mr. Monteux on July 31, and Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust", conducted by Mr. Munch on Aug. 14. Also of special note was the performance of Fauré's "Requiem", conducted by Mr. Munch on July 22, with Saramae Endich and Donald Gramm as soloists.

Mr. Monteux repeated his 85th-birthday-celebration performance of the Beethoven with singular success. Eleanor Steber, Freda Gray-Masse, John McCollum, and David Laurent made an excellent quartet of soloists, and the Festival Chorus, prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson, proved outstanding. Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony prefaced the Beethoven. The event was memorable.

Still the champion of Berlioz, Mr. Munch again made clear the importance of the "Damnation of Faust". He had opened his six weeks' observation of the 150th anniversary of Berlioz's birth with it six years ago. The graphic account of Goethe's story remains an extraordinary composition, notable for its dramatic quality and descriptive power. Both Eleanor Steber and Martial Singher had sung in the earlier performance; John McCollum was new as Faust. The Festival Chorus made a handsome contribution. Mr. Munch, of course, was in his element.

The contemporary works played this season were Dello Joio's Variations, Chaconne and Finale, Krennikoff's Symphony No. 1, Piston's Symphony No. 6, Kirchner's Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion (conducted by him), Dutilleux's Symphony No. 2, and Copland's Symphony No. 1 (conducted by him). Several instrumental soloists came to Tanglewood for the first time: Claude Frank and Gary Graffman, pianists; Joseph Silverstein, Jaime Laredo and Ruggiero Ricci, violinists. The week end of Aug. 5 might have been called Young Soloists' Week End since Mr. Ricci, Eugene Istomin, and Leon Fleisher performed on consecutive days. Claudio Arrau, Byron Janis, and Jorge Bolet were other piano soloists.

A concert of contemporary chamber music sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation offered works of Sessions, Davies, Berio (first performance of "Circles" for Voice, Harp and Percussion), Stravinsky and Martinu. The Foundation also presented another Seminar in Contemporary Music, with each session prefaced by a composer. Messrs. Copland, Berio and Kirchner, Elliott Carter, Karl-Birger Blomdahl, and John Cage participated.

—Miles Kastendieck

For its 20th anniversary celebration, the Berkshire Music Center broke with established tradition this year, omitted the "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities, and substituted for them a "Gala Evening" which began at 4:30 in the afternoon and continued through the 8:15 premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-act opera, "Port Town".

The afternoon was divided into three segments, all designed to exhibit the talents and abilities of Tanglewood students past and present. Beginning in the Theatre-Concert Hall at 4:30, Boris Goldovsky, director of the Music Center's opera department, staged scenes from "The Magic Flute", "Pelléas and Mélisande", "Hansel and Gretel" and "La Bohème", with students in the department taking all the roles. The scenes showed to advantage that a really astonishing fund of young vocal talent had been at the Berkshire Center this season. It also let the public see a new set of moveable acoustical baffles designed for opera presentations. Unfortunately, the latter proved somewhat disappointing. They consisted of pale grey plastic screens which seemed to deaden the acoustics rather than anything else.

After this program and a flurry of svelte brass fanfares to announce the next the composition department took over the Theatre-Concert Hall for a program of works by present and former Tanglewood students. Performed by the excellent Fromm Fellowship Players were Robert Bernat's Andante and Allegro for Woodwind Quintet; Timothy Thompson's Suite for Piano; Lester Trimble's "Myn Hertes Queene"; and Jerome Rosen's Quintet for Clarinet and Strings.

The Trimble and Rosen pieces were extremely impressive. "Myn Hertes Queene", conducted by Hugh Ross, was a setting of an excerpt from Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales" for male chorus and chamber accompaniment. It blended a slight flavor of medievalism into a contemporary and highly polished melodic-harmonic language. As a lament for a dying youth, it was somber and very moving. The Rosen Quintet, a serious, four-movement opus, was handsomely economical in its structure and thoroughly convincing. It was occasionally a bit indebted to Bartok, but nevertheless fresh and authoritative.

On the porch of the Main House, at 7 p.m., the Tanglewood Choir presented the "Gala's" third portion, a concert of choral music, pleasing both for its high executant quality and for its delightfully relaxed, casual atmosphere. The audience spread out comfortably in all directions on Tanglewood's immaculate lawns, with the far reach of Stockbridge bowl and the Tanglewood lake as a background.

The Trimble work was conducted by Hugh Ross a second time on this program. Other works, including Hindemith's "Six Chansons", were directed by a series of highly gifted young conductors: Lorna Cooke de Varon, Talmon Herz, Jacquelin Bourillon, David Fox, Bennett Penix, Seymour Schonberg, and Alfred Nash Patterson.

The premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-act opera "Port Town" was given in the evening in the Music Shed by an all-student cast and orchestra, many of whom had participated in the earlier events of the day. With text by Langston Hughes, the work was staged and conducted by Boris Goldovsky, assisted by Arthur Schoep.

The slightest of vignettes, "Port Town" concerns a seminary girl who falls in love with a sailor on a chance visit to a seamy waterfront, attempts to throw in her lot with him, but is forcibly restrained by her schoolmistress. Mr. Meyerowitz unwisely employed a big cast, a big orchestra, an elaborate stage setting and a grand operatic style to relate this meager episode and it collapsed under the treatment.

Musically, the score is liberally dissonant but not atonal, it tends to a heaviness that obscured the text, and it is not particularly distinguished melodically, except for "Sailor Boy", sung fetchingly by Harriett Aloojian, as Gay Girl, which, with a little adaptation, might be turned into an attractive popular ballad.

There were, however, some excellent performances among the young singers, many of whom displayed remarkably fine, mature voices. Among them were Grace Tester, the girl; John Lodge, the sailor; George Shirley, another sailor; Jane Wymond, as Maggie; and Rita Kolzacz, as the schoolmistress.

The orchestra, which is the finest ensemble of student musicians ever heard by this reporter, played its role with complete professional aplomb, and, in the first half of the evening's doings, gave suave, sonorous performances of Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture, conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, and Fauré's "Pelléas and Mélisande" Suite, conducted by Charles Munch. It was an evening crowned with honor and distinction for the Berkshire Music Center.

—Ronald Eyer

A Gershwin Evening on Aug. 12, with the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler, had Earl Wild as piano soloist. Mr. Wild performed the "Rhapsody in Blue" and the Concerto in F. The program was given as a special benefit concert for the Berkshire Music Center.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

AUG 10 1960

SCHENECTADY UNION STAR
Saturday, August 6, 1960

Tanglewood To Present Kroll Quartet

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 6—The Kroll Quartet will give the final concert of the Berkshire Festival's chamber music series at Tanglewood Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. The program will include "Quartet No. 2 in C Major, Op. 54," Haydn; "Quartet No. 1," Piston; and "Quartet No. 1 in F Major, Op. 59," Beethoven.

NE

An all-Gershwin program will be played by the Boston Pops, conducted by Arthur Fiedler, Thursday at 8:30 p.m. for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds. "An American in Paris," "Concerto in F for Piano and Orchestra" with Earl Wild as soloist, "Porgy and Bess," a symphonic picture for orchestra by Robert Russell Bennett, "Rhapsody in Blue" with Wild again as soloist and "Strike Up the Band" will make up the program.

Guest Conductor

Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor for the Boston Symphony Orchestra program Friday at 8:30 p.m. The program will include Beethoven's "Symphony No. 2 in D Major, Op. 36," Liszt's "Piano Concerto No. 1 in E Flat Major" with JorgeBolet as soloist and Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite."

The concert Saturday, Aug. 13 at 8:30 p.m., conducted by Charles Munch, will offer Handel's "Water Music Suite," Chopin's "Piano Concerto in E Minor, Op. 11" with Gary Graffman as soloist and Copland's "First Symphony" (with the composer conducting).

Munch will conduct the final concert of the festival Sunday, Aug. 14. "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz will be presented by the orchestra with the assistance of the festival chorus and soloists Eleanor Steber, John McCollum and Martial Singher.

Electronic Music

Next week's programs also will include a concert of electronic music by Luciano Berio Monday evening and various events for Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tonight at 8:30 Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Brahm's "Piano Concerto No. 2" with Eugene Istomin as soloist, "Symphony No. 2" by Dutilleux and Beethoven's "Prometheus Overture."

The program tomorrow at 2:30 p.m. will include Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis," Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. 2" with Leon Fleisher as soloist and Brahms' "Symphony No. 4."

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.

SEP 1960

Tanglewood

Musical Policy Wanted

With no over-all programmatic idea to give it shape as in recent years, the Berkshire Festival adhered mostly to its standard repertory during the four festival week ends. To be sure the Boston Symphony played splendidly under both Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. Audience reverence for Mr. Monteux gave his concerts special aura, for undoubtedly many came because at 85 he is a unique figure in the music world.

Seasoned festivalgoers nevertheless wished for more provocative programs. They recalled with Aaron Copland, reminiscing at the 20th anniversary of the opening of the Berkshire Music Center, that Tanglewood had heard the first performance of Britten's "Peter Grimes" under the composer's guidance, the first concert performance of Shostakovich's Seventh Symphony, and other works including Vaughan William's Sixth Symphony. The world premiere of Meyerowitz's one-act opera "Port Town" on Aug. 4 did not compensate.

The two big events of the 23rd season were Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, conducted by Mr. Monteux on July 31, and Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust", conducted by Mr. Munch on Aug. 14. Also of special note was the performance of Fauré's "Requiem", conducted by Mr. Munch on July 22, with Saramae Endich and Donald Gramm as soloists.

Mr. Monteux repeated his 85th-birthday-celebration performance of the Beethoven with singular success. Eleanor Steber, Freda Gray-Masse, John McCollum, and David Laurent made an excellent quartet of soloists, and the Festival Chorus, prepared by Alfred Nash Patterson, proved outstanding. Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony prefaced the Beethoven. The event was memorable.

Still the champion of Berlioz, Mr. Munch again made clear the importance of the "Damnation of Faust". He had opened his six weeks' observation of the 150th anniversary of Berlioz's birth with it six years ago. The graphic account of Goethe's story remains an extraordinary composition, notable for its dramatic quality and descriptive power. Both Eleanor Steber and Martial Singher had sung in the earlier performance; John McCollum was new as Faust. The Festival Chorus made a handsome contribution. Mr. Munch, of course, was in his element.

The contemporary works played this season were Dello Joio's Variations, Chaconne and Finale, Krennikoff's Symphony No. 1, Piston's Symphony No. 6, Kirchner's Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion (conducted by him), Dutilleux's Symphony No. 2, and Copland's Symphony No. 1 (conducted by him). Several instrumental soloists came to Tanglewod for the first time: Claude Frank and Gary Graffman, pianists; Joseph Silverstein, Jaime Laredo, and Ruggiero Ricci, violinists. The week end of Aug. 5 might have been called Soloists' Week End since Mr. Ricci, Eugene Istomin, and Leon Fleisher performed on consecutive days. Claudio Arrau, Byron Janis, and Jorge Bolet were other piano soloists.

A concert of contemporary chamber music sponsored by the Fromm Music Foundation offered works of Sessions, Davies, Berio (first performance of "Circles" for Voice, Harp and Percussion), Stravinsky and Martino. The Foundation also presented another Seminar in Contemporary Music with each session prefaced by a composer. Messrs. Copland, Berio and Kirchner, Elliott Carter, Karl-Birger Blomdahl, and John Cage participated.

—Miles Kastendieck

For its 20th anniversary celebration, the Berkshire Music Center broke with established tradition this year, omitted the "Tanglewood on Parade" festivities, and substituted for them a "Gala Evening" which began at 4:30 in the afternoon and continued through the 8:15 premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-act opera "Port Town".

The afternoon was divided into three segments, all designed to exhibit the talents and abilities of Tanglewood students past and present. Beginning in the Theatre-Concert Hall at 4:30, Boris Goldovsky, director of the Music Center's opera department, staged scenes from "The Magic Flute", "Pelléas and Mélisande", "Hansel and Gretel" and "La Bohème", with students in the department taking all the roles. The scenes showed to advantage what a really astonishing fund of young vocal talent had been at the Berkshire Center this season. It also let the public see a new set of moveable acoustical baffles designed for opera presentations. Unfortunately, the latter proved somewhat disappointing. They consisted of pale grey plastic screens which seemed to deaden the acoustics rather than anything else.

After this program and a flurry of svelte brass fanfares to announce the next the composition department took over the Theatre-Concert Hall for a program of works by present and former Tanglewood students. Performed by the excellent Fromm Fellowship Players were Robert Bernat's Andante and Allegro for Woodwind Quintet; Timothy Thompson's Suite for Piano; Lester Trimble's "Myn Hertes Queene"; and Jerome Rosen's Quintet for Clarinet and Strings.

The Trimble and Rosen pieces were extremely impressive. "Myn Hertes Queene", conducted by Hugh Ross, was a setting of an excerpt from Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales" for male chorus and chamber accompaniment. It blended a slight flavor of medievalism into a contemporary and highly polished melodic-harmonic language. As a lament for a dying youth, it was somber and very moving. The Rosen Quintet, a serious, four-movement opus, was handsomely economical in its structure and thoroughly convincing. It was occasionally a bit indebted to Bartok, but nevertheless fresh and authoritative.

On the porch of the Main House, at 7 p.m., the Tanglewood Choir presented the "Gala's" third portion, a concert of choral music, pleasing both for its high executant quality and for its delightfully relaxed, casual atmosphere. The audience spread out comfortably in all directions on Tanglewood's immaculate lawns, with the far reach of Stockbridge bowl and the Tanglewood lake as a background.

The Trimble work was conducted by Hugh Ross a second time on this program. Other works, including Hindemith's "Six Chansons", were directed by a series of highly gifted young conductors: Lorna Cooke de Varon, Talmon Herz, Jacquelin Bourillon, David Fox, Bennett Penix, Seymour Schonberg, and Alfred Nash Patterson.

The premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-act opera "Port Town" was given in the evening in the Music Shed by an all-student cast and orchestra, many of whom had participated in the earlier events of the day. With text by Langston Hughes, the work was staged and conducted by Boris Goldovsky, assisted by Arthur Schoep.

The slightest of vignettes, "Port Town" concerns a seminary girl who falls in love with a sailor on a chance visit to a seamy waterfront, attempts to throw in her lot with him, but is forcibly restrained by her schoolmistress. Mr. Meyerowitz unwisely employed a big cast, a big orchestra, an elaborate stage setting and a grand operatic style to relate this meager episode and it collapsed under the treatment.

Musically, the score is liberally dissonant but not atonal, it tends to a heaviness that obscured the text, and it is not particularly distinguished melodically, except for "Sailor Boy", sung fetchingly by Harriett Aloojian, as Gay Girl, which, with a little adaptation, might be turned into an attractive popular ballad.

There were, however, some excellent performances among the young singers, many of whom displayed remarkably fine, mature voices. Among them were Grace Tester, the girl; John Lodge, the sailor; George Shirley, another sailor; Jane Wymond, as Maggie; and Rita Kolzacz, as the schoolmistress.

The orchestra, which is the finest ensemble of student musicians ever heard by this reporter, played its role with complete professional aplomb, and, in the first half of the evening's doings, gave suave, sonorous performances of Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture, conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho, and Fauré's "Pelléas and Mélisande" Suite, conducted by Charles Munch. It was an evening crowned with honor and distinction for the Berkshire Music Center.

—Ronald Eyer

A Gershwin Evening on Aug. 12, with the Boston Pops Orchestra conducted by Arthur Fiedler, had Earl Wild as piano soloist. Mr. Wild performed the "Rhapsody in Blue" and the Concerto in F. The program was given as a special benefit concert for the Berkshire Music Center.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

AUG 10 1960

SCHENECTADY UNION STAR
Saturday, August 6, 1960

Tanglewood To Present Kroll Quartet

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 6—The Kroll Quartet will give the final concert of the Berkshire Festival's chamber music series at Tanglewood Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. The program will include "Quartet No. 2 in C Major, Op. 54," Haydn; "Quartet No. 1," Piston; and "Quartet No. 1 in F Major, Op. 59," Beethoven.

An all-Gershwin program will be played by the Boston Pops, conducted by Arthur Fiedler, Thursday at 8:30 p.m. for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds. "An American in Paris," "Concerto in F for Piano and Orchestra" with Earl Wild as soloist, "Porgy and Bess," a symphonic picture for orchestra by Robert Russell Bennett, "Rhapsody in Blue" with Wild again as soloist and "Strike Up the Band" will make up the program.

Guest Conductor

Pierre Monteux will be guest conductor for the Boston Symphony Orchestra program Friday at 8:30 p.m. The program will include Beethoven's "Symphony No. 2 in D Major, Op. 36," Liszt's "Piano Concerto No. 1 in E Flat Major" with JorgeBolet as soloist and Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite."

The concert Saturday, Aug. 13 at 8:30 p.m., conducted by Charles Munch, will offer Handel's "Water Music Suite," Chopin's "Piano Concerto in E Minor, Op. 11" with Gary Graffman as soloist and Copland's "First Symphony" (with the composer conducting).

Munch will conduct the final concert of the festival Sunday, Aug. 14. "The Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz will be presented by the orchestra with the assistance of the festival chorus and soloists Eleanor Steber, John McCollum and Martial Singher.

Electronic Music

Next week's programs also will include a concert of electronic music by Luciano Berio Monday evening and various events for Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Tonight at 8:30 Munch will conduct the Boston Symphony Orchestra in Brahm's "Piano Concerto No. 2" with Eugene Istomin as soloist, "Symphony No. 2" by Dutilleux and Beethoven's "Prometheus Overture."

The program tomorrow at 8:30 p.m. will include Vaughan Williams' "Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis," Beethoven's "Piano Concerto No. 2" with Leon Fleisher as soloist and Brahms' "Symphony No. [illegible]

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON,
Mass.
Circ. 12,847

AUG 18 1960

...it has hit bottom for this men nervous.

25,429 Music Devotees At Tanglewood Finale

A total of 25,429 music devotees attended the final week-end of the 25th season of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood in the Berkshires. This figure includes the Saturday morning rehearsal which has become increasingly popular through the years, especially with families whose young children are being given their first taste of symphonic music.

Friday evening's concert, conducted with definitive good taste by the venerable and popular Pierre Monteux, included the joyous and visionary second symphony of Beethoven, Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite" and a rhapsodic rendition of Liszt's Piano Concerto in Eflat by the Cuban-born American pianist Jorge Bolet.

Saturday's program included the delightful "Water Music" Suite of Handel, conducted and performed with rare enchantment by Dr. Munch and his incomparable musicians, a rather lifeless interpretation of Chopin's first Piano Concerto by the talented Gary Graffman, and Aaron Copland's cumulatively complex Symphony No. 1 directed by its dynamic composer.

Dr. Munch brought the festival to a close Sunday afternoon with a moving and beautiful performance of Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust." Soloists included Eleanor Steber as Marguerite, John McCollum as Faust, Martial Singher as Mephistopheles; and David Laurent as Brander. All the voices were admirably projected, Miss Steber's and Mr. Laurent's remaining the most constant in tonal authority. Mr. Singher sang from memory, which allowed him to give more dramatic emphasis to his part; evilly mirth-provoking as it is, at one point he retrieved Dr. Munch's baton, and at another received a light tap from the same instrument. I was told that Dr. Munch also broke one stick; his energetic and vivid direction of the music in which he is wholly absorbed makes one wonder why this doesn't happen more often.

The Festival Chorus, augmented by former and present members of the Harvard and Radcliffe Glee Club members, was expertly trained by Hugh Ross for this prodigious performance. We were disappointed by the omission of "Pandemonium," but can understand the reasons, it did take the edge off the "descent into the abyss," so graphic is the scene. One of Faust's arias suffered the same omission, for what cause we could not ascertain. Memorable was Marguerite's aria in part four, lamenting the loss of her lover, the oboe accompaniment unusual in the scope of its haunting quality; also her song "The King of Thule," with violas and celles picturing the braiding of her hair with poignant clarity; the Ballet of the Sylphs; the Will O' the Wisps Minuet; the marvelous rhythm of the horse's hooves; the applause-provoked Hungarian March, played as one seldom hears; Mr. Singher's infectious delight in Mephistopheles; and his power to command, all in all a memorable performance of magnificently expressive music.

The audience acclaimed all the performers with vigorous applause which lasted at least ten minutes, recalling all soloists, Dr. Munch, Mr. Ross, and some retiring members of the orchestra.

M.deB.B.

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
KINGS COURIER
W. 15,719

AUG 13 1960

Tanglewood Season Closes August 14th

The 1960 Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. will close Sunday, August 14, but its last week is just as full of important events as its first week.

Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony will close the Festival with a performance of Hector Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust" in which Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, Martial Singher and the Festival Chorus will participate.

Doctor Munch has nvited Aaron Copland, Chairman of the Faculty at the Orchestra's Berkshire Music Center and the guest conductor on the Orchestra's recent Far-Eastern tour, to conduct his Symphony No. 1 at the Saturday evening concert of August 13, 8:30 P.M. Also on the program will be "Water Music" Suite by Handel and pianist Gary Graffman in Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1.

CHARLES MUNCH

The Boston Pops with Arthur Fiedler and pianist Earl Wild will give an all-Gerdhwin program at Tanglewood Thursday, August 11, 8:30 P.M. to benefit the Berkshire Music Center's Scholarship Funds. The program will include "An American in Paris," "Rhapsody in Blue," Robert Russell Bennett's symphonic picture from "Porgy and Bess" and "Strike up the Band".

The Kroll Quartet will present the final concert of the Festival's Chamber Music Series in the Tanglewood Theatre on Wednesday, August 10, 8:30. The program includes the Haydn Quartet No. 2 in C Major, Beethoven's Quartet No. 1 in F Major and the Quartet No. 1 by Walter Piston.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121

AUG 15 1960

Berkshire Festival Ended With 'Damnation of Faust'

By Francis D. Perkins

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., Aug. 14.—The Berkshire Festival ended its twenty-third season this afternoon in Tanglewood's music shed, where Charles Munch conducted the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the Festival Chorus in Berlioz' dramatic legend, "The Damnation of Faust."

Last night Aaron Copland was the orchestra's guest conductor in his own, first symphony. The first half of yesterday's program conducted by Mr. Munch included the suite arranged by Sir Hamilton Harty from Handel's Water Music and Chopin's Piano Concerto in E Minor, with Gary Graffman as the soloist.

Steber as Marguerite

Eleanor Steber sang Marguerite in the Berlioz work, which was heard by 8,913 persons. John McCollum sang Faust, with Martial Singher as Mephistopheles and David Laurent as Brander. Last night's attendance was 9,733.

Mr. Graffman's performance of the Chopin concerto was praiseworthy both for its lofty technical standard, musicality of tone and clarity of detail and its exceptional poetic insight and understanding of atmosphere. The vigor which he had at his command was employed with notable discretion in an interpretation marked by noteworthy fineness of dynamic shading. There were one or two points when a touch more of romantic exuberance might not have been amiss, but this was a minor detail.

The orchestral accompaniment had an unusual degree of color and sonority, and Mr. Munch's musicians were also in fine form for an unroutined performance of Handel's familiar music.

Wrote It in 1924

Mr. Copland composed his first symphony in 1924 and revised it six years later. Written while he was in his early twenties, its style naturally differs from his later idiom, but the music gives an impression of positive personality and definiteness of form and ideas. Much of it presents two alternating and contrasted moods: one fluent and lyric, with some suggestion of French impressionism, especially in the wind instrument scoring. The other is rhythmically incisive and aggressive, reaching imposing while sometimes rather prolonged maximum sonorities. Here also there is occasional derivation, but on the whole it is a work that deserves periodic rehearing.

Mr. Copland's conducting was spirited, communicative and decisive, and the orchestra's interpretation of his music combined expressiveness with vitality.

Apart from the frequently heard three orchestral excerpts, "The Damnation of Faust" is not often performed, but the dramatic significance of the excerpts is much better understood when they are not set apart.

One of His Best Media

The work as a whole does not offer the hit tunes which mark Gounod's familiar opera on this subject, but this is remarkable music in its dramatic and emotional persuasion, its inventiveness and scoring; its performance calls for sensitiveness and dynamic sensitivity as well as range.

The music of Berlioz is one of Mr. Munch's best media, and today's performance met all of its requirements in tone, hue, balance and atmosphere. Miss Steber sang with laudable understanding of mood and appealing quality and color, along with an occassional ruffling of the vocal surface, which also was noticeable a few times in Mr. McCollum's eloquent singing. His tones were usually clear and fluent, while Mr. Singher's distinct French enunciation and knowledge of his role and its expressive purport made his Mephistopheles consistently distinguished.

Mr. Laurent sang commendably, and the choristers trained by Hugh Ross, Lorna Cooke de Varon and Alfred Nash Patterson fared laudably from a tonal and interpretative point of view, while the orchestral playing found the orchestra at its best.

Attended by 173,579

The week end performances, including these and Friday's concerts and yesterday morning's public rehearsal, had a total attendance of 25,429. The grand total for the Festival concerts and rehearsals of the last six weeks was 173,579, compared with 179,651 in 1959. But the 1960 ticket revenue, what with increased prices in certain locations, was $385,592, outstripping last summer's figure of $338,587.

The decline in attendance was attributed to inclement weather for twelve of the season's twenty-seven events and to unfulfilled threats of rain. Overcast skies, for instance, prefaced both yesterday's and today's concerts.

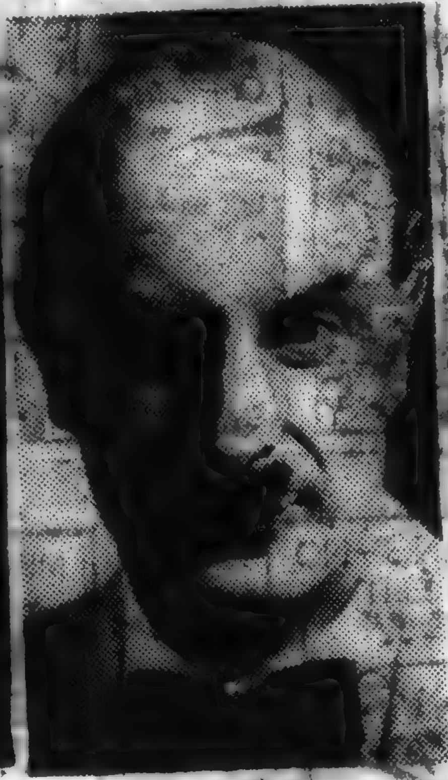
Meanwhile all will be quiet at Tanglewood until the next Festival opens a six-week course on July 7, 1961, again under Mr. Munch's direction.

172

ALBANY KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
Monday, August 15, 1960

Berlioz' Program Ends Tanglewood Music Festival on Superb Note

CHARLES MUNCH
Vigor and Fire



HUGH ROSS
Hard to Fault

By MICHAEL PILLEY
Knickerbocker News Staff Writer

Berlioz' musical tour de force, "The Damnation of Faust," was interpreted magnificently by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, the Festival Chorus, and a quartet of soloists, to bring the 1960 Berkshire Music Festival to a memorable end at Tanglewood yesterday.

Few works are better suited to show the all-around musical proficiency of the choral and orchestral groups which enrich Tanglewood's gracious grounds in summertime.

And few ensembles anywhere in the world could have improved upon this performance.

* * *

DR. CHARLES MUNCH conducted with fine authority. He brought vigor, indeed, fire to the climactic sequences without in any way sacrificing sensitivity in the quieter, lighter moments.

This was a zestful, full-bodied presentation of a work richly endowed with dramatic contrast and a range of emotional expression the width of which is rarely equaled.

Berlioz took a French translation of Goethe's Faust as the base for this powerful musical legend. A base is all it was. For just as Mephistopheles, in the second of the four parts, promises Faust a whole gamut of experience, so does Berlioz compress the whole gamut of human emotion into his text and score.

* * *

THE STORY OPENS with Faust a brooding onlooker of life, more interested in leaving it than enjoying it. It develops with Mephisopheles' promise, and Faust's discovery of, and passion for, Marguerite. It closes in a crescendo of doom as Faust is transported through the gates of Hell.

Berlioz took the story and achieved a marvelous marriage of words and music. His score is a triumph of musical translation, his text in dexterous and of classic construction.

From the somber opening, as Faust finds himself aloof from the lives of other simpler folk, to the final choral when angels welcome Marguerite to heaven, the music moves through melancholy to ecstasy to tragedy.

In between is a colorful mixture of musical moods. The dancing of country folk, a beer cellar in Leipzig, a river-bank where Faust sleeps and dreams of Marguerite, provide the contrasting settings for the first two parts.

* * *

IN PART THREE, the lovers meet, under the shadow of Mephistopheles' mocking warnings. And in part four, the mounting action provides Berlioz with all the dramatic content he needed for a flood of intense emotion, and action as fast and furious as the ride which Mephistopheles and Faust take to hell.

Dr. Munch was aided by most meritorious singing by the soloists. John McCollum's tortured, instrospective Faust was a strong cornerstone for the entire production. His projection was excellent, his voice constantly pleasing, his control equal to the heaviest demands of the composer.

Martial Singher, as Mephistopheles, was a baritone of sustained ability and convincing menance while Eleanor Steber brought a sopranic sweetness and strength to the role of Marguerite.

* * *

BASS DAVID LAURENT sang most ably as Brander, the leader of the student carousers in Leipzig.

On this showing, it is hard to fault the Festival Chorus and its director, Hugh Ross. The chorus sang with discipline that was plainly the result of intense, painstaking practice. Its finales in parts two and three were rousingly executed.

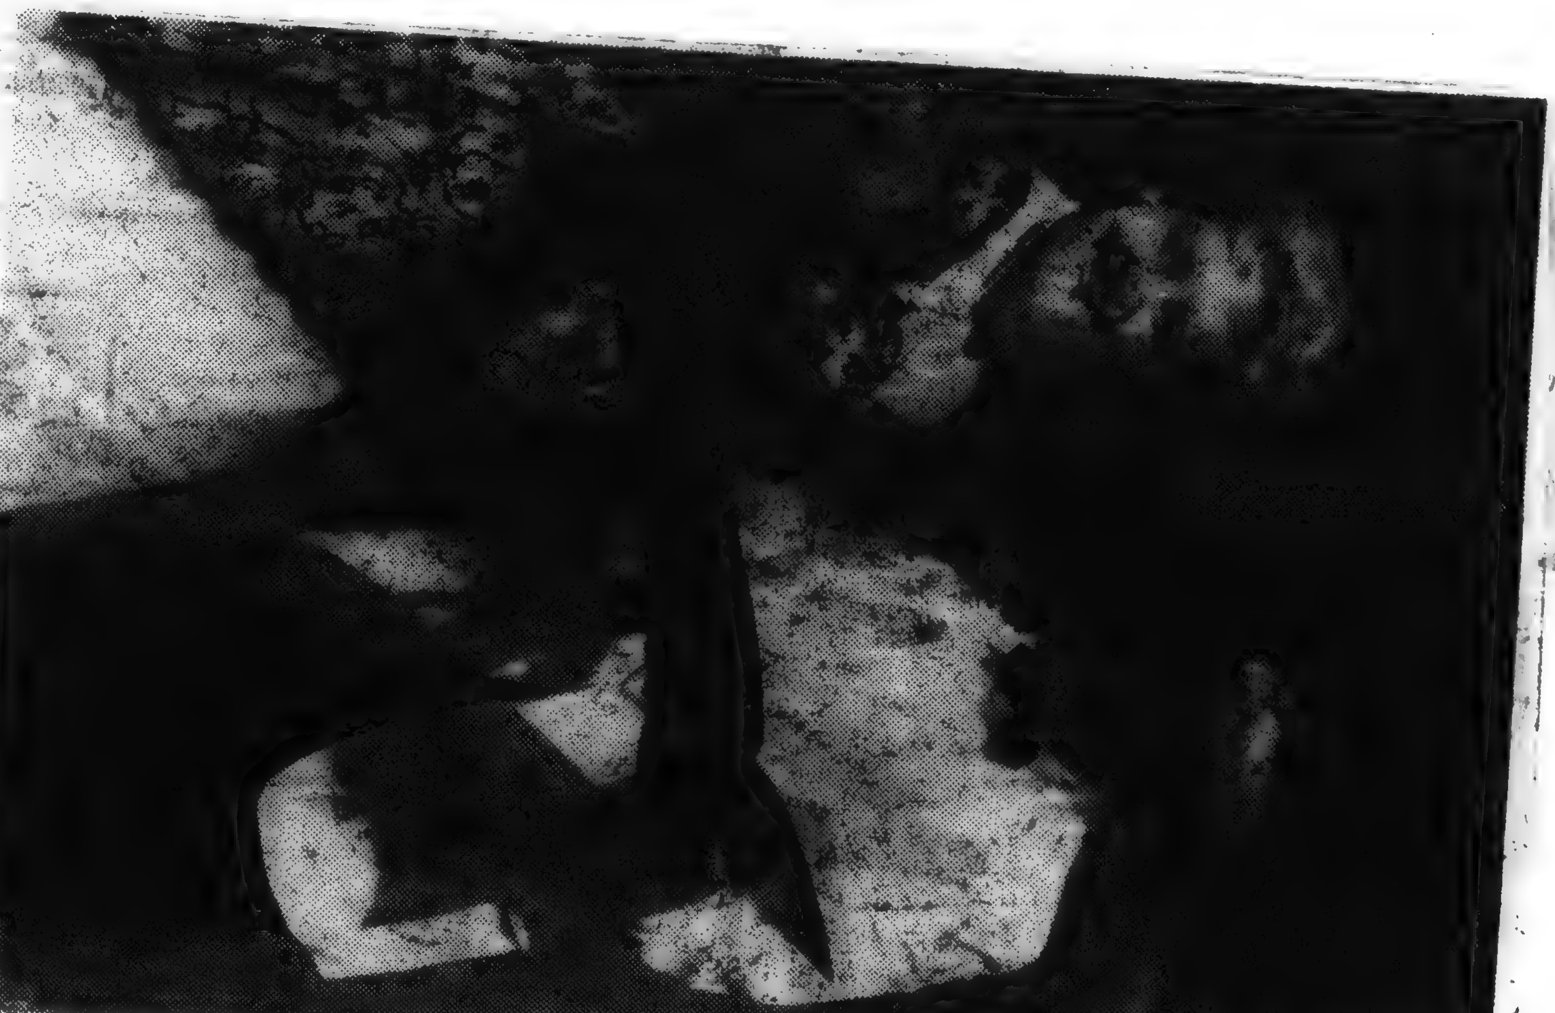
And their tonal delicacy in some of the more subdued, reflective refrains was masterly.

To round out this paeon of praise, let it be said that the orchestra was at its impressive best.

JOHN McCOLLUM
Constantly Pleasing

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 11 1960



Whittlesohe

RETURNING to Tanglewood for the final concert of the 1960 Berkshire Festival season on Sunday afternoon in the Music Shed are soloists Eleanor Steber and John McCollum, who will appear with Martial Singher and the Festival Chorus. They will sing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust." Dr. Charles Munch will be on the podium and leave immediately after the concert for France.

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
JUL 29 1960

Two Benefits at Tanglewood To Replace Parade Program

TANGLEWOOD — Two special events will be held here this season for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center instead of the usual Tanglewood on Parade.

The first, billed as "a [illegible] evening," will be held in the Music Shed next Thursday, Aug. 4, marking the 20th anniversary celebration by the students of the Music Center for the benefit of the Center's scholarship fund. The grounds will open at 3:30.

A feature of the Aug. 4 benefit will be the world premiere of the Langston-Hughes Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Port Town," to be given in the Music Shed. The opera has been prepared by the opera department students at Tanglewood under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

At 8:15, preceding the one-act opera, Dr. Charles Munch, musical director of the BSO, and Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the conducting department at the Center, will conduct the student orchestra.

Next Thursday's special events will begin at 4:30, when opera scenes wil be presented in Tanglewood's formal gardens. The Fromm Fellowship players will be heard in a concert of music by the Tanglewood composition students in the theater at 6 p.m. and there will be a supper concert by the Tanglewood Choir on the porch of the main house at 7 p.m.

5,000 Seats

Tanglewood officials said today more than 5,000 unreserved seats are available in the Music Shed for the orchestra and opera program. Box suppers will be available at the Tanglewood cafeteria or persons attending are invited to bring their own picnic suppers.

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops will highlight the second benefit on Thursday, Aug. 11, when an all-Gershwin program will be presented, featuring pianist Earl Wild.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121
JUL 22 1960

Meyerowitz Opera Premiere At Tanglewood

Two special events will be held on the first two Thursdays of August at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds. The Jan Meyerowitz oper "Port Town," with a libretto by Langston Hughes, will have its first performance on the evening of Aug. 4 in a program beginning at 8:15 p.m. with a concert by the Center's student orchestra under Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho.

The Meyerowitz work has been prepared by students of the Center's opera department under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. The day's activities will also include a program of Boris Goldovsky. The day's activities will also include a progrom of opera scenes at 4:30 p.m.; a concert of music by Tanglewood composition students at 6 p.m. and a supper concert by the Tanglewood Choir at 7 p.m.

Arthur Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops Orchestra in a concert of George Gershwin's music on Thursday night, Aug. 11, with Earl Wild, pianist, as soloist. The ticket sale for both dates opens tomorrow at the Tanglewood box office (Lenox 600).

PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER
D. 618,557 S. 1,033,048
JUN 19 1960

Tanglewood to present Opera by Meyerowitz

Boris Goldovsky, who was on sabbatical last summer from the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will reactivate the school's Opera Department for the 1960 session, July 3 through Aug. 14.

The world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-act opera, "Port Town," will be given Aug. 4. Two other one-act operas have been scheduled this summer; Puccini's "Sitor Angelica" and "L'Heure Espagnol" by Ravel.

The department will also present several concerts of excerpts from standard and contemporary operas.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635
JUL 22 1960

OPERA TO BOW AUG. 4

Berkshire Center to Present Meyerowitz-Hughes Work

A new one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz and Langston Hughes will be given its première on Aug. 4 in a Berkshire Music Center benefit concert at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. It will be performed by students of the opera department, which is directed by Boris Goldovsky.

Mr. Hughes' libretto for the work, called "Port Town," deals with the visit of girls from a seminary to a port more accustomed to sailors and prostitutes. A brief love affair between a sailor and one of the visitors results.

Mr. Hughes and Mr. Meyerowitz have worked together before in the creation of operas, the best known of which is "The Barrier," a work given on Broadway in 1950 with the late Lawrence Tibbett in the leading role.

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 175,076
JUL 23 1960

Symphony Benefits Promise Artistry

Two special events to benefit the scholarship funds of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, will be held at Tanglewood, Lenox, on Thursday, Aug. 4, and Thursday, Aug. 11.

The world-premiere of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Port Town," is included in the Aug. 4 activities.

The Boston Pops conducted by Arthur Fiedler will present an all-Gershwin program at Tanglewood on Thursday, Aug. 11. Mr. Fiedler's guest will be pianist Earl Wild.

UTICA, N.Y.
PRESS
D. 26,970
JUL 25 1960

jazz beat

By Chuck Robie Booth

Classical Jam

The Stratford Festival in Ontario, famous these last few years for uniqueness of quality in many arts fields, instituted a new concept Saturday.

They called it a classical jam session.

Saturday's combo consisted of Glenn Gould, Toronto's famous "semi-beat" pianist; Leonard Rose, former first 'cellist of the New York Philharmonic; and Oscar Shumsky, noted violinist and instructor at Juilliard School of Music. And the admission fee is only one dollar.

The only "programmed" part of the session was the Beethoven Septet in E-flat Major. (Members of the National Festival Orchestra were employed to round out the ensemble.)

Next Saturday morning's only scheduled number is Schubert's Quintet in C Major.

All other selections on the programs are not chosen until minutes before the performance. This, Festival directors believe, give the sessions a wider range of creativity:

"We are searching for a way to describe the enthusiasm of the performance," Louis Applebaum, Festival music director, said last week.

"Just as in a jazz session, good jazz results from the submergence of the player in the musical idea, some strikingly good chamber music performances resulted from this same kind of dedication on the part of our own string and wind players. The public will have a chance to join with the performers in musical creation, in what will be a rare and valuable musical experience."

Perhaps it won't be too long before one longhair turns to the other and exclaims:

"Say, old cat, do you think we could groove it with some real walkin' cello on that next Sibelius riff?"

Tanglewood: The world-premiere of the new Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Port Town," will be presented Aug. 4 at the Music Shed at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

TWO KINGS—A couple of kings—the King of Swing and the King of Thailand had a happy reunion in New York recently. King Bhumibol, left, was once host to Benny Goodman when the famed clarinetist was on a State Department goodwill tour. King Bhumibol, an amateur jazz saxophonist-clarinetist, is said to swing at the drop of a hat, and has sat-in with BG on several occasions. (AP Wirephoto).

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958
JUL 23 1960

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 99,001
JUL 25 1960

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,498
JUL 28 1960

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Circ. 18,203
JUL 28 1960

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON,
Mass.
Circ. 12,847
JUL 21 1960

Jewish Advocate
BOSTON, Mass.
Weekly Circ. 27,809
JUL 28 1960

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267
JUL 30 1960

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE
Monday, July 25, 1960

SCHENECTADY UNION STAR
Monday, July 25, 1960

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664
JUL 24 1960

'Port Town' Première for Berkshires

Two special events to benefit the scholarship funds of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, will be held at Tanglewood on Thursday, Aug. 4, and Thursday, Aug. 11.

The world première of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Port Town," is included in the Aug. 4 activities. To be presented in the Music Shed, the opera has been prepared by the Opera Department students at Tanglewood under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. In the Music Shed at 8:15, preceding the one-act opera, Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Center's student orchestra. The student orchestra will also participate in the post-intermission opera performance.

The Aug. 4 program will begin at 4:30 (grounds open at 3:30) with the performance of opera scenes in the Formal Gardens. The Fromm Fellowship Players will be heard in a concert of music by the Tanglewood composition students in the Theater at 6 o'clock, and there will be a supper concert by the Tanglewood Choir on the porch of the Main House at 7.

The Boston Pops conducted by Arthur Fiedler will present a Gershwin program at Tanglewood on Thursday, Aug. 11. Mr. Fiedler's guest will be Earl Wild, pianist. The program will include "An American in Paris," Mr. Wild as soloist in the Concerto in F and Rhapsody in Blue, "Strike Up the Band," and "Porgy and Bess"—the Robert Russell Bennett symphonic picture for orchestra.

Tickets for both Berkshire Music Center benefit events will be on sale at Tanglewood beginning Saturday, July 23.

Berkshire Eagle
25 July 1960

178

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Thursday, July 28, 1960

'Port Town' Premiere At Tanglewood Aug. 4

NE

The first of two special events to benefit the scholarship funds of the Berkshire Music Center will be held at Tanglewood Thursday, Aug. 4. The world premiere of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerwitz opera, "Port Town," will be presented in the Music Shed by the students of the opera department, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Center's student orchestra. The "gala evening" is scheduled to begin at 4:30 P. M.

The Boston Pops, conducted by Arthur Fiedler, will present an all-Gershwin program at Tanglewood Thursday, Aug. 11, as the second Berkshire Music Center benefit. Mr. Fiedler's guest pianist will be Earl Wild.

The program will include "An American in Paris," the Concerto in F, "Rhapsody in Blue," "Strike Up the Band," and 'Porgy and Bess."

The two concerts take the place of the former "Tanglewood on Parade."

FULL ORCHESTRA

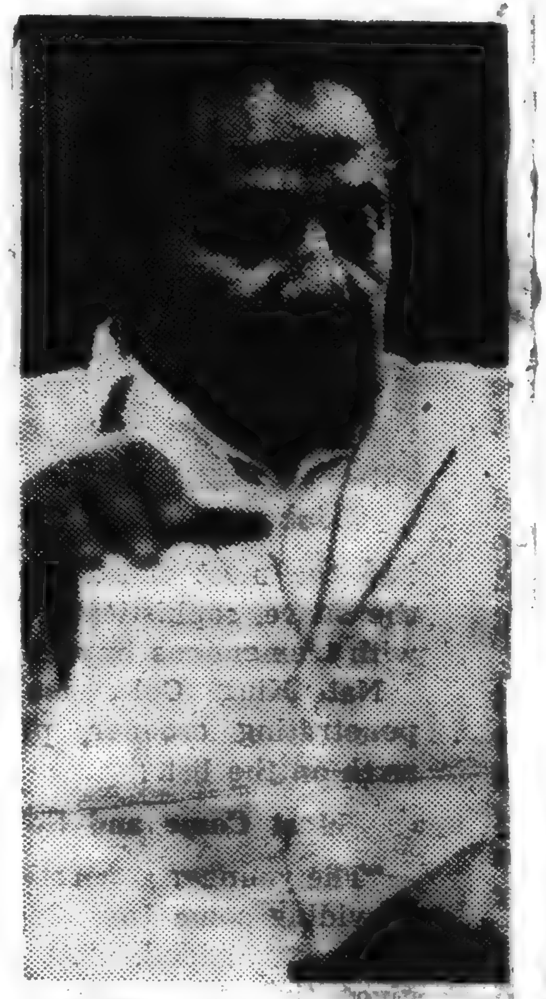
For the Arthur Fiedler concert, Aug. 11, the grounds will be open at 6 P. M.

Series B of the festival will be inaugurated Friday night in the Big Shed when the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, directed by Charles Munch, will present "Jeu de Cartes," by Stravinsky, Symphony No. 1 by Krennikov and the Rachmaninoff Piano Concert, No. 3, with Byron Janis as soloist.

Saturday night, the program will be devoted to "Symphonie Fantastique" by Berlioz; Symphony No. 6 by Piston and Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe Suite, No. 2, with the Festival Chorus.

Sunday afternoon's concert will open with Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony, conducted by Pierre Monteux and Beethoven's Ninth or Choral Symphony, with Eleanor Steber, Freda Gray-Masse, John McCullum and David Laurent as soloists, and the festival chorus.

ALBANY KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
Saturday, July 30, 1960



LEADS GALA—Eleazer de Carvalho will conduct the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra at a gala evening at Tanglewood Thursday.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
JUL 30 1960

All Seats, Except Boxes, Are Unreserved For 'Gala Evening' at Tanglewood Aug. 4

'Port Town' First Opera In Music Shed

TANGLEWOOD — All seats in the Music Shed, except those in the boxes, are unreserved for the "gala evening" program next Thursday night to mark the 20th anniversary celebration by the students of the Berkshire Music Center for the benefit of the center's scholarship fund.

The admission, $2.50, entitles ticket holders to all events—the opera scenes in the garden in the afternoon at 4:30; a concert in the theater at 6 performed by the Fromm Fellowship Players; a supper concert by the Tanglewood Choir on the porch of the main house and the main attraction of the evening at 8:30 in the Music Shed. The latter will include a concert by the student orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho and the world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz' opera, "Port Town," which will be given in the Shed under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department. The opera is the first ever to be presented in the Music Shed.

Boxes, seating six, are available at $30 — the equivalent of one week's tuition for one student at Tanglewood.

Mrs. Koussevitzky Chairman

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the founder of the Music Center, is chairman of the committee aiding with the celebration. Assisting her are Miss Anna R. Alexandre, Mrs Bruce Crane, Mrs. William Crane, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hatch, Mrs. David Huxley, Mrs. C. D. Jackson, Mrs Shaun Kelly, Mrs. Lawrence K. Miller, Mrs. Thomas D. Perry, Mrs. Bruce W. Sanborn, Mrs John L. Senior and Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith.

Mr. Goldovsky describes the opera as "a charming story with a sad ending." With librettist Langston Hughes, Mr. Meyerowitz has placed his opera in an unidentified port town where, simultaneously with the arrival of the ship, "Mary Belle," filled with romantically inclined sailors, the young ladies from the local seminary are brought, under careful watch, to make their annual study of activities on the waterfront. The finale is predestined: a young girl meets a young sailor and they fall in love, but time is short before they must part forever.

Served on Faculty Here

Mr. Meyerowitz was a Berkshire Music Center faculty member in 1948, 1951, 1953. His opera. "Simeon," had its world premiere at Tanglewood and "Bad Boys in School" was first heard in 1953 at the Berkshire Music Center.

Born in Breslaw, April 23, 1913, Mr. Meyerowitz came to this country in 1946 after study in Berlin and Rome and residence in Belgium and France.

Now a resident of New Jersey and a teacher at Brooklyn College, Mr. Meyerowitz has composed in addition to operas, several choral works.

Whitestone

Under the watchful eye of Jan Meyerowitz, composer of the music for "Port Town" to be given its world permiere at Tanglewood Thursday night, Boris Goldovsky, right directs actions of two principal singers, John Lodge, Grace Trester.

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037
JUL 28 1960

Castle Hill Recitals Lure Music Lovers

By MAGGIE WELLS, Society Editor

Many music-loving socialites are taking to the hills these days, both to escape the sound of city traffic and to seek out more agreeable sounds in rustic surroundings.

Aptly-named Castle Hill, the old Crane estate overlooking the sea in Ipswich is a weekend mecca for many music-lovers. This week's featured artist, soprano Phyllis Curtin, will give a recital tomorrow and Saturday evenings.

SETTING REMINISCENT OF BOSTON DEBUT

The setting, Castle Hill's charming, sunken Italian garden, will doubtless stir up memories in the minds of those in the audience who attended Miss Curtin's Boston debut back in 1946. It was in a similer, stage-garden setting, that she appeared in the role of The Countess in "The Marriage of Figaro" at Jordan Hall that fall.

Prominent patroness of the arts Mrs. Alexander Steinert, who attended the 1946 opera with her daughter, Mrs. Samuel Newman, will be on hand to hear Miss Curtin sing again this weekend.

The Albert C. Titcombs, who were also present at the '46 concert, will have to pass up the Castle Hill recitals, due to extensive travel preparations. They're planning to sail for Europe from New York a week from Friday aboard the "Saturnia."

First stop for the Titcombs will be Italy, where they'll visit their daughter, Mrs. Richard Blow of New York, at the villa she has rented for the summer, outside of Florence. Afterwards, the Beacon Hill couple will travel to Switzerland and France and wind up their journey in England before sailing home around the first of October.

Sprano Curtin is also headed for Europe after her Castle Hill appearance. She's scheduled to sing the role of Mozart's countess four times in Amsterdam this summer!

Somebody really ought to give that girl an honorary title.

TANGLEWOOD ATTRACTIONS

The Bershires are also attracting a great many Bostonians to the musical events at Tanglewood these warm, summer days. Two special evenings are on the August agenda at Boston Symphony's home-away-from-home.

The first is "A Gala Evening" Aug. 4 to celebrate the 20th anniversary for and by students at the Berkshire usic Center. Proceeds will benefits the Center's scholarship funds.

The program will begin at 4:30 p.m. with opera scenes in the Tanglewood Garden, and will wind up with a concert by a student orchestra and a performance of a one-act opera, "Port Town" by Jan Meyerowitz, in the Music Shed.

Thursday evening, August 11, Arthur Fielder will lead the Boston Pops Orchestra in an all-Gershwin program at Tanglewood. The concert will feature Earl Wild, as piano soloist.

POUGHKEEPSIE NEW YORKER
Saturday, July 30, 1960

3 Events Slated By Jewish Center

Three events are in store for participants in the Tween-Summer program of the Jewish Community center as members swing into the fourth week of the eight-week special program, according to Stanley King, center program director.

On Wednesday, the group will visit an amusement area (Palisades park) in New Jersey. Chartered bus service will leave the center at 9:30 a. m.

Music under the stars will be the theme of the Aug. 11 program as the group will visit the Tanglewood festival to listen to an all-Gershwin program by the Boston "Pops" orchestra.

Sunday Advertiser
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 453,664

JUL 31 1960

'Circles' Premieres At Tanglewood

Next-to-the-last week of the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, offers the second Fromm Foundation concert tomorrow in the Music Shed.

The program of contemporary chamber music will include the world-premiere of Luciano Berio's "Circles."

One of Italy's younger and leading exponents of the use of electronics in music, Mr. Berlo is guest composer in residence at the Center for the 1960 session.

Opera scenes in the formal gardens at 4:30 p. m. (grounds open at 3:30) begin Thursday's special events, the 20th anniversary celebration by the students of the Center for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds.

"Bring a picnic or purchase box suppers at the Tanglewood cafeteria" is noted on the flyer we received.

The Fromm Fellowship Players will be heard in a concert of music by the Tanglewood composition students in the theater at 6 o'clock. At 7 a supper concert by the Tanglewood Choir will be given on the porch of the Main House.

That evening's highlight will be the world-premiere of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Port Town." This has been prepared by the Opera Department students at Tanglewood under the direction of the New England Opera Theatre's noted conductor, Boris Goldovsky.

In the Music Shed at 8:15 preceding the one-act opera, Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Center's student orchestra which will also participate in the post-intermission opera performance.

A big trek to Tanglewood by Boston music lovers is on the agenda for Thursday, August 11, to hear Arthur Fiedler conduct the Boston Pops.

His all-Gershwin program (the second Berkshire Music Center benefit) will include "An American in Paris," with Earl Wild, soloist; "Porgy and Bess" — the Robert Russell Bennett Symphonic Picture for orchestra; and "Rhapsody in Blue" (again Earl Wild).

Sunday Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 416,486

JUL 31 1960

Berkshire Music Center Benefits

Two programs of special events, to benefit the scholarship funds of the Berkshire Music Center, will be given at Tanglewood on the Thursdays of Aug. 4 and 11.

The world premiere of "Port Town," opera by Langston Hughes and Jan Meyerowitz, will highlight the Aug. 4 program. It will be presented by the Berkshire Music Center opera department under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

The program will begin at 4:30 in the afternoon with performance of miscellaneous opera scenes in the Formal Gardens. The Fromm Fellowship Players will be heard in music by Center Composition students in the Theater at 6, and a supper concert will be sung by the Tanglewood Choir from the porch of the Main House at 7. Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the student orchestra in the Music Shed at 8:15, where "Port Town" will be presented after intermission.

On Aug. 11 Arthur Fiedler will conduct, in the Music Shed at 8:30, the Boston Pops Orchestra in a Gershwin program, as follows:

"An American in Paris," Piano Concerto in F and "Rhapsody in Blue," Earl Wild soloist; "Strike Up the Band" and Robert Russell Bennett's Symphonic Picture of "Porgy and Bess."

Sunday Herald
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 289,111

JUL 31 1960

Special Events Mark Berkshire Center Benefits

The first of two special events to benefit the scholarship funds of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music, will be held at Tanglewood on Thursday.

The world-premiere of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Port Town," is included in the Gala Evening. To be presented in the Music Shed, the opera has been prepared by the Opera Department students at Tanglewood under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. In the Music Shed at 8:15, preceding the one-act opera, Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Center's student orchestra which will also participate in the post-intermission opera performance.

The special events begin at 4:30 (grounds open at 3:30) with the performance of opera scenes in the Formal Gardens. The Fromm Fellowship Players will be heard in a concert of music by the Tanglewood composition students in the Theatre at 6:00 p.m. and there will be a supper concert by the Tanglewood Choir on the porch of the Main House at 7:00 p.m.

The Boston Pops conducted by Arthur Fiedler will present an all-Gershwin program at Tanglewood on August 11 as the second benefit. Mr. Fiedler's guest will be pianist Earl Wild. The program includes Gershwin's "An American in Paris," the Concerto in F, the "Rhapsody in Blue," "Strike Up the Band," and "Porgy and Bess" — the Robert Russell Bennett Symphonic Picture for Orchestra.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

AUG 1 1960

Regional Roundup

Tanglewood Concerts Set For Scholarship Funds

Special Events Thursday and Aug. 11 to Benefit Students at Music Center

In addition to the regular concerts in the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood for the rest of this season, there will be two special events to benefit the scholarship funds of the Berkshire Music Center.

Opera's Premiere

The first will be next Thursday, Aug. 4, beginning at 4.30 p. m. with the presentation of opera scenes in the Tanglewood gardens. At 6 there will be a concert of music composed by Tanglewood students. In the evening at 8.15 the world premiere of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Port Town," will be presented in the Music Shed, together with a concert by the student orchestra.

The second gala event will be on Aug. 11, when the Boston Pops conducted by Arthur Fiedler, with pianist Earl Wild as guest, will give an all-Gershwin program.

Tanglewood programs for this week through Sunday, Aug. 7:

Wednesday, Aug. 3, 8.30, Theater: Léon Fleisher, pianist, sonata recital.

Thursday, Aug. 4, a gala evening to benefit Berkshire Music Center; 3.30, grounds open; first event, 4.30.

Munch to Conduct

Friday, Aug. 5, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting.

Wagner: "Die Meistersinger," Excerpts from Act III
Sibelius: Violin Concerto (Ruggiero Ricci)
Kirchner: Toccata (Composer conducting)
Mendelssohn: Symphony No. 3, in A minor, "Scottish," Op. 56

Saturday, Aug. 6, 8.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Munch conducting.

Beethoven: "Prometheus" Overture
Dutilleux: Symphony No. 2, for Large Orchestra and Chamber Orchestra
Brahms: Piano Concerto No. 2, in B-flat major, Op. 83 (Eugene Istomi)

Sunday, Aug. 7, 2.30, Music Shed: Boston Symphony, Monteux conducting.

Vaughan Williams: Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis
Beethoven: Piano Concerto No. 3, in C minor, Op. 37 (Leon Fleischer)
Brahms: Symphony No. 4, in E minor, Op. 98

Activities for Friends

The activities at Tanglewood to which members of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are invited this week are as follows:

Mon., Aug. 1, 8.30, Theater: Fromm Foundation concert, contemporary chamber music, Boston Symphony Orchestra members.

Tues., Aug. 2, 8.30, Chamber Music Hall; listeners forum, "The critic as listener."

Wed., Aug. 3, 3.30, Chamber Music Hall: lecture, aspects of music.

Fri., Aug. 5, 3.15, Chamber Music Hall: seminar in contemporary music.

Sun., Aug. 7, 10 a. m., Chamber Music Hall: BMC chamber music.

Sun., Aug. 7, 8.30, Chamber, Music Hall: composer's forum.

* * *

American (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 176,513

AUG 1 1960

Tanglewood Program

2

The Boston Pops, conducted by Arthur Fiedler, will present an all-Gershwin program at Tanglewood on Thursday, Aug. 11 as the second Berkshire Music Center benefit. Fiedler's guest will be pianist Earl Wild. The program includes Gershwin's "An American in Paris," Mr. Wild as soloist in Concerto in F and in the "Rhapsody in Blue," "Strike Up the Band," and "Porgy and Bess" — the Robert Russell Bennett Symphonic Picture for Orchestra.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON,
Mass.
Circ. 12,847

AUG 1 1960

New Opera At Tanglewood On Thursday

"A charming story with a sad ending," is how Tanglewood's opera director Boris Goldovsky describes Jan Meyerowitz's opera "Port Town" which will have its world-premiere at Tanglewood on Thursday. The one-act opera, the third Meyerowitz opera to have its first performance at Tanglewood, will be given by students of the Center for benefit of the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds.

With librettist Langston Hughes, Mr. Meyerowitz has placed his opera in an unidentified port town where, simultaneously with the arrival of the ship "Mary Belle" filled with romantically inclined sailors, the young ladies from the local seminary are brought, under careful watch, to make their annual study of activities on the waterfront. The finale is predestined: a young girl meets a young sailor and they fall in love; but time is short before they must part forever.

ELEAZOR DE CARVALHO will conduct for the gala evening to celebrate the 20th anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center on Thursday.

Herald 7/31/60

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

AUG 1 1960

'Port Town' Opera At Tanglewood To Be First in Shed

"A charming story with a sad ending," is how Tanglewood's opera director Boris Goldovsky describes Jan Meyerowitz's opera "Port Town" which will have its world-premiere at Tanglewood Thursday. The one-act opera, the third Meyerowitz opera to have its first performance at Tanglewood, will be given by students of the Center for benefit of the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds.

With librettist Langston Hughes, Mr. Meyerowitz has placed his opera in an unidentified port town where, simultaneously with the arrival of the ship "Mary Belle" filled with romantically inclined sailors, the young ladies from the local seminary are brought, under careful watch, to make their annual study of activities on the waterfront. The finale is predestined: a young girl meets a young sailor and they fall in love; but time is short before they must part forever.

Described by Boris Goldovsky as a "wonderfully unusual" person, Jan Meyerowitz was a Berkshire Music Center faculty member in 1948, 1951, and 1953. His Opera "Simoon" had its world-premiere at Tanglewood and "Bad Boys in School" was first heard in 1953, again at the Berkshire Music Center. Born in Breslau April 23, 1913, Meyerowitz came to this country in 1946 after study in Berlin and in Rome (where he studied composition with Respighi) and residence in Belgium and France. Now a resident of New Jersey and teacher at Brooklyn College, Mr. Meyerowitz has composed — in addition to his successful operas — several choral works which have been championed by Dimitri Mitropoulos and performed by the New York Philharmonic and other orchestra.

"Port Town," the first opera presentation ever to be held in Tanglewood's Music Shed, will be preceded by several events at the Gala Evening. At 4:30, in the Formal Gardens, Mr. Goldovsky's opera students will present a program of opera scenes. In the Theatre at 6:00 the Fromm Fellowship Players will present a program of music composed by Tanglewood students and at 7:00, from the porch of the Main House, the Tanglewood Choir, under the direction of Hugh Ross, will present a supper concert.

In the Music Shed, at 8:15, the Berkshire Music Center Director Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the school's department of instrumental music, will conduct the student orchestra in a short program. After intermission in the Shed program, Mr. Goldovsky will conduct the premiere of "Port Town."

The complete program follows: 3:30, grounds open; 4:30, Opera Scenes in the Garden; 6, Concert of music by Tanglewood students, performed by the Fromm Fellowship Players, in the Theater; 7, Supper concert by the Tanglewood Choir on the porch of the Main House; 8:15, in the Music Shed, Concert by Student Orchestra, conducted by Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho, plus World-Premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-act opera "Port Town" (Libretto: Langston Hughes), by the Opera Department and the Student Orchestra.

HACKENSACK, N.J.
BERGEN RECORD
D. 90,2:1

AUG 6 1960

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 3 1960

Tanglewood

Events Tonight and Tomorrow To Benefit BSO Music Center

TANGLEWOOD—Leon Fleisher will give a piano recital in the Tanglewood Theater tonight for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, which this year is celebrating the 20th anniversary of the center, established by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and the ~~late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky~~, musical director of the BSO for 25 years. Like many artists appearing in the past, Mr. Fleisher is contributing his services. He will make another appearance Sunday afternoon as a guest of Pierre Monteux with the BSO in Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 3 at a major concert in the $100,000 Music Shed, built in 1938 by the original Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., under the leadership of Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge.

Tonight at 8:30, Mr. Fleisher will be heard in a program of sonatas, including the Sonata in B minor by Franz Liszt, Leon Kirchner's Sonata (1948) and the posthumous Sonata in B flat by Schubert.

'Gala Evening'

Tomorrow a "gala evening" is planned at the Music Shed for the benefit of the Music Center, an added attraction this year instead of the major benefit of the season, "Tanglewood on Parade." However, a week from tomorrow, BSO officials have scheduled another benefit, described as "the Boston Pops at Tanglewood," featuring Arthur Fiedler, the famed Pops conductor, who has been appearing here for several seasons.

The events tomorrow and the following Thursday will both benefit the Berkshire Music Center. Tomorrow's "gala evening" will aid the scholarship fund of the center and the Pops concert the following week will benefit the center in general.

Establishment of the Berkshire Music Center in 1940 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was the realization of a long held aim of Dr. Koussevitzky. It is devoted principally to the study of ensemble performance under a faculty whose nucleus is a group of 22 members of the orchestra.

Mrs. Olga Koussevitzky is chairman of tomorrow night's added benefit attraction this season. Five thousand seats in the Music Shed, except the boxes, are unreserved. Preceding the evening program in the Music Shed, departments of the Music Center will present concerts.

At 4:30 in the afternoon, informal opera scenes will be given in the Tanglewood formal gardens under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of the opera department. The Fromm Fellowship Players will give a concert of music by Tanglewood students in the Tanglewood theater at 6, and at 7 the Tanglewood choir, under the direction of Dr. Hugh Ross, will give a supper concert on the porch of the main house, used today as the administration building. It formerly was the home of Miss Mary Aspinwall Tappan, aunt of Mrs. Rosamond Brooks of Brookline, who together presented to the BSO the Tanglewood property.

First Opera in Shed

The evening program—the high light of the "gala evening"—will include the world premiere of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowitz opera, "Port Town." It will mark the first time an opera has been given in the huge Shed. Mr. Goldovsky will direct the production.

Before the one act opera, Dr. Charles Munch, conductor of the BSO and director of the Music Center, and Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct a program by the student orchestra of the Music Center.

Attendance at the Berkshire Festival this season is ahead of last season and ahead of any year since the outdoor concert idea was conceived in 1934. Records prove the attendance is up—nearly 5,000 over last year—despite the heavy rains last Saturday.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 4 1960

Box Holders Named for Benefit Tonight

Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, head of the Tanglewood committee for special donors to the Berkshire Music Center's Gala Evening at Tanglewood tonight has announced ~~box holders~~ for the program in the Music Shed. Preceded by opera scenes in the formal gardens, a concert of music by Tanglewood composers and a supper concert by the Tanglewood Choir, the Music Shed program will begin at 8:15. Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho will conduct the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra and, after intermission, the opera department will present the world premiere of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowitz one-act opera, "Port Town."

Among the box holders are Dean Ralph Berkowitz, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Burgin, Aaron Copland, Mrs. Bruce Crane, Mrs. William Crane, Mrs. Gammell Cross, Mr. and Mrs. Eleazar de Carvalho, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Engle, Mrs. J. Dennis Freund, Mr. and Mrs. Boris Goldovsky, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hatch, Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Jackson, Mrs. Shawn Kelly, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, Mr. and Mrs. William Kroll, Frederick Lord, Mr. and Mrs. L. K. Miller, Dr. Charles Munch, Miss Constance Parish, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Ross, Mrs. Bruce W. Sanborn, Mrs. John L. Senior, Norman S. Shirk, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, Mrs. Helen G. Soper, Mrs. Albert Spalding, Mrs. Girard Spencer, Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, Mrs. Richard Thompson, Professor and Mrs. G. Wallace Woodworth.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 3 1960

Whitestone

DISCUSSING BENEFITS to be held for the Berkshire Music Center tonight and tomorrow night at Tanglewood are left to right, Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Music Center; Leon Fleisher, who is donating his services for tonight's piano recital to the school, and Jan Meyerowitz, composer of the music for "Port Town," to be given its world premiere at the "gala evening" benefit tomorrow in the Music Shed.

8/2/60

THE BOSTON GLOBE—

Society: Berkshire Music Center To Mark 20th Anniversary

By MARJORIE W. SHERMAN

Four concerts and a world premiere, all in four hours and all for the price of one concert, will be a most fitting celebration of the Berkshire Music Center's 20th Anniversary at Tanglewood this Thursday. The program—a benefit—will be chairmaned by Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, who has done so much to further the fame of the wonderful Summer center of the Boston Symphony, established a quarter of a century ago by her late, great husband.

Each box party for this special celebration will equal one week's tuition for one music student at Tanglewood, and these scholarship seats are the special concern of Mrs. Kousevitzky's committee people, who include Mrs. Thomas D. Perry, Mrs. Bruce Sanborn, Mrs. Shaun Kelly, Mrs. David Huxley, Mrs. Bruce Crane, Mrs. William Crane, Mrs. C. D. Jackson, Mrs. L. K. Miller, Mrs. John Senior, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hatch, Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith and Miss Anna Alexandre.

Guests at Thursday's gala anniversary are invited to come at 3:30, and the first concert will be directed by Boris Goldovsky in the garden at 5.30, followed by a 6 o'clock concert by the Fromm Fellowship Players in the theater. A supper concert by the Tanglewood Choir, at the Main House, will be at 7 o'clock, and at 8:15, in the Music Shed, Charles Munch will conduct the Student Orchestra, with Eleazar de Carvalho sharing honors.

The premiere performance of Jan Meyerowitz' opera, "Port Town," follows. This occasion will also mark the first opera ever to be given at the Music Shed, and promises to bring to Tanglewood a distinguished audience of music lovers from both east and west of Lenox.

Herald 8/2/60

Berkshire Music Center Benefit

THE 20TH ANNIVERSARY of the Berkshire Music Center will be celebrated by Tanglewood students, Thursday, to benefit the Music Center's scholarship funds. Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky is chairman of the special committee, including Miss Anna R. Alexandre, Mrs. Bruce Crane, Mrs. William Crane, Mrs. David Huxley, Mrs. Shaun Kelly, Mrs. Thomas D. Perry, Mrs. Bruce W. Sanborn, Mrs. John L. Senior and Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith. The committee invites special donors to occupy boxes at the student orchestra program and the world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's opera, "Port Town," to be given in the Music Shed Thursday, as the final event of the evening.

Boxes, seating six, are available at $30, the equivalent of one week's tuition for one student at Tanglewood. Before the evening program in the Music Shed, other departments of the Center will present concerts. At 4:30 in the formal garden, informal opera scenes will be directed by Boris Goldovsky. The Fromm Fellowship Players will give a concert of music by Tanglewood students in the theatre at 6 o'clock, and at 7, the Tanglewood Choir under the direction of Hugh Ross, will give a supper concert on the porch of the main house.

181

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
AUG 5 1960

Music Review

Gala Night at Tanglewood

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

"A GALA Evening at Tanglewood" last night was an innovation in the usual routine of the Berkshire Music Center. Starting at 4 o'clock, there was a continuous exhibition of all the departments of the summer school, which complement the Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

There were scenes by the opera department, of which Boris Goldovsky is the director, in which excerpts from "The Magic Flute," "Pelleas and Melisande," "Hansel and Gretel" and "La Boheme" were played. There was a program of compositions by students of Aaron Copland, Leon Kirchner and Luciano Berio. A short program was given by the choral department, of which Hugh Ross, Lorna Cooke deVaron and Alfred Nash Patterson are associates, and, finally, at 8:15, a concert and opera were given in the great Shed. A crowd of 2,490 attended.

* * *

ELEAZAR de Carvalho, head of the orchestral department, led the student orchestra in Beethoven's Overture No. 1 to "Lenore," and Charles Munch, director of the Boston Symphony, conducted Faure's incidental music to Maeterlinck's "Pelleas and Melisande."

After intermission came the first performance of a 40-minute, one-act opera on which the opera department has been concentrating for most of its short school session. "Port Town," on a libretto by Langston Hughes, was composed by Jan Meyrowitz. Both authors were in the audience and were called to the stage to share with the large cast the applause of an audience which would have overflowed the theater where opera previously had been given, but which in the Shed last night filled only the front half.

* * *

IT IS DEBATABLE whether opera can be properly appreciated in such a huge auditorium. This listener was deprived of the opportunity of watching facial expressions and the words were not often clear. The stage set was excellent. Its erection during intermission in full view of the audience was a peek "behind the scenes" for many avid theater lovers. It showed the facade of a group of houses to the left, and on the right a wharf and dock from which sailors on shore leave enter early after the start of the opera.

Boris Goldovsky, conductor, drew a good performance from his orchestra in a short but sonorous and graphic overture, but its sombre character was not completely fulfilled as the opera unfolded. The plot, in the hastiest skeleton sketch, concerns a touring visit by a baker's dozen of young maidens from a seminary chaperoned by two teachers. A policeman on the beat herds a barkeeper and his patrons within the swinging doors of his establishment before the arrival of the group, which might be shocked if not contaminated by such contact. He also attempts to banish temporarfly within doors the duenna of the adjacent house, also an establishment catering to sailors on leave, in which the interest of the residents is whorticulture, concentrating on cross-pollination.

* * *

THE INVOLVEMENT of one young lady from the seminary, who dallies and strays from the pack, and one of the sailors provides the hub of the story around which many colorful details evolve. The stage set was devised for excellent coherence with the action which, in its turn, proceeded without any apparent "first night" awkwardness.

The music was cheerful and witty, but there was an indecisive factor which prevented this listener from discerning whether the poet and the composer wished this to be amusing solely or a story with deeper pathos. The opportunities for solos and concerted singing and for the entire large company were abundant, and the freshness and beauty of the voices increased the enjoyment of the opera conspicuously.

---

theatre owners and operators.

To Premiere Opera . . .

Boris Goldovsky, who was on sabbatical last summer from the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Mass., will reactivate the school's Opera Department for the 1960 session, July 3 through Aug. 14.

The world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz's one-act opera, "Port Town," will be given on Aug. 4 as part of a "Gala Evening" to benefit the Music Center. A former faculty member at Tanglewood, Mr. Meyerowitz has seen two of his earlier operas premiered at Tanglewood.

The Opera Department will continue its work, begun in 1957 with the cooperation of the Ford Foundation, on a multi-projection shell concept of scenic materials.

PAIRFIELD COUNTY FAIR

VALATIE ROUGH NOTES
Friday, August 5, 1960

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815
AUG 5 1960

Pops Program With Earl Wild Is All Gershwin

LENOX — Arthur Fiedler, Mr Music to millions, and the Boston Pops, with guest pianist Ear Wild, will give an all-Gershwir program in The Music Shed Tanglewood, Aug. 11 at 8.30, as a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds.

Awards culminating the summer's student musical activities will be presented at the concluding concert of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra Aug. 13 at 3. The prizes and scholarships will cover a wide range of Tanglewood activity and will touch upon the work accomplished by every aspect of the Music Center.

Three young men who have shared the podium as active conductors of the student orchestra will each conduct a movement of Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony For this Harold Farberman Seiji Ozawa, and Diogo Pacheco will be joined by Oleg Kovalenkc who has been a conducting auditor. Seymour Lipkin will conduct the only other work on the program, the Symphony in Three Movements by Stravinsky.

Two works of contemporary chamber music will be heard at the last concert of student chamber music Aug. 14 at 10 a. m. in the Theatre Concert Hall. The Stravinsky Octet for winds and brasses, prepared by Louis Speyer of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is to open the program followed by Spohr's Nonet coached by Rosario Mazzeo, also of the Boston Symphony.

Sunday morning's student chamber music program, Aug. 7, will open with the Schubert String Quartet in G minor at 10. The four players have been coached by Alfred Krips, assist- and concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The middle work in this program is to be the Divertimento by Roussel. This is scored for five wind instruments and piano, and was prepared under the direction of Ralph Gomberg, principal oboe of the Boston Symphony. Concluding the morning program will be the Dvorak Piano Quintet prepared by Joseph de Pasqulae, principal viola of the BSO.

This concert is one of the large series presented during the Tanglewood season under the auspices of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Aug. 14 the final chamber music program of the Music Center's season will be held in the Theatre Concert Hall rather than the Chamber Music Hall.

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 92,367
AUG 5 1960

Lenox Event Spread Over Two Days

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX — The 20th anniversary celebration of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood brought the first of ~~two benefit perform~~ances yesterday, the other to follow next Thursday. The familiar "Tanglewood on Parade" of other years has been spread over two days, and the plan incorporates major performances of opera previously witnessed in an earlier week.

Next Thursday will bring a full evening o the Boston "Pops" under Arthur Fieldler. The shed and lawn will presumably be crowded, even though the all-Gershwin program, complete with pianist Earl Wild, identical in every detail with that performed at last year's "Parade." Local people who have poured their money into Tanglewood's concerts and school over the years, and who do not happen to want the same Gershwin over again, are not permitted to have on "Pops" program a year of fresh material.

Eye-Opener

Yesterday was an eye-opener in many good ways. It gave the entire stage to students, in a fascinating variety of musical expression.

Late afternoon events began with scenes from operas of Mozart, Debussy, Humperdinck and Puccini, in the Theater-Concert Hall, under the direction of Boris Goldovsky.

Student composers had the opportunity in the early evening to hear their works performed by the professional Fromm Fellowship Players, including 10 instrumentalists and a soprano. This session represented the most daring adventure of the day.

The supper hour found the Tanglewood Choir singing a widely varied program from the porch of the main house. There were five guest conductors, as well as numbers directed by the heads of his department, Hugh Ross, Lorna Cooke de Varon and Alfred Nash Patterson.

By evening, 2,448 had entered the grounds for the concert and opera in the big music shed. Presenting opera in the amphitheate vas in itself a novelty, and th attendance, high for student even revealed much interest in th work of the opera department a well as that of the large studen orchestra.

The 80 young players were conducted by Eleazar de Carvalh n Beethoven's Overture to "Le nore," No. 1. The results were in pressive, even though the va hed showed up the partial la f focus and sonority in th trings. The terrific boom of th impani, noted on other occasio when the Boston Symphony w playing, intruded unpleasant several times during the overtu

The Ensemble Glows

Charles Munch led the studen n the four atmospheric and qui ections of Faure's incidental m ic to Maeterlinck's "Pelleas a Melisande." The ensemble glow n these passages, includi he Prelude, Spinning Song, Si ienne and "The Death of Me ande." The only lapse from hi tandards was in a passage f xposed winds.

"Port Town," a 40-minute ope y Jan Meyerowitz, with text Langston Hughes, was given remiere under the direction Goldovsky, with a student orche ra in the pit. The scenery a ghting were impressive, and th arge cast handled its singing c ably. Many of the stage picture eemed static or stiff.

The fine shell of the shed st lanketed with scenery, failed project the lively words clearly xcept rare phrases; at least this was the situation midway of the hed. The action was clear enough ut some details of character were not revealed. For instance until one consulted the libretto Mrs. Winkelbaum and Mr. Schwartz seemed like ethical people combatting wickedness in the orm of the second-story Maggie. Jeannette, a girl from the seminary, played by Grace Tester, teals away from her group and meets a sailor, Smitty, in the erson of John Lodge. They are eventually separated, and the disconsolate Smitty refuses Maggie's proffered hospitality.

This little story could have been told beautifully in modern ballet with no acoustical problems.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026
AUG 5 1960

Fiedler to Offer All-Gershwin Show, Tanglewood Aug. 11

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra will present an all-Gershwin program at Tanglewood on Thursday, Aug. 11. As a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship fund, Fiedler and the Pops, plus guest pianist Earl Wild, will perform ih Tanglewood's 6,000-seat Music Shed. This is one of two special performances this season in addition to the standard fare of Charles Munch-directed Berkshire Music Festival.

On Thursday morning, Mr. Fiedler will fly to Tanglewood, after polishing off his 10th season of concerts for the Art Commission in San Francisco Tuesday evening. The special performance, scheduled to begin at 8:30 Thursday evening, will represent the better known portions of Gershwin's works, including: "An American in Paris," Concerto in F for Piano and Orchestra, with Earl Wild as soloist; "Porgy and Bess," a Symphonic Picture for Orchestra, by Robert Russell Bennett; Rhapsody in Blue, for piano and orchestra, with Mr. Wild, and as the finale of the evening's performance: "Strike Up the Band."

GLOVERSVILLE N.Y.
LEADER-HERALD
D. 14,751
AUG 1 1960

Special Events

At Tanglewood two special events are scheduled along with the regular concerts by the full orchestra.

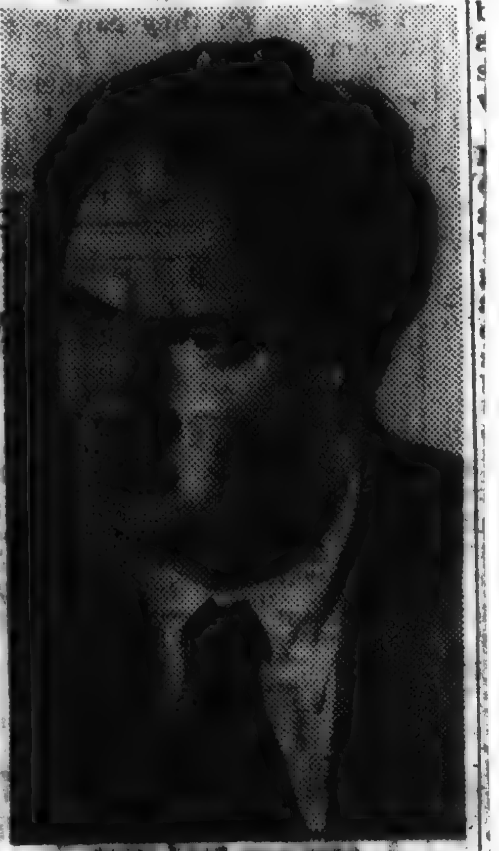
This Thursday (Gala Evening) the program will include the world premiere of Meyerowitz's opera "Port Town." On Aug. 11 there will be an all-Gershwin execution of selections by the Boston Pops Orchestra. Located one mile from Lenox on Route 183 there is a general admission charge for reserved and unreserved seats but many bivouac like on the great lawns adjacent to the shed. On this greenward once wrote Nathan Hawthorn in brooding brilliance. He gave the name Tanglewood to the wooded glen between his house and the Stockbridge Bowl, one of the most beautiful lakes in the Berkshires.

182

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635
AUG 5 1960

Music: Student Talent

Meyerowitz Opera Is Given at Lenox



Jan Meyerowitz

By ROSS PARMENTER
Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 4—The Berkshire Music Festival combined Thursday its annual display of student talent with its major operatic production of the summer.

The opera was Jan Meyerowitz' "Port Town," a one-act work with a libretto by Langston Hughes, with whom the composer earlier collaborated to create "The Barrier." This was the opera's first performance.

The combined event was called "A Gala Evening at Tanglewood," and it represented a break from the customary "Tanglewood on Parade." In the "Parade," the display of student talent was traditionally followed by a pops concert that nearly always swamped the students' efforts. This time the event was an all-student affair, for the opera was performed by students, too.

The change was made to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center, the school that was added to the Tanglewood operation in 1940. The event attracted 2,448 persons, which was a small number in comparison with the crowds coming to the "Parades."

•

But from the artistic point of view the break was a healthy one, for this time the students got their due. Also the six-hour program, diverse as it was, had more coherence than the "Parades" ever had.

What gave such a long series of musical events in three different locales such unity of mood was the integrity of the students. Whether as opera performers, composers of chamber music, choral singers or members of a symphony, they approached their work with the utmost sincerity, with unfailing musical sensibility and with the willingness to submerge their very considerable talents in the re-creation of music they cared about.

The artistic integrity of the students, in fact, was just as impressive as the sum total of their gifts and skills. And the extent of those gifts was shown most decisively when the orchestra of young people, under the direction of Charles Munch, played Fauré's incidental music to "Pelléas et Mélisande."

It was almost impossible to believe that such beautiful ensemble playing was the work of a student orchestra that had been together for only five weeks.

•

The Meyerowitz opera calls for a large orchestra, a big cast and an elaborate waterfront setting. Like the orchestral concert it was given in the Shed. And it was given well. It was received enthusiastically, too, but its machinery seemed somewhat too large for its content.

Its plot about a girl from a seminary and a sailor falling in love is essentially slight and there was something touching about it. But one got the impression that it would have been more touching if there had been less of the grand opera air to it.

The music has some pretty numbers, especially the girl's song about the sea and the love duet of the two youngsters, but quite a lot of the music sounded padded and the orchestral texture was inclined to be thick. Altogether it was professional and workable but not strikingly fresh or original.

•

Boris Goldovsky, who co-staged the work with Arthur Schoep, also conducted it. Jane Wymond as Maggie, Grace Trester as the girl from the seminary and John Lodge as [illegible], the sailor, were the outstanding members of the cast, though there also were good bits contributed by Ethel [illegible], George Shirley, Rita Kolacz and Sherrill Milnes.

The day's events began at 4:30 P. M. in the theatre-concert hall when members of the opera department, most of whom also appeared in the opera in the evening, gave an hour-long program of scenes from standard operas to piano accompaniment. Hardly had they finished when members of the Fromm Fellowship Players came on the stage to start the program by student composers.

Robert Bernat and Timothy Thompson were the current student composers represented. Mr. Bernat offered a sensitive andante and allegro for woodwind quintet. Mr. Thompson a neo-romantic piano suite, which he played himself.

•

Then came a beautiful work by a former student composer, Lester Trimble's "Myn Hertes Queene," which successfully captured the medieval flavor of Chaucer's text. Jerome Rosen's delicately textured quintet for clarinet and strings completed the program.

As it ended, one heard the brass fanfare announcing the choral program sung on the porch of the main house. This outdoor program included a repetition of Mr. Trimble's piece and the first performance of Mabel Daniel's "Piper, Play On."

The choristers were sometimes led by student conductors. As they sang, the listeners ate picnic suppers on the lawn in front; the trees stood breathlessly still and the sun set in pale mauve and soft gold. The Stockbridge Bowl was as lovely to see as the music was to hear. It was a happy interlude in a worthy program.

May the students be similarly honored again next year.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 57,341

AUG 5 1960

Music: 'Gala Concert' At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN
Telegram Music Critic

LENOX — Highlight of the Berkshire Music Center's "Gala Concert" yesterday afternoon and evening at ~~Tanglewood~~ was the world premiere of the opera, "Port Town," music by Jan Meyerowitz, text by Langston Hughes.

Events began at 4:30 p.m. in the Theater Concert Hall and continued unabated to performances in the Music Shed by the Berkshire Center Student Orchestra and the Meyerowitz Opera.

This was formerly the format of "Tanglewood on Parade," traditional "five-ring circus" that culminated with the Boston Pops Orchestra, conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

One at a Time

The advantage yesterday was that only one program was given at a time, and not five simultaneously in various auditoriums on the Tanglewood grounds.

"Tanglewood on Parade" with the Boston Pops and Fiedler will take place next Thursday evening. Both programs are for the benefit of the center. Yesterday's attracted an audience of 2,448 at $2.50 for general admission.

"Port Town" is distinguished mainly for a handsome set created by Dom Poleo.

It shows a waterfront bar and grill with nearby docks and an anchored vessel, the "Sea Horse." Among the characters are the usual barkeep, girl, sailors—and for some extraordinary reason, the novices from a nearby convent.

No Curtain

This was the first time that such a production had been given in the Music Shed. There was no curtain, so that the set was placed in view of the audience.

Excellent as the shed's acoustics may be for orchestral music, it was virtually impossible to follow the story from the singing. Apparently no effort was made to suppress an orchestra that drowned out all but the heaviest ensembles.

The text by Langston Hughes may be admirable in printed form, but Meyerowitz' music turns it into a hopelessly verbose series of recitations. Most of these are in extremes of the range, sung in conversational form.

There are no tangible arias, so that it's quite impossible to focus on specific points or vital moments of atmosphere.

In addition are many obvious artifices. Six sailors suddenly appear from a gangplank. Each makes a bravura vocal speech upon arrival. Everything is static until this function is completed.

Most ridiculous is the role and vocal score for the policeman whose apparent function it is to keep order in this melange. He makes dramatic preachments that have no conviction, dramatically or musically.

3 Roles Well Sung

Three roles are particularly well sung, speaking purely in terms of vocal production.

These are Grace Trester, who sings Jeannette, the convent girl who is sailor-smitten; George Shirley, the third sailor in the retinue, and Sherrill Milnes, who sings the role of the policeman.

A highly successful feature of the evening concert was the appearance of the 80-player orchestra of Berkshire music students, conducted by Charles Munch and Eleazar De Carvalho of Brazil.

It would be absurd to suggest that this was Boston Symphony caliber, but certainly an uncommonly euphonious tone was heard in the strings during the Leonore Overture No. 1, conducted by Carvalho.

Most needed was a clearer definition of melody, and less vigor from percussion.

Munch conducted the orchestra in incidental music from Faure's "Pelleas and Melisande."

The student orchestra obliged Munch with a glowing tone, notably from cellos and woodwinds. Satiny sounds were highlights of the second section, decorated with fluent solos from the reeds. A beautiful flute solo was heard in the third movement, and the final "Death of Melisande" section was warmly expressive and exceptionally poised.

Opening Session

The afternoon's opening session consisted of four scenes from operas, directed by Goldovsky.

These were done without scenery or costume, and although they were all sung in English, Goldovsky felt it necessary to explain them in an oral commentary. Fourth of these scenes uncovered the amazing tenor voice of George Shirley from Detroit, Mich., in the role of Rodolfo from Puccini's "La Boheme."

Few voices heard at Tanglewood, even among the top roster, have had greater resonance, warmth, and carrying power. The young man injected an engaging flair for the score and role. It was a powerful portrayal, without conscious effort and strenghened with a ringingly clear voice.

The second act scene from Mozart's "Magic Flute" was infinitely less effective. In the roles of Papageno and Papagena, John Lodge and Barbara Allentuch made earnest efforts. He was vocally articulate, but weak, and she was slightly coy in her interpretation.

Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande" was flattened by its English translation. John Humphrey and Grace Trester were expressive enough in the title roles, displaying, in the main, voices of light texture, neat phrasing, but sluggish tempos that caused loss of dramatic power.

Other Works

A scene from "Hansel and Gretel" seems to be a "must" at these events. This time, it was Miss Trester as the Sandman who rescued it from the genre of saccharine tidbit.

The composition department offered several works by center students, some performed by the Fromm Fellowship players.

Robert Bernat contributed an andante and allegro for woodwind quintet that represented serious thought and astute use of instruments. The net result did not equal the effort of creation or reproduction.

The "Andante" was reasonably good "mood" music, utilizing fairly direct melodic lines without excesses of any kind, including interest. The "Allegro" proved to be a whimsical scherzo that prattled meaningless remarks.

Suite for Piano

Another valiant effort was Suite for Piano by Timothy Thompson, who delivered it. The first movement traveled over a lot of notes without making any appreciable progress. The second sounded like the skeleton of a toccata or show piece. The finale raced passionately, ending in a draw between both hands.

During the dinner hour, the audience listened to the Tanglewood Choir, which sang from the main house porch.

Tonight the Boston Symphony and Charles Munch resume the Berkshire Music Festival.

The program includes excerpts from Wagner's "Die Meistersinger," Sibelius' Violin Concerto with Ruggiero Ricci as soloist and Mendelssohn's "Scotch" sym-

183

Herald (m)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 175,076

AUG 6 1960

'Port Town' Given at Tanglewood

Opera's Music, Words Ill-Fitting

By JULES WOLFFERS

Having had a day to sort out my feelings regarding "Port Town," the new one act opera by Jan Meyerowitz, which had its first performance Thursday evening at Tanglewood, I can find no reason to change my first impression.

The music is compelling, often beautiful, the text by Langston Hughes about sailors and girls in a port town, is made for musical treament, but the Meyerowitz music doesn't go with the words.

Tugged Two Ways

Never before at an opera performance have I had this experience of being tugged two ways at once. When I listened to the music, so well sung and performed by the Berkshire Music Center opera and orchestral forces, it seemed that the action on stage bore absolutely no relation to what I was hearing.

I will not say that the words didn't fit the music because from where I was sitting, except for an occasional phrase or two, the principals and chorus might just as well have been singing in Swahili. Boris Goldovsky is an ardent champion of opera in English, and rightfully so, but with all credit to his fine direction, he did not succeed this time in having his troup pronounce their words intelligibly.

Luckily, there was the libretto which I eagerly read after the performance to find out just what all the commotion was about on stage. There is much gutter talk from the port town waterfront denizens until a group of young ladies from a seminary come on tour of inspection. But a boatful of sailors have received liberty and so there are inevitable complications.

Sweeping Music

It is not up to the critic to instruct the composer but Mr. Meyerowitz has written so much that it is gripping and compelling in his opus that I wish there was some way the notes could be salvaged. The music sounds epic, noble, sweeping, emotion-laden with a fine flow and logical climaxes.

The performance came as the climax of an afternoon of varied activity. The gala evening to benefit the center included opera scenes, original compositions by Tanglewood students, the Tanglewood Choir and the student orchestra conducted in the shed by Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho.

An interesting item on the list was when a Boston woman conductor interpreted a Boston woman composer — Lorna Cooke de Varon leading the Tanglewood Choir through Mabel Daniel's effective "Piper, Play On."

Next Thursday, Aug. 11, Arthur Fiedler flies to Tanglewood to conduct the Pops in another gala afternoon and evening.

Evening Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 149,750

AUG 5 1960

Meyerowitz in 'Port Town' Premiere at Tanglewood

By CYRUS DURGIN

LENOX, Aug. 4—"Port Town," a short, one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz based upon a play by Langston Hughes was given its first performance here tonight at the Music Shed at Tanglewood.

Boris Goldovsky conducted the production by the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, a production which he, with Arthur Schoet, had staged.

"Port Town" was the main and final event of an afternoon-and-evening sequence of performances given in celebration of the 20th anniversary season of the Berkshire Music Center, the Summer music school operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the annual Berkshire Festival. Proceeds will benefits the center.

"Port Town" is a sophisticated yet alternately gay and tender vignette of a few hours of life in one of those marine centers where the scenery is lovely, the people good and bad—and everywhere—and the the life grubby.

Smitty, one of a half-dozen hands from the rusty freighter Sea Horse, comes ashore, meets Maggie, the Port Town's obliging girl, and falls in love with Jeannette, a lonely little rich girl of 16 from a nearby seminary. Separated by The Law and The Teachers, Jeannette tosses Smitty her locket and he throws his cap to her.

For a fine, moral ending, Smitty ignores the repeated invitation of Maggie and returns to his ship. All this occurs before the trinket shop of Mrs. Winkelbaum and the saloon of Mr. Schwartz. Th etime is "1919 or 1946 following a major World War."

Meyerowitz, known to Boston principally for his opera "Esther" performed at Jordan Hall in 1958, is a musician who writes in the modern manner but with feeling. His musical vocabulary is extensive, his resources varied, his idiom ranges from harmonically tart to jazz rhythm, blues coloration and a flow of melody which really singable.

I must admit that knowledge of Langst Hughes' plot and of his son which old-fashioned rhymi [illegible] structure, has been d [illegible] from reading the li [illegible] The singers tried [illegible] clearly in Engli but mostly, I heard a phr here and there.

Yet the singing voices we excellent and, as one wou expect from a Goldovs show, the acting was mo than competent.

Jane Wymond as Magg Jeannette Grace Trester a John Lodge as Smitty, took t leading roles most creditab Other good performan came from Ethel Erdos as M Winkelbaum, Spiro Malan barkeeper Schwartz.

"Port Town" ought to be welcome addition to the re ertory of small and univers opera companies, because affords a large cast and playable plot. It is not simplest to stage, howeve The Tanglewood performan —the first operatic one in th Music Shed—was imposing its spread of scenery design by Dom Poleo.

The opera was preceded a concert featuring the Be shire Music Center Orchest which this Summer (as usu it must be emphasized, for th work effectively here in six weeks) proved of excell caliber.

Eleazar de Varvalho, head the orchestral department, c ducted Beethoven's "Leon Overture No. 1, and Cha Munch erected the Suite incidental music by Faure Maeterlinck's drama Pel Et Melisaude.

The gala included o scenes in the afternoon, a cert of chamber music an open-air supper concert the porch of the Main H by the Tanglewood Choir ducted by Hugh Ross, Cooke de Baron and se student conductors. This cert began with the first formance of "Piper Play O by the Boston Composer Ma Daniels. Miss Daniels present to acknowledge plause.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON,
Mass.
Circ. 12,847

AUG 5 1960

Tanglewood On Parade Divided Into Two Parts; Finale Next Thursday

For the first time, the annual Berkshire Music Center's benefit performance of student activities and accomplishments known as "Tanglewood on Parade" has been separated into two events.

The first, known as "A Gala Evening," was held last evening and afternoon starting at 4:30. For various reasons, in the formal gardens were the opera scenes, usually held given in the theatre-concert hall.

As Mr. Goldovsky suggested, one had to use one's imagination in regard to scenery, costumes and makeup, even to long blond hair in the charming duet from Debussy's "Peleas and Melisande" sung with grace and beauty by Grace Trester and Jon Humrey.

Flency of voice and movement, gave the scene from Act. II of Mozart's "The Magic Flute," displayed by pert Barbara Allenbach and virile John Lodge, just the right touch of gaiety and humor it invokes. Barbara Allenbach's beautifully developed voice was again heard as Gretel in the forest scene from Hansel and Gretel" with the finely controlled singing of Corinne Curry as Hansel and the smoothness of Grace Trester as the Sandman.

The final excerpt from "La Boheme's" Act III outside the cafe, displayed exceptionally fine voices in the full round of Lucille Sullam as Mimi, the powerful ring of John d'Armand as Marcello, the deep resonance of George Shirley as Rodolfo and the warmth of Maxine Makas as Musetta.

At 6, again in the theatre-concert hall, the department of composition headed by Aaron Copland, assisted by Leon Kirchner and Luciano Berio, presented the Fromm Fellowship Players in a chamber music concert, including uncomplicated and agreeable Andante and Allegro for Woodwind Quintet by Robert Bernat, a harmonically interesting, abridged Suite for Piano, composed and played by Timothy Thompson, a beautifully colored and coordinated composition for 12 male voices, woodwinds and strings, by Lester Trimble, from Chaucer's "Myn Hertes Queene"; the last work was by Jerome Rosen, an intricately developed quintet for clarinet and strings in four well-defined movements with the composer playing clarinet.

This performance overlapped by several minutes the Tanglewood choral department's offerings on the main house porch, with Hugh Ross as spokesman and conductor in a repetition of Lester Trimble's work, his assistants Lorna Cooks deVaron and Alfred Nash Patterson leading Mabel Daniels' stirring "Piper Play On" and Orlando Gibbons' vivid "Street Cries of London." Included were Gabrieli's moving "The Signor, le tue man sante, Virgine il cui figliol" conducted by capable student Talmon Herz from Tel-Aviv, Hindemith's "Six Chansons" dynamically led by Jacqueline Bourillon from Paris, France and Krsto Odak's God Have Mercy and Bodizar Sirola's "The Lord's Prayer" vigorously directed by Seymour Schonberg from Irvington, New Jersey.

Suppers toted from home or obtained from the refreshment center, were disposed of during, in between or after these performances. The mild but increasingly chill weather sent many scurrying to their cars for assorted wraps before proceeding to the big shed for the orchestral department's performance of Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture, No. 1. conducted by the vibrant and dramatic Eleazar Carvalho, director of the department, who is assisted by Seymour Lipkin. It was an incredibly masterful performance, and showed the superb training of its directors. Charles Munch was evidently an inspiration to the orchestra in their playing of Faure's tender and evocative, "Incidental Music to Maeterlinck's Pelleas and Melisande", drawing exquisitely fine gradations of color throughout.

The world-premiere of the Langston Huges, librettist, and Jan Meyerwitz, composer, opera, "Port Town" was given a warm reception by the vociferous and celebrity-marked audience.

Although delayed for forty minutes by the erection of the stunning scenery after removal of orchestral equipment, the opera, in one act, unfolded its partly humorous and finally tragic tale with vivid action and a score of outstanding voices, too numerous to mention individually, including some not heard in the afternoon, Ethel Erdos, Spiro Malas, Jane Wymond and Rita Kolacz.

Directed by Boris Goldovsky its many moods were clearly projected by the orchestra and the singers, sometimes a bit overshadowed, were quite understandable. It is an opera worth repeating and listening, even though it is reminiscent in style, its difficult and memorable score was given expert interpretation.

The next event, the Boston Pops at Tanglewood, will present an all-Gershwin program on Aug. 11, with Arthur Fiedler conducting, "An American in Paris," Earl Wild as soloist in "Rhapsody in Blue," Strike Up the Band and "Porgy and Bess," the Robert Russell Bennett Symphonic Picture for Orchestra.

M. deB. B.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

AUG 4 1960

Tanglewood Gala

"A charming story with a sad ending," is how Tanglewood's opera director Boris Goldovsky has described Jan Meyerowitz's opera "Port Town," to have its world première at Tanglewood tonight. The one act opera, the third Meyerowitz opera to have its first performance at Tanglewood, will be given by students of the Berkshire Music Center for benefit of the center's scholarship funds.

With Langston Hughes, librettist, Mr. Meyerowitz has set his opera in an unidentified port town where, simultaneously with the arrival of the ship "Mary Belle" (filled with romantically inclined sailors), the young ladies from the local seminary are brought to make their annual study of activities on the water front. The finale is predestined: a young girl meets a young sailor and they fall in love, but time is short before they must part forever.

"Port Town," the first opera presentation to be held in Tanglewood's Music Shed, will be preceded by several events at the gala evening. At 4:30 in the Formal Gardens, Mr. Goldovsky's opera students will present a program of opera scenes. In the Theater at 6 o'clock, the Fromm Fellowship Players will present a program of music composed by Tanglewood students; and at 7 o'clock, from the porch of the Main House, the Tanglewood Choir, under the direction of Hugh Ross, will present a supper concert.

In the Music Shed, at 8:15, the Charles Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the school's department of instrumental music, will conduct the student orchestra in a short program. After intermission in the Shed program, Mr. Goldovsky will conduct the première of "Port Town."

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 6 1960

Robert Shaw at Tanglewood

Whitestone

Robert Shaw, assistant conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra and a former member of the Berkshire Music Center faculty, at the premiere performance of "Port Town" Thursday evening at Tanglewood. He will attend the weekend concerts.

Schenectady Gazette 6 Aug 1960

Berkshire Music Center 'Gala' Marks Anniversary

By D. E. RITZ
Gazette Music Editor

A "gala" evening Thursday at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., marked the 20th anniversary celebration of the Berkshire Music Center and was highlighted by the world premiere of the Langston Hughes-Jan Meyerowtiz opera "Port Town" and a performance by the center's student orchestra under the direction of Eleazar de Carvalho and Charles Munch in the Shed.

* * *

THE "GALA" EVENT, the first of two benefits for the scholarship funds of the Berkshire Music Center, opened in the afternoon with opera scenes in the Theatre-Concert Hall, was followed by an exposition of the work of the composition department in the same auditorium and a performance by the Tanglewood choir during the supper hour on the main house porch.

We found the student orchestra performance under de Carvalho and Dr. Munch completely unbelievable. That a large group of student musicians—the cream of the musical world we'll admit—could be welded within the short space of five weeks into such an excellent musical organization is incredible. The "Overture to Leonore, number 1," Beethoven, was presented under de Carvalho and the incidental music to Maeterlick's "Pelleas and Melisande, opus 80," Faure, was conducted by Dr. Munch.

* * *

TWO SCHENECTADY STUDENTS at the center participated in the day's events. Richard Marshall, a student in the opera department, was cast as the "sergeant" in the excerpt from Puccini's "La Boheme" in the afternoon; and Carol Russo a member of the department of choral music, sang in the Tanglewood choir outdoor concert.

The "Port Town" presentation marked several unusual events—the revival after a year's leave of absence for Boris Goldosky of the opera department; the first presentation of an opera on the huge Music Shed stage and the premiere of a new work.

* * *

IN OTHER YEARS the opera department presentations have all been given in the theatre-concert hall with its specially designed stage and its excellent stage equipment. We found an amazing part of the presentation the opportunity to see the Shed stage transformed during the intermission. We found ourselves standing on tip-toe and watching breathlessly as skilled stage technicians erected the prepared Port street building and pier that form the background of action for the one-act opera.

Goldovsky conducted the presentation that, in spite of the size of the Shed was excellent. The "Port Town" story is thin in texture, featuring the budding love episode of Jeannette, a 16-year-old orphan who is attending a private girls' school, and Smitty, a young sailor.

The second special benefit event is scheduled for next Thursday and will feature the Boston Pops under Arthur Fiedler in an all-Gershwin program.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

AUG 6 1960

'Port Town' in Première

By Nicolas Slonimsky

Lenox, Mass.

The main event of the Gala Evening at Tanglewood on the occasion of the 20th anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center was the world première of a one-act opera, "Port Town," by Jan Meyerowitz. The composer came to America in 1946 after some years in Belgium and France as an exile from his native Germany. In this country he became happily acclimatized, and acquired a fine reputation as composer of compact and effective short operas.

The libretto of "Port Town" is by the eminent Negro poet and novelist Langston Hughes (who was present at the performance). It is a tender vignette, a story simply told. In a port town after the first World War a group of seminary girls are conducted on a sightseeing tour; one of them lags behind and is engaged in an innocent conversation by a young sailor.

Carmen in Reverse

A water-front siren tries to lure the sailor away, but he resists her advances. In the meantime the absence of the girl from the sight-seeing group is discovered, and an alarm is sounded. The girl hides herself under an ashcan, but is found and taken away. In despair she throws a ring to her sailor, and he tosses his sailor's cap into her hands. The siren tries to tempt him again, but he walks sadly away, the cherished keepsake in his hands.

It is a sort of Carmen in reverse, wherein Don José rejects the temptress and yearns for his faithful Micaela. To this story Mr. Meyerowitz wrote a nostalgic, sweetly acrid score, built on clearly defined arias and concerted numbers, with convenient pauses between them for applause, which was given in full measure by an audience that nearly filled the Music Shed.

The musical idiom employed by Meyerowitz is frankly melodious, and even harmonious. The arias are expansively songful and felicitously written for the voice. The wistful harmonies, full of anguished suspensions, convey the atmosphere of the sad story. But the boisterous crowd scenes are set to vigorous, bouncing music, with plenty of vitality and ribaldry. In climaxes Mr. Meyerowitz summons all the resources of grand opera, and he knows how to achieve dramatic effect.

Expressionistic Verismo

It is an expressionistic opera without angularity, a veristic drama without disturbing naturalism. The characterizations are finely drawn. The seduction motto of the water-front siren is what the Europeans call a Valse Boston, and the composer contrives a sensuous one, laden with serpentine chromatic embellishments. This serves as an expressive contrast with the lyric strain in the duet of the sailor and his girl.

The opera was led by Boris Goldovsky, capable and self-assured as ever. The students of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center gave a remarkably competent performance.

In the orchestral part of the Gala Evening, which preceded the production of the opera, the Brazilian conductor Eleazar de Carvalho, who heads the orchestral department, gave a well-proportioned and precise performance of Beethoven's "Leonore" Overture No. 1. He conducted a student orchestra in which, incidentally, the feminine players seemed in the majority, particularly in the string section. So pleased was he with the results that he shook hands with a dozen of them after the end. He signaled the orchestra to rise by giving a conductorial downbeat, and the players responded with absolute precision. This is a practical innovation in the business of acknowledging applause, well worth considering for general adoption at symphony concerts.

Soundless Fireflies

Charles Munch conducted Gabriel Fauré's suite from the incidental music to Maeterlinck's "Pelléas et Mélisande." How different is this serene score from the palpitating music of Debussy's opera! Fauré gives a pastoral interpretation to the tragedy of the hapless lovers.

The suite is, of course, Dr. Munch's favorite. He worked wonders in securing melodic roundness and shimmering sonorities. When he shook hands with the concertmaster, who looked like a boy of 16, it was in real appreciation of the work well done.

All in all, this gala evening was most enjoyable. The weather was cooperatively clement, cool without chilliness. And not a single airplane passed overhead to inject a bit of "musique concrète." Only soundless fireflies provided occasional distraction.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 6 1960

185

Fiedler Translated Is Fiddler But Most of All It Means Pops

By MARGO MILLER

Some etymologists opine that the word "Pops" comes from the popping of champagne corks. Hearing the cheerful explosions during a pianissimo passage of music would confirm this pedantry. But in Boston, however you define it, Pops is Arthur Fiedler.

Lenscraft Photos

At the Pops during the Davy Crockett craze

This is Fiedler's 31st year as conductor of the 75-year-old Boston Pops Orchestra, which each May and [illegible] to sell-out crowds at Symphony Hall. Aug. 11 marks Fiedler's sixth appearance at Tanglewood.

The previous five Pops evenings were under the banner of "Tanglewood on Parade," the annual benefit for the Berkshire Music Center. This year, however, two birthdays — the 20th of the Music Center and the 75th of the Pops — require separate festivities.

To complete the year's schedule of anniversaries, Fiedler has just finished his 10th year as conductor of the San Francisco Symphony in the annual midsummer Pops Festival. The mayor of San Francisco proclaimed July 7-13 as "Arthur Fiedler Week."

In announcing the California concerts the San Francisco Chronicle devoted the front cover of its Sunday supplement to Fiedler. The caricature showed his dark eyes, thick mustache and long white hair. A "Man of Distinction" you will say. Thereby hangs a tale.

In honor of Fiedler's 15th anniversary as Pops conductor, Serge Koussevitzky invited him to conduct the BSO. The program was announced, followed shortly by national release of an advertisement in which the handsome Fiedler endorsed a well-known whisky. The invitation was withdrawn, ostensibly, to allow Hector Villa-Lobos, then making his first American visit, to conduct the BSO.

Fiedler did, however, make a guest appearance with the orchestra during the 1955-1956 season, and would like to be less associated by the public with light classics and show tunes. After all, he had organized his own sinfonietta of BSO players, trained Boston's Cecilia Society in many notable choral works, and conducted orchestras in the United States, Latin America, and Europe.

* * *

His repertoire shows in addition to the three B's, music by such modern masters as Creston, Honegger, Hindemith, Khachaturian, Piston, Shostakovich and Walton, many of these compositions having at Pops their Boston, Western hemisphere, or world premiere. The trustees of the BSO gave Fiedler a first published edition of Mozart's "Don Giovanni" for his 30th Pops anniversary.

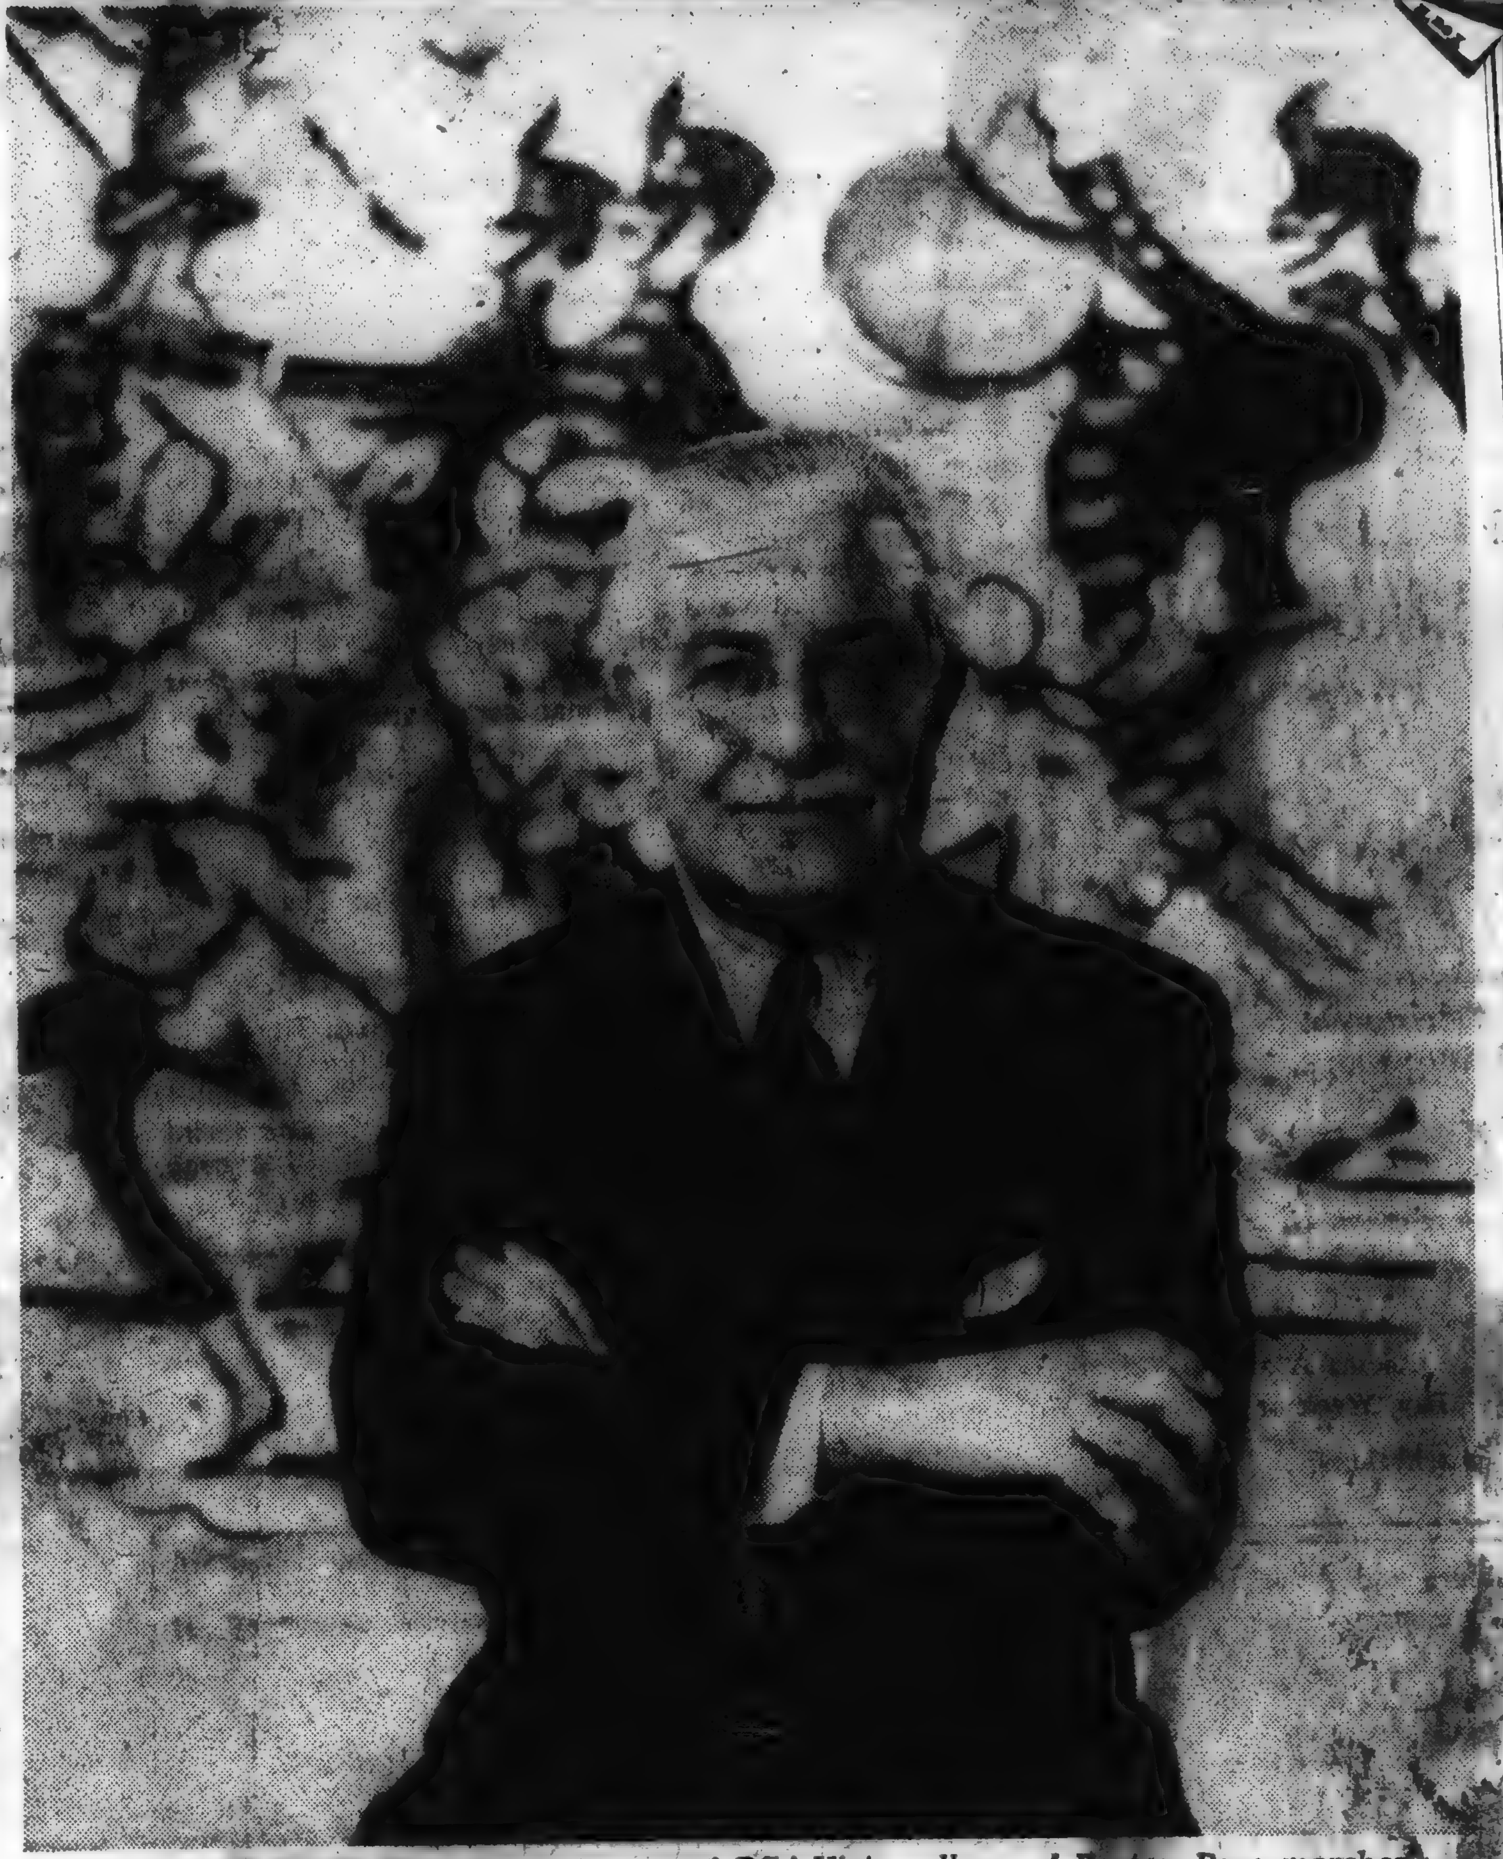
Somewhat more symphonic than Pops are the Esplanade concerts which he founded in 1929. A current series of tea ads, linking that brew to historic and modern Boston, pictures at the Hatch Memorial Shell on the Charles River the Arthur Fiedler who first brought free outdoor orchestra concerts to Boston. So that Bostonians may safely cross a busy highway the city constructed the Arthur Fiedler Bridge.

This was no mean honor to a native son. Born in Boston in 1894, Fiedler was graduated from Boston Latin School — he can still toss off a Latin tag with authority — and in 1915 from the Royal Academy of Music, Berlin. Ably schooled by Arno Kleffel and Rudolf Krasselt in conducting, Willy Hess in violin, and Ernst von Dohnanyi in chamber music, he returned to play violin, then viola, in the BSO.

* * *

Musically, Fiedler "hears everything" when rehearsing the Pops, his players say, after being picked up repeatedly on minor flaws. His sharp mind and drive for precision keep them on their toes; he works them fast and intensively, sometimes showing his quick temper.

Fiedler doesn't tolerate nonsense at rehearsals, but still has a reputation for a good sense of humor. Pops players capitalized on it once when the conductor in a light mood [illegible] violin to bow along in "March Slav." The violinists, quickly cueing each other, suddenly let Fiedler fiddle solo.



Conductor Fiedler pictured on cover of RCA-Victor album of Boston Pops marches

The name "Fiedler" means fiddler in German; the family, of Austrian extraction, have been musicians for generations. Fiedlers three there had been in the BSO; two paternal uncles and an original member of the famous Kneisel Quartet.

Fiedler is married to the former Ellen M. Bottomley, daughter of a Boston surgeon. Their three children, Johanna, 14, Deborah, 12, and Peter, 8, complain as much about practicing as Fiedler once did. Peter enjoys testing unattended percussion oddments after a Pops concert. Completing the Fiedler household in Brookline is Sparky, a Dalmatian dog.

Honorary fire chief of some 75 American cities, Fiedler has been a fire buff since he was a kid.

"The fire house was right down the street," he recalls. "In those days they had horse-drawn trucks and dogs like Sparky."

His badge has been a practical souvenir on more than one occasion. During Boston's 1942 Cocoanut Grove disaster, Fiedler drew duty at the morgue. Several years ago he was in Chicago when another holocaust swept a parochial school. "That's one fire I'm glad I didn't get to."

* * *

Short-wave radios in his cars keep him informed of the latest blaze. He drives a Cadillac convertible and a Volkswagen, and is tempted by a motor scooter.

With all his energy and musical training, it's not surprising that another Fiedler hobby is dancing, or that any dance music on a Pops program has that extra sparkle.

Besides his vast library of miniature scores, Fiedler collects Straussiana. Your interviewer, no dancer herself, took this to mean not the scores of the waltz king but those of Richard Strauss, "Der Rosenkavalier" notwithstanding, and without bothering with first names asked if the maestro had studied with Strauss.

"How old do you think I am?" he rejoined.

According to "Who's Who," he'll be 66 in December.

Depend upon it: Feidler's Tanglewood program will have all the vigor and youth [illegible] Pops. Feet will tap when Fiedler honors another Boston native and a contemporary, George Gershwin, in "An American in Paris," "Concerto in F" (Earl Wild, piano soloist), "Porgy and Bess," "Rhapsody in Blue," and "Strike Up the Band."

186

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

AUG 7 1960

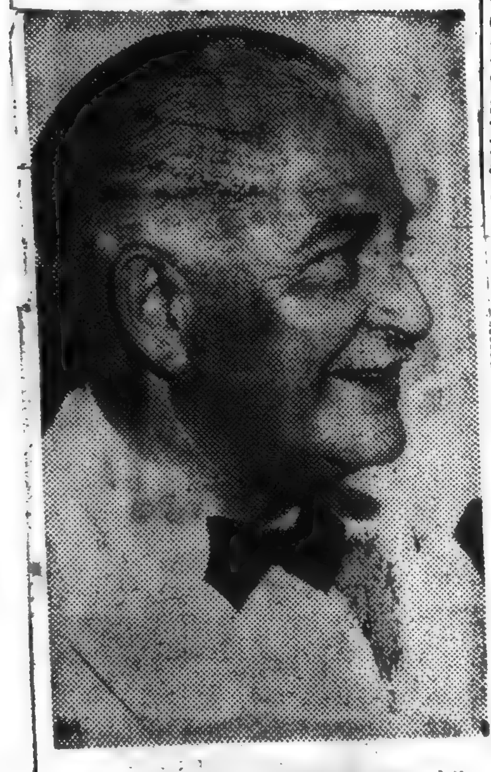
Fiedler and Boston Pops For Tanglewood Thursday

Colorful Conductor to Present All-Gershwin Program With Pianist Earl Wild

LENOX—Arthur Fielder and the Boston Pops, with guest pianist Earl Wild, will give an all-Gershwin program at Tanglewood here on Thursday (the 11th, 8.30). As a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship fund, Fiedler and the Pops will perform in Tanglewood's 6000-seat Music Shed.

A pace-setter and record-breaker, the indefatigable Mr. Fiedler will fly to Tanglewood, almost literally, on Thursday morning after finishing his 10th season of concerts for the Art Commission in San Francisco on Tueday night. And on Friday morning he is off again, this time to Miami and then, Monday, to open the last week of the Esplanade concerts in Boston.

But such a schedule is routine to the man who quietly accomplishes the almost impossible. Witness: Arthur Fiedler conducted the Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and San Francisco Symphony Orchestras within nine days this summer. Further Fiedler facts: This summer Mr. Pops celebrated his 31st year as conductor of Boston's Esplanade concerts and his 30th straight season as leader of Boston Pops Orchestra.



ARTHUR FIEDLER

In his hometown of Boston, Arthur Fiedler is almost an institution. His unique personality, his flair, style and individual approach both to music and life have conspired to make him, over the years, as familiar and beloved a feature of Boston life as the Old North Church, or Symphony Hall—where, each spring, he inaugurates the delightful Boston Pops season. Silver-maned, distinguished, impeccably groomed, Arthur Fiedler, Bostonian, is much more than the local boy who made good. He is the local boy who has left an indelible mark not only on the musical history of this city, but on the musical taste of millions throughout the world.

Born in Boston's Back Bay section, not far from Symphony Hall where he conducts his annual Boston Pops—Arthur Fiedler inherited a rich family background of European musical culture. His father Austrian-born Emanuel Fiedler, was a first violinist with the Boston Symphony, and his mother was a "good amateur musician" who gave the young Arthur his first piano lessons.

Fiedler's formal education was obtained at the Prince Grammar School, and the Boston Latin School until his family decided to return to their native Austria. His father had retired after 25 years in the Boston Symphony. In Vienna and later in Berlin, teen-aged Arthur tried to cut a niche for himself in the publishing business, but finally entered the Royal Academy in Berlin as a student of violin, piano and conducting. To his surprise he fell in love with music. Today, he's still in love with music.

With the advent of World War I he returned to Boston where, in 1915 he joined the Boston Symphony as a violinist under Karl Muck. But his ambition to conduct led him to form, nine years later, the Boston Sinfonietta, a chamber orchestra composed of Boston Symphony members. At the same time he continued to play as a member of the Boston Symphony, fulfilling various tasks on the violin, viola, piano, celesta, organ and even percussion instruments.

Then in 1929 after long planning and a perservering struggle for financial support for a new project, Fiedler launched the first of the now-famous outdoor Esplanade concerts—a free summer series played in an attractive natural setting on the east bank of the Charles River, at the foot of Beacon Hill. Staid Boston took a long look at its native son, liked what it saw, and for over 30 summers audiences of up to 30,000 music lovers have jammed the grass-floored, sky-roofed "auditorium" of the Esplanade.

In 1930 Fiedler assumed conductorship of the Boston Pops Concerts, a feature of Boston's musical life since 1885, and brought this organization to a prominence and wealth — both critical and financial—unique in the history of orchestras. Under Fiedler's inspired and canny direction, the Boston Pops became as familiar to the music-minded citizens of the world as to its patrons in Boston. Fiedler's recipe for success: "A Strauss waltz is as good a thing of its kind as a Beethoven symphony. It's nice to eat a good chunk of beef, but you want a slice of light dessert, too." With Fiedler as musical chef, music-hungry audiences never tire of asking for more.

SYRACUSE HERALD AMERICAN
Sunday, August 7, 1960

Gershwin In the Air

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra present a concert at 8:30 p.m. Thursday at the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

NC

Earl Wild will be piano soloist for the all-Gershwin program.

Another pianist, Jorge Bolet, is set as solist with the Boston Symphony for its concert under Pierre Monteux at 8:30 p.m. Friday at Tanglewood. Bolet will play Liszt's Piano Concerto in E Flat.

Rounding out the week's musical highlights will be American pianist Gary Graffman playing with the symphony under Dr. Charles Munch. Graffman plays the Chopin Piano Concerto.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

AUG 7 1960

Berkshires Slating Monday Events for This Month

PITTSFIELD—Arthur Fiedler and his Boston Pops Orchestra shares the Berkshire Hills spotlight with Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra this week end in the final sessions of the 1960 Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood.

Fiedler to Conduct

Mr. Fiedler will conduct the Boston Pops at Tanglewood Thursday evening at 8.30 in the huge shed as the feature of the annual Tanglewood on Parade program. The Pops concert climaxes a program which opens at 5.45 p. m. with a tour of the spacious and lush Tanglewood grounds and performances by various groups of students from the Berkshire Music Center. Pianist Earl Wild will be soloist with the Boston Pops.

Next Friday evening, Pierre Monteux will conduct the BSO in the program that will include Stravinsky's Firebird suite and Beethoven's Symphony No. 2. Dr. Munch will be at the podium Saturday evening at 8.30 for Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 1 with Graffman as soloist and Handel's Water Music Suite. Composer Aaron Copland will conduct his own Symphony No. 1. The Festival Chorus will poin Dr. Munch and the BSO in Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust" next Sunday afternoon at 2.30 in the final performance of the season.

Sunday Register
NEW HAVEN, Conn.
Circ. 106,090

AUG 7 1960

MUSIC

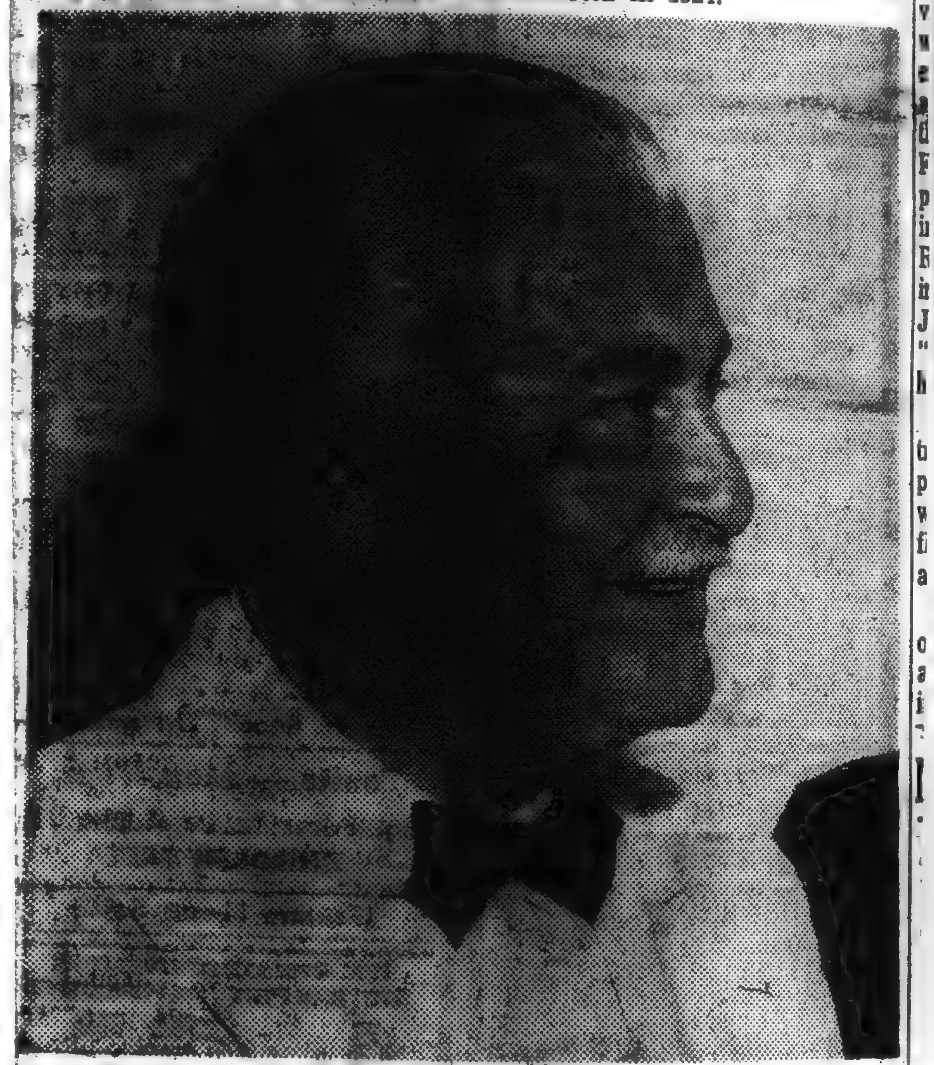
Arthur Fiedler To Conduct At Berkshire In Final Week

By GORDON E. ARMSTRONG

The Berkshire Music Festival goes into its final week of activities which will conclude with next Sunday afternoon's concert. A highlight of the last week's activities will be the annual concert on Thursday evening by the Boston Pops Orchestra, once again to be given for the benefit of the Berkshire Center's scholarship funds. Since this annual festival event turns the spotlight on one of Boston's more remarkable musicians and conductors, Arthur Fiedler, perhaps a brief resume of his career in the field of lighter music is in order.

Fiedler is a native Bostonian and the son of a former violinist of the Boston Symphony. His father, on retiring from 25 years of service with the orchestra, took his family back to his native Austria where teen-aged Arthur tried the publishing business before taking up music. Prior to entering the Royal Academy in Berlin, where he studied violin, piano, and conducting, he had shown little interest in his father's profession. His studies soon convinced him that he was really a "chip off the old block."

Fiedler returned to this country in 1915 and soon was occupying the seat vacated by his father in the Boston Symphony's string section. In fact, he went his parent "several better" during the next 14 years. Fiedler not only played violin, but the orchestra also made good use of his unusual talents by calling on him to perform at various times on the viola, piano, celesta, organ, and even percussion instruments. Just to keep busy on the side, and incidentally satisfy a growing urge to be a conductor, he organized a chamber orchestra known as the Boston Sinfonietta in 1924.



ARTHUR FIEDLER

In 1929, Fiedler was enabled to start a new project which he had long planned and for which he was finally successful in obtaining financial support. This was the now celebrated Esplanade Concerts which are currently in their 31st season. The open-air concerts, which have had audiences of up to 30,000 music lovers, are given on the East bank of the Charles River at the foot of Beacon Hill. Not the least important thing about the concerts, which are given by an orchestra composed of musicians from the Boston Symphony, is that they are "for free."

A year after inaugurating the Esplanade programs, Fiedler also became the conductor of the Boston Pops Concerts, a series which date from 1885. The Pops in Boston have long assumed a place in the city's musical life of an importance rarely if ever attained elsewhere. The Pops season in "Beantown" starts directly after the conclusion of the Boston Symphony's regular winter series.

The seats in Symphony Hall, the home of the Boston Symphony, are removed and replaced by tables and chairs where the customers are served refreshments during Pops performances. Various organizations, schools, colleges, clubs, and professional groups buy out entire performances which are, of course, labeled as "Harvard Night," "Elks Night," "Funeral Directors Night," etc. The sponsors' wishes as to the makeup of programs are given full consideration and this factor has contributed greatly to the popularity of the concerts. Oddly enough, the funeral directors prefer gay Strauss waltzes to what might be considered their "theme song," Chopin's Funeral March!

Fiedler thus has established something of a record in conducting these two Boston Symphony series—30 and 31 years respectively. This summer, he may have hung up another record by conducting the Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, and San Francisco symphonies all within nine days. Directly after Thursday's festival concert, he will fly to Miami for a concert there and hurry back to Boston to open the last week of the Esplanade concerts on the following Monday. Fiedler's stamina would seem to be exceeded only by his musicianship!

The audience at the Pops event on Thursday evening will hear an all-Gershwin program, with pianist Earl Wild as the guest artist. He will have the featured roles in "An American in Paris" and the "Rhapsody in Blue." Fiedler has chosen Robert Russell Bennett's symphonic arrangement of "Porgy and Bess" as the third work in the program.

Dr. Munch and Pierre Monteux will again share podium honors in the three remaining weekend concerts of the festival. The former will conduct the concerts on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon while Monteux will conduct Friday evening's program.

Pianist Jorge Bolet, Friday's guest artist, will be heard in the Liszt Concerto in E-flat. The orchestral selections are listed as Beethoven's Symphony No. 2 and Stravinsky's "Firebird" Suite.

Two guest artists—pianist Gary Graffman and composer Aaron Copland are to appear in Saturday's concert. Graffman will perform Chopin's Concerto No. 1 and the composer will conduct his own Symphony No. 1. The third offering is to be Handel's "Water Music" Suite.

Next Sunday afternoon's final concert will be devoted to a presentation of the "Damnation of Faust," by Berlioz, with the Festival Chorus participating. The soloists are to be Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, and Martial Singher.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
AUG 12 1960

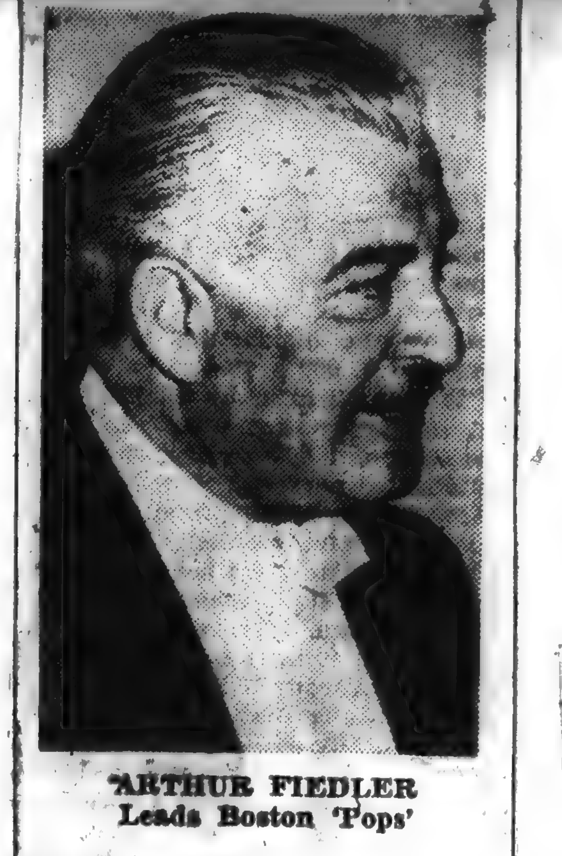
BSO MANAGERS, past and present, enjoyed themselves with friends at the concert. In this group are, left to right, Mrs. Thomas D. Perry Jr., wife of the Boston Symphony Orchestra manager; George E. Judd, retired manager; Mrs. Girard L. Spencer of Stockbridge, Mr. Perry, Mr. Spencer and Mrs. Judd. A crowd of 13,168 attended.

INSURANCE EXECUTIVE John D. Cox Jr. of this city and Mr. and Mrs. Gerard LaVallee of Lenox were among early arrivals who enjoyed refreshments in the picnic area before Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops concert got under way.

Photos by Librizzi

PICNICKING on the lawn at the rear of the Music Shed before the Tanglewood Pops concert last night were many large groups, including this one made up of, left to right, Mrs. Donald Rogers, Mrs. Churchward Davis, Deborah England, Churchward Davis Jr., Daniel England Jr., Mrs. England, Mrs. Deland Kelley and Mr. Davis.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, MONDAY, AUGUST 8, 1960



ARTHUR FIEDLER
Leads Boston 'Pops'

All-Gershwin Music Slated At Tanglewood

Arthur Fielder, "Mr. Music" to millions, and the Boston Pops with guest pianist Earl Wild will give an all-Gershwin program at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass. on Thursday at 8:30 p.m. As a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center's scholarship funds, Fiedler and the pops will perform in Tanglewood's 6,000-seat Music Shed.

* * *

FIEDLER will fly to Tanglewod on Thursday morning after finishing his 10th season of concert for the art commission in San Francisco on Tuesday evening.

And on Friday morning he will be off again, this time to Miami, and then on Monday to open the last week of the Esplanda Concerts in Boston. Within nine days this summer Fiedler conducted the Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and San Francisco Symphony Orchestras.

This summer "Mr. Pops" celebrated his 31st year as conductor of Boston's Esplande concerts and his 30th straight season as leader of the Boston Pops Orchestra.

* * *

THE THURSDAY evening all-Gershwin program will include "An American in Paris," "Concerto in F for piano and orchestra;" "Porgy and Bess, symphonic Picture for Orchestra," by Robert Russell Bennett; "Rhapsody in Blue for piano and orchestra" and "Strike Up the Band."

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026
AUG 12 1960

Tanglewood Pops Concert Crowd Is Largest, Noisiest

Tanglewood, Lenox, had its largest and noisiest crowd of the 1960 season last evening when the Boston Pops Orchestra under the direction of Arthur Fiedler, with Earl Wild as piano soloist, presented a program of Gershwin works in the second of two special programs of the Berkshire Music Festival Season.

Staged for the benefit of the scholarship fund of the Berkshire Music Center which is operated at Tanglewood in connection with the festival, the concert had a gross ticket sale of $33,625.

The other special event of this year, a gala evening staged last Thursday evening by Music Center students, drew an attendance of only 2,448.

The audience last night was composed largely of young people, including boys and girls from many camps in the South Berkshire area. They did not seem greatly discomforted by the chill of an autumn-like night, and hundreds sprawled on the lawn outside the jammed Music Shed.

The Pops orchestra and Mr. Wild performed the tone poem, "An American in Paris," the Concerto in F for Piano and Orchestra, Russell Bennett's symphonic picture for orchestra, using material from the "Porgy and Bess" opera, the "Rhapsody in Blue" and "Strike Up the Band."

Tonight, the Boston Symphony Orchestra will give at Tanglewood the first concert in the last 1960 series. The festival will end with Sunday afternoon's concert.

Eagle 8/11/60

Second Section

Weatherman Offers Clear Sky For Tanglewood Pops Tonight

TANGLEWOOD — The U. S. Weather Bureau at the Pittsfield Airport reported this noon the sun will break through the overcast this afternoon and predicted clear skies for the Boston Pops concert at Tanglewood tonight. However, the weather will be a trifle on the cool side.

Arthur Fiedler arrived here this morning from Boston after a flight from San Francisco and rehearsed the orchestra in the Music Shed for this evening's program which is identical to the program presented by the Pops at last year's benefit for the Berkshire Music Center. Earl Wild will return as piano soloist.

All seats, including boxes, in the Shed have been sold and thousands of persons are expected to listen to the program from the Tanglewood lawns. The gates will open at 6.

Last Series of Concerts

The last series of concerts for the 1960 Berkshire Festival will open tomorrow night at 8:30 in the Shed when Pierre Monteux will conduct the BSO with Jorge Bolet as guest pianist in a performance of Liszt's Beethoven Symphony No. 2 and the "Firebird Suite" by Stravinsky.

Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the orchestra Saturday night and for the final performance in the Shed Sunday afternoon at 2:30. He will leave immediately after the program for New York where he will board a plane for France, to vacation until returning to Boston to reopen the Symphony Hall season in October.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 57,341

AUG 12 1960

Music:

Gershwin Program At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN

LENOX — An all-Gershwin program called "Tanglewood on Parade" was given last night by the Boston Pops Orchestra, conducted by Arthur Fiedler, with Earl Wild as piano soloist.

There was an audience of 13,168, benefiting the Berkshire Music Center by $33,625.

Among the audience was an uncommonly large number of young people who supplemented their presence with fapt attention and extremely enthusiastic applause.

The name, "Tanglewood on Parade," was a misnomer.

Annual Program

Up to now, this has been the annual program (Thursday night of the Berkshire Music Festival's final week) when various departments of the center have demonstrated accomplishments of what may be the most international and knowing of all music student aggregations.

That particular pogram was performed a week ago last night. It attracted a small audience and was called "A Gala Evening," although it started at 4:30 in the afternoon.

Last night's "Tanglewood on Parade" was no such thing, unless you want to think of the grounds and buildings as having been on special exhibition.

After having spent a few leisurely days at the Newport Jazz Festival where you are considered a "square" if you enthuse over Gershwin's music, it was a satisfaction to re-discover last night his music is still a big box-office draw, especially for youngsters who weren't around when he died.

Program the Same

It should be pointed out that last night's program was exactly the same as performed at last summer's "Parade"

This was the best Gershwin for concert platform. The program: "An American in Paris," concerto in F for piano and orchestra, "Porgy and Bess," Symphonic Picture, (Robert Russell Bennett arrangement) "Rhapsody in Blue," and "Strike up the Band."

During the past four weeks, we've become pretty indelibly impressed with the methodical conducting of the Boston Symphony by Charles Munch and meticulous Pierre Monteux. Last night, there was an extra gust of fresh air when Fiedler took over. His 89 "Pops" players are the same as the Boston Symphony's (in fact, a player has to be a member of the Boston Symphony to play with the Pops).

But last night they seemed to apply a little less starch to their scores and it wasn't just Gershwin's music.

More Amenable

We're not suggesting that Fiedler is in the same class with Munch and Monteux. But the silver-maned, informal, and business-like Fiedler certainly is more amenable to Gershwin's music.

He recognizes that it can get just so far. Perfect illustrations were the star of the concerto in F, and the ending to "an American in Paris."

The concerto's beginning makes confusion out of uncertainty. The final phrases of "Americans" are just about as original as the proverbial "Good Evening, Friends." Fiedler treated both as very good trivia rather than bad art.

"An American in Paris" had bright instrumental coloring. It was kept moving. The French taxi horns didn't sound like triumphs of description, and the "blues" section was merely moist-eyed The Charleston" incident was moved back to the period in which it belongs.

Symphonic Poetry

The entire work was straightforward symphonic poetry that made the most of broad-scaled passages but didn't attempt to conceal the "corn." Fiedler not only didn't allow dawdling, but he extracted secondary melodies from brasses and low strings that generally go unnoticed. Also, the xylophone was given an unusually big play.

Wild has a fine talent for exposing the real Gershwin and a better real Gershwin — that is, he doesn't approach it with the impetuosity of a fully armed concert painist.

He's just as authentic as Oscar Levant in his Gershwin, and a better technician. Wild found more than the customary "Schmaltz" in the opening of the first movement. But this was offset by articulate playing of the animated passages. They had all the necessary syncopation without getting rhythmically out of bounds.

Most important, however, was the fact that Wild didn't deprive the concerto of is personal, even intimate message. At the same time, the pianist preserved its sophistication, as in the scherzo part of the first movement and the steeplechase at the conclusion of the third.

Brasses sang in the slow movement with inimitable Gershwin lament, broken up by the piano with a flippant dialogue, hurried but effectively casual.

Bennett's synthesis on "Porgy and Bess" is a dashing piece of orchestration.

It strings together a series of montages. Modulations are smooth, moods constantly varied, and the famous tunes are out front where they belong.

At its Best

The orchestra was at its best. From the cries of the Gullah Negroes to Porgy's final blast, "I'm on my way," experiences were swift and exciting. Naturally, "Summertime" made the most nostalgic flutter. But "Bess You Is My Women," "It Ain't Necessarily So," "Picnic," and There's a bus that's Leavin' for New York" were paraded in smart instrumental hues and technically played to the hilt.

Tonight, Monteux conducts the Boston Symphony in the opening of the festival's fourth and final weekend. The program: Beethoven's second Symphony, Liszt's E Flat Piano Concerto with Jorge Bolet as soloist, and Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite."

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 12 1960

In Brief . . .

Obviously a great many factors enter into the steady increase in Democratic registrations in Pittsfield during the last eight years, but perhaps the salient one is the wide-open free-for-all staged by state and local Democrats every two years. If the November results follow the August form (with the independents splitting down the middle) Republicans who have worked hard for party unity may decide they've outsmarted themselves . . . With the opening of applications set for Monday and opening of the first 40-unit low-rent housing project set for October, the Pittsfield Housing Authority is setting an example for other building groups by proceeding right on schedule . . .

Benefit nights at Tanglewood in past years have been marred by thunderstorms and rain, but never before have so many shivered for so long as they did at last night's Pops concert. It is fortunate that the informality of the occasion allowed the audience to move about enough to keep limbs from freezing . . . Although there has been some opposition to plans for creating a fishing lake and recreational area in Southfield's Thousand Acre Swamp area, the support it is receiving from responsible legislators, state officials and conservationists should be enough to put it through. In view of the need for more outdoor recreational areas, $26,000 is a small sum to pay for a resource with such potentialities . . .

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037

AUG 10 1960

Where To Go—What To Do

Thursday, Aug. 11

Maybe you've always been wanting to discover some of the treasures at the BOSTON MUSEUM OF FINE ARTS but haven't known where to start.

Then Thursday is the time for you. Lou'll get a quick look at what this wonderful Boston institution has to offer by hearing Morna Crawford's gallery talk at 11 a.m. on "Highlights of the Museum's Collections."

Another of Boston's greats—the BOSTON POPS—will present an all-Gershwin program at TANGLEWOOD at 8:30 p.m. under the direction of Arthur Fiedler.

The concert will benefit the scholarship funds of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music. So if you're to be in the western part of the state, don't miss this great musical event.

Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 57,341

AUG 12 1960

Music:

Gershwin Program At Tanglewood

By RAYMOND MORIN

LENOX — An all-Gershwin program called "Tanglewood on Parade" was given last night by the Boston Pops Orchestra, conducted by Arthur Fiedler, with [illegible]l Wild as piano soloist.

There was an audience of 13,158, benefiting the Berkshire Music Center by $33,625.

Among the audience was an uncommonly large number of young people who supplemented their presence with rapt attention and extremely enthusiastic applause.

The name, "Tanglewood on Parade," was a misnomer.

Annual Program

Up to now, this has been the annual program (Thursday night of the Berkshire Music Festival's final week) when various departments of the center have demonstrated accomplishments of what may be the most international and knowing of all music student aggregations.

That particular pogram was performed a week ago last night. It attracted a small audience and was called "A Gala Evening," although it started at 4:30 in the afternoon.

Last night's "Tanglewood on Parade" was no such thing, unless you want to think of the grounds and buildings as having been on special exhibition.

After having spent a few leisurely days at the Newport Jazz Festival where you are considered a "square" if you enthuse over Gershwin's music, it was a satisfaction to re-discover last night his music is still a big box-office draw, especially for youngsters who weren't around when he died.

Program the Same

It should be pointed out that last night's program was exactly the same as performed at last summer's "Parade"

This was the best Gershwin for concert platform. The program: "An American in Paris," concerto in F for piano and orchestra, "Porgy and Bess," Symphonic Picture, (Robert Russell Bennett arrangement) "Rhapsody in Blue," and "Strike up the Band."

During the past four weeks, we've become pretty indelibly impressed with the methodical conducting of the Boston Symphony by Charles Munch and meticulous Pierre Monteux. Last night, there was an extra gust of fresh air when Fiedler took over. His 89 "Pops" players are the same as the Boston Symphony's (in fact, a player has to be a member of the Boston Symphony to play with the Pops).

But last night they seemed to apply a little less starch to their scores and it wasn't just Gershwin's music.

More Amenable

We're not suggesting that Fiedler is in the same class with Munch and Monteux. But the silver-maned, informal, and business-like Fiedler certainly is more amenable to Gershwin's music.

He recognizes that it can get just so far. Perfect illustrations were the star of the concerto in F, and the ending to "an American in Paris."

The concerto's beginning makes confusion out of uncertainty. The final phrases of "Americans" are just about as original as the proverbial "Good Evening, Friends." Fiedler treated both as very good trivia rather than bad art.

"An American in Paris" had bright instrumental coloring. It was kept moving. The French taxi horns didn't sound like triumphs of description, and the "blues" section was merely moist-eyed. The Charleston" incident was moved back to the period in which it belongs.

Symphonic Poetry

The entire work was straightforward symphonic poetry that made the most of broad-scaled passages but didn't attempt to conceal the "corn." Fiedler not only didn't allow dawdling, but he extracted secondary melodies from brasses and low strings that generally go unnoticed. Also, the xylophone was given an unusually big play.

Wild has a fine talent for exposing the real Gershwin and a better real Gershwin — that is, he doesn't approach it with the impetuosity of a fully armed concert painist.

He's just as authentic as Oscar Levant in his Gershwin, and a better technician. Wild found more than the customary "Schmaltz" in the opening of the first movement. But this was offset by articulate playing of the animated passages. They had all the necessary syncopation without getting rhythmically out of bounds.

Most important, however, was the fact that Wild didn't deprive the concerto of is personal, even intimate message. At the same time, the pianist preserved its sophistication, as in the scherzo part of the first movement, and the steeplechase at the conclusion of the third.

Brasses sang in the slow movement with inimitable Gershwin lament, broken up by the piano with a flippant dialogue, hurried but effectively casual.

Bennett's synthesis on "Porgy and Bess" is a dashing piece of orchestration.

It strings together a series of montages. Modulations are smooth, moods constantly varied, and the famous tunes are out front where they belong.

At its Best

The orchestra was at its best. From the cries of the Gullah Negroes to Porgy's final blast, "I'm on my way," experiences were swift and exciting. Naturally, "Summertime" made the most nostalgic flutter. But "Bess You Is My Women," "It Ain't Necessarily So," "Picnic," and There's a bus that's Leavin' for New York" were paraded in smart instrumental hues and technically played to the hilt.

Tonight, Monteux conducts the Boston Symphony in the opening of the festival's fourth and final weekend. The program: Beethoven's second Symphony, Liszt's E Flat Piano Concerto with Jorge Bolet as soloist, and Stravinsky's "Firebird Suite."

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 12 1960

In Brief . . .

Obviously a great many factors enter into the steady increase in Democratic registrations in Pittsfield during the last eight years, but perhaps the salient one is the wide-open free-for-all staged by state and local Democrats every two years. If the November results follow the August form (with the independents splitting down the middle) Republicans who have worked hard for party unity may decide they've outsmarted themselves . . . With the opening of applications set for Monday and opening of the first 40-unit low-rent-housing project set for October, the Pittsfield Housing Authority is setting an example for other building groups by proceeding right on schedule . . .

Benefit nights at Tanglewood in past years have been marred by thunderstorms and rain, but never before have so many shivered for so long as they did at last night's Pops concert. It is fortunate that the informality of the occasion allowed the audience to move about enough to keep limbs from freezing . . . Although there has been some opposition to plans for creating a fishing lake and recreational area in Southfield's Thousand Acre Swamp area, the support it is receiving from responsible legislators, state officials and conservationists should be enough to put it through. In view of the need for more outdoor recreational areas, $26,000 is a small sum to pay for a resource with such potentialities . . .

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037

AUG 10 1960

Where To Go—What To Do

Thursday, Aug. 11

Maybe you've always been wanting to discover some of the treasures at the BOSTON MUSEUM OF FINE ARTS but haven't known where to start.

Then Thursday is the time for you. Lou'll get a quick look at what this wonderful Boston institution has to offer by hearing Morna Crawford's gallery talk at 11 a.m. on "Highlights of the Museum's Collections."

Another of Boston's greats—the BOSTON POPS—will present an all-Gershwin program at TANGLEWOOD at 8:30 p.m. under the direction of Arthur Fiedler.

The concert will benefit the scholarship funds of the Berkshire Music Center, the Boston Symphony Orchestra's summer school of music. So if you're to be in the western part of the state, don't miss this great musical event.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815
AUG 12 1960

WATCH

TANGLEWOOD ON PARADE HAS RECORD 13,168

All-Gershwin Program at Lenox Draws $33,625 Ticket Sale

By WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — The largest, and certainly the noisiest, audience of the Berkshire Music Festival was on hand Thursday night. There were 13,168 persons present who contributed a gross ticket sale of $33,625 for the benefit of the Berkshire Music Center, inaugurated 20 years ago.

Same Program

What drew these people to Tanglewood? The magic combination of Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops Orchestra and ~~pianist Earl Wild. It mattered~~ not that this same group played the same program last year, Tanglewood on Parade, in the same way. Last year's audience was 9793, but it rained. Gershwin was king Thursday as he was last year.

The Berkshire Center has benefited by two special events—the gala evening last week which drew an audience of 2448 and Thursday's show. Total audiences for the two events were 15.616.

The audience was predominately youthful, represented by every boys and girls camp in the area. The shed was sold out and the grounds, as crowded as we have ever seen them, combined to make Mr. Fiedler and his orchestra welcome. The skies cleared; the sunset was marvellous; the grounds dried and the moon rose in all its glory.

Large and Spacious

As for the performances, they were in the best Fiedler-Wild tradition. Everything was large, spacious and, when in repose, a bit sultry. The program opened with the tone poem, "An Aemerican in Paris." We had forgotten how long it was and how anticipatory it was of the coming "Porgy and Bess." Mr. Wild is a formidable pianist, who seems to have made the piano music of Gershwin his specialty. He plays with enormous brio and rhythmic incisiveness and he has the technique to meet the many problems before him. Thus, his performance of the "Concerto in F, for Piano and Orchestra," was both a personal and artistic triumph. The concerto ends on a thundrous note and it was echoed by the thunder of applause. Again, in the more familiar "Rhapsody in Blue." Mr. Wild revealed his thorough understanding of the music and his sympathy for it. Orchestral collaboration was splendid, for Mr. Wild and Mr. Fiedler have worked together for a long time.

Russell Bennett has written a splendid symphonic picture for orchestra using the material from the opera, "Porgy and Bess." It is always a sure hit and Mr. Fiedler brought to the performance his rare ability to both entertain and excite. The familiar melodies poured forth in all their richness and beauty. These days such a performance is a bit nostalgic, along with the music. The audience loved every note.

Brilliant Performance

The program concluded with a rousing performance of excerpts from Gershwin's popular musical comedy, "Strike up the Band." Here again Fiedler had expansive, toe tickling music to deal with and he knew just how to do it. It was a brilliant performance.

Now that his Gershwin performance is over, let us hope that if the Boston Pops comes to Tanglewood next season something other than Gershwin will be played. It does not seem quite fair to an audience to play the same program two years in a row.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
AUG 12 1960

Music Review

Pops Goes the Gershwin

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE ALL-GERSHWIN program played by the Boston Pops Orchestra under the direction of Arthur Fiedler last night in the Shed at Tanglewood was an explosion of music, people and carnival spirits. The official attendance figure was 13,168 and that tells only part of the story.

For some unaccountable reason George Gershwin has been ctatalogued as half-way between long-hair and "popular," as Broadway in the upper forties and not 38th Street. A minority of lovers of "serious" music lovers look on him with a degree of tolerant condescension and think of their presence at a Gershwin performance as some sort of slumming.

* * *

THE FACT IS that Gershwin wrote about as poignant music as is available in the literature and as for rhythmic invention and vitality there need be no more pleasant infection. Last night there was "An American in Paris" and a symphonic picture of "Porgy and Bess" arranged by Robert Russell Bennett on either side of the intermission, and, complementing each part of the program, George Wild as the galvanic soloist in the concerto in F for piano and orchestra and the "Rhapsody in Blue."

THE BOSTON POPS is the Boston Symphony Orchestra minus its first-chair men, but when solos fall to the lot of such musicians as concertmaster Alfred Krips, clarinet Pasquale Cardillo and trumpet Armando Ghitalla, conductors and audiences can not be any happier. Fiedler does a thorough, workmanlike job without attempting excessive polishing. The music is noisy and thumping in many sections and softly appealing in others, and in such capable hands its surface impact is immediate and terrific.

* * *

THIS EVENT was a departure from the previously-followed custom of making the final Thursday evening of the Berkshire Music Festival a "Tanglewood on Parade," which always used to end with Fiedler and the Pops. This was a benefit for the Berkshire Music Center, the school of the Tanglewood enterprise, and the usual demonstration of its many activities took place on the preceding Thursday.

Because of a journalistic deadline, we were deprived of hearing the short, characteristic piece for which Fiedler and the Pops are famous, but it looked, as we left, that had it been another time of [illegible] many in the audience would be late for school.

Spr. Union 8/5/60

OPERA SCENES PRESENTED AT TANGLEWOOD

Youthful Singers Are Fluent; Goldovsky Directs

WILLARD M. CLARK

LENOX — All roads led to Tanglewood Thursday and 2448 persons were on hand to enjoy the beauties of this lovely estate and listen to the various presentations of the departments of the Berkshire Music Center which is observing its 20th year. It was a "gala evening" as well as a wonderful day.

No Scenery Used

Things started out about 4.30 when scenes from operas were given in the theater under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, director of the opera department. One's imagination is needed, for it is pretty hard to get the feeling of opera.

The scenes are sung without benefit of scenery, with singers in street clothes and a piano as accompaniment. It is a tribute to Goldovsky's skill as a director that these young singers are able to put across their meanings with such fluency; know their lines so thoroughly and their music so well that they need not look at the conductor.

The male voices of the department are unusually good this season; the women's voices are good but seem under less technical control than those of the men.

There were scenes from "The Magic Flute" by Mozart; "Pelleas and Milisande" by Debussy; "Hansel and Gretel" by Humperdinck, and "La Boheme" by Puccini. Goldovsky, during his remarks said Mozart scenes had been given every season for the past 20 years. Indeed, the theater was designed particularly with Mozart operas in mind.

Advanced Style

Following the opera scenes, members of the composition department showed their wares. Their works were performed by members of the Fromm Foundation players. Being for the most part extremely advanced, it suited the style of the Fromm players who deal almost exclusively in contemporary music. We would not presume to go into detail on the merits of these works, but it was noticeable that the audience had a heavy turnover as the concert proceeded.

Traditional Concert

The Tanglewood choir gave its traditional concert on the steps of the main house. The department is headed by Hugh Ross, Lorna Cooke de Varon and Frederick Nash Patterson. There are good voices in the choir and many works were very well sung under direction of various student choral conductors. Among these young conductors were Talmon Herz from Tel-Aviv; Jacqueline Bourillon, Paris, France; David Fox of Newton Center, Bennet Poxxfpenix of Chicago and Seymour Schonberg, from Irving, N. J.

The evening program was divided into two parts, during the first parts, Eleazar de Carvalho, of the orchestral department, conducted the very fine student orchestra in a performance of the "Leanora Overture No. 1" by Beethoven, while Charles Munch conducted Faure's Exquisite, elegant incidental music to Maeterlinck's "Pelles and Melisande" the orchestra played beautifully for him and brought back memories of another student orchestra performance of this same work conducted by Mr. Munch.

Finally, the moment for which most of the audience had been waiting came. It had the privilege, and perhaps the pleasure, of attending a world premiere of an opera by Jan Meyerotwitz to a text by Langston Hughes. It was called "Port Town." Mr. Meyerowitz has written several short operas which have been first presented at Tanglewood

At this moment of writing it is impossible to provide any thought out conception of the opera "Port Town." For the first time an opera was given in the huge music shed, a place much too large. The dock-side setting was effective and the chorus groupings and movement was flexible, but Mr. Goldovsky allowed his student orchestra much too much leeway in matter of decibels, so that it was almost impossible to hear the words or soloists or chorus and the action was so slight as to give almost no idea of whit was going on. The men fared better than the women in projecting their words, but the best was unsatisfactory.

Story Is Simple

The story was simple. A boatload of sailors come into port at the same time a group of students from an exclusive girls' school arrive to study conditions at the dock. The inevitable happens and the story has a sad ending.

With this to work on, it would seem that Mr. Meyerowitz might have provided his singers with arias, ensembles, etc., but we heard no tangible melodies. There were long passages of recitative dialog, but few solo opportunities.

There were some excellent voices in the large cast, notably tenor George Shirley; basso Spiro Malas and soprano Grace Trester, the girl in the case. There was some fine chorus singing and the choruses were robust and sprightly.

This was one of the most ambitious one-act operas ever given at Tanglewood and Goldovsky and his associates deserve credit for the visual production. Given a smaller auditorium, a less decibal minded orchestra and even less professionalism, "Port Call" should give a deal of pleasure.

190

Berkshire Eagle

Pittsfield, Massachusetts, Friday, August 12, 1960.

Librizzi

PIANO SOLOIST Earl Wild acknowledges the ovation he received last night in the Music Shed after the Tanglewood Pops concert, with Arthur Fiedler at right, who presented an all-Gershwin program for benefit of the Berkshire Music Center. Affair netted $33,625.

Pops Orchestra and Gershwin Draw 13,000 to Tanglewood

By JOHN G. W. MAHANNA

Arthur Fiedler and the Boston Pops played the same old record last night at Tanglewood before a crowd of 13,168 who contributed $33,625, to the Berkshire Music Center.

Offering an all Gershwin program, with Earl Wild as piano soloist, Mr. Fiedler and the Pops orchestra presented the same program as last year when rain kept the attendance down to 9,793.

Despite the repetition, Mr. Fiedler and his men gave a pleasing performance, although the colorful conductor failed to give an encore as he did in the many years he has appeared in the traditional benefit at the Music Shed.

The Pops program last night was a departure from the usual Tanglewood on Parade event — split this season by the Boston Symphony Orchestra officials in order to bring into the limelight the students of the Music Center, who, on Aug. 4, displayed their talents at a Music Center benefit before 2,448 persons in the Shed.

Defends Repetition

After last night's concert, Mr. Fiedler defended the repetition of last year's program, explaining "a Gershwin program like this cannot fully be appreciated in one evening. Besides, this is not a local audience." As for encores Mr. Fiedler asserted, "nothing can be added after a Gershwin program." He allowed, however, that next season an entirely new program will be presented.

Last night's Pops concert drew to Tanglewood the biggest crowd of the 1960 Berkshire Festival season, but the crowd of 13,168 falls 1,420 short of the all-time record set in 1958 for a benefit when 14,588 turned out. The all-time single concert record was set in 1951, the first year Dr. Charles Munch took over as conductor of the Boston Symphony when 15,800 music lovers converged on Tanglewood.

The weather, as always, plays a major part in the success of the Music Center benefit. The sun broke through the clouds in mid-afternoon and clear skies last night helped to attract thousands to the grounds after the gates opened at 6.

Picnic parties seem to be growing in popularity each year, especially among area residents and campers who staked out places for themselves on the spacious lawns near the rear of the Shed two hours before the concert got under way.

Tonight at 8:30 the last series of weekend concerts for the 1960 season will open in the Music Shed when Pierre Monteux will make his final appearance of the year as guest conductor of the BSO. Tomorrow night and Sunday afternoon, Dr. Charles Munch will be on the podium directing the orchestra in its final concerts of the 1960 Berkshire Festival.

191

ALBANY, N.Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
D. 66,739
AUG 5 1960

World Premiere of One-Act Opera Trips on Tanglewood Acoustics

By MICHAEL PILLEY
Knickerbocker News Staff Writer

"Port Town," the new one-act apera with music by Jan Meyerowitz and libretto by Langston Hughes, was to have been the highlight of the Berkshire Music Center's 20th anniversary celebration, at Tanglewood last night.

Instead, it was an anti-climax. This world premiere was nothing but a fiasco—one that Tanglewood will not soon forget.

Don't however, blame the artists.

* * *

PUT IT DOWN as an experiment that might (though it's hard to figure how) have been a huge success—and was routed by those very accoustical characteristics that have made Tanglewood internationally renouned.

This was the first time ever that an opera was presented in the Music Shed. Proof was never more heartbreakingly provided that the voice, in solo, duet, or group, is a vastly different medium to a full scale orchestra.

While the audience sweated—and, eventually, walked away in droves—the results of mass talent and painstaking rehearsal were whittled down to boredom.

For the words were lost — story unfathomable.

* * *

CONDUSTOR BORIS Goldovsky, who with Arthur Schoep staged this world premiere, and his hard-working group of students, suffered deep chagrin. One's heart bled for them, because it was not their fault.

Mr. Goldovsky did what he could. He conducted with a gentle touch. His musicians never intruded. Rightly, they gave pride of place to the singers.

The singers were talented, but they simply could not penetrate with clarity the enormous spaces of the shed. Outside, their words came over better. Inside, they were only fragmentarily understandable.

* * *

IF THERE IS ONE lesson to be learned from all this, it is that Tanglewood should look into the question of a different and larger, amplifying system. It was a tragedy to watch the care, thouht, and talent of these Center students reduced to a major flop.

Outside of this, what is "Port Town" like. It's not by far a world beater. It's musical score tends to become monotonous — too much of the same, rather hybrid style—and its libretto is of course open to the usual criticism directed at opera sung in English. Here and there, Mr. Hughes works a fine affinity between the media of language and music. But he can't do everything. And lines, sung or spoken, such as "Over spilt milk there is no use to cry," are hard to take.

(Except of course you wouldn't hear them anyway. I only know them because I looked for a script.)

* * *

EVEN WITHOUT the audibility factor, this story of a foreign port, a sailor, and a girl, didn't impress much. It is probably a competent piece of operatic fare. It couldn't be called more.

Ironically, the opera was preceded by some vastly superior, smoothly blended orchestrial work, particularly the Beethoven Overture to "Leonore," No. 1, conducted by Eleazar de Carvalho. Charles Munch seemed to be in almost too subdued a mood — even bearing in mind the nature of the music — when conducting four pieces of Faure's incidental music to Maeterlinck's "Pelleas and Melisande." (Though he did bring out admirably the wide instrumental range of the group.)

There were other assets to the gala, including a wide variety of vocal and instrumental works. And, accoustics or no accoustics, 2,448 attended this benefit affair, which made the Center officials very happy.

They had figured they would be lucky if they drew 1,500.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
D. 453,331 SAT. 174,917
AUG 4 1960

Meyerowitz Hits High Note As New Opera Nears Premiere

By ARTHUR ALPERT,
World-Telegram Staff Writer.

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 4:—Jan Meyerowitz stood at the main gate to the Tanglewood Music Festival grounds and exuded energy.

After introductions, the 47-year-old composer and Brooklyn College professor of music suggested finding a place to talk. The gates were closed, but he set out conspiratorially for an unprotected side entrance. "It reminds me of the Underground . . . if they throw us out . . . ?" He shrugged.

Near the barn where sets were being built for tonight's premiere of his one-act opera, "Port Town," was a table. Mr. Meyerowitz never stopped. He disappeared into the barn, then reappeared dangling a chair in each hand, set one on either side of the table and apologized profusely in his German-accented English for the makeshift arrangement.

Off and Running.

He said he had been so busy he didn't have time to dress for our talk. "The tie"—he fingered it—"is one of the singers." Where was he born? Breslau, Germany. Arrival in the United States? 1946. That set Mr. Meyerowitz off.

"They argue about to what degree I'm an American composer. This is bewildering to me. I get more out of America than most people. He quoted Hegel, the German philosopher, on the point that what counts is what you produce, not where it comes from.

Where was Mr. Meyerowitz educated? The ideal places, Germany and Italy, he said. Ideal? "To get the fundamental rigidity of German education and to get rid of everything that is dead in it."

We squeezed in a question about the author of the opera's libretto, poet Langston Hughes. "I read his books and asked to meet him." That meeting led to half a dozen collaborations. The best known is "The Barrier," a two-act opera that starred Lawrence Tibbett in its 1950 Broadway production.

JAN MEYEROWITZ.

Inspired by Poem.

"Port Town" was inspired by Hughes' poem. It begins:

Hello, sailor boy,
In from the sea!
Hello, sailor,
Come with me.

"It deals—ach, you missed it. An incredible chipmunk." Mr. Meyerowitz pointed. We turned back to the subject of the opera.

"It's a clash of two worlds." The plot has girls from a seminary visiting a port accustomed to sailors and a less-respectable kind of girl. "Although one (world) behaves roughly and the other fancily, they are equally pleasant and good."

Mr. Meyerowitz paused to shift his beefy frame toward the sun. How does he like teaching at Brooklyn College? "It's more useful than to write music — almost." Students, he thinks, come to him without proper cultural background, making it "sometimes painful" but "most interesting" to teach them. His class is — here Mr. Meyerowitz looked pained — "their first contact with something idealistic."

"Ach, you missed it again. A big chipmunk."

Brooklyn College teaching has helped another way: "For the first time in my life, I know what people hear and don't hear." Out of that realization came the easy-to-understand quality of "Port Town," which employs post-World War I American slang, popular themes of the era and a Verdian musical approach.

'Unhappy but Happy.'

In earlier collaborations, Mr. Meyerowitz chose a subject, then outlined it for Mr. Hughes. This time, he read the poem, was fascinated by it and told the author "that I wanted an opera that ends unhappily but everybody's happy."

"Port Town" will be heard as part of a 20th anniversary program at Tanglewood. Was it commissioned? "This we wrote out of enthusiasm. There it goes . . ." This time we both saw the chipmunk, its tail descending into a storm drain.

The composer, who has taught at Brooklyn College since 1953, will handle a full teaching program for the first time this fall. He tries to steer clear of faculty fusses and administrative chores. The Meyerowitz creative spirit is just not up to sticky details like keeping names straight on the recent sheets. "Especially, when you have two or three Cohens or Levines in the class," he said.

Among Mr. Meyerowitz' previous works are a symphony, "Midrash Esther," a three-act opera, "Esther," and a string quartet described by one critic as "colored with archaic Hebraic religious overtones."

Is he Jewish? Mr. Meyerowitz says he is a Roman Catholic Jew. "I don't like to talk about that. Americans don't understand how you can be two things at once . . . conflict . . . that's life."

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121
AUG 6 1960

'Port Town,' 1-Act Opera, Has Tanglewood Premiere

By Jules Wolffers

LENOX, Mass, Aug. 4—The premiere of a new one-act opera, "Port Town," by Jan Meyerowitz climaxed a series of events celebrating the twentieth anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

Scheduled as a benefit event, the performances were studded with much fine musical activity but did not attract the audience that might have been expected. About 2,000 persons were present.

The afternoon started with scenes by the opera department. Boris Goldovsky was in charge of this phase, which was well received by the listeners. Compositions by present and former students of the center formed the next segment. Works by Robert Bernat, Jerome Rosen, Timothy Thompson and Lester Trimble were performed by the Fromm Fellowship Players, although Mr. Thompson performed his piano suite himself.

Choir Is Heard

During the supper hour, the Tanglewood Choir, led by a whole succession of faculty and student conductors, entertained the guests from the main house porch.

Proceedings next were transferred to the music shed where Eleanor de Carvalho and Charles Munch, director of Tanglewood, condueted the student orchestra for the first half of the concert and opera performance.

By this time those who had been present from the beginning might be said to have had almost a surfeit of music. But fortified by an intermission, the listeners settled down for the opera première.

"Port Town" uses a text by Langston Hughes to tell the story of what happens when a group of seminary girls are taken on a tour of a port town when a ship comes in.

This can be gathered from reading the libretto. From where I was sitting it was difficult to understand, the words, what was going on, or why.

The port town is supposed to be foreign, but the signs were in English on the set which had been quickly put together on the shed's large platform.

Concentrating on the music, there was a curious contrast between the exalted, soaring, longlined melody and the words in the libretto which are salty and colloquial, exactly what one might expect to hear in any waterfront assemblage. Almost it seemed that there were two operas going on simultaneously—the beautiful, rich music, and the events depicted on stage, with little point of contact between the two.

Never before have I had quite this feeling in any opera. Obviously the solution would be to write a new book for the music, and to write new music for the book.

The performance itself was excellent, with Mr. Goldovsky directing the orchestra while every member of the large student cast, principals and chorus alike, sang with a fervor and distinction that would have done credit to a fully professional production.

The musical worth shown in this premiere makes it impossible to dismiss the work out of hand. It has strong, well-constructed sections which often rise to stirring and imaginative climaxes. But the dualism of the words and music are too strong a handicap to overcome easily.

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

READING, PA.
EAGLE
D. 47,781 S. 64,909
MAY 22 1960

Wyomissing Girl Wins Scholarship

Margaret Ross, center, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn C. Ross, 1227 Cleveland Ave., Wyomissing, receives the annual Hardin Scholarship to the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass. Making the presentation is Mrs. Harry R. Penington, 320 Wyomissing Blvd., Wyomissing, chairman of the scholarship committee of the Wyomissing Institute of Fine Arts where Miss Ross is a violin student. At left is Wolfgang D. Richter, Meadowbrook, musical director of the institute. (Eagle Staff Photo)

The Wyomissing Institute of Fine Arts has awarded the annual Hardin Scholarship to Margaret Ross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn C. Ross, 1227 Cleveland Ave., Wyomissing.

Each year this scholarship is awarded by the scholarship committee of the institute to one of its outstanding music students. It is the gift of Emily Hiester Hardin, of Hilo, Hawaii. Mrs. Hardin is the daughter of the late Isaac Hiester, who was a prominent Reading attorney. Before her marriage and removal to Hawaii, Mrs. Hardin was on the faculty of the institute.

The award covers full tuition and other expenses for the six weeks of the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., from July 3 to Aug. 14. The festival uses all the resources of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, with Charles Munch as director. Music students from all parts of the world attend the festival for study, performance, and attendance at concerts.

Margaret Ross is a student of Caroline Fox, violin instructor at the institute. She is a senior at Wyomissing High School. She has just recently been awarded a four-year merit scholarship with full tuition by the Eastman School of Music of the University of Rochester.

SALISBURY, N.C.
POST
D. 18,589 S. 18,358
MAY 16 1960

Miss Husser Wins Music Scholarship

Miss Martha Kate Husser, mezzo-soprano, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. K. Husser of Advance, Route 2, has been awarded a scholarship to the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, a summer school in Lenox, Mass., for the training of performers through performance.

Miss Husser will serve as alto chorus leader for the Tanglewood Chorus and for the Tanglewood Festival Chorus. Charles Munch of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is director of the Berkshire Music Center and Aaron Copeland is chairman of the faculty.

Miss Husser also has received a scholarship to the Manhattan School of Music '60-61 where she is now doing graduate work. Miss Husser is a former student of Thomas M. Holt, formerly of Catawba College, and is now studying with Herta Glaz of the Manhattan School of Music.

Although this is her first year at Manhattan, Miss Husser has done all the alto solo work for the Manhattan Chorus under the direction of Dr. Hugh Ross, and will again appear as soloist with the chorus in its final performance of the year on May 19.

Miss Husser is the '59-60 NC State winner of the National Federation of Music Clubs in the vocal division.

MIDDLETOWN IDAHO
BOISE VAL . HERALD
W 500
JUN 30 1960

Music Professor Invited to Berkshire Festival

A signal honor was received this week by Walter Cerveny, associate professor of music at the College of Idaho and conductor of the College of Idaho community symphony orchestra.

Cerveny is to attend the Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood-near Lenox, Mass., from July 3 to Aug. 17.

Cerveny expressed his delight Monday at joining this festival, rates as the best of its type in the entire world. He will attend on a scholarship provided by the festival organization.

Such well known conductors will be on hand for this study of conducting as Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra; Pierre Monteux, the former head of the San Francisco symphony.

Also present each year is the famed Leonard Bernstein who received much of his training at Tanglewood since the festival began in about 1940.

The main purpose of the festival, said Cerveny, is to train musicians and to create opportunities for outstanding musicians.

OAKLAND, CALIF.
TRIBUNE
D. 208,198 S. 240,605
JUL 3 1960

Music Minister To Study in East

John Burke, minister of music at the First Baptist Church, will attend the six week course in the School of Music at the Berkshire Music Festival, Lennox, Mass., which begins tomorrow.

He has been invited to play an organ recital at the Memorial Music Hall in Methuen, Mass., where the famous Boston Music Hall organ is now housed.

At the school, Burke will concentrate in the field of choral music, and audit a course in orchestral conducting. He will return to Oakland Sept. 4.

ST. PAUL, MINN.
CATHOLIC BULLETIN
SAT. 29,573
JUL 1 1960

Elsie Campbell Wins Music Grant

A graduate of St. Margaret's academy, Minneapolis, has won a scholarship to Tanglewood summer music school.

Miss Campbell

Elsie Marie Campbell, pianist, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Campbell, Golden Valley, will study for six weeks at the music center in the Massachusetts Berkshire mountains.

The center is sponsored by the Boston Symphony orchestra.

A member of Good Shepherd parish, Miss Campbell received her scholarship through the Minneapolis Star and Tribune.

RIDGWAY, PA.
RECORD
W. 2,575
JUN 28 1960

Grandson Of Local Woman Joins Boston Symphony

Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Black and daughter, Sandra and Edwin C. Black, all of Rutherford, N. J., spent Sunday at the home of Mrs. Annie V. Stephens, 209 Ash St.

Edwin is the son of Dr. Black and the late Ethel D. Black. He is also the grandson of Mrs. Stephens. His father, Dr. Black, is Dean of Fairleigh Dickison University, Rutherford Campus.

Edwin is en route to Lennox, Mass., to join the Boston Symphony Orchestra for study at Tangelwood.

Mr. Black will play French horn, having received a scholarship for the season. He is also an accomplished pianist and violinist. Mr. Black will return to Montclair State Teachers College in the fall, where he is majoring in Music Education and Conducting.

198

THINK
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY

JUN 1960

A THINKING MAN'S VACATION

Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Massachusetts, is one of the better-known spots offering a combination of recreation-and-study vacations.

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 51,447

JUL 3 1960

Tanglewood Opens Today

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 2—Established in 1940, the Berkshire Music Center will note its 20th anniversary at the opening exercises of the 1960 session at Tanglewood this Sunday. William J. Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, extends an invitation to the public to attend the exercises which will be held in the Tanglewood Theater at 3:30 p. m.

Among the honored guests invited to attend the exercises are Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the orchestra's former music director under whose guidance the Boston Symphony Orchestra founded the center; and Leonard Bernstein, famed Tanglewood alumnus and Adviser to the school's Department of Instrumental Music. C. D. Jackson, publisher of Life magazine and trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will address the students.

Aaron Copland, guest conductor on the orchestra's recent Far Eastern tour and chairman of the center's faculty, will also address the students. Dean Ralph Berkowitz will introduce the faculty which, among others, includes Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and G. Wallace Woodworth.

Tea will be served in the Tanglewood Formal Gardens following the exercises which will close, by tradition, with the singing of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," written by Mr. Thompson in 1940 for the inauguration of the Berkshire Music Center.

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON,
Mass.
Circ. 12,847

JUL 20 1960

John Duke Opera To Be Performed At Tanglewood

"Captain Lovelock," the well-known one-act opera by John Duke, professor of music at Smith, will be performed at Tanglewood on Monday evening at the evening performance of the Opera Workshop under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. It will follow a program of excerpts from other operas.

"Captain Lovelock" received its premier performance in 1953 at Schroon Lake, N. Y. and since then has been performed by some 25 groups in New York, Boston, Hartford and other cities. Carl Fischer's will publish the vocal score in the near future.

Scored for women's voices with a piano accompaniment it is now being orchestrated by the composer. He and Mrs. Duke recently returned from a week at Juniper Lodge in New Hampshire, where Mr. Duke worked on the orchestration. They will attend the performance at Tanglewood on Monday.

"Captain Lovelock" received its first performance in Northampton in a Smith College theatre department production in 1958. The performances were given to capacity audiences.

ALBANY, N.Y.
TIMES-UNION
D. 67 629 S 118,093

JUL 2 1960

Tanglewood Exercises Set Sunday

Established in 1940, the Berkshire Music Center will note its 20th anniversary at the opening of the 1960 session at Tanglewood tomorrow afternoon. Exercises, which will be held in the Tanglewood Theatre at 3:30 P. M., are open to the public.

C. D. Jackson, trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will address the students. Aaron Copland, guest conductor on the orchestra's recent Far Eastern tour and chairman of the center's faculty also will address the students. Dean Ralph Berkowitz will introduce the faculty which includes Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and G. Wallace Woodworth.

Tea will be served in the Tanglewood Formal Gardens folowing the exercises which will close, by tradition, with the singing of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," written for the inauguration of the Berkshire Music Center.

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 99,001

JUL 1 1960

Music Center Has Birthday

Established in 1940, the Berkshire Music Center will note its 20th anniversary at the opening exercises of the 1960 session at Tanglewood Sunday. William J. Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, extends an invitation to the public to attend the exercises which will be held in the Tanglewood Theater at 3.30 p. m.

Among the honored guests invited to attend the exercises are Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the orchestra's former music director under whose guidance the Boston Symphony Orchestra founded the center, and Leonard Bernstein, famed Tanglewood alumnus and adviser to the school's Department of Instrumental Music. C. D. Jackson, publisher of Life magazine and trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will address the students. Aaron Copland, guest conductor on the orchestra's recent Far Eastern tour and chairman of the center's faculty, will also address the students. Dean Ralph Berkowitz will introduce the faculty which, among others, includes Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and G. Wallace Woodworth.

Tea will be served in the Tanglewood Formal Gardens following the exercises which will close, by tradition, with the singing of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," written by Mr. Thompson in 1940 for the inauguration of the Berkshire Music Center.

THINK
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY

JUN 1960

Berkshire Music

A THINKING MAN'S VACATION

Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Massachusetts, is one of the better-known spots offering a combination of recreation-and-study vacations.

Sunday Standard-Times
NEW BEDFORD, Mass.
Circ. 51,447

JUL 3 1960

Tanglewood Opens Today

Special to The Standard-Times

LENOX, July 2—Established in 1940, the Berkshire Music Center will note its 20th anniversary at the opening exercises of the 1960 session at Tanglewood this Sunday. William J. Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, extends an invitation to the public to attend the exercises which will be held in the Tanglewood Theater at 3:30 p. m.

Among the honored guests invited to attend the exercises are Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the orchestra's former music director under whose guidance the Boston Symphony Orchestra founded the center; and Leonard Bernstein, famed Tanglewood alumnus and Adviser to the school's Department of Instrumental Music. C. D. Jackson, publisher of Life magazine and trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will address the students.

Aaron Copland, guest conductor on the orchestra's recent Far Eastern tour and chairman of the center's faculty, will also address the students. Dean Ralph Berkowitz will introduce the faculty which, among others, includes Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and G. Wallace Woodworth.

Tea will be served in the Tanglewood Formal Gardens following the exercises which will close, by tradition, with the singing of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," written by Mr. Thompson in 1940 for the inauguration of the [illegible]

Hampshire Gazette (e)
NORTHAMPTON,
Mass.
Circ. 12,847

JUL 20 1960

John Duke Opera To Be Performed At Tanglewood

"Captain Lovelock," the well-known one-act opera by John Duke, professor of music at Smith, will be performed at Tanglewood on Monday evening at the evening performance of the Opera Workshop under the direction of Boris Goldovsky. It will follow a program of excerpts from other operas.

"Captain Lovelock" received its premier performance in 1953 at Schroon Lake, N. Y. and since then has been performed by some 25 groups in New York, Boston, Hartford and other cities. Carl Fischer's will publish the vocal score in the near future.

Scored for women's voices with a piano accompaniment, it is now being orchestrated by the composer. He and Mrs. Duke recently returned from a week at Juniper Lodge in New Hampshire, where Mr. Duke worked on the orchestration. They will attend the performance at Tanglewood on Monday.

"Captain Lovelock" received its first performance in Northampton in a Smith College theatre department production in 1958. The performances were given to capacity and

---

ALBANY, N.Y.
TIMES-UNION
D. 67,629 S. 118,093

JUL 2 1960

Tanglewood Exercises Set Sunday

Established in 1940, the Berkshire Music Center will note its 20th anniversary at the opening of the 1960 session at Tanglewood tomorrow afternoon. Exercises, which will be held in the Tanglewood Theatre at 3:30 P. M., are open to the public.

C. D. Jackson, trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will address the students. Aaron Copland, guest conductor on the orchestra's recent Far Eastern tour and chairman of the center's faculty also will address the students. Dean Ralph Berkowitz will introduce the faculty which includes Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and G. Wallace Woodworth.

Tea will be served in the Tanglewood Formal Gardens following the exercises which will close, by tradition, with the singing of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," written for the inauguration of the [illegible]

News (e)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 99,001

JUL 1 1960

Music Center Has Birthday

Established in 1940, the Berkshire Music Center will note its 20th anniversary at the opening exercises of the 1960 session at Tanglewood Sunday. William J. Cox, chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, extends an invitation to the public to attend the exercises which will be held in the Tanglewood Theater at 3.30 p. m.

Among the honored guests invited to attend the exercises are Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the orchestra's former music director under whose guidance the Boston Symphony Orchestra founded the center, and Leonard Bernstein, famed Tanglewood alumnus and adviser to the school's Department of Instrumental Music. C. D. Jackson, publisher of Life magazine and trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will address the students. Aaron Copland, guest conductor on the orchestra's recent Far Eastern tour and chairman of the center's faculty, will also address the students. Dean Ralph Berkowitz will introduce the faculty which, among others, includes Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and G. Wallace Woodworth.

Tea will be served in the Tanglewood Formal Gardens following the exercises which will close, by tradition, with the singing of Randall Thompson's "Alleluia," written by Mr. Thompson in 1940 for the inauguration of the Berkshire Mu-

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

JUL 4 1960

Anniversary Is Observed At Tanglewood Ceremony

By a STAFF REPORTER

LENOX — Three prominent Americans called for a greater recognition of the world of music and musicians in the world's search for peace as they spoke at ceremonies steeped in traditions, marking the 20th anniversary Sunday of the opening of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

Crowd of 800

A crowd of nearly 800 heard Madame Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the founder of the Tanglewood "dream"; noted American composer Aaron Copeland, chairman of the Center's faculty; and C. D. Jackson, publisher of Life Magazine and a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, speak in the ~~Music Theater~~.

Madame Koussevitzky, in a deeply emotional voice, recalled her late husband's concieving of the unique cultural program on the eve of World War I and its actual founding here on the eve of World War II.

Describing the Center as "a

See TANGLEWOOD
Page Sixteen 2

Jac

versary, "a moving and significant occasion" as he made references to the "extraordinary importance of this July 4th in terms of our nation's future."

"Of all the attempts we have made and the hundreds of billions of dollars we have spent to beat and match the enemy in the cold war, our most single successful effort has been our cultural exchange program," he said. He added that "government-to-government do not seem to succeed."

"We must not allow this to be dropped," he said speaking of "the incredible effect which our orchestras, including the Boston Symphony, have on the peoples of foreign lands. This beats all else for its human person to person appeal," he said.

Tells Center's Purpose

Copeland, who returned only two weeks ago from the Boston Symphony's Far Eastern tour and was previously in Russia, told the applauding crowd "love of music is the most powerful coordinating force in the world." He added that the purpose of the center "is to renew that love in all of us."

"Musicians easily understand one another even in Russia and Japan," he said.

William J. Cox of Andover, chairman of the Friends of the Center, introduced the day's honored guests and read a telegram from Leonard Bernstein, the Center's most noted alumnus, who was detained at Martha's Vineyard.

High Lights Recalled

Cox, Copeland, and Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the faculty, briefly recalled high lights of the Center's 20-year history and its pride in the more than 5000 students who have participated in the program in the past 19 years.

The program was concluded with the traditional singing by the students of Thompson's "Hallelujah" chorus, written especially for the Center's opening 20 years ago. Dr. G. Wallace Woodworth, of Harvard, conducted the choral singing as he had done at its original presentation.

After the ceremonies a tea was served under the theatre's canopy amid threatening skies and dusty winds.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 2 1960

Music Center Plans Exercises Tomorrow For 20th Season

The Berkshire Music Center, operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will hold exercises opening its 1960 season and marking its 20th anniversary tomorrow.

The opening exercises, to take place in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood at 3:30 will be open to the public. C. D. Jackson of Lenox, publisher of Life Magazine and a trustee of the Boston Symphony, will address the students who have assembled for the six-week term of the Music Center. Aaron Copland, chairman of the center's faculty, will speak and Dean Ralph Berkowitz will introduce the faculty which, among others, includes Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and G. Wallace Woodworth. Tea will be served in the Tanglewood gardens after the program.

The Festival concerts will begin Wednesday evening at 8:30 when the Cutis String Quartet will present the first of six chamber music concerts in the concert hall. It will substitute for the Budapest Quartet, unable to appear because of the illness of one of its members. The quartet will play works of Mozart, Vincent Persichetti and Aavel.

The first orchestra concert by the Berkshire Symphony will be given Friday evening at 8:30 in the Music Shed with Charles Munch conducting. This concert and those of next Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon will be devoted to the works of Johann Sebastian Bach.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
GAZETTE
D. 47,453

JUL 15 1960

Fromm Foundation Backs Tanglewood Music Study

The Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago is supporting, for the third year, a program for the study, teaching and performance of contemporary music at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

THE FOUNDATION'S 1960 program at Tanglewood consists of seven fellowships for young musicians of special interest and skill in the field of contemporary music. The foundation is also sponsoring two special concerts during the school term in addition to a series of six seminars in contemporary music.

The two Fromm foundation concerts will be open to the public and no admission will be charged. Pianist William Masselos will present the first on July 18 and his program will include three works by Aaron Copland (in honor of the composer, whose 60th birthday falls on Nov. 14). The program will include the Piano Fantasy, Piano Variations and Piano Sonata.

* * *

THE SECOND Fromm concert will be presented on Aug. 1 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest artists. The program of contemporary chamber music will include the world-premiere of Luciano Berio's "Circles," scored for harp, percussion and soprano and commissioned by the foundation. Berio, one of Italy's younger and leading exponents of the use of electronics in music, is guest composer in residence at the Center this session.

The modern music seminars, which opened on July 8 are scheduled for each Friday at 3:15 p.m. in the chamber music hall. Speakers in the series include Luciano Berio, July 15; Leon Kirchner, July 22; Elliott Carter, July 29; Karl-Birger Blomdahl, Aug. 5; and John Cage, Aug. 12. Each of the seminar programs will include a brief introductory talk followed by a program of modern music.

4

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUL 5 - 1960

800 At 20th Anniversary Of Tanglewood

Eight hundred persons attended the opening ceremonies of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood Sunday, the 20th anniversary of the festival.

Addresses were given by three prominent Americans, Madame Serge Koussevitzky, widow of Tanglewood's founder; Aaron Copeland, noted American composer, and chairman of the Center's faculty; and C. D. Jackson, publisher of Life Magazine, and a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Copeland said that music is the coordinating force in the world and that musicians understand one another easily even in Russia and Japan. Two weeks ago, he returned from the Boston Symphony's Far Eastern tour and was previously in Russia.

Mrs. Koussevitzky reminded the audience of her late husband's address at the Center's 1950 season. His advice was to "keep your faith in the arts and it will lead you to a spirit of universality."

Jackson said that the most singly successful effort in the cold war has been this country's cultural exchange program.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 5 - 1960

Music's Influence For Peace Told As Tanglewood Opens

Music succeeds where diplomacy fails in bringing together the people of many lands, an audience of 800 was told Sunday at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The ~~message~~ was given during ceremonies that opened the 20th anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center. The Center is the advanced school of music conducted by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Music Festival. The Festival will open tomorrow evening when the first 1960 Tanglewood concert will be presented.

Madame Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the founder of the Music Center; Aaron Copland, chairman of its faculty, and C. D. Jackson, publisher of Life magazine, were speakers at the Center's opening ceremonies.

"Keep your faith in the art and it will lead you to a spirit of universality," Madame Koussevitzky said, quoting her late husband's last address to the Center.

In all this country's efforts to match the enemy in the cold war, "our most single successful effort has been our cultural exchange program," Jackson declared.

Copland, just back from the Boston Symphony's Far East tour and earlier with it on its tour of Russia, said "Love of music is the most powerful co-ordinating force in the world. Musicians easily understand one another, even in Russia and Japan."

The Curtis String Quartet will give the first Wednesday evening chamber music concert of the Festival in the Tanglewood theater-concert hall tomorrow evening at 8:30. The orchestral concerts open this weekend when the Boston Symphony will play all-Bach programs in the music shed Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 23 1960

Chamber Music Concert Tomorrow At Tanglewood

Works by Faure, Milhaud and Bartok will be performed at the chamber music concert tomorrow morning at 10 at Tanglewood.

Opening the con~~cert will be~~ the Piano Quintet No. 1 by Faure, to be followed by Milhaud's Wind Quintet and Bartok's String Quintet No. 2.

The program is being presented under the auspices of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUL 21 1960

SMITH PROFESSOR'S OPERA TO BE PLAYED AT TANGLEWOOD MONDAY

A Smith College professor's one act opera, "Captain Lovelock, will be performed Monday night at Tnglewood by the opera workshop under the direction of Boris Goldovsky following a program of excerptas from other operas.

Prof. John Duke of the music department at Smith College first heard the premiers of his work in 1953 at Schroon Lake, N. Y. Since then, it has been performed by 25 groups in New York, Boston, Hartford, and other cities.

Dis was the Roman name for Pluto, Greek god of the hades.

VAN-HORN
Special Accommodations
OLD BRIDGE STREET
WEST SPRINGFIELD
HARRY C
Hilarious
GAYLE
Record
A. W. Gifford Co.
KEYS
ALL TYPES
SAFES
DOOR CHECKS
LOCKS REPAIRED
SAFE EXPERTS

nued From Page 2

unique force in the musical world," she told the 200 students of this year's Center of the last message of Koussevitzky, as he addressed the Center's 1950 season:

"Keep your faith in the art and it will lead you to a spirit of universality," and she also reminded the group of her husband's concern for "the preservation of the freedom of the art from the subtle evil of opportunism."

"Moving Occasion"

Jackson termed the anniversary, "a moving and significant occasion" as he made references to the "extraordinary importance of this July 4th in terms of our nation's future."

"Of all the attempts we have made and the hundreds of billions of dollars we have spent to beat and match the enemy in the cold war, our most single successful effort has been our cultural exchange program," he said. He added that "government-to-government do not seem to succeed."

"We must not allow this to be dropped," he said speaking of "the incredible effect which our orchestras, including the Boston Symphony, have on the peoples of foreign lands. This beats all else for its human person to person appeal," he said.

Tells Center's Purpose

Copeland, who returned only two weeks ago from the Boston Symphony's Far Eastern tour and was previously in Russia, told the applauding crowd "love of music is the most powerful coordinating force in the world." He added that the purpose of the center "is to renew that love in all of us."

"Musicians easily understand one another even in Russia and Japan," he said.

William J. Cox of Andover, chairman of the Friends of the Center, introduced the day's honored guests and read a telegram from Leonard Bernstein, the Center's most noted alumnus. who was detained at Martha's Vineyard.

High Lights Recalled

Cox, Copeland, and Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the faculty, briefly recalled high lights of the Center's 20-year history and its pride in the more than 5000 students who have participated in the program in the past 19 years.

The program was concluded with the traditional singing by the students of Thompson's "Hallelujah" chorus, written especially for the Center's opening 20 years ago. Dr. G. Wallace Woodworth, of Harvard, conducted the choral singing as he had done at its original presentation.

After the ceremonies a tea was served under the theatre's canopy amid threatening skies and dusty winds.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 2 1960

Music Center Plans Exercises Tomorrow For 20th Season

The Berkshire Music Center, operated by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, will hold exercises opening its 1960 season and marking its 20th anniversary tomorrow.

The opening exercises, to take place in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood at 3:30 will be open to the public. C. D. Jackson of Lenox, publisher of Life Magazine and a trustee of the Boston Symphony, will address the students who have assembled for the six-week term of the Music Center. Aaron Copland, chairman of the center's faculty, will speak and Dean Ralph Berkowitz will introduce the faculty which, among others, includes Eleazar de Carvalho, Richard Burgin, William Kroll, Hugh Ross, Boris Goldovsky and G. Wallace Woodworth. Tea will be served in the Tanglewood gardens after the program.

The Festival concerts will begin Wednesday evening at 8:30 when the Cutis String Quartet will present the first of six chamber music concerts in the concert hall. It will substitute for the Budapest Quartet, unable to appear because of the illness of one of its members. The quartet will play works of Mozart, Vincent Persichetti and Aavel.

The first orchestra concert by the Berkshire Symphony will be given Friday evening at 8:30 in the Music Shed with Charles Munch conducting. This concert and those of next Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon will be devoted to the works of Johann Sebastian Bach.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUL 21 1960

SMITH PROFESSOR'S OPERA TO BE PLAYED AT TANGLEWOOD MONDAY

A Smith College professor's one act opera, "Captain Lovelock, will be performed Monday night at Tnglewood by the opera workshop under the direction of Boris Goldovsky following a program of excerptas from other operas.

Prof. John Duke of the music department at Smith College first heard the premiers of his work in 1953 at Schroon Lake, N. Y. Since then, it has been performed by 25 groups in New York, Boston, Hartford, and other cities.

Dis was the Roman name for Pluto, Greek god of the hades.

SCHENECTADY, N.Y.
GAZETTE
D. 47,453

JUL 15 1960

Fromm Foundation Backs Tanglewood Music Study

The Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago is supporting, for the third year, a program for the study, teaching and performance of contemporary music at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

THE FOUNDATION'S 1960 program at Tanglewood consists of seven fellowships for young musicians of special interest and skill in the field of contemporary music. The foundation is also sponsoring two special concerts during the school term in addition to a series of six seminars in contemporary music.

The two Fromm foundation concerts will be open to the public and no admission will be charged. Pianist William Masselos will present the first on July 18 and his program will include three works by Aaron Copland (in honor of the composer, whose 60th birthday falls on Nov. 14). The program will include the Piano Fantasy, Piano Variations and Piano Sonata.

* * *

THE SECOND Fromm concert will be presented on Aug. 1 by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and guest artists. The program of contemporary chamber music will include the world-premiere of Luciano Berio's "Circles," scored for harp, percussion and soprano and commissioned by the foundation. Berio, one of Italy's younger and leading exponents of the use of electronics in music, is guest composer in residence at the Center this session.

The modern music seminars, which opened on July 8 are scheduled for each Friday at 3:15 p.m. in the chamber music hall. Speakers in the series include Luciano Berio, July 15; Leon Kirchner, July 22; Elliott Carter, July 29; Karl-Birger Blomdahl, Aug. 5; and John Cage, Aug. 12. Each of the seminar programs will include a brief introductory talk followed by a program of modern music.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUL 5 - 1960

800 At 20th Anniversary Of Tanglewood

Eight hundred persons attended the opening ceremonies of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood Sunday, the 20th anniversary of the festival.

Addresses were given by three prominent Americans, Madame Serge Koussevitzky, widow of Tanglewood's founder; Aaron Copeland, noted American composer, and chairman of the Center's faculty; and C. D. Jackson, publisher of Life Magazine, and a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Copeland said that music is the coordinating force in the world and that musicians understand one another easily even in Russia and Japan. Two weeks ago, he returned from the Boston Symphony's Far Eastern tour and was previously in Russia.

Mrs. Koussevitzky reminded the audience of her late husband's address at the Center's 1950 season. His advice was to "keep your faith in the arts and it will lead you to a spirit of universality."

Jackson said that the most singly successful effort in the cold war has been this country's cultural exchange program.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 5 - 1960

Music's Influence For Peace Told As Tanglewood Opens

Music succeeds where diplomacy fails in bringing together the people of many lands, an audience of 800 was told Sunday at Tanglewood, Lenox.

The message was given during ceremonies that opened the 20th anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center. The Center is the advanced school of music conducted by the Boston Symphony Orchestra in connection with its Berkshire Music Festival. The Festival will open tomorrow evening when the first 1960 Tanglewood concert will be presented.

Madame Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the founder of the Music Center; Aaron Copland, chairman of its faculty, and C. D. Jackson, publisher of Life magazine, were speakers at the Center's opening ceremonies.

"Keep your faith in the art and it will lead you to a spirit of universality," Madame Koussevitzky said, quoting her late husband's last address to the Center.

In all this country's efforts to match the enemy in the cold war, "our most single successful effort has been our cultural exchange program," Jackson declared.

Copland, just back from the Boston Symphony's Far East tour and earlier with it on its tour of Russia, said "Love of music is the most powerful co-ordinating force in the world. Musicians easily understand one another, even in Russia and Japan."

The Curtis String Quartet will give the first Wednesday evening chamber music concert of the Festival in the Tanglewood theater-concert hall tomorrow evening at 8:30. The orchestral concerts open this weekend when the Boston Symphony will play all-Bach programs in the music shed Friday and Saturday evenings at 8:30 and Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 23 1960

Chamber Music Concert Tomorrow At Tanglewood

Works by Faure, Milhaud and Bartok will be performed at the chamber music concert tomorrow morning at 10 at Tanglewood.

Opening the concert will be the Piano Quintet No. 1 by Faure, to be followed by Milhaud's Wind Quintet and Bartok's String Quintet No. 2.

The program is being presented under the auspices of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 5 - 1960

Jackson Calls for More Cultural Exchange At Opening of the Berkshire Music Center

Mrs. Koussevitzky, Copland and Cox Address Students

C. D. Jackson, publisher of Life and a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, made a strong plea for more cultural exchange throughout the world in an address delivered before students and friends at the opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center here Sunday.

Mr. Jackson, a former special consultant to President Eisenhower, speaking of the relationship of the Tanglewood school to the future of the United States, declared that "of all the attempts we have made, all of the hundreds of millions of dollars spent to beat and match the enemy, our most single and successful effort was cultural exchange.

"American tourists all over the world may make their individual contributions, but the incredible effect of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other great orchestras on the feelings of people in faraway lands beats anything else."

Noting the 20th anniversary of the founding of the Berkshire Music Center by her late husband, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky recalled the days when the school to Dr. Koussevitzky was but a vision—"a creative ideal which he conceived at the end of World War I and which he was destined to bring to life in the United States during the first year of World War II."

'Unique Force' in World

Mrs. Koussevitzky, looking back on the past 20 years "marked by world-shaking global evolutions," declared that "it seems little short of a miracle that the center still holds its claim as a unique force in the musical world, that Tanglewood, as each season comes and goes, still adds a page to history."

She expressed her appreciation to Dr. Charles Munch, who succeeded her husband as musical director of the BSO, for understanding the meaning and mission of the center and for respecting the ideals of the late founder.

Aaron Copland, chairman of the center's faculty, who accompanied the orchestra as guest conductor on its recent trip through the Far East, came back to Tanglewood, he said, with one conviction — how easy it is for musicians to understand one another.

"If diplomats took care of their affairs as well as we traveling musicians take care of our musical affairs, there wouldn't be any trouble at all," he declared.

Strong Coordinating Force

"Love of music," he added, "is international. The power of the love of music is a very strong coordinating force in the world . . . Professional musicians are in danger of taking music for granted. The purpose of the Berkshire Music Center is to renew the love of music in all of us."

5,000 Students

The chairman of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center, William J. Cox, reminded the students attending the exercises that many of the 5,000 students before them have taken important places in the musical world.

He told them that they stand in a long line with predecessors who have found their way into every one of the major American orchestras; who are conductors in at least 25 orchestras here and abroad; who are assistant or associate conductors, concertmasters or 88 other first chair or principal players.

Since the organization of the Friends was begun by Dr. Lewis Perry, Mr. Cox reported, more than a third of a million dollars has been contributed toward the annual operation and the scholarship fund of the school. This, he added, does not include the major grant of the Rockefeller Foundation.

The center, he continued, could not exist without this support.

"In fact," he said, "it can not plan on a definite future with any degree of certainty without the continuation and even the increase in this voluntary support."

Bernstein's Message

Leonard Bernstein, conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra and for many years associated with the BMC, was scheduled to appear at the opening exercises but was unable to attend. He sent this telegram:

Despite my long absence from your green lawns, I have never lost my feelings of identification and gratitude to the fountainhead that is Tanglewood. Today, as the 20th season begins, I feel closer to you all than ever and wish you continued joy in music and the deep satisfaction of hard work under inspired guidance. Affectionate greetings to all of you, students and faculty alike.

Woodworth Conducts

At the close of the exercises, Hugh Ross, who has for several years conducted the traditional "Alleluia," invited G. Wallace Woodworth, who has rejoined the faculty, to conduct this year as he did at the opening of the school in 1940.

Among the many events open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center are the various lectures offered by members of the faculty and guests. The opening lecture is tonight at 8:30 in the chamber music hall. A new series will be inaugurated tonight in cooperation with the department of listening and analysis. Entitled, "The Listeners Forum," this series will be given in three parts during the Tanglewood season. Tonight's lecture will be "The Composer as Listener."

Tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 in the chamber music hall, Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the center, will lecture on "The Tanglewood Idea."

Mitchell

Before the opening exercises of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood Sunday afternoon, Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky, widow of the founder of the school, and C. D. Jackson of Lenox, a trustee of Boston Symphony Orchestra and publisher of Life, discuss plans for 1960 Berkshire Festival season.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 20 1960

3 Foreign Students To Conduct Concert At Music Center

Three foreign students will conduct the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra at its third concert of the Tanglewood season. The Student orchestra this year is being conducted by active conducting students who were selected on the basis of a competition held this year at Tanglewood rather than having been chosen prior to the opening of the school as has been the case in former years.

Jose Serebrier of Montevideo, Uruguay, Diogo Pacheco of Sao Paulo, Brazil, and Seiji Ozawa of Kawasaki-shi, Japan, are the foreign students who were nominated as active conductors as the result of the Tanglewood competitions. Harold Farberman of Boston, a percussionist with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and a student conductor, was also named as an active and will conduct at Thursday's concert in the Music Shed.

Ralph Berkowitz, dean of the Berkshire Music Center, once again will lecture at 7:30 on the music to be heard at the concert. Though new this year, these lectures are rapidly becoming an important fixture in the Tanglewood program.

The orchestra program will include Moussorgsky's Night on Bald Mountain conducted by Serebrier. Mr. Pacheco will direct the students in the third and fourth movements from Pelleas and Melisande by Faure to be followed by Debussy's La Mer conducted by Seiji Ozawa.

Harold Farberman, with Susan Halligan of Chatham, N. J. as soloist, will direct the Rachmaninoff Piano Concerto No. 2, First Movement.

Following the intermission Seymour Lipkin, Associate Head of the Department of Instrumental Music, will direct his students in a complete performance of Brahms' Second Symphony.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 20 1960

Opera Scenes Scheduled at Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — Two scenes from Don Giovanni and one from Cosi Fan Tutte by Mozart are included in the program for the initial recital of opera scenes this this afternoon at 2:30 in the theater concert hall here.

The performance is open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Also on the program are one scene from each of the following operas: "Rigoletto," "Don Pasquale," "Faust," "La Boheme" and "Carmen."

Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, was assisted in preparation of the program by Robert Evans, Thomas Philips, Frederic Popper, Arthur Schoep, and Felix Wolfes, all members of the Opera Department faculty.

Another set of opera scenes will be presented Monday evening. At an observation of the 20th anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center Aug. 4, the Opera Department will present the world premier of Jan Meyerwitz' opera, "Port Town."

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
TRIBUNE
D. 223,559 S. 650,165
JUL 24 1960

At Tanglewood Elsie Campbell, young Minneapolis pianist who is studying this summer at the Berkshire Music center in Massachusetts, is pictured here going over a passage of the Spohr quintet for piano and winds. Coaching her is Sherman Walt, Minnesota-born bassoonist of the Boston Symphony. Miss Campbell is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Campbell, 700 Meadow Lane, and is 1960 winner of the Minneapolis Star and Tribune Tanglewood scholarship.

201

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 186,189

JUL 24 1960

'Listening' Class At Tanglewood

BY RUTH TRIPP

DISCIPLINED listening under the direction of G. Wallace Woodworth, the James Edward Ditson Professor of Music at Harvard University, is the most agile and informative mental activity I have encountered in the music world in many a day.

Recently, I was permitted to visit Dr. Woodworth's class in Listening and Analysis at Tanglewood. I found a group of 35 men and women assembled at Hawthorne Cottage just across the road from the Lion Gate of the Berkshire Music Center. The Anne Gannett Memorial Studio made an ideal classroom, with its high white ceiling, long windows and pine paneled walls.

The class meets for two hours a day, Monday through Thursday, and is the only one in the six weeks summer session which may be taken in segments, the shortest of which is two weeks. The course, planned by Dr. Woodworth and Miss Florence Dunn, will encompass most of the repertoire to be played at Tanglewood, not only by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, but by all the chamber music groups as well as the student orchestra.

"Listen with your freshest ears" was the advice of the instructor. "No matter if you have heard it a thousand times, listen five hundred more. You will still find interesting things." He was speaking of that most listened-to of all symphonies, Beethoven's "Fifth." The genial smile, the quick turning from record player to blackboard and then to the piano keyboard, showed at once that the liveliest exchange of ideas was taking place between Dr. Woodworth and the composer. He spoke of Beethoven's fondness for summer vacations and suggested that there is no more perfect place to hear his Pastorale Symphony than Tanglewood.

Meantime, in a smaller studio across the tiny hall, a stormy contemporary work was being rehearsed by a violin and piano. Bit by bit, these musicians were piecing together the modern ideas of musical structure to make a musical whole, as their composer had requested. Dr. Woodworth was just as eager to dissect the older score, so that his non-performing listeners could understand it better at the next hearing. Eagerness prevailed on both sides.

The listening group was considering the matter of Beethoven's instrumentation and his use of an augmented brass choir. It was a strange coincidence that the contemporary dissonance ended in time for all to enjoy the majesty of the closing theme of the Beethoven score.

The class took a short intermission but not Dr. Woodworth. He was busy at the blackboard, putting down the first 10 measures of the Brahms Second Symphony. The staccato tap of the chalk made interesting rhythms as a prelude for the next part of the session. Themes were foremost this time. Again, the exchange of ideas was fast and furious.

One young listener, a recent graduate of Putney School, was very quick with the correct answers. A lawyer from Pittsburgh had interesting comments to make. Brahms could scarcely have had a more interested audience.

Dr. Woodworth's theory is that you must learn to "grasp the nuggets" in a composition. He was quick to circle the "nuggets" of the opening themes as they appeared, either in part or in various guises.

He even interrupted himself at one point to ask, "What are the violins doing?" He answered his own question with a most disarming reply, "Well, I'll be darned." Apparently an absolutely new idea had dawned on him and he proved convincingly that he brings his own "freshest ears" to his listening on every occasion.

With his infectious enthusiasm he communicated some very sound advice to his students. He urged them to attend as many of the student orchestra rehearsals as possible.

Repetition, he said, in the working out of reading and interpretation would serve to improve their listening capacity as well as the technique of the performers.

He was also quick to say that, as enjoyable as the rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra might be, the student rehearsals would better serve the purpose of becoming familiar with scores.

His theory for the layman is well expressed in his phrase "rehearsal for listening." Long practice has made Dr. Wallace Woodworth an expert listener but in the best tradition of his profession, he is also a convincing teacher.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION,
TUESDAY, JULY 5, 1960

Regional Roundup

Western Mass. Residents Start Tanglewood Course

11 Are Among 275 Students as Berkshire Music Center Begins 20th Season

Eleven Western Massachusetts residents are among 275 students enrolled in the 20th season of the Berkshire Music Center which began classes at Tanglewood Monday.

To Study With Symphony

During the next six weeks, they will study with more than 40 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other world-famous musicians in a program which seeks to pass on the experience and skill of accomplished performers.

Tanglewood calls the program —comprised of practice and playing sessions, as well as "sitting--in" on more than 50 concerts by the Symphony this summer—a "school for the training of performers through performance." On the faculty again this season is Miss Florence Dunn of Williamstown, a choral conductor, who will assist Dr. G. Wallace Woodworth of Harvard in a "listening and analysis" course.

To Sit in at Rehearsals

Added to the Center's porgram for the first time this year, the course offers enrollees two-hour "rehearsals for listeners" twice weekly and then permits them to sit in on repeated orchestral and choral rehearsals and concerts at the Center.

Western Massachusetts students registered for the Center's varied program include:

Mrs. Sally Aaronson of Pittsfield, chorus; Francis C. Cardillo of North Adams, clarinet; Sally Collier of the Stockbridge School, Interlaken, choral; and Jack Duffy of the Stockbridge School, composition; Dolores J. Hoover of Lenox, choral.

Other Students

Also, Mrs. Freda C. Sass of Pittsfield, choral; Daniel Secunda of Pittsfield, cello; Mary D. Violet of Pittsfield, choral; and in the department of analysis and listening—Brenda C. Aaronson of Pittsfield, Elizabeth M. Miller of Lenox and Carol O. Stykes of Pittsfield.

* * *

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 23 1960

Tanglewood Sunday Morning Concert To Offer 3 Works

Three works will be performed tomorrow morning at the chamber music concert at Tanglewood.

These concerts beginning at 10 Sunday during the Tanglewood season are among the most delightful of those presented by the students. They are part of the larke number of programs presented under the auspices of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Opening Sunday's concert will be the Piano Quintet No. 1 by Faure which was coached by Bernard Zighera, pianist and harpist with the Boston Symphony. Sherman Walt, principal bassoon with the Boston Symphony, directed the preparation of Milhaud's Wind Quintet. The final piece of the morning will be the String Quartet No. 2 of Bartok trained by William Kroll, Associate Head of the Chamber Music Department and Leader of the Kroll Quartet.

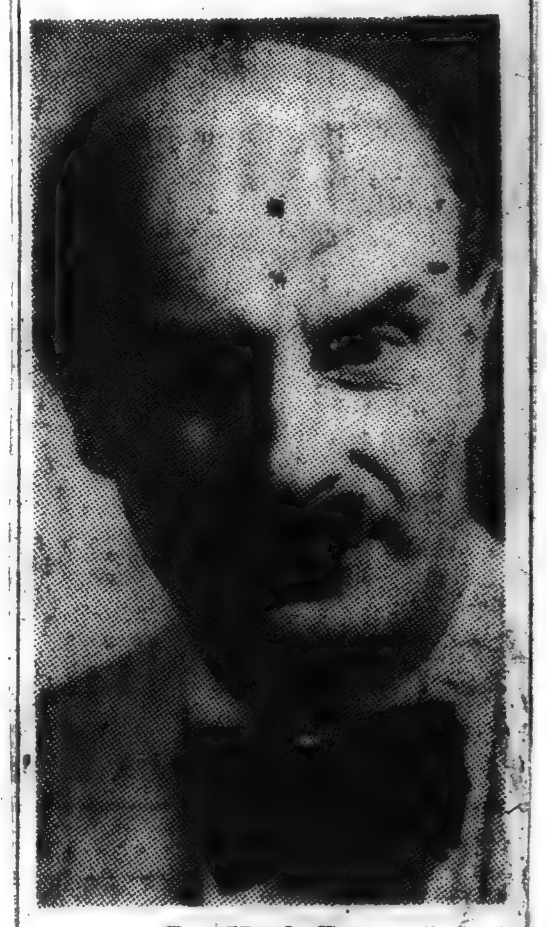
Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

JUL 23 1960

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 22 1960

Memorial Service Set Sunday for Dr. Koussevitzky



Dr. Hugh Ross

LENOX — The annual memorial service for Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and founder of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will be Sunday at 11 a.m. at the Congregational Church-on-the-Hill.

Dr. Hugh Ross, head of the choral department at the music center, will direct the Tanglewood choir. Stefan Lind will be the baritone, and John Burke, the organist.

Selections to be sung from "Requiem" by Gabriel Faure will include "Introit and Kyrie," "Offertorium," "Sanctus," "Agnus Dei," "Libera Me," and "In Paradisium."

Mr. Burke will play the prelude from Bach's "Concerto No. 2;" the Bach offertory, "O Man Bewail Thy Grievous Fall" and the postlude to Bach's "Trio Sonata No. 2."

The Rev. David E. Moore, pastor, will conduct the service and preach the memorial sermon for Dr. Koussevitzky, who died June 4, 1951, a short time before that season's opening of the Berkshire Festival. Since then memorial services have traditionally been held at the Chuch-on-the-Hill on or near the anniversary of his birth, June 26.

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 38,700

AUG 1960

"Captain Lovelock," Opera by John Duke, Heard at Tanglewood

"Captain Lovelock," one-act opera by John Duke, was staged under the direction of Boris Goldovsky at Tanglewood on July 25, by the Berkshire Music Center department of opera. It is based on a comedy [illegible] the 18th century [illegible] Holberg. The work was premiered [illegible] 1953. Mr. Duke is professor of mu[illegible] at [illegible] College.

291

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 186,189

JUL 24 1960

'Listening' Class At Tanglewood

BY RUTH TRIPP

DISCIPLINED listening under the direction of G. Wallace Woodworth, the James Edward Ditson Professor of Music at Harvard University, is the most agile and informative mental activity I have encountered in the music world in many a day.

Recently, I was permitted to visit Dr. Woodworth's class in Listening and Analysis at Tanglewood. I found a group of 35 men and women assembled at Hawthorne Cottage just across the road from the Lion Gate of the Berkshire Music Center. The Anne Gannett Memorial Studio made an ideal classroom, with its high white ceiling, long windows and pine paneled walls.

The class meets for two hours a day, Monday through Thursday, and is the only one in the six weeks summer session which may be taken in segments, the shortest of which is two weeks. The course, planned by Dr. Woodworth and Miss Florence Dunn, will encompass most of the repertoire to be played at Tanglewood, not only by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, but by all the chamber music groups as well as the student orchestra.

"Listen with your freshest ears" was the advice of the instructor. "No matter if you have heard it a thousand times, listen five hundred more. You will still find interesting things." He was speaking of that most listened-to of all symphonies, Beethoven's "Fifth." The genial smile, the quick turning from record player to blackboard and then to the piano keyboard, showed at once that the liveliest exchange of ideas was taking place between Dr. Woodworth and the composer. He spoke of Beethoven's fondness for summer vacations and suggested that there is no more perfect place to hear his Pastorale Symphony than Tanglewood.

Meantime, in a smaller studio across the tiny hall, a stormy contemporary work was being rehearsed by a violin and piano. Bit by bit, these musicians were piecing together the modern ideas of musical structure to make a musical whole, as their composer had requested. Dr. Woodworth was just as eager to dissect the older score, so that his non-performing listeners could understand it better at the next hearing. Eagerness prevailed on both sides.

The listening group was considering the matter of Beethoven's instrumentation and his use of an augmented brass choir. It was a strange coincidence that the contemporary dissonance ended in time for all to enjoy the majesty of the closing theme of the Beethoven score.

The class took a short intermission but not Dr. Woodworth. He was busy at the blackboard, putting down the first 10 measures of the Brahms Second Symphony. The staccato tap of the chalk made interesting rhythms as a prelude for the next part of the session. Themes were foremost this time. Again, the exchange of ideas was fast and furious.

One young listener, a recent graduate of Putney School, was very quick with the correct answers. A lawyer from Pittsburgh had interesting comments to make. Brahms could scarcely have had a more interested audience.

Dr. Woodworth's theory is that you must learn to "grasp the nuggets" in a composition. He was quick to circle the "nuggets" of the opening themes as they appeared, either in part or in various guises.

He even interrupted himself at one point to ask, "What are the violins doing?" He answered his own question with a most disarming reply, "Well, I'll be darned." Apparently an absolutely new idea had dawned on him and he proved convincingly that he brings his own "freshest ears" to his listening on every occasion.

With his infectious enthusiasm he communicated some very sound advice to his students. He urged them to attend as many of the student orchestra rehearsals as possible.

Repetition, he said, in the working out of reading and interpretation would serve to improve their listening capacity as well as the technique of the performers.

He was also quick to say that, as enjoyable as the rehearsals of the Boston Symphony Orchestra might be, the student rehearsals would better serve the purpose of becoming familiar with scores.

His theory for the layman is well expressed in his phrase "rehearsal for listening." Long practice has made Dr. Wallace Woodworth an expert listener but in the best tradition of his profession, he is also a convincing teacher.

THE SPRINGFIELD UNION,
TUESDAY, JULY 5, 1960

Regional Roundup

Western Mass. Residents Start Tanglewood Course

11 Are Among 275 Students as Berkshire Music Center Begins 20th Season

Eleven Western Massachusetts residents are among 275 students enrolled in the 20th season of the Berkshire Music Center which began classes at Tanglewood Monday.

To Study With Symphony

During the next six weeks, they will study with more than 40 members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other world-famous musicians in a program which seeks to pass on the experience and skill of accomplished performers.

Tanglewood calls the program —comprised of practice and playing sessions, as well as "sitting-in" on more than 50 concerts by the Symphony this summer—a "school for the training of performers through performance." On the faculty again this season is Miss Florence Dunn of Williamstown, a choral conductor, who will assist Dr. G. Wallace Woodworth of Harvard in a "listening and analysis" course.

To Sit in at Rehearsals

Added to the Center's porgram for the first time this year, the course offers enrollees two-hour "rehearsals for listeners" twice weekly and then permits them to sit in on repeated orchestral and choral rehearsals and concerts at the Center.

Western Massachusetts students registered for the Center's varied program include:

Mrs. Sally Aaronson of Pittsfield, chorus; Francis C. Cardillo of North Adams, clarinet; Sally Collier of the Stockbridge School, Interlaken, choral; and Jack Duffy of the Stockbridge School, composition; Dolores J. Hoover of Lenox, choral.

Other Students

Also, Mrs. Freda C. Sass of Pittsfield, choral; Daniel Secunda of Pittsfield, cello; Mary D. Violet of Pittsfield, choral, and in the department of analysis and listening—Brenda C. Aaronson of Pittsfield, Elizabeth M. Miller of Lenox and Carol O. Stykes of Pittsfield.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 23 1960

Tanglewood Sunday Morning Concert To Offer 3 Works

Three works will be performed tomorrow morning at the chamber music concert at Tanglewood.

These concerts beginning at 10 Sunday during the Tanglewood season are among the most delightful of those presented by the students. They are part of the larke number of programs presented under the auspices of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Opening Sunday's concert will be the Piano Quintet No. 1 by Faure, which was coached by Bernard Zighera, pianist and harpist with the Boston Symphony. Sherman Walt, principal bassoon with the Boston Symphony, directed the preparation of Milhaud's Wind Quintet. The final piece of the morning will be the String Quartet No. 2 of Bartok, trained by William Kroll, Associate Head of the Chamber Music Department and Leader of the Kroll Quartet.

Union (m)
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 81,815

JUL 23 1960

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 22 1960

Memorial Service Set Sunday for Dr. Koussevitzky

Dr. Hugh Ross

LENOX — The annual memorial service for Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and founder of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will be Sunday at 11 a.m. at the Congregational Church-on-the-Hill.

Dr. Hugh Ross, head of the choral department at the music center, will direct the Tanglewood choir. Stefan Lind will be the baritone, and John Burke, the organist.

Selections to be sung from "Requiem" by Gabriel Faure will include "Introit and Kyrie," "Offertorium," "Sanctus," "Agnus Dei," "Libera Me," and "In Paradisium."

Mr. Burke will play the prelude from Bach's "Concerto No. 2;" the Bach offertory, "O Man Bewail Thy Grievous Fall" and the postlude to Bach's "Trio Sonata No. 2."

The Rev. David E. Moore, pastor, will conduct the service and preach the memorial sermon for Dr. Koussevitzky, who died June 4, 1951, a short time before that season's opening of the Berkshire Festival. Since then memorial services have traditionally been held at the Chuch-on-the-Hill on or near the anniversary of his birth, June 26.

MUSICAL COURIER
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY 38,700

AUG 1960

"Captain Lovelock," Opera by John Duke, Heard at Tanglewood

"Captain Lovelock," one-act opera by John Duke, was staged under the direction of Boris Goldovsky at Tanglewood on July 25, by the Berkshire Music Center department of opera. It [illegible] a comedy [illegible] century [illegible] was [illegible] pro- fessor of mu[illegible]

202

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 23 1950

Themes From Tanglewood

By RALPH BERKOWITZ

ONE OF THE greatest sources of Tanglewood's income is the sale of postcards to Festival visitors. Indeed, so large are the proceeds from this item that Festival-planners have come to the decision that in 14 years, if the sales continue proportionately, it will be possible to give the concerts free of charge (and throw in a chicken box lunch as well) to all those entering the main gate.

After a usual concert audience leaves the grounds a vast number of postcards are collected from the various mailboxes by the Tanglewood Administrator in Charge of Mailboxes, and it is his duty to see that all of them bear the proper postage for delivery to the United States Post Office. It frequently happens that he comes across cards to which no stamps have been affixed and if there is no return address—and who ever puts a return address on a postcard?—the cards naturally go from the Administrator in Charge of Mailboxes to the Tanglewood division of the Dead Letter Office presided over by R. T. Murgatroyd, an old and respected member of the Festival staff.

In his off moments Mr. Murgatroyd permits curiosity to get the better of his astuteness and he carefully scans the written word, more than anything else, one must say, to find how the Festival visitor expresses himself in a short written message from the grounds. When he finds something of more than passing interest he lays it aside and in due time a batch of these finds its way to this desk for mature consideration.

So it was that the other day the following group of unstamped postcards, unarranged either alphabetically or as to subject matter, came to our office. Music-lovers who scan this column will require no further editorial comment.

* * *

Dear Mom: We arrived safely a few days ago and didn't get a single flat tire. Isidore almost got a ticket for speeding but I talked to the officer at great length and he finally said Beat it and don't ever let me see you folks again. Were we lucky!! The food around here is great, real New England, and you can imagine that we've been indulging. The air, too, makes you hungry all the time, but maybe that's only an excuse. I saw Ida and Gerard yesterday from a distance but I was too tired to run after them and anyway I thought to myself maybe I'll embarrass them if I seem to run into them. I never forgot what happened last summer in Rockaway. We heard a concert today. Somebody played the piano with a great big orchestra and was it good! Take care of yourself mom, and we'll be seeing you. Love, Sal.

* * *

Dear George: Can't wait to tell you all about this divine place. Super. Artistic. Just the height, top. Can't get over how they run such a place so refined. Not a neon light and even the signs to the you know what are almost impossible to find. Great music too. Hope you and Erna could be here now. Why don't you just close the station and let people take all the gas they want by themselves? Money isn't everything. Come on and enjoy some high culture. Regards, Max.

* * *

Dear Mama: Our camp came here and we liked it. I liked it too. Can I have 2 dollars for a camp pennant? Please write. Your son, Leonard.

* * *

Dear Harold: Last night the concert was terrific. Wish you could have seen that crowd and that starry sky. Brahms, blanket and Bertha. I tell you, son, the mixture is parfait as we used to say in Allentown and I only wish this went on forever. Say hello to the boys and wind up that old phonograph. Your palsy, Harry.

* * *

Dear Sadie: Guess what. I'm in Tanglewood. Yep, that's right. When I tell you how I got here you'll call me a liar. All right, just wait. Beautiful place and the weather is divine. Wore my shorts all day. The X on the picture shows you where I sat on the lawn to hear the concert today. Extremely enjoyable music. Am I glad I came. Your friend, Jill.

* * *

Dear Ma: How are you? I am fine. I like concerts. We sit and listen but Henry kept throwing grass in my face. Henry is a problem child our camp leader said. Please write. Your son, Alfred.

Columnist Berkowitz is dean of the Berkshire Music Center.

10—The Berkshire Eagle, Monday, July 25, 1960

Whitestone

OPERA SCENES will be presented in the theater-concert hall at Tanglewood tonight for Friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Rehearsing here an excerpt from Mozart's Don Giovanni are Maine Makas (Zerlina), John Lodge (Don Giovanni) and Sherrill Milnes (Masetto). Puccini's one-act opera, "Sister Angelica," also will be presented on program starting at 8:30.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 19 1960

Music Center Opera Recital Series To Open Tomorrow

Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, has released the program for the initial recital of opera scenes.

These will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 in the Theater-Concert Hall. The performance will be open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Robert Evans, Thomas Philips, Fredric Popper, Arthur Schoep, Felix Wolfes, all members of the Opera Department faculty, have assisted Mr. Goldovsky in the preparation of this performance which is the first of two sets of opera scenes to be presented during the Tanglewood season. The second will be Monday evening, July 25. At the Gala Evening on Aug. 4 celebrating the 20th anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center, the Opera Department will present scenes in the garden, and the world-premiere of Jan Meyerwitz opera "Port Town," which will be the concluding half on the concert given by the Music Center students in the Music Shed.

Tomorrow's performance will include two scenes from Don Giovanni and one from Cosi Fan Tutte by Mozart. These will be followed by one scene from each of the following operas: Riggoletto, Don Pasquale, Faust, La Boheme, and Carmen.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 23 1960

1960 Koussevitzky Memorial Service In Lenox Tomorrow

The annual memorial service for Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, for 25 years conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and founder of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, will be held tomorrow at 11 a.m. at the Congregational Church-on-the-Hill in Lenox.

Dr. Hugh Ross, head of the choral department at the music center, will direct the Tanglewood choir. Stefan Lind will be the baritone, and John Burke, the organist.

Selections to be sung from "Requiem" by Gabriel Faure will include "Introit and Kyrie," "Offertorium," "Sanctus," "Agnus Dei," "Libera Me," and "In Paradisium."

Mr. Burke will play the prelude from Bach's "Concerto No. 2;" the Bach offertory, "O Man Bewail Thy Grievous Fall" and the postlude to Bach's "Trio Sonata No. 2."

The Rev. David E. Moore, pastor, will conduct the service and preach the memorial sermon for Dr. Koussevitsky, who died June 4, 1951, a short time before that season's opening of the Berkshire Festival. Since then memorial services have traditionally been held at the Church-on-the-Hill on or near the anniversary of his birth, June 26.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121

JUL 17 1960

Increase of Interest In Modern Music

By FRANCIS D. PERKINS

This country's symphony orchestras are paying increasing attention to twentieth-century composers, while record companies are still more receptive toward them. This is the conclusion drawn by the American Symphony Orchestra League from a survey made by Broadcast Music, Inc., and reported at its recent national convention. The survey is based upon the 1959-'60 programs of seventy-four orchestras and the latest Schwann catalogue of long-playing records.

Not far from half (41 per cent) of the composers who figured in the orchestral programs were of this century, while the figure for recordings was 64.5 per cent. In number of works played, the current century scored 30.5 per cent of the works played by the orchestras and 16.2 per cent of the number of performances. In the share of the programs occupied by music of the last sixty years, this country was represented by 57.6 per cent of the composers, half of the works played and 37 per cent of the number of performances. Ravel, with ninety-three hearings, was the most represented foreign composer, and Aaron Copland headed the American share of the list with fifty-eight performances. Samuel Barber, George Gershwin, Roy Harris, Alan Hovanhess and Walter Piston were the next in order.

• • •

Fromm Series

The Fromm Music Foundation is sponsoring two concerts and six lecture-concerts of contemporary music at the Berkshire Music Center this summer. William Masselos' recital of Aaron Copland's piano music tomorrow in Tanglewood's Theater-Concert Hall, in honor of the composer's approaching sixtieth birthday, offers works which Mr. Copland considers as representative of the three important periods in his career: the Variations (1930), Sonata (1939-'41) and Fantasy (1957).

Luciano Berio's "Circles," for voice, harp and percussion, commissioned by the foundation, will have its first performance in a concert by members of the Boston Symphony and others under Richard Burgin's direction on Monday night, Aug. 1. Roger Sessions, Peter Maxwell Davies, Stravinsky and Martinu will also be represented. The remaining Friday afternoon lecture-concerts will be devoted to music by Leon Kirchner (July 22), Elliott Carter (July 29), Karl-Birger Blomdahl (Aug. 5) and John Cage (Aug. 12). Admission to all the Fromm events is free.

Eagle 8/11/6,

Off the Beam at Tanglewood

To the Editor of THE EAGLE:—

What a distortion of purpose! Tanglewood, which was organized and set into motion by a man who saw in the United States abounding talent and inspiration, but no creative leadership or unified social purpose, is now a center for mediocrity on the one hand, and—in the composition department—for dehumanized musical systems. The vision of Dr. Koussevitzky, which saw students working under the guidance of professional and responsible musicians, is epitomized in its decay in this Friday's [Aug. 12] Fromm Fellowship concert. John Cage, whose artistic integrity may be found in one composition of silence and in another in which the tuba player is instructed to strip to the waist, will expound his ideas to the eager audience of students and visitors. At the same time a chamber work involving the jazz artist Ornette Coleman was cancelled for unsound reasons, one of which was lack of rehearsal time. (The work had been scheduled by the head of the composition department and should therefore have been allowed sufficient rehearsal time automatically).

Is the dean of the Berkshire Music Center serious when he speaks of the major world interest in electronic and Cagean music? Does the head of the composition department realize the implications of his decision to cancel the appearance of a jazz artist of Coleman's stature and musical significance, while at the same time stressing in the season's presentations mechanical and/or frivolous perversions of musical thought? Is it not obvious that at the Friday Fromm concerts of modern music, played before the same small audience of some 200 people, a great fear clouds the composers and performers; a fear which, in spite of the long introductory talks and endless references to tradition and tolerance, leaves the audience like blocks of ice; a fear that to break out into genuinely dramatic feeling, to search for singing, lyrical qualities, will be condemned as old-fashioned and even vulgar by fellow composers? What a contradiction to the great art of the past, and how horrible a distortion of the original purpose and leadership of Tanglewood!

I think it only fair to mention that I am the composer whose work Mr. Copland belatedly decided not to do; but I hope you will accept the fact that this letter is not, so to speak, "sour grapes." It is a heartfelt and cumulative reaction to the Center's workings over the past two summers, from one who deeply loves what Tanglewood has stood for.

JACK DUFFY.

Interlaken.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 26 1960

Listeners' Forum At Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — The second session of the three-part series of the Listeners' Forum will take place at Tanglewood in the chamber music hall tonight at 8:30.

Entitled "The Performer as Listener," this meeting of the forum will have as participants G. Wallace Woodworth, moderator; Leon Kirchner, composer; Joseph Silverstein, performer; and Alfred Frankenstein, music editor of the San Francisco Chronicle.

The participants meet the requirements of the general scheme of this new series of lectures since, at each meeting, a composer, performer and critic comprise the panel.

Theme of the final session on Aug. 2 will be "The Critic as Listener."

Traveler (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 178,037

AUG 16 1960

Bulletins

LENOX (UPI)—Student conductors from Brazil and Japan won top awards at the Berkshire Music Festival, it was announced today. Diogo Pachecho of Sao Paulo, Brazil, won the Gertrude Robinson Smith scholarship to further his musical studies. Seiji Ozawa of Tokyo was awarded the Serge Koussevitsky Memorial Fund scholarship. Harold Farberman, regular timpanist with the Boston Symphonyy Orchestra, was listed with the other two as among the three best student conductors at the summer session.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 108,563

AUG 19 1960

same date last year.

Winsted Student Gets Music Prize From Tanglewood

WINSTED (Special) — Nicholas Cappabianca of 117 Prospect St. was given the Raphael Sagalyn Award at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Cappabianca attended the Berkshire Music Center this summer and studied composition with Aaron Copland under a tuition grant awarded by the center.

The Raphael Sagalyn award includes a cash prize of $300 and was won by Cappabianca for an orchestral work he completed at Tanglewood.

Cappabianca was graduated from the College of Music of the University of Hartford in 1955 and received a master's degree in music theory from the college in 1959. He studied composition with Arnold Franchetti of Lyme two years.

Pianist Masselos To Play Tonight At Tanglewood

In honor of Aaron Copland's 60th birthday, pianist William Masselos will perform three of the composer's works in the Tanglewood Theater tonight at 8:30.

On the program are the Piano Fantasy, Piano Variations and the Piano Sonata.

Mr. Masselos' recital, open to Friends of the Berkshire Music Center and the public without charge, will be presented as part of the Fromm Music Foundation's program at the Berkshire Music Center.

Campus Girl

Eagle 7/23

Chamber Music Concert Tomorrow At Tanglewood

Works by Faure, Milhaud and Bartok will be performed at the chamber music concert tomorrow morning at 10 at Tanglewood.

Opening the concert will be the Piano Quintet No. 1 by Faure, to be followed by Milhaud's Wind Quintet, and Bartok's String Quintet No. 2.

The program is being presented under the auspices of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

---

hand in the recreation program.

Eagle 7/20/60

Opera Scenes Scheduled at Tanglewood

TANGLEWOOD — Two scenes from Don Giovanni and one from Cosi Fan Tutte by Mozart are included in the program for the initial recital of opera scenes this this afternoon at 2:30 in the theater concert hall here.

The performance is open to friends of the Berkshire Music Center. Also on the program are one scene from each of the following operas: "Rigoletto," "Don Pasquale," "Faust," "La Boheme" and "Carmen."

Boris Goldovsky, head of the Opera Department of the Berkshire Music Center, was assisted in preparation of the program by Robert Evans, Thomas Philips, Frederic Popper, Arthur Schoep, and Felix Wolfes, all members of the Opera Department faculty.

Another set of opera scenes will be presented Monday evening. At an observation of the 20th anniversary of the Berkshire Music Center Aug. 4, the Opera Department will present the world premier of Jan Meyerwitz' opera, "Port Town."

Register (e)
TORRINGTON, Conn.
Circ. 10,918

AUG 19 1960

Music Award

Nicholas Cappabianca, son of Mrs. Esabella Cappabianca, Prospect Street, won a Raphael Sagalyn award for an orchestral work which he entered in the composers' competition at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., last week. He had previously been awarded a tuition scholarship grant to Tanglewood for study in composition with Aaron Copland, the distinguished American composer and chairman of the faculty at Tanglewood.

Goewey Rites Held

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 22 1960

Public Invited to Hear Quartet

LENOX — Burt Engel, manager of Festival House, has announced that the public has been invited without charge to hear the Lenox Quartet play Saturday at 5 p.m. in the Green Room at the resort.

The quartet holds chamber music recitals every Saturday as well as Tuesdays at 8:30 p.m. Members of the quartet are studying and teaching at Tanglewood under fellowship grants from the Fromm Music Foundation in Chicago.

• • •

KANSAS CITY, MO.
STAR
D. 338,237 S. 360,361
JUL 24 1960

Area Students Busy at Tanglewood.

By Joseph Kaye.

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass., July 23—The lawns gleam in the sun, the great old trees stand sentinel on all sides, and students walk about bright-eyed with enthusiasm. That is Tanglewood, where the Boston symphony holds its summer 6-week festival, and that is the Berkshire Music center, a school founded and directed by the orchestra.

Four musicians from the Missouri-Kansas area are helping celebrate this year, the 20th anniversary of the center. They are Barbara Baird, violist, of Independence, Mo., Marion Marshall, cellist, of Topeka; Martha Williams, cellist, of Shawnee, Kas., and Donald McCall, also a cellist, of Kansas City, Mo. They are as enthusiastic as all the others who come from many parts of the United States, and of the world, for post-graduate work, which consists of participating in performances by the student orchestra, chorus, opera and chamber music groups.

Miss Marshall is a small, brown-haired, sensitive-featured girl of 21 who was discouraged from taking up the cello because she was so short—about five feet. Nevertheless, she has already been engaged by the Indianapolis Symphony orchestra and plans a professional career which she hopes will lead her continually upward. So intent is she on a cello future that she has decided against marriage as incompatible with a career.

"But my teacher bet me five dollars," she said, "that I will be married by the time I'm 25."

Martha Williams is a vivacious blonde of 18, who, differing with Miss Marshall, wants to combine a career with marriage. She says she realizes that the cello is not so popular an instrument as the violin or piano—"You know the prejudice against the cello," she said. So she doesn't believe marriage and a family will interfere with her career. But there is no mistaking her love for her large instrument.

"I love it like crazy," she declared. "Always wanted it, and asked for it as a birthday gift." That was when she was about 12. Miss Williams has given solo recitals in Kansas City. She was a student of Catherine Farley at the conservatory there, and later went to study with Luigi Silva at the Hartt College of Music in Hartford, Conn.

Miss Baird happened to be unavailable when this correspondent visited Tanglewood. Donald McCall, a former student at the center, is here as a member of a quartet that plays students' compositions. He is also a student of Catherine Farley and like Miss Marshall, has a job in a symphony orchestra — the Pittsburgh Symphony.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958
AUG 4 1960

Electronic Concert Monday At Tanglewood

An open-air electronic concert will be heard at Tanglewood Monday at 8:30 p.m., featuring works composed for the occasion by 1960 composer-in-residence Luciano Berio.

The concert will employ a stereo tape recorder and four groups of speakers, plus the necessary transformers and amplifiers. In each group of speakers, two speakers will broadcast channel A and two will broadcast channel B from the stereo tape recorder. Berio will operate the master control console from within the Tanglewood Main House. The audience will be encouraged to move around so as to hear the 360-degree perimenter of sound.

Berio's new work "Circles," premiered at Tanglewood Monday

---

4 Springfield Union 7/5/60

Music Center Notes 20th Season

Aaron Copland, composer and chairman of the faculty at the Berkshire Music Center (left), and Miss Florence Dunn of Williamstown, a faculty member, discuss the Center's 20th anniversary opening ceremonies Sunday at Tanglewood with C. D. Jackson, Life magazine publisher and a trustee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. In opening-day speeches, Copland and Jackson both emphasized the role of music and musicians in promoting world-wide peace.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.
INQUIRER
D. 618,557 S. 1,033,048
AUG 21 1960

Conductor Eleazar de Carvalho has been signed by his native Brazil to form the new Brasilia Philharmonic. Using his position as director of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra, at Tanglewood, for scouting purposes, he signed the trombone section for the South American project. Above (left to right) are De Carvalho, Robert Moore, Camden, N. J.; Eugene Watt, Sedalia, Mo.; Raymond Turner, Albert Lea, Minn., and James Kidwell, Ada, Okla.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
AUG 5 1960

Tanglewood Tales

Awards culminating the summer's student musical activities will be presented at the concluding concert of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 13 at 3. The prizes and scholarships will cover a wide range of Tanglewood activity and will touch upon the work accomplished by every aspect of the Music Center.

The three young men who have shared the podium as active conductors of the student orchestra will each conduct a movement of Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony. For this Harold Farberman, Seiji Ozawa, and Diogo Pacheco will be joined by Oleg Kovalenko who has been a conducting auditor. Seymour Lipkin will conduct the only other work on the program, the Symphony in Three Movements by Stravinsky.

Two works of contemporary chamber music will be heard at the last concert of student chamber music Sunday morning Aug. 14 at 10 in the theater concert hall. The Stravinsky Octet for winds and brasses prepared by Louis Speyer of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is to open the program to be followed by Spohr's Nonet coached by Rosario Mazzeo also of the Boston Symphony.

The Opera Department under the direction of Boris Goldovsky will present a recital of opera scenes Tuesday afternoon at 2 in the theater concert hall. Included in the program will be two scenes from Mozart's Cosi Fan Tutte and two from Carmen. Other operas portrayed in part will be "Don Giovanni," "The Marriage of Figaro," "La Traviata," and "Madame Butterfly."

In the preparation of this series of performances, Mr. Goldovsky has been assisted by Robert Evans, Thomas Philips, Frederic Popper, Arthur Schoep, and Felix Wolfes.

The opera scenes on Tuesday will mark the completion of the Opera Department's season. This performance is open to members of Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

Sunday morning's student chamber music program will open at 10 with the Schubert String Quartet in C minor. The four players have been coached by Alfred Krips, assistant concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The middle work in this program is to be the Divertimento by Roussel. This is scored for five wind instruments and piano, and was prepared under the direction of Ralph Gomberg, principal oboe of the Boston Symphony. Concluding the morning program will be the Dvorak Piano Quintet prepared by Joseph de Pasquale, principal viola of the BSO.

This concert is one of the large series presented during the Tanglewood season under the auspices of the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

On Sunday, Aug. 14, the final chamber music program of the Music Center's season will be held in the theater concert hall rather than the Chamber Music Hall.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657
AUG 16 1960

At the Keyboard

WINSTED music student Nicholas Cappabianca, at right, discusses lesson with his composition teacher, Aaron Copland, during classroom session at Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. Student resides at 117 Prospect St.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026
AUG 12 1960

Awards Will Be Made Tomorrow At Music Center

Awards culminating the summer's student musical activities will be presented at the concluding concert of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The prizes and scholarships will cover a wide range of Tanglewood activity and will touch on the work accomplished by every aspect of the Music Center.

Three young men who have shared the podium as active conductors of the student orchestra will each conduct a movement of Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony. For this Harold Faberman, Seiji Ozawa and Diogo Pacheco will be joined by Oleg Kovalenko who has been a conducting auditor. Seymour Lipkin will conduct the only other work on the program, the Symphony in Three Movements by Stravinsky.

Two works of contemporary chamber music will be heard at the last concert of student chamber music Sunday morning at 10 in the Theater-Concert Hall. The Stravinsky Octet for winds and brasses prepared by Louis Speyer of the Boston Symphony Orchestra is to open the program to be followed by Spohr's Nonet coached by Rosario Mazzeo also of the Boston Symphony.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
AUG 16 1960

Scholarship Winners Named At Berkshire Music Center

TANGLEWOOD — At the conclusion of the 20th anniversary session of the Berkshire Music Center, a large number of scholarship awards were presented by the administration of the school. The winners were selected from a student body which totaled 286 young musicians who came to Tanglewood from 34 states, the District of Columbia, and 13 foreign countries.

The Carlotta M. Dreyfus scholarship, a tuition award, was presented to Gail Frances Hewitt of New York. In addition to playing in the weekly concerts of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra, in which she was concertmistress on alternate weeks, Miss Hewitt played in two concerts of Sunday morning chamber music.

George Shirley of New York, a young tenor in the opera department, received the High Fidelity magazine scholarship. Mr. Shirley gained fine critical notices for his performance as one of the sailors in the world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz' opera "Port Town."

The Gertrude Robinson Smith scholarship, named in honor of the founder of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival, the antecedent of the present Berkshire Festival, went to Diogo Pacheco of Sao Paulo, Brazil. Mr. Pacheco was one of three active conductors of the student orchestra this season. This is his second year at the Music Center.

Spalding Award

Mrs. Albert Spalding of Great Barrington established a fund, the income of which is presented as the Albert Spalding Prize for the most promising and outstanding instrumentalist in the student body. This year the prize was won by Jesse Levine of New York. Mr. Levine was first viclist in the student orchestra and played in several of the Sunday morning chamber music concerts.

The Lyda Watson Hersloff scholarship established by Miss Laura Hersloff was presented to Marianne Marshall of Topeka, Kas. Miss Marshall played cello in the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

Mary Anne Stephens of Covington, Ky., received the Selly A. Eisemann scholarship, a tuition award. Miss Stephens played French horn in what was an outstanding brass section in the student orchestra.

Outstanding Conductor

Seiji Ozawa, the outstanding student conductor of the season, was awarded the Koussevitzky memorial scholarship established by the residents of Berkshire County to honor the memory of the late Serge Koussevitzky, founder of the Berkshire Music Center. The young Japanese conductor was one of three active conductors who shared the podium at each of the student orchestra's weekly concerts.

The department of composition announced a double award of the Raphael Sagalyn Award presented for the best orchestral work by a student in that department. The winners were Ezra Sims of Boston and Nicholas Cappabianca of Winsted, Conn.

The Koussevitzky Music Foundation presented four grants to scholarship students this year. Those named were Barbara Baird of Independence, Mo.; Fred Gruenebaum, Montebello, Calif.; Lily M. Siao, Corona, N.Y.; and Shuntatsu Kohno of Tokyo, Japan. During the season Miss Baird shared the first desk of the viola section in the student orchestra while Mr. Gruenebaum was the principal oboe of that orchestra. Mr. Kohno also played viola, and Miss Siao was a pianist in the chamber music department.

A new award in memory of Arthur Abell and established by Mrs. Arthur Abell was presented for the first time to Anne Marcus, a cellist, from New Rochelle, N.Y.

Berkshire Students

Prior to the start of the school session a number of scholarships were announced. These included 15 Berkshire scholarships to residents of Berkshire County: Mrs. Sally Aaronson, Brenda Aaronson, Mrs. Freda Sass, Mary Violet, and Carol Sykes, all of Pittsfield; Francis Cardillo, North Adams; Jack Duffy and Sally Collier, Interlaken; Holly McLennan, Tyringham; and Virginia Ripley, Stockbridge. The following Lenox residents attended as Berkshire scholarship students: Dolores Hoover, Elizabeth Muller, Patricia Gilroy, the Rev. David Ellms.

The Margaret Lee Crofts scholarships for students of composition were won by Ezra Sims, Boston, and Robert E. Bernat, Waltham. Sharon Mulligan of Staten Island, N.Y., was the recipient of the Delta Omicron International Professional Music Fraternity scholarship.

Taissa L. Silvers, Detroit, Mich., received the National Federation of Music Clubs scholarship. The Minneapolis Star and Tribune scholarship for a resident of Minneapolis went to Elsie Campbell. Louis Wildman of the Portland (Oregon) Junior Symphony Orchestra received the scholarship established by the orchestra for one of its members.

Fromm Fellowships

The Fromm Music Foundation of Chicago, Paul Fromm, president, makes available each year a number of fellowships for young musicians whose special skills and interests are in the study, teaching, and performance of contemporary music. This group played at the seminars in contemporary music held each Friday afternoon at the Berkshire Music Center, and at the Composers Forums. The Fromm Fellows this year were: Peter Marsh, violin, Seattle, Wash.; Theodore Mantz, violin, Minneapolis, Minn.; Scott Nickrenz, viola, Hamburg, N.Y.; Donald McCall, cello, Kansas City, Mo.; John Perras, flute, New York; Bernard Shapiro, oboe, New York; Jerome Rosen, clarinet, Davis, Calif.; Jane Taylor, bassoon, New York; William Brown, horn, Pittsburgh, Penn.; Paul Jacobs, piano, Paris, France; Marguerite Willauer, soprano, Boston.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
AUG 13 1960

Young Student at Tanglewood Named Conductor in Utica

Jose Serebrier, a student conductor at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood, has been named conductor of the Utica Civic Symphony Orchestra, Utica, N.Y. He will also teach at Utica College of Syracuse University in Utica.

The 22-year-old Serebrier, who has conducted the student orchestra several times during their Thursday night concerts at Tanglewood, was chosen conductor of the Utica orchestra last week from a field of over 50 applicants.

A native of Uruguay, Serebrier has attended the Berkshire Music Center for five years, beginning in 1956. That year he won the Koussevitzky Foundation Award. Also a composer, his works have been played many times at Tanglewood, several of which he conducted himself.

For the past two years, Serebrier has been apprentice conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony under Antal Dorati. The young conductor's Symphony No. 1 was performed in November, 1957, by the Houston Symphony under Leopold Stokowski. Serebrier will be guest conductor for a week this November of the National Symphony in Washington, D.C.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
AUG 13 1960

Fifteen Berkshire Students Enrolled at Music Center

Dolores Hoover of Lenox listens to Dr. Hugh Ross relate some of his experiences as head of the choral department at the Music Center. Dr. Ross is the conductor of the Schola Cantorum of New York City.

WHEN DR. CHARLES MUNCH and the Boston Symphony Orchestra conclude the 1960 Festival season at Tanglewood tomorrow afternoon with a performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust," it also will mark the end of busy summer for 15 Berkshire students at the Berkshire Music Center. Many of the area students will be in the Festival chorus for the last program of the year. The Berkshire representatives in the school, operated each summer for the past 20 years by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, include seven from Pittsfield: Mrs. Sally Aaronson, Mrs. Freda Sass, Mary Violet, who are in the chorus; Lynne Priest, Carol Sykes, Brenda Aaronson, members of the listening and analysis department and Daniel Secunda, who is studying cello. Others from the county are: Francis Cardillo of North Adams, clarinet; Jack Duffy of the Stockbridge School, Interlaken, who is studying composition; Virginia Ripley of Stockbridge and Patricia Gilroy of Lenox, chorus and listening and analysis department; Elizabeth Muller of Lenox and Holly McLennan of Tyringham, listening and analysis department; Dolores Hoover of Lenox and Sally Collier of Interlaken, chorus.

—J.G.W.M.

Photos by Whitestone

Professor G. Wallace Woodworth of Harvard University, head of the listening and analysis department, established this season at the Music Center, gives some special attention to these Berkshire students. Seated front, Elizabeth Muller and Patricia Anne Gilroy of Lenox, Lynne Priest, Mrs. Freda Sass of Pittsfield; second row, Carol Sykes of Pittsfield, Florence Dunn, formerly of Williamstown and standing, Brenda Aaronson and Mary Violet of Pittsfield, Holly McLennan of Tyringham.

Samuel Mayes, first cellist in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, one of the instructors during the summer at the Berkshire Music Center, gives a private lesson to Daniel Secunda of Pittsfield.

Florence Dunn, formerly of Williamstown, associate to Dr. G. Wallace Woodworth in the listening and analysis department, gives a blackboard lesson to Holly McLennan of Tyringham.

SCHENECTADY GAZETTE, THURSDAY, AUGUST 11, 1960

CHORAL DIRECTOR—Carol Ann Russo, left, conducts a rehearsal of the chorus at Tanglewood under the watchful eyes of Hugh Ross and Lorna Cooke DeVaron, the head and associate of the choral department.

"SOUND OF GLASS"—Mrs. Avis Richardson, left, demonstrates the sound of musical glasses for the benefit of Florence Dunn and G. Wallace Woodworth of the listening and analysis staff at the Berkshire Music Center. Mrs. Richardson has been an enthusiast regarding musical glasses and bell tones for many years.

Taught by Top Artists—

3 From City Studying Music at Tanglewood

By DOROTHY RITZ
Gazette Music Editor

Three Schenectadians have been studying at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, this summer in three separate departments of the school.

* * *

THEY ARE Miss Carol Ann Russo of 1334 Sumner avenue, who teaches music in Scotia; Richard Marshall, who conducted the Schenectady Light Opera Company performance of "La Perichole" last year and who is now employed as head of the opera program at the University of Buffalo, and Mrs. Avis Richardson of 1181 Waverly place, who is studying in the newest department of the Music Center—the department of listening and analysis.

* * *

THE BERKSHIRE Music Center, now concluding its 20th season, has been on of the pioneers in the summer study of music during the six-week period of the Berkshire Festival concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, near Lenox, in the Berkshires.

The faculty of the Berkshire Music Center is made up of eminent musicians from throughout the United States and abroad and students learn to practice their profession under professional conditions and are trained in performance by performing before large audiences of mature concert patrons.

* * *

MISS RUSSO, a member of the Tanglewood choir and the Festival chorus, each of which has performed on numerous occasions this season, has sung with these groups under Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux. The Festival chorus sings in concert with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The department of choral music also has a number of students studying choral conducting. Miss Russo has been doing a great amount of this work under the guidance of Hugh Ross, head of the department and one of the leaders in the field of choral music.

* * *

MARSHALL has been studying directly under Boris Goldovsky, head of the Tanglewood Opera department.

Goldovsky has developed many innovations in operatic production which are now an established part of opera throughout the world. Marshall said he has been particularly impressed this summer with Goldovsky's ideas on staging, which are in the contemporary trend toward re-emphasis on the importance of the stage in opera.

* * *

MRS. RICHARDSON has found that the listening and analysis group has given her access to all other departments of the Berkshire Music Center. With every rehearsal open to students, she has had an opportunity to hear the student orchestra, attend the seminar meetings in contemporary music and the Sunday morning concerts by members of the chamber music department.

EMOTING—Richard Marshall, standing, directs the action and singing of two of the opera students at Tanglewood in an outdoor rehearsal in front of the Theatre-Concert Hall. Marshall is working this summer under the direction of Boris Goldovsky, head of opera department at Tanglewood.

208

It all began when two small boys in Pawtucket secretly played on their older brothers' clarinets.
Now graduate students in music,
the two symphony hopefuls . . .

Tootle at Tanglewood

STORY BY RUTH TRIPP PICTURES BY EDWARD C. HANSON

Lenox, Mass.

TWO YOUNG clarinetists from Pawtucket, Edward Avedisian of 575 Broadway and Craig M. Watjen of 48 Underwood Street, are the only two students registered from Rhode Island at the Berkshire Music Center for the 1960 session. Mr. Avedisian is enjoying his second summer here and Mr. Watjen his first.

Both young men came over to chat with me recently after a long rehearsal session with the student orchestra. Otherwise they might have stayed on at "The Barn," the rehearsal hall for this group, because the Rhode Island musicians are officially custodians there. In return for their dormitory, they take care of the housekeeping chores, such as arranging the chairs properly for each type of assembly and generally keeping the place tidy. I asked about the dusting and from the blank silence, I gathered that there is no dust in Lenox. Green grass everywhere and the fresh breeze from the lake take care of such matters. Mr. Avedisian said, "You know, this is actually a barn. It's not a converted model."

And so, we got on to musical matters. Song sparrows sang overhead and a tiny chipmunk skipped across the path to the press office and disappeared under the doorstep. If he was in search of news, I could have told him that the sessions would be over by the middle of August and he would have his world to himself once more. The boys said that their surroundings were perfect, either for concentrated study or complete relaxation. They swim every day and agreed that the program was well balanced between work and play. Their fellow students are interesting and there is time for pleasant talk between study hours and the evening concerts or at Lenox School, where the dormitory students have their meals.

There is a curious parallel course to be noted in the budding careers of these two young musicians. Both attended music classes and studied at East Senior High School (now Tolman), under the direction of Matthew Gryzb, a teacher of wind instruments who is now teaching in Connecticut. Both boys became interested in clarinet at an early age because their older brothers were studying the instrument. They told similar stories of having taken the expensive and forbidden instruments from their compact cases to try a few notes when no one was there to object. They both agreed that, for a small boy, there is nothing so complicated as a clarinet to disassemble and put back into its proper sections of the small case, especially in a hurry.

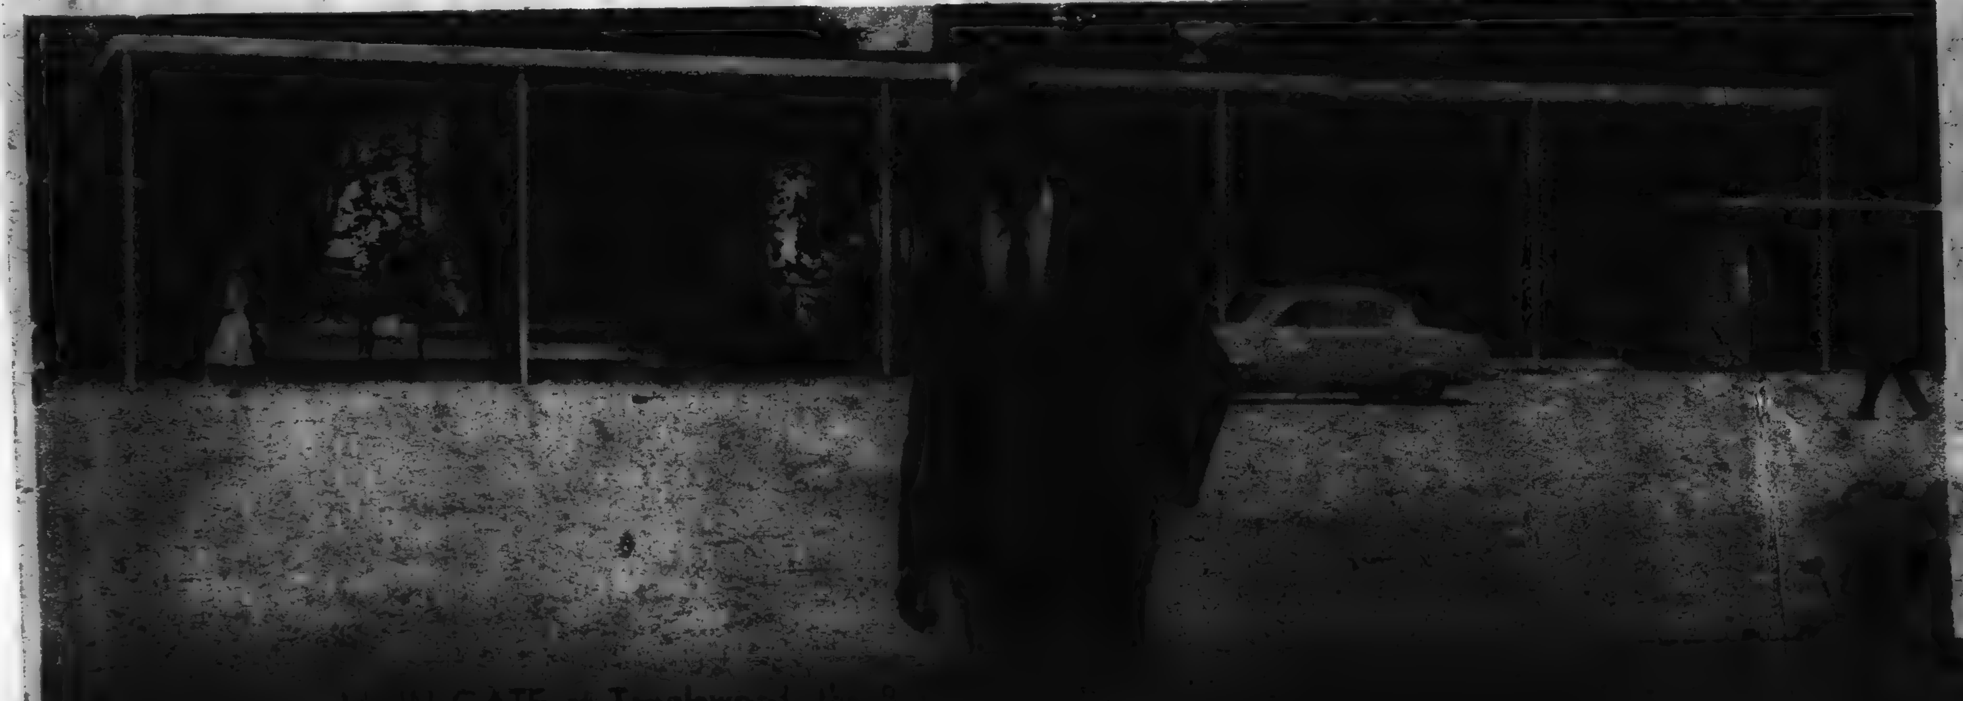
The next coincidence finds them both playing the difficult clarinet parts from Stravinsky's Fire Bird Suite for a panel of five first desk men from the reed section of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in auditions for Tanglewood. Edward played at Symphony Hall because he is a student in the graduate school at Boston University. After graduating from East High in '55, he earned his B.A. there and is now working toward his M.A. in music.

Craig auditioned in New York at Juilliard School of Music where he will complete his graduate work. He finished at East High in '53, went to St. Georges in Newport for a year and then earned his B.A. at Harvard in '58.

Their summer schedule at Berkshire Center begins at 6 a.m. Usually they practice technique at 7, go to breakfast at 8, rehearse with the orchestra from 9:30 to 12:30 and then take an hour for lunch. The chamber music ensembles meet for rehearsal from 1 to 3:30 and so it goes.

Craig has already played clarinet in a Mozart Quintet for wind instruments and piano at the concert of July 17. Edward played at the July 10th concert in the Hindemith Quintet for flute, oboe, clarinet, horn and bassoon.

Debussy's La Mer was on the list for one of the student orchestra concerts, conducted by Seiji Ozawa, a young conductor from



MAIN GATE at Tanglewood, the [illegible]

[illegible] Symphony's [illegible] student group. Edward [illegible] faces camera.

Sunday Journal
PROVIDENCE, R. I.
Circ. 186,189
AUG 14 1960

HOUSEKEEPERS making music. Avedisian, with clarinet, and Watjen in The Barn.

Kawasaki-Shi, Japan, who came back with the Boston Symphony Orchestra after their recent tour in the Orient. I saw Mr. Ozawa enjoying an American sandwich and a cup of coffee at the Tanglewood cafeteria. He was the center of an animated discussion, probably about La Mer.

Other scores the young Rhode Islanders have worked on are Mussorgsky's Night on Bald Mountain, Brahms' Symphony No. 2 and Rachmaninoff's Second Piano Concerto.

They talked of the extraordinary acoustics of the big Shed, with its improved stage backdrop and agreed that the perfect way to listen to music was outside, under the stars, with a blanket spread on the lawn and the Boston Symphony Orchestra playing. I remembered at this point that "the thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts" and knew without asking that the boys were quite likely to be thinking of the time when they, too, will be a part of a major symphony somewhere. Somehow, you seem near the sky at Tanglewood.

COLUMBUS, OHIO
DISPATCH
D. 182,830 S. 243,249
SEP 4 1960

Passive Listening Called Dangerous

When Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, last spring named G. Wallace Woodworth to head the Department of Listening and Analysis for the summer Berkshire Festival, Mr. Woodworth issued a statement which even listeners at a distance might find worth pondering. Mr. Woodworth conducted the Harvard Glee Club and the Radcliffe Choral Society for a quarter of a century, and is now James Edward Ditson Professor of Music at Harvard University.

In his opinion the immeasurable quantities of music with which American ears are constantly bombarded is undermining the real pleasure of listening. "I suppose more people can be said to listen to music today than ever before in the history of the world," he wrote, "but I am not at all sure that this indiscriminate background listening may not be gradually and insidiously debasing the coin. We have music while we eat, music while we do our shopping, music while we drive our car, music while we read the paper, music while we work, music while we sit by the fire, music while we talk with other people.

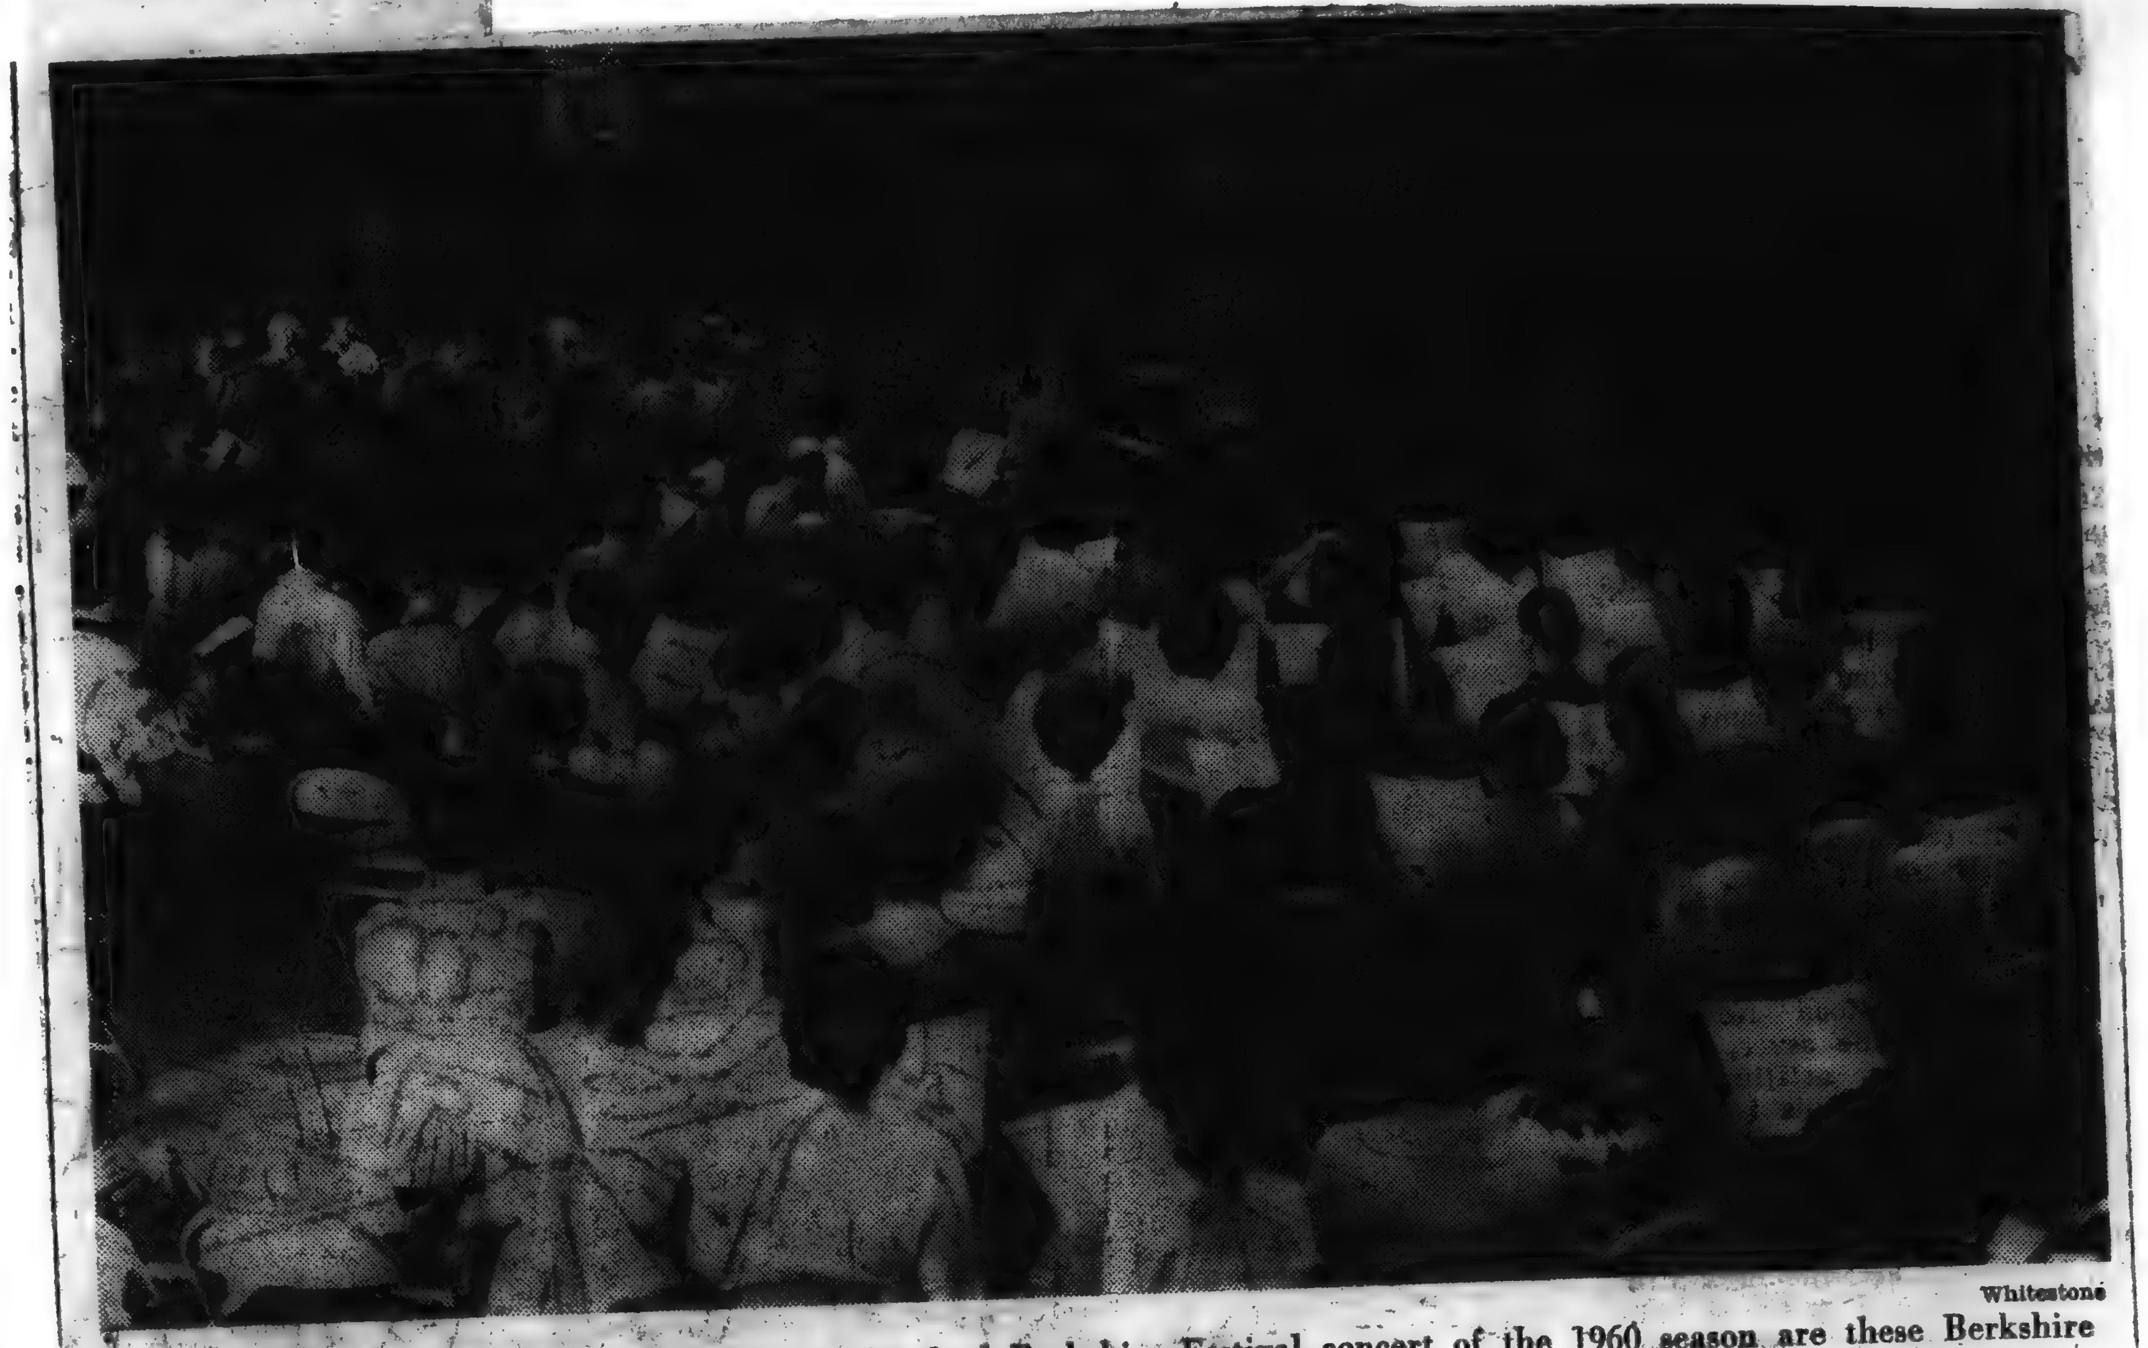
"THERE ARE two things wrong: first, a great deal of the music is utterly inferior and worthless, and second, the continued effect of mere passive background listening may well be permanently damaging.

"The understanding of music consists of responding to music on its own terms. . . . Receptiveness to beauty calls for infinitely more than passive listening. It challenges the utmost concentration and the utmost energy of penetration on the part of the listener."

Patrons of the concerts of the Symphony Club of Central Ohio — which for 37 years has been bringing distinguished visiting orchestras to Columbus—have unparalleled opportunity for such creative listening. Orchestras from Boston, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia are on the current series, opening on Oct. 27 with the Boston Symphony under Mr. Munch. Season tickets are now on sale at the Symphony Club boxoffice, Summers' Music Store, 114 East Broad St., telephone CApital 4-1515.

210

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
AUG 12 1960



Whitestone

REHEARSING AT TANGLEWOOD for the final Berkshire Festival concert of the 1960 season are these Berkshire Music Center students who make up the Festival chorus. Dr. Charles Munch, who will conduct the Boston Symphony in a performance of Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust," Sunday afternoon at 2:30 in the Music Shed, has been rehearsing the chorus all week in one of the Tanglewood music halls in preparation for the closing program.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
AUG 13 1960

Themes From Tanglewood

By RALPH BERKOWITZ

ALL GREAT institutions have boards of trustees. All boards of trustees receive reports drawn up at great length regarding the accomplishments and aims of their institutions. Recent surveys by a well-known Madison Avenue agency indicate that only 2.58 per cent of all trustees in the United States have read through an annual report. It has therefore occurred to this reporter to make an independent statement in the form of a short report to Tanglewood's trustees and at the same time to allow readers to look over our shoulder to see how these things are done. Here it is:

* * *

Dear Trustees: We've just finished our 20th season of the Berkshire Music Center and most of us on the faculty and staff feel that it was one of the best. Certain defects in our school are inherent in the musical situation in America today and we think you ought to know about them.

The most important of these is the dwindling supply of violin students in the United States. All symphony orchestras are finding it more and more difficult to find first-rate replacements and all conservatories are hard put to fill their violin classes.

* * *

Summer schools like Tanglewood likewise find it difficult to maintain their standards in string playing, which in the case of wind instruments are getting higher each year. The reason for this is of course a sociological and economic one, but Tanglewood ought to be in the forefront of a major effort to turn the tide.

Competition among educational institutions is healthful. Since Tanglewood started, many other important summer centers have sprung up, all seeking the most talented and promising young musicians. But the facilities and possibilities for intensive work in our school are unique. We believe we could let the world know more about them and thereby attract an ever-increasing number of the finest talents. We often find that potential students are unaware of Tanglewood's desire to have them join us.

* * *

All the remaining topics in this report are of a minor nature but we think you will want to know of them simply to have a full picture of the 20th session's work.

"He inserted words from 'South Pacific'."

* * *

On Aug. 3 Prof. Woodworth ran out of chalk for his blackboard. He sent Miss Janet Squell to fetch some, but she unfortunately slipped on the wet grass [illegible] it was raining [illegible] and she broke a brooch given to her by her Aunt Mildred. (We don't believe we can be sued for this.)

A conducting student of Eleazar de Carvalho was found cleaning out his pipe with a baton. This created quite a furor, but Mr. Carvalho's firm hand soon restored order and not more than 20 minutes were lost from the rigid schedule.

A similar incident took place July 29 when a choral singer inserted words from "South Pacific" to a melody in Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust." Hugh Ross's quick ear spotted the reprobate, who was unceremoniously heaved over the high hedge into Hawthorne Street. After due penance, however—singing the full second baritone part three times, solo, in French—the student was reinstated amid cheers and the opening of a small bottle of champagne.

* * *

The instrumentalists have been a fairly staid lot this year. However, a group in one of Mr. de Pasquale's classes was heard by him to count their rests, not one-two-three-one-two-three, but two-dollars-second-race-five-dollars-fourth-race. Here again the instructor's quick ear kept all in order, and these students were prohibited from receiving their subscriptions to the Daily Racing Form for two weeks.

Several other incidents of this mild character might be recorded; but they would probably appear redundant. It remains but to say that the Berkshire Music Center's 20th session produced some of the finest concerts, brought forth some of the most promising music from young composers and guided and inspired almost 300 young musicians towards the highest ideals of their art.

* * *

In closing our season it seems most appropriate to voice the remark of a famous baseball player in last year's World Series. An interviewer on the radio said to him, "Well, Perchy, are you glad that the Series is over?" and he answered in a burst of spontaneity, "I sure are."

This is the last of seven weekly columns by Mr. Berkowitz, who is dean of the Berkshire Music Center.

BETHLEHEM, PA.
GLOBE-TIMES
D. 28,894

AUG 5 1960

Hellertown Teacher Studies At Tanglewood

Miss Maria Galati, pianist and teacher at the First Church of Christ, Hellertown, is completing six weeks of study at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, Mass.

She is one of seven pianists chosen for the chamber music department at Tanglewood. On July 31, Miss Galati performed in concert the Leos Janacek Capriccio for piano and wind instruments.

In addition, she is a member of the Festival Chorus, which has appeared with the Boston Symphony Orchestra, in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony and Faure's Requiem, under the direction of Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux.

Miss Galati is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Galati, 751 Turner St., Allentown.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 13 1960

Student Batons Will Wave Afar

By SUSAN WHITTLESEY

When the last notes of this season have died at Tanglewood, there will be echoes heard from Boston to Paris and Utica to Brasilia. They'll be carried by students from the conducting department at Tanglewood's Berkshire Music Center.

* * *

Three winners and three alternates were chosen as the top talent out of 21 student conductors in a competition early in the six-week season at the Tanglewood school. In coming months, they'll be putting their Berkshire training and experience to use on three continents, either in further study or in work with orchestral groups.

The talent competition was the first of its kind at the Berkshire Music Center. Its chief purpose was to single out leaders for the student orchestras.

* * *

In the past, the BMC has chosen its active conductors "on their merits," but without having seen them all work under the same conditions. "This year, everyone submitted himself to the same examination by the faculty," says BMC Administrator Leonard Burkat.

Top scorers were assigned to share the responsibility for conducting the student orchestra in daily rehearsals and in the Thursday night Shed concerts.

Whitestone

José Serebrier rehearsing student orchestra

They also received the personal instruction and critiques of Eleazar de Carvalho, head of the conducting department, in private classes.

Three alternates, runnersup in the competition, also received the special attention of Mr. de Carvalho in small classes. The other 15 conducting students, who represent 10 states and Canada, audited rehearsals, criticized and attended group classes.

Geographical distribution played no role in choosing the top six conductors, but the winners form a miniature United Nations.

Seigi Ozawa is from Tokyo, and has been living in Paris this past year. Diogo Pacheco is from Sao Paulo, Brazil. Harold Farberman is from Boston.

The alternates were Man Bok Kim of Taegu, Korea; Oleg Kovalenko, originally from Kiev, U.S.S.R., now living in California, and Jose Serebrier, from Montevideo, Uruguay.

* * *

Diogo Pacheco claims, "I learned more at Tanglewood in six weeks this summer than I have on my own in 10 years."

In his home town of Sao Paulo, Brazil, he has been working on a newspaper, and for several years has been conducting small orchestras on the side. His Tanglewood training has qualified him to become Mr. de Carvalho's assistant this fall as his fellow-countryman sets up the official symphony orchestra of Brazil's new capital, Brasilia.

Seigi Ozawa will return to Paris to continue his studies with private teachers. He was first-place winner in the Concours International de Chefs d'Orchestre in Besancon, France, last fall. Through this accomplishment, and the impression he made on one of the influential Concours judges — Charles Munch, by name — Mr. Ozawa was granted a BMC scholarship for study here this summer.

"Tokyo," he comments, "is no good for study of music." He adds that he has found this country "very open" and full of opportunity.

* * *

Harold Farberman, a full-time timpani player in the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is also a composer and conductor. He returns to Boston to continue his musical career. He has conducted chamber groups made up of BSO members, and expects to continue with them; they have performed in Boston and New York.

Of the alternates, 22-year-old Jose Serebrier has the most extensive background in conducting. This young Uruguaian, who often conducted the Tanglewood student orchestra on Thursday nights, proved himself recently by winning a competition to become director of the Utica (N.Y.) Civic Symphony Orchestra. He won over 50 others. He will teach part time at Utica College of Syracuse University, located in Utica. For the past two years he has been apprentice conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony.

* * *

Winner in 1956 of the Koussevitzky Foundation Award at Tanglewood, composer Serebrier's Symphony No. 1 was premiered in November 1957 by the Houston Symphony under the baton of Leopold Stokowski. Serebrier has been conducting since the age of 11 when he organized and conducted the first all-high school orchestra in Uruguay, which toured the country and gave nearly 100 concerts over four years. Later he was conductor of both the National Chamber Orchestra and the National Symphony of Uruguay.

In November, he will be guest conductor for one week of the National Symphony in Washington, D.C. He is also under commission by the Harvard Musical Assn. to write an opera, having been chosen after a nationwide competition.

Alternates Kim and Kovalenko will return to their studies at Stamford and the University of California, respectively.

Since roads to musical success seem to lead both to Tanglewood and from it, this year's students obviously are on their way. The trail already is marked by the careers of such former student conductors as Mr. de Carvalho and Leonard Bernstein.

Whitestone

Student conductors Farberman, Ozawa and Pacheco with conductor De Carvalho

---

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

AUG 18 1960

Berkshire Music Center Awards Scholarships

Scholarships and awards were presented to outstanding students of the Berkshire Music Center in Lenox at the conclusion of their season. The winners were selected from a student body which totaled 286 young musicians who came to Tanglewood from 34 states, the District of Columbia and 13 foreign countries.

Award winners were: Gail F. Hewitt of New York City, the Carlotta M. Dreyfus Scholarship; George Shirley of New York, the High Fidelity Magazine Scholarship; Diogo Pacheco of Brazil, the Gertrude Robinson Smith Scholarship; Jesse Levine of New York, the Albert Spalding Prize for the most promising and outstanding instrumentalist in the student body; The Lyda Watson Hersloff Scholarship to Marianne Marshall of Topeka, Kan.; Mary Anne Stephens of Covington, Ky., the Selly A. Eisemann Scholarship.

Seiji Ozawa of Tokyo, Japan won the Koussevitzky Memorial Scholarship as the outstanding student conductor; The Ralph Saga yn Award for the best orches ral work produced a double win er this year, Ezra Sims of Bos on and Nicholas Cappabianca of Winsted, Conn.

The Koussevitzky Music Foun lation presented four grants to cholarship students. They were: Barbara Baird of Independence, Mo.; Fred Gruenebaum, Monte ello, Calif.; Lily M. Siao, Colona, N. Y., and Shuntatsu Kohno of Tokyo, Japan.

A new award in memory of Arthur Abell and established by Mrs. Arthur Abell was presented to Anne Marcus, a cellist from New Rochelle, N. Y.

POMONA, CALIF.
PROGRESS-BULLETIN
D. 26,815 S. 29,101

AUG 2 1960

Denes Attends Music Center At Tanglewood

CLAREMONT — George Denes, of 3051 Rockmont Ave., is among nearly 300 students attending at the Berkshire Music Center during its 20th anniversary season at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass.

Denes is the founder and, for the past seven years, the director of the Claremont Civic Symphony Orchestra.

At Tanglewood, Denes is a violinist in the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra, the full symphony orchestra made up of students attending the school. He also is manager of the orchestra.

INDEPENDENCE, MO.
EXAMINER
D. 11,326

SEP 2 1960

Miss Baird Receives A Music Award

Miss Barbara Baird, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert G. Baird, 602 N. Delaware, has been given one of four grants awarded at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood. Miss Baird received the Koussevitzky Music Foundation grant.

Miss Baird shared the first desk of the viola section in the orchestra. There was an enrollment of 286 students at this 20th anniversary season of the music center.

The Tanglewood season (comprising concerts by the Boston Symphony and activities of the school, the Berkshire Music center) finished the 6 week summer season with a total attendance of [illegible],579.

Eagle 8/13/60

Tanglewood Students' Concert To End 1960 Season Today

TANGLEWOOD—The sixth and final concert of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra, trained by Eleazer de Carvalho of Brazil, will be given this afternoon at 3 in the Music Shed.

Scholarship Winners

Two of the conductors who will appear with the student orchestra have been named winners of scholarships given through the Koussevitzky Memorial Fund and Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of Stockbridge, president of the Berkshire Symphonic Festival Inc., the pioneer of the Festival idea in the Berkshires. They are Diogo Pacheco of San Paulo, Brazil, who was awarded the Gertrude Robinson Smith scholarship for conducting, and Seiji Ozawa of Tokyo, Japan, who won the conducting award from the Koussevitzky Memorial Fund established by Berkshire County residents in memory of the late conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

This afternoon's student orchestra program follows:

Symphony No. 5 in E Minor, Op. 64 — Tschaikovsky
Andante—Allegro con anima.
Diogo Pacheco (Sao Paulo, Brazil) conductor.
Andante cantabile.
Oleg Kovalenko (Pacific Grove, Calif.) conductor.
Finale
Seiji Ozawa (Kawasaki-shi, Japan) conductor
INTERMISSION
Overture to the Magic Flute — Mozart
Man Bok Kim (Taegu, Korea) conductor.
Symphony in Three Movements — Stravinsky
Andante, con moto
Seymour Lipkin, conductor.

Like all student events held during the Festival season, this afternoon's final Music Center program is open to the Friends of the Berkshire Music Center.

The 1960 Festival ends this weekend when Dr. Charles Munch will conduct the BSO in the concluding concerts in the Music Shed tonight at 8:30 and tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

Last night, with Pierre Monteux on the podium, a crowd of 6,783 persons attended the con-

Festival Finale
Continued on Page 11

Whitestone

WINNERS of scholarships at the Berkshire Music Center include these two young conductors who will appear this afternoon in the Music Shed with the student orchestra for final concert of group, trained by Eleazar de Carvalho of Brazil. At left is Seiji Ozawa of Tokyo with Diogo Pacheco, Brazil.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
AUG 13 1960

Festival Finale

Continued From First Page

cert which featured the piano soloist, Jorge Bolet.

Tonight Dr. Munch will conduct the first portion of the program when Gary Graffman will be heard in Chopin's Piano Concerto in E Minor, and Handel's Suite for Orchestra from "The Water Music." Aaron Copland, assistant director of the BMC, will conduct his first symphony to conclude the program.

Tomorrow afternoon, the BSO and Dr. Munch will present the most ambitious work of the season when four soloists and the Festival chorus will be heard with the orchestra in a performance of Berlioz' "The Damnation of Faust."

Attendance at the 1960 Festival concerts thus far has been on a par or slightly in excess of last year's all-time high. If the weather holds out tonight and tomorrow, another new record will be established.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
AUG 8 1960

Open Air Electronic Concert At Tanglewood This Evening

TANGLEWOOD — The first open-air electronic concert in the United States will be held here tonight at 8:30 under a grant from the Ford Foundation.

The Berkshire Music Center's 1960 composer in residence, Luciano Berio, will be in charge of the program consisting of works he especially composed for the occasion. He will employ electronic equipment supplied by the East Coast Electronic Co., of Boston and the Concert Network, Boston.

The equipment will consist of an Ampex 300 series stereo tape recorder, and four groups of speakers placed in trees on the Tanglewood lawns adjoining the main house along with necessary transformers and amplifiers.

In each group of speakers, two speakers will broadcast channel A and two will broadcast channel B from the stereo tape recorder. The volume controls will be mounted on a master control console and Mr. Berio will manipulat the console from within th Tanglewood main house.

The audience, on the lawns will be encouraged to move abou in order the hear the 360 degre perimeter of sound.

Studied at Milan

Mr. Berio was born in Imperi Oneglia in 1925. He began hi music studies with his father, a organist and composer. He entered the Milan Conservatory o Music where he studied composition with Paribeni and G. F Ghedini and orchestra conductin with Votto and Giulini. He won several scholarships while there and graduated with highest honors. Since then, aside from his composing, he has also been active as a conductor both on the radio and in concerts throughout Europe.

In 1952 he was granted a Koussevitzky Foundation scholarship which enabled him to attend the Berkshire Music Center where he studied with Luigi Dallapiccola.

He arrived in the United States in May for a coast to coast lecture tour. He is accompanied by his wife, Cathy Berberian, who sang the vocal part of Mr. Berio's new composition, "Circles," which was premiered at the Fromm Foundation's concert in the Tanglewood theater last Monday night.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 13 1960

Music Review

New Note at Seminar

By JAY C. ROSENFELD

THE FINAL lecture-concert of the seminar in contemporary music, sponsored by the Fromm Musical Foundation was given yesterday afternoon in the chamber music hall at Tanglewood. The music of John Cage was the sole source of the program. The composer was in attendance as a participant in two sections of the afternoon.

Cage evokes incredulity in some quarters. Others, approaching him with a desire to be convinced, find much to satisfy them. We found his "string quartet in four parts" easy to take, as unusual as it is. He designates the four movements as "quietly flowing along," "gently rocking," nearly "stationary" and "quodlibet."

* * *

AN ANALYSIS would bring on a discussion in semantics: whether sound is music, or vice versa. He asks the four performers to use no vibrato, allows them practically never to play above a whisper, has the cello play scordatura although the others tune their instruments normally. There is a primitive austerity to his music, if we have agreed to call it such, and we even were willing to consider his squeals and scratches not unpleasant. They might have been wind in trees and monotone singsong. This goes for the first two sections. The third, for us, was too long and the last one, though the shortest, was disappointing because it reverted to recognizable rhythm.

* * *

A DEMONSTRATION of his ideas on new aspects of form in instrumental music and electronics was executed with the composer reading at a microphone which he turned on and off while continuing to talk, all this to the dictates of a stop watch, and a pianist injecting dissonant chords by the same method, except for one instance when the sense was beatific and the pianist played a gentle F major triad. This could have been wit.

Cage becomes less coherent and more amusing, at best, in his "concert for voice, flute, clarinet and strings." The composer stands erect on the stage and swings his arms like hands on a clock, and, we would guess, one complete revolution a minute, still by clock computation. The musicians are distributed separately in the hall, each as independent and far removed from the other as possible. They have no bar-lines and apparently no definite note designations but take their cues from the circling arms of the composer and improvise within limits.

* * *

THE STRINGS SLIDE, the clarinetist blows in the mouthpiece without the clarinet, the cellist slaps a strap on the floor, shakes a large carton of tin cans, the violist pricks toy balloons, the violinists shoot off toy cap pistols, squirt water pistols at the auditors, squeeze French auto horns, use the wood of their bows on the strings, and every unusual device in the book.

Cage was introduced to the audience by Aaron Copland, head of the Berkshire Music Center. This is no recent experiment of Cage. He has been doing it for years. After the quartet we thought much of it ludicrous but it is no joke to Cage and if one could talk with him and see his earnestness there would be at least some doubt if he has his tongue in his cheek consistently. The hall was crowded and the laughs were unrestrained. Cage remained unperturbed and commands respect.

Times (e)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 121,657

AUG 17 1960

Now, the Scales . . .

INSTRUCTION for the clarinet takes place under open skies at the Berkshire Music Center, Tanglewood, for Barbara Anne Kolb of 30 Beacon St. The man with baton is Eleazor De Carvalho, head of the Department of Instrumental Music

---

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635

AUG 28 1960

THE WORLD OF MUSIC: BRASILIA

By ALLEN HUGHES

PRESIDENT Juscelino Kubitschek of Brazil, the dynamic instigator of that nation's vital forward surge during the past few years, has decided that a first-class symphony orchestra should be established to meet the cultural needs of the residents in Brasilia, the glittering new inland capital of the country.

Many of the brilliantly beautiful buildings designed for the city by Oscar Neimeyer are still under construction, and the concert hall is yet to be started, but the Brazilian government has authorized an expenditure of approximately $500,000 a year for five years to develop the Brasilia Philharmonic Orchestra, and Eleazar de Carvalho has been called upon to create and conduct it.

A native of Brazil, Mr. Carvalho is intimately acquainted with its musical resources, and he feels that it simply cannot provide enough experts to build an orchestra of international stature. Therefore, he has obtained permission from the Government to import 75 per cent or 72 of the 96 players that are to make up the new musical organization.

It Will Have Orchestra With Many of Its Men Engaged in U. S. A.

Last week, Mr. Carvalho returned to Brazil after spending the summer at Tanglewood, where his own talent was shaped under the tutelage of Serge Koussevitzky, and where he has been a member of the conducting faculty for several years. Before he left, however, he had engaged four clarinetists, four trombonists, and a tuba player for the Brasilia Philharmonic. The nine young instrumentalists were selected from among the ranks of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra.

If all goes according to Mr. Carvalho's wishes, they will be established in Brasilia by the end of the year and ready to begin rehearsals with their colleagues from Europe and South America under the terms of the three-year contracts all will have.

It is not expected that the nine engaged so far will be the only Americans there, for Mr. Carvalho has great respect for the skill and business-like attitude of our orchestra players and would like to have as many of them as he can.

This being the case, expert instrumentalists are hereby notified that full-time positions are still available in the Brasilia Philharmonic, and that application blanks for same can be obtained from Senhora Dora Vasconcelos, Consul General of Brazil, 630 Fifth Avenue, New York 36, N. Y.

Those who write for applications will receive some interesting information with them. They will learn, for example, that the pay for those engaged (ranging roughly from $250 to $400 monthly) will approach that of Brazilian senators. Since this may not convince them of its munificence, they will be further informed that in Brazil they can buy a suit of clothes for $15 and a pair of shoes for $5, that they can go to the theatre (including the opera) for 50 cents and to the movies for a dime. Servants will be available at $20 a month, and the income tax bite will come to only 8 per cent of the total pay.

Instrumentalists who refuse to fly need not apply, for it is expected that some sixty of the orchestra's 100 concerts a year will be played in Rio de Janeiro and in São Paulo, and since distances are vast in Brazil, the trips to these cities will have to be made by air.

TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
D. 36,819

AUG 30 1960

Success Of Other Cities Points To Need Of Summer Music Here

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

The American vacation summer is getting short to the point of extinction. It has been used, employed, enjoyed by millions of our countrymen. And it is now approximately the time to begin planning for the summer which is almost a year ahead.

Summer music ventures do not normally run through a whole summer. Six to seven weeks is generally a full course. And, so far as this summer is concerned, most of the full courses have run out. Some of the statistics which have come to hand are interesting, if not decisive.

The Berkshire Festival which in all constitutes the Boston Orchestra's summer music school and summer concert series, celebrated this year the 25th year since the Boston Orchestra first participated in what was at the time the forerunner concerts which were to lead to the Berkshire Festival, and the 20th anniversary of the founding of the Berkshire Music Center.

Figures Impressive

And, to one who can recall the time when there was no Berkshire Music Center and when what was then roughly designated the Berkshire Festival was of one evening actually deluged in a tent halfway between Lenox and Stockbridge, this summer's figures are impressive.

At Tanglewood during the lately concluded summer season there were presented for public consumption 24 festival concerts, 6 open Boston Orchestra rehearsals to which a nominal admission was charged, one event designated simply A Gala Evening, and one session of the Boston Pops under Arthur Fiedler.

At all these gatherings the total attendance was 173,579 which figure is 6,000 short of last summer's total. However the ticket sales for 1960 mounted up to $385,500. That figure was almost $50,000 larger than the intake in 1959. And the greater income was compounded in spite of the fact that the weather was uncooperative on 12 concert days and that, in some ranges, the ticket prices had been increased. All of it adds up to a big business in music.

The Berkshire undertaking is known to a great many people throughout the country. The summer activities at the Eastman School in Rochester, N.Y., are not equally common knowledge. But they are known to a greater number of music students.

There were 900 students at Eastman this summer as against 286 at the Berkshire Music Center. But also at Eastman 39 public concerts were played during the summer.

And the concerts by the Eastman Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Frederick Fennell, which are played every Thursday night during the summer and which appear to be the backbone of the Eastman summer concert series, drew a capacity audience at every performance and would apparently have been played in each case to a substantially larger audience if the hall which housed them had been larger.

The summer music business is here to stay without doubt and it is growing like mushrooms in season. Not all the ventures are as large or as materially successful as those at Tanglewood and at the Eastman School. And only a few of them were initiated under conditions so advantageous to continued production. But by and large the history of all of them is the same.

Somebody here or elsewhere, like Adolf Busch at Marlboro in Vermont, has started a summer music school or a summer concert series, and the same individual or somebody else has kept it going. The Marlboro undertaking is now administered by Rudolf Serkin. It is noncommercial, non-profitable in the material sense, but it continues and some of the finest music making anywhere is to be encountered every summer in that out of the way hamlet.

All of which is food for some thought for us in Toledo. We need summer music in a more active, concentrated form than any which exists presently. And there appears to be no obstacle in the way of it that cannot be surmounted.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 10 1960

Whitestone

ELECTRONIC CONCERT, the first ever held in the United States, was given at Tanglewood Monday evening under a grant from the Ford Foundation. Here, Luciano Berio, 1960 composer in residence, handles the equipment, which consisted of an Ampex 300 series stereo tape recorder, and which sent the sound through four groups of speakers placed in the Tanglewood theater.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 17 1960

Whitestone

BRAZIL BOUND are these four trombonists of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra who have been engaged by Eleazar de Carvalho, left, to play with the Brasilia Philharmonic Orchestra: left to right, Robert Moore of Camden, N.J., Eugene Watt of Sedalia, Mo., Raymond Turner of Albert Lea, Minn., and James Kidwell of Ada, Okla. Carvalho was commissioned by the Brazilian government to form the orchestra.

tudent Orchestra Trombonists oin Brasilia Philharmonic

TANGLEWOOD — The entire rombone section of the Berkshire usic Center Orchestra has acepted an invitation from Eleazar e Carvalho, head of the departent of instrumental music at the enter, to join the Brasilia Philarmonic Orchestra.

Mr. de Carvalho has been comissioned by the Brazilian governent to find the personnel and reate and mold the philharmonic rchestra for the new capital city.

For a number of years Mr. de arvalho has been head of the stuent orchestra department here. t the outset of each Tanglewood eason, he is given about 100 young usicians, most of whom have ever played together. His task has een to bring them together, place hem at their proper desks and then n five days prepare a concert to e given before a live audience in he Music Shed.

Kept Watchful Eye

When the orchestra assembled this season, Mr. de Carvalho was more than ever watchful for th outstanding musicians within t group, for he knew many empty places had to be filled in the new orchestra in Brazil.

As the season progressed, Mr. de Carvalho had his eyes on the trombone section of his student orchestra. He made them an offer to join the Brasilia Philharmonic, and the accepted as a unit.

The trombonists are Robert Moore of Camden, N.J., Eugene Watt of Sedalia, Mo., Raymond Turner of Albert Lea, Minn. and James Kidwell of Ada, Okla.

TOLEDO, OHIO
TIMES
D. 36,819

AUG 30 1960

Success Of Other Cities Points To Need Of Summer Music Here

By FREDERICK J. KOUNTZ

The American vacation summer is getting short to the point of extinction. It has been used, employed, enjoyed by millions of our countrymen. And it is now approximately the time to begin planning for the summer which is almost a year ahead.

Summer music ventures do not normally run through a whole summer. Six to seven weeks is generally a full course. And, so far as this summer is concerned, most of the full courses have run out. Some of the statistics which have come to hand are interesting, if not decisive.

The Berkshire Festival which in all constitutes the Boston Orchestra's summer music school and summer concert series, celebrated this year the 25th year since the Boston Orchestra first participated in what was at the time the forerunner concerts which were to lead to the Berkshire Festival, and the 20th anniversary of the founding of the Berkshire Music Center.

Figures Impressive

And, to one who can recall the time when there was no Berkshire Music Center and when what was then roughly designated the Berkshire Festival was of one evening actually deluged in a tent halfway between Lenox and Stockbridge, this summer's figures are impressive.

At Tanglewood during the lately concluded summer season there were presented for public consumption 24 festival concerts, 6 open Boston Orchestra rehearsals to which a nominal admission was charged, one event designated simply A Gala Evening, and one session of the Boston Pops under Arthur Fiedler.

At all these gatherings the total attendance was 173,579 which figure is 6,000 short of last summer's total. However the ticket sales for 1960 mounted up to $385,505. That figure was almost $50,000 larger than the intake in 1959. And the greater income was compounded in spite of the fact that the weather was uncooperative on 12 concert days and that, in some ranges, the ticket prices had been increased. All of it adds up to a big business in music.

The Berkshire undertaking is known to a great many people throughout the country. The summer activities at the Eastman School in Rochester, N.Y., are not equally common knowledge. But they are known to a greater number of music students.

There were 900 students at Eastman this summer as against [illegible] at the Berkshire Music Center. But also at Eastman 39 public concerts were played during the summer.

And the concerts by the Eastman Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Frederick Fennell, which are played every Thursday night during the summer and which appear to be the backbone of the Eastman summer concert series, drew a capacity audience at every performance and would apparently have been played in each case to a substantially larger audience if the hall which housed them had been larger.

The summer music business is here to stay without doubt and it is growing like mushrooms in season. Not all the ventures are as large or as materially successful as those at Tanglewood and at the Eastman School. And only a few of them were initiated under conditions so advantageous to continued production. But by and large the history of all of them is the same.

Somebody here or elsewhere, like Adolf Busch at Marlboro in Vermont, has started a summer music school or a summer concert series, and the same individual or somebody else has kept it going. The Marlboro undertaking is now administered by Rudolf Serkin. It is non-commercial, non-profitable in the material sense, but it continues and some of the finest music making anywhere is to be encountered every summer in that out of the way hamlet.

All of which is food for some thought for us in Toledo. We need summer music in a more active, concentrated form than any which exists presently. And there appears to be no obstacle in the way of it that cannot be surmounted.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 17 1960

Whitestone

BRAZIL BOUND are these four trombonists of the Berkshire Music Center Orchestra who have been engaged by Eleazar de Carvalho, left, to play with the Brasilia Philharmonic Orchestra: left to right, Robert Moore of Camden, N.J., Eugene Watt of Sedalia, Mo., Raymond Turner of Albert Lea, Minn., and James Kidwell of Ada, Okla. Carvalho was commissioned by the Brazilian government to form the orchestra.

Student Orchestra Trombonists
oin Brasilia Philharmonic

TANGLEWOOD — The entire rombone section of the Berkshire lusic Center Orchestra has acepted an invitation from Eleazar e Carvalho, head of the departent of instrumental music at the enter, to join the Brasilia Philarmonic Orchestra.

Mr. de Carvalho has been comissioned by the Brazilian governent to find the personnel and reate and mold the philharmonic rchestra for the new capital city.

For a number of years Mr. de arvalho has been head of the stuent orchestra department here. t the outset of each Tanglewood eason, he is given about 100 young usicians, most of whom have ever played together. His task has een to bring them together, place hem at their proper desks and then n five days prepare a concert to e given before a live audience in he Music Shed.

Kept Watchful Eye

When the orchestra assembled this season, Mr. de Carvalho was more than ever watchful for the outstanding musicians within th group, for he knew many empty places had to be filled in the new orchestra in Brazil.

As the season progressed, Mr. de Carvalho had his eyes on the trombone section of his student orchestra. He made them an offer to join the Brasilia Philharmonic, and the accepted as a unit.

The trombonists are Robert Moore of Camden, N.J., Eugene Watt of Sedalia, Mo., Raymond Turner of Albert Lea, Minn. and James Kidwell of Ada, Okla.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
AUG 10 1960

Whitestone

ELECTRONIC CONCERT, the first ever held in the United States, was given at Tanglewood Monday evening under a grant from the Ford Foundation. Here, Luciano Berio, 1960 composer in residence, handles the equipment, which consisted of an Ampex 300-series stereo tape recorder, and which sent the sound through four groups of speakers placed in the Tanglewood theater.

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

BLANK PAGE

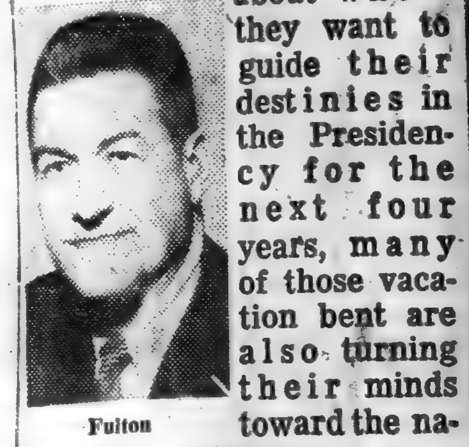
BLANK PAGE

CHICAGO, ILL.
TRIBUNE
D. 883,213 S. 1,199,862
JUN 19 1960

You Can Trace the Birth of U.S. in Boston

Historic Shrines Plentiful

By William Fulton



Fulton

BOSTON—In these days when Americans are thinking about whom they want to guide their destinies in the Presidency for the next four years, many of those vacation bent are also turning their minds toward the nation's early history.

Here, in the heart of Old Boston, the visitor can stroll along "Freedom Trail" and see historic shrines which tell the story of the struggle for independence. Also enshrined here are the beginnings of Boston as a great cultural center.

The Bay state's travel officials say 65 per cent of the queries they receive come from prospective tourists asking about the historic landmarks.

• • •

They also point out that if the weather turns steamy, the vacationers can seek refuge at nearby salt water beaches on Cape Cod, Nantucket, and Martha's Vineyard, or motor westward via the magnificent Massachusetts turnpike to the breezy Berkshires and other mountain scenery.

In downtown Boston 15 historical sites are within leisurely walking distance. Get a map and start out at "point one," the Park Street church where William Lloyd Garrison gave his first anti-slavery address in 1829. The edifice has been long known as "Brimstone Corner," not only because of the fiery sermons by early preachers but because brimstone for gunpowder was stored in its cellar during the war of 1812.

• • •

Next take a look at the State house, built on John Hancock's cow pasture. The "New State house" was erected from 1795 to 1797. A few steps away is quiet Louisburg square where Louisa May Alcott lived and wrote. Not far away is Boston common, where witches and Quakers were hanged on the "old elm," the ancient burial grounds of King's chapel, which obtained its red cushions and vestments from Queen Anne.

For the literary minded there is the "Old Corner Book store," rendezvous for such celebrities as Longfellow, Emerson, Hawthorne, Holmes, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Whittier and Julia Ward Howe.

No one should miss the Old South Meeting house where the outraged colonists held the mass meetings that sparked the revolution, nor the Boston Massacre site, Faneuil hall [cradle of liberty], Old North church where two lanterns were hung to signal Paul Revere that the redcoats were moving on Lexington and Concord, and Revere's house.

The tides no longer lap on Griffin' wharf where the Boston Tea party took place, but the harbor is still there. The U. S. S. Constitution and Bunker hill should be visited. Lexington and Concord, where the revolution started, are only short drives out of Boston.

Train service from New York City to Cape Cod, after a lapse, has been resumed this summer. Cape Cod, whose only other industry is growing cranberries, attracts 85 per cent of its summer residents as tourists from other areas.

There is a mushrooming growth of motels on the cape—not large ones but comfortable hostelries. The old fishing port of Gloucester lost five of its old rocking chair hotels in recent years and these are being replaced by modern motels.

Completion of "Plimouth [old spelling] Plantation," not far from Plymouth Rock where the Pilgrims carved their home out of the wilderness, is nearing.

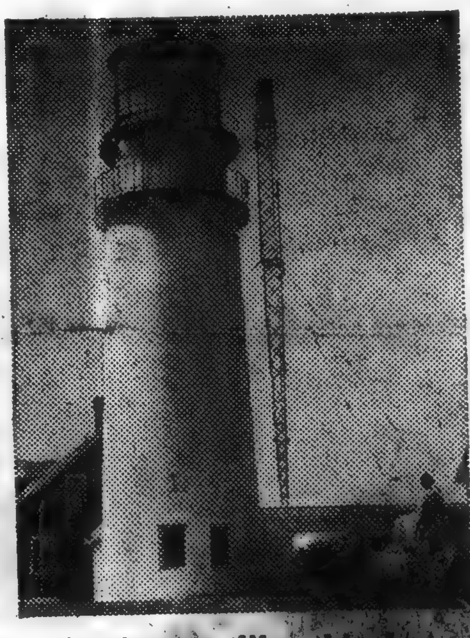
One of the most famous summer events in Massachusetts is the Tanglewood Music festival in the Berkshire mountains in the western part of the state. The Boston Symphony orchestra and the world's leading musicians draw crowds in July and August.

For those who don't have an ear for music, touring thru the beautiful Berkshires is still a treat.

One of the Bay state's growing attractions is Sturbridge village, off the turnpike midway between Boston and the Berkshires. Here the visitor steps into an early New England town. Thirty-five buildings have been moved from various sections of New England and reconstructed on a 200 acre tract of meadow and woodland.

Some of the structures date back to 1735. Here may be seen skilled craftsmen demonstrating early American skills and crafts from weaving on a 200 year old loom to dipping bayberry candles in kettles of hot wax. And for fine eating there is the "Publick house," of gustatory renown.

Each July a unique festival to St. Peter, guardian of the fleet, is held in Gloucester, Mass., one of America's greatest fishing centers.



Lighthouses like this beacon on Cape Cod dot the New England coast.
[United Air Lines Photos]

NEW YORK, N.Y.
WORLD-TELEGRAM & SUN
D. 453,331 SAT. 174,917
JUL 14 1960

Brooklyn SOCIETY

By RUTH G. DAVIS.

MEMBERS OF THE Women's Committee of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and music-loving Brooklynites are looking forward to the annual excursion to the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., July 31. Started four years ago this trip to hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra has become increasingly popular.

Mrs. Andrew L. Gomory of 84 Joralemon St., vice president of the committee, is chairman of the excursion.

Groups of residents are making up parties for this event. Some will travel by private automobile and others will take the excursion, which includes a round trip on the New Haven Railroad, a picnic luncheon on the beautiful Tanglewood grounds and a reserved seat for the concert. Closing date for reservations is Tuesday, July 26.

The orchestra will be conducted by Pierre Monteaux. The program will include Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony and Beethovens' Ninth Symphony.

Ruth G. Davis

NEW YORK, N.Y.
DAILY NEWS
D. 2,026,850 S. 3,332,879
JUL 8 1960

Music Outing

The Brooklyn Academy of Music will sponsor its fourth annual "Sunday at Tanglewood," a special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival, July 31. Heading the trip is Mrs. Andrew L. Gomory, of 84 Joralemon St. Brooklyn.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
DAILY NEWS
D. 2,026,850 S. 3,332,879
JUL 6 1960

Tanglewood Excursion

An all-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Mass., will be conducted July 31 by the Brooklyn Academy of Music. Those taking the trip will hear the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Pierre Monteux in Beethoven's Ninth and Mozart's "Haffner" Symphonies. Reservations including train transportation, luncheon and concert tickets are available at the Academy, 30 Lafayette Ave. Mrs. Andrew L. Gomory of 84 Joralemon St. is chairman of the "Sunday at Tanglewood."

---

ter, is announced.

Globe 6/27/60

What's Proper

Wardrobe Tips For Tanglewood

Q—We are new in this area and plan to go to Tanglewood. What sort of clothes are worn there? Thank you so much! It's a great help to have someone knowledgeable to ask.—Mrs. P. M., Stoneham.

A—You give me something to live up to! At Tanglewood, you'll find everything from blue jeans up, but most people wear just pretty Summer dresses, cool and comfortable, and take along a sweater, just in case. Also —do wear comfortable shoes. Theres' a good deal of walking to do. You are in for a great treat— you want your clothes to feel easy enough so they won't distract you. A "for instance"—full skirts are apt to be more adapted to strolling and sitting on the grass than tight ones—ELIZABETH BERNKOPF.

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
BAY NEWS
W. 11,909
JUL 9 1960

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
KINGS COURIER
W. 15,719
JUL 9 1960

Academy Of Music Sponsors Excursion To Berkshire Festival

The Brooklyn Academy of Music will sponsor it fourth annual "Sunday at Tanglewood" a special one-day excursion to the Berkshire Festival on Sunday, July 31st.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra, which recently returned from a Far Eastern tour under the auspices of President Eisenhower's International Exchange Program for Cultural Presentations, will be conducted by Pierre Monteux, the beloved octogenarian. The program of July 31, chosen by The Brooklyn Academy of Music because of its unusual interest, includes Mozart's "Haffner" Symphony (No. 35 in D Major, K. 385) and Beethoven's Ninth, the Choral Symphony.

Under the non-profit sponsorship of The Brooklyn Academy of Music, the "Sunday at Tanglewood" excursion costs only twelve dollars ($12.00) for adults and ten dollars ($10.00) for children, including round-trip transportation on the New Haven Railroad, a luncheon and a weather-protected reserved seat under the Music Shed. Should the concert-goer wish to obtain a better seat location, he may apply $3.00 of the $12.00 "package price" toward locations at $3.50, $4.00, $4.50, $5.50 and $6.00. Brooklyn Academy members for hte 1960-61 season tre entitled to a reduction of $1.00 on their reservations, making the price $11.00 for adults and $9.00 for children. The "Sunday at Tanglewood" Special leaves Grand Central Terminal on Sunday, July 31, at 8:29 a.m. (EST), returning at 10:12 p.m. Reservations may be made through the Brooklyn Academy of Music, 30 Lafayette Avenue, Brooklyn 17, (STerling 3-6700).

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 9 - 1960

Why Tanglewood Isn't Buggy

By RICHARD HAPPEL

Tasue

Superintendent Kiley at work in Tanglewood attic

Except for the loyalty and diligence of the silent partners at Tanglewood, Berkshire Festival evening programs might be as much a torment as a pleasure.

These partners go into action at dusk, make no audible sound to disturb the music-lovers and others, and unless you are especially watching you aren't aware they even exist. They arrive in the spring, ahead of the artists and customers, and leave with cold weather. The Boston Symphony Orchestra management appreciates their long years of loyalty, and shows it by spring-cleaning their quarters each year.

* * *

This is not arduous; simply airing out the place and shoveling up some two bushels of droppings. And don't look with such disapproval on these untidy allies. They can't help it. They're Tanglewood bats.

James Kiley, grounds superintendent, says for as long as he remembers, which is 12 years, the bats have lived in Tanglewood's old, gray mansion. Actually, they date much earlier. All day they hide in the fourth-floor attic, dark as a cave, and airless. This is no figure of speech. He took us up there.

The last flight of stairs is steep as a ladder, with a solid door at the top, and well that it is solid. When we stepped inside, crouching down because of the low ceiling and rafters, a faint, sickly, musty odor that goes with bats-in-residence hit us gently at first, then overpoweringly. It stayed with us for hours, and didn't help much at lunchtime.

* * *

Crunching over the gravelly droppings on the floor, we followed in crouch, to a low rafter where Mr. Kiley's flashlight picked out a cluster of bats packed tightly into the angle with the ceiling. They squirmed uneasily in the light, emitting almost inaudible squeals of protest.

Throughout the attic there probably were hundreds, if not thousands, of them, but we had seen and smelled enough. Back in the fresh air, Mr. Kiley told us he often watched at dusk from in front of the mansion, as the little creatures emerged from under the eaves in twos, threes and more, in an endless parade.

How they get in and out is a mystery, as the attic is perfectly weatherproof. Bat men say, however, they can squeeze through the tiniest openings that defy even a driving storm. Once in the open, the Tanglewood bats go to work, gobbling up bugs, principally mosquitoes, at a prodigous rate.

* * *

The late Arthur Palme of Pittsfield, several years ago made a study of these bats, and presented some scientific facts to boot. Four zoologists from Harvard, as well as Berkshire author Clay Perry accompanied him, and they estimated there were at least 10,000 bats nested there then. Mr. Kiley was unable to guess the number when we went up, but our nose-count indicated at least that many.

It's a matter of record, according to Mr. Palme's report, that a bat gobbles up its own weight in bugs every night. If it dines exclusively on mosquitoes, it figures to 80,000 per bat. One can readily see why these silent workers are so popular with the management, and this is no reflection on the mosquito control project which sends a spray truck through the grounds once a week. It might be fitting and proper for the Boston Orchestra to play at least one number from "Die Fledermaus" each season in tribute.

But even though the bats have made Tanglewood one of the few outdoor music festivals free of pesky mosquitoes, they are not, as a class, popular with people. The management has never given them any publicity, even though the customers have nothing to fear from the little creatures. They shun light and the Shed like poison. Perhaps they don't like music. Almost never have they been noticed in action. Silently, unobtrusively, they keep the area swept clean of mosquitoes, which breed like crazy in the moist, lush grounds.

* * *

Where they go in winter, nobody knows. Bats are a funny lot. Bartlett Hendricks, science curator of the Berkshire Museum, assures us that they cannot winter in the old attic, since the fierce cold would do them in. Some bats migrate south with the birds, others find a cozy cave and hibernate, but whether the decision is made according to species or by inherited instincts of a group, is an unsolved question. The important point about Tanglewood bats is that they always return in the spring.

One of the last chores in readying Tanglewood for the season is to open the attic skylight, and shovel up the two bushels of droppings. Then the bats are snugged in for the summer.

And about those droppings. They make wonderful fertilizer for the gardens. Could anyone ask more from a partner, silent or otherwise?

NEW YORK, N.Y.
MIRROR
D. 847,979 S. 1,275,193

JUL 10 1960

MOTOR TOURS

Berkshires Tops the List

By GENE GRAF

PITTSFIELD, Mass.—If I were pinned down to name the Summer area offering the widest variety of attractions for New York City vacationers, my first vote would probably go to the Berkshires.

After rattling around these scenic rolling hills for a few days, I am amazed at the mixture of sports and symphonies, culture and comfort that can be turned up here in western Massachusetts. No matter what your taste is, unless it's for salt-water bathing, it can be satisfied here.

THE MOST publicized local activity of course, is the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood in nearby Lenox. The 1960 Festival began just this last week and will continue through Aug. 14, with the Boston Symphony Orchestra and other musical groups offering varied programs.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 11 1960

Two Pool Pieces at Tanglewood

LENOX—For many years during the Berkshire Festival season, the Tanglewood formal gardens have been the showplace of contemporary sculpture by artists of the Berkshire area.

Throughout the current season two pool pieces, one of brass, the other of steel, recently completed by Homer Gunn, will be at the small pools within the garden. Gunn has previously exhibited work at Tanglewood, and his "Horses" may be seen at the main gate.

A resident of Richmond, Gunn will have other sculpture on exhibition early in August in the Lenox library, at Peggy Best's studio, Stockbridge, and as a part of the Independent Six Group in the Glass House at the main gate, Tanglewood.

Gunn also is represented in the Lenox Gallery and the Close Gallery in New York City.

* * *

SONNTAGSBLATT STAATS-ZEITUNG UND HEROLD, DEN 10. JULI 1960

MUSIKTEMPEL IM FREIEN: Eine Luftaufnahme des Waldgeländes von Tanglewood während eines Symphoniekonzertes. Vor dem Haupteingang die vollbesetzten Parkplätze; hinter dem Festspielhaus, das 8000 Personen faßt, sitzen und liegen im Gras viele, die keinen Sitzplatz mehr bekamen. Im Hintergrund der reservierte Parkplatz für Logenbesitzer.

Zum Beginn des Berkshire Music-Festivals:

Musik und Natur in einer idealen Kombination: Das ist Tanglewood

Von EGON STADELMAN

Auf den großen Landkarten der amerikanischen Nordost-Staaten, in Reiseführern und Fahrplänen von Eisenbahnen und Fern-Autobussen mag diese Ortschaft nüchtern und sachlich Tanglewood heißen. Für Millionen musikfreudiger Menschen ist diese Ortsbezeichnung seit langem nicht mehr eine geographische Bezeichnung, sondern ein kultureller Begriff. Viele nennen Tanglewood, das während der Sommermonate aus einem Dornröschen-Dasein zu dem großen und bunten Erlebnis der Musik der Meister vergangener und unserer Tage erwacht, das "Salzburg der Vereinigten Staaten".

Ob dieser Vergleich nun in allen Einzelheiten zutrifft — wir zum Beispiel sind der Ansicht, daß Salzburg mit seiner immerhin städtischen Erscheinung, mit seinen eleganten Hotels und Restaurants, mit seinen Kaffeehäusern und Geschäften einen völlig anderen Eindruck vermittelt — spielt kaum eine Rolle. Wichtig allein ist, daß hier in einer der lieblichsten Gegenden des amerikanischen Ostens ein neuer Sammelpunkt für Musikfreunde der ganzen Welt geschaffen worden ist, eine Stätte der Erbauung, die zugleich für hunderte junger Künstler und Musik-Studenten eine Stätte des Lernens ist.

*

Im Lauf der vergangenen Woche haben die Berkshire Music-Festivals — wie die Tanglewood Konzerte offiziell genannt werden — wieder begonnen, und wer gestern abend seinen Radio-Apparat auf WQXR eingestellt hatte, hörte die erste Übertragung aus dem Festspielhaus — einem Holzbau mit flachem Dach, in Form eines Dreiecks prachtvoll auf einen von Wiesen umgebenen Hügel gesetzt. Es faßt rund 6000 Personen. Sein flaches Dach ruht auf schlanken Säulen.

Die Seiten des Dreiecks sind offen, und nur an seiner Spitze, wo das Orchester-Podium steht, findet sich eine solide Holzwand. Die belebende Luft der umliegenden Wälder und Berge strömt in dieses schönste Dreieck moderner Architektur und die Musik zieht ungehindert aus der Halle über die Wiesen, Hügel und Wälder von Tanglewood.

Das ist der Zauber Tanglewoods, der alljährlich mehr und mehr Menschen in seinen Bann zieht. 6000 Besucher mögen in dem Festspielhaus sitzen und sich der Konzerte erfreuen, die von dem Boston Symphonie-Orchester und von weltbekannten Solisten dort gegeben werden. Viele mehr — oft sind diese Abende von über 20,000 Personen besucht — genießen eine einzigartige Kombination von Musik und Natur, die Tanglewood bietet.

Sie sitzen gegen die Bäume gelehnt oder auf mitgebrachten Decken und sehen in der Ferne Hügelketten, die in das leuchtende Rot einer Abendsonne getaucht sind, sie blicken über Laubwälder, die unendlich zu sein scheinen, und Bergseen, die glitzern und funkeln wie Diamanten.

Wenn all das in der samtenen Abenddämmerung versunken ist und die Konzerte beginnen, haben sie über sich die Sterne, deren milder Schein sich in den Seen im Tale spiegelt, oder einen Mond, der schwer und voll über den Hügeln hängt. Und kein störender Laut mischt sich in die Musik. Man hört nur das Rauschen des Abendwindes in den Blättern, mitunter vielleicht den Schrei eines Nachtvogels oder das leise, heimliche Zirpen einer Grille. Ganz selten, jenseits der Berge, glaubt man vielleicht ein gedämpftes, fernes Summen eines hochfliegenden Flugzeuges zu hören, das an Menschen und Städte, an unsere Zeit und an ihr Tempo erinnert.

Dann wird es wieder still. Beethoven und Mozart regieren wieder in den Hügeln von Massachusetts, und die Wirklichkeit, das Heute ist fern.

*

Ein Märchen? Vielleicht! Denn selbst die Geschichte, wie Tanglewood zu seinem Namen kam, liest sich wie ein Märchen. Vor hundert Jahren erwarb der Dichter Nathaniel Hawthorne ein Stück Land mit einem kleinen Häuschen in den Berkshire-Hügeln. Er liebte diesen Platz. Hier schrieb er seine besten Novellen, in denen er die Landschaft mit glühenden Worten beschrieb. "Tanglewood" nannte er diese Landschaft in seinen Werken. Und später wurde dieser von einem Dichter ersonnene Name in die Wirklichkeit übernommen.

Aber das war nicht das Ende des Märchens. Der "Es-war-einmal"-Zauber war noch nicht gebrochen. Im Januar 1936 wohnte eine der Erbinnen des Tanglewood-Besitzes einem der Konzerte des Boston Symphonie-Orchesters bei. Seit zwei Jahren schon hatten in den Berkshires Kammermusikkonzerte, gelegentlich auch Orchesterkonzerte, stattgefunden, und die Dame, die jetzt nachdenklich in Boston saß und Serge Koussevitzky und dem Orchester lauschte, hatte diese Konzerte stets gefördert.

Nun kam ihr eine glänzende Idee: Warum das romantische Gut Tanglewood nicht dem Bostoner Symphonie-Orchester zur Verfügung stellen, so daß es regelmäßige Sommer-Konzerte geben könne?

Aus der Idee wurde Wirklichkeit. Acht Monate später, am 5. August 1936, dirigierte Koussevitzky das erste Konzert auf dem Hügel von Tanglewood, der nun einen neuen Besitzer hatte: Das Bostoner Symphonie-Orchester. Es war ein Beethoven-Konzert. Die 3. Leonoren-Ouvertüre wurde gespielt, die Sechste Symphonie und die "Fünfte". Zwei weitere Programme folgten — begeistert aufgenommen von dem Publikum, das durch bewundernde Zeitungsberichte angelockt, zu Tausenden kam.

Das vierte Programm jenes Jahres 1936 war Richard Wagner gewidmet. Es war ein Programm, das nie zu Ende gespielt wurde: Ein gewaltiges Sommergewitter zog unversehens auf, und das offene Zelt, in dem das Orchester saß, flog in dem plötzlichen Sturmwind fast davon. Peitschender Regen schlug Orchester-Mitglieder und Publikum in gemeinsame unrühmliche Flucht. Als alles vorüber war, erklärte Serge Koussevitzky, daß er nie wieder ein Musikfest in Taglewood leiten würde, solange nur ein Stück Zeltleinwand zwischen seinem Orchester und einer Katastrophe stehen würde.

Aber die freundliche Märchen-Fee, die über dem Hügel von Tanglewood zu walten schien, ließ sich durch ein Gewitter — schwer und wagnerisch wie es gewesen sein mag — nicht vertreiben: Innerhalb einer Woche waren von Musikfreunden, die von der Tanglewood-Idee begeistert waren, 80,000 Dollar aufgebracht worden, ein Architekt wurde mit dem Bau einer Halle — die wir eingangs beschrieben haben — beauftragt, und pünktlich, wie vorgesehen, begann im Juli 1937 das Tanglewood-Festival in der neuen Halle. Bachs Kantate "Ein' feste Burg" leitete das Programm ein, gefolgt von Beethovens Neunter Symphonie. Und selten war wohl die Bedeutung der Schiller-Worte klarer: Das waren in der Tat andere Töne und freudenvollere.

*

38,000 Besucher kamen in den Festspielwochen 1937. Seither sind es Sommer um Sommer mehr geworden, und in diesem Jahr, dessen Saison in den Berkshires nun begonnen hat, dürften mehrere Hunderttausend die beglückende Pilgerfahrt nach Tanglewood antreten. Zahllose andere werden die Konzerte durch die Radioübertragungen hören. Tanglewood, vor knapp 25 Jahren noch ein unbekannter Flecken Erde, ist heute eines der großen und bedeutenden Kulturzentren der Vereinigten Staaten geworden. Die Konzerte, die dort veranstaltet werden, haben sich Weltruf verschafft.

Und nicht nur die Konzerte. Auch die Musikschule, die den Festspielen im Jahre 1940 angegliedert wurde. Der Gedanke, der zur Gründung dieser Schule führte, war einfach und logisch: Man hatte zwei Monate ein berühmtes Orchester zur Verfügung. Damit allein ist der ideale Stamm einer Musikfakultät gegeben. Außerdem wurden junge Komponisten nach Tanglewood eingeladen, um dort ihre sogenannten Meisterklassen zu geben, eine intime, fast ideale kleine Opernbühne wurde geschaffen und bietet jungen Musikstudenten eine einzigartige Gelegenheit zu theoretischer und praktischer Arbeit, Anregung, Gedankenaustausch, geistiger und musikalischer Fortbildung. Die jungen Menschen, die an diesen Sommerkursen teilnehmen, tragen das, was sie hier lernen, hinaus in die Welt; und so bleibt Tanglewood nicht nur in den Sommermonaten lebendig.

Und das scheint mir eine Bedeutung zu sein, die noch weit über die Freude und den Genuß hinausgeht, in der magischen Landschaft der Berkshires die Musik der Meister meisterhaft gespielt hören zu können. Tanglewood ist heute auch das Zentrum ernster musikalischer Arbeit geworden — musikalischer Arbeit; deren Früchte wir erst in den kommenden Jahren ernten werden.

Es ist ein Sammelpunkt neuer Kräfte, ein lebendiger Quell. Kein Märchen mehr — sondern Wirklichkeit.

BACKFISCH-SCHWÄRMEREI: Sonja Ziemann, eine der begabtesten der jungen deutschen Schauspielerinnen in der Rolle einer bis über beide Ohren verliebten Siebzehnjährigen in dem neuen Film "Mit 17 beginnt das Leben . . ." der in dieser Woche im Casino-Theater in der 86. Str. läuft . . . Glückliches Objekt dieses Schwarms: Paul Hubschmid . . .

BROOKLYN, N.Y.
FLATBUSH LIFE
W. 13,000

JUL 23 1960

places to go... things to do

Beethoven fans will be flocking to the Berkshire Music Festival this weekend and next, as some of the master's greatest works are on the program to be played by the Boston Symphony. Tonight at 8:30, his Piano Concerto No. 5 (The Emperor Concerto) is the featured work, with Claudio Arrau as soloist. Two other popular program pieces share the spotlight on tonight's program – Respighi's "Fountains of Rome", and "Till Eulenspiegel," by Strauss.

Tomorrow, Sunday, Beethoven's Symphony No. 5 will be played in the Music Shed at Tanglewood; the other featured work on the 2:30 program is Mendelsohn's Violin Concerto.

Next weekend, Beethoven's heroic Ninth Symphony will be played on Sunday under the baton of Pierre Monteux. On Saturday night, Ravel's "Daphne and Chloe" Suite No. 2; Piston's Symphony No. 6; and the "Symphony Fantastique" by Berlioz will be conducted by Charles Munch.

The concert series comes to an end two weeks after next weekend, so if you've been putting off making the short trip to this musical paradise, delay no longer!

LOCKPORT, N.Y.
UNION-SUN JOURNAL
D. 12,107

JUL 23 1960

WICHITA, KANS.
EAGLE
D. 105,018 S. 123,453

JUL 24 1960

Travelers' Quiz

Q. Because of their interest in music, I would like to take my family to a music festival during our vacation in New England this summer. I understand there is one at Tanglewood—which I believe is either in Connecticut or Massachusetts. Could you tell me where I can get information on this?

A. The Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass., will be held from now through Aug. 14. Performances are on Friday and Saturday nights at 8:30 and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. Tickets are from $2.50 to $6.50 per person. Unfortunately, all hotels and motels are booked, but private home accommodations are available. Reservation requests may be submitted to Berkshire Hill Conference, Pittsfield, Mass.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 16 1960

Why Tanglewood's Turf Isn't Tangled

Tague

SECRETS of Tanglewood's untangled, velvety lawns rests in the mowers pulled ahead of the tractor, shown here with James Kiley, grounds superintendent, who designed the forward boom. Ordinary mowers pulled behind tractor leave uncut ribbons of grass, pressed down by big wheels, which spring back later to give unsightly appearance. Tractor modifications cost $200, more than repaid in few mowings, and use of heavier tractor which completes job in half a day, rather than former two days.

CLEVELAND, OHIO
SUN-PRESS
W. 44,777

JUL 21 1960

American Modern Music Fails In Europe

The American export business isn't doing so well this summer, at least as far as modern music is concerned. This comes as a surprise, when new works by Asians and Europeans are being featured on summer music festivals all over America. Out of 23 of Europe's major music festivals, from Helsinki to Athens, only two are presenting American music. Chamber works of Aaron Copland and Walter Piston will be performed at Edinburgh, and a String Quartet of Elliott Carter will be heard in Venice. But that's about all.

Here in America, festival rosters are filled to the brim with new (and sometimes unpronouncible) names of composers who are the recipients of America's "world neighbor" policy. For example, the Guggenheim Band Concerts in New York are putting on works by Boris Blacher of Germany and Ikuma Dan of Japan. The Empire State Festival at Bear Mountain, New York, is slating operas by Czechoslovakia's Janacek and Italy's Pizzetti (a repeat of his Murder in the Cathedral) and a symphony by Russia's Khatchaturian if it is completed in time.

Tanglewood, one of America's most influential music festivals, located in the Berkshires, will perform Dutilleux's Second Symphony (France), Khrennikov's First Symphony (U.S.S.R.) and a host of modern classics by Stravinsky (Russia), Sibelius (Finland), Respighi (Italy), and Vaughn Williams (England). Guest composer at Tanglewood this summer is 35-year-old Italian Luciano Berio, a leading exponent of electronic music, who is giving some lecture-recitals there. This is only a sampling of a vast number of festivals being given throughout the country. And not listed are the names of many Americans who are represented on these programs.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUL 29 1960

There's Spice In Variety

The Berkshire Festival has long since settled down to the status of a tradition. It took a surprisingly short time for this to happen, for the great Music Shed is still relatively new, and the building, students, and work of the Music Center, which is Tanglewood's summer school, are anything but hoary.

Nevertheless, the heart of the Tanglewood season so far as the general public is concerned, the series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Dr. Charles Munch, draws an increasingly wide and loud chorus of sneers from the musical cognoscenti, because the programs stick so closely to the standard classical repertoire.

This is a criticism that the Boston Symphony hears at home in Boston as well as at Lenox. It is an understandable one, for those who listen to symphony music a great deal may rightly ask a great orchestra to give them more variety from the library of symphonic music and more of contemporary work. How else can continued [illegible] encouraged?

On the other hand, concert goers who hear a full symphony, live, only three or four times a year hardly get sick of Beethoven's symphonies, and the favorite works of Mozart, Brahms, Wagner, Strauss and company. This is what they want to hear the Boston Symphony play.

It does seem that the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzsky was trying to strike a middle course at Tanglewood when he introduced contemporary music in sometimes startling juxtaposition to the old masters. And while we on the whole champion the people who prefer not to have the Boston Symphony fool around on the one or two occasions a year when they can hear it, there is much to be said for putting the Pines of Rome on the shelf for a few seasons.

We have heard a tremendously moving [illegible] Requiem at Tanglewood this year, and surely the fact that it had never been heard there before added rather than detracted from its effectiveness. Can't we have Beethoven's Ninth, as usual, and something less frequently heard, too?

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 16 1960

Why Tanglewood's Turf Isn't Tangled

[illegible]

SECRETS of Tanglewood's untangled, velvety lawns rests in the mowers pulled ahead of the tractor, shown here with James Kiley, grounds superintendent, who designed the forward boom. Ordinary mowers pulled behind tractor leave uncut ribbons of grass, pressed down by big wheels, which spring back later to give unsightly appearance. Tractor modifications cost $200, more than repaid in few mowings, and use of heavier tractor which completes job in half a day, rather than former two days.

CLEVELAND, OHIO
SUN-PRESS
W. 44,777

JUL 21 1960

American Modern Music Fails In Europe

The American export business isn't doing so well this summer, at least as far as modern music is concerned. This comes as a surprise, when new works by Asians and Europeans are being featured on summer music festivals all over America. Out of 23 of Europe's major music festivals, from Helsinki to Athens, only two are presenting American music. Chamber works of Aaron Copland and Walter Piston will be performed at Edinburgh, and a String Quartet of Elliott Carter will be heard in Venice. But that's about all.

Here in America, festival rosters are filled to the brim with new (and sometimes unpronouncible) names of composers who are the recipients of America's "world neighbor" policy. For example, the Guggenheim Band Concerts in New York are putting on works by Boris Blacher of Germany and Ikuma Dan of Japan. The Empire State Festival at Bear Mountain, New York, is slating operas by Czechoslovakia's Janacek and Italy's Pizzetti (a repeat of his Murder in the Cathedral) and a symphony by Russia's Khatchaturian if it is completed in time.

Tanglewood, one of America's most influential music festivals, located in the Berkshires, will perform Dutilleux's Second Symphony (France), Khrennikov's First Symphony (U.S.S.R.) and a host of modern classics by Stravinsky (Russia), Sibelius (Finland), Respighi (Italy), and Vaughn Williams (England). Guest composer at Tanglewood this summer is 35-year-old Italian Luciano Berio, a leading exponent of electronic music, who is giving some lecture-recitals there. This is only a sampling of a vast number of festivals being given throughout the country. And not listed are the names of many Americans who are represented on these programs.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

JUL 29 1960

There's Spice In Variety

The Berkshire Festival has long since settled down to the status of a tradition. It took a surprisingly short time for this to happen, for the great Music Shed is still relatively new, and the building, students, and work of the Music Center, which is Tanglewood's summer school, are anything but hoary.

Nevertheless, the heart of the Tanglewood season, so far as the general public is concerned, the series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of Dr. Charles Munch, draws an increasingly wide and loud chorus of sneers from the musical cognoscenti, because the programs stick so closely to the standard classical repertoire.

This is a criticism that the Boston Symphony hears at home in Boston as well as at Lenox. It is an understandable one, for those who listen to symphony music a great deal may rightly ask a great orchestra to give them more variety from the library of symphonic music and more of contemporary work. How else can [illegible] musical [illegible] be [illegible]?

On the other hand, concert goers who hear a full symphony live, only three or four times a year hardly get sick of Beethoven's symphonies, and the favorite works of Mozart, Brahms, Wagner, Strauss and company. This is what they want to hear the Boston Symphony play.

It does seem that the late Dr. Serge Koussevitzky was trying to strike a middle course at Tanglewood when he introduced contemporary music in sometimes startling juxtaposition to the old masters. And while we on the whole champion the people who prefer not to have the Boston Symphony fool around on the one or two occasions a year when they can hear it, there is much to be said for putting the Pines of Rome on the shelf for a few seasons.

We have heard a tremendously moving Faure Requiem at Tanglewood this year, and surely the fact that it had never been heard there before added rather than detracted from its effectiveness. Can't we have Beethoven's Ninth, as usual, and something less frequently heard, too?

227

HOUSTON, TEXAS
CHRONICLE
D. 195,448 S. 218,587
JUL 17 1960

THE SPOTLIGHT

Tanglewood: The Horns Shipped Water for $100,000

BY ANN HOLMES
Fine Arts Editor

LENOX, Mass.—Twilight tarries long over the green, rolling Berkshire Hills, so that it is still quite bright outside as the crowds move into the large fan-shaped Music Shed to hear Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra open the Tanglewood Music Festival's season of major events.

People have come from miles around, dressed for comfort, to sit either in the 6000 chairs under the permanently covered shed, or to loll on blankets on the grass at the rear and to listen to the luminous tones of one of the world's great orchestras while looking up at the stars. The moon was out, too, for this first concert, and the young listeners seemed eager to enjoy nature as well as the music.

Back From Tour

Just back from a highly successful eight-week tour of the Orient, the orchestra and its conductor, Charles Munch, immediately went into the busy summer program. While many in the orchestra remained in Boston to play the free esplanade concerts in the shell beside the Charles River, a 30-man ensemble, including many first chairs, came up to Lenox to play the first of three Bach programs.

Acoustics are notably fine in this wide open building, erected in 1938 from a design by the late celebrated architect, Eliel Saarinen. And last year, a new acoustic shell was placed behind the orchestra with excellent reflective results. Overhead, a linkage of black triangular acoustical reflector panels seems to wing away like a flight of Brancusi bats.

First Time

This year for the first time, the smaller Bach orchestra sat enclosed by a dark red inner screen which, in effect, makes the stage smaller.

The sound came pouring out from that keenly disciplined band like pure gold. Such perfection of tone is thrilling any time, and to hear it in a setting so idyllic even heightens the pleasure. I suspect the ensemble never looked more opulently handsome, either, in their white coats, sitting upon their broadly curved stage, making music against a deep red background. It was a striking picture.

Munch, his shoulders very broad in his white jacket, lifted his baton, threw back his white-thatched head and the Bach Suite No. 1 in C Major was begun, a string of pieces in classic dance rhythms delivered with polish and great style. William Kroll, violinist, joined the orchestra for the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major and, after intermission, Seymour Lipkin appeared to play a bright piano in the Concerto for Clavier No. 5. A charming three-way concerto for clavier, flute and violin brought the two soloists and flutist James Pappoutsakis of the orchestra to the stage front in a vivid series of exchanges, brilliant against that marvelous molten tone of the whole ensemble.

This was a memorable evening in any music lover's life, but just one of the 18 concerts to be given by the orchestra on these gorgeously tended green acres this summer.

Satisfying

The Tanglewood Festival is easily one of America's most satisfying cultural achievements. Since 1936 the Boston Symphony has been giving concerts here at festival time. Actually the festival idea was that of a New York conductor named Henry Hadley, and was immediately taken up by music lovers and merchants of the Berkshire area. To make the festival a palpable reality required the tireless efforts of numerous generous summer residents of the area and response to frequent requests for money as the festival grew was inevitably gratifying.

The festival first took place on a farm near here, not the present location, and during a concert being played in a tent in 1937 the heavens opened up, thunder boomed and water poured in upon the devoted music lovers. Serge Koussevitzky, conducting, was forced to stop his orchestra. Even the jovian sounds of the Wagner being played could not compete with the fury outside. The French horns began to ship water, and a prominent patron stepped forth. She declared that it was obvious the festival concerts would have to be played under a permanent roof. A drive for $100,000 to build such a shed was begun on the spot, and the storm in later years came to be known as "The $100,000 Storm."

Not Smooth

Things were not always smooth between the Berkshire Festival committee which ran the festival, and their orchestra from Boston. In time it became clear that the orchestra could not be the servant of two masters, and the interests of the Berkshire Festival, Inc. were given over to the Boston Symphony.

Today the festival is one of the many activities of the Boston Symphony, and is supervised by its friendly, efficient manager, Thomas Perry, Jr., who sat under a tree with me on a July afternoon, looked out over the 200-acre estate given to the Boston Symphony for its summer festival, and told me how it all worked.

Down below, the light shone on Lake Mahkeenac, where the students of the Berkshire Music Center, operating simultaneously at Tanglewood, have boating privileges. The breeze stirred the pines and the hemlocks around us. Students strolled by with violins in cases; opera students from Boris Goldovsky's Opera Workshop, a part of the school; strode along in joyous full voice.

Music Shed

Over in the Music Shed where Munch would begin the summer concerts that night, pianist Seymour Lipkin was trying out the piano that had just been tuned for him. In the 1200-seat dark brown Music Theater on the other end of the grounds, the doors were shut tight on an opera rehearsal. Overhead the great arching girders of another Eliel Saarinen building, created an interesting architectural effect.

Down a winding path in the little dark brown Saarinen chamber music shed, Aaron Copland was talking to the students about contemporary music, and an ensemble, paid for by the Fromm Foundation in Chicago, played new music.

Music issued from the practice rooms in the great hulking gray Victorian house which formed the heart of this vast estate and is now both student center and honeycomb of practice rooms.

Over the hills, five miles away, in Richmond, lives Munch, the much admired Alsatian who succeeded Koussevitzky at the great podium of the Boston Symphony. I gather that the spirit of Munch has not yet made its way into all the corners of this festival ground, as the Koussevitzky legend walks unchallenged.

Amazing

What an amazingly large operation all this is! The Tanglewood Festival itself has continued to grow. One night 16,000 persons came to a single concert. Last year, 182,000 people came to the concerts during the six-week period, and brought in $35,000 at the ticket gates. Still, the festival is a deficit operation, and as it it not a separate artistic or financial entity, but rather a part of the big Boston Symphony $2,000,000 annual operation, its bills are paid from other funds.

The Berkshire Music Center which has around 300 selected students for ensemble work under the fine soloists of the Boston orchestra and other top artists makes the festival atmosphere a working one and lively. Leonard Bernstein is doubtless the most famous of the alumni, but many of them are in significant spots as assistant conductors and concert masters in orchestras around America.

Whole Story

The whole story of Tanglewood and its sister activity, the music center, is one of determination on the part of interested patrons, and men like Koussevitzky. Contributions have been extraordinary, beginning with the gift of the great historical Tanglewood estate itself where Hawthorne wrote "Tanglewood Tales" and began "The House of Seven Gables." Today there are lists of scholarships and foundations which make the whole thing possible. The single most ardent supporter of the festival from the start was a Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, who gave time, energy and money again and again to keep the festival going in the first years. A bronze plaque in the Music Shed hails her today, and conjures in the minds of many, the image of that day in 1937 when they had the $100,000 storm, a blessing in disguise that forced the festival into the permanent setting, in which it is glamorously to be found today.

AT TANGLEWOOD MUSIC SHED, LENOX, MASS.
Crowds Gather for Music in Glamorous Setting

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 31 1960

Brazil Newsmen Attend Concert At Tanglewood

STOCKBRIDGE — A delegation of six Brazilian editors and publishers, accompanied by a State Department interpreter are registered at the Red Lion Inn for the week end. They attended the Tanglewood concert Saturday night, and earlier in the day visited with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, many of whom have played in Brazil at one time or another.

The visit to the Berkshire was arranged by John F. Downing of the Berkshire Hills Conference and Lawrence J. Flynn promotion director of Massachusetts Department of Commerce.

The Brazilians are in the United States studying the North American system of communications, including newspapers, radio and television, under the direction of the leaders program of the State Department. There will be seven stops on the country wide tour. The Tanglewood appearance is the only one in New England.

They were interviewed over the Voice of America from Tanglewood during the day and met with others in the communication fields giving general comments on Brazil and their part in the economy. They will be at Tanglewood again today.

Those who make up the party are Olmio Barros Vidal, Rubens Ulhoa Cintra, Fransisca Braga Sobrinho, Aloisius R. Schneider, Milton Hernandes and Mario Erbolato. With them is a State Department interpreter, Roland Enos.

Belgium has 7,000 miles of railroads.

New Englander
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 12,558

AUG 1960

Wider Range

The Tanglewood Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., has outgrown its beginnings.

This year for the first time [illegible] concerts of the Bach and Mozart week-ends were given in the 6,000 seat Music Shed instead of the 1,200 seat Theatre Concert Hall.

To improve the [illegible] Shed setting for the intimate programs played by the reduced 40-member orchestra, a new portable stage enclosure was built consisting of 28 triangular plywood panels.

The festival opened last month with Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

HOUSTON, TEXAS
CHRONICLE
D. 195,448 S. 248,587
JUL 17 1960

THE SPOTLIGHT

Tanglewood: The Horns Shipped Water for $100,000

BY ANN HOLMES
Fine Arts Editor

LENOX, Mass.—Twilight tarries long over the green, rolling Berkshire Hills, so that it is still quite bright outside as the crowds move into the large fan-shaped Music Shed to hear Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra open the Tanglewood Music Festival's season of major events.

People have come from miles around, dressed for comfort, to sit either in the 6000 chairs under the permanently covered shed, or to loll on blankets on the grass at the rear and to listen to the luminous tones of one of the world's great orchestras while looking up at the stars. The moon was out, too, for this first concert, and the young listeners seemed eager to enjoy nature as well as the music.

Back From Tour

Just back from a highly successful eight-week tour of the Orient, the orchestra and its conductor, Charles Munch, immediately went into the busy summer program. While many in the orchestra remained in Boston to play the free esplanade concerts in the shell beside the Charles River, a 30-man ensemble, including many first chairs, came up to Lenox to play the first of three Bach programs.

Acoustics are notably fine in this wide open building, erected in 1938 from a design by the late celebrated architect, Eliel Saarinen. And last year, a new acoustic shell was placed behind the orchestra with excellent reflective results. Overhead, a linkage of black triangular acoustical reflector panels seems to wing away like a flight of Brancusi bats.

First Time

This year for the first time, the smaller Bach orchestra sat enclosed by a dark red inner screen which, in effect, makes the stage smaller.

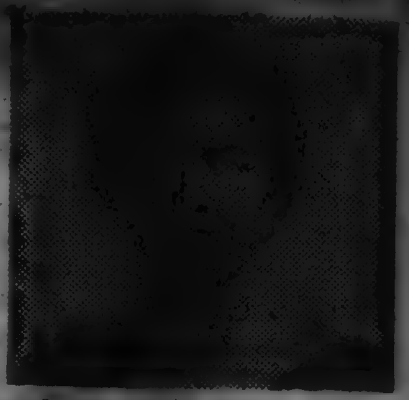
The sound came pouring out from that keenly disciplined band like pure gold. Such perfection of tone is thrilling any time, and to hear it in a setting so idyllic even heightens the pleasure. I suspect the ensemble never looked more opulently handsome, either, in their white coats, sitting upon their broadly curved stage, making music against a deep red background. It was a striking picture.

Munch, his shoulders very broad in his white jacket, lifted his baton, threw back his white-thatched head and the Bach Suite No. 1 in C Major was begun, a string of pieces in classic dance rhythms delivered with polish and great style. William Kroll, violinist, joined the orchestra for the Violin Concerto No. 2 in E Major and, after intermission, Seymour Lipkin appeared to play a bright piano in the Concerto for Clavier No. 5. A charming three-way concerto for clavier, flute and violin brought the two soloists and flutist James Pappoutsakis of the orchestra to the stage front in a vivid series of exchanges, brilliant against that marvelous molten tone of the whole ensemble.

This was a memorable evening in any music lover's life, but just one of the 18 concerts to be given by the orchestra on these gorgeously tended green acres this summer.

Satisfying

The Tanglewood Festival is easily one of America's most satisfying cultural achievements. Since 1936 the Boston Symphony has been giving concerts here at festival time. Actually the festival idea was that of a New York conductor named Henry Hadley, and was immediately taken up by music lovers and merchants of the Berkshire area. To make the festival a palpable reality required the tireless efforts of numerous generous summer residents of the area and response to frequent requests for money as the festival grew was inevitably gratifying.



The festival first took place on a farm near here, not the present location, and during a concert being played in a tent in 1937 the heavens opened up, thunder boomed and water poured in upon the devoted music lovers. Serge Koussevitzky, conducting, was forced to stop his orchestra. Even the jovian sounds of the Wagner being played could not compete with the fury outside. The French horns began to ship water, and a prominent patron stepped forth. She declared that it was obvious the festival concerts would have to be played under a permanent roof. A drive for $100,000 to build such a shed was begun on the spot, and the storm in later years came to be known as "The $100,000 Storm."

Not Smooth

Things were not always smooth between the Berkshire Festival committee which ran the festival, and their orchestra from Boston. In time it became clear that the orchestra could not be the servant of two masters, and the interests of the Berkshire Festival, Inc. were given over to the Boston Symphony.

Today the festival is one of the many activities of the Boston Symphony, and is supervised by its friendly, efficient manager, Thomas Perry, Jr., who sat under a tree with me on a July afternoon, looked out over the 200-acre estate given to the Boston Symphony for its summer festival, and told me how it all worked.

Down below, the light shone on Lake Mahkeenac, where the students of the Berkshire Music Center, operating simultaneously at Tanglewood, have boating privileges. The breeze stirred the pines and the hemlocks around us. Students strolled by with violins in cases; opera students from Boris Goldovsky's Opera Workshop, a part of the school, strode along in joyous full voice.

Music Shed

Over in the Music Shed where Munch would begin the summer concerts that night, pianist Seymour Lipkin was trying out the piano that had just been tuned for him. In the 1200-seat dark brown Music Theater on the other end of the grounds, the doors were shut tight on an opera rehearsal. Overhead the great arching girders of another Eliel Saarinen building, created an interesting architectural effect.

Down a winding path in the little dark brown Saarinen chamber music shed, Aaron Copland was talking to the students about contemporary music, and an ensemble, paid for by the Fromm Foundation in Chicago, played new music.

Music issued from the practice rooms in the great hulking gray Victorian house which formed the heart of this vast estate and is now both student center and honeycomb of practice rooms.

Over the hills, five miles away, in Richmond, lives Munch, the much admired Alsatian who succeeded Koussevitzky at the great podium of the Boston Symphony. I gather that the spirit of Munch has not yet made its way into all the corners of this festival ground, as the Koussevitsky legend walks unchallenged.

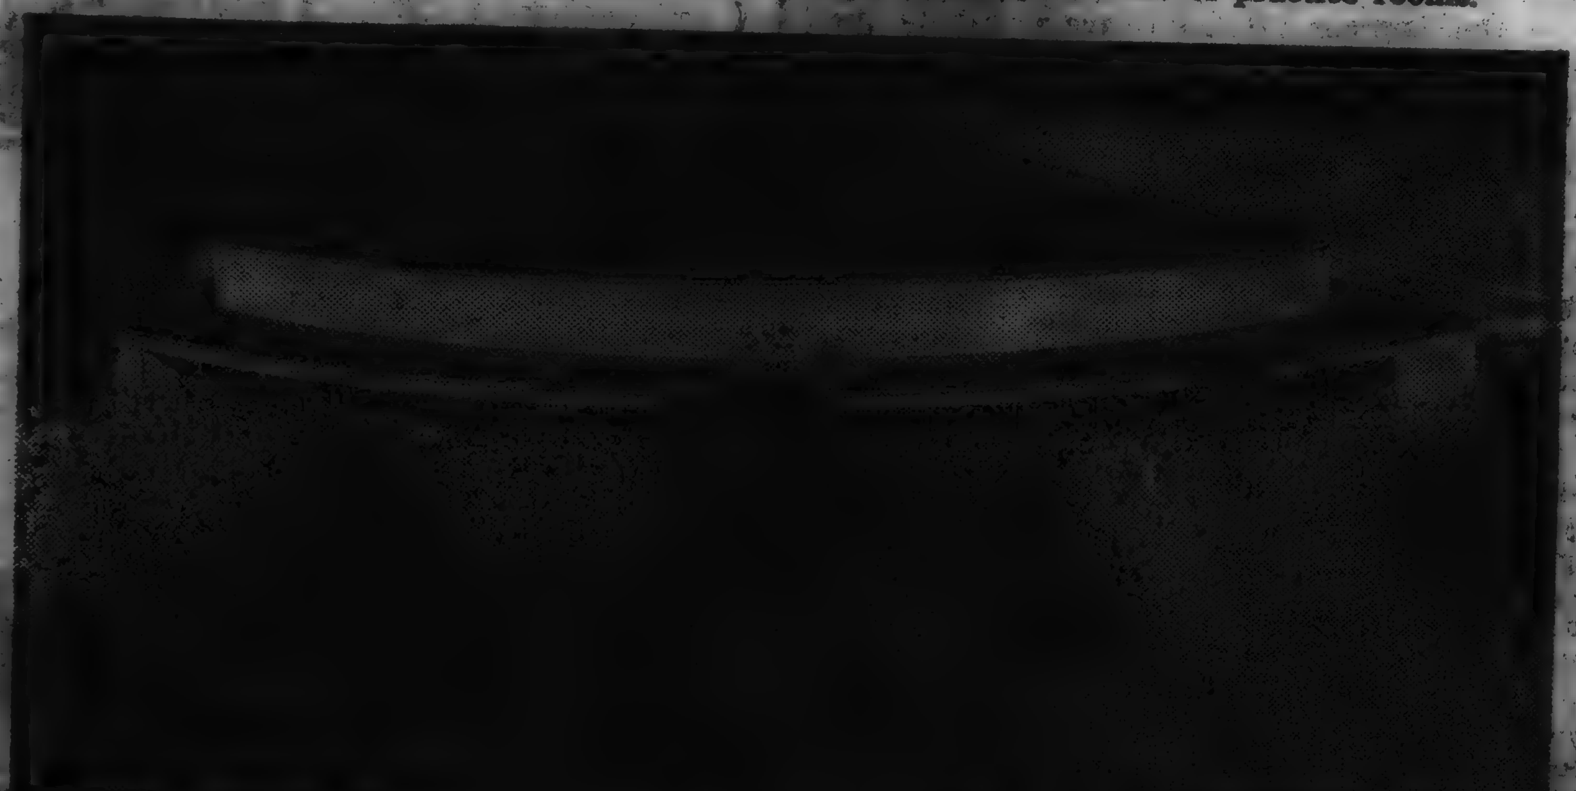
Amazing

What an amazingly large operation all this is! The Tanglewood Festival itself has continued to grow. One night 16,000 persons came to a single concert. Last year, 182,000 people came to the concerts during the six-week period, and brought in $35,000 at the ticket gates. Still, the festival is a deficit operation, and as it it not a separate artistic or financial entity, but rather a part of the big Boston Symphony $2,000,000 annual operation, its bills are paid from other funds.

The Berkshire Music Center which has around 300 selected students for ensemble work under the fine soloists of the Boston orchestra and other top artists makes the festival atmosphere a working one and lively. Leonard Bernstein is doubtless the most famous of the alumni, but many of them are in significant spots as assistant conductors and concert masters in orchestras around America.

Whole Story

The whole story of Tanglewood and its sister activity, the music center, is one of determination on the part of interested patrons, and men like Koussevitzky. Contributions have been extraordinary, beginning with the gift of the great historical Tanglewood estate itself where Hawthorne wrote "Tanglewood Tales" and began "The House of Seven Gables." Today there are lists of scholarships and foundations which make the whole thing possible. The single most ardent supporter of the festival from the start was a Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith, who gave time, energy and money again and again to keep the festival going in the first years. A bronze plaque in the Music Shed hails her today, and conjures in the minds of many, the image of that day in 1937 when they had the $100,000 storm, a blessing in disguise that forced the festival into the permanent setting, in which it is glamorously to be found today.



AT TANGLEWOOD MUSIC SHED, LENOX, MASS.
Crowds Gather for Music in Glamorous Setting

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 112,664

JUL 31 1960

Brazil Newsmen Attend Concert At Tanglewood

STOCKBRIDGE — A delegation of six Brazilian editors and publishers, accompanied by a State Department interpreter are registered at the Red Lion Inn for the week end. They attended the Tanglewood concert Saturday night, and earlier in the day visited with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, many of whom have played in Brazil at one time or another.

The visit to the Berkshir was arranged by John F. Dow ing of the Berkshire Hills Co ference and [illegible] setts Department of Commerce.

The Brazilians are in the United States studying the North American system of communications, including newspapers, radio and television, under the direction of the leaders program of the State Department. There will be seven stops on the country wide tour. The Tanglewood appearance is the only one in New England.

They were interviewed over the Voice of America from Tanglewood during the day and met with others in the communication fields giving general comments on Brazil and their part in the economy. They will be at Tanglewood again today.

Those who make up the party are Olmis Barros Vidal, Ruben Ulhoa Cintra, Fransisca Braga Sobrinho, Aloisius R. Schneider, Milton Hernandes and Mario Erbolato. With them is a State Department interpreter, Roland Enos.

Belgium has 7,000 miles of railroads.

New England [illegible]
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 12,558

AUG 1960

Wider Range

The Tanglewood Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., has outgr[illegible] beginnings.

This year for the first ti[illegible] concerts of the Bach and Moza[illegible]-ends were given in the 6,000 seat [illegible] Shed instead of the 1,200 seat Th[illegible] Concert Hall.

To improv[illegible] the [illegible] Shed setting for the intimate [illegible] played by the reduced [illegible] orchestra, a new portable stage enclosure was built consisting of 28 triangular plywood panels.

The festival opened last month with Charles Munch directing the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

228

CHICAGO, ILL.
CHICAGO'S AMERICAN
D. [illegible] S. 505,570
JUL 24 1960

ROGER DETTMER

August Agenda:

NOW THAT SUMMER MUSIC has passed the half-way mark on the downtown lakefront and at Ravinia, and with the fall theater season ready to roll on Sept. 1, it's time to consider the August interim.

I had hoped this year, before our autumn schedule jelled, to spend a couple of working weeks in San Francisco at the opera, not visited since 1957. Kurt Herbert Adler's Bay City company doesn't, however, commence to trill and thunder until Sept. 16, by which time Chicago's fall calendar will be three theater openings and two New York Philharmonic concerts old.

And so, instead, I shall swing northeast to shop Shakespeare in Connecticut with a preliminary week-end at Tanglewood in the Massachusetts Berkshires for final summer concerts by the Boston Symphony orchestra.

CONNECTICUT Shakespeare has been on one previous summer "agenda"—in 1958—when "A Midsummer Night's Dream" featured June Havoc as Titania, and when "Hamlet" was brooding Fritz Weaver. This year the fare is "Twelfth Night," "The Tempest" and "Antony and Cleopatra," with Katharine Hepburn as both Viola and the Serpent of the Nile.

I've not, on the other hand, visited Tanglewood as a representative of CHICAGO'S AMERICAN. My last time there was in 1952, when Charles Munch concluded the summer season with a scaled-down but nonetheless exciting performance of Berlioz's mammoth "Grand Messe de Morts." This year, as the capstone, he has chosen the same Berlioz's dramatic oratorio, "La Damnation de Faust," for Aug. 14.

THE BERKSHIRES, I'm advised, have greatly changed—and improved—since '52, when a motor trip to Tanglewood from Manhattan meant driving the spectacularly scenic, but also slow and heavily trafficked, Taconic State parkway.

Today the time-conscious driver can pick up the New York thruway at Tarrytown, leave it south of Albany for an expressway that connects with the Massachusetts turnpike, and be in Lenox a couple of hours later.

I cannot imagine, however, that anything has really changed the Tanglewood scene. Lenox simply would not be without rows of Boston dowagers, each in her assigned rocking chair, on the porch of the Curtis hotel, quietly deploring the week-end influx of concert goers who keep Tanglewood's operating deficits low.

As a precaution, I've requested accommodations at the Red Lion inn in nearby Stockbridge, and am still hoping as this is written that the Boston Symphony's cordial publicitor, Harry Beall, can persuade the management that someone from Chicago need not necessarily be a crude frontiersman.

I'M HOPING to discover next month, after a two year absence, that Stratford, Conn. has multiplied and improved facilities for the overnight visitor who savors metropolitan cuisine. The roads, tho, I'll have to report on when they've been tested. The leisurely driver can go south from Tanglewood thru Springfield, Mass., and enjoy some of the loveliest scenery on the eastern seaboard, tho these 127 miles to Stratford have been said, by the disgruntled, to consume almost as many driving hours.

New England [illegible], except for the multi-lane toll roads completed or under construction, are the poorest by and large north of Georgia and east of Arkansas. You might remember, however, if driving in the east—whether or not on the festival route—that the New York thruway has taken a lot of heavy traffic off the Taconic from Albany to Tarrytown, and that the new Connecticut turnpike now allows one to enjoy the scenic beauties of the Merritt parkway without fear of being run down, or over.

As for the entertainment, one can predict that it will be of a quality, but that's the subject for a subsequent Sunday story, when August is waning. After that—a week or 10 days of sun, sleep and general lazing about at the tip of Long Island, before September arrives.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
JUL 23 1960

Name in the News

Orchestra Boss With an Ear for Harmony

The duties of an orchestra manager seem pretty obvious: Get 105 muscians on stage, provide a conductor, see that the music is properly distributed, and there's nothing more to do the rest of the day, or evening, but listen.

Tod Perry (Thomas D. Jr., really, but to scarcely anyone) has been with the Boston Symphony Orchestra since he came out of the Navy in 1946, first as assistant to George [illegible] and then himself in command since 1954. He makes no complaints about the onerousness of his job. He takes it all in stride, but even a [illegible] accounting of his responsibilities [illegible].

There are the musicians, naturally the basis and raison d'etre of the enterprise. There is also a permanent staff of some 40 employes whose duties cover every phase of the two great properties the orchestra owns—Symphony Hall in Boston and Tanglewood here in this county—and such minor details as the operation of food organizations for the "Pops" and here in Lenox. The orchestra operates these as services to their public and not as ventures inspired by the profit motive. There is also a music store here for which they choose to remain personally answerable.

Much-Traveled Musicians

The orchestra plays four series of concerts every season in Boston, a short series in Cambridge, another at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, a short series in Providence — these all within easy commuting distance. Then there are the New York and the Brooklyn series, at least two fortnight tours each year, those within the United States, and then the overseas tours, such as the one to Japan and Australia from which they returned only last month. There are broadcasting dates and recording assignments, and a few other minor demands, such as the six-week summer school known as the Berkshire Music Center which would be in itself a major task for most ordinary men.

Tod was born in Grand Rapids, Mich., although he usually adds, with undue and inexplicable haste, that his mother was from Vermont and his father a mechanical engineer from Boston. The "D" in Tod's name stands for Doane. His grandfather, Thomas Doane, was chief engineer for the building of the Hoosac Tunnel. Later, when he shifted to the Burlington Railroad, he persuaded them to set aside a tract of land in Nebraska for educational purposes. The resulting institution, Doane College, was named for him.

Destiny Takes Charge

A Yale graduate, Tod Perry started his career as a school teacher. Destiny, however, was at work, and he later left teaching to become concert manager for the Curtis Institute in Philadelphia, whence he went to Boston to manage New England Mutual Hall. The next steps now seem somewhat inevitable.

Beyond the obvious multiplicities of the BSO manager's job, there is the larger, if more nebulous, problem of keeping people happy—the paying and the paid. Happily, of course, attracting audiences for the BSO is not a formidable task these days. The Boston series are over-subscribed with regularity, and Tanglewood shows no signs of faltering. In fact, the moving of the Bach-Mozart concerts from the theater-concert hall to the big Shed in order to accommodate ever-increasing audiences is manifest evidence to the contrary. Mr. Perry modestly denies any part in this, but there is plenty of documentation for the contention that well-managed art is more successful than that left to its own casual devices. Thus, the BSO in its public relations is in the enviable position of finding its problems pretty much limited to mollifying the stranger in Boston who has a free evening and is likely to be indignant that Symphony Hall is sold out.

Manos

Manager Perry: Nothing to do but listen.

Equally vital to Mr. Perry is the morale of the orchestra. Musicians are human beings, in spite of some opinions to the contrary, and they make no more and no fewer demands than anyone else, although Tod would opine that they definitely do not make fewer. Their gripes come through his office and they can range from the tilt of a bassoonist's chair on stage to space for a piccolo player to bring home a huge memento in the orchestra's baggage from a foreign tour. The good will of everyone concerned on stage and in the hall is an orchestra manager's prime matter of solicitude. The calibre of the performances the BSO consistently provides, and the size of the audiences in Boston, here and everywhere, probably are the best measure of how well Perry fills his position.

Tod is apt to speak of his job in much the same terms a merchant or factory superintendent uses—his task is the distribution of his product, in this case, the good performance of good music. Halls are limited in capacity. Symphony Hall seats 2,631; the Shed at Tanglewood some 6,000, the lawns incalcuable numbers. But beyond the financial intricacies of his office is a deep and genuine desire to play for as many people as want to hear.

Just the Usual Headaches

There are not many disruptions in the normal activities of the Boston Orchestra. There are sicknesses among the musicians, aberrations in train and plane service which delay soloists, a pedal lyre may fall off a piano during a performance (one did for Serkin), but a manager can never allow all his time and vision to be focussed on details at hand. He must look ahead, far ahead. Matters of personnel, equipment, the counting house, and—not to be ignored—the possibilities of inventive science, and the basic omnipresent one, audiences, are things which can not be filed in the office at the close of day.

Fortunately, Mr. Perry's wife, Helen, a trained botanist and horticulturist, and their two boys, Doane, 18, and Rodney, 16, know enough about the BSO to know when to discuss it and when to divert the conversation to less urgent subjects. Mr. Perry's talent for good relations is equally evident at home.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 23 1960

Bookspan, the Voice of Tanglewood

By RICHARD HAPPEL

The name of Martin Bookspan is a household word in households that care for good music. And if the household dotes on the Boston Symphony Orchestra, then Mr. Bookspan's name [illegible] all the rest, at least among radio announcers. He is commentator for the BSO broadcasts over WQXR, the "radio station of the New York Times."

These are carried live from Boston's Symphony Hall on Saturdays in winter, and from Tanglewood live during the Festival season. They are heard in the Berkshires over the WQXR network, a system of FM outlets which fan out from the parent station, the one most readily received locally being WFLY in Troy.

Since Mr. B has for years been no more than a pleasant voice that lives in our loudspeakers, we made a point of looking him up at work in the broadcast room at Tanglewood on the Saturday that ended the Bach-Mozart series. The program was under way when we arrived, and Mr. B, his wife, and a small group of associates were sitting outside the room, in a kind of vestibule through which BSO musicians enter and leave the Music Shed stage.

* * *

He greeted us warmly in the voice with which we have become familiar, and we chatted amiably until a chap peering through the crack of the double doors leading to the stage turned and made unmistakable hand signs to pipe down. So we adjourned outdoors to a bench. A single bulb over the door to the musicians' room cast enough light for us to make notes.

The glorious music produced by Director Charles Munch and his players enveloped us as we interviewed Mr. Bookspan. Quickly we learned that he was born in Boston, and since 1947 has known Tanglewood, first as a member of the audience, later as raido, television and recordings coordinator for the Boston Symphony, and since 1956 with WQXR.

* * *

At this point a program break became imminent, and we followed him into the recording and broadcast room which we found filled with eight men seated at five tape machines. The recorders' plastic spools were revolving in relentless unison. Recording was for three Boston stations, which would broadcast the tapes on later programs. Up front, in what we learned was favored position was a WQXR engineer monitoring the live program. The room resounded with music pouring in from the stage over four or five speakers.

Martin Bookspan in broadcasting room at Tanglewood's Shed

Tarue

The room was paneled with perforated, sound-absorbent wallboard. Mr. B climbed up into a cubicle about three feet off the floor, and with a window through which he was afforded an unobstructed view of the Shed stage. Unobstructed, that is, for the full-orchestra concerts. However, the new portable screening that is set up for smaller concerts and fewer players presents him with a view of only the back of the screen.

This is a handicap. Mr. Bookspan is supposed to give a chatty description of Mr. Munch and the orchestra receiving the applause of the audience. Here Mrs. Bookspan enters the picture, or rather, the broadcast. She is stationed outside at the vestibule door peephole with a telephone, and relays what goes on to her husband holding a phone at the other end of the line, close to his ear lest her words spill over into the mike.

With disarming spontaneity we heard him tell the listening audience that Mr. Munch and Mr. Serkin, guest artist, had retired into the wings. "Here they are, returning for another bow to the enthusiastic audience. They are shaking hands. The applause is tremendous."

The final number was to be in several movements, and we retired again to the bench. Mr. Bookspan told us that WQXR taped all the programs, except the live ones on Saturdays. The tapes are played in the winter when the BSO is on tour and not available for live pickup. The live concerts, incidentally, are carried from both Boston and Tanglewood to the New York studios over leased wires. But when the Boston Symphony presents their winter concerts at Carnegie Hall in New York, a few blocks from the WQXR studios, they cannot be picked up live. Tapes must be played. Something about their contract.

Actually, Mr. B's work as commentator is but a small part of his duties at WQXR. He is director of recorded music, and makes up all the station's programs. The record library is tremendous, numbering 60,000 discs. They are commercial-type records such as anyone can buy at the music stores. But for broadcasting, their life is about 50 playings. Signs of wear such as fuzziness and broken grooves, inaudible in a home record player, become objectionable in studio amplification.

At this point, we began counting the movements of the Shed concert so Mr. B could return to his cubicle on time. It seemed there were only three to go, and the interview became a little hectic. Quickly we learned that he is a contributing editor to Hi Fi Stereo Review magazine, and frequently writes for House Beautiful, has a son and daughter aged 2½ and 4½ respectively, lives in Eastchester outside New York and WQXR is always tuned in at his house, he can play the violin but hasn't for 10 years, loves classical music first, and shows tunes second, (time was running fast now) his wife sings and the youngsters are developing fine rhythmic sense.

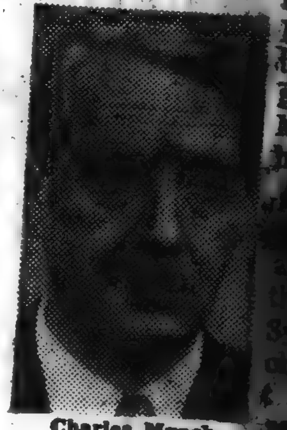
There came a monumental climax in the Shed music. We had counted wrong. It was over. The last we saw of Mr. B he was sprinting for the broadcast booth while the thunder of applause filled the night.

ATLANTA, GA.
JOURNAL-CONSTITUTION
SUN. 502,527

JUL 31 1960

Charles Munch Studies Date With All-Star

Marvin McDonald, manager of Atlanta's All-Star Concert series, recently returned from the renowned Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, Mass., where [illegible] the [illegible] appearance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the 1961-62 season.



Charles Munch

Mr. McDonald spent five days at the Berkshire Festival and talked to Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, which just returned from a 36-concert tour of the Far East. Mr. McDonald said the Symphony is considering an Atlanta concert the season after this.

The festival is owned and controlled by the Boston Symphony with Mr. Munch and Pierre Monteux both conducting during the summer.

* * *

ONE "RARE TREAT" of his festival visit, Mr. McDonald said, was a visit with Mrs. Serge Kousevitski, widow of the great Boston Symphony conductor—"One of the all-time greats I was never able to present in Atlanta," Mr. McDonald said.

NEW ENGLANDER
BOSTON, MASS.
MONTHLY 9,700

AUG 1960

Wider Range

The Tanglewood Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., has outgrown its beginnings.

This year for the first time all concerts of the Bach and Mozart week-ends were given in the 6,000 seat Music Shed instead of the 1,2[illegible]-seat Theatre Concert Hall.

To improve the Music Shed setting for the intimate programs played by the reduced 40-member orchestra, a new portable stage enclosure was built consisting of 28 triangular plywood panels.

The festival opened [illegible] month with Charles Munch [illegible] the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 108,563

AUG 6 1960

Newington

Students Plan Rehearsal Trip To Tanglewood

NEWINGTON (Special) — Instrumental music students of the summer music school under the Park and Recreation Department will attend an open rehearsal today of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The students will leave by bus from New Meadow School at 8 a.m.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 8 1960

Tanglewood Gallery Has New Exhibition

The Tanglewood Gallery in Lenox has opened an exhibition of oils, watercolors and drawings by Milton Avery and John von Wicht. The show will be on view every day except Tuesday and Sunday through Aug. 21.

Avery and von Wicht, both prominent American painters, are represented in collections at the Museum of Modern Art, the Whitney Museum and the Philadelphia Museum.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

JUL 23 1960

Bookspan, the Voice of Tanglewood

By RICHARD HAPPEL

The name of Martin Bookspan is a household word in households that [illegible] for good music. And if the household dotes on the Boston Symphony Orchestra, then Mr. [illegible] all the rest, at least among [illegible] announcers. He is commentator for the BSO broadcasts over WQXR, the "radio station of the New York Times."

These are carried live from Boston's Symphony Hall on Saturdays in winter, and from Tanglewood live during the Festival season. They are heard in the Berkshires over the WQXR network, a system of FM outlets which fan out from the parent station, the one most readily received locally being WFLY in Troy.

Since Mr. B has for years been no more than a pleasant voice that lives in our loudspeakers, we made a point of looking him up at work in the broadcast room at Tanglewood on the Saturday that ended the Bach-Mozart series. The program was under way when we arrived, and Mr. B, his wife, and a small group of associates were sitting outside the room, in a kind of vestibule through which BSO musicians enter and leave the Music Shed stage.

• • •

He greeted us warmly in the voice with which we have become familiar, and we chatted amiably until a chap peering through the crack of the double doors leading to the stage turned and made unmistakable hand signs to pipe down. So we adjourned outdoors to a bench. A single bulb over the door to the musicians' room cast enough light for us to make notes.

The glorious music produced by Director Charles Munch and his players enveloped us as we interviewed Mr. Bookspan. Quickly we learned that he was born in Boston, and since 1947 has known Tanglewood, first as a member of the audience, later as raido, television and recordings coordinator for the Boston Symphony, and since 1956 with WQXR.

• • •

At this point a program break became imminent, and we followed him into the recording and broadcast room which we found filled with eight men seated at five tape machines. The recorders' plastic spools were revolving in relentless unison. Recording was for three Boston stations, which would broadcast the tapes on later programs. Up front, in what we learned was favored position was a WQXR engineer monitoring the live program. The room resounded with music pouring in from the stage over four or five speakers.

The room was paneled with perforated, sound-absorbent wallboard. Mr. B climbed up into a cubicle about three feet off the floor, and with a window through which he was afforded an unobstructed view of the Shed stage. Unobstructed, that is, for the full-orchestra concerts. However, the new portable screening that is set up for smaller concerts and fewer players presents him with a view of only the back of the screen.

This is a handicap. Mr. Bookspan is supposed to give a chatty description of Mr. Munch and the orchestra receiving the applause of the audience. Here Mrs. Bookspan enters the picture, or rather, the broadcast. She is stationed outside at the vestibule door peephole with a telephone, and relays what goes on to her husband holding a phone at the other end of the line, close to his ear lest her words spill over into the mike.

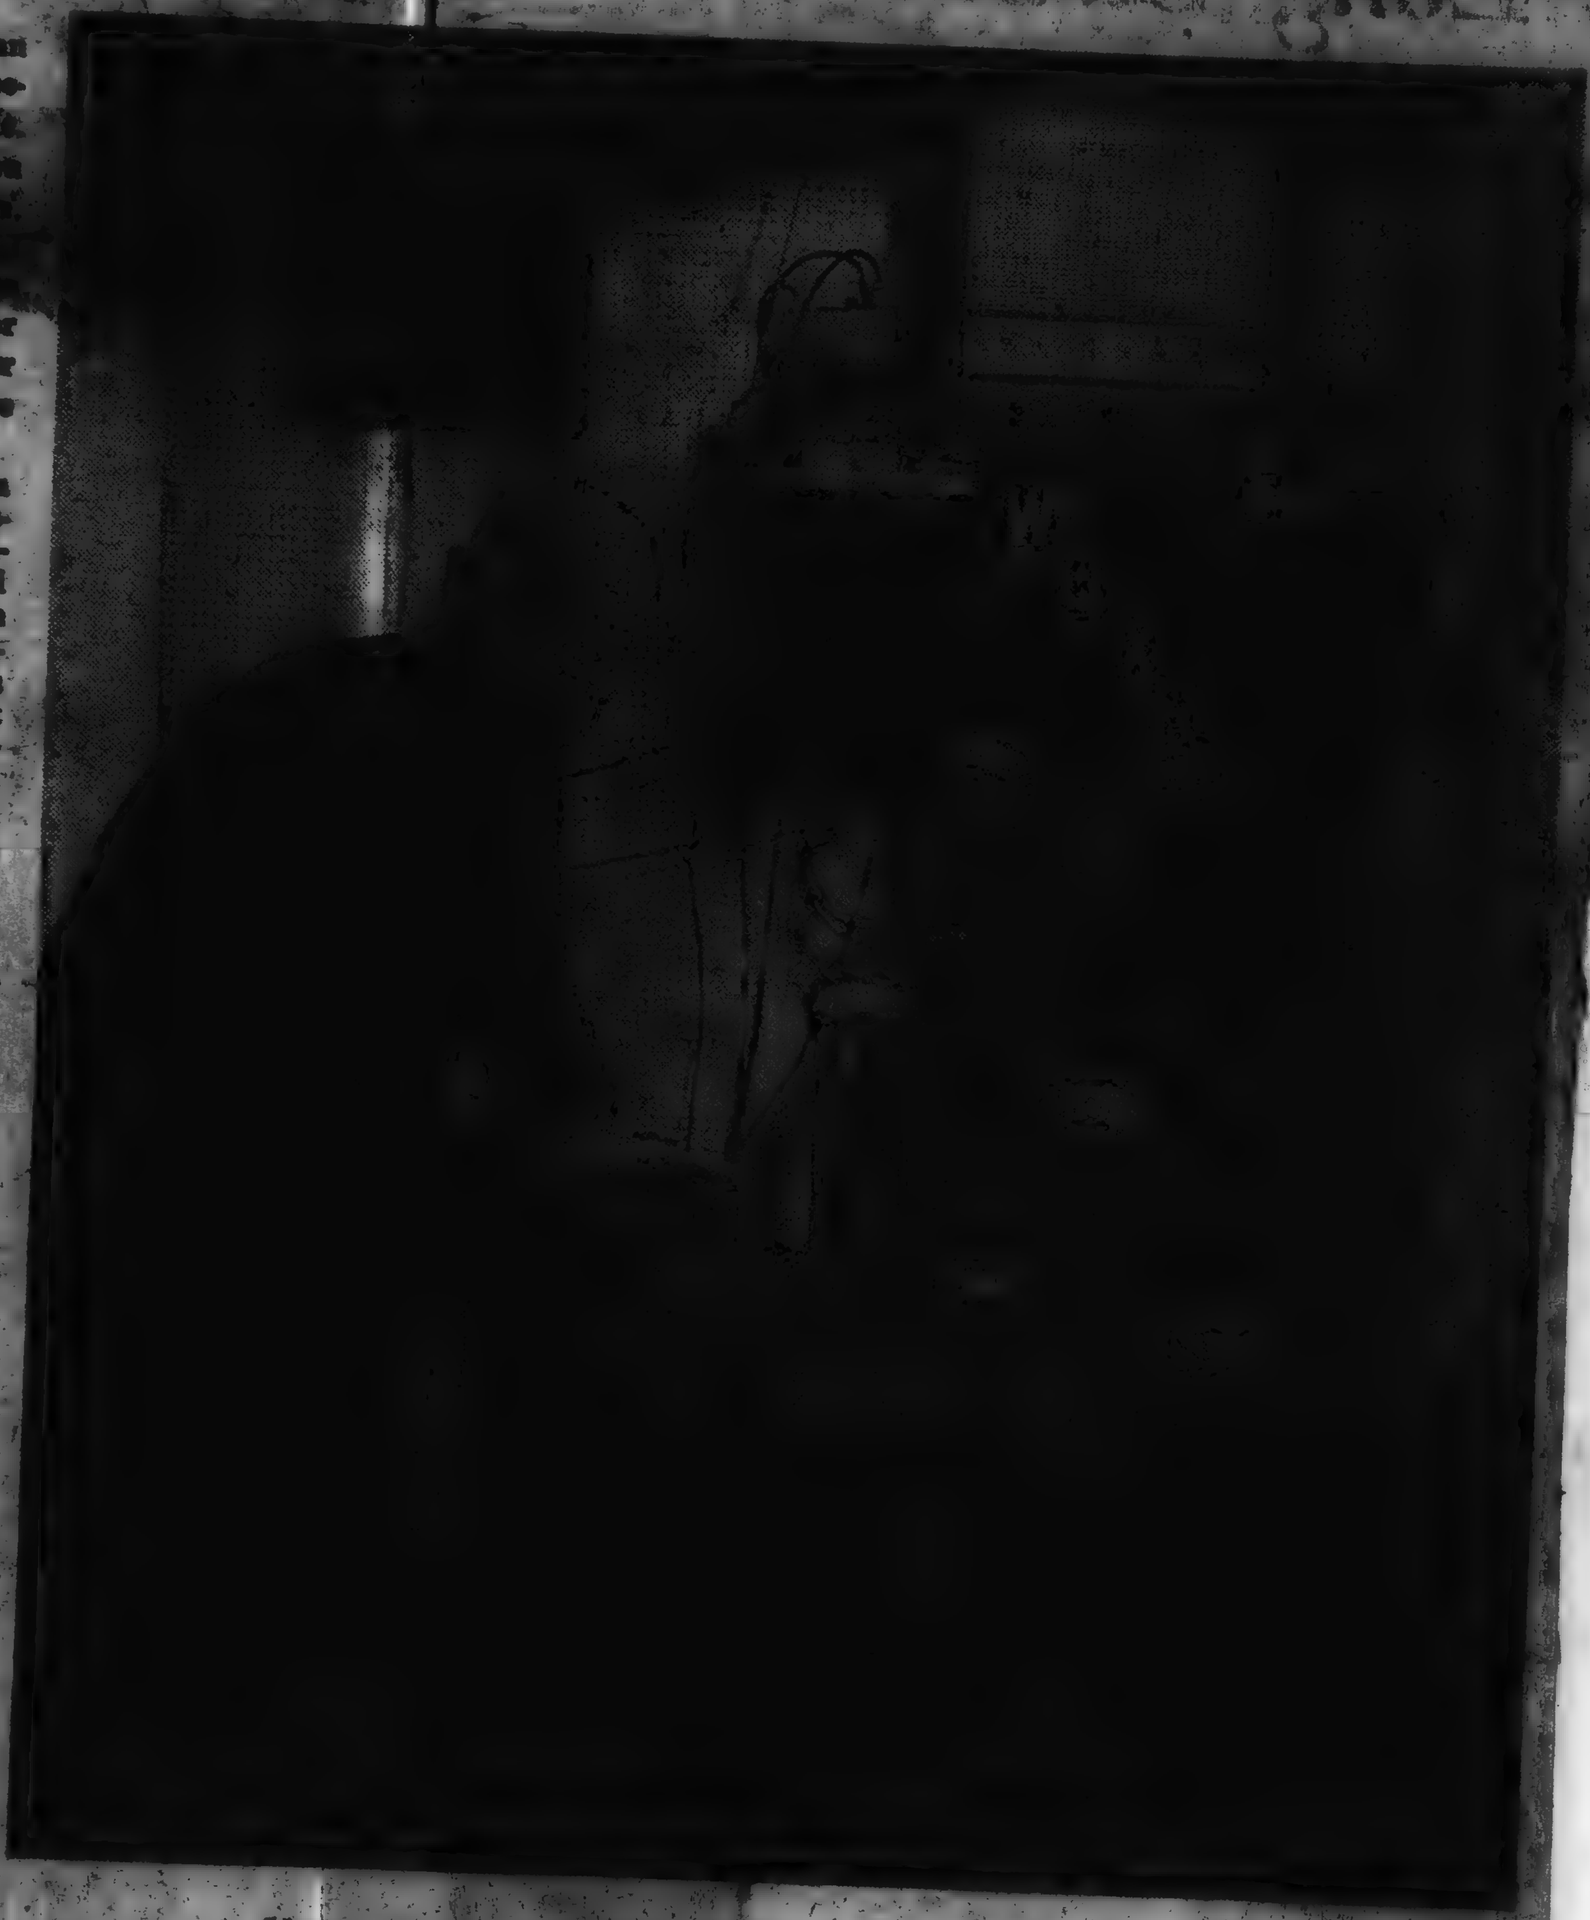
With disarming spontaneity we heard him tell the listening audience that Mr. Munch and Mr. Serkin, guest artist, had retired into the wings. "Here they are, returning for another bow to the enthusiastic audience. They are shaking hands. The applause is tremendous."

The final number was to be in several movements, and we retired again to the bench. Mr. Bookspan told us that WQXR taped all the programs, except the live ones on Saturdays. The tapes are played in the winter when the BSO is on tour and not available for live pickup. The live concerts, incidentally, are carried from both Boston and Tanglewood to the New York studios over leased wires. But when the Boston Symphony presents their winter concerts at Carnegie Hall in New York, a few blocks from the WQXR studios, they cannot be picked up live. Tapes must be played. Something about their contract.

Actually, Mr. B's work as commentator is but a small part of his duties at WQXR. He is director of recorded music, and makes up all the station's programs. The record library is tremendous, numbering 60,000 discs. They are commercial-type records such as anyone can buy at the music stores. But for broadcasting, their life is about 50 playings. Signs of wear such as fuzziness and broken grooves, inaudible in a home record player, become objectionable in studio amplification.

At this point, we began counting the movements of the Shed concert so Mr. B could return to his cubicle on time. It seemed there were only three to go, and the interview became a little hectic. Quickly we learned that he is a contributing editor to Hi Fi Stereo Review magazine, and frequently writes for House Beautiful, has a son and daughter aged 2½ and 4½ respectively, lives in Eastchester outside New York and WQXR is always tuned in at his house, he can play the violin but hasn't for 10 years, loves classical music first, and shows tunes second, (time was running fast now) his wife sings and the youngsters are developing fine rhythmic sense.

There came a monumental climax in the Shed music. We had counted wrong. It was over. The last we saw of Mr. B he was sprinting for the broadcast booth while the thunder of applause filled the night.



Martin Bookspan in broadcasting room at Tanglewood's Shed [illegible]

ATLANTA, GA.
JOURNAL-CONSTITUTION
SUN. 502,527

JUL 31 1960

Charles Munch Studies Date With All-Star

Marvin McDonald, manager of Atlanta's All-Star Concert series, recently returned from the renowned Berkshire Festival in Tanglewood, where [illegible] the [illegible] of [illegible] Boston Symphony Orchestra during 1961-62.

Charles Munch

Mr. McDonald [illegible] days at the Berkshire Festival and talked to Charles Munch, conductor of the Boston Symphony, which just returned from a 26-concert tour of the Far East. Mr. McDonald said the Symphony is considering an Atlanta concert the season after this.

The festival is owned and controlled by the Boston Symphony with Mr. Munch and Pierre Monteux both conducting during the summer.

• • •

ONE "RARE TREAT" of his festival visit, Mr. McDonald said, was a visit with Mrs. Serge Kousevitski, widow of the great Boston Symphony conductor—"One of the all-time greats I was never able to present in Atlanta," Mr. McDonald said.

NEW ENGLANDER
BOSTON, MASS.
MONTHLY 6,700

AUG 1960

Wider Range

The Tanglewood Berkshire Festival at Lenox, Mass., has outgrown its beginnings.

This year for the first time all concerts of the Bach and Mozart week-ends were given in the [illegible] Music Shed instead of the [illegible] Theatre Concert Hall.

To improve the [illegible] Shed setting for the intimate [illegible] played by the reduced 40-member [illegible], a new portable stage [illegible] consisting of 28 [illegible] panels.

The festival [illegible] with Charles Munch [illegible] Symphony [illegible]

Courant (m)
HARTFORD, Conn.
Circ. 108,563

AUG 6 1960

Newington

Students Plan Rehearsal Trip To Tanglewood

NEWINGTON (Special) — Instrumental music students of the summer music school under the Park and Recreation Department will attend an open rehearsal today of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. The students will leave by bus from New Meadow School at

---

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,0[illegible]

AUG 8 1960

Tanglewood Gallery Has New Exhibition

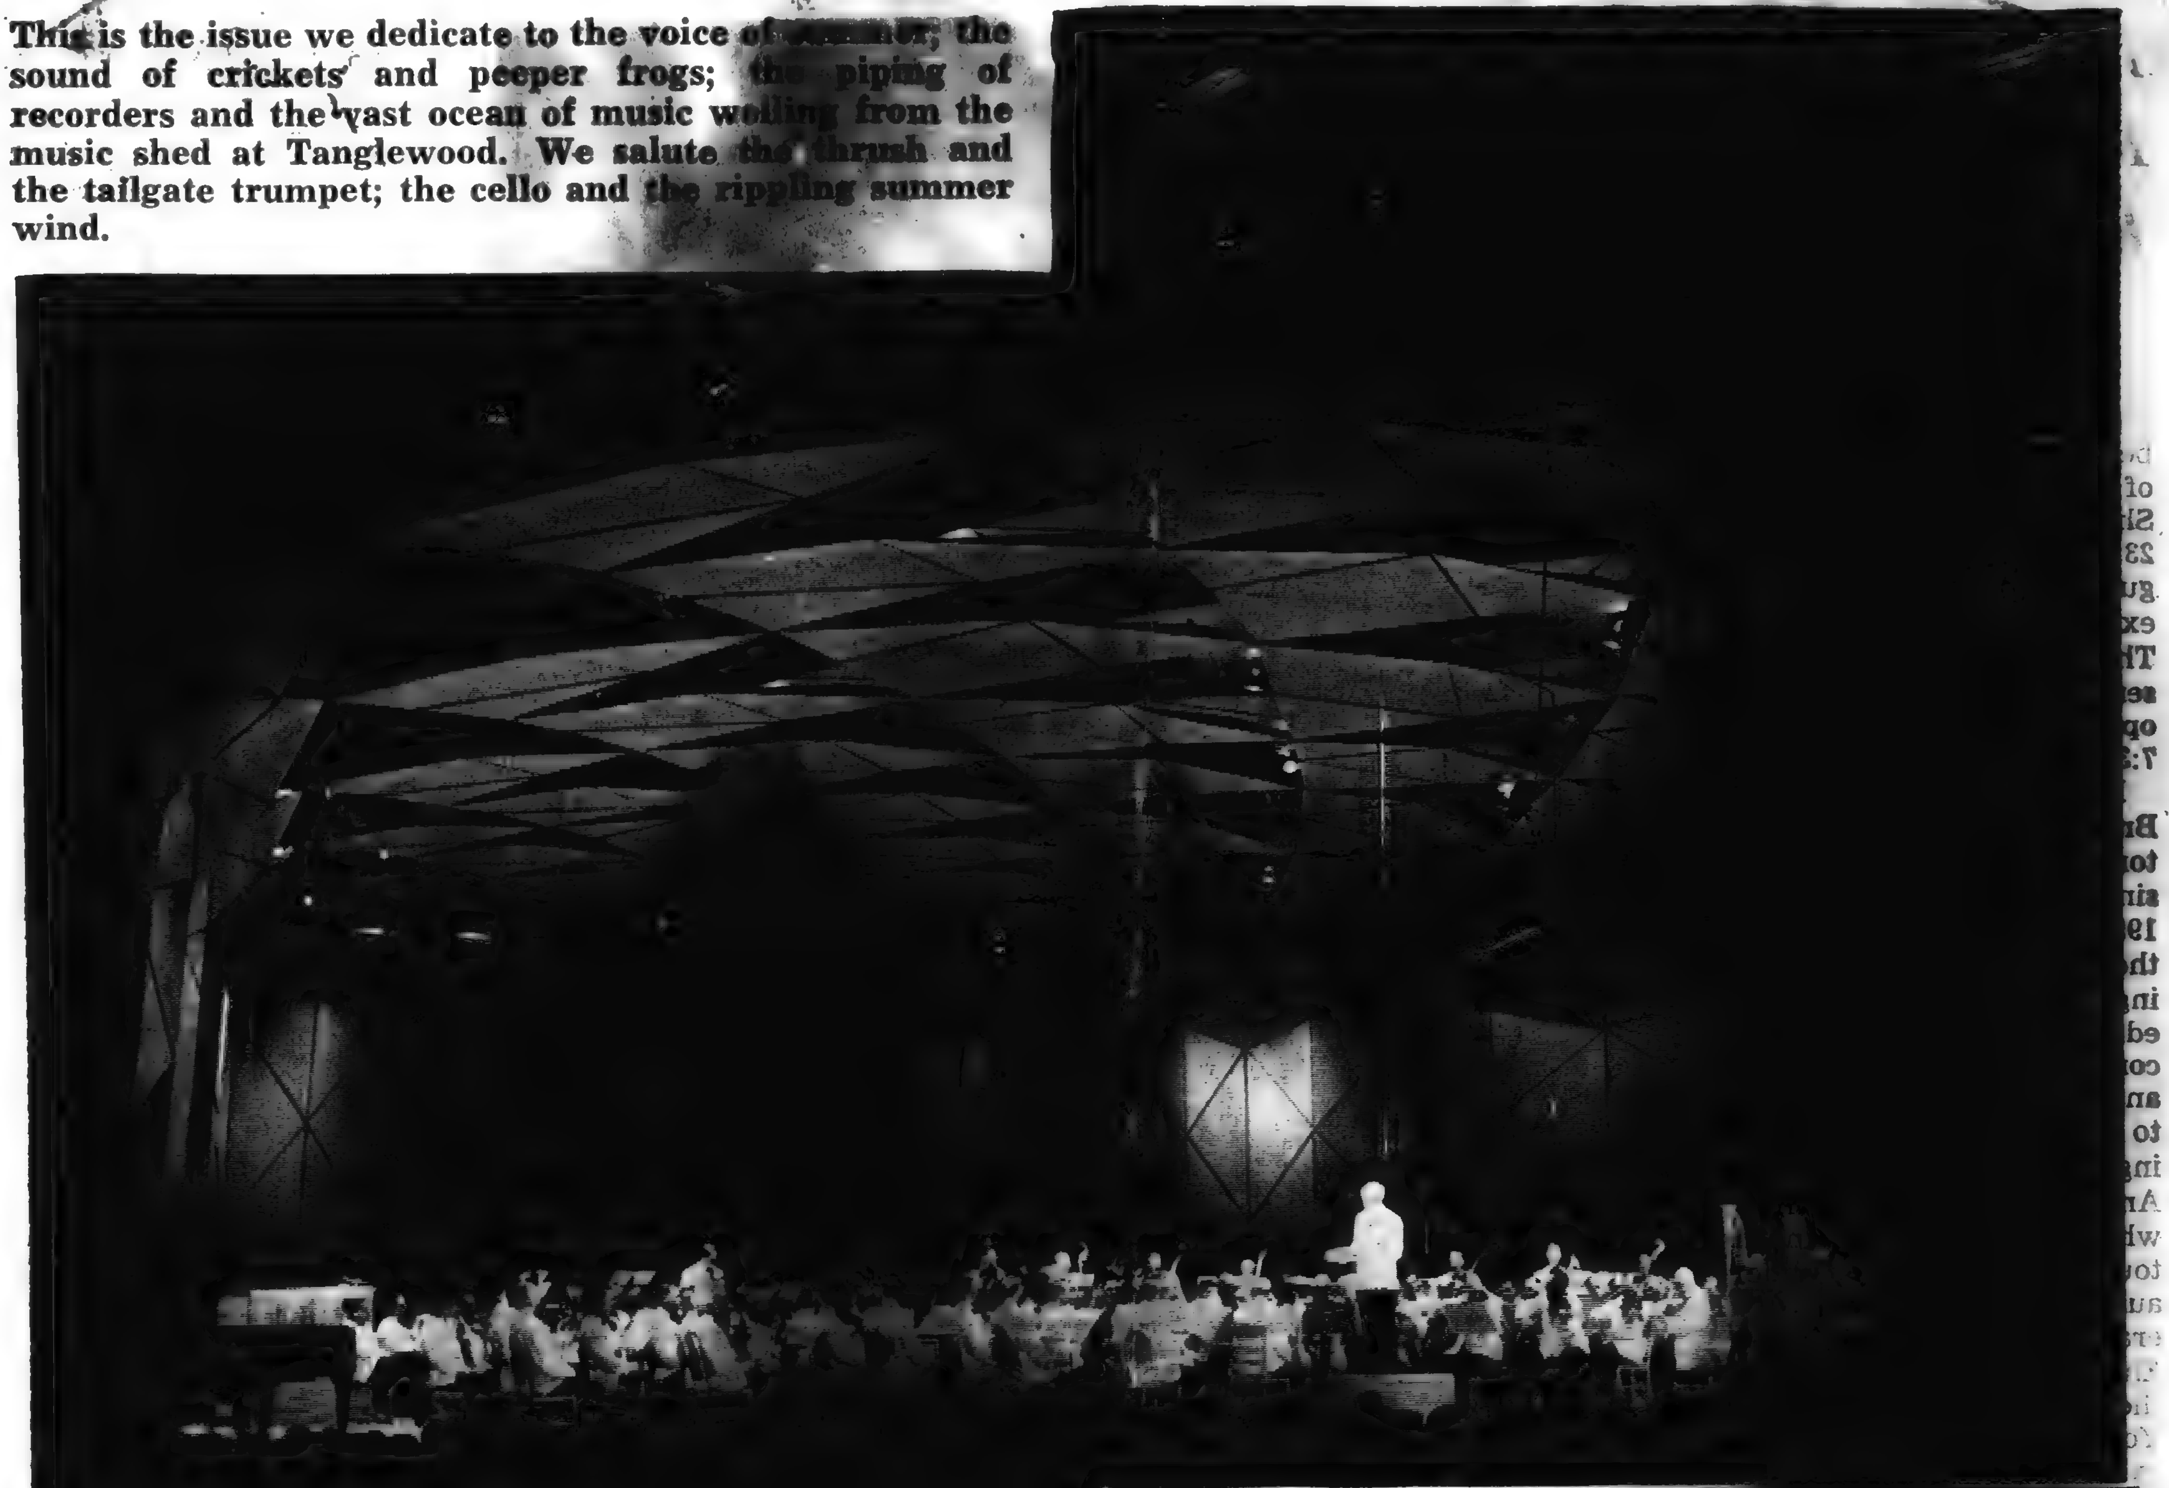
The Tanglewood Gallery in Lenox has opened an exhibition of oils, watercolors and drawings by Milton Avery and John von Wicht. The show will be on view every day except Tuesday and Sunday through Aug. 21.

Avery and von Wicht, both prominent American painters, are represented in collections at the Museum of Modern Art, the Whitney Museum and the Philadelphia Museum.

Journal
LAKEVILLE, Conn.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,498

JUL 21 1960

This is the issue we dedicate to the voice of summer, the sound of crickets and peeper frogs; the piping of recorders and the vast ocean of music welling from the music shed at Tanglewood. We salute the thrush and the tailgate trumpet; the cello and the rippling summer wind.



In Lenox A Summer Sound

In 1948 Nathaniel Hawthorn moved into a little red cottage on the Lenox estate of William Aspinwall Tappan named Tanglewood. Here he began work on The House of Seven Gables, wrote The Wonder Book and planned its supplement, appropriately to be named Tanglewood Tales.

In describing the view from the great estate he wrote:

"There is a glen between this house and the lake through which winds a little brook with pools, and tiny waterfalls over the great roots of trees. The glen is deep and narrow and filled with trees, so that it is all dense shadow of obscurity. Beyond the lake is Monument Mountain, looking like a headless sphinx wrapped in a Persian shawl, when clad in the rich and diversified autumnal foliage of its woods; and beyond Monument the dome of Taconic, whose round head is more distinct than ever in winter, when its snow patches are visable but which generally is a dark blue unvaried mountain top."

In 1936 William Aspinwall Tappan's descendants gave Tanglewood, with all its scenic magnificence, to Doctor Serge Koussevitsky and his Boston Symphony Orchestra as a setting for an annual Berkshire Music Festival. In the summer of 1937 the first concerts were given which were to make the name of the old estate an international symbol of great music.

Like a huge bonfire, the Tanglewood enterprise has served as a beacon to music lovers from all over. The license plates in its spreading parking lots read like a geographical index. Like a bonfire, too, its scattering sparks have ignited kindred fires in the surrounding area of southern Berkshire County and northwestern Connecticut, and rekindled to new brightness existing ventures in all the arts.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 29 1960

Around Berkshire

Music Center Collection on Exhibit

LENOX — A special collection of portraits, sketches and photographs are on exhibit through August at the music room of the Lenox Library in observance of the 20th anniversary of the founding of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

At the request of the library, several paintings from Serenac, the home of the late conductor, Serge Koussevitzky, were loaned for the exhibit.

Among them is a painting by Leonid Pasternak, father of the late Boris Pasternak, who won the Nobel Prize for literature last year for his novel, "Dr. Zhivago." Subject of the painting is Dr. Koussevitzky conducting his orchestra in Moscow about 1915, with Alexander Scriabine, the composer, at the piano.

A sketch done in the same period by Serof is of Natalie Koussevitzky, the conductor's first wife, who died in 1942. A painting by Yagovlev shows Dr. Koussevitzky conducting in Boston.

Reproductions of several sketches done by Mrs. Olga Koussevitzky of personalities connected with the Berkshire Music Center are exhibited, as well as photographs of activities at the center.

Three portraits by Harry Lane of State Line are exhibited. One is a portrait of Mrs. Alexandra Dane. It was loaned by the family of the late Ernest B. Dane, a former president of the BSO.

Mrs. Bruce D. Sanborn of St. Paul, Minn., who endowed the music room at the library, has loaned two portraits by Mr. Lane, one of herself and another of Mrs. Koussevitzky.

BETHLEHEM, PA.
GLOBE-TIMES
D. 28,894

JUL 26 1960

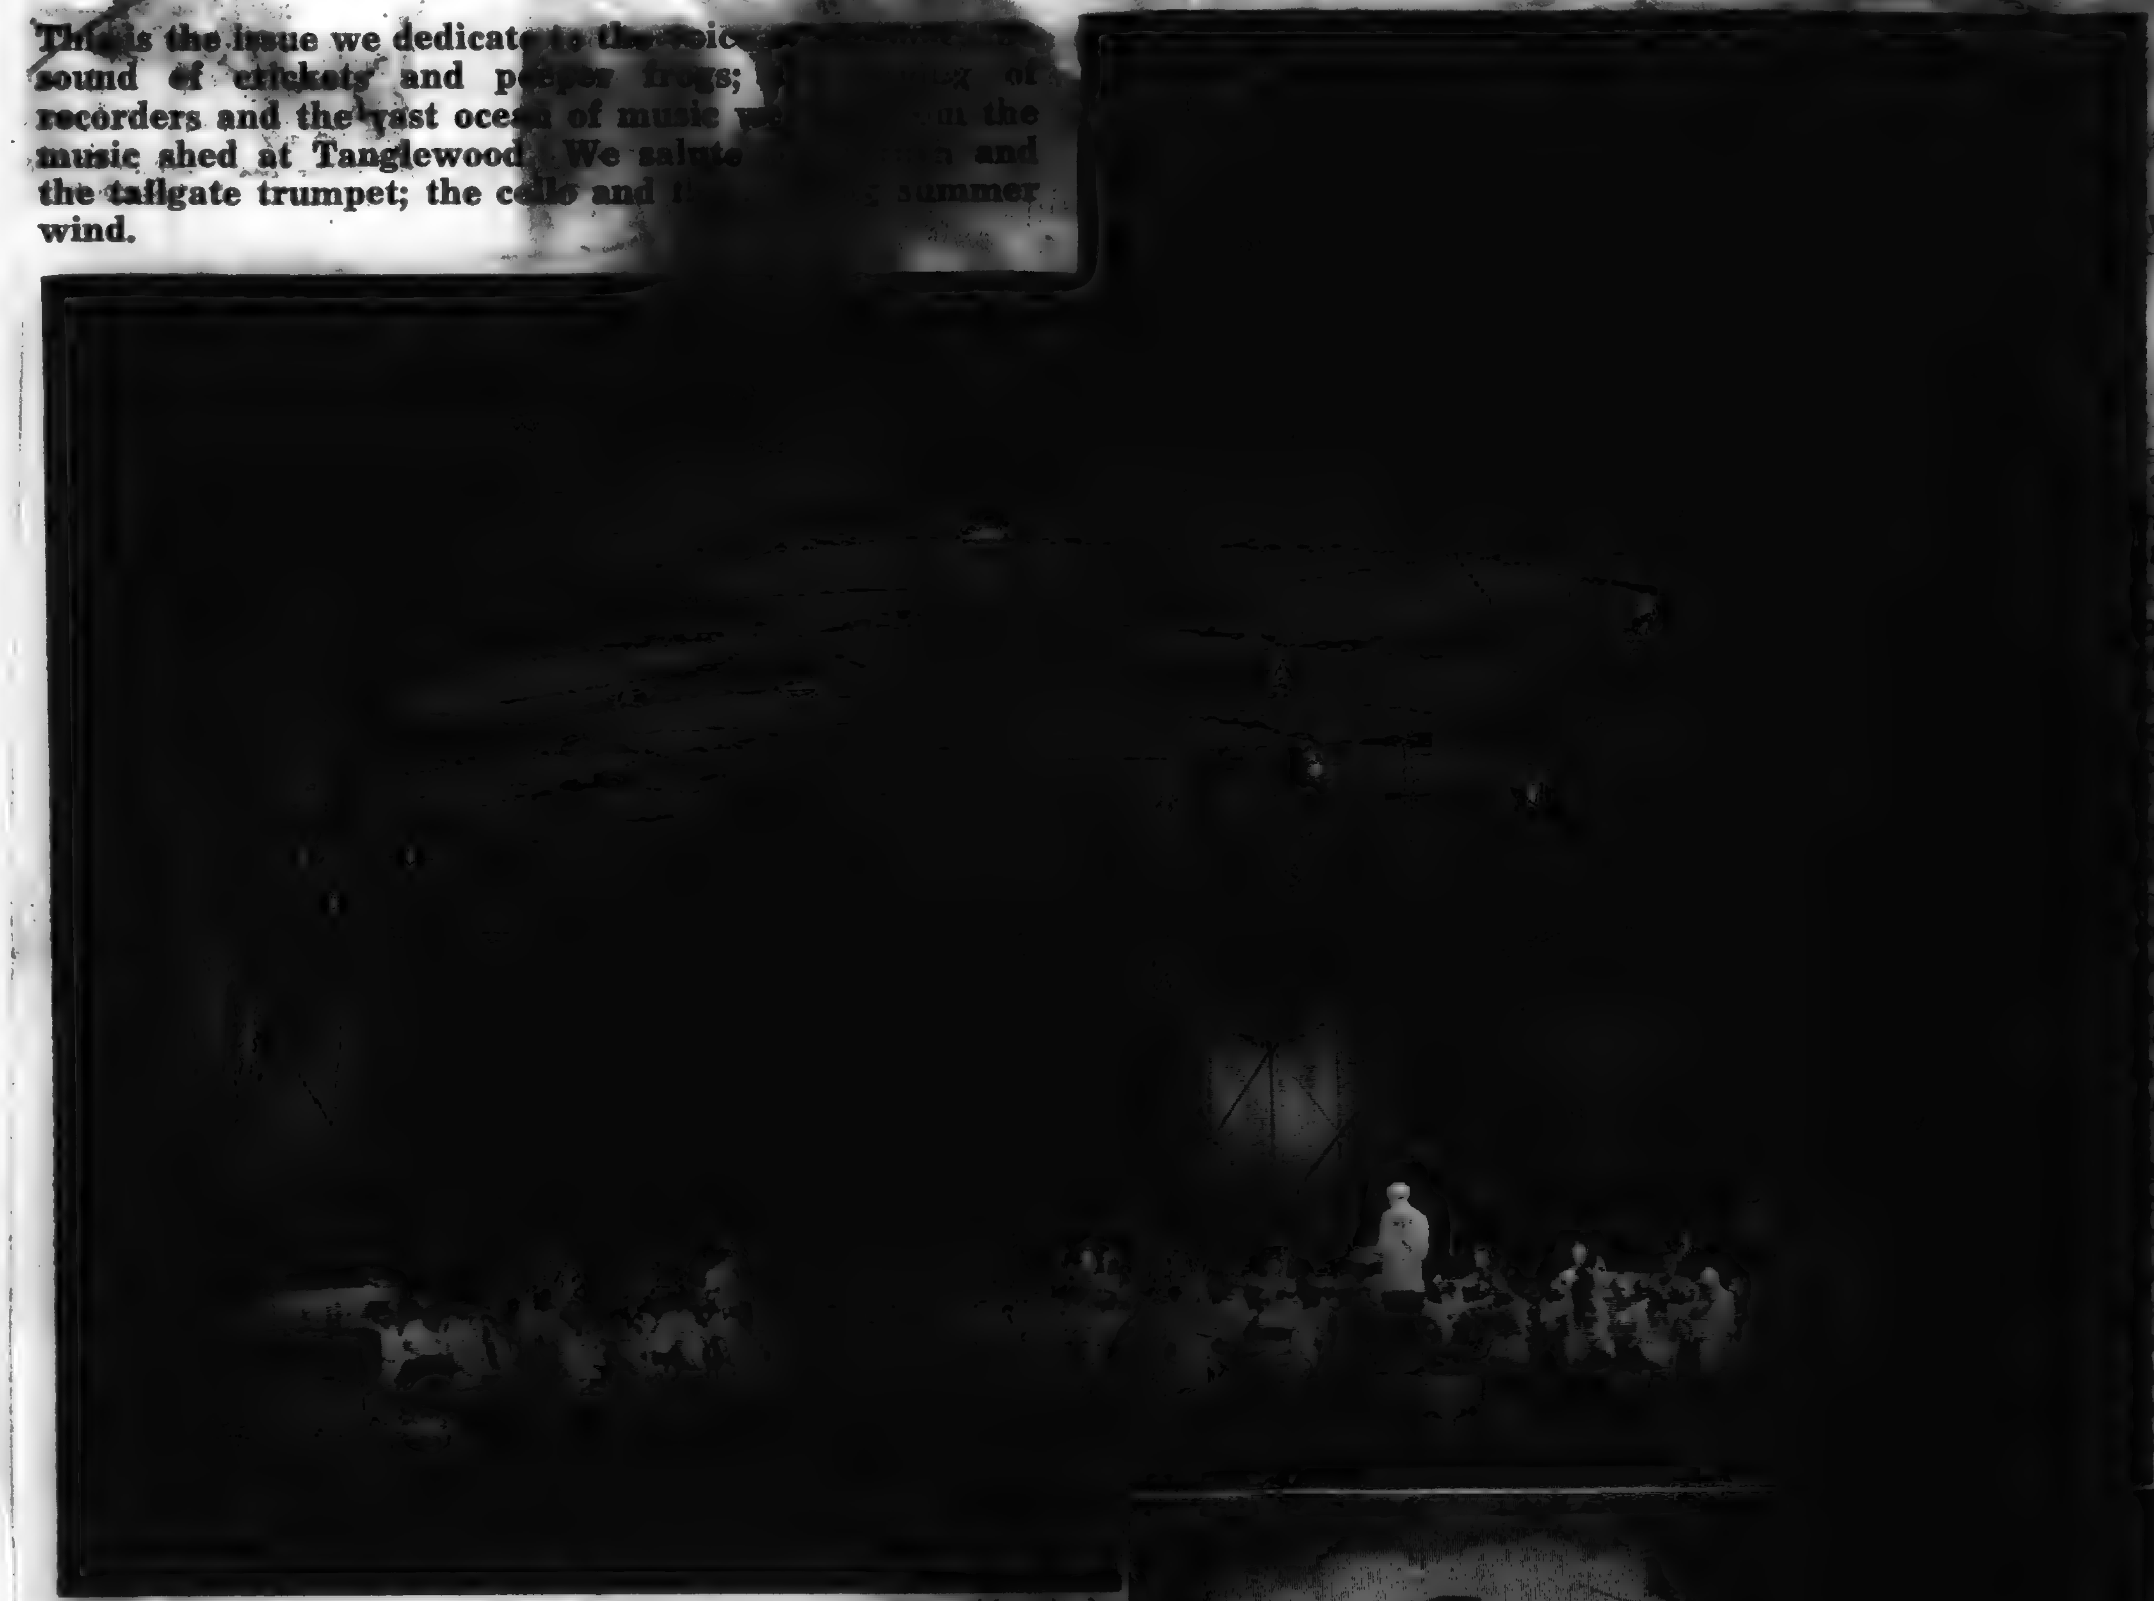
PARDON OUR PARAGRAPHS

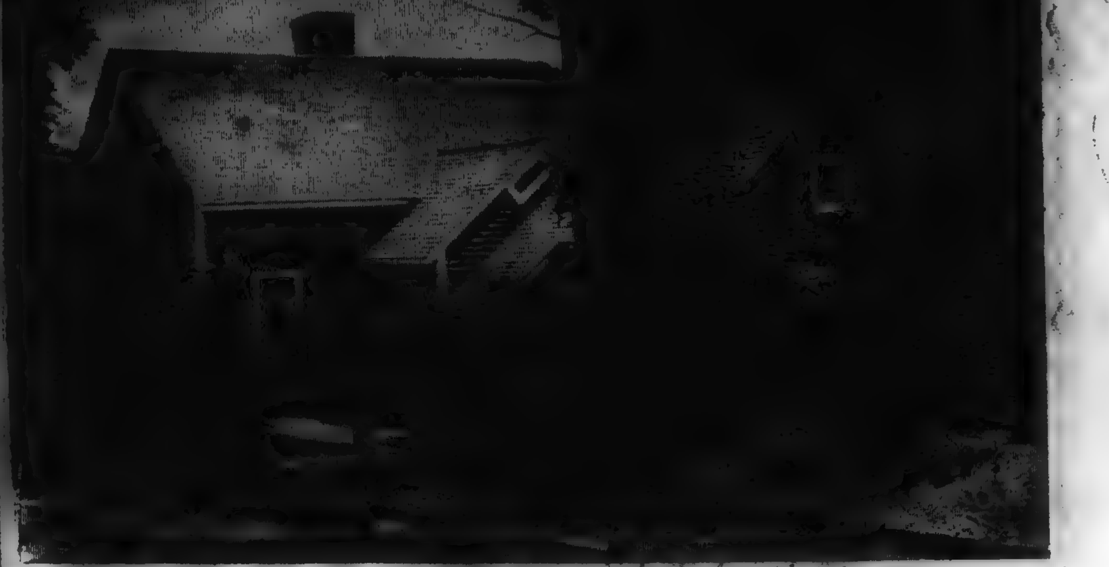
The Tanglewood Music Festival now being held at Lenox, Mass., features three musicians well-known in Bethlehem. Hugh Ross, director of New York's Schola Cantorum, conducted the Festival Chorus in Mozart's "Litany" July 16; Donald Gramm was a soloist with the chorus in Faure's "Requiem" last Friday evening, and John McCollum will be soloist July 31st in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony and again August 14th in Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust." McCollum and Gramm are favorite soloists with the Bethlehem Bach Choir and Hugh Ross is a familiar figure in Bach festival audiences.

Circ. 2,4

JUL 21 1960

This is the issue we dedicate to the [illegible] sound of crickets and peeper frogs; [illegible] of recorders and the vast ocean of music [illegible] the music shed at Tanglewood. We salute [illegible] and the tailgate trumpet; the cello and [illegible] summer wind.





In Lenox A Summer Sound

In 1948 Nathaniel Hawthorn moved into a little red cottage on the Lenox estate of William Aspinwall Tappan named Tanglewood. Here he began work on The House of Seven Gables, wrote The Wonder Book and planned its supplement, appropriately to be named Tanglewood Tales.

In describing the view from the great estate he wrote:

"There is a glen between this house and the lake through which winds a little brook with pools, and tiny waterfalls over the great roots of trees. The glen is deep, and narrow and filled with trees, so that it is all dense shadow of obscurity. Beyond the lake is Monument Mountain, looking like a headless sphinx wrapped in a Persian shawl, when clad in the rich and diversified autumnal foliage of its woods; and beyond Monument the dome of Taconic, whose round head is more distinct than ever in winter, when its snow patches are visable but which generally is a dark blue unvaried mountain top."

In 1936 William Aspinwall Tappan's descendants gave Tanglewood, with all its scenic magnificence, to Doctor Serge Koussevitsky and his Boston Symphony Orchestra as a setting for an annual Berkshire Music Festival. In the summer of 1937 the first concerts were given which were to make the name of the old estate an international symbol of great music.

Like a huge bonfire, the Tanglewood enterprise has served as a beacon to music lovers from all over. The license plates in its spreading parking lots read like a geographical index. Like a bonfire, too, its scattering sparks have ignited kindred fires in the surrounding area of southern Berkshire County and northwestern Connecticut, and rekindled to new brightness existing ventures in all the arts.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026

JUL 29 1960

Around Berkshire

Music Center Collection on Exhibit

LENOX — A special collection of portraits, sketches and photographs are on exhibit through August at the music room of the Lenox Library in observance of the 20th anniversary of the founding of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood.

At the request of the library, several paintings from Serenac, the home of the late conductor, Serge Koussevitsky, were loaned for the exhibit.

Among them is a painting by Leonid Pasternak, father of the late Boris Pasternak, who won the Nobel Prize for literature last year for his novel, "Dr. Zhivago." Subject of the painting is Dr. Koussevitzky conducting his orchestra in Moscow about 1915, with Alexander Scriabine, the composer, at the piano.

A sketch done in the same period by Serof is of Natalie Koussevitzky, the conductor's first wife, who died in 1942. A painting by Yagovlev shows Dr. Koussevitzky conducting in Boston.

Reproductions of several sketches done by Mrs. Olga Koussevitzky of personalities connected with the Berkshire Music Center are exhibited, as well as photographs of activities at the center.

Three portraits by Harry Lane of State Line are exhibited. One is a portrait of Mrs. Alexandra Dane. It was loaned by the family of the late Ernest B. Dane, a former president of the BSO.

Mrs. Bruce D. Sanborn of St. Paul, Minn., who endowed the music room at the library, has loaned two portraits by Mr. Lane, one of herself and another of Mrs. Koussevitsky.

• • •

BETHLEHEM, PA.
GLOBE-TIMES
D. 28,894

JUL 26 1960

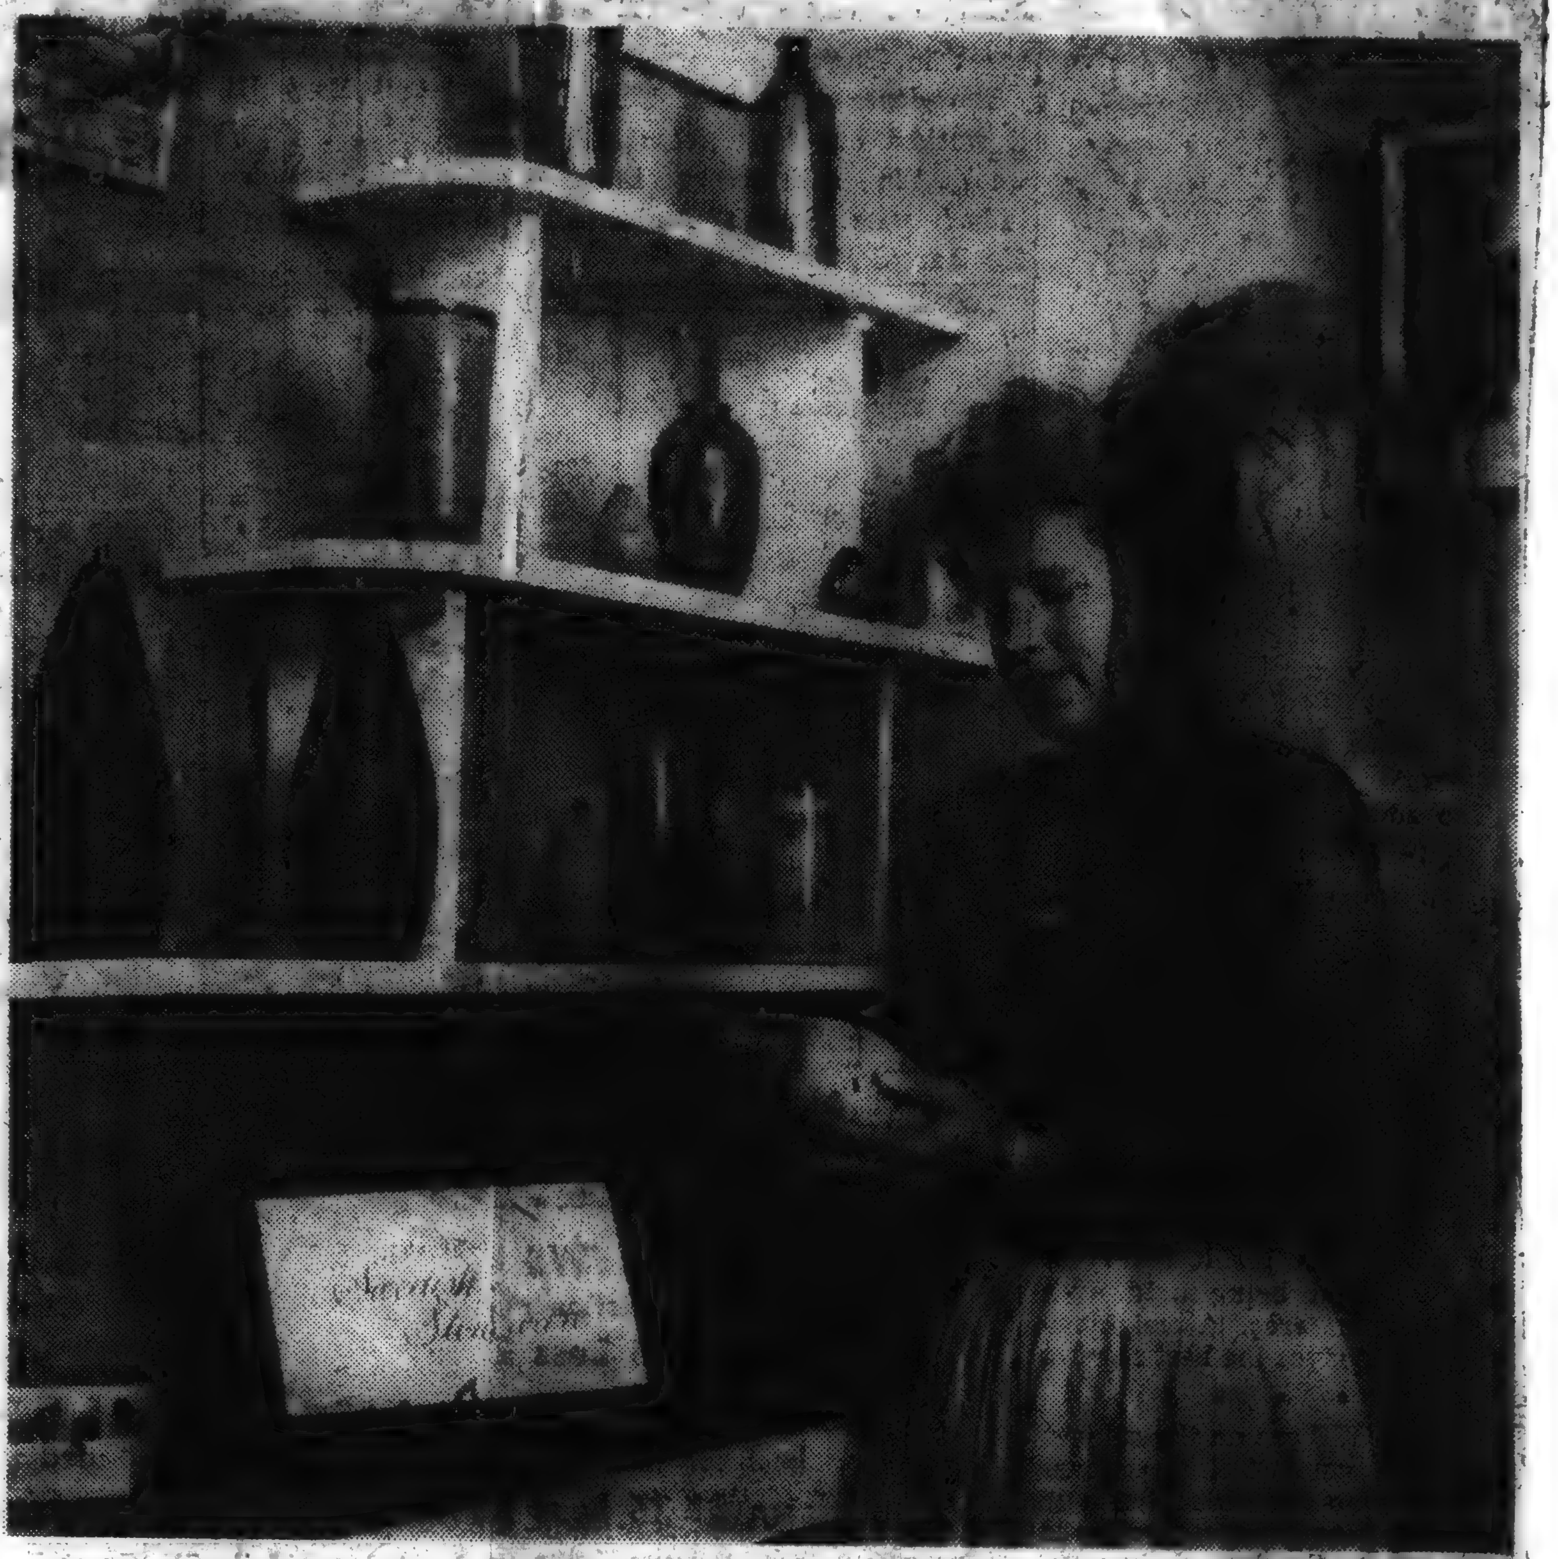
PARDON OUR PARAGRAPHS

The Tanglewood Music Festiva now being held at Lenox, Mass., features three musicians well known in Bethlehem. Hugh Ros director of New York's Schola Cantorum, conducted the Festival Chorus in Mozart's "Litany" July 16; Donald Gramm was a soloist with the chorus in Faure's "Requiem" last Friday evening, and John McCollum will be soloist July 31st in Beethoven's Ninth Symphony and again August 14th in Berlioz' "Damnation of Faust." McCollum and Gramm are favorite soloists with the Bethlehem Bach Choir and Hugh Ross is a familia figure in Bach festival audiences.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
JUL 29 1960

Meet Mahgee of Sweden, Importer

Wife of BSO Violist Sets Up Shop In Paul's Jewelry Store



Prentiss

I'M MY OWN IMPORTER says Mahgee Karol, alias Mahgee of Sweden. Arranged behind her is display of handmade Swedish stoneware, typical of handicrafts now at Randolph Paul's.

Mahgee of Sweden features some of the most attractive imports since Ingrid Bergman.

Mahgee is the wife of BSO violist Robert Karol. While the Boston Symphony Orchestra was on tour in the Orient last month, Mahgee went back to her natitve Sweden and scoured the country for distinctive import possibilities. Now she has set up shop in Lenox, sharing quarters with jeweler Randolph Paul.

"I'm my own importer," Mahgee Karol says and adds candidly, "so there aren't any middlemen, and my prices are lower as a result." Her current line includes Swedish crystal, pottery, stainless steelware, hand-carved woodenware, and hand-woven skirts. Prices on the whole are substantially less than those in stores which must add a mark-up for special buyers. For instance, you can purchase one of Mahgee's Swedish wool skirts for $10; the crystal begins at $3.50.

Swedish Simplicity, Beauty

Not all of the buying for the present Mahgee of Sweden line was accomplished in one fell swoop last month. Mahgee Karol spent six weeks in her native Sweden last year, scouting the market for imports. Her father, the retired owner of a small department store in south Sweden, introduced her to some of her sources. But the majority of the hoofing was hers. She traveled a total of 2,000 miles through Sweden in her search for new craftsmen whose work embodied the beauty and simplicity identified with Swedish design.

Mahgee Karol looks typically Scandinavian, with wheat blonde hair and sky blue eyes. She has been in America for 10 years, and speaks English as fluently as her native Swedish. Every now and then, though, she has a lapse with the English alphabet. The Swedish alphabet outdoes our with three extra letters, but our J and G confuse her a bit with their similarity. She and her husband have a small son, named Jeffrey—not Geoffrey, thank you.

Eight Years' Apprenticeship

Many of the pieces which Mrs. Karol has imported will be collector's items in a few years. She points this out sadly, because their rarity hinges on the passing of the present generation of craftsmen. The younger generation growing up in Sweden chafes at spending the longer years necessary to learn a craft, so that these arts are slowly dying out, says Mrs. Karol. A case in point is glass-blowing; it takes the average man eight years to develop the skill and lung power necessary to produce a good-sized piece of glass, Mrs. Karol says. She adds parenthetically that the excellence of Swedish crystal is the result of this kind of craftsmanship — aided by the high percentage of lead and special chemicals used in the glass mixture itself. There are some exceptions to the younger generations' attitudes about native crafts, though. Mrs. Karol recalls seeing groups of 13-year-old boys dash to the local glass factory right after school to practice etching on water glasses.

The Test Touch

In her travels, Mrs. Karol has learned how to tell authentic craftwork from mass-produced material. Picking up a dusky blue-glazed vase, she demonstrated how to test-touch the inside of a piece of pottery. "There should be rings or ridges you can feel with your hands — that's the mark of the potter's wheel," she explained. Inverting the vase, she said "and the bottom of an authentic piece of pottery is left uncolored by the potter."

Featured in the Mahgee of Sweden imports is a line of unusual pottery from the south of Sweden. Although the patterns differ — with harlequin diamonds, stylized leaves, or forest scenes represented — they have in common a basic lavender-blue color theme which is quite striking. Most unusual of these lavender-blue pieces is a square plate with rounded edges, depicting what looks like a Swedish Eve skipping rope with a towel in a mythical pasture. This one is $6.95.

Three Teak Mice

One of the best buys in glass is the oval crystal platter for $3.50; a larger size is $10. There is also a range of clear and colored crystal ware, some etched, some plain. A peacock blue tear drop vase of crystal with a clear crystal shell sells for $6.50.

Teak is deftly handled in a series of items which range from three blind mice with leather tails and ears, to richly grained lamp stands. The mice are purely decorative, sell for $1.50 apiece, and are used in Sweden on cheese trays. The lampstands are large oval pieces of teak, grained and cut so that they look like huge Brazil nuts. They are $18:50 each. One of the most unusual pieces in teak is a six-piece swivel candle stick, which looks like a movable split rail fence; it can be arranged in any pattern you desire, costs $12.95.

Teak is also used on a series of handsome stainless steel serving pieces at varying prices.

In addition to these crafts for the home, Mrs. Karol has imported Swedish woolen skirts, thick as blankets. These skirts are woven on the little island of Gotland just off Sweden, from the fleece of sheep on the island. They are done in subdued, misty plaids and plain colors, and range from $10 to $18. These skirts, like many other Mahgee of Sweden imports, have not been available previously in this country.—L.A.S.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026
AUG 1 1960

Around Berkshire

Six Brazilians Visit Tanglewood

STOCKBRIDGE—A delegation of six Brazilian editors and publishers, accompanied by a State Department interpreter, were registered at the Red Lion Inn for the weekend. They attended the Tanglewood concert Saturday night, and earlier in the day visited with members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, many of whom have played in Brazil at one time or another.

The visit to the Berkshires was arranged by John F. Downing of the Berkshire Hills Conference and Lawrence J. Flynn, promotion director of Massachusetts Department of Commerce.

The Brazilians are in the United States studying the North American system of communications, including newspapers, radio and television under the direction of the leaders program of the State Department. There will be seven stops on the countrywide tour. The Tanglewood appearance is the only one in New England.

They were interviewed over the Voice of America from Tanglewood during the day and met with others in the communication fields giving general comments on Brazil and their part in the economy.

Transcript (e)
NORTH ADAMS, Mass.
Circ. 13,026
AUG 15 1960

Tanglewood Festival Ends; Season Attendance 173,579

The Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, attracting almost 19,000 this weekend, concluded its annual six-week season yesterday. Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony Orchestra drew 173,579 for the summer season.

"Damnation of Faust"

Yesterday's concluding performance was the "Damnation of Faust" by Berlioz, directed by Charles Munch and drawing an attendance of 8,931. Accompanying the Boston Symphony Orchestra was the festival chorus, with Eleanor Steber, John McCollum, Martial Singher and David Laurent as soloists.

On Saturday, Handel's "Water Music" suite in an arrangement by Sir Hamilton Harty, began the program before an audience of 9,783. Next came the Piano Concerto in E Minor by Chopin, with Gary Graffman as soloist. The concluding work was Aaron Copland's First Symphony, with Copland himself directing the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Fewer Than '59

The season's total attendance of 173,579 — slightly lower than last year's figure — was augmented by the six Wednesday night chamber music recitals, drawing a total of 8,304 persons. Almost 12,000 attended the three all-Bach concerts, and 16,184 turned out for the three all-Mozart performances. The 12 concerts by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra attracted 138,871.

The season's two special events, "A Gala Evening" and "The Boston Pops at Tanglewood," drew a total attendance of 15,615. And the Fromm Foundation free concerts attracted 3,113.

232

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

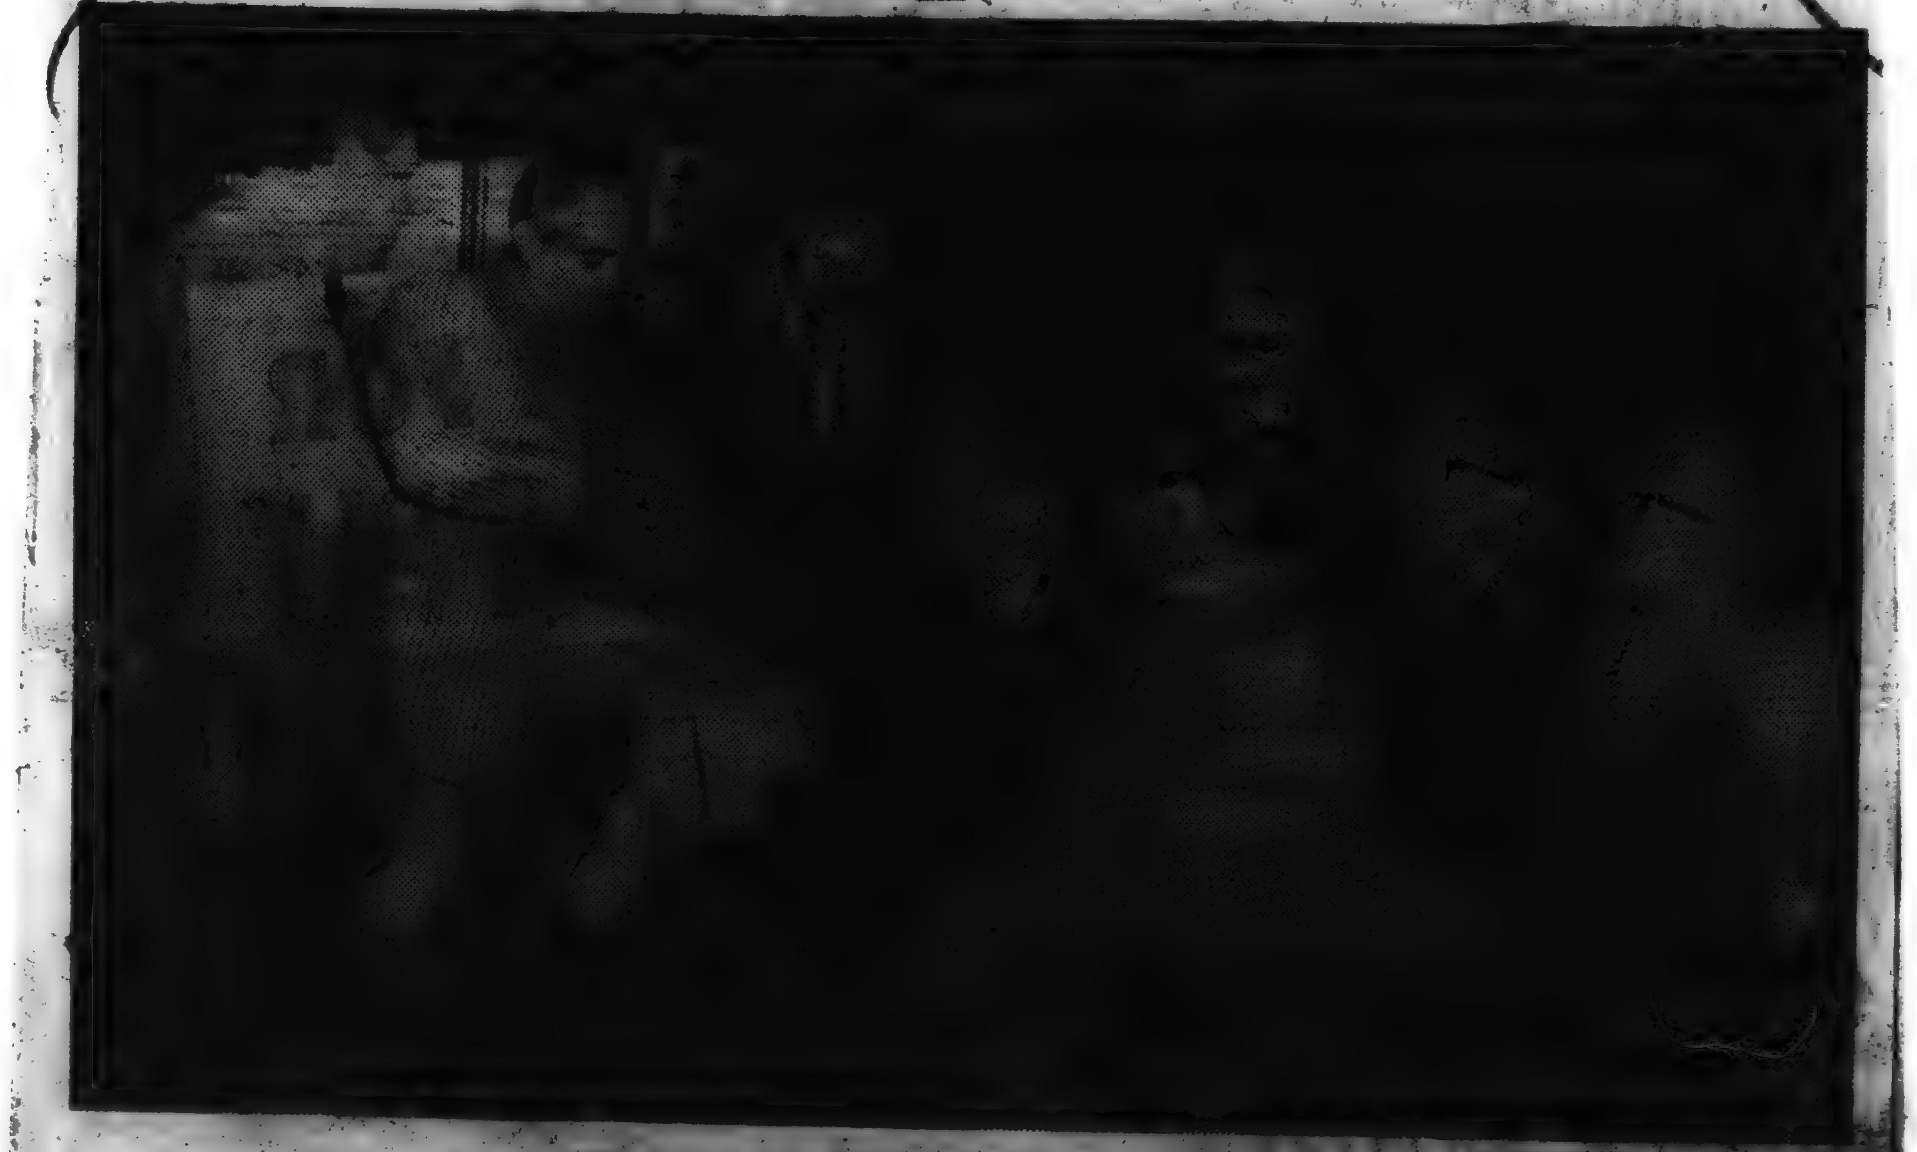
JUL 23 1960

TANGLEWOOD INTERLUDE offers music lovers a chance to view the finely-groomed grounds and admire the Berkshire panorama stretching across Stockbridge Bowl.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 101,427

JUL 31 1960

cester Sunday Telegram July 31, 1960



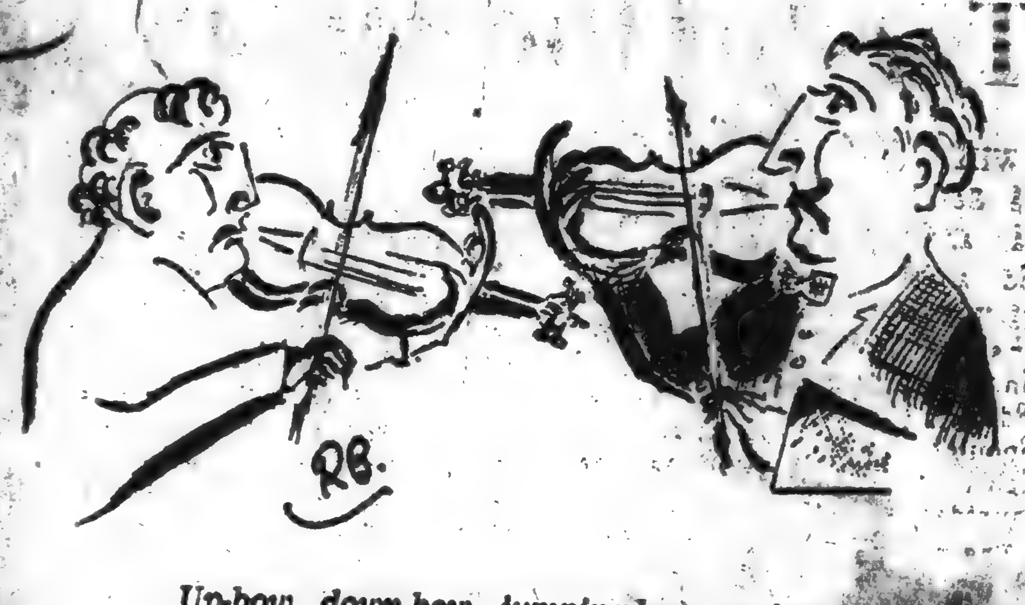
BRAZILIAN JOURNALISTS AT TANGLEWOOD
South American newsmen meet (on extreme left) musicians Jan Meyerowitz and Eleazar de Carvalho

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 6 1960

Themes From Tanglewood

By RALPH BERKOWITZ



Up-bow, down-bow, jumping-bow or frog?

A COMPOSERS' Forum on a Sunday night at Tanglewood is about as close as the average music-lover ever gets to the composer's kitchen. For the uninitiated it may be wise to explain that a kitchen is a place where things are mixed, brewed, cooked or roasted for eventual nourishment.

A composer's kitchen — to push the metaphor a bit — is a place where things are tested, put together, taken apart and subjected to experiments that aim to prove that the work will nourish this and future generations.

* * *

The Tanglewood composer, like all composers, is subject to one mighty factor: someone has to play his music.

This may sound simple enough, since the world is certainly full of players. But players are a strange lot, to a man. When they play music, be it a masterwork by Beethoven or a potential new masterwork completed as recently as last Wednesday, they like to settle instrumental problems that start cropping up with the first drawing of a bow and the first touch of finger to clarinet key.

The poor composer at such a time is relegated to the sphere of those who wait; and being by nature a forbearing and patient soul he is willing to allow the string players to argue the merits of up-bow, down-bow, jumping-bow or frog. To browse while waiting is a natural impulse, and the composer — we will picture him seated at the piano, patiently remaining above the fray—picks up a piece of music bearing on its back cover a list of numbers which the publishing house has put out over the years and which it hopes to sell.

* * *

The list of composers and compositions on that back cover draw the browser into a world of the unknown. For there one is confronted with Bossi, Kiel, Koegler, Klose and Oppel, with Jemain, Lazzari and Thirion, with Reissiger, Goetz, Molique, Maurer and Prince Louis Ferdinand.

Utter amazement! However, it is too easy to be amazed at unknown names of composers who have had trios, sonatas and quartets published. Amazement is valid only if there is no reason for publication.

The Tanglewood composer is tempted to discover why a publishing house would accept, engrave, publish and expect to sell a string Quartet in E minor by Oppel.

* * *

The string-players are still in a wrangle over the merits of a down-bow in his slow movement, and since it is but a step to a good dictionary of music the composer feels that a little research in obscure biography may be in order.

His suspicions are soon confirmed. The music dictionary speaks in no uncertain way of the Kloses, the Maurers and the Thirions. The unknown today was an estimable musician yesterday. He was a man of honors, awards, position and influence. He served, he gave much [illegible], he inspired others.

The point needs no [illegible], surely. Aren't we all aware that 99 per cent of the creative work in painting, in literature and in music has always entered the realms of the forgotten and exists today only in catalogues, in publishers' lists, dusty shelves or in museum cellars? Surely we know that fat biographical dictionaries are filled with outlines of the lives of men who at one time wielded the power of 16.

Slipping back to the piano just in time to begin his adagio—the string-players are finally agreed that an up-bow 13 bars after letter G is just the thing—the composer's mind hovers about a point terribly distant from the interpretation of his adagio. It is simply, who are today's Koeglers, Kloses, Oppels, Lazzaris and Thirions?

Mr. Berkowitz is dean of the Berkshire Music Center.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

AUG 8 1960

For the majority of people "Tanglewood" means the lovely Berkshire estate and its famous festival. But, in a few years, these very same people may ask "Tanglewood, Texas, or Tanglewood, Massachusetts?" For there is a Tanglewood, Texas. It started a few months ago as a handsome country club, on Lake Texoma, where hard-pressed businessmen from central Texas might enjoy a secluded retreat in the woods, plus all the pleasure of fishing and sailing on 142,700 acres of water, and all this only a few hours' drive from home.

But Tanglewood patrons being interested in the arts—would they have chosen such a name otherwise?—decided to let children also use the club's air-conditioned cabanas while attending a two-week vacation arts course. Under the direction of Lev Aronson, principal cellist of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, boys and girls from 12 to 15 years old study the relationship between the three arts—music, drama, and painting—and how they intermingle. Art films are presented for them and visiting performers play musical instruments from their respective countries. The sessions are held out-of-doors in the peace of the woods.

This year 25 children registered and the program was such a success that the course will be extended to six weeks next year. It is open to all, and as it gains momentum in the years to come it may very well attract young people from all over the country.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 15 1960

In Brief . . .

There's a temptation to look for some musically significant explanation for the fact that attendance at the big Tanglewood concerts dropped this year while attendance at the chamber music and Bach-Mozart concerts increased, but the prosaic fact seems to be that it can be attributed pretty much to the weather

---

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 20 1960

Other Headlines

THE TANGLEWOOD season ended on a note of artistic triumph Sunday with the Boston Symphony's performance of "The Damnation of Faust" — supplemented by a note of financial triumph with the announcement that gross receipts for 1960 totaled a record-breaking $385,592, up $47,005 from last year because of higher admission prices. Total attendance was down 6,072 from last year's 179,651, but the decline (attributed largely to the weather) was confined to the big concerts by the full orchestra. Attendance at the Bach-Mozart series, chamber music, and student events was higher than last year.

233

Th [illegible] Star - Aug [illegible] 2, 1960

Berkshire Festival

New Developments In Musical Mecca

By ERIC McLEAN

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 2 — Nearly all the glamour of the Berkshire Festival is associated with the weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. On Saturdays and Sundays, the normally quiet New England towns of Lenox and Stockbridge, on either side of the Tanglewood estate, become a nightmare of traffic. The automobiles pour in by the thousands from the turnpikes, and the proprietors of even the humblest restaurants in the district can afford to behave like the owner of La Tour d'Argent.

Although the largest crowd turns up just for the Sunday afternoon concert, a considerable number plan on a weekend of music, and every boarding-house and country inn within a radius of twenty miles is filled.

And yet there always seems to be room for more because the attendance of the Berkshire Festivals has risen steadily since they were founded twenty-three years ago.

One of the inexplicable things about the Tanglewood estate is its lawns. When ten to twelve thousand people are herded into the area every weekend, to say nothing of the cars which are parked on the grass (eight thousand last Sunday), one might expect the lawns to end up looking like an abandoned buffalo-wallow. Yet they somehow manage to retain their appearance of a superior golf course—an even and healthy pelt of green.

The other near-miracle of the Tanglewood setting is the famous shed. It is a mathematical segment of a circle, with the orchestra stage at its point. To say that it accommodates six thousand people gives only a small idea of its vastness. It has to be seen.

The sides and back curve of the shed are open except for a short apron from the roof to provide minimum protection from the weather as well as a slight acoustical enclosure.

The sound in this building was imperfect, as might have been expected, but the fact that the music came through with reasonable clarity was cause for wonder.

A few seasons ago, it was decided that some attempt should be made to improve the definition and balance of sound, and the firm of Bolt, Beranek and Newman, the acoustical consultants, were called in. Their solution was a new shell and canopy for the orchestra, employing solid reflecting surfaces and absorbent space, strategically located to reduce the volume of brass and percussion sounds, and to give new clarity and force to the magnificent Boston string section. The scientific solution was presented by the acousticians, and the final pattern was worked out in collaboration with the celebrated architect, Saarinen. The result is exciting, both visually and aurally.

The canopy design appears to be a receding perspective of dark triangles which changes its aspect from every angle of the hall, presenting an almost kaleidoscopic variety of forms.

But the effect of the new shell and canopy on the music is almost uncanny. A full, well-blended, yet detailed sound is projected to the furthermost benches of the shed, and although it begins to deteriorate outside the shell, orchestra tuttis can be heard with surprising clarity over an area many times the size of the shed.

Most people, on first hearing, are convinced that an elaborate system of electrical amplification has been installed, but in actual fact there is not a single speaker in the hall. It might be said that the trick has been done with mirrors, but the astonishing thing is the accuracy with which these acoustical reflectors have been employed to enhance and magnify the sound of the Boston Symphony.

This year, still another set of heavy panels, with angled surfaces to disperse the sound, have been suspended around the back curve of the shed.

To give some idea of the effectiveness of this whole acoustical set-up, I might pick out solo passages, although the design was intended for orchestral sound and not solos.

The first 'cellist has an important role in the slow movement of Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony, and, in the performance I heard, even the attacks of his bow came through clearly although I must have been a good two hundred feet from the source of sound.

The new canopy leaves something to be desired in a piano performance, however. Byron Janis played Rachmaninoff's third concerto last weekend, and while some of the fault may have been his, the solo instrument sounded blurred and rather hard.

But give the acousticians time. They will probably come up with a solution for even the piano — the most difficult of all instruments to project naturally.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
TRIBUNE
D. 223,559 S. 650,165

SEP 11 1960

Summing up the Berkshire festival season of the Boston Symphony, critic Miles Kastendieck in Musical America regretted the lack of an "over-all programmatic idea to give it shape" and said that seasoned festival visitors "wished for more provocative programs"

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 6 1960

Themes From Tanglewood

By RALPH BERKOWITZ

A COMPOSERS' Forum on a Sunday night at Tanglewood is about as close as the average music-lover ever gets to the composer's kitchen. For the uninitiated it may be wise to explain that a kitchen is a place where things are mixed, brewed, cooked or roasted for eventual nourishment.

A composer's kitchen — to push the metaphor a bit — is a place where things are tested, put together, taken apart and subjected to experiments that aim to prove that the work will nourish this and future generations.

Up-bow, down-bow, jumping-bow or frog?

The Tanglewood composer, like all composers, is subject to one mighty factor: someone has to play his music.

This may sound simple enough, since the world is certainly full of players. But players are a strange lot, to a man. When they play music, be it a masterwork by Beethoven or a potential new masterwork completed as recently as last Wednesday, they like to settle instrumental problems that start cropping up with the first drawing of a bow and the first touch of finger to clarinet key.

The poor composer at such a time is relegated to the sphere of those who wait; and being by nature a forbearing and patient soul he is willing to allow the string players to argue the merits of up-bow, down-bow, jumping-bow or frog. To browse while waiting is a natural impulse, and the composer — we will picture him seated at the piano, patiently remaining above the fray — picks up a piece of music bearing on its back cover a list of numbers which the publishing house has put out over the years and which it hopes to sell.

• • •

The list of composers and compositions on that back cover draw the browser into a world of the unknown. For there one is confronted with Bossi, Kiel, Koegler, Klose and Oppel, with Jemain, Lazzari and Thirion, with Reissiger, Goetz, Molique, Maurer and Prince Louis Ferdinand.

Utter amazement! However, it is too easy to be amazed at unknown names of composers who have had trios, sonatas and quartets published. Amazement is valid only if there is no reason for publication.

The Tanglewood composer is tempted to discover why a publishing house would accept, engrave, publish and expect to sell a string Quartet in E minor by Oppel.

• • •

The string-players are still in a wrangle over the merits of a down-bow in his slow movement, and since it is but a step to a good dictionary of music the composer feels that a little research in obscure biography may be in order.

His suspicions are soon confirmed. The music dictionary speaks in no uncertain way of the Kloses, the Maurers and the Thirions. The unknown today was an estimable musician yesterday. He was a man of honors, awards, position and influence. He served, he gave much [illegible] he inspired others.

The point needs no [illegible] surely. Aren't we all [illegible] 99 per cent of the [illegible] in painting, in literature and in music has always entered the realms of the forgotten and exists today only in catalogues, in publishers' lists, dusty shelves or in museum cellars? Surely we know that fat biographical dictionaries are filled with outlines of the lives of men who at one time wielded the power of [illegible].

Slipping back to the piano just in time to begin his adagio — the string-players are finally agreed that an up-bow 12 bars after letter G is just the thing — the composer's mind hovers about a point terribly distant from the interpretation of his adagio. It is simply, who are today's Koeglers, Kloses, Oppels, Lazzaris and Thirions?

Mr. Berkowitz is dean of the Berkshire Music Center.

Christian Science
Monitor (e)
BOSTON, Mass.
Circ. 156,267

AUG 8 1960

For the majority of people "Tanglewood" means the lovely Berkshire estate and its famous festival. But, in a few years, these very same people may ask "Tanglewood, Texas, or Tanglewood, Massachusetts?" For there is a Tanglewood, Texas. It started a few months ago as a handsome country club, on Lake Texoma, where hard-pressed businessmen from central Texas might enjoy a secluded retreat in the woods, plus all the pleasure of fishing and sailing on 142,700 acres of water, and all this only a few hours' drive from home.

But Tanglewood patrons being interested in the arts—would they have chosen such a name otherwise?—decided to let children also use the club's air-conditioned cabanas while attending a two-week vacation arts course. Under the direction of Lev Aronson, principal cellist of the Dallas Symphony Orchestra, boys and girls from 12 to 15 years old study the relationship between the three arts—music, drama, and painting—and how they intermingle. Art films are presented for them and visiting performers play musical instruments from their respective countries. The sessions are held out-of-doors in the peace of the woods.

This year 25 children registered and the program was such a success that the course will be extended to six weeks next year. It is open to all, and as it gains momentum in the years to come it may very well attract young people from all over the country.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 15 1960

In Brief . . .

There's a temptation to look for some musically significant explanation for the fact that attendance at the big Tanglewood concerts dropped this year while attendance at the chamber music and Bach-Mozart concerts increased, but the prosaic fact seems to be that it can be attributed pretty much to the weather.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 20 1960

Other Headlines

THE TANGLEWOOD season ended on a note of artistic triumph Sunday with the Boston Symphony's performance of "The Damnation of Faust" — supplemented by a note of financial triumph with the announcement that gross receipts for 1960 totaled a record-breaking $385,592, up $47,005 from last year because of higher admission prices. Total attendance was down 6,072 from last year's 179,651, but the decline (attributed largely to the weather) was confined to the big concerts by the full orchestra. Attendance at the Bach-Mozart series, chamber music, and student events was higher than last year.

THE MONTREAL STAR - AUGUST 2, 1960

Berkshire Festival

New Developments In Musical Mecca

By ERIC McLEAN

LENOX, Mass., Aug. 2 — Nearly all the glamour of the Berkshire Festival is associated with the weekend concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. On Saturdays and Sundays, the normally quiet New England towns of Lenox and Stockbridge, on either side of the Tanglewood estate, become a nightmare of traffic. The automobiles pour in by the thousands from the turnpikes, and the proprietors of even the humblest restaurants in the district can afford to behave like the owner of La Tour d'Argent.

Although the largest crowd turns up just for the Sunday afternoon concert, a considerable number plan on a weekend of music, and every boarding-house and country inn within a radius of twenty miles is filled.

And yet there always seems to be room for more because the attendance of the Berkshire Festivals has risen steadily since they were founded twenty-three years ago.

One of the inexplicable things about the Tanglewood estate is its lawns. When ten to twelve thousand people are herded into the area every weekend, to say nothing of the cars which are parked on the grass (eight thousand last Sunday), one might expect the lawns to end up looking like an abandoned buffalo-wallow. Yet they somehow manage to retain their appearance of a superior golf course—an even and healthy pelt of green.

The other near-miracle of the Tanglewood setting is the famous shed. It is a mathematical segment of a circle, with the orchestra stage at its point. To say that it accommodates six thousand people gives only a small idea of its vastness. It has to be seen.

The sides and back curve of the shed are open except for a short apron from the roof to provide minimum protection from the weather as well as a slight acoustical enclosure.

The sound in this building was imperfect, as might have been expected, but the fact that the music came through with reasonable clarity was cause for wonder.

A few seasons ago, it was decided that some attempt should be made to improve the definition and balance of sound, and the firm of Bolt, Beranek and Newman, the acoustical consultants, were called in. Their solution was a new shell and canopy for the orchestra, employing solid reflecting surfaces and absorbent space, strategically located to reduce the volume of brass and percussion sounds, and to give new clarity and force to the magnificent Boston string section. The scientific solution was presented by the acousticians, and the final pattern was worked out in collaboration with the celebrated architect, Saarinen. The result is exciting, both visually and aurally.

The canopy design appears to be a receding perspective of dark triangles which changes its aspect from every angle of the hall, presenting an almost kaleidoscopic variety of forms.

But the effect of the new shell and canopy on the music is almost uncanny. A full, well-blended, yet detailed sound is projected to the furthermost benches of the shed, and although it begins to deteriorate outside the shell, orchestra tuttis can be heard with surprising clarity over an area many times the size of the shed.

Most people, on first hearing, are convinced that an elaborate system of electrical amplification has been installed, but in actual fact there is not a single speaker in the hall. It might be said that the trick has been done with mirrors, but the astonishing thing is the accuracy with which these acoustical reflectors have been employed to enhance and magnify the sound of the Boston Symphony.

This year, still another set of heavy panels, with angled surfaces to disperse the sound, have been suspended around the back curve of the shed.

To give some idea of the effectiveness of this whole acoustical set-up, I might pick out solo passages, although the design was intended for orchestral sound and not solos.

The first 'cellist has an important role in the slow movement of Walter Piston's Sixth Symphony, and, in the performance I heard, even the attacks of his bow came through clearly although I must have been a good two hundred feet from the source of sound.

The new canopy leaves something to be desired in a piano performance, however. Byron Janis played Rachmaninoff's third concerto last weekend, and while some of the fault may have been his, the solo instrument sounded blurred and rather hard.

But give the acousticians time. They will probably come up with a solution for even the piano — the most difficult of all instruments to project naturally.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.
TRIBUNE
D. 223,559 S. 650,165

SEP 11 1960

Summing up the Berkshire festival season of the Boston Symphony, critic Miles Kastendieck in Musical America regretted the lack of an "over-all programmatic idea to give it shape" and said that seasoned festival visitors "wished for more provocative programs."

234

El Panama America 9-11-60

El Festival de la Música de Berkshire

La Srita. Emilia Butcher, Directora de los cursos de música en las Escuelas Latinoamericanas de la Zona del Canal, quien regresó recientemente de Massachusetts, donde pasó varias semanas estudiando en el Centro de Música de Berkshire, dirige el coro de la escuela de La Boca, durante una presentación de dicho coro en la Asociación Panameño-Norteamericana.

Por EMILY BUTCHER,

(Directora de la Escuela de Música de las Escuelas Latinoamericanas en la Zona del Canal)

Después de haber estado viviende seis semanas bajo la contínua influencia de la música es a mi parecer haber estado alejada del mundo y sus problemas, ya estoy de regreso a mi diaria rutina del salón de clases con gratos recuerdos de mi reciente viaje al escenario del Festival de Música de Berkshire, comúnmente conocido como Tanglewood en el Oeste de Massachusetts, en los Estados Unidos.

La historia de Tanglewood data de la época de Nathaniel Hawthorne y lleva consigo fascinantes leyendas así como también ejemplos de los adelantos de la civilización en el desarrollo de las Colinas de Berkshire al Oeste de Massachusetts. En la actualidad, es la casa veraniega de la Orquesta Sinfónica de Boston, la que se presenta cada fin de semana durante la temporada. Aunque los miembros de la Orquesta, el cuerpo de estudiantes y el público quiere y admira a Charles Munch, Director de la Orquesta, siempre están latente rmeiniscencias del fallecido Dr. Serge Koussevitsky antiguo Director. Los nombres de "Tanglewood" y "Koussevitsky" están unidos desde que el al Dr. Koussevitsky a quien se le debe agradecimiento por haber soñado con el establecimiento de un grandioso Centro de Música y Arte q' daría por resultado la irradiación de los rayos de la cultura sobre una nación y sobre el mundo entero", sueño que más tarde se vio realizado en el centro Musical de Berkshire.

La viuda del Dr. Koussevitsky, Olga Koussevitsky ha continuado su profundo interés por el Centro. Su hogar situado cerca de Tanglewood desde donde se divisa Stockbridge Bowl, centro para los jóvenes compositores. En los bosques cercanos planea construir cabañas individuales como sitio de retiro y soledad. Esto, también, es para conservar el gran interés [illegible] Dr. Koussevitsky en los jóvenes compositores norteamericanos.

Aaron Copland, reconocido compositor norteamericano es el director del Centro Musial de Berkshire. Roque Cordero, Director del Instituto Nacional de Música de Panamá fue estudiante en Tanglewood en el verano de 1947.

El Centro ofrece un curso de verano de seis semanas para proporcionar música a través de la participación de instrumentos y voces. Hay grupos de estudio, departamentos para orquestas, ópera, coros, composición, dirección de orquestas y cámaras de música.

Los instructores representan una selección de los mejores de los Estados Unidos y algunas veces incluyen un igual número de renombrados músicos visitantes de otros países. Los estudiantes vienen de todos los Estados de los Estados Unidos así como también de países extranjeros. Son recomendados usualmente al Centro, basados en el interés musical, entrenamiento y habilidad en contribuir intensamente durante los varioados programas presentados al público durante el Festival. El alto nivel de habilidad de los estudiantes, se acopla al calibre de los profesores lo que hacen posible efectuar en seis semanas un intenso entrenamiento el que, de otra manera sería absolutamente imposible.

El edificio de Música de Tanglewood es una inmensa estructura de diseño sin igual, que desempeña una labor única. Ambos, profesionales y aficionados de la música en años recientes disfrutaron de expriencias de extraordinario deleite y valía.

Aparte del espíritu del lugar, es el espíritu del verano en la bellísima región llena de maravillosos paisajes. La vista general después de un día de trabajo —y trabajo intenso ha sido el orden de cada día— es un enriquecimiento colectivo de cultura.

El público, compuesto de todas las capas sociales está por supuesto formado por personas que vienen por la música y su afición hacia ella jóvenes de las vecindades; visitantes que vienen en carro de lejanos y cercanos lugares. Sobrepasando la capacidad de los 6.000 asientos que posee el Edificio, portando sillas, alfombras y cajitas con almuerzos, el público se tiende sobre el césped y bajo los árboles disfrutando de la acústica del lugar que la lleva lo suficientemente lejos doblando la capacidad de la del Edificio. Aquí, miles de personas escuchan juntas y se olvidan de los prejuicios raciales, sociales, y religiosos en su regocijo muto de la lengua universal la música.

Para mí ha sido el más inspirador y fascinante verano que ha valido el haber hecho cada esfuerzo y sacrificio para realizarlo. Ha sido fortificante el haber obtenido nuevas ideas de cómo y qué dirigir, el haber cantado desde el amanecer hasta el crepúsculo con voces entrenadas bajo una experta dirección. Fue instructivo escuchar a mis compañeros estudiantes presentarse en los departamentos de ópera y orquestas. Fue emocionante formar parte de las grandes presentaciones con el coro de Tanglewood y con el Coro del Festival y con la Orqueta Sinfónica de Boston bajo la batuta de personalidades tales como Charles Munch y Pierre Monteux. Yo disfruté de todo esto y siento que cada músico — aficionado, educador o profesional— ganaría con un verano en tanglewood el lugar que ha llegado a ser la meca de la música.

Nota al Jefe de Redacción:

(Uno de los miembros fundadores del Festival de Berkshire junto con la Sra. Gertrude Robinson Smith de Nueva York, fue el Sr. George W. Edman, Primer Secretario de la Embajadade los Estados Unidos y Director del Servicio Informativo de los Estados Unidos en Panamá. El trabajó como empleado de la Junta por muchos años siendo también Presidente del Comité Coordinador. La Sra. de Edman fue Vicepresidenta Ejecutiva a cargo del Comité de Voluntarias de la Comunidad en el Este de los Estados Unidos durante el Festival Infantil. Fue por intermedio del señor y la señora Edman que la Srita. Butcher se interesó en Tanglewwod).

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.

SEP 1960

G: Pierre Monteux, right, is given birthday congratulations from Charles Munch, left, during a rehearsal of the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood. Looking on is Thomas D. Perry, Jr., [illegible] the orchestra's manager. Mr. Monteux was 85.

MISS BUTCHER REHEARSING HER CHORUS — Miss Emily Butcher director of music in the Latin American Schools in the Zone, recently returned from several weeks of study at the Berkshire Music Center in Massachusetts. She is shown rehearsing the La Boca chorus at the Panamanian-North American Association's cultural center.

Woman's World

Emily Butcher Of Zone's Latin Schools Back After Musical Trip To Tanglewood

— o —

By EMILY BUTCHER

(Miss Butcher is director of music in the Canal Zone's Latin American Schools)

After six weeks of living in a round-the-clock music environment seemingly shut away from the rest of the world and its problems, I am now back to the routine of my daily classroom work with precious memories of my recent trip to the scene of the Berkshire Music Festival, commonly known as Tanglewood, in Western Massachusetts, U.S.A.

The story of Tanglewood dates back to the days of Nathanial Hawthorne and carries with it legendary fascination as well as examples of the processes of civilization at work in the Berkshire Hills of Western Massachusetts.

Today it is the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which performs every weekend during the season. Although the members of the Orchestra, the student body and the audience love and admire Charles Munch, director of the orchestra, reminiscences of the late Dr. Serge Koussevitsky, former director, are ever present.

The names "Tanglewood" and "Koussevitsky" dovetail since to Dr. Koussevitsky goes gratitude for the dream "of the establishment of a great Music and Art Center which will result in the radiation of the beams of culture over a nation and over the whole world," which later found its realization in the Berkshire Music Center.

Dr. Koussevitsky's widow, Mrs Olga Koussevitsky, has continued her deep interest in the Center. Her home, which is near Tanglewood, overlooking Stockbridge Bowl, is established as a center for young composers. In the nearby woods she plans to erect small individual cabins for privacy and solitude. This, too, is in keeping with Dr. Koussevitsky's great interest in young American composers.

Aaron Copland, well known US composer, is the director of the Berkshire Music Center.

Roque Cordero, director of the National Institute of Music in Panama City, was a student at Tanglewood in the summer of 1957.

The Center offers a six-week summer session to provide music through participation in instruments and voice. There are a study group, departments for orchestra, opera, chorus, composition, conducting, and chamber music.

Instructors represent a selection from the very best in America and sometimes include an equally renowned visiting leader from aborad.

Students come from all over America and countries around the globe as well. They are usualiy recommended to the Center on the basis of their musical interest, training, and ability and contribute immensely to the varied programs presented to the public during the Festival.

The high level of student ability, coupled with the calibre of the professors, makes it possible to accomplish in six weeks of intensive training what would otherwise be absolutely impossible.

Taglewood Music Shed, a huge structure of unique design, serves a unique function. Here in recent years both the professional and the amateur of music have enjoyed experiences of extraordinary pleasure and worth.

Besides the spirit of the place is the spirit of summer in the beautiful countryside filled with scenic marvels and literary and historic associations. The general picture through a working day—and hard work has been the order of every day—is a collective enrichment of culture.

The audience, drawn from every stratum of life, is obviously composed of people who come together for music and the love of it—youngsters from neighboring camps; visitors coming by automobiles from near and far.

MISS EMILY BUTCHER

Overflowing the capacity of the 6,000-seat Shed, carrying chairs, rugs, and picnic lunches, the audience spread themselves over the lawns and under the trees enjoying the acoustics of the place that carries far enough to double the capacity of the Shed. Here thousands of people listen together and forget racial, social, and religious prejudices in their mutual enjoyment of a universal language—music.

To me it was a most inspiring and fascinating summer worthy of every effort and sacrifice to make it possible. It was refreshing to gain new ideas in the how and what to conduct, and to sing from dawn till dusk with trained singers under expert guidance. It was educational to hear fellow students perform in orchestra and opera departments. It was thrilling to be a part of all big performances with the Tanglewood Choir or Festival Chorus and the Boston Symphony Orchestra under the baton of personalities like Charles Munch and Pierre Monteux.

I enjoyed it all and feel that every musician — amateur, educator, or professional — would profit from a summer in Tanglewood, the place that has become a mecca of music.

(Editor's Note: A co-founder of the Berkshire Festival along with Miss Gertrude Robinson Smith of New York, was George W. Edman, First Secretary of the US Embassy and director of the United States Information Agency in Panama. He served as clerk of the board for many years as well as chairman of the co-ordinating committee. Mrs. Edman was an executive vice president in charge of the community volunteer committees in the Eastern part of the United States during the Festival's infancy. It was through Mr. and Mrs. Edman that Miss Butcher became interested in Tanglewood.)

TROY, N.Y.
TIMES RECORD
D. 40,588

AUG 3 1 1960

Tanglewood Concerts Set For WAMC-FM

A second evening of Tanglewood concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra has been added to the WAMC-FM broadcasting schedule. WAMC is on 90.7 mc.

Starting tomorrow and every Thursday at 8:30 p.m., a full-length concert from the 1960 Berkshire Music Festival will be presented.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
JOURNAL-AMERICAN
D. 571,705 S. 778,562

AUG 1 1960

Trips to Tanglewood

The Brooklyn Academy of Music sponsored its fourth annual "Sunday at Tanglewood," a special one-day excursion yesterday to the Berkshire Festival. Mrs. Andrew L. Gomory, 84 Joralemon st., Brooklyn Heights was chairman.

Heart of the music festival: inside The Shed that seats 6,000.

The Tanglewood Tale of To-day

TANGLEWOOD,
Massachusetts.

OUTSIDE the United States there has been little said or written about a musical phenomenon which ends here each year just as the Edinburgh International Festival is about to begin.

This is the festival at Tanglewood, high in the Berkshire Hills on a beautiful 210-acre estate where Hawthorne wrote his "Tales."

A comparison between Tanglewood and Edinburgh is inescapable. Tanglewood, too, ends each year in the red, but alongside Edinburgh's hand-to-mouth existence it is prodigiously wealthy.

It was born before the 1939-45 War. A benefactor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra gave to the then conductor, Koussevitsky, the Tanglewood estate near the elegant New England village of Lenox, Massachusetts, about 140 miles from both New York and Boston.

Mr. Koussevitsky promptly handed it over to the orchestra, already well-to-do by any standards, with a reminder that it would be an ideal setting for a summer music festival and school.

DISASTER, AND SUCCESS

The first festival venture, in 1937, was catastrophic. A concert in a vast marquee coincided with a violent rainstorm. Instruments were damaged. A woman in the audience mounted the platform and said: "The storm has proved conclusively that we need a shed. We must raise the necessary $100,000 to build one."

The necessary was raised in time to build "a shed" for the following year's festival—and what a shed! It holds 6,037 people seated. On the lawns surrounding its open sides there is room for [illegible] 6,000 more to listen.

Audiences of 12,000 now are nothing out of the ordinary, but the great building, covering one-and-a-half acres, is still affectionately "The Shed."

And such is the support for and prosperity of the Boston Symphony

—From—
NORMAN RILEY

Orchestra and its Tanglewood Festival and School that recently it has been possible to spend another £18,000 on a new canopy over the stage and other installations to improve the acoustics to a degree almost unbelievable in a structure that is, after all, little different from a fan-shaped aircraft hangar.

The orchestra costs over £700,000 a year to maintain. In ticket sales and revenue from broadcasting and recording it earns 90 per cent. of this. The annual deficit is wiped out by voluntary organisations who contributed about £100,000 last year and enabled the festival to endow valuable prizes and scholarships.

All the indications are so far that this year's attendances at the Festival will be at least equal to last year's total of 180,000, who paid £117,000 for admission. Three Beethoven concerts had average audiences of just over 11,000. Demand for seats is mounting so steadily that even final rehearsals are now opened to the public in The Shed on Saturday mornings.

In a downpour of rain I attended one which attracted 2,500 people at 10s each for adults, 3s 6d for children, though they all inevitably were soaked to the skin in the short walk from their cars to The Shed. Six such Saturday mornings have produced nearly £7,000 for the orchestra pensions fund.

These are the kind of figures to arouse envy and despair among festival promoters in Britain, and they are matched by the generous scale on which American music lovers have endowed all the facilities provided at Tanglewood.

These include a theatre-concert hall for opera and recitals, with 1,200 seats, a chamber music hall for 500, and five small studios, apart from countless rooms in which 400 summer school students can work uninterrupted under the guidance of [illegible] members of the orchestra. [illegible] idea of the Stakhanovite atmosphere may be gauged from the installation at the school of 70 pianos by one firm alone.

Most of the students, from all parts of the world, live in a dormitory at a school emptied by holidays. One of the first I met was Miss Astrid Virginia Stocks, 23, of Robin Hood Lane, Kingston Vale, London, a Royal College of Music student doing an advanced course on the oboe. It's a joint tribute to both the infectious enthusiasm of Tanglewood and the Gustav Holst-Herbert Howells tradition at St. Paul's Girls' School to put on record that the last time I heard her play was at a school concert at Brook Green.

Now she joins an exceptional coterie of zealots who have to pay £130 for their tuition and keep for six weeks, on top of fares to Tanglewood. This can be a tough budget for the few without scholarships.

On Thursday the students, who have their own full-scale orchestra, their own opera school, their own school of composition, staged the première of "Port Town," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz.

Mr. Meyerowitz, with such distinguished company as Honegger, Hindemith, Copland, Milhaud and Samuel Barber, has served on the composition teaching staff here. "Port Town" is the third of his operas to get its first hearing here.

NO-NONSENSE SCHOOL

Conductors, players, singers, stage directors, if they survive the six weeks' intensity, leave the school with an implicit endorsement that they belong to the no-nonsense school of professional music.

Tanglewood is idle for 46 out of the 52 weeks of the year. But the economics of this, apparently, are not so bad as to tempt the Boston Symphony Orchestra administration into lending Tanglewood's allure to any other organisation in the spring or autumn.

One cannot help asking: Is there nowhere in Britain, in the more attractive spots where the Ministry of Works and the Air Ministry were wont to place their war-time period pieces, an aircraft hangar, that could be adapted and renamed The Shed for less than £35,000?

Is there no deserted airfield where the buildings near The Shed could be transformed into a motel so that hundreds of music lovers, throughout a comfortably staggered holiday season, could taste some of the delights of Tanglewood?

Daily Telegraph, London, Eng.,
Saturday, Aug 6/60

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 45,338

AUG 22 1960

173,579 Paid To Attend Symphony Tanglewood Season

LENOX — The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival was highlighted by the appearance of seven new guest artists and the performance of 15 works for the first time at Tanglewood.

Attendance dropped slightly due to the inclement weather which prevailed at 12 of the 30 orchestra and chamber music concerts and open rehearsals.

An increase in the price of some tickets, however, more than offset the attendance loss. An audience of 173,579 paid more than $385,000 during the 25th anniversary of the BSO's first participation at the Tanglewood concerts.

The Berkshire Music Center, the Orchestra's summer school of music, celebrated its 20th anniversary. Directed by Charles Munch with Aaron Copland, chairman of the faculty and Ralph Berkowitz, Dean, the 1960 session attracted 286 students from 34 states and 13 foreign countries.

Professor G. Wallace Woodworth of Harvard University inaugurated a new school department, listening and analysis.

Charles Munch also celebrated his 10th anniversary as music director of the Festival.

DOCTOR'S WIFE
NEW YORK, N.Y.
BI-MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.

JUL AUG 1960

MUSIC

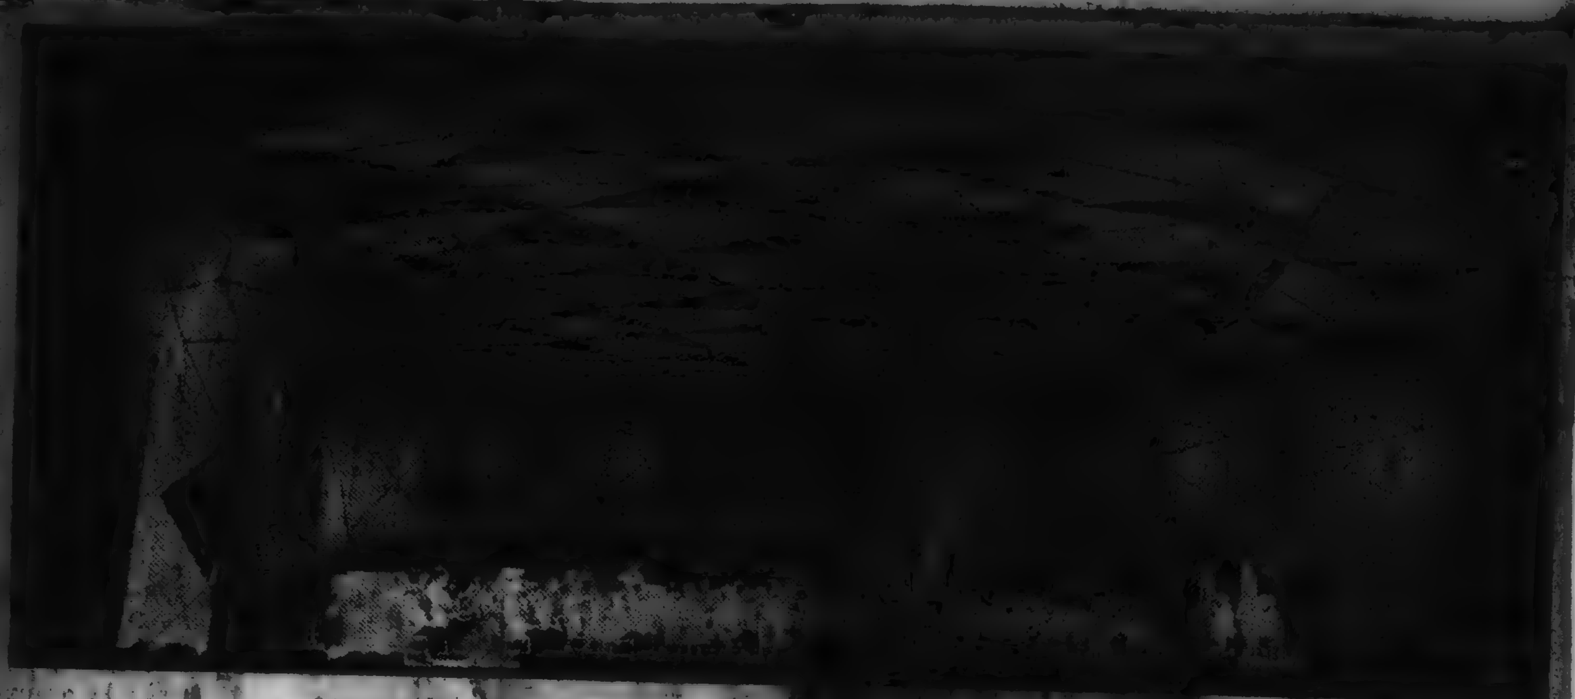
5154

Two music festivals make this a most important musical summer. The most up and coming U. S. A. festival is at [illegible] Colorado, through September 4. What Tanglewood has been these many d[illegible] Aspen is fast becoming. Though it still lacks th[illegible] of a major symphony orchestra (Tanglewood [illegible] summer home of the great Boston Symphony), [illegible] does schedule a staggering program of musical delights. This season begins a two year-long homage to Beethoven. And that means the Master's works performed exhaustively and with meticulous musicality. Special also this summer will be a tribute to American composer Aaron Copland. Another very special event there will be the first complete performance of Mozart's little known opera Thamos, King of Egypt. And this season, superb mezzo-soprano Jennie Tourel will not only be a permanent member of Apsen's Faculty, but will sing in concert songs of Berlioz, and Schoenberg's recondite Book of The Hanging Gardens. Miss Tourel is the greatest living exponent of the French art song: Aspen is the perfect place in which to hear her at her most relaxed best.

Bach and Mozart open the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Massachusetts. The music begins here on July 8 and ends on August 14. This year a larger public will be able to hear the opening Bach and Mozart concerts, for upon the stage of the hugh music shed, a special shell is being erected. This shell will accommodate the smaller ensembles needed to perform the two masters, and making the big auditorium more useful for concerts of a more intimate nature. The shell on stage makes it acoustically possible to give the audience this great musical treat. The most delightful way to hear music at Tanglewood is to sit out on the lawns during concert time and to breathe in the music along with the fragrant mountain air.

TROY MORNING RECORD
Wednesday, August 3, 1960

ATTEND MUSIC FESTIVAL—Approximately 187 students, members of the faculty and friends of the College of St. Rose attended the music festival at Tanglewood recently. The day's trip was sponsored by the Music Department of the College. Among those attending from the Troy Area were, left to right: Sister Edward Cecilia, C.S.J., of St. Joseph's Seminary Provincial House, 15th street, Troy; Sister Mary Clare, P.B.V.M., and Sister Mary Magdalen, P.B.V.M., both of St. Colman's Home, Watervliet, and two students, left to right, Maureen Morris of Watervliet and Mary Jane Burke of Troy.



Heart of the music festival—inside the Shed that seats 6,000.

The Tanglewood Tale of To-day

TANGLEWOOD,
Massachusetts.

OUTSIDE the United States there has been little said or written about a musical phenomenon which ends here each year just as the Edinburgh International Festival is about to begin.

This is the festival at Tanglewood, high in the Berkshire Hills on a beautiful 210-acre estate where Hawthorne wrote his "Tales."

A comparison between Tanglewood and Edinburgh is inescapable. Tanglewood, too, ends each year in the red, but alongside Edinburgh's hand-to-mouth existence it is prodigiously wealthy.

It was born before the 1939-45 War. A benefactor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra gave to the then conductor, Koussevitsky, the Tanglewood estate near the elegant New England village of Lenox, Massachusetts, about 140 miles from both New York and Boston.

Mr. Koussevitsky promptly handed it over to the orchestra, already well-to-do by any standards, with a reminder that it would be an ideal setting for a summer music festival and school.

DISASTER, AND SUCCESS

The first festival venture, in 1937, was catastrophic. A concert in a vast marquee coincided with a violent rainstorm. Instruments were damaged. A woman in the audience mounted the platform and said: "The storm has proved conclusively that we need a shed. We must raise the necessary $100,000 to build one."

The necessary was raised in time to build "a shed" for the following year's festival—and what a shed! It holds 6,0[illegible]7 p[illegible] On the lawns surround[illegible] sides there is room for [illegible] 6,000 more to listen.

Audiences of 12,000 now are nothing out of the ordinary, but the great building, covering [illegible]-and-a-half acres, is still affectionately "The Shed."

And such is the support for and prosperity of the Boston Symphony

From
NORMAN RILEY

Orchestra and its Tanglewood Festival and School that recently it has been possible to spend another £18,000 on a new canopy over the stage and other installations to improve the acoustics to a degree almost unbelievable in a structure that is, after all, little different from a fan-shaped aircraft hangar.

The orchestra costs over £700,000 a year to maintain. In ticket sales and revenue from broadcasting and recording it earns 90 per cent. of this. The annual deficit is wiped out by voluntary organisations who contributed about £100,000 last year and enabled the festival to endow valuable prizes and scholarships.

All the indications are so far that this year's attendances at the Festival will be at least equal to last year's total of 180,000, who paid £117,000 for admission. Three Beethoven concerts had average audiences of just over 11,000. Demand for seats is mounting so steadily that even final rehearsals are now opened to the public in The Shed on Saturday mornings.

In a downpour of rain I attended one which attracted 2,500 people at 10s each for adults, 3s 6d for children, though they all inevitably were soaked to the skin in the short walk from their cars to The Shed. Six such Saturday mornings have produced nearly £7,000 for the orchestra pensions fund.

These are the kind of figures to arouse envy and despair among festival promoters in Britain, and they are matched by the generous scale on which American music lovers have endowed all the facilities provided at Tanglewood.

These include a theatre-concert hall for opera and recitals, with 1,200 seats, a chamber music hall for 500, and five small studios, apart from countless rooms in which 400 summer school students can work uninterrupted under the guidance of [illegible] members of the orchestra. [illegible] idea of the Stakhanovite [illegible] may be gauged from [illegible]ation at the school of 70 pia[illegible] one firm alone.

Most of the students, from all parts of the world, live in a dormitory at a school emptied by holidays. One of the first I met was Miss Astrid Virginia Stocks, 23, of Robin Hood Lane, Kingston Vale, London, a Royal College of Music student doing an advanced course on the oboe. It's a joint tribute to both the infectious enthusiasm of Tanglewood and the Gustav Holst-Herbert Howells tradition at St. Paul's Girls' School to put on record that the last time I heard her play was at a school concert at Brook Green.

Now she joins an exceptional coterie of zealots who have to pay £130 for their tuition and keep for six weeks, on top of fares to Tanglewood. This can be a tough budget for the few without scholarships.

On Thursday the students, who have their own full-scale orchestra, their own opera school, their own school of composition, staged the première of "Port Town," a one-act opera by Jan Meyerowitz.

Mr. Meyerowitz, with such distinguished company as Honegger, Hindemith, Copland, Milhaud and Samuel Barber, has served on the composition teaching staff here. "Port Town" is the third of his operas to get its first hearing here.

NO-NONSENSE SCHOOL

Conductors, players, singers, stage directors, if they survive the six weeks' intensity, leave the school with an implicit endorsement that they belong to the no-nonsense school of professional music.

Tanglewood is idle for 46 out of the 52 weeks of the year. But the economics of this, apparently, are not so bad as to tempt the Boston Symphony Orchestra administration into lending Tanglewood's allure to any other organisation in the spring or autumn.

One cannot help asking: Is there nowhere in Britain, in the more attractive spots where the Ministry of Works and the Air Ministry were wont to place their war-time period pieces, an aircraft hangar, that could be adapted and renamed The Shed for less than £35,000?

Is there no deserted airfield where the buildings near The Shed could be transformed into a motel so that hundreds of music lovers throughout a comfortably staggered holiday season could taste some of the delights of Tanglewood?

Daily Telegraph, London, Eng.,
Saturday, Aug 6/60

Patriot-Ledger (e)
QUINCY, Mass.
Circ. 45,338

AUG 22 1960

173,579 Paid To Attend Symphony Tanglewood Season

LENOX — The Boston Symphony Orchestra's Berkshire Festival was highlighted by the appearance of [illegible] new guest artists and the performance of 15 works for the first time at Tanglewood.

Attendance dropped slightly due to the inclement weather which prevailed at 12 of the 30 orchestra and chamber music concerts and open rehearsals.

An increase in the price of some tickets, however, more than offset the attendance loss. An audience of 173,579 paid more than $385,000 during the 25th anniversary of the BSO's first participation at the Tanglewood concerts.

The Berkshire Music Center, the Orchestra's summer school of music, celebrated its 20th anniversary. Directed by Charles Munch with Aaron Copland, chairman of the faculty and Ralph Berkowitz, Dean, the 1960 session attracted 286 students from 34 states and 13 foreign countries.

Professor G. Wallace Woodworth of Harvard University inaugurated a new school department, listening and analysis.

Charles Munch also celebrated his 10th anniversary as music director of the Festival.

DOCTOR'S WIFE
NEW YORK, N.Y.
BI-MONTHLY - CIRC. NOT AVAIL.

JUL AUG 1960

MUSIC

5457

Two music festivals make this a most important musical summer. The most up and coming U. S. A. festival is at Aspen, Colorado, through September 4. What Tanglewood has been these many decades Aspen is fast becoming. Though it still lacks the focus of a major symphony orchestra (Tanglewood is the summer home of the great Boston Symphony), Aspen does schedule a staggering program of musical delights. This season begins a two year-long homage to Beethoven. And that means the Master's works performed exhaustively and with meticulous musicality. Special also this summer will be a tribute to American composer Aaron Copland. Another very special event there will be the first complete performance of Mozart's little known opera Thamos, King of Egypt. And this season, superb mezzo-soprano Jennie Tourel will not only be a permanent member of Apsen's Faculty, but will sing in concert songs of Berlioz, and Schoenberg's recondite Book of The Hanging Gardens. Miss Tourel is the greatest living exponent of the French art song: Aspen is the perfect place in which to hear her at her most relaxed best.

Bach and Mozart open the Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood, Massachusetts. The music begins here on July 8 and ends on August 14. This year a larger public will be able to hear the opening Bach and Mozart concerts, for upon the stage of the hugh music shed, a special shell is being erected. This shell will accommodate the smaller ensembles needed to perform the two masters, and making the big auditorium more useful for concerts of a more intimate nature. The shell on stage makes it acoustically possible to give the audience this great musical treat. The most delightful way to hear music at Tanglewood is to sit out on the lawns during concert time and to breathe in the music along with the fragrant mountain air.

TROY MORNING RECORD
Wednesday, August 3, 1960

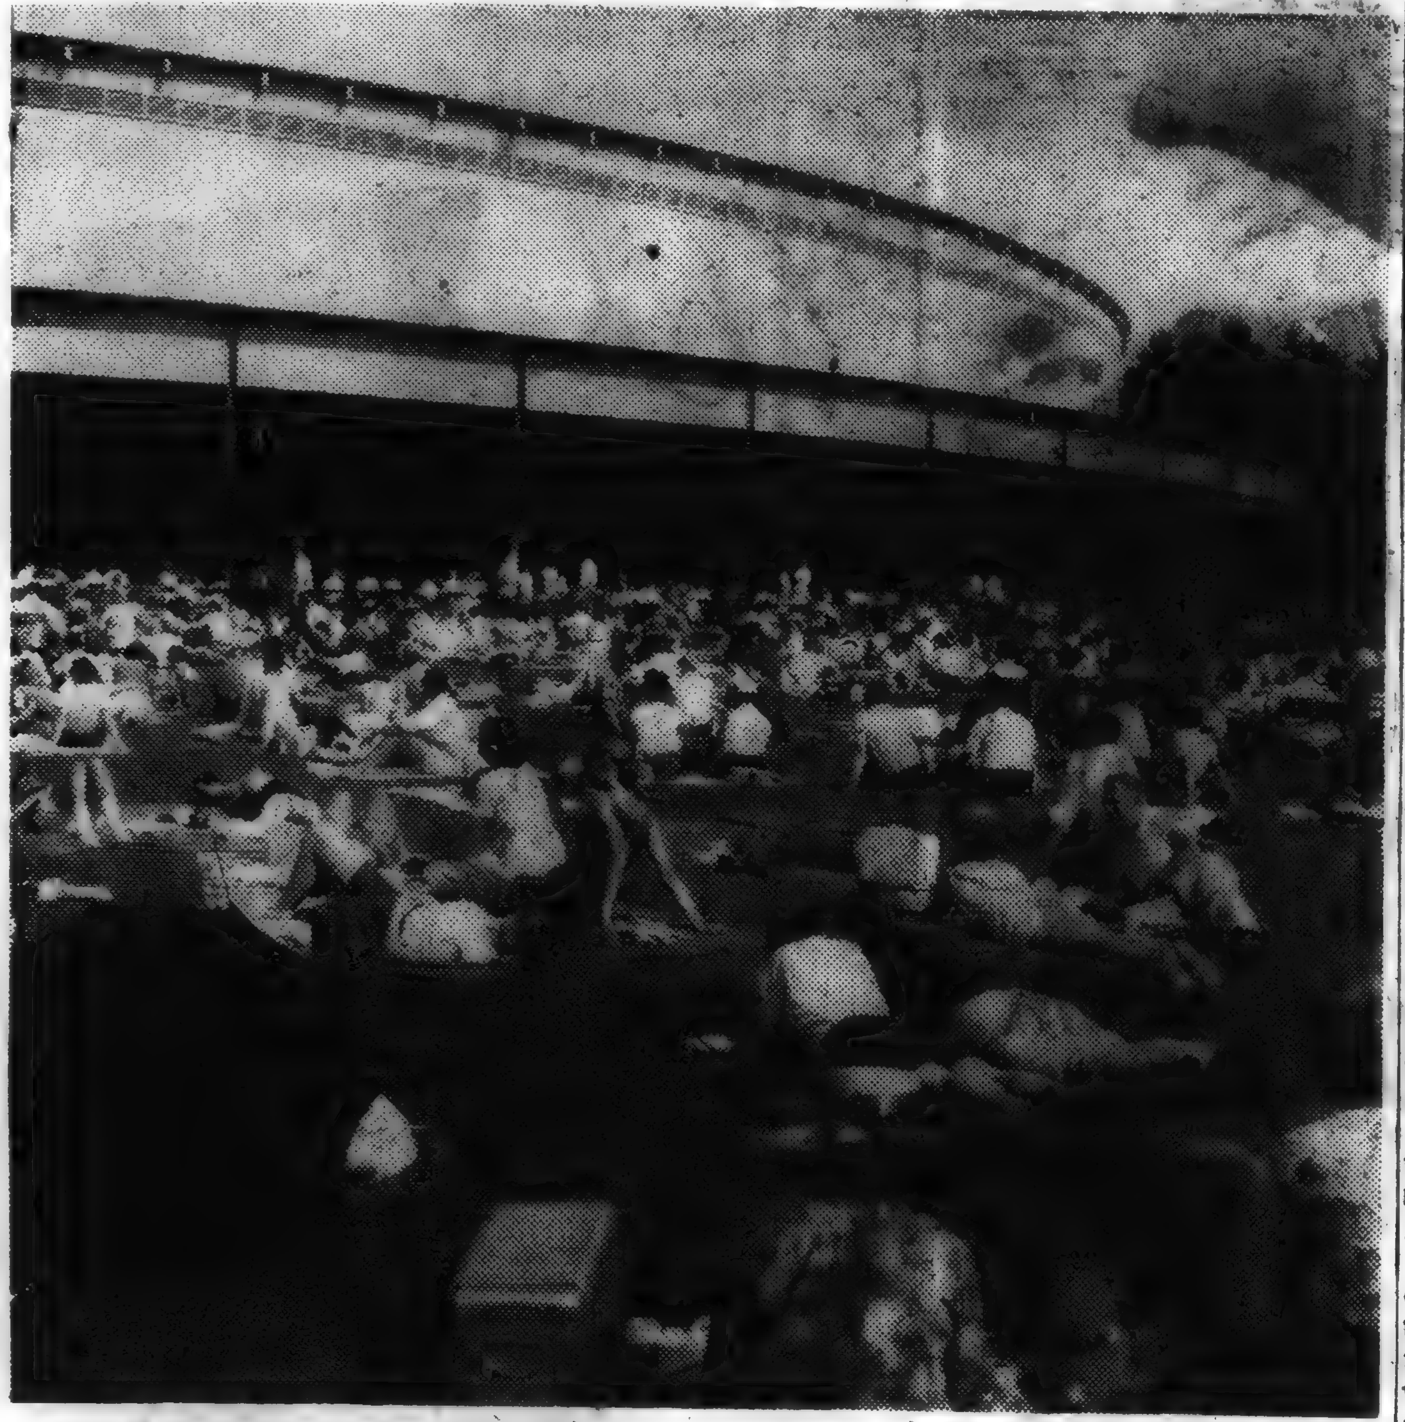
ATTEND [illegible] — [illegible]timately [illegible] students, members of the [illegible] of the College of St. Rose attended the [illegible] at Tanglewood recently. The day's trip was [illegible] by the Music Department of the College. Among those [illegible] from the Troy Area were, left to right: [illegible] C.S.J., of St. Joseph's Seminary [illegible] street, Troy; Sister Mary Clare, P.B.V.M., and Sister Mary Magdalen, P.B.V.M., both of St. [illegible] Home, Watervliet, and two students, left to right, [illegible] of Watervliet and Mary Jane Burke of [illegible]

237 p

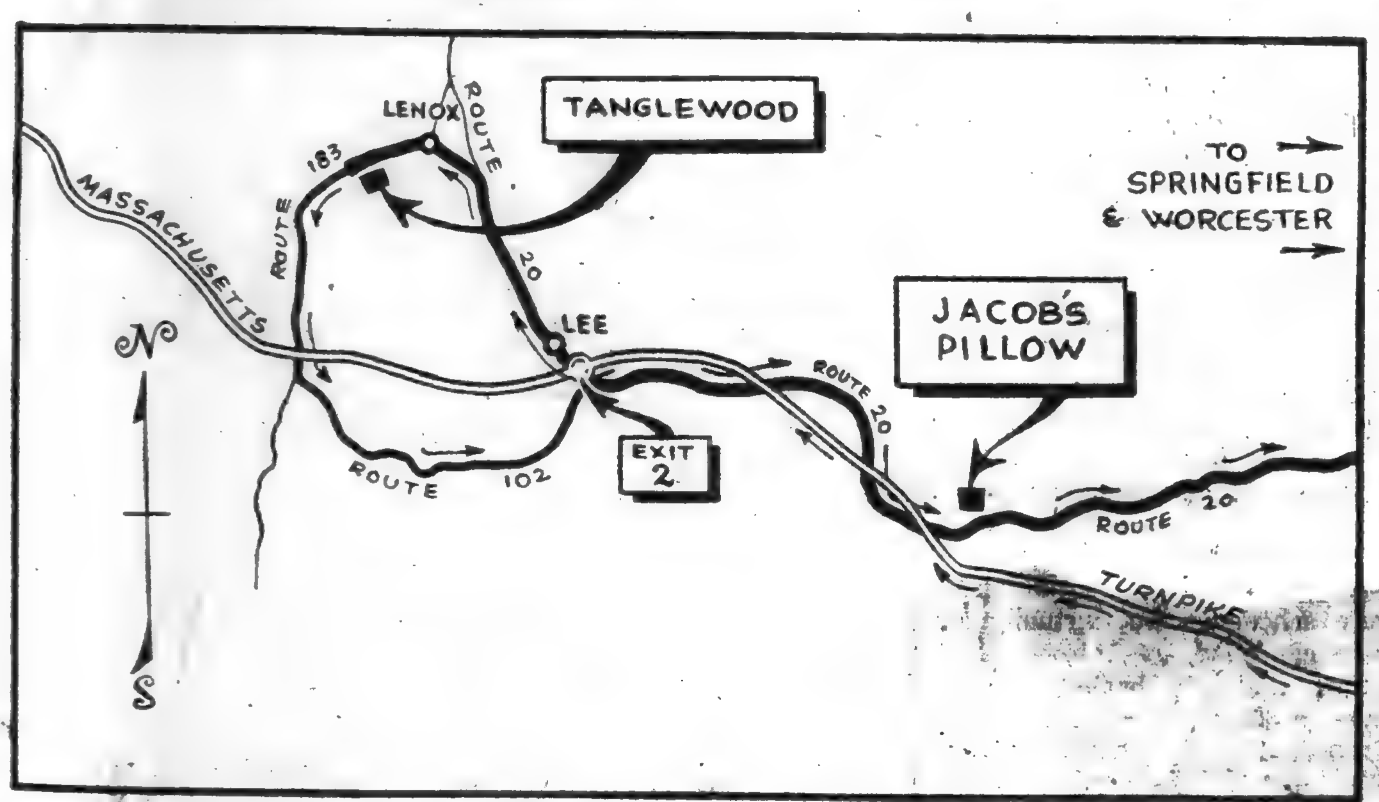
Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 92,367

AUG 5 1960

The Evening Gazette Worcester, Fri., Aug. 5, 1960



INDOOR AND OUTDOOR MUSIC AT TANGLEWOOD MUSIC SHED



SUGGESTED ROUTE TO LENOX AND LEE
Massachusetts Turnpike to Exit Two and Route 20

All in a Day's Drive

A Festival Center In the Berkshires

By JANET K. WINKELHAUS
Gazette Staff Reporter

This is the third in a series of articles on round trips to interesting sites which can easily be made in one day from Worcester.

LENOX — The Berkshires, vacation paradise of Western Massachusetts, have justly earned the second title of "festival center of the East."

Against a backdrop of awe-inspiring scenery, a devotee of the arts has trouble deciding whether the day's menu will include music, drama, dance, or perhaps all three. Best known among the many attractions, of course, are Tanglewood and Jacob's Pillow at Lee.

Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has a historical flavor of writer Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Hawthorne, who moved to Lenox in 1848, lived on the edge of the Tanglewood estate, which then belonged to William Aspinwall Tappan. There he worked on "The House of the Seven Gables," wrote "The Wonder Book" and planned the "Tanglewood Tales."

First Concerts

The first Berkshire concerts were held on an estate near Stockbridge in 1934 and were performed by members of the New York Philharmonic conducted by Dr. Henry Hadley. That same year, protagonists for concerts in the Berkshires incorporated The Berkshire Symphonic Festival and after a series of successful concerts the following summer invited Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra to participate in the 1936 festival.

In the winter of 1936 the descendants of Tappan offered Tanglewood to Dr. Koussevitzky and the orchestra as a gift.

The 210 acres of lawn and meadow were then much the same as Hawthorne had so graphically described in his "Tanglewood Tales." Today a replica of Hawthorne's house stands on the estate. It houses, in addition to some of the author's effects, studios for the orchestra and students of The Berkshire Music Center.

Today's Tanglewood concerts are held in and around the popular Music Shed. The shed, which was dedicated in 1938, has a seating capacity of over 6,000, but it is not uncommon to see part of the audience relaxing on the green outside.

Art Exhibition

The spacious well-kept grounds are highlighted by sculpture by Berkshires artists and a painting or photography exhibition is always available in the glass house adjacent to the main gate.

How To Get Your Tickets

Tickets for Tanglewood concerts can be obtained by addressing the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. For Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, address Box 87, Lee.

Prices for the dance festival tickets are $3.50 for the first seven rows of the center sections and $3.00 for all other seats. The Aug. 23 performance presenting the Paper Bag Players, costs $1.50 unreserved.

Visitors are allowed to watch student dance classes during weekdays in the morning and afternoon, but must make arrangements beforehand. Tickets for these sessions cost $2.

Tickets for Tanglewood concerts in the Music Shed are priced at $2.50 and $3 for the chamber music series and at $3, $3.50, $4, $4.50, $5.50, $6 and $6.50 for other concerts. General admission to the grounds is $2.50 and Saturday morning rehearsals are $1.50. The general admission tickets may be purchased three hours before each concert.

Matinees at Jacob's Pillow begin at 4 p.m. and the evening performance begins at 9.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 12 1960

TEN CARICATURES by Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky of Tanglewood people have excited comment from visitors to the Lenox Library music room. Exhibit was arranged to celebrate 20th anniversary of founding of Berkshire Music Center, the school at Tanglewood. The exhibit, which closes tomorrow at 5 p.m., also contains relevant paintings by Harry Lane of West Stockbridge.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

AUG 15 1960

Tanglewood Season Ends, Total Receipts Up, Attendance Drops

At the close of its run for the year the Berkshire Music Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox has been termed a financial success.

Attendance for this season was 173,579 with ticket sales amounting to $385,592.50, compared to 1959 figures of 179,651 attendance and $338,587.75 sales. The advance of price for some tickets was the reason for the rise in revenue, even though the attendance dropped. A total of 11,949 persons attended the all-Bach concerts against 11,001 last season. Three Mozart concerts drew 16,184 members, 13,747 last year. Attendance at the 18 full Boston Symphony concerts was 138,871, against last year's 148,061.

The six open rehearsals, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund, drew 19,797 persons and $25,700, as against 20,797 persons and $19,253 in 1959. This season 4062 friends memberships brought in a total of $34,195. Last season 2767 friends memberships brought in $28,544.

Two events for the Berkshire Music Center, "A Gala Evening" and "Boston Pops at Tanglewood" drew a total of 15,615 persons and $39,599.50. The Fromm Music Foundation free concerts drew 3113 persons.

The six Wednesday night chamber music recitals drew 8034 persons against 7638 last year.

Inclement weather prevailed at five of the 18 orchestra concerts; at four of the six chamber music concerts and at three of the six open rehearsals.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121

AUG 21 1960

Tanglewood Retrospect

The Berkshire Festival accompanied the close of the 1960 festival at Tanglewood last Sunday by publishing a list of all the programs given by the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra since it first came to Lenox in 1936. Among the eighteen American composers who have been represented, Aaron Copland has a long lead with performances in fourteen festival summers; Walter Piston's music was played in eight festivals and Samuel Barber's in six. Lukas Foss was represented in three seasons and William Schuman in two.

Seven contemporary works were played in the 1960 concerts of the full orchestra; this figure was outstripped by eleven in 1956 and nine in 1957 and 1958, and also by ten in 1940, when the number of concerts was nine as compared with the present figure of twelve.

Although the attendance for the full orchestra's concerts fell off from the 1959 figure, there were gains in the Bach and Mozart week end concerts and the Wednesday night chamber music series. The three 1960 Mozart programs gained 2,337 over the corresponding 1959 total.

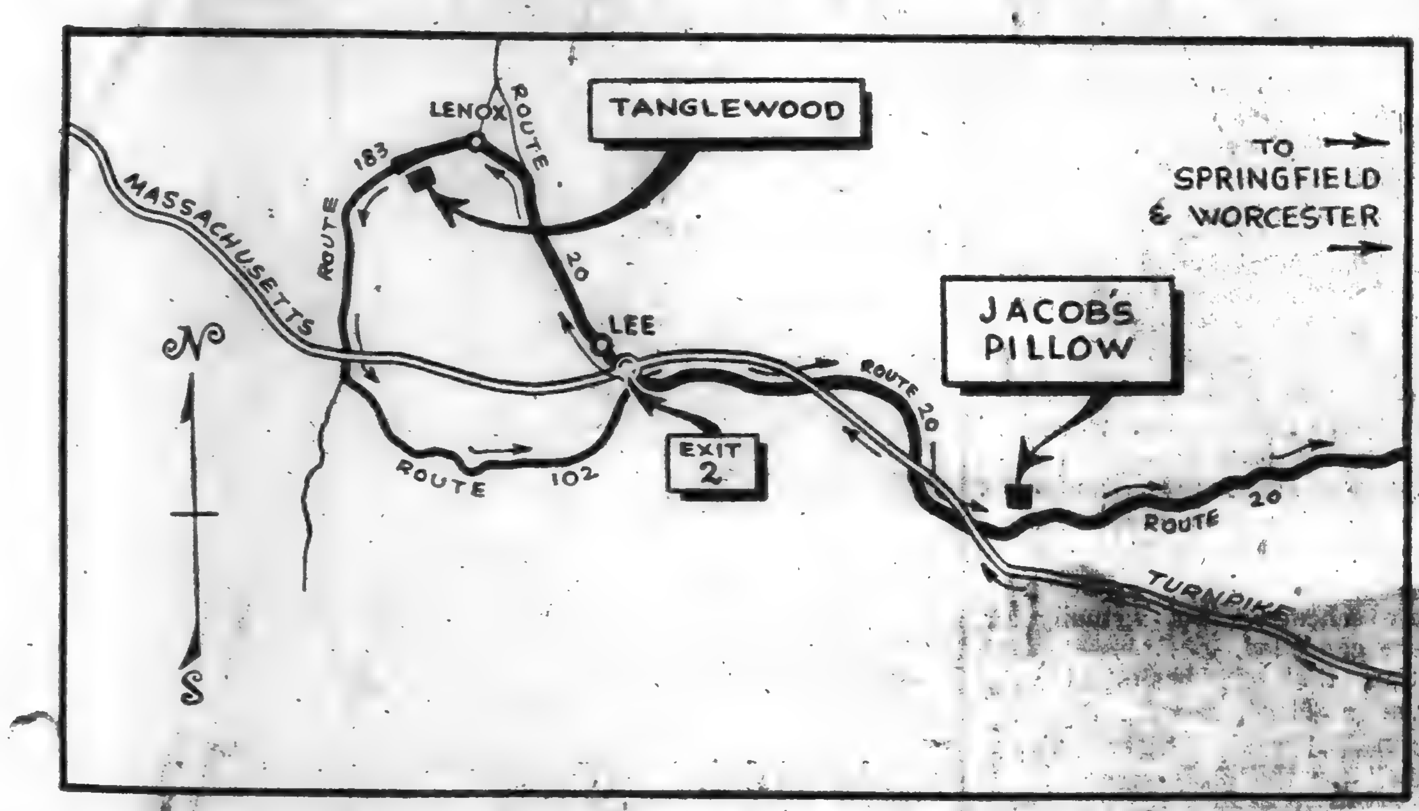
237

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 92,367

AUG 5 1960

The Evening Gazette Worcester, Fri., Aug. 5, 1960

INDOOR AND OUTDOOR MUSIC AT TANGLEWOOD MUSIC SHED



SUGGESTED ROUTE TO LENOX AND LEE
Massachusetts Turnpike to Exit Two and Route 20

All in a Day's Drive

A Festival Center In the Berkshires

By JANET K. WINKELHAUS
Gazette Staff Reporter

This is the third in a series of articles on round trips to interesting sites which can easily be made in one day from Worcester.

LENOX — The Berkshires, vacation paradise of Western Massachusetts, have justly earned the second title of "festival center of the East."

Against a backdrop of awe-inspiring scenery, a devotee of the arts has trouble deciding whether the day's menu will include music, drama, dance, or perhaps all three. Best known among the many attractions, of course, are Tanglewood and Jacob's Pillow at Lee.

Tanglewood, summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, has a historical [illegible] of writer Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Hawthorne, who moved to Lenox in 1848, lived on the edge of the Tanglewood estate, which then belonged to William Aspinwall Tappan. There he worked on "The House of the Seven Gables," wrote "The Wonder Book" and planned the "Tanglewood Tales."

First Concerts

The first Berkshire concerts were held on an estate near Stockbridge in 1934 and were performed by members of the New York Philharmonic conducted by Dr. Henry Hadley. That same year, protagonists for concerts in the Berkshires incorporated The Berkshire Symphonic Festival and after a series of successful concerts the following summer invited Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony Orchestra to participate in the 1936 festival.

In the winter of 1936 the descendants of Tappan offered Tanglewood to Dr. Koussevitzky and the orchestra as a gift.

The 210 acres of lawn and meadow were then much the same as Hawthorne had so graphically described in his "Tanglewood Tales." Today a replica of Hawthorne's house stands on the estate. It houses, in addition to some of the author's effects, studios for the orchestra and students of The Berkshire Music Center.

Today's Tanglewood concerts are held in and around the popular Music Shed. The shed, which was dedicated in 1938, has a seating capacity of over 6,000, but it is not uncommon to see part of the audience relaxing on the green outside.

Art Exhibition

The spacious well-kept grounds are highlighted by sculpture by Berkshires artists and a painting or photography exhibition is always available in the glass house adjacent to the main gate.

How To Get Your Tickets

Tickets for Tanglewood concerts can be obtained by addressing the Festival Ticket Office, Tanglewood, Lenox, Mass. For Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival, address Box 87, Lee.

Prices for the dance festival tickets are $3.50 for the first seven rows of the center sections and $3.00 for all other seats. The Aug. 23 performance presenting the Paper Bag Players, costs $1.50 unreserved.

Visitors are allowed to watch student dance classes during weekdays in the morning and afternoon, but must make arrangements beforehand. Tickets for these sessions cost $2.

Tickets for Tanglewood concerts in the Music Shed are priced at $2.50 and $3 for the chamber music series and at $3, $3.50, $4, $4.50, $5.50, $6 and $6.50 for other concerts. General admission to the grounds is $2.50 and Saturday morning rehearsals are $1.50. The general admission tickets may be purchased three hours before each concert.

Matinees at Jacob's Pillow begin at 4 p.m. and the evening performance begins at 9.

Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Circ. 25,958

AUG 15 1960

Tanglewood Season Ends, Total Receipts Up, Attendance Drops

At the close of its run for the year the Berkshire Music Festival of the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood in Lenox has been termed a financial success.

Attendance for this season was 173,579 with ticket sales amounting to $385,592.50, compared to 1959 figures of 179,651 attendance and $338,587.75 sales. The advance of price for some tickets was the reason for the rise in revenue, even though the attendance dropped. A total of 11,9[illegible] persons attended the all-Bach concerts against 11,001 last season. Three Mozart concerts drew 16,184 members, 13,747 last year. Attendance at the 18 full Boston Symphony concerts was 138,871, against last year's 148,061.

The six open rehearsals, for the benefit of the orchestra's pension fund, drew 19,797 persons and $25,700, as against 20,797 persons and $19,268 in 1959. This season 4062 friends memberships brought in a total of $34,195. Last season 2767 friends memberships brought in $28,544.

Two events for the Berkshire Music Center, "A Gala Evening" and "Boston Pops at Tanglewood" drew a total of 15,615 persons and $30,599.50. The Friends Music Foundation free concerts drew 3113 persons.

The six Wednesday night chamber music recitals drew 8034 persons against 7639 last year.

Inclement weather prevailed at five of the 18 orchestra concerts, at four of the six chamber music concerts and at three of the six open rehearsals.

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071

AUG 12 1960

TEN CARICATURES by Mrs. Serge Koussevitzky of Tanglewood people have excited comment from visitors to the Lenox Library music room. Exhibit was arranged to celebrate 20th anniversary of founding of Berkshire Music Center, the school at Tanglewood. The exhibit, which closes tomorrow at 5 p.m., also contains relevant paintings by Harry Lane of West Stockbridge.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
HERALD TRIBUNE
D. 325,065 S. 505,121

AUG 21 1960

Tanglewood Retrospect

The Berkshire Festival accompanied the close of the 1960 festival at Tanglewood last Sunday by publishing a list of all the programs given by the complete Boston Symphony Orchestra since it first came to Lenox in 1936. Among the eighteen American composers who have been represented, Aaron Copland has a long lead with performances in fourteen festival summers; Walter Piston's music was played in eight festivals and Samuel Barber's in six. Lukas Foss was represented in three seasons and William Schuman in two.

Seven contemporary works were played in the 1960 concerts of the full orchestra; this figure was outstripped by eleven in 1956 and nine in 1957 and 1958, and also by ten in 1940, when the number of concerts was nine as compared with the present figure of twelve.

Although the attendance for the full orchestra's concerts fell off from the 1959 figure, there were gains in the Bach and Mozart week end concerts and the Wednesday night chamber music series. The three 1960 Mozart programs gained 2,337 over the corresponding 1959 total.

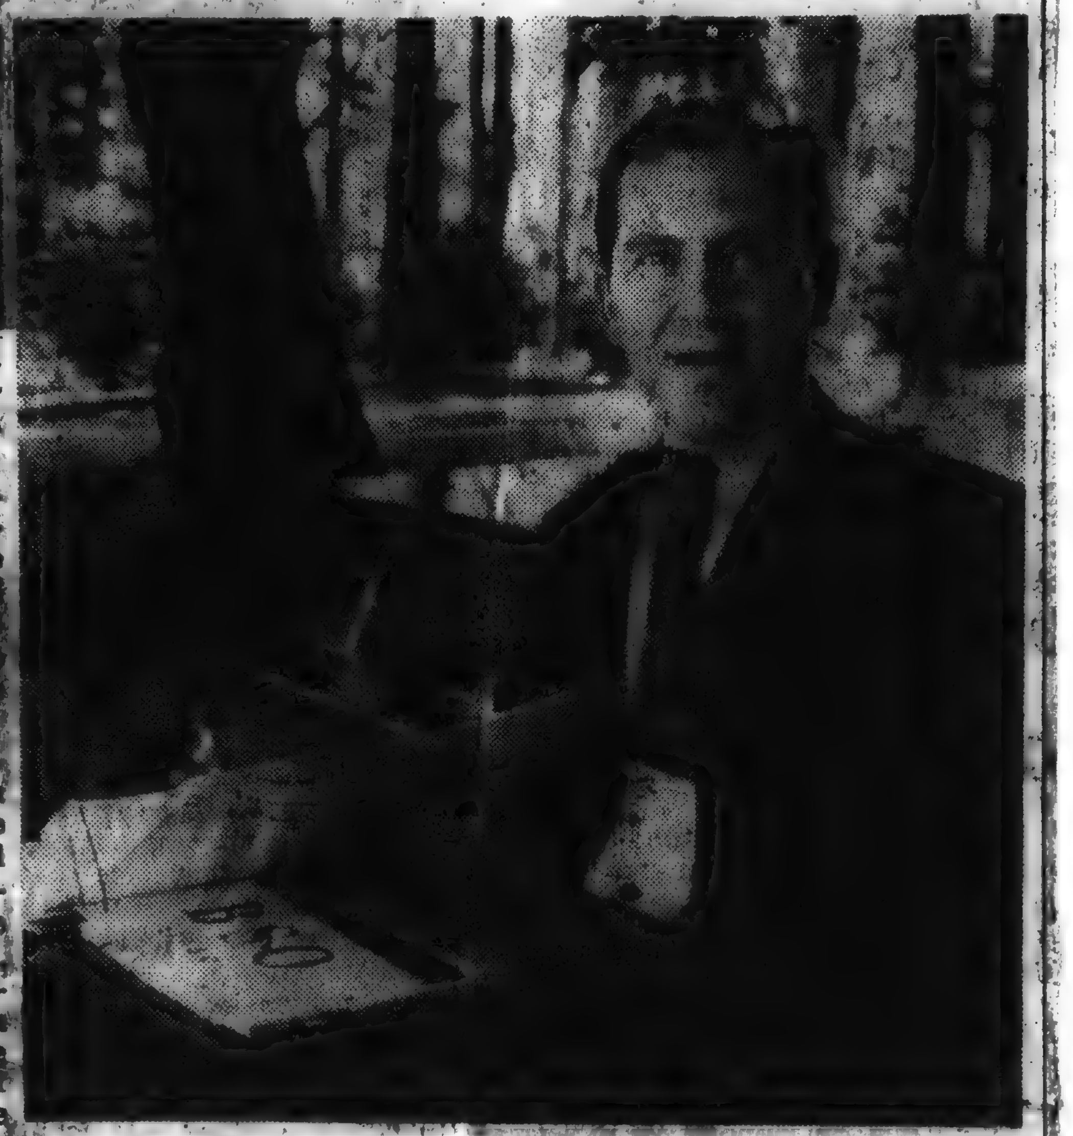
238

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
AUG 5 1960

Trouble Shooting Is Only One Chore For a Busy BSO Music Administrator

Leonard Burkat Discarded Oboe For New Duties

By WALTER HOWARD



Howard

Leonard Burkat's briefcase already bulges with plans for the 1961 Berkshire Festival and Berkshire Music Center seasons.

"People don't realize," says Leonard Burkat, "that musicians work awfully hard. They don't take into account the hours of study and practice, the stresses of performance, the time spent traveling on tour."

The 41-year-old music administrator of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and administrator of the Berkshire Music Center is a hard worker himself, assuming "the burden of making it possible for the orchestra to perform as often as [illegible]."

As a high school student in Boston, Burkat played second oboe in an orchestra whose members, like the West Point class the stars fell on, later moved onward and upward in the musical world. The concertmaster was Victor Alpert, now librarian of the Boston Symphony. Violist Jerome Lipson joined the viola section of the BSO. And a pianist by the name of Leonard Bernstein played for the high school orchestra.

Mr. Burkat set his oboe to one side and in 1946 joined the Boston Symphony's administrative staff. He's been there ever since.

At Tanglewood, he says, "the most immediate concern is always tomorrow's concert, or tonight's concert if there happens to be a concert tonight." One small wrench in the Festival machinery can throw everything off schedule. For instance, a projected change in rehearsing schedules this week was complicated by the fact that piano soloist Eugene Istomin couldn't be transported quickly to Lenox from Colorado, where he appeared as soloist on Wednesday. Mr. Burkat and his secretary, Barbara Field, finally solved that one.

Day Starts at 9

Somewhere around 9 each morning, the administrator arrives at Tanglewood. He plots his day's activities (subject to change) with his secretary in his office on the second floor of the gray administrative building. Then he crosses the lawn to the Music Shed for a pre-rehearsal conference with the BSO librarian, Victor Alpert, and the orchestra's stage manager, Harvey Genereux.

At 9:30, Dr. Munch arrives. The director of the Boston Symphony uses the half hour between his arrival and the 10 o'clock rehearsal to give his last-minute instructions for the day to Mr. Burkat. They do their planning in French, which the administrator speaks fluently.

Like any musician busy with artistic problems, Dr. Munch "shouldn't concern himself with details of administration," says Burkat. And so he tries to take care of them for him.

Just before 10, the morning's mail is brought to the Music Shed. At 10, the orchestra rehearsal begins and Mr. Burkat has some time to himself to "get things done." Sometimes he dictates letters backstage, or sometimes he gets himself a duplicate score of the work being rehearsed and follows the orchestra through the music.

Lunch comes at 1 in the Tanglewood Cafeteria, "where I've been eating cold cuts for the last 15 years." In the afternoon there are meetings with Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the BSO, or with Dean Ralph Berkowitz and faculty members of the music school.

Bypassing Few Concerts

Mr. Burkat could spend every evening at Tanglewood if he chose. Actually, he is bypassing about five concerts this summer out of a total of nearly 100. When the Tanglewood season ends, he takes a couple of weeks off to relax at his summer home on the shores of the Stockbridge Bowl with his wife and three children. Come September, he is back in Brookline preparing for the orchestra's winter season in Boston.

"Right now," says Burkat, "the Boston Symphony has a working season of 47 weeks, and we hope eventually to have a 52-week schedule with vacations." Other orchestras envy the BSO for its almost year-round schedule, which is facilitated by careful advance planning and programming.

The programs for 1961-62 winter season are now being mapped out, more than a year before actual performance. Final arrangements are being made for soloists and guest conductors for next winter's season.

Next week, Mr. Burkat and Berkshire Music Center faculty members will sit down for a trouble-shooting session. "We create the school anew each year," he says, "and now we are considering what to do differently next year." Work starts in December on the Berkshire Festival programs for 1961, and in January the music school catalogue is put together. In February, 150,000 advance announcements of Festival programs are printed.

Last spring while juggling winter season programs, Pops season plans and Tanglewood plans, Mr. Burkat also turned his attention to the orchestra's projected tour of [illegible] Far Eastern countries.

Between February and April, an itinerary, transportation and housing for 115 musicians, passports, visas and vaccination certificates, and six different programs had to be arranged.

The orchestra and 19,000 pounds of equipment were scheduled to depart for the Orient in three planes on April 25. On April 22, civil disturbances in Korea made an itinerary change necessary. The planes left on schedule and the tour opened to critical acclaim—not in Seoul, Korea, as originally scheduled, but in Taiwan, Formosa.

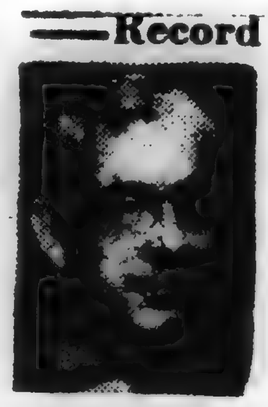
Work on Tours

"We go on tours to work," says Burkat, "and we're happy if we snatch an hour of sightseeing now and then along the way." Much of the administrator's work is done along the way, whether he is crossing the Tanglewood lawn or the Pacific Ocean.

"But," he adds cheerfully, "I'm always available to anyone who can find me."

JACKSON, MICH.
CITIZEN PATRIOT
D. 38,340 S. 37,488
AUG 18 1960

Record Reviews



Among the Classics

BY WILLIAM J. SWANK.

Ambitious Series of Chamber Music Concerts To Be Given in Chicago.

The continuing efforts in behalf of chamber music and the increasing interest on the part of the public in this intimate music often are matters which stir the credulity of many who otherwise are avowed champions of good, classical music. While they avidly support ventures in symphonic music or those which feature solo instrumentalists or vocalists, they shy away from the mere mention of chamber music as though it were as deadly as the plague.

Why this should be so I am at a loss to explain unless these persons have had some unpleasant or unfortunate experiences with chamber music. For within this field of the musical arts is to be found some of the most beautiful and thoroughly delightful music ever written.

One has only to listen to some of the works composed by Corelli, Scarlatti, Tartini, Boccherini, Vivaldi, Martucci and Cherubini, who specialized in this field, as well as chamber works by Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart, Schubert, Mendelssohn and Schumann to realize that if chamber works were to be removed entirely from the repertoire, much of the world's fine music would be lost.

An ambitious and challenging series of 28 concerts of chamber music will be presented at popular prices by the world famed Fine Arts quartet in downtown Chicago and on the North Shore next season. The concerts will begin Sept. 20 and continue through May, 1961.

The programs of chamber music for the masses will be under the direction of the Fine Arts quartet and Dr. Herbert Zipper, musical director of the Community Music center of the North Shore. Fourteen concerts in two separate series of seven, each will be held in the Prudential Building auditorium in Chicago and an identical series will be held in the Howard Junior High school in Wilmette.

The central theme for the series is "The Golden Years of Chamber Music." Fifty years of the great masters of classic and romantic chamber music will highlight the concerts.

The quartet is composed of Leonard Sorkin, first violin; Abram Loft, second violin; Irving Ilmer, viola, and George Sopkin, cello.

* * *

A famous vocal coach who tied together the "Golden Age of Opera" and the modern musical age, is dead. He was Giacomo Spadoni, who once coached the late great Enrico Caruso and was a vocal coach for Mario Lanza. He died in Los Angeles last week of a heart attack. Mr. Spadoni also was a conductor, having led the orchestras at the Metropolitan and San Francisco opera houses. He also had served as operatic voice coach for Warner Brothers and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer movie studios.

Born in Imola, Italy, Spadoni also worked with the Chicago Opera Company and opera companies in Mexico City and Havana.

* * *

One of the world's largest musical productions will close the National Music camp's 33rd season of public concerts at Interlochen Sunday. Dr. Joseph E. Maddy, president and founder of the famous arts camp, will direct more than 1,000 student musicians and dancers in Franz Liszt's "Les Preludes." The concert will begin at 7:30 p. m.

"Les Preludes" has traditionally closed the National Music camp program every year since 1928, the camp's first season. Included on the program will be Brahms' "Symphony No. 4 in E minor."

Dr. Maddy will conduct the National High School Symphony orchestra in the Brahms work. This orchestra, the High School Concert orchestra, the University and Honors orchestras, the High School Symphonic and Concert bands, the two Intermediate orchestras and the Intermediate band will perform the Liszt work and will be joined by members of the chorus and dancers.

* * *

Total attendance at the concerts of the 1960 Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., fell off about 6,000 compared with last year. Tanglewood officials put the blame on inclement weather which prevailed at 12 of the 30 concerts. Total attendance this season was 173,579 and ticket sales amounted to $885,592.

238

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 29,071
AUG 5 1960

Trouble Shooting Is Only One Chore For a Busy BSO Music Administrator

Leonard Burkat Discarded Oboe For New Duties

By WALTER HOWARD

"People don't realize," says Leonard Burkat, "that musicians work awfully hard. They don't take into account the hours of study and practice, the stresses of performance, the time spent traveling on tour."

The 41-year-old music administrator of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and administrator of the Berkshire Music Center is a hard worker himself, assuming "the burden of making it possible for the orchestra to perform as often as [illegible]."

As a high school student in Boston, Burkat played second oboe in an orchestra whose members, like the West Point class the stars fell on, later moved onward and upward in the musical world. The concertmaster was Victor Alpert, now librarian of the Boston Symphony. Violist Jerome Lipson joined the viola section of the BSO. And a pianist by the name of Leonard Bernstein played for the high school orchestra.

Mr. Burkat set his oboe to one side and in 1946 joined the Boston Symphony's administrative staff. He's been there ever since.

At Tanglewood, he says, "the most immediate concern is always tomorrow's concert, or tonight's concert if there happens to be a concert tonight." One small wrench in the Festival machinery can throw everything [illegible]. For instance, a projected change in rehearsing schedules this week was complicated by the fact that piano soloist Eugene Istomin couldn't be transported quickly to Lenox from Colorado, where he appeared as a soloist on Wednesday. Mr. Burkat and his secretary, Barbara Field, finally solved that one.

Day Starts at 9

Somewhere around 9 each morning, the administrator arrives at Tanglewood. He plots his day's activities (subject to change) with his secretary in his office on the second floor of the gray administrative building. Then he crosses the lawn to the Music Shed for a pre-rehearsal conference with the BSO librarian, Victor Alpert, and the orchestra's stage manager, Harvey Genereux.

At 9:30, Dr. Munch arrives. The director of the Boston Symphony uses the half hour between his arrival and the 10 o'clock rehearsal to give his last-minute instructions for the day to Mr. Burkat. They do their planning in French, which the administrator speaks fluently.

Like any musician busy with artistic problems, Dr. Munch "shouldn't concern himself with details of administration," says Burkat. And so he tries to take care of them for him.

Just before 10, the morning's mail is brought to the Music Shed. At 10, the orchestra rehearsal begins and Mr. Burkat has some time to himself to "get things done." Sometimes he dictates letters backstage, or sometimes he gets himself a duplicate score of the work being rehearsed and follows the orchestra through the music.

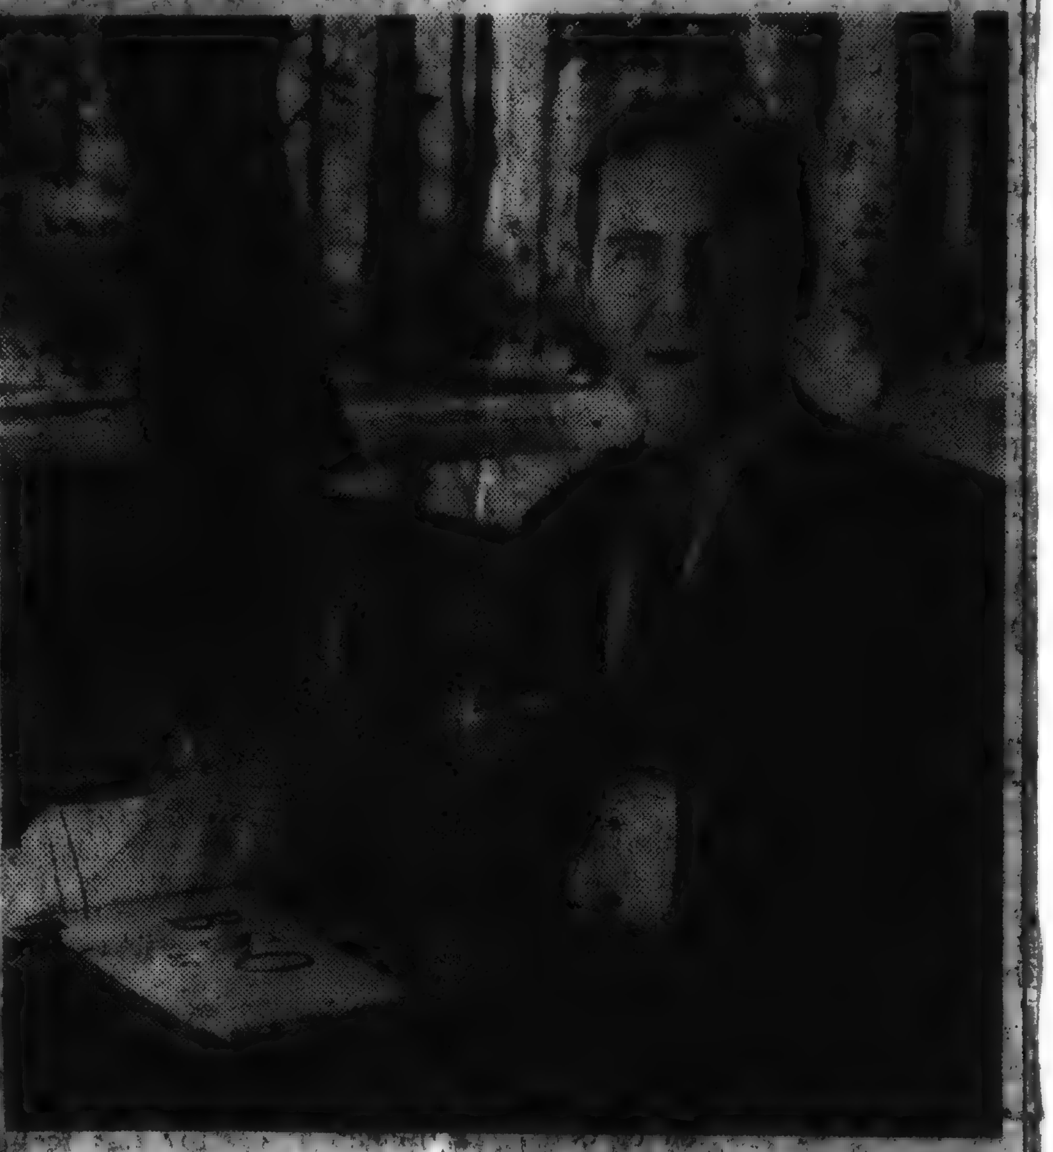
Lunch comes at 1 in the Tanglewood Cafeteria, "where I've been eating cold cuts for the last 15 years." In the afternoon there are meetings with Thomas D. Perry Jr., manager of the BSO, or with Dean Ralph Berkowitz and faculty members of the music school.

Bypassing Few Concerts

Mr. Burkat could spend every evening at Tanglewood if he chose. Actually, he is bypassing about five concerts this summer out of a total of nearly 100. When the Tanglewood season ends, he takes a couple of weeks off to relax at his summer home on the shores of the Stockbridge Bowl with his wife and three children. Come September, he is back in Brookline preparing for the orchestra's winter season in Boston.

"Right now," says Burkat, "the Boston Symphony has a working season of 47 weeks, and we hope eventually to have a 52-week schedule with vacations." Other orchestras envy the BSO for its almost year-round schedule, which is facilitated by careful advance planning and programming.

"The programs for 1961-62 winter season are now being mapped out, more than a year before actual performance. Final arrangements are being made for soloists and guest conductors for next winter's season.



Howard

Leonard Burkat's briefcase already bulges with plans for the 1961 Berkshire Festival and Berkshire Music Center seasons.

Next week, Mr. Burkat and Berkshire Music Center faculty members will sit down for a trouble-shooting session. "We create the school anew each year," he says, "and now we are considering what to do differently next year." Work starts in December on the Berkshire Festival programs for 1961, and in January the music school catalogue is put together. In February, 150,000 advance announcements of Festival programs are printed.

Last spring while juggling winter season programs, Pops season plans and Tanglewood plans, Mr. Burkat also turned his attention to the orchestra's projected tour of [illegible] Far Eastern countries.

Between February and April, an itinerary, transportation and housing for 115 musicians, passports, visas and vaccination certificates, and six different programs had to be arranged.

The orchestra and 19,000 pounds of equipment were scheduled to depart for the Orient in three planes on April 25. On April 22, civil disturbances in Korea made an itinerary change necessary. The planes left on schedule and the tour opened to critical acclaim—not in Seoul, Korea, as originally scheduled, but in Taiwan, Formosa.

Work on Tours

"We go on tours to work," says Burkat, "and we're happy if we snatch an hour of sightseeing now and then along the way." Much of the administrator's work is done along the way, whether he is crossing the Tanglewood lawn or the Pacific Ocean.

"But," he adds cheerfully, "I'm always available to anyone who can find me."

JACKSON, MICH.
CITIZEN PATRIOT
D. 38,349 S. 37,489
AUG 18 1960

Record Reviews

Among the Classics

BY WILLIAM J. SWANK

Ambitious Series of Chamber Music Concerts To Be Given in Chicago.

The continuing efforts in behalf of chamber music and the increasing interest on the part of the public in this intimate music often are matters which stir the credulity of many who otherwise are avowed champions of good, classical music. While they avidly support ventures in symphonic music or those which feature solo instrumentalists or vocalists, they shy away from the mere mention of chamber music as though it were as deadly as the plague.

Why this should be so I am at a loss to explain unless these persons have had some unpleasant or unfortunate experiences with chamber music. For within this field of the musical arts is to be found some of the most beautiful and thoroughly delightful music ever written.

One has only to listen to some of the works composed by Corelli, Scarlatti, Tartini, Boccherini, Vivaldi, Martucci and Cherubini, who specialized in this field, as well as chamber works by Bach, Handel, Haydn, Mozart, Schubert, Mendelssohn and Schumann to realize that if chamber works were to be removed entirely from the repertoire, much of the world's fine music would be lost.

An ambitious and challenging series of 28 concerts of chamber music will be presented at popular prices by the world famed Fine Arts quartet in downtown Chicago and on the North Shore next season. The concerts will begin Sept. 20 and continue through May, 1961.

The programs of chamber music for the masses will be under the direction of the Fine Arts quartet and Dr. Herbert Zipper, musical director of the Community Music center of the North Shore. Fourteen concerts in two separate series of seven each will be held in the Prudential Building auditorium in Chicago and an identical series will be held in the Howard Junior High school in Wilmette.

The central theme for the series is "The Golden Years of Chamber Music." Fifty years of the great masters of classic and romantic chamber music will highlight the concerts.

The quartet is composed of Leonard Sorkin, first violin; Abram Loft, second violin; Irving Ilmer, viola, and George Sopkin, cello.

* * *

A famous vocal coach who tied together the "Golden Age of Opera" and the modern musical age, is dead. He was Giacomo Spadoni, who once coached the late great Enrico Caruso and was a vocal coach for Mario Lanza. He died in Los Angeles last week of a heart attack. Mr. Spadoni also was a conductor, having led the orchestras at the Metropolitan and San Francisco opera houses. He also had served as operatic voice coach for Warner Brothers and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer movie studios.

Born in Imola, Italy, Spadoni also worked with the Chicago Opera Company and opera companies in Mexico City and Havana.

* * *

One of the world's largest musical productions will close the National Music camp's 33rd season of public concerts at Interlochen Sunday. Dr. Joseph E. Maddy, president and founder of the famous arts camp, will direct more than 1,000 student musicians and dancers in Franz Liszt's "Les Preludes." The concert will begin at 7:30 p. m.

"Les Preludes" has traditionally closed the National Music camp program every year since 1928, the camp's first season. Included on the program will be Brahms' "Symphony No. 4 in E minor."

Dr. Maddy will conduct the National High School Symphony orchestra in the Brahms work. This orchestra, the High School Concert orchestra, the University and Honors orchestras, the High School Symphonic and Concert bands, the two Intermediate orchestras and the Intermediate band will perform the Liszt work and will be joined by members of the chorus and dancers.

* * *

Total attendance at the concerts of the 1960 Berkshire Music festival at Tanglewood, near Lenox, Mass., fell off about 6,000 compared with last year. Tanglewood officials put the blame on inclement weather which prevailed at 12 of the 30 concerts. Total attendance this season was 173,379 and ticket sales amounted to $885,592.

ALBANY TIMES UNION
Thursday, August 4, 1960

AROUND THE TOWN: EDGAR S. VAN OLINDA

Barefooted Tanglewood Devotees

There is an old Negro spiritual which informs us: "I got shoes. You got shoes. All God's chillun got shoes" which might become the theme song for the music festival at Tanglewood this Summer, or at least for those who prefer to lounge on the lawns outside the Big Shed, especially on a sunny Summer afternoon. Inhibitions are cast to the Berkshire zephyrs and "the barefoot boy and girl with cheeks of tan" is in the majority. One has to step high like a blind horse, not to lose one's own feet in the melee of shoes, moccasins and casuals which adorn the spaces in between the supine bodies, listening to the works of the masters. This deviation from the concert norm is unquestionably a throwback to the era of the English hotels when the guests placed his boots outside the door to be polished by the porters. Some wag has referred to this phenomenon as "Tanglefeet."

Garb Is Shocker

Mr. Dior or whoever his successor is, might have his artistic sensibilities shocked were, he to attend the concerts and take note of some of the costumes worn by the devotees of the "Three B's," in striking contrast to the white formals of Dr. Munch and the members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, even on the warmest days. The "Proper Bostonians" in the box section have even followed the trend of colorful male attire, with dinner coats of every hue of the spectrum.

Another item which engages the attention of the casual and regular visitors is the great number of handicapped people, some in wheel chairs, some using crutches and many on the arms of their companions who brave pain and inconvenience to listen to the programs. And while we are on the subject, Pierre Monteux, the 84-year-old guest conductor of the orchestra, is a living example of the fallacy of retiring men and women in commercial life when they have attained an arbitrary life experience of 65. To coin a phrase, "There's many a good tune in an old fiddle."

And it seemed to us that the Berkshire insect world is allergic to the music of the classical composers. Oh, there are one or two dive bombers who hit the glare of the spotlight and then kamikaze into the midst of the 104 musicians without one of the men—or two women—muffing a note in the score. That's the Munch discipline.

All of which is a preamble to the fact that the Albany Metropolitan area is in the penultimate week of one of the great musical festivals of the world. Tonight and next Thursday night, the festival will be functioning on all eight cylinders. This afternon, beginning at 4:30, will be the first of two Gala Evenings of Music. There will be an opera in the formal gardens; a concert by the students in the Theatre, and a concert by the student orchestra, conducted by Chares Munch and Eleazar de Carvalho, and the one-act opera, "Port Town." Basket lunch parties on the lawn and under the trees are encouraged.

Thursday night, Aug. 11, the Boston Orchestra, directed by Arthur Fiedler will present an all-Gershwin program, with Earl Wild, pianist, as soloist. These two Thursday affairs take the place of last year's one-night stand, "Tanglewood on Parade." You pays your money ($2.50 for unreserved seats, up to $5 for preferred chairs in the front section) and you takes your choice."

In addition to the varied programs by the several departments of the music school and orchestras, the final three concerts of the 1960 season will offer works by Beethoven, Liszt (Piano Concerto, played by Jorge Bolet—who, incidentally will be one of the attractions with the Civic Music Association this Winter in Albany); Stravinsky, Handel, Chopin Piano Concerto with soloist Garry Graffman, and the Aaron Copeland Symphony No. 1, with the composer on the podium.

One of the most successful seasons in the 26 years of the Berkshire Festival will be climaxed Sunday afternoon when the piece de resistance will be "Damnation of Faust," by Berlioz, by the full Boston Symphony Orchestra, three soloists and the festival chorus. Don't say we didn't warn you. And only an hour and 15 minutes motor trip from Albany through some of the most beautiful country in America.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y.
SARATOGIAN
D. 11,657

AUG 18 1960

ALBANY, N.Y.
KNICKERBOCKER NEWS
D. 66,739

AUG 18 1960

Attendance Declines

Berkshire Festival Increases Receipts

Fewer persons attended the 1960 Berkshire Festival at Tanglewood than last year, but ticket sales increased by almost $50,000.

The festival reported a 1960 attendance of 173,579 compared to 197,651 in 1959. Ticket sales rose from $338,587.75 last year to $385,592.50 this summer, an increase of $47,004.75.

Weather Blamed

Festival officials attributed the higher revenue to increased prices for some tickets. Bad weather was blamed for the reduced attendance.

The six-week festival, which ended Sunday, included 18 concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and six Wednesday night chamber music concerts. Bach and Mozart proved more popular this year than last.

The three all-Bach programs this year attracted 11,9[illegible] persons, compared to 11,00[illegible] last year. A total of 16,184 persons heard the three all-Mozart concerts this year, compared to 13,747 a year ago. Attendance at the 12 other weekend concerts dropped from 115,061 in 1959 to 102,704 this year.

Chamber Music Draws

The chamber music concerts were attended by 8,034 persons this year, compared to 7,638 in 1959.

Officials of the festival noted that inclement weather prevailed at five of the 18 orchestra concerts, four of the six chamber music concerts and three of the six open rehearsals of the BSO.

The six rehearsals this year drew 19,092 persons, who paid $25,700 into the orchestra's pension fund. Last year's rehearsal audiences, totaling 21,797 person, contributed $19,353.50.

Center Benefits

This year's annual concert by the Boston Pops attracted 15,616 persons and netted $39,599.50 for the Berkshire Music Center. A total of $25,160 was realized from last year's audience of 9,793.

At the orchestral concerts, 15 works were performed for the first time at Tanglewood. Of the 24 guest artists at these concerts, seven were heard for the first time at Tanglewood and six were members of the orchestra.

Sunday Telegram
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 101,427

SEP 4 1960

Music

Ten Pianists Tops at Tanglewood

Telegram Music Critic
By RAYMOND MORIN

This summer's Berkshire Music Festival at Tanglewood indicated that the biggest box-office attractions on the concert state today are male concert pianists. Ten of them were heard at Tanglewood during the six weeks of the festival.

They were Claudio Arrau, Jorge Bolet, Leon Fleisher, Claude Frank, Gary Graffman, Eugene Istomin, Byron Janis, Seymour Lipkin, William Masselos, and Earl Wild.

Most memorable performance for all-around glamor was Bolet's in Liszt's Concerto No. 1 ('Triangle') in E flat major.

It was superb playing from every standpoint. So was the accompaniment by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Pierre Monteux.

Octaves and chords of the concerto's opening blast were nailed fast to the keyboard, accomplished with all the bravura one could want. Bolet also sifted excess sugary content from the sentimental passages, and substituted a healthy emotional quality.

From the start, he served notice that this was not to be a "blowhard" display of the old "warhorse." There was no dearth of virtuosity, sonority or eclat, but, in every instance, Bolet sidetracked the obvious gymnastics.

The orchestra contributed luscious sounds, particularly the low strings. Monteux saw to it that the orchestra adapted itself to the soloists concept, style — and devotion to the cause of poetry. [illegible] mained clearly audible despite substantial instrumentation. The real test, however, was the finale (with its prominent part for triangle), which wasn't handled by pianist or orchestra as to race to the finish line.

Crashing chords were there, and ferocious octaves, but throughout it was a richly rewarding experience. It takes some doing for such a pyrotechnical pianist as Bolet to achieve that degree of authentic communication by forfeiting dazzling artifices in the interest of musicianship.

HOLIDAY
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
MONTHLY 917,277

SEP 1960

The Berkshires are compact and laced with good roads, so that almost all our side trips turned into short circle tours. A map of our travels through them would look like a figure "8." From Pittsfield, we dropped south a few miles to Lenox, where a short spin led us up to the green lawns and the open-sided orchestra shell of Tanglewood. Here, in summer, the Boston Symphony and some of the world's finest artists make outdoor listening an adventure.

NASHVILLE, TENN.
BANNER
D. 102,063

AUG 27 1960

The Music Score

8

Boston Symphony Nets Hefty $385,000

By SYDNEY DALTON

The Boston Symphony Orchestra ended four weeks of music at Tanglewood in the Berkshire Mountains, Aug. 14. This festival

Cliburn

Miss Farrell

is one of the great summer musical events and drew close to 175,000 attendants this year, with ticket sale of more than $385,000.

Copland

This summer marked the 25th year of the festival and a review of the Tanglewood activities over the quarter-century is a rewarding indication of the steady musical advance in the United States. It also shows the American composer is rapidly coming into his own.

Perhaps in this regard the Boston orchestra has not done all it could do for the native composer. Perhaps the fault lies as much with the listener as with conductor Munch and his coworkers. But at least our composers are getting deserved recognition and, so far as performances are concerned, are being heard more often than the present day composers of Europe.

In the last 20 years, 16 American composers have had their works performed and perhaps their relative standing, so far as popularity is concerned, is indicated by the fact that Aaron Copland's works have had 11 performances. A member of the Harvard music faculty, Walter Piston, comes next with six performances and Samuel Barber shares this figure with him.

Of course, many of these pieces are short-lived, but this has been true from earliest times. The few that deserve it will live on.

The best of our moderns, here or abroad, have a long way to go to catch up with the popularity of Beethoven, whose orchestral works had 75 hearings during the quarter-century. But then, Beethovens don't happen along very often.

CHICAGO, ILL.
CHICAGO'S AMERICAN
D. 467,557 S. 596,880

AUG 21 1960

CHARLES MUNCH
Music in Bershires.

ROGER DETTMER

Berkshire Festival: Music Among the Pines

TANGLEWOOD, Lenox, Mass.—The Berkshire mountains of western Massachusetts are 150 miles distant from the nearest ocean, but otherwise remind one pleasantly of California's stupendous Carmel coast. Roads climb, descend and wind thru [illegible]ck green pine forests; a sudden turn will reveal steep, rocky vistas. And the summer weather, cool or warm, is usually damp and misty.

Their physical resemblance aside, both the Berkshires and the Carmel coast are characterized by tight clusters of small communities that have become famous, in the last three decades, as year round art colonies.

Musically and dramatically, however, Massachusetts is far advanced, principally because here, in 1940, the late Serge Koussevitzky founded the Berkshire Summer Music center. Its nerve center is Tanglewood, a landscaped plot of land about the size of Ravinia park.

The premises are dominated by the giant Music Shed, with its pie-wedge, timber-lined roof, floor of hard damp clay, open sides, and metal chair seating under shelter for 6,000 persons.

In recent years, since Charles Munch succeeded Koussevitzky both as director of the Boston Symphony orchestra and as doyen of the Music center, the Shed has dominated Tanglewood musically as well as structurally.

SINCE 1937, the Boston Symphony orchestra has played concerts here from early July until mid-August. At present, on four consecutive weekends, there are Friday night, Saturday night and Sunday afternoon programs in the Shed by the entire personnel.

On two weekends preceding this Festival, so-called, a chamber nucleus from the parent orchestra plays programs of Bach and Mozart in the Theater, a smaller rustic structure occupying the southwest corner of the grounds.

These 18 concerts in all have become the focal point of a Berkshire summer,

Tourist facilities range from a choice of lavish new motels or elegant vintage hotels [mostly American plan] to modest private homes.

Food is costly but generally excellent, with notable variety available for the sophisticated diner

If you want to vary the entertainment menu, there are a centrally located summer theater of reported quality, and Ted Shawn's dance school and festival at Jacob's Pillow in adjacent Lee, plus museums and public gardens and forest preserves and outdoor sports.

The Berkshires are beautiful and restful [if one follows a regulated schedule, allowing ample time for dining and driving]. And Shed concerts are high grade by American summer standards—as one would expect them to be, played by the Boston Symphony orchestra.

If, on the basis of last weekend's 1960 festival finale, it is necessary to qualify approval, one must always remember that Boston's 80 year old orchestra, while no longer the nation's foremost and best, still ranks among the top five.

ELEVEN SEASONS under Mr. Munch's erratic and overgeneous, yet always virile direction have coarsened some of the ensemble virtues, as well as thinned and sharpened the sound, of Koussevitzky's superlative orchestra. Today's Boston Symphony has a lean, invariably bright sound, with lower strings only that recall the burnished instrument of bygone years.

It still can play with extraordinary sensitivity and

[Contnued on Pg. 33, Col. 3

Gazette (e)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Circ. 92,367

AUG 15 1960

Tanglewood Attendance Dips Slightly

By JOHN F. KYES

LENOX — The total attendance for 1960 at Tanglewood events was figured yesterday at 173,579 a few thousand short of las year's total, but ahead of any total, but ahead of any previou year. Attendance for the las weekend was not phenomenal, bu the season's largest attendance (13,168) was registered Thursday for the "Boston Pops at Tanglewood" Gershwin program conducted by Arthur Fiedler.

Next largest was the attendance on Sunday, July 31, when Pierre Monteux conducted the Beethove Ninth Symphony, the figure of 12,387 representing what would usually have been recorded for the final Sunday, when this musical giant among symphonies had been performed in previous years.

The publicity heads told me that eleven events this year suffered from inclement weather.

Jorge Bolet and Gary Graffman, pianists, were much esteemed in the Friday and Saturday concerts. Monteux made his final appearance of the summer on Friday.

Sunday Afternoon

The Sunday afternoon concert was given over to Berlioz's dramatic choral work, "The Damnation of Faust." The excellent chorus of more than 125 voices was trained by Hugh Ross. Charles Munch conducted the large orchestra with loving care and had especially good command of choral details.

The soloists were Eleanor Steber, soprano, as Marguerite; John McCollum, tenor, as Faust; Martial Singher, baritone, as Mephistopheles, and David Laurent, bass, as Brander and in a later passage, a "voice on earth."

It was good to hear this work as a whole. We have so many performances of bits from it, removed from their logical and delightful context. The famous Hungarian March sounded like a million dollars yesterday, as the climax to Part I. The music for the Sylphs, and later for the Will-o'-the-Wisps, sounded much more vital in its true relation to the plot.

Tragic Details

Berlioz followed quite closely the Goethe story of Faust, as Gounod used it in his opera, but varied some of the tragic details. The afternoon was a nice combination of choral work, interesting solos and colorful episodes for the orchestra.

Top honors should go to the chorus. The mixed group had a well-balanced brilliant, and alert tone, with fine handling of intricate attacks and tricky rhythms. The male group, itself numbering about 60, was rich and confident in tone and had numerous opportunities to shine.

Of the soloists, Singher was the most pleasing. He knew his part so well that he sang for a long time without a score, and he was not afraid to be a little like the infernal, humorous and cynical devil. The way he popped up at a musical cue was amusing and good stagecraft. His voice, though not immense, was of appropriate color for the role.

John McCollum sang with worthy timbre and fire, and a good variation f moods. He rose to the most exacting climaxes splendidly. The scene with the scene with the chorus singing an Easter hymn, behind McCollum's solo passages, was spine-tingling in its beauty.

Eleanor Steber

Eleanor Steber's knowing and well-trained voice was not cast correctly for the role of the young and naive Marguerite. Miss Steber's mature beauty and elaborate gown did not add to the visual illusion, and she was singing well and with the best of intentions, without achieving to any noticeable degree the role Berlioz envisioned.

David Laurent was secure and pleasing in the smaller assignments.

One of the most interesting choral effects was in the early dance of the Peasants, where the voices sounded for all the world like shaken tambourines.

Munch painted very tender orchestral moments, and also brought the huge Boston Symphony Orchestra up to shattering climaxes, especially at the tragic conclusion of the mad ride. His energy at one time caused his baton to fly from his hand. It was handed back to him neatly by the satanically amused Singher.

Berkshire Festival Offers Music Among the Pines

[Continued from Page 31]

esprit—and did [under the circumstances oddly] for Aaron Copland, who conducted his youthful but impressively exuberant first Symphony [1924, revised 1930] last night a week ago. Earlier on the same program, however, with Munch in charge, a pretty ragged and tonally coarse accompaniment spoiled much in Gary Graffman's maturing solo performance of the E minor Chopin Piano Concerto.

Last Sunday, in a considerably cut but still substantial production of Berlioz's mighty dramatic legend, "The Damnation of Faust," the playing was a marked improvement over Saturday, yet never really subtle or impassioned

Soloists were the veteran French baritone, Martial Singher, always a stylist, as Mephistopheles; Eleanor Steber, in sumptuous voice and superb musical communion with the composer, as Marguerite, and splendid John McCollum as the pivotal Faust.

AFTER AN ABSENCE of eight summers, I found much changed in the Berkshires, most often for the better. It did seem to me, tho, that the level of Tanglewood performances has fallen below the level of admissions [reserved seats $3 to $6.50 under shelter].

On the other hand, the Shed is not only this country's finest summer-concert hall, but has benefited enormously from a new stage shell and suspended sound reflectors from the roof above, like huge triangular mobiles—installed last summer at a cost of $40,000 to a benefactress from Boston.

It is an acoustic improvement the Ravinia Festival committee should study instanter, and a Chicago counterpart ought to be commissioned and put in place before the summer of 1961 overtakes Highland Park.

If, by way of concluding, it is any solace to Ravinia, 1960 attendance here at the full orchestra's four weekends was down nearly 15 per cent [to 102,000] from last summer.

One has noted, too, that the Lewissohn stadium concerts in New York suffered a [illegible] per cent decline in overall attendance this year, compared with last.

It would seem, from the evidence, that serious music has had a hard summer everywhere, east of the Mississippi and west of Boston's Charles river Esplanade.

News-Times (e)
DANBURY, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 18,203
JUL 30 1959

Boston Symphony Is Thriving Under Munch

LENOX, Mass. (Special)—The Boston Symphony orchestra, now more than halfway through its summer season at Tanglewood, is giving to New England an anatomy of pops music and a new lesson in the magnitude of musical understanding.

This summer, Tanglewood, located off Route 7 and just a few hours' drive from Danbury, has seated crowds of 7,000 to 12,000 during performances in the mammoth shell and under the surrounding pines.

Charles Munch, under whose baton the Bostonians have found new life for a decade, is the hero of the company's 79th season with his insistence on three types of orchestral production: baroque symphony or overture, a "difficult piece" or pops, and a classical symphonic presentation.

In the words of a New York newspaper critic, Munch's contemporary handling of a symphony orchestra "is making the Boston symphony as much of a New England institution as the Red Sox."

Three Types

In a book he wrote in 1955, Munch outlined his "three types" of symphony production and has maintained them through this summer's Tanglewood series. The result has been light and delightful, and yet lauded with a popularity that is nibbling at the heretofore unchallenged prominence of the New York and Philadelphia symphonies.

Tanglewood, now partially financed by the Rockefeller Foundation, has given Munch a chance to display a symphony capable of playing any form of music—classical or contemporary—with a finesse that is not matched by many other orchestras.

A Boston critic said that "the extreme difficulties" of pace-changing music is being "tossed off as if they were a routine matter."

A Worcester, Mass., critic said that listening to the orchestra is "like looking through glass at the workings of a completely clear mind."

27,000 on Weekend

The most recent weekend brought a total of 27,000 people to Tanglewood, eating picnic-style on the hilltop-lawns and lounging around the acoustically-perfect shell.

Cars in the parking lots bore plates from every state east of Chicago and north of Louisville, with New York licenses out-populating all others including Massachusetts.

Critics proclaim it is the symphony itself that is drawing the crowds and not the superlative guest artists. But these artists, thanks to Munch's devotion to pops, are becoming an integral part of the Tanglewood roster.

Copland Conducts

Aaron Copland, having left Chicago to participate in the Tanglewood chamber sessions, conducted his "Tender Land" suite Sunday, a form of contemporary American music which Copland is attempting to promote.

His "Rites of Spring" was not met too warmly at Tanglewood two years ago, but Sunday's performance was labeled by one critic as Copland's finest work."

Brahms' Piano Concerto No. 1 in D Minor, a last-minute substitute for the better-known Concerto No. 2, featured Rudolf Serkin at a Steinway grand. Further variations of Haydn themes rounded-out Munch's "three-type" program.

Proof of Popularity

Tanglewood's roster of operatic and choral productions was considerably reduced this summer—mute testimony to the growing popularity of the symphony itself.

But next Friday, Berlioz' "Requiem" will be presented with the Berkshire Festival chorus. Orchestrations of Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde," Mendelssohn's "Italian" symphony, and Schumann's fourth symphony are scheduled.

Open rehearsals, which give the Bostonians a chance to show their informal acceptance of study, will be held on the afternoons of Aug. 1 and [illegible].

Arthur Fiedler, who played no small part in teaching the Boston orchestra its ability to handle pops, will conduct Aug. [illegible] with a gala presentation including Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" and an "American in Paris."

Beethoven will be toasted Aug. 7 with Serkin again the soloist. It will still be Beethoven Aug. 8 conducted by Pierre Monteux. Beethoven's "Coriolan" overture and Ninth symphony comes Aug. 9 with the full orchestra and Festival chorus.

Closes in August

The Boston symphony, which will close Tanglewood in mid-August, will take up its full winter program in Boston in early October. It is scheduled for 10 winter concerts in Carnegie Hall, six in Cambridge, five in Brooklyn's Academy of Music, and five in Providence.

It is also slated for nearly 20 other performances throughout the country. It is worth noting that before Munch took over the orchestra ten years ago, it rarely left Boston.

It went to Europe for the first time in 1952, won a tour of the United States the next year, and was called back to Europe in 1956.

It was the fatal summer of 1956 that the Philadelphia orchestra appeared at Tanglewood to present a classical schedule void of Munch's theory of pops concerts. The result was a hue and cry from New Englanders for the permanent establishment of the Bostonians at Tanglewood.

Now, two years later, the symphony, dressed in white and mingling with the crowd beneath the trees prior to performances, has suddenly taken on an aspect of being a permanent fixture here.

According to a Boston critic, the symphony's summer popularity stems from its ability to sell to those who have "been on the fence" the value of pops concerts.

Another critic simply called it "magnificently constructed music."

But to the vacationing family man, who seeks orchestral music in a sport shirt instead of suit and tie, Tanglewood's summer program has developed a weekend appeal that is becoming New England's most cultural drawing card. —S.S.

Berkshire Courier
GT. BARRINGTON,
Mass.
Weekly Independent
Circ. 2,572
AUG 18 1960

Festival Receipts Were Up This Year

Attendance, However, Was Below Last Year

Inclement Weather Prevailed During 12 Concerts During Season.—Winners Of Scholarships Offered By High Fidelity Magazine And Mrs. Albert Spalding Are Announced.

Total ticket receipts at the 24 Berkshire Music Festival concerts at Tanglewood in Lenox this year amounted to [illegible] compared with $338,587 in the 1959 season it was shown in a summary of the festival operations released Tuesday. Receipts were higher despite the fact that attendance dropped from 179,651 in 1959 to 173,579 this year.

Attendance was down, it was felt, due to the fact that inclement weather prevailed at five of the 18 orchestra concerts, at four of the six chamber music concerts and at three of the six open rehearsals. Receipts were higher, to some extent, due to an increase in some ticket price ranges.

This year marked the 25th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's participation in the Tanglewood concerts. It also marked the 10th season of Charles Munch's Berkshire Festival direction and the 20th anniversary of the founding of the Berkshire Music Center.

At the conclusion of the 20th anniversary session of the Berkshire Music Center, a large number of scholarship awards were presented by the administration of the school. The winners were selected from a student body which totalled 286 young musicians who came to Tanglewood from 34 states, the District of Columbia and 13 foreign countries.

Two of the scholarships were offered by Great Barrington people. George Shirley, a brilliant young tenor in the opera department, won the scholarship offered by High Fidelity Magazine, which is published here. Mr. Shirley gained fine critical notices for his performance as one of the sailors in the world premiere of Jan Meyerowitz' opera "Port Town." He is from 61 West 88th street, New York city.

Mrs. Albert Spalding of Great Barrington, has established a fund, the income of which is presented as the Albert Spalding Prize for the most promising and outstanding instrumentalist in the student body. This year the prize was won by Jesse Levine, 2102 Wallace avenue, Bronx, N. Y. Mr. Levine was first violist in the student orchestra and played in several of the Sunday morning chamber music concerts.

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,169 S. 1,254,635

AUG 14 1960

242

THE WORLD OF MUSIC

By JOHN BR[illegible]

THE late Serge Koussevitzky was a lifelong champion of new music, both as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and in his earlier years in Paris, where he founded an orchestra and a publishing house to aid contemporary composers.

At the Berkshire Music Center, shaped initially by Koussevitzky, a composer-in-residence has been a feature of the summer music school since its founding in 1940. Since Koussevitzky's death on June 4, 1951 the Koussevitzky Music Foundation has continued the tradition by commissioning new works.

Now Mrs. Olga Koussevitzky, widow of the conductor, has begun still another plan to aid composers. It is to be a MacDowell-type of colony at the Koussevitzky mansion in Lenox, Mass., away from the grounds of the Berkshire Music Center proper.

Inspiring Site

Mrs. Koussevitzky, who has possession of the house during her lifetime, feels that the beauty of its location, on a hill with a magnificent sweep of Berkshire scenery, will inspire composers. She also believes that composers will benefit by detachment from the Berkshire Music Center, with its teaching and administrative duties.

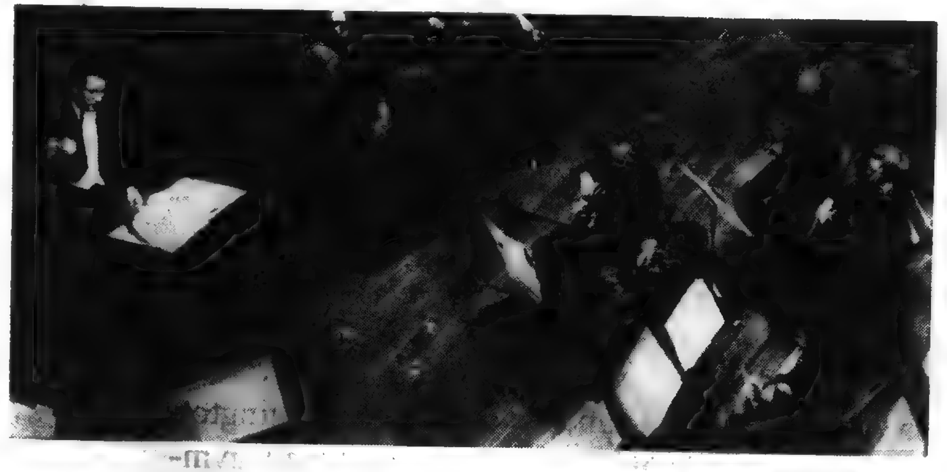
The first composer invited to participate was the Italian, Luciano Berio, who with his wife spent the Berkshire Festival period this summer at the Koussevitzky estate. Under the inspiration of his surroundings Mr. Berio rewrote his "Circles" for Voice, Harp and Percussion in time for its first performance on Aug. 1.

Eventual plans are for a "retreat" period for composers to begin two weeks before the six-week Berkshire Music Festival and to continue two weeks afterward. Mrs. Koussevitzky believes the final two weeks important to give composers time to mull over the stimulating events of the festival.

It is planned to build a studio away from the main house, where composers can work in seclusion as they do at the MacDowell colony. During non-working hours the resident composers would be available to confer with composition students from the Berkshire Music Center.

THINK
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY

JUL 1960



Music in the making. The performance is symphonic, the scene is the Berkshire Music Festival in Massachusetts.

Photos by Clemens Kalischer

The Shape of Music

A photographer goes to Tanglewood, in the Berkshire Hills of Massachusetts, to show that a symphony orchestra's music-making instruments, even when silent, hold an eloquent promise.

242

NEW YORK, N.Y.
TIMES
D. 614,189 S. 1,254,035
AUG 14 1960

THE WORLD OF MUSIC

By JOHN B

THE late Serge Koussevitzky was a lifelong champion of new music both as conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and in his earlier years in Paris, where he founded an orchestra and a publishing house to aid contemporary composers.

At the Berkshire Music Center, shaped initially by Koussevitzky, a composer-in-residence has been a feature of the summer music school since its founding in 1940. Since Koussevitzky's death on June 4, 1951 the Koussevitzky Music Foundation has continued the tradition by commissioning new works.

Now Mrs. Olga Koussevitzky, widow of the conductor, has begun still another plan to aid composers. It is to be a MacDowell-type of colony at the Koussevitzky mansion in Lenox, Mass., away from the grounds of the Berkshire Music Center proper.

Inspiring Site

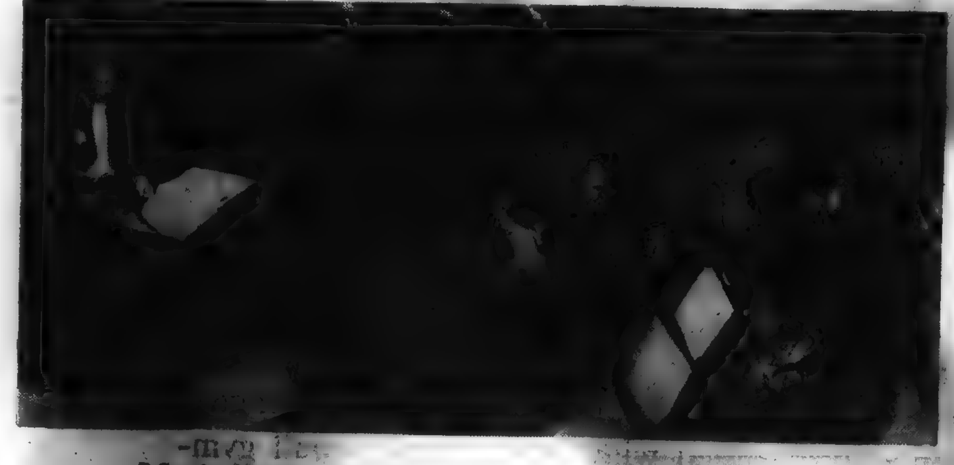
Mrs. Koussevitzky, who has possession of the house during her lifetime, feels that the beauty of its location, on a hill with a magnificent sweep of Berkshire scenery, will inspire composers. She also believes that composers will benefit by detachment from the Berkshire Music Center, with its teaching and administrative duties.

The first composer invited to participate was the Italian, Luciano Berio, who with his wife spent the Berkshire Festival period this summer at the Koussevitzky estate. Under the inspiration of his surroundings Mr. Berio rewrote his "Circles" for Voice, Harp and Percussion in time for its first performance on Aug. 1.

Eventual plans are for a "retreat" period for composers to begin two weeks before the six-week Berkshire Music Festival and to continue two weeks afterward. Mrs. Koussevitzky believes the final two weeks important to give composers time to mull over the stimulating events of the festival.

It is planned to build a studio away from the main house, where composers can work in seclusion as they do at the MacDowell colony. During non-working hours the resident composers would be available to confer with composition students from the Berkshire Music Center.

THINK
NEW YORK, N.Y.
MONTHLY
JUL 1960



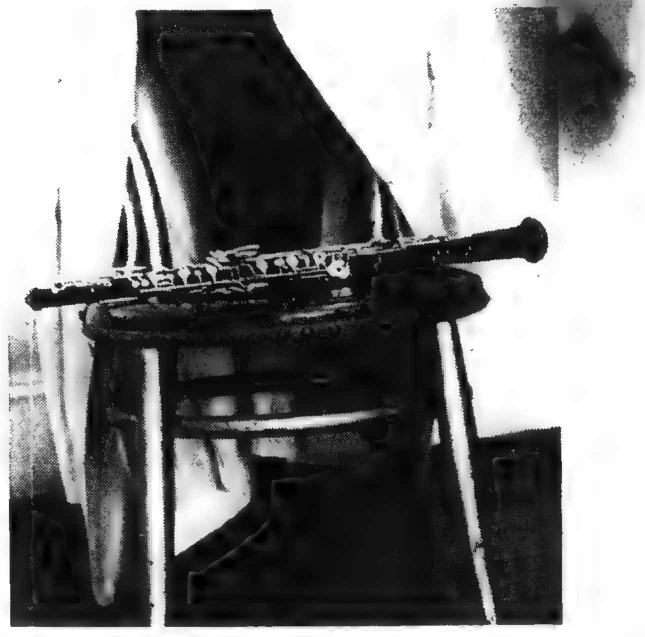
Music in the making. The performance is symphonic, the scene is the Berkshire Music Festival in Massachusetts.

Photos by Clemens Kalischer

The Shape of Music

A photographer goes to Tanglewood, in the Berkshire Hills of Massachusetts, to show that a symphony orchestra's music-making instruments, even when silent, hold an eloquent promise.

Kettles of sound. Even in repose gleaming kettledrums have an unmistakable look of booming resonance.

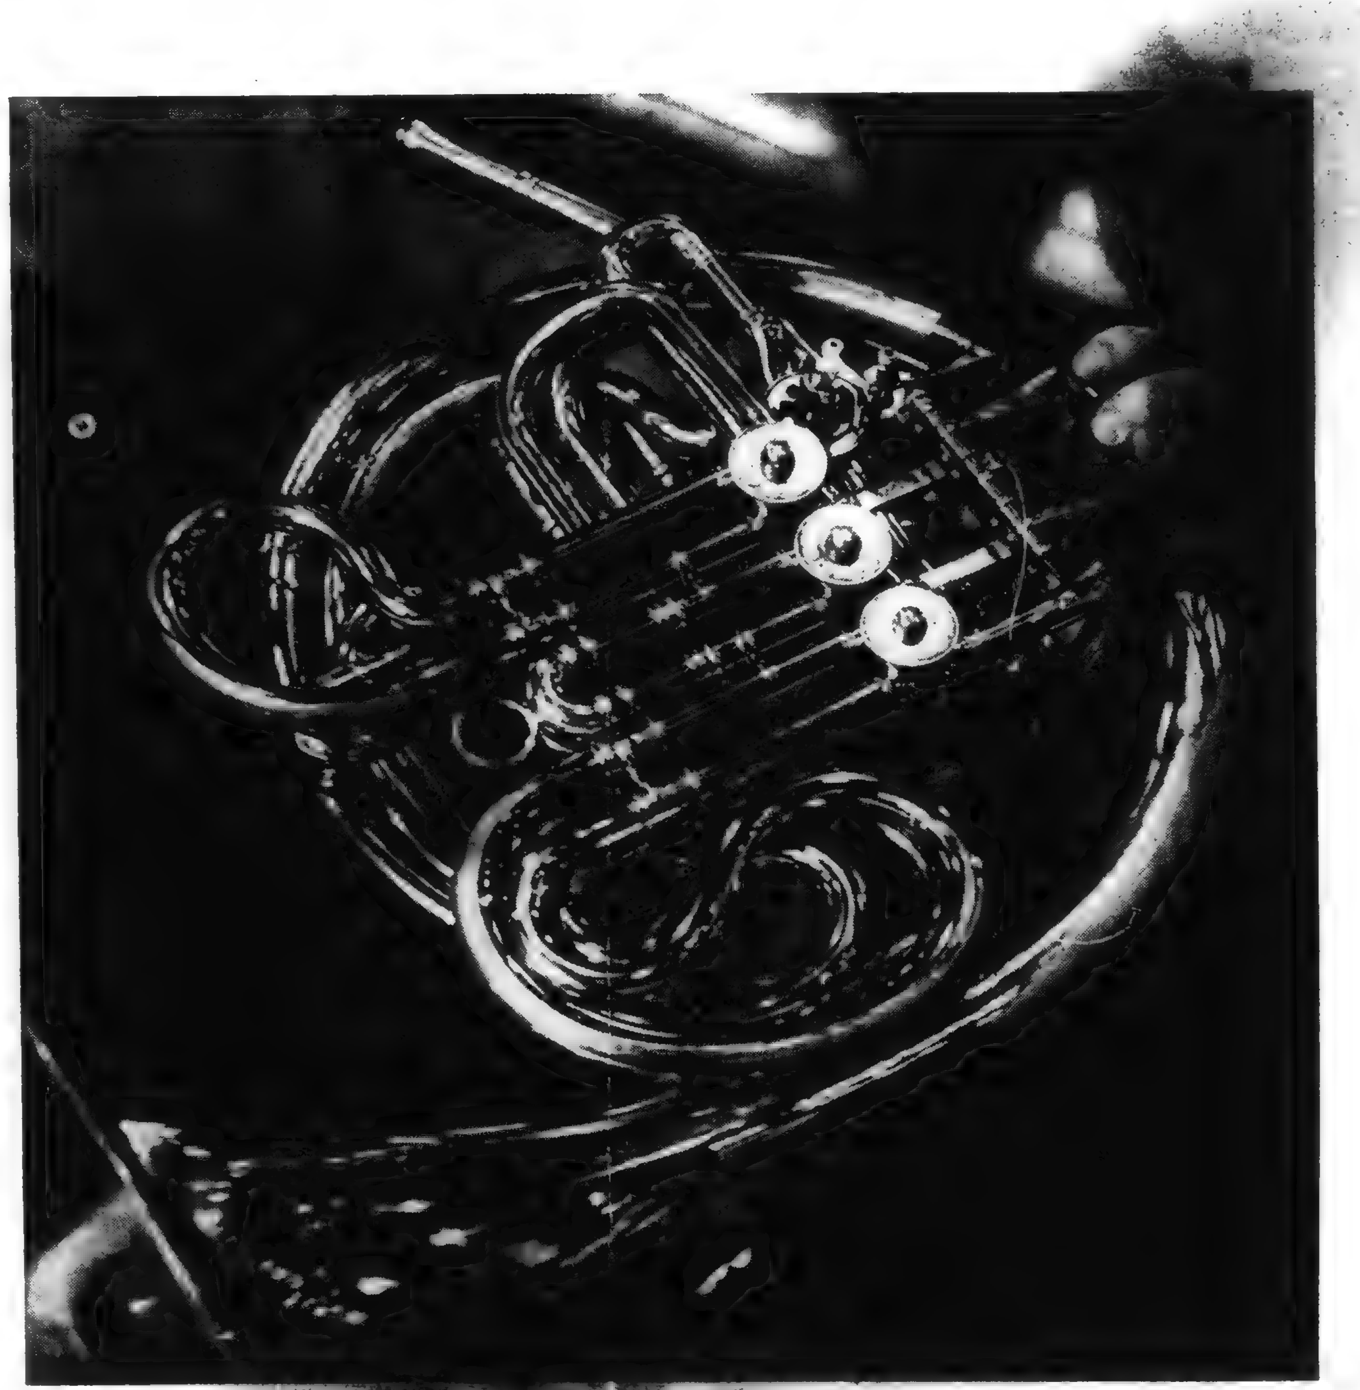


Woodwind at ease. The reedy voice of a clarinet is temporarily stilled.

Many of us hear the symphony orchestra in action, but rarely see it in repose. As our photographs show, the instruments have an eloquence even when silent. They are beautifully made works of art, which speak to the sense of sight, ranging from the curvaceous, Gibson-girl lines of the cello to the sheer, stark simplicity of the triangle.

The instruments here, caught off guard and off duty by the photographer, belong to members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who, every year at about this time, pack up their violins, horns and drums and head for Tanglewood, near Lenox, Massachusetts, where they stay until mid-August, taking part in the Berkshire Music Festival. More than 50 concerts of symphonic, operatic and chamber music and choral singing are given during the six-week session. Eighteen concerts, led by Charles Munch, are given by the Boston Symphony.

We live in a time when music follows us wherever we go: to restaurant, supermarket, department store, even to the dentist. All of it is canned, in one form or another: public address system, radio, hi-fi, stereo, or just plain phono. But we can also follow music wherever it goes, to places like Tanglewood. For nothing is more satisfying to the listener than a live performance, where we can watch expert music makers at work, where we can see as [illegible] as hear music at its source. ●



Bright and brassy. At Tanglewood, too, some of the music goes round and round, and when it comes out you know it's been through the French horn.

Fo[illegible] [illegible]d timbre. Left, a cello's mellow wood [illegible]que lines actually influence its timbre.

Kettles of sound. Even in repose gleaming kettledrums have an unmistakable look of booming resonance.

Woodwind at ease. The reedy voice of a clarinet is temporarily stilled.

MANY OF US HEAR the symphony orchestra in action, but rarely see it in repose. As our photographs show, the instruments have an eloquence even when silent. They are beautifully made works of art, which speak to the sense of sight, ranging from the curvaceous, Gibson-girl lines of the cello to the sheer, stark simplicity of the triangle.

The instruments here, caught off guard and off duty by the photographer, belong to members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra who, every year at about this time, pack up their violins, horns and drums and head for Tanglewood, near Lenox, Massachusetts, where they stay until mid-August, taking part in the Berkshire Music Festival. More than 50 concerts of symphonic, operatic and chamber music and choral singing are given during the six-week session. Eighteen concerts, led by Charles Munch, are given by the Boston Symphony.

We live in a time when music follows us wherever we go: to restaurant, supermarket, department store, even to the dentist. All of it is canned, in one form [illegible] another: public address system, [illegible] hi-fi, stereo, or just plain phono. But we can also follow music wherever it goes, to places like Tanglewood. For nothing is more satisfying to the listener than a live performance, where we can watch expert music makers at work, where we can see as well as hear music at its source. ●

Tone and timbre. Left, a cello's mellow wood and baroque lines actually influence its timbre.

Bright and brassy. At Tanglewood, too, some of the music goes round and round, and when it comes out you know it's been through the French horn.

ROANOKE, VA.
WORLD-NEWS
D. 43,167

AUG 1 3 1960

Musical Scene

Tanglewood in the Berkshires

By Bob Fishburn

Tanglewood, the summer home of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, is about as close as America has come to a summer Salzburg.

This acreage in the Berkshire "hills" of western Massachusetts remains the perfect place for a vacationer seeking music and a glimpse of the activities behind the scenes, the near-professional who needs the contact with professionals and the amateur who just wants to bathe in the atmosphere.

The well-kept grounds of the estate pulls in about 200,000 music lovers during the six-week schedule of concerts. It's the scene of the best summertime music-making in the United States and has everything, including camp followers.

The music is varied and well-performed for a number of reasons. First, this is the only place in the U.S. where one can hear a full orchestra in the summer. Other shells, barges, barns and sheds throughout America, including Lewisohn, the Hollywood Bowl and the Charles River Espanade, display orchestras at about 80 to 90 per cent of full complement.

Fishburn

Here the complete Boston orchestra is in summer residence. Many of its members teach at the Berkshire Music Center on the festival grounds. This makes up the second reason. The school's connection with the festival insures a steady flow of balanced concerts and a dazzling display of young talent.

★ ★

This season marks the 26th year since a curious crowd of 3,000 gathered to hear the New York Philharmonic in the Berkshire's first outdoor concert.

It's now out of the hands of the women who started it. The Boston orchestra under Koussevitzky added prestige and musical talent.

Wealthy landowners in the area added money, land and their names; and the success of some of the festival's products, notably Leonard Bernstein, added the drama.

But Tanglewood is just the cream that tops a large pool of talent in the Berkshires—some incipient but much full-grown. The idea of the wedding of professional musicians and students in a place where other forms of art—dance and summer stock—were already flourishing has paid off with a large summer influx of talent.

★ ★

Summer camps for boys and girls in the area are adding more and more musicians to their staffs; Lenox, a small town near the Tanglewood property, now has three art galleries; and jazz has found a symboitic perch at the Music Barn, near the festival grounds.

Like in Old New England

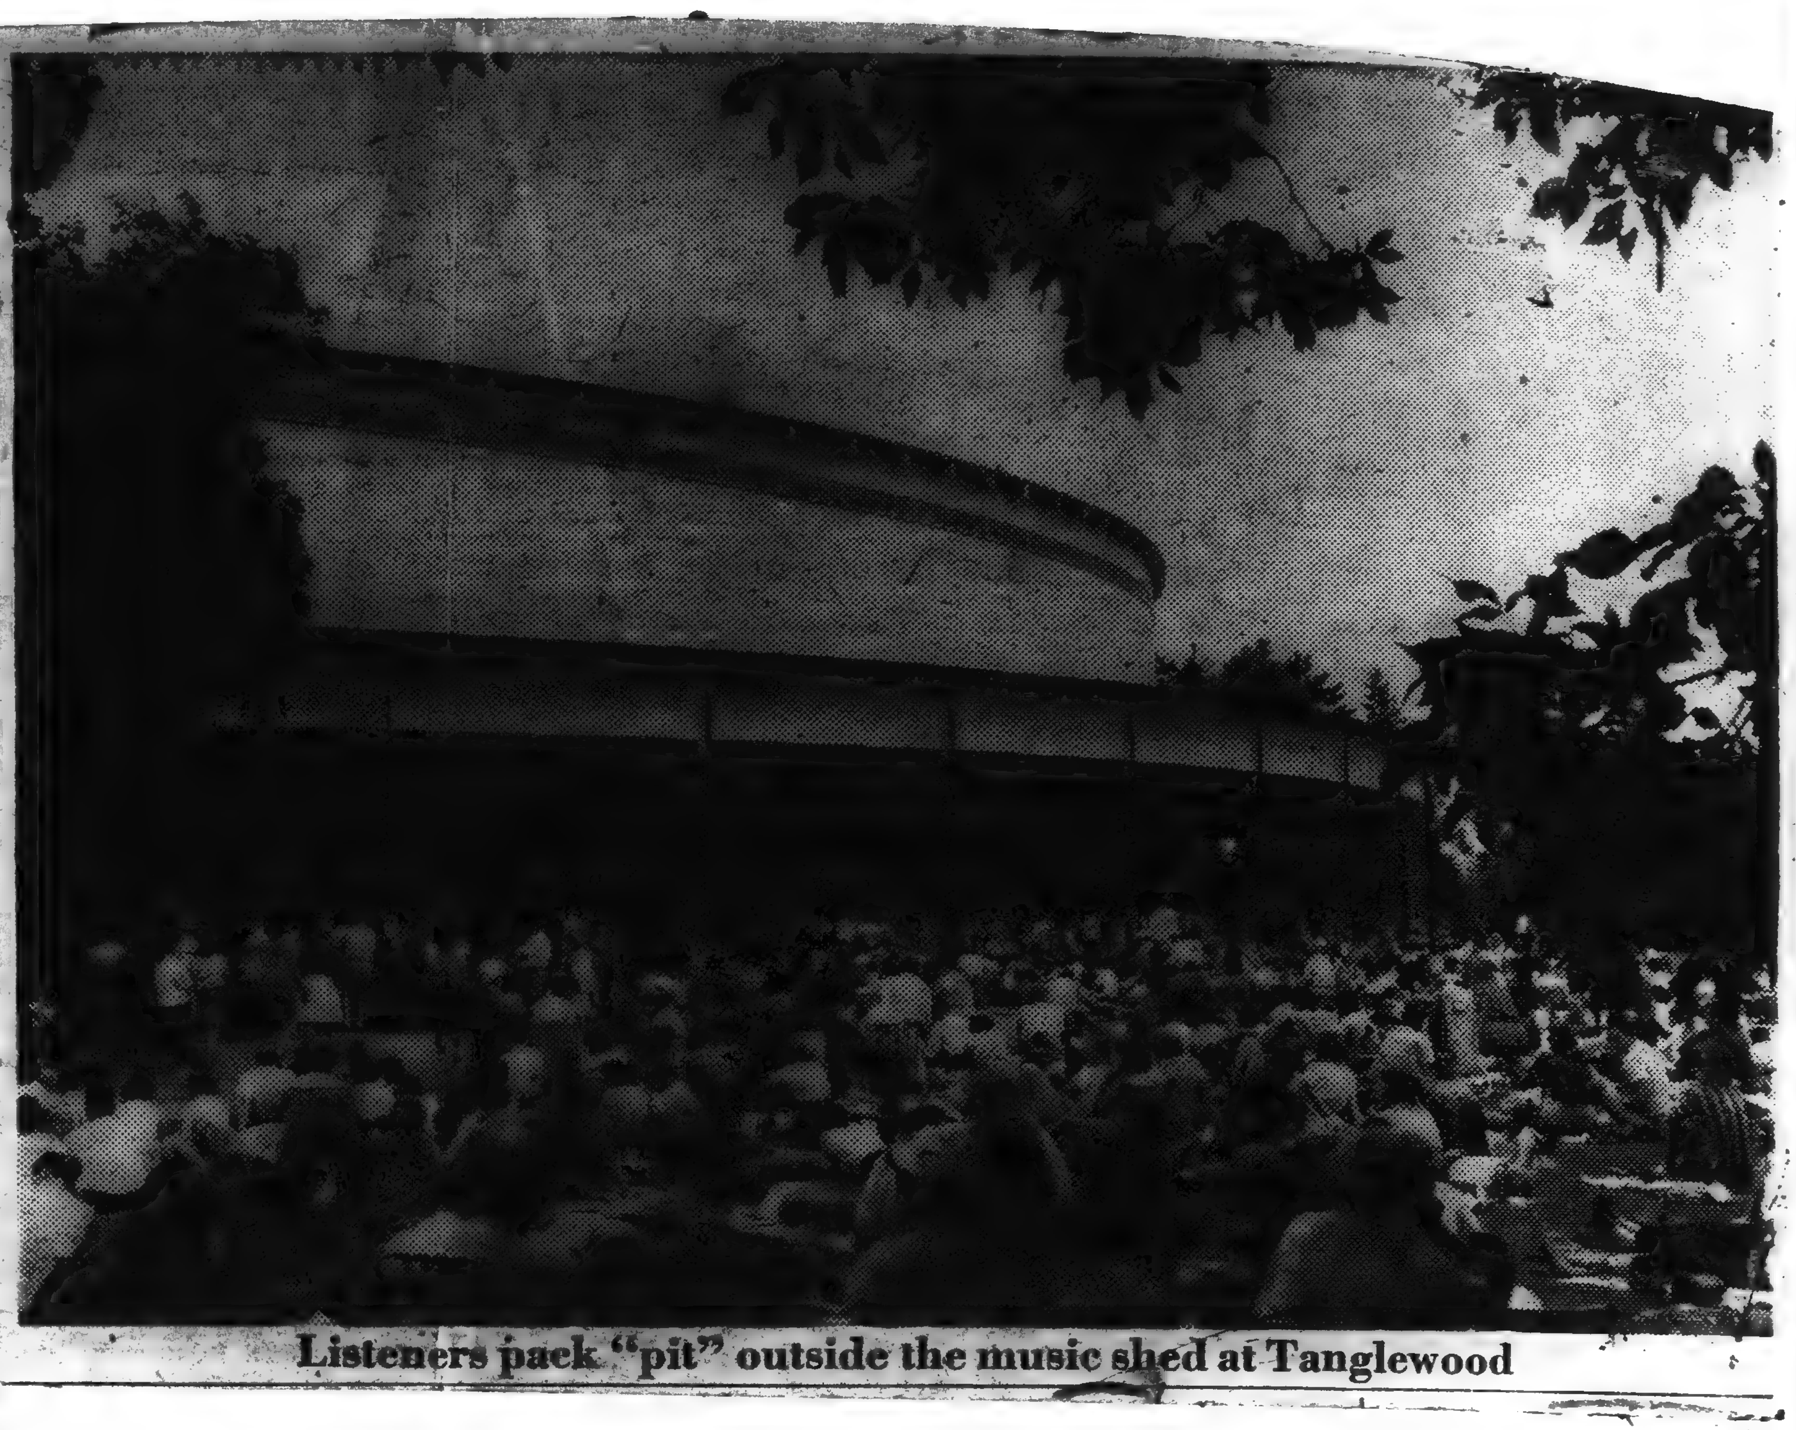
The people in the area like the influx of talent, but they have been adamant about keeping the countryside almost the way it was when the area attracted some of New England's most famous writers during the last century—including Hawthorne, Emerson, Melville and Holmes.

The wealthy residents have been instrumental in keeping the area exasperatingly like the standard impression of a small rural New England-neat and self-contained, rather like an American "Tight Little Island."

Almost as if they were penitent for the mess they made on the East Coast while the money was pouring in, they have restricted billboards, put their limousines in hock rather than sell their land for motel strips and have, in general, been reluctant to make the tourist feel like staying or even to give him a place to stay.

All to the good. The New York Philharmonic may look for a summer residence for its members, but they will never find another like Tanglewood.

After all, the environment has helped. Koussevitzky said, upon seeing the Tanglewood property for the first time, "This is wonderful. We will make beautiful music here." And he did.



Listeners pack "pit" outside the music shed at Tanglewood

READING, PA.
EAGLE
D. 47,781 S. 64,909

AUG 11 1960

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

No summer is complete without at least one weekend at Tanglewood, where sounds from the Berkshire Music Festival flood the atmosphere in the Music Shed and permeate the broad lawn. There during the six-week Boston Symphony concert season, an average of 25,000 listeners come weekly to create, if possible, an ecstatic dialogue between themselves and the world's greatest music. I try to time my weekend to Beethoven's Ninth Symphony, conducted this time so excitingly by Pierre Monteux that all of Tanglewood seemed to be swept into the symphonic structure that kept pace with Monteux' baton. It was a special night, with both Monteux, as guest conductor, and Charles Munch, the regular conductor, pyramiding music into heights and breadths I never heard before. One always hopes for this musical miracle, which rarely happens. This time, it did.

Alice Hughes

But one cannot sustain for long the sharp pinnacle of such ecstasy. It was briefly shattered for an instant when Munch's baton snapped in two, overpowered by the vigor of "Daphnis and Chloe" which he was extracting from the orchestra. Some conductors, Stokowski, for example, stop abruptly when startled by an unforeseen incident. At a recent Stadium concert in New York, Stokowski halted the orchestra several times when the rumble of low-flying airplanes crossed the orbit of his music. On a theater stage, the rule, whatever happens, is "the show must go on." But musicians are more sound-sensitive, perhaps, than actors. It was in the midst of such a stream-of-consciousness as this that I heard a tiny sound buzzing angrily past me as the last sweet notes of Mozart died down. A mosquito had dared to invade the summer symphony!

Were the bats on strike? I wondered. The proudest boast of Tanglewood is "Outdoor Music Without Mosquitoes," achieved, believe it or not, with a battalion of 10,000 live bats. They live in the belfry of the old gray Tanglewood mansion which has a fourth-floor attic, dark as a Stygian cave, musty and overpoweringly bat-ty. The legend—even though Hawthorne failed to write it in his "Tanglewood Tales"—is that these music-trained bats, in return for gobbling up every living, flying creature that wings forth at night, particularly mosquitoes and even small birds, are paid off once each musical season when the orchestra plays, "Die Fledermaus" which means "a bat" in German.

A bat is known, according to specialists on the subject, to eat its own weight in bugs every night. If only mosquitoes are available, they add up to 80,000 per bat-weight-per-night. And as James Kiley, grounds superintendent of Tanglewood, attests to the count of 10,000 bats up there in his belfry, it is shattering to estimate how badly bitten the Berkshire Festival music-lovers might have been, had these silent-partner bats not formed a NATO alliance with the Boston Symphony Orchestra to keep these sweet-sounding summer nights drenched in music rather than in drops of human blood sucked by nearly one billion cannibalistic mosquitoes. And what's nice and proper about these bats is, that they emerge only at night; are rarely seen or heard; do their work silently and like the Arabs, return to their belfry-tents, sated, secure and sleepy.

END OF VOLUME

VOLUME 102

Far Eastern Tour

1959 - 1960

FAR EAST

1960

NATIONAL FLAT BACK SCRAP BOOKS

NATIONAL
Made in U.S.A.

FULL DUCK COVER, MANILA PAPER
Without Index, Ruling, Paging or Title

NUMBER	THICKNESS	SIZE
56-032	72 Leaves	12⅝ × 10¼
56-033	72 Leaves	15 × 10
56-034	100 Leaves	15 × 10
56-036	90 Leaves	16 × 11⅝
56-038	150 Leaves	16 × 11⅝
56-039	90 Leaves	18 × 13
56-041	150 Leaves	18 × 13
56-042	150 Leaves	25 × 20

To duplicate this book Order Number indicated by arrow

Far Eastern Tour of Boston Symphony Orchestra page

Tour Plans .... 1 - 20
Japanese Discord 21- 28
Korean Situation 29
Depabture .... 33 - 42
Arrives Taipei 45
Arrives Toyko 51
Osaka Festival 62
End Jap. Tour 85
Manila .... 94 - 127
  1st Concert (Burgin) 101
  2nd Concert (Copland) 153
  3rd Concert (Munch) .... 112 & 157
Austrailia 166
Brisbane 193
Sidney 204
Women of B.S.O. 219
Adelaide 227
Melbourne 235
Wellington 260
Boston 265

BLANK PAGE

ARTICLE PEELED AWAY

2

Often the former President won [illegible] liberals
(Continued on Page Twenty)

HERALD

Tour of Japan For Symphony

First Far East Visit Expected This May

Members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra have voted in favor of a Japanese tour at the conclusion of the 1959-60 season here The Herald learned yesterday. This will be the first time that the orchestra, one of the world's finest, has appeared in the Far East.

Although Symphony Hall officials refused to confirm the report, sources close to the orchestra declared the tour will probably be taken under U.S. State Department sponsorship and will bring the Boston Symphony into most of the major cities of Japan.

Earlier Tours

In 1956, the Symphony undertook a history-making tour of the Soviet Union, and in May, 1952, wrote a new chronicle of musical activity during its first European appearances. It is believed that the Japanese tour will occur, like these others, in the month of May.

If so, the Boston Pops Orchestra under Arthur Fiedler will again consist of an alternate group of musicians instead of the regularly-scheduled Symphony men.

Boston Symphony Orchestra's Asia Tour

The world famed Boston Symphony Orchestra is coming to Japan for the first time early in May as part of the 100th anniversary celebrations of the formal opening of diplomatic relations between Japan and the U.S. on the invitation of the Japan Broadcasting Corporation.

The Japan trip is also part of the orchestra's Far Eastern tour including Taiwan, the Philippines, Australia and New Zealand on the U.S. State Department's cultural exchange program.

The preeminent orchestra is celebrating its 80th season in 1960-61. It holds a seniority of two years over the Concertgebouw of Amsterdam and is junior to the pioneer orchestras of London, Leipzig, Vienna and Paris.

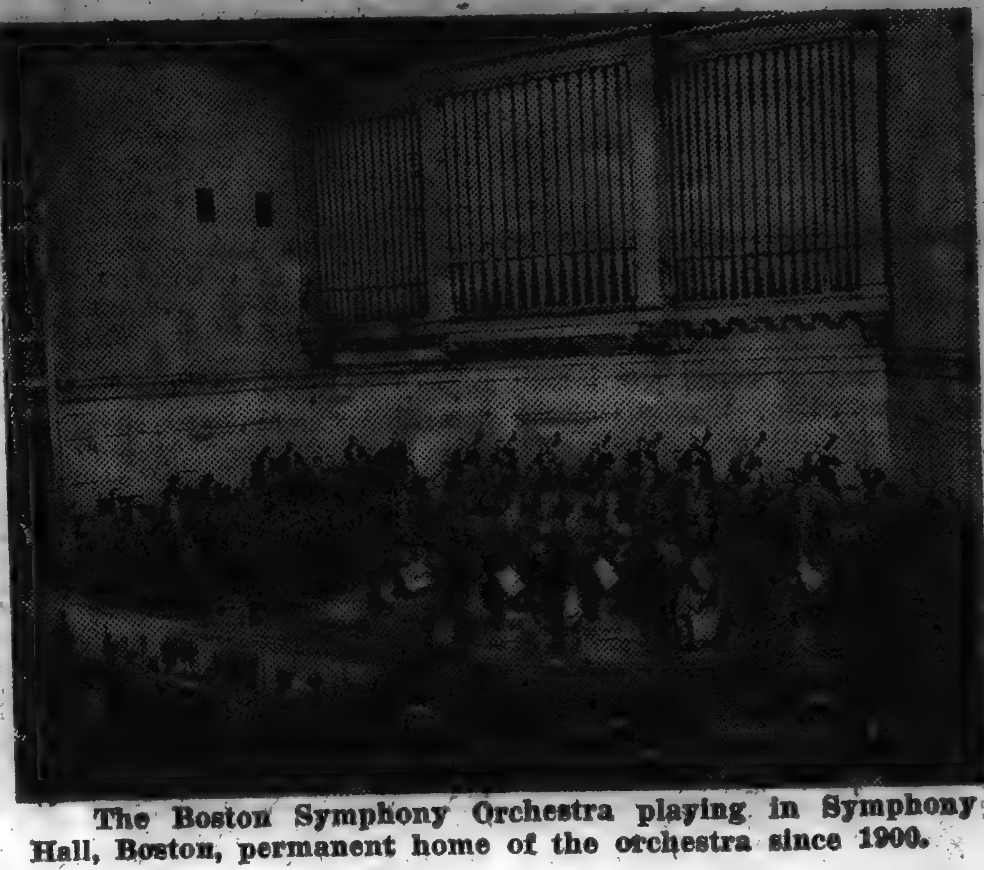
In 1881 Henry Lee Higginson assembled the best musicians available in the United States and Europe and engaged a young German conductor, George Henschel. The first concert was held in the Boston Music Hall on Oct. 22, 1881. Wilhelm Gericke was conductor from 1884-89 and again from 1898-1906. Artur Nikish led the orchestra from 1889-1893. Emil Paur succeeded him and was in charge until the close of the 1898 season. Karl Muck was appointed conductor in 1906, and, except for four seasons (1908-1912) when Max Fiedler was in charge, he was the conductor until the spring of 1918.

After the first World War the newly formed board of trustees engaged Henri Rabaud from Paris for the 1918-1919 season. Pierre Monteux, who now returns from time as a valued and beloved "conductor emeritus," was in charge from 1919-1924.

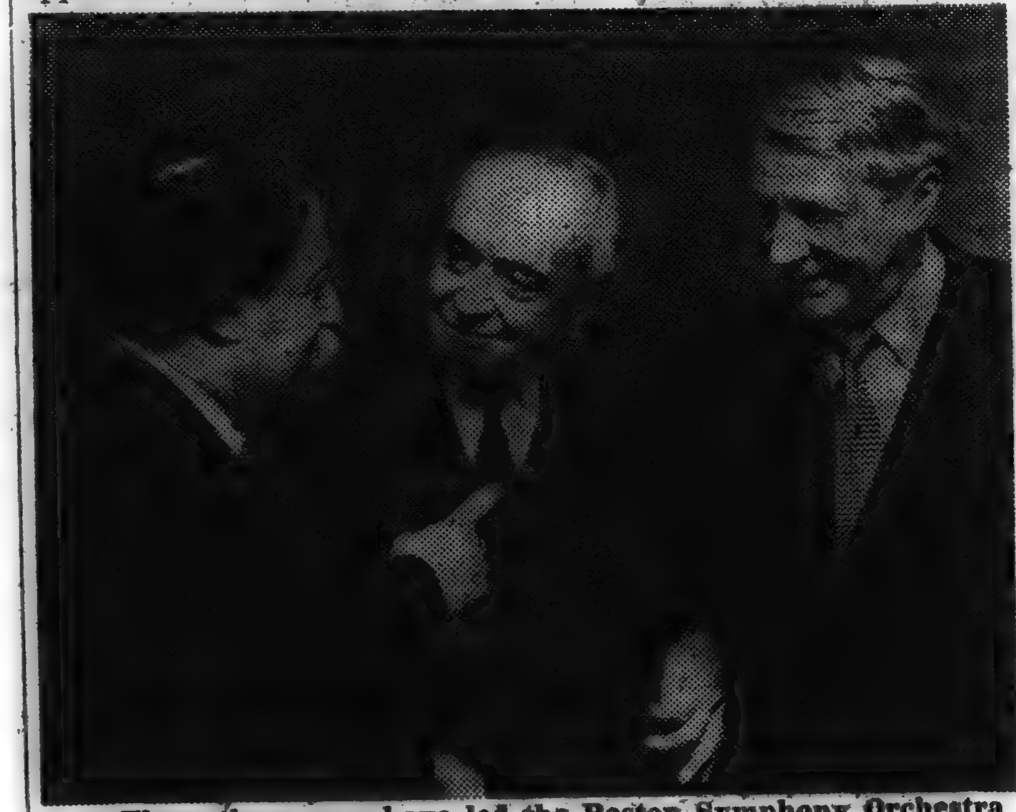
In 1924, Serge Koussevitzky began what was to be the longest term for a single conductor—25 years. Koussevitzky brought with him the European repertoire plus an encouragement to the American composer which resulted in a new era for the orchestra. The names of the orchestra and its conductor seemed inseparable when, in 1948, he retired. He died June 4, 1951 and is buried in the village of Lenox (Massachusetts) near Tanglewood.

Charles Munch, the present conductor, is one of the foremost musicians in France.

Born in Strasbourg on Sept. 26, 1891, Munch comes from a distinguished musical family. His father was an organist, string player, leader of the St. Guillaume Choir in the Strasbourg Cathedral and professor in the conservatory there. He was Charles' first teacher (in violin). Charles' Uncle Eugene rivalled his brother, Ernest, in producing the cantatas and passions of Bach in the cathedral at Mulhouse.



The Boston Symphony Orchestra playing in Symphony Hall, Boston, permanent home of the orchestra since 1900.



These three men have led the Boston Symphony Orchestra during the second half of its 80-year history. Pierre Monteux, left, was conductor from 1918 to 1924; the late Serge Koussevitzky, center, from 1924 to 1949 and Charles Munch, right, the present conductor.

He settled in Paris in 1932 where he had the opportunity to conduct concerts of the Straram Orchestra. He founded the Orchestra Symphonique de Paris in the same season and conducted the Lamoureux concerts. Munch soon began the round of guest engagements which have since made him a world traveler. In 1937 he succeeded Philippe Gaubert as conductor of the Paris Conservatory Orchestra, the position he held through the war period.

In 1933 Charles Munch married Genevieve Maury, author of "Nouvelles du Limousin" and translator into French of Thomas Mann's "Tonio Kroeger." Mme. Munch died in 1956.

In 1946 Munch visited the United States for the first time. He was engaged in the spring of 1948 to succeed Serge Koussevitzky as music director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra to begin with the season of 1949-50.

For the forthcoming Far Eastern tour Munch has invited the American composer Aaron Copland to join the orchestra as guest conductor. Copland will share the conducting responsibilities with Dr. Munch and Warsaw-born Richard Burgin. Burgin has been associate conductor of the orchestra since 1934.

Schedule, Programs

The schedule and programs for the Japan tour of the orchestra are as follows:

May 4, Tokyo, Munch, Program (A); May 5, Tokyo, Munch (C); May 7, Osaka, Copland (F); May 8, Osaka, Munch (A); May 9, Kyoto, Munch (C); May 11, Matsuyama, Burgin (E); May 12, Oita, Burgin (E); May 13, Yawata, Copland (F); May 14, Fukuoka, Munch (A); May 15, Hiroshima, Munch (C); May 16, Okayama, Copland (F); May 18, Nagoya, Munch (D); May 19, Shizuoka, Copland (F); May 20, Yokohama, Munch (B); May 21, Nagaoka, Burgin (E); May 22, Tokyo, Munch (D); May 23, Tokyo, Copland (F); May 25, Sapporo, Munch (D); May 27, Sendai, Munch (B); May 28, Koriyama, Burgin (E); May 29, Munch (B); May 30, Tokyo, Burgin (E).

Program A: Symphony No. 3 "Eroica" (Beethoven); Symphony No. 6 (Piston); Daphnis et Chloe Suite No. 2 (Ravel).

Program B: Medea's Meditation and Dance of Vengeance (Barber); "La Mer" (Debussy); Symphony No. 2 in D (Brahms).

Program C: Symphonie Fantastique (Berlioz); Variations, Chaconne and Finale (Dello-Joio); "Bacchus et Ariane" Suite No. 2 (Roussel).

Program D: Symphony No. 5 in C Min. (Beethoven); First Symphony (Blackwood); Excerpts from Act III "Die Meisteringer von Nurnberg" (Wagner).

Program E: Toccata for Strings, Solo Winds and Percussion (Leon Kirchner); Adagio from the 10th Symphony (posthumous) (Mahler); Symphony No. 5 in E Min. (Tchaikovsky).

Program F: Fantasias for Strings (Purcell); First Symphony (Copland); Symphony No. 95 in C Min. (Haydn); Orchestra Suite from the opera "The Tender Land" (Copland).

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 20[illegible] Boston [illegible] 2-4200

Gazette (e)
TAUNTON, Mass.
Circ. 11,602

APR 20 1960

Ambitious Musical Program Shaped in Norton

NORTON — Dr. Carl Garabedian's final concert as organist and director of the Wheaton College Choir will be an ambitious combined program of the Choir and the Zimbler Sinfonietta Friday evening, April 22, at 8 o'clock in Cole Memorial Chapel.

Presented through the Wheaton Concert Series, the program will consist of music by Mozart and Bach. Dr. Garabedian, who will enter retirement this June after 24 years of service at Wheaton, will share the podium with Robert Pettitt, assistant organist and choir director.

The concert will open with Mozart's "Litany in E Flat." Pettitt will conduct the Choir and the Sinfonietta. Soloist will be tenor Richard Reynolds, frequent guest artist in Wheaton programs.

Following intermission, the Sinfonietta will present Mozart's "Cassation in G" and Bach's "Concerto for Two Violins in D minor" with George Zazofsky and Roger Shermont, soloists.

For the concluding portion of the program the instrumentalists will again join the Choir to present excerpts from three of Bach's cantatas—15, 6 and 140. Dr. Garabedian will direct.

All eleven members of the Sinfonietta are also associated with the Boston Symphony and will be leaving for Japan with that group early next week.

Friday's Concert Series presentation has been scheduled as part of Wheaton's Founders Weekend, the third event in the college's 125th anniversary celebration. The event is open to the public without charge.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Morning Globe
BOSTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 194,909

DEC 9 - 1959

First Stop Will Be Japan

Boston Symphony to Tour Countries in East Asia

By CYRUS D[illegible]URGIN

The Boston Sym phony Orchestra and its mus ic director,
Dr. Charles Munch, will make tour of from six to eight weeks in eastern A sia, beginning May 1.

Japan will be the first coun-
ry visited, where th e Orchestra will participate in the Osaka Festival, and will be heard in the principal Japanese cities.

Other countries of eastern Asia will be included. An associate conductor, yet to be announced, will assist Dr. Munch.

The tour will be made under auspices of President Eisenhower's Special International Program for Cultural Presentations, administered by the American National Theater and Academy (ANTA).

Robert Schnitzer, general manager of ANTA, is in charge of the over-all arrangements.

"The itinerary is still incomplete," Schnitzer said.

"But it is certain that the Philippines will be included. Taiwan is pretty sure, also, and Korea is a possibility. The Koreans want American musicians very much, but there is difficulty in arranging accommodations for so large a party in Korea.

"Singapore is another possibility, and so is Hongkong. The prospects of going to India are not bright. I think it is doubtful that the State Department feels that it can afford travel that far westward.

Japanese Enthusiastic

"Japan is wildly enthusiastic about fine Western music, and that is the main peg upon which we hang this tour. The secondary Japanese city on the main island, was established two years ago as an international artistic venture.

"The Boston Symphony, I believe, is the most impressive thing we've sent to Asia."

The tour will be undertaken

OTHER THEATER NEWS
ON PAGE 37

orchestra was the e Boston
first Eu-

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street – New York

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N.Y.
SEMI-MONTHLY

JAN 1 1960

Boston Symphony To Tour Far East

Boston.—Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony have announced their acceptance of an invitation to tour Japan and other East Asian countries in the spring of 1960. The tour will be made under the President's Special International Program for Cultural Presentations administered by the American National Theatre and Academy.

The tour, which is expected to begin on or about May 1 and last six to eight weeks, will open in Japan where the orchestra will perform in the Osaka Festival. Other Japanese cities will be visited. The President's Program and ANTA have not confirmed the itinerary for the other East Asian countries, but it is anticipated that the Philippines, Formosa and Korea will be included.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Time (e)
PAWTUCKET-CENTRAL FALLS, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 38,041

DEC 9 - 1959

Orchestra Tour Set

BOSTON (AP) — Boston's symphony Orchestra will begin a six to eight weeks tour of the Far East beginning next May. Plans announced last night call for performances in the Osaka Festival in Japan and several other Japanese cities, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea.

Sunday Republican
SPRINGFIELD, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 114,240

DEC 20 1959

To Tour East Asia

Boston Symphony Orchestra will go on tour of the Far Pacific next spring, directors of the group announced. The orchestra will tour Japan and other East Asian countries under auspices of the President's special international program for cultural exchanges. The tour will begin May 1 and continue for about eight weeks. Dates for the annual music festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, which features the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be determined after it is ascertained when the orchestra will return from its Asian tour.

The American National Theater and Academy, which administers the President's program, has made firm commitments for the BSO to appear in Japan, but the exact itinerary has not been established as yet. It will participate in a music festival in Osaka. Other places expected to be visited are the Philip- [illegible] [illegible] the Far East will be the [illegible] international tour of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It was in Europe in 1952, and gave concerts in Russia in 1956, the first American orchestra to play in that country. It was warmly received.

Director of the orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch of Paris, France, will accompany the orchestra on its Far East tour.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Times (e)
GLOUCESTER, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 9,142

DEC 9 - 1959

Hub Symphony Will Tour Java

BOSTON (UPI)— The Boston Herald said today Boston Symphony Orchestra members had voted to make a tour of Japan after the 1959-1960 season for the famous orchestra's first Far Eastern visit.

The paper said the tour would be under State Department auspices. Management of the orchestra refused to confirm or deny the report.

The orchestra toured Europe in 1952 and made a historic tour of the Soviet Union in 1956.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

News (e)
MALDEN, Mass.
Circ. 10,804

DEC 10 1959

Boston Symphony Will Tour Japan, Formosa, Korea

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced plans for a tour of cities in Japan, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea lasting six to eight weeks.

The tour will begin in April at the close of the orchestra's regular concert season at Symphony Hall. With the exception of Osaka, Japan, no other definite dates or cities were announced.

The orchestra has made two other foreign tours going to western Europe in 1952 and to Russia in 1956. The Asian tour will be under the auspices of President Eisenhower's special international program for cultural presentations.

LOCK HAVEN, PA.
EXPRESS
D. 8,131
DEC 9 1959

Boston Symphony to Tour Far East

BOSTON (AP)—Boston's Symphony Orchestra will begin a six to eight weeks tour of the Far East beginning next May. Plans call for performances in the Osaka festival in Japan and several other Japanese cities, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200

Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 28,770

MAR 16 1960

BSO's Flying Trip To the Far East

"Fresh from triumphant tour abroad! Acclaimed by all the crowned heads of Europe!"

Such were the extravagant terms used to promote circus acts and touring theatrical troupes of a generation ago. The fact that a performance had been witnessed by King Alphonso of Spain lent it an aura of international glamor that paid off handsomely at the box office.

Today's audiences are more worldly. Save for an unusual case like that of Van Cliburn, an entertainer's reception overseas has small effect upon his audience appeal at home.

Part of the reason, of course, is that many members of the audience themselves are world travelers. And part of the reason is that foreign tours by entertainers and artists have become routine. Hardly a year goes by that one does not hear of Satchmo Armstrong or Gregor Piatigorsky wowing them in Hyderabad.

The change is exemplified by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which stuck close to home base during its first [illegible] years of existence but in recent years has branched out overseas. In 1952 the BSO made its first European tour. In 1956 it played in Russia. And this spring it is scheduled for an eight-week trip to Korea, Japan, the Philippine Islands, Australia and New Zealand.

The tour is to be carried out without disruption of the winter season in Symphony Hall or the six-week summer season at Tanglewood—a feat made possible by air travel. The orchestra will leave Boston April 25 and is scheduled to arrive in Korea April 27. Some 36 concerts will then be played in the Far East before the return to Boston June 19. The Berkshire Festival will open July 8.

The whirlwind tour is a phase of the President's Special International Program for Cultural Presentations administered by the American National Theater and Academy, which means that it has government backing as a means of promoting better understanding and appreciation of the United States. The BSO musicians hence are "cultural ambassadors" to the far parts of the globe—which strikes us as more of a distinction than playing before six dozen crowned heads.

3

Burrelle's
ESTABLISHED 1888
BArclay 7-5371
PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU
165 Church Street – New York

MUSICAL AMERICA
NEW YORK, N.Y.
SEMI-MONTHLY

JAN 1 1960

Boston Symphony To Tour Far East

Boston.—Charles Munch and the Boston Symphony have announced their acceptance of an invitation to tour Japan and other East Asian countries in the spring of 1960. The tour will be made under the President's Special International Program for Cultural Presentations administered by the American National Theatre and Academy.

The tour, which is expected to begin on or about May 1 and last six to eight weeks, will open in Japan where the orchestra will perform in the Osaka Festival. Other Japanese cities will be visited. The President's Program and ANTA have not confirmed the itinerary for the other East Asian countries, but it is anticipated that the Philippines, Formosa and Korea will be included.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Times (e)
PAWTUCKET-CENTRAL FALLS, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 38,041

DEC 9 - 1959

Orchestra Tour Set

BOSTON (AP) — Boston's symphony Orchestra will begin a six to eight weeks tour of the Far East beginning next May. Plans announced last night call for performances in the Osaka Festival in Japan and several other Japanese cities, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea.

[illegible]
Independent
Circ. 114,240

DEC [illegible]

To [illegible]

Boston [illegible] Orchestra will go on tour of the Far Pacific next spring, directors of the group announced. The orchestra will tour Japan and other East Asian countries under auspices of the President's special international program for cultural exchanges. The tour will begin May 1 and continue for about eight weeks. Dates for the annual music festival at Tanglewood, Lenox, which features the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be determined after it is ascertained when the orchestra will return from its Asian tour.

The American National Theater and Academy, which administers the President's program, has made firm commitments for the BSO to appear in Japan, but the exact itinerary has not been established as yet. It will participate in a music festival in Osaka. Other places expected to be visited are the Philippines [illegible]

[illegible] to the Far East will be the [illegible] international tour of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It was in Europe in 1952, and gave concerts in Russia in 1956, the first American orchestra to play in that country. It was warmly received.

Director of the orchestra, Dr. Charles Munch of Paris, France, will accompany the orchestra on its Far East tour.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Times (e)
GLOUCESTER, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 9,142

DEC 9 - 1959

Hub Symphony Will Tour Java

BOSTON (UPI)— The Boston Herald said today Boston Symphony Orchestra members had voted to make a tour of Japan after the 1959-1960 season for the famous orchestra's first Far Eastern visit.

The paper said the tour would be under State Department auspices. Management of the orchestra refused to confirm or deny the report.

The orchestra toured Europe in 1952 and made a historic tour of the Soviet Union in 1956.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
News (e)
MALDEN, Mass.
Circ. 10,694

DEC 10 1959

Boston Symphony Will Tour Japan, Formosa, Korea

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra has announced plans for a tour of cities in Japan, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea lasting six to eight weeks.

The tour will begin in April at the close of the orchestra's regular concert season at Symphony Hall. With the exception of Osaka, Japan, no other definite dates or cities were announced.

The orchestra has made two other foreign tours going to western Europe in 1952 and to Russia in 1956. The Asian tour will be under the auspices of President Eisenhower's special international program for cultural presentations.

LOCK HAVEN, PA.
EXPRESS
D. 8,131
DEC 9 1959

Boston Symphony to Tour Far East

BOSTON (AP)—Boston's Symphony Orchestra will begin a six to eight weeks tour of the Far East beginning next May. Plans call for performances in the Osaka festival in Japan and several other Japanese cities, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • Richmond 2-4200
Berkshire Eagle (e)
PITTSFIELD, Mass.
Circ. 28,770

MAR 16 1960

BSO's Flying Trip To the Far East

"Fresh from triumphant tour abroad! Acclaimed by all the crowned heads of Europe!"

Such were the extravagant terms used to promote circus acts and touring theatrical troupes of a generation ago. The fact that a performance had been witnessed by King Alphonse of Spain lent it an aura of international glamor that paid off handsomely at the box office.

Today's audiences are more worldly. Save for an unusual case like that of Van Cliburn, an entertainer's reception overseas has small effect upon his audience appeal at home.

Part of the reason, of course, is that many members of the audience themselves are world travelers. And part of the reason is that foreign tours by entertainers and artists have become routine. Hardly a year goes by that one does not hear of Satchmo Armstrong or Gregor Piatigorsky wowing them in Hyderabad.

The change is exemplified by the Boston Symphony [illegible] close to home base during its first [illegible] years of existence but in recent years has branched out overseas. In 1952 the BSO made its first European tour. In 1956 it played in Russia. And this spring it is scheduled for an eight-week trip to Korea, Japan, the Philippine Islands, Australia and New Zealand.

The tour is to be carried out without disruption of the winter season in Symphony Hall or the six-week summer season at Tanglewood—a feat made possible by air travel. The orchestra will leave Boston April 25 and is scheduled to arrive in Korea April 27. Some 36 concerts will then be played in the Far East before the return to Boston June 19. The Berkshire Festival will open July 8.

The whirlwind tour is a phase of the President's Special International Program for Cultural Presentations administered by the American National Theater and Academy, which means that it has government backing as a means of promoting better understanding and appreciation of the United States. The BSO musicians hence are "cultural ambassadors" to the far parts of the globe—which strikes us as more of a distinction than playing before all those crowned [illegible]

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,231

DEC 9 - 1959

Hub Symphony May Take Japan Tour

BOSTON (UPI)—The Boston Herald said today Boston Symphony Orchestra members had voted to make a tour of Japan after the 1959-1960 season for the famous orchestra's first Far Eastern visit.

The paper said the tour would be under State Department auspices. Management of the orchestra refused to confirm or deny the report.

The orchestra toured Europe in 1952 and made a historic tour of the Soviet Union in 1956.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Item (e)
CLINTON, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 3,448

DEC 8 - 1959

SYMPHONY

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Herald said today Boston Symphony Orchestra members had voted to make a tour of Japan after the 1959-1960 season for the famous orchestra's first Far Eastern visit.

The paper said the tour would be under State Department auspices. Management of the orchestra refused to confirm or deny the report.

The orchestra toured Europe in 1952 and made a historic tour of the Soviet Union in 1956.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sun (m)
LEWISTON-AUBURN, Me.
Independent
Circ. 31,775

DEC 9 - 1959

BOSTON SYMPHONY TO TOUR FAR EAST

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Symphony announced Tuesday it will tour the Far East for the first time when the current season ends. The tour will begin in early May and last six to eight weeks.

The orchestra will perform at the Osaka Festival in Japan, in several other Japanese cities, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea.

The tour will be sponsored by the President's special international program for cultural presentations, and administered by Anta (American National Theater and Academy).

The symphony toured Europe in 1952 and made an unprecedented tour of the Soviet Union in 1956.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Press-Herald (m)
PORTLAND, Me.
Independent Republican
Circ. 50,968

DEC 9 - 1959

Boston Symphony Will Tour Asia

BOSTON (UPI)—The Boston Symphony Orchestra will leave here late next April for a six-to-eight-week tour of Japanese cities, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea, it was announced Tuesday.

The tour will begin at the end of the orchestra's regular concert season in Symphony Hall. No definite dates or cities, with the exception of Osaka, Japan, have been settled.

It will be the third foreign visit in the history of the orchestra, which dates from 1881. The Asian tour will be under auspices of President Eisenhower's special international program for cultural presentations.

In 1952, the orchestra toured Western Europe and in 1956 went to Russia.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Hour (e)
NORWALK, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 17,708

DEC 9 - 1959

SYMPHONY TO TOUR

Boston (AP) — Boston's famed symphony orchestra will begin a six to eight weeks tour of the Far East beginning next May. Plans announced Tuesday night call for performances in the Osaka Festival in Japan and several other Japanese cities, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Herald (e)
NEW BRITAIN, Conn.
Independent
Circ. 29,53

DEC 9 - 195

SYMPHONY TOUR

BOSTON (AP) — Boston's Symphony Orchestra will begin a six to eight weeks tour of the Far East beginning next May. Plans call for performances in the Osaka festival in Japan and several other Japanese cities, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea.

Olives are now raised in Australia.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Transcript-Telegram (e)
HOLYOKE, Mass.
Independent Republican
Circ. 26,231

DEC 10 1959

The Boston Symphony is now well committed to world circling entertainment. It made its first European visit in 1952, was the first American major orchestra to visit Russia in 1956, and this year will be off on an invasion of the Far East. Music is probably as good an international language as has so far been discovered.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Sun (e)
LOWELL, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 41,242

DEC 9 - 1959

Will Tour Far East

BOSTON (AP) — Boston's famed symphony orchestra will begin a six to eight weeks tour of the Far East beginning next May.

Plans announced last night call for performances in [illegible] Osaka festival in Japan and several other Japanese cities, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
NEWPORT, R. I.
Independent
Circ. 11,977

DEC 9 - 1959

HUB SYMPHONY TO TOUR

BOSTON (AP)—Boston's famed Symphony Orchestra will begin a six to eight weeks tour of the Far East beginning next May.

Plans announced last night call for performances in the Oeaka Festival in Japan and several other Japanese cities, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-420
Herald (e)
MANCHESTER, Conn.
Republican
Circ. 12,195

DEC 9 - 1959

have been used for some time.

TO TOUR FAR EAST

Boston, Dec. 9 (AP) — Boston's famed symphony orchestra will begin a six to eight weeks tour of the Far East beginning next May. Plans announced last night call for performances in the Osaka Festival in Japan and several other Japanese cities, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
News (e)
GARDNER, Mass.
Independent
Circ. 7,065

DEC 9 - 1959

BOSTON (AP) — Boston's famed Symphony Orchestra will begin a six to eight weeks tour of the Far East beginning next May.

Plans announced last night call for performances in the Osaka Festival in Japan and several other Japanese cities, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea.

New England Newsclip Agency, Inc.
Box 2078, Boston 6 • RIchmond 2-4200
Telegram (m)
WORCESTER, Mass.
Republican
Circ. 60,734

DEC 9 - 1959

Boston Symphony Announces Tour Of Far East

BOSTON (UPI) — The Boston Symphony Orchestra will leave here late next April for a six-to-eight-week tour of Japanese cities, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea, it was announced Tuesday.

The tour will begin at the end of the orchestra's regular concert season in Symphony Hall. No definite dates or cities, with the exception of Osaka, Japan, have been settled.

It will be the third foreign visit in the history of the orchestra, which dates from 1881. The Asian tour will be under auspices of President Eisenhower's special international program for cultural presentations.

In 1952, the orchestra toured Western Europe and in 1956 went to Russia.

WASHINGTON, D.C.
STAR
D. 254,992 S. 296,218

DEC 9 1959

Symphony Tour Set

BOSTON, Dec. 9 (AP).—Boston's famed symphony orchestra will begin a six to eight weeks tour of the Far East beginn[illegible]ay. Plans announ[illegible]ight call for perform[illegible] the Osaka festival in Ja[illegible] and several other Japanese cities, the Philippines, Formosa and Korea.

5

CHICAGO, ILL.
SUN-TIMES
D. 534,063 S. 832,432
DEC 27 1959

MUSIC

Overseas Tour In '60? Doubtful

By Robert C. Marsh

If I may intrude on your post-Christmas sense of well-being, a recent announcement from Washington seems to make it clear that Chicago's orchestra will not go overseas in 1960. Not, to be sure, that many could entertain serious hopes that it would.

The manner in which the 1959 tour negotiations came to an end seemed to preclude the possibility of our getting a second chance for a long time. But nonetheless, when music director Fritz Reiner announced the cancellation of the 1959 tour at that famous rehearsal in which he was hissed, he is reported to have promised a spring tour in 1960.

